Miss Lilian Coombes, St. Lawrence Jewry—Adagio, Haydn; Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; Pastorale, Franck.

Mr. F. Dalrymple, Tredegarville Baptist Church, Cardiff—Symphony No. 6 (first movement), Widor; Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; Fantasia in F minor, Mozart; Finale (Sonata), Reubke.

Dr. J. H. Reginald Dixon, St. Augustine's, Preston—Fantasia in F minor, Mozart; Legend, 'St. Francis preaching to the birds,' Liszt; Theme, Variations, and Fugue on 'Sedbergh,' Dixon.

Mr. Herrick Edwards, All Saints', Hertford—Fantasie-Sonata in A flat (first movement), Rheinberger; Fugue in B minor, Bach; Rêverie and Meditation, Vierne.

Mr. Herbert F. Ellingford, St. George's Hall, Liverpool—Overture in D minor, Handel-Elgar; Concert Variations, Bonnet; Pavane, Bernard Johnson; Marche Moderne, Lemare; Finale ('Sonata Eroica'), Stanford; Prelude and Fugue in C minor, Mendelssohn; Aria in F, Bach; Sonata No. 1, Harwood; 'The Pilgrim's Progress,' Part 1, Austin.

Dr. Leonard Fowles, St. John's Wood Presbyterian Church—'Fiat Lux,' Dubois; Légende, Fowles; Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Rhapsodie, Saint-Saëns.

Dr. Chastey Hector, St. Luke's, Queen's Park, Brighton—Concerto No. 5, Handel; Fantaisie and Fugue, J. D. Davis; Rêverie, Hector; Marche, Boëllmann; 'South Wind' and 'North Wind,' Alec Rowley.

Dr. W. Herbert Hickox, Battersea Polytechnic—Overture to 'Semele'; Andante (Sonata No. 4) and Prelude and Fugue in E minor ('The Wedge'), Bach; Sonata No. 11, Rheinberger.

Dr. Reginald H. Hunt, St. Mary's, Bryanston Square—Concerto Grosso No. 10, Corelli; 'En Bateau,' Debussy; Choral No. 3, Franck; Carillon, Elgar.

Mr. W. J. Lancaster, Bolton Parish Church—Prelude in E flat, Bach; Toccata on 'Pange Lingua,' Bairstow; Adagio and Toccata, Widor.

Mr. Sinclair Logan, St. John's Wood Presbyterian Church—Sonata No. 2, Mendelssohn; Marche Héroïque, Saint-Saëns; Choral No. 3, Franck; Villanella, Ireland.

Mr. Charles Massey, St. Simon and St. Jude's Parish Church, Anfield, Liverpool—Sonata No. 5, Mendelssohn; Fantasia and Fugue in A minor, Merkel; Marche Héroïque, Watling.

Mr. A. F. Milner, Cathedral Church of St. Nicholas, Newcastle-upon-Tyne—Prelude, Fugue, and Variation, Franck; Toccata in C, Bach; Psalm-Prelude No. 3, Howells; Ostinato, Grace.

Mr. W. L. Payne, Melbourne Terrace Wesleyan Chapel—Bridal March and Finale, from the 'Birds,' Parry; Prelude, Fugue, and Variation, Franck; Fantasia in F minor, Mozart.

Mr. Cyril Pearce, St. Thomas's, Heigham, Norwich—Overture to 'Orlando,' Handel; Prelude in C minor, Bach; Introduction and Fugue, Reubke; Grave and Allegro (Sonata No. 2), Rheinberger.

Mr. S. Maurice Popplestone, Primitive Methodist Church, Dews Road, Salisbury—Symphony in C minor, Holloway; Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; Fantaisie, Saint-Saëns.

Miss Marjorie Renton, St. Mary-le-Bow—Trois Pièces, Pierné; Prelude on a Theme by Tallis, Harold Darke; Legend, Alcock; Sketch in F minor, Schumann; Prelude and Fugue in E minor ('The Wedge'), Bach; Toccata-Prelude on 'Pange Lingua,' Bairstow.

Dr. H. Sydney Scott, All Saints', Hertford—Allegro and Finale (Sonata No. 5), Rheinberger; Prelude and Fugue in G, Bach; Villanella, Ireland; Overture to 'The Mastersingers.'

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Stephen C. Chantler, choirmaster and organist, Parish Church of St. Nicholas, Cranleigh, Surrey.

Mr. Walter H. Court, choirmaster and organist, Parish Church, Blackheath, Staffs.

Mr. W. H. Davies, choirmaster and organist, St. Paul's Church, Sale, near Manchester.

Mr. C. Leslie Page, organist, Shernhall Street Methodist Church, Walthamstow.

London Concerts

PHILHARMONIC: PAUL KLENAU CONCERT

The Philharmonic concert of February 25 was conducted by Paul Klenau, who had made friends here by his performance of Delius's 'A Mass of Life' a year before. There was no symphony at this concert, but Miss Erica Morini played in Beethoven's Violin Concerto, and the programme included three new or newish works.

These should have been four. At the last minute the promised first performance (in revised published form) of Dr. R. Vaughan Williams's Violin Rhapsody, 'The Lark Ascending,' was cancelled. It appeared that the popular young violinist had been too busy going up and down the world gathering in the harvest of her nimble skill. She had omitted, until the day before, to pick up the work which six months ago had been allotted to her. No doubt she had been occupied in polishing up her playing of those dreary Concertos of Goldmark, Glazounov, and Tchaikovsky, which—in youthful ignorance of their insignificance—she was preparing to inflict on us. As a fiddle virtuosa, victorious over the two hemispheres, she naturally thinks such compositions supremely fine music. Still, we feel sorry for her that she so nonchalantly dropped Vaughan Williams's piece. She is a healthy, blooming young girl, and an extraordinarily good violinist. What ephemeral attributes! The best fiddlers deteriorate. Her hand will stiffen, and her tuning wobble in time. Then, like all men, she will descend to the grave. And why should she be any more remembered than all the forgotten myriads of departed buxom maidens and good fiddlers who thought more of their playing than of what they played? She might—but she carelessly let the chance slip—have linked her name with the creation of music. She was honoured by the invitation to be the first to play a new, or newly re-formed, work by Vaughan Williams. She seems to have been blind to the luck of it, and the privilege. A child will mistake a diamond for a marble, and throw it, without a thought, into the river. It is a pity that a young person with so unusual an aptitude for fiddling should be so stupid.

The concert began with Brahms's 'Tragic' Overture, which was attacked with so much sense of effort, tensity, and emphasis that no reserves were left, and the work proceeded without accumulation. After the Concerto (in which the violinist ploughed her own furrow, disdaining collaboration with the conductor, who followed as best he could), we heard a new Rhapsody in B minor by Clemens von Franckenstein, the manager of the Munich Opera. The bare pastoral tunes at the opening of this unpretentious piece were rather promising. But it turned out that after all the composer was not certain where to go, or whether indeed it were worth while going at all far in any case, and the music fell back on ordinary recipes. It called for no disparagement in particular; only we felt that so much of the sort had been heard at the Patrons' Fund concerts.

Delius's orchestral fantasy, 'Once upon a time' (otherwise 'Eventyr'), which was said to have been first performed under Sir Henry Wood in January, 1919, was new probably to most of us. It has been little heard of, and Mr. Heseltine barely mentions it in his book on Delius. The piece is a sort of symphonic poem, and is busy telling a story to which, however, no clue is afforded. The shouts of 'Hi, hi!' from a crowd of men behind the stage made a rather luckless effect. In opera it would have done well (perhaps it was suggested by the sailors' cries in Act 1 of 'Tristan'), but at Queen's Hall it seemed to express the feelings of any who might be inclined to derision of Delius and his works. Such, however, can have been but few, for whatever one could say about the form of this music, the content was over and over again beautiful. Probably it is one of Delius's lesser works; at any rate it did not seem so masterly as the 'Cello Concerto or the 'Song of the High Hills' which Londoners heard a little later. But even so we felt in it the hand of the true poet, the ποιητής, maker and originator.

The evening ended with Bartók's animated Dance Suite, music which carries on the folk-lore exploitation (and even some of the technical devices) of Grieg. C.

For the last concert of the season (March 18) there was an excellent programme and a crowded audience. Sir Landon Ronald had been announced to conduct, but was unable to be present owing to illness. The Society paid a graceful compliment to its leader, Mr. W. H. Reed, by inviting him to fill the vacancy. Mr. Reed obtained a sparkling performance of Vaughan Williams's 'Wasps' Overture, a good one of Mozart's G minor Symphony (despite some lack of unanimity in the Trio of the Minuet) and Delius's 'Brigg Fair.' That he came less well out of the test of the Schumann Pianoforte Concerto and Franck's Symphonic Variations is not surprising. M. Cortôt must be held responsible for some of the ticklish moments in the former: he was disposed to hold things up overmuch. Altogether, however, this was a richly-varied and enjoyable evening. H. G.

QUEEN'S HALL SYMPHONY CONCERTS

Elders speak of the excitement that was stirred up some time last century by the arrival of Tchaikovsky's 'Pathetic' Symphony. It stood as a record till, within less mature memory, a still greater clamour of popularity greeted Elgar's A flat Symphony. Conductors and orchestras then grew tired of Elgar's work, or hastily assumed that its season had passed, and very little was heard of it for a number of years. Now the young people are curious to know what it was that roused their uncles and aunts in 1908-09, and the Symphony is re-entering concert programmes on a normal wave of popularity. On February 20 it was picked up again by the Queen's Hall Symphony Concerts, and a large audience showed, before and after the performance, how wisely Sir Henry Wood had chosen the moment.

It may be remarked that since the birth of this Symphony audiences have learnt, chiefly at the suggestion of Sir Henry's upraised baton, to put their applause in its place. We do not interrupt symphonies nowadays, even if it means sitting like poor relations for nearly an hour. In the case of Elgar's A flat Symphony, this is a peculiarly wise dispensation of fashion. There are two full stops in the Symphony, and each is a wrong place for the returning of thanks. That dying Coda of the first movement, a vision painted with the very essence of Elgar's emotions, has no finality in it. It plainly looks forward to what is coming. The rousing to action in the first few bars of the Scherzo should break like a call to action into the peace of those lulling phrases and chords on

No. 1096. NOVELLO'S OCTAVO ANTHEMS. Price (4*d.*).

Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost

COMPOSED BY

HUGH BLAIR.

917. Abide with me ... Ivor Atkins 4d.
424. Ditto ... ... R. Dunstan 4d.
805. Adeste Fideles ... H. Hofmann 6d.
927. All go unto one place ... Wesley 4d.
247. All nations whom B. Luard-Selby 6d.
113. All they that trust... ... Hiller 1s.
1033. All Thy works ... T. Adams 4d.
475. Ditto ... ... J. Barnby 6d.
503. Ditto ... ... G. H. Ely 6d.
30. Ditto ... ... E. H. Thorne 4d.
719. All ye who seek ... H. M. Higgs 4d.
9. All ye who weep ... ... Gounod 4d.
592. Alleluia! now is Christ T. Adams 4d.
729. Alleluia! the Lord liveth C. Harris 4d.
548. Almighty Father ... B. Steane 4d.
937. Almighty God, give us ... Wesley 4d.
261. And all the people saw J. Stainer 8d.
699. And God shall wipe Greenish 4d.
1055. And in that day F. R. Rickman 4d.
229. And it was the third hour Elvey 6d.
485. And Jacob was left alone J. Stainer 8d.
658. And Jesus entered H. W. Davies 6d.
732. And suddenly there came H. J. Wood 4d.
1089. And the earth was reaped E. S. Craston 6d.
675. And the Lord said T. W. Stephenson 4d.
357. And the wall of the city Oliver King 4d.
778. And there shall be signs Naylor 6d.
1130. And we beheld His Glory G. Rathbone 4d.
402. And when the day ... C. W. Smith 4d.
684. Angel said, The (s.&B.) A. H. Brown 3d.
861. Angel Spirits P. Tchaikovsky 3d.
642. Angel voices, ever singing E. V. Hall 4d.
611. Angels from the realms Cowen 4d.
749. Ditto ... P. E. Fletcher 4d.
751. Ditto ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
1017. Arise, shine ... T. Adams 4d.
1093. Ditto ... H. A. Chambers 4d.
1112. Ditto ... ... Ed. Bunnett 4d.
923. Ditto ... ... G. F. Cobb 6d.
723. Arm of the Lord, The ... Haydn 6d.
228. Art thou weary ... C. H. Lloyd 8d.
948. As Christ was raised Wareing 4d.
311. As I live, saith the Lord E. T. Chipp 4d
333. As it began to dawn Ch. Vincent 4d.
498. As Moses lifted up F. Gostelow 4d.
643. As the earth bringeth A. H. Brewer 6d.
24. As the hart pants (s.s.T.B.) Gounod 4d.
147. Ascribe unto the Lord Travers 8d.
109. Ditto ... ... S. S. Wesley 6d.
399. At the Lamb's High E. V. Hall 4d.
456. At the Sepulchre H. W. Wareing 6d.
957. Author of Life Divine Button 3d.
1091. Ditto H. A. Chambers 4d.
660. Awake, awake ... John E. West 4d.
700. Awake, awake, put on Greenish 6d.
56. Ditto ... ... J. Stainer 8d.
759. Ditto ... ... Stephenson 6d.
149. Ditto ... ... M. Wise 6d.
955. Awake! O Zion ... C. Forrester 4d.
199. Awake, thou that sleepest Stainer 8d.
150. Awake up, my glory M. Wise 4d.

744. Be glad and rejoice M. B. Foster 4d.
578. Ditto ... ... B. Steane 4d.
212. Be glad, O ye righteous H. Smart 6d.
989. Be glad then, ye ... A. Hollins 4d.
143. Be merciful... ... H. Purcell 8d.
257. Ditto ... E. A. Sydenham 4d.
597. Be peace on earth... ... Crotch 4d.
567. Be Thou exalted ... C. Bayley 4d.
583. Be ye all of one mind A. E. Godfrey 4d.
471. Be ye therefore ... A. S. Baker 4d.
440. Before the heavens H. W. Parker 4d.
651. Behold, all the earth G. F. Huntley 6d.
598. Behold, God is great E. W. Naylor 6d.
865. Behold, God is my John E. West 4d.
636. Ditto ... ... F. C. Woods 6d.
1035. Behold, how good J. Battishill 4d.
349. Ditto (Male) ... Caldicott 4d.
349.* Ditto (S.A.T.B.) Caldicott 4d.
419. Ditto ... Hamilton Clarke 6d.
89. Behold, I bring you J. Barnby 4d.
348. Ditto ... J. Maude Crament 6d.
1113. Ditto ... ... Ed. Bunnett 3d.
296. Ditto ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
810. Behold, I come quickly Ivor Atkins 3d.
713. Behold, I have given you C. Harris 4d.
554. Behold, I send ... J. V. Roberts 6d.
587. Behold My servant J. F. Bridge 4d.
65. Behold now, praise J. B. Calkin 4d.
631. Ditto ... ... F. Iliffe 4d.
912. Ditto ... ... John E. West 4d.
315. Behold, O God ... F. W. Hird 6d.
524. Behold, the days come Woodward 6d.
1045. Behold the Heaven A. R. Gaul 4d.
652. Behold the Name... Percy Pitt 6d.
501. Behold, two blind men J. Stainer 4d.
938. Bethlehem ... ... Ch. Gounod 2d.
378. Bless the Lord ... M. Kingston 6d.
796. Bless the Lord, O my soul Hailing 4d.
855. Bless the Lord thy God Roberts 4d.
450. Bless thou the Lord C. Bayley 6d.
374. Ditto ... ... Oliver King 4d.
693. Blessed are the dead B. L. Selby 3d.
667. Blessed are the pure A. D. Arnott 4d.
390. Blessed are they ... A. W. Batson 4d.
616. Ditto ... ... H. Blair 4d.
77. Ditto ... ... W. H. Monk 4d.
112. Ditto ... ... Arthur Page 4d.
15. Blessed be the God S. S. Wesley 3d.
756. Blessed be the Lord J. Barnby 4d.
570. Ditto ... ... J. F. Bridge 8d.
895. Ditto ... ... O. Gibbons 3d.
876. Ditto ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
183. Ditto ... ... Heap 8d.
770. Ditto ... ... Markham Lee 4d.
331. Ditto ... C. Lee Williams 6d.
1006. Blessed be the Name Macfarren 4d.
724. Blessed be Thou E. C. Bairstow 6d.
1120. Ditto ... ... Ed. Bunnett 4d.
838. Ditto ... . J. Kent 6d.
400. Blessed City ... A. C. Fisher 6d.
284. Blessed is He F. E. Gladstone 3d.
262. Ditto ... ... C. H. Lloyd 1s.
292. Ditto ... A. C. Mackenzie 6d.
206. Blessed is the man Clarke-Whitfeld 4d.
64. Ditto ... ... John Goss 6d.
769. Ditto ... H. W. Wareing 4d.
1004. Blessed is the soul (s.B.) Macfarren 4d.
286. Blessed Jesu (Stabat Mater) Dvorák 8d.
943. Blessed Lord ... S. S. Wesley 3d.
5. Blessing, glory, wisdom B. Tours 6d.
950. Ditto ... ... A. H. Brewer 4d.
472. Blessing of the Lord, The J. F. Bridge 3d.
194. Ditto A. C. Mackenzie 4d.
652. Blow up the trumpet F. Iliffe 4d.
97. Blow ye the trumpet Henry Leslie 4d
961. Born to-day... J. P. Sweelinck 4d
118. Bow Thine ear ... ... W. Bird 4d
939 Bread of Heaven ... E. German 4d.
1082. Bread of the world H. A. Chambers 4d.
1024. Break forth into joy W. G. Alcock 4d.
774. Ditto ... ... H. E. Button 4d.
415. Ditto ... S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.
798. Ditto ... H. A. Matthews 4d.
92. Ditto ... ... R. Prentice 8d.
491. Ditto ... ... B. Steane 4d.
323. Brightest and best... E. V. Hall 6d.
340. Bring unto the Lord Gladstone 4d.
98. Brother, thou art gone J. Goss 6d.
279. By Babylon's wave Gounod 3d.
197. By the rivers of Babylon L. Samson 6d.
121. By the waters of Babylon Boyce 6d.
644. Ditto ... S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.
511. Ditto ... ... H. Clarke 6d.
853. Ditto ... ... H. M. Higgs 4d.
1074. Ditto ... ... Palestrina 4d.
1076. Ditto ... ... H. Goetz 4d.
742. By Thy glorious death A. Dvorák 6d.

116. Call to remembrance J. Battishill 8d
952. Ditto ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
680. Calm on the list'ning ear Parker 4d.
841. Cast me not away C. Lee Williams 3d.
975. Ditto ... ... S. S. Wesley 4d
953. Charge to keep I have, A... King 4d.
497. Christ both died ... E. W. Naylor 4d.
454. Christ is risen ... G. B. J. Aitken 4d.
368. Ditto ... ... J. M. Crament 4d.
666. Ditto ... ... W. Jordan 6d.
533. Ditto ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
814. Ditto ... E. A. Sydenham 4d.
307. Christ our Passover E. V. Hall 4d.
783. Christ the Lord is risen again E. V. Hall 6d.
370. Christ the Lord is risen to-day ,, 4d.
488. Christians, awake... ...J. Barnby 4d.
648. Ditto ... H. M. Higgs 6d.
983. Christmas Day ... ... G. Holst 6d.
445. Cleanse me, Lord G. F. Wrigley 4d.
989. Come and let us ... A. Hollins 4d.
52. Come, and let us return J. Goss 4d.
95. Ditto ... ... W. Jackson 4d.
1106. Come, come, help, O God W. Byrd 4d.
805. Come hither, ye faithful Hofmann 6d.
283. Come, Holy Ghost G. Elvey 6d.
201. Ditto ... ... J. L. Hatton 6d.
829. Ditto ... ... Palestrina 3d.
717. Ditto ... C. Lee Williams 3d.
881. Come, let us join our E. V. Hall 4d.
293. Come, my soul ... G. C. Martin 6d.
314. Come now, and let us H. W. Wareing 6d.
1. Come unto Him ... ... Gounod 3d.
946. Ditto ... ... H. Leslie 4d.
256. Come unto Me H. R. Couldrey 4d.
635. Ditto ... ... G. J. Elvey 4d.
103. Ditto (Bach) J. Stainer 4d.
922. Come with high and holy Blair 4d.
1005. Come ye, and let us Macfarren 4d.
748. Come, ye children and J. Booth 4d.
924. Ditto ... ... H. J. King 4d.
334. Come, ye faithful ... E. V. Hall 4d.
921. Come, ye faithful, raise the strain E. V. Hall 4d.
1019. Come, ye Saints ... H. E. Button 4d.
951. Come, ye sin-defiled J. Stainer 3d.
931. Come, ye thankful ...B. Steane 4d.
914. Comes at times ... Woodward 4d.
1008. Ditto ... ... H. Oakeley 3d.

NOVELLO'S

OCTAVO EDITION OF ANTHEMS.

994. Coronation Offertorium Elgar 3d.
622. Create in me a clean heart P. J. Fry 4d.
688. Crown Him the B. Luard-Selby 3d.
884. Crown of grace for man, A Brahms 6d.

356. Daughters of Jerusalem H. J. King 4d.
449. Dawns the day ... R. H. Legge 4d.
1131. Day draws on with golden light, The ... ... Geoffrey Shaw 4d.
421. Day is past, The ... J. C. Marks 4d.
461. Day of Resurrection, The E.V. Hall 4d.
213. Day of Anger (Requiem) Mozart 8d.
682. Day of wrath ... J. Stainer 3d.
552. Day Thou gavest, The Woodward 4d.
252. Death and life ... Walter Parratt 4d.
968. Death is swallowed up in victory A. Hollins 4d.
849. Deliver us, O Lord ... Gibbons 4d.
90. Distracted with care ... Haydn 6d.
887. Do not I fill heaven ... H. Blair 4d.
737. Doth not wisdom cry D. S. Smith 4d.
703. Drop down, ye heavens Stainer 6d.

239. Earth is the Lord's, The Trimnell 6d.
1100. Ditto Albert Lowe 4d.
687. Ditto J. Hopkins 6d.
277. Enter not into Judgment Clarke 3d.
996. Eternal God, The John E. West 4d.
362. Eternal source ... F. Brandeis 3d.
1008. Evening and Morning Oakeley 3d.
1127. Evening Hymn H. B. Gardiner 4d.
854. Exalt ye the Lord H. Elliot Button 4d.
1135. Exaltabo Te, Domine Palestrina 4d.
764. Except the Lord build Edwards 4d.
771. Ditto ... ... Eaton Faning 6d.
628. Ditto ... ... H. Gadsby 6d.
470. Eye hath not seen (S.A.) Foster 4d.
584. Ditto (S.A.T.B.) ... Foster 4d.
482. Eyes of all, The ... T. Adams 4d.
547. Ditto ... G. J. Elvey 4d.
573. Ditto ... M. B. Foster 4d.
289. Ditto Orlando Gibbons 6d.
878. Eyes of the Lord are, The West 3d.

689. Face of death, The W. Parratt 3d.
625. Far be sorrow ... E. V. Hall 4d.
672. Far from the world H. W. Parker 4d.
329. Far from their home Woodward 4d.
364. Father, hear the prayer F. Brandeis 3d.
763. Father, now Thy grace W. Coenen 4d.
46. Father of Heaven Walmisley 4d.
384. Father of Life ... S. J. Gilbert 4d.
768. Father of mercies ... E. V. Hall 4d.
1065. Ditto ... S. P. Waddington 4d.
671. Ditto ... ... John E. West 4d.
1050. Fear not, O land ... E. Elgar 4d.
28. Ditto ... ... John Goss 4d.
916. Ditto ... ... W. Jordan 4d.
872. Fear Thou not, for I am with thee J. Booth 2d.
478. Few more years shall roll, A H. Blair 4d.
448. First Christmas, The J. Barnby 4d.
534. First day of the week, The B. Steane 4d.
446. Flee from evil ... W. J. Clarke 4d.
214. Fool hath said, The W. Bennett 6d.
271. Fool within his heart, The Rheinberger 4d.
553. For a small moment J. Stainer 3d.
254. For ever blessed (Male) Mendelssohn 4d.
198. For the mountains L. Samson 4d.
901. For this mortal ... S. S. Wesley 4d.
728. Forsake me not ... ... J. Goss 6d.
413. Fost'ring earth, The J. L. Hopkins 4d.
273. From the deep I called ... Spohr 8d.

227. Give ear, O Lord T. M. Pattison 3d.
433. Give ear, O Shepherd A. Whiting 4d.
88. Give ear, O ye heavens Armes 4d.
956. Ditto ... ... W. G. Alcock 4d.
604. Give thanks, O Israel Ouseley 6d.
741. Give the King thy W. G. Alcock 8d.
990. Ditto ... ... A. H Brewer 4d.

309. Give the Lord ... C. H. Lloyd 1s.
383. Give unto the Lord H. W. Parker 6d.
933. Glorious and powerful God Gibbons 4d.
1039. Glorious in Heaven Vittoria 4d.
2. Glory be to God ... S. S. Wesley 3d.
746. Glory of Lebanon, The Wareing 4d.
593. Glory of the God, The T. Adams 4d.
177. Glory of the Lord, The J. Goss 8d.
779. Glory to God in the E. M. Lee 4d.
341. God be merciful ... A. H. Mann 6d.
49. Ditto ... S. S. Wesley 4d.
236. God be merciful unto us C.F.Lloyd 8d.
105. God came from Teman Steggall 6d.
967. God is a Spirit ... W. S. Bennett 2d.
128. God is gone up ... ... Croft 6d.
892. Ditto ... ... O. Gibbons 4d.
864. Ditto ... Walter B. Gilbert 3d.
605. God is my salvation C. F. Bowes 4d.
1062. God is our hope ... A. H. Brewer 4d.
131. Ditto ... ... Greene 8d.
332. God is our refuge ... A. Foote 6d.
101. Ditto ... ... H. Hiles 8d.
245. God of Jeshurun, The ... J. Goss 8d.
75. God said, Behold G. Macfarren 6d.
969. God so loved the world H. Moore 4d.
1012. Ditto ... ... E. G. Monk 6d.
473. Ditto ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
342. God, that madest earth A.C.Fisher 3d.
1056. God the All-fatherly A. Hollins 4d.
344. God, Who at sundry times J.H. Mee 6d.
715. God's peace is peace eternal Grieg 4d.
1116. Good Shepherd has, The Bunnett 4d.
1096. Gracious Spirit, Holy H. Blair 4d.
1070. Grant us Thy peace G. Bullivant 4d.
550. Grant, we beseech Thee M. Elvey 3d.
388. Ditto ... ... Roberts 4d.
517. Great and marvellous J. F. Bridge 6d.
187. Ditto ... ... Monk 4d.
848. Ditto ... ... T. Tomkins 4d.
223. Great is Jehovah (Male) Schubert 6d.
987. Ditto ... ...Schubert 6d.
602. Great is our Lord M. B. Foster 6d.
136. Great is the Lord ... Hayes 6d.
708. Ditto ... A. W. Marchant 4d.
237. Ditto ... ... F. Ouseley 8d.
481. Ditto ... ... B. Steane 4d.
813. Ditto ... E. A. Sydenham 4d.
220. Grieve not the Holy Spirit Stainer 4d.
609. Guide me, O Thou H. Blair 4d.

427. Hail! gladdening Light J. T. Field 3d.
545. Ditto ... ... Martin 6d.
326. Hail, thou that art A. Carnall 6d.
560. Hail to the Christ J. Barnby 4d.
945. Hail, true Body ... H. Willan 3d.
499. Hallelujah, Christ is risen Steane 4d.
382. Hallelujah! the Light Oliver King 4d.
754 Hallowed day, The B. Luard-Selby 4d.
1137. Happy Day, Festal Day H. A. Chambers 4d.
173. Happy is the man ... ... E. Prout 1s.
1077. Hark! hark my soul P. E. Fletcher 4d.
681. Hark, the glad sound M. B. Foster 4d.
909. Ditto ... ... A. R. Gaul 4d.
487. Ditto ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
345. Hark, the herald angels E. V. Hall 4d.
444. Hark! what news Oliver King 4d.
404. Harvest Hymn ... ... F. Tozer 3d.
820. Haste Thee, O God John Shepherd 4d.
784. Have mercy upon me J. Barnby 3d.
500. Ditto ... ... J. Barnby 4d.
818. Ditto ... ... G. Allegri 6d.
665. Ditto ... arr. V. Novello 3d.
811 Ditto ... ... Palestrina 6d.
518. Ditto ... ... E. Pettman 2d.
464. Ditto ... ... J. Stainer 4d.
535. Ditto ... ... J. Goss 6d.
1013. Ditto ... ... E. Minshall 4d.
377. Ditto ... ... Kellow J. Pye 4d.
401. Ditto ... ... J. Shaw 4d.
1133. He is a Father of the fatherless C. L. Williams 4d.
794. He sendeth the springs Wareing 6d.
701. He shall swallow up ... Greenish 4d.

707. He that dwelleth... ... J. Booth 6d.
837. He that shall endure Mendelssohn 3d.
898. He that spared not His Gladstone 4d
1102. He wants not friends that hath Thy love ... ... G. Shaw 4d
900. He will swallow up death Wesley 2d.
389. Hear me when I call (Male) Distin 3d.
339. Hear my prayer Mendelssohn 6d
1001. Ditto ... ... H. Purcell 3d.
146. Ditto ... ... C. Stroud 6d.
442. Hear my words C. H. H. Parry 1s.
310. Hear, O God ... A. Friedländer 8d.
138. Hear, O heavens P. Humphreys 4d.
94. Hear, O Lord ... John Goss 3d.
139. Ditto .. .. C. King 3d.
162. Ditto ... ... F. Ouseley 3d.
831. Hear, O My people J. Holbrooke 4d.
203. Hear, O Thou Shepherd Clarke 6d.
522. Ditto ... T. A. Walmisley 6d.
776. Hear the voice and prayer Tallis 3d.
773. Hearken unto Me W. H. Bell 4d.
804. Heavens declare, The Macpherson 6d.
376. Hide not Thy face Kellow J. Pye 3d
299. Hills stand about, The G. Gardner 6d
366. Ho! every one ... J. M. Crament 6d.
246. Ditto ... ... G. C. Martin 6d.
330. Holy Ghost, to earth ... Dvorák 6d.
111. Holy, holy, holy ... ... Crotch 4d.
842. Holy, Lord God ... T. Bateson 6d.
412. Honour the Lord... J. Stainer 6d.
129. Hosanna (in C) ... O. Gibbons 4d.
1015. Ditto (in E flat) O. Gibbons 4d.
43. Ditto ... G. A. Macfarren 4d.
657. Hosanna to the Lord W. Jordan 6d.
646. Ditto ... ... Luard-Selby 4d.
1021. Hosanna we sing John E. West 4d.
260. How beautiful are the feet Handel 4d
691. How blest are they Tschaikowsky 6d
321. How excellent is Thy ... Cowen 8d.
615. How great is the loving West 4d.
373. How long wilt Thou Oliver King 3d.
867. Ditto ... Jeremiah Clarke 4d.
647. How lovely are ... C. Salaman 4d.
104. Ditto ... ... Spohr 1s.
988. Ditto ... ... J. Brahms 3d.
755. Hymn of the angels, The J.E.West 6d.

766. I am Alpha ... Ch. Gounod 4d
539. Ditto ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
623. I am He that liveth T. Adams 6d.
664. I am the Resurrection ... Croft 4d.
662. Ditto ... ... R. Rogers 6d.
268. I am well pleased J. Rheinberger 4d
120. I beheld, and lo ... ... Blow 8d.
280. Ditto ... ... Elvey 8d.
496. I came not to call... C. Vincent 4d.
207. I cried unto the Lord ... Heap 6d.
537. I declare to you Cruickshank 6d.
168. I desired wisdom J. Stainer 8d.
230. I did call upon the Lord Pattison 6d.
515. I do not ask, O Lord ... Roberts 4d.
117. I have set God ... ... Blake 8d.
420 Ditto ... Hamilton Clarke 6d.
130. Ditto ... ... J. Goldwin 4d.
122. I have surely built ... Boyce 6d.
219 Ditto T. T. Trimnell 6d.
590 I heard a great voice G. F. Cobb 4d.
395. I heard a voice ... John Goss 3d.
1107. I laid me down to rest W. Byrd 4d.
903. I looked, and behold H. Willan 4d.
1029. I love to hear ... M. B. Foster 4d.
1022. I saw the Lord ... C. Harris 4d.
171. Ditto ... ... J. Stainer 8d.
114. I was glad ... ... T. Attwood 6d.
993. Ditto ... ... A. H. Brewer 4d.
1123. Ditto ... ... Ed. Bunnett 4d.
1080. Ditto ... ...H. R. Couldrey 4d.
32. Ditto ... ... G. Elvey 4d.
79. Ditto ... ... C. E. Horsley 8d
743. Ditto ... ...C. H. H. Parry 6d
379. Ditto ... ... T. T. Trimnell 6d.
119. I was in the spirit ... Blow 8d.
205. I will alway give thanks Clarke 4d.
1034. I will cause the shower Naylor 4d
874. I will cry unto God H. J. King 4d.
73. Ditto ... ... Steggall 4d

GRACIOUS SPIRIT, HOLY GHOST

SHORT ANTHEM FOR WHITSUNTIDE AND GENERAL USE

WORDS BY BISHOP CHRISTOPHER WORDSWORTH

MUSIC BY

HUGH BLAIR

M.A., MUS.D. (CAMBRIDGE)

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

Copyright, 1922, by Novello and Company, Limited

pp
Ho - ly, heav'n - ly Love.
pp
Ho - ly, heav'n - ly .. Love.
pp
Ho - ly, heav'n - ly Love.
pp
Ho - ly, heav'n - ly Love.
pp Sw.
Gt. to Ped. in add 4 ft.
poco rit.
Solo Soprano (or Tenor)
mp
Love is kind, and suf - fers long; Love is meek, and thinks no wrong;
cres.
Ch. 8 ft.
mp
Sw. with Oboe cantabile
Sw. to Ped. in
cres.
f
Love than death it - self more strong; There - fore, give . . us
mf
f
Sw. without Oboe, both hands
mf
rit.
p
Love, . . there - fore give us Love . .
a tempo
a tempo
rit.
p add Oboe
Ped.
p

Tenors
p
cres.
Faith and Hope.. and Love we see . . Join - ing
Basses
p
cres.
Faith and Hope.. and Love we see . . Join - ing
cres.
p Gt. Sw. coupled
Gt. to Ped.
mf
hand.. in hand . . a - gree; . . But the great - est, the
mf hand . . in hand a - gree; . . But . . the great - est, the mf
cres.
great - est of the three, And the best . . . is Love, . . . the
cres.
great - est of the three, And the best . . . is . . Love, . . . the cres.
rit.
a tempo
best . . . is Love.
rit.
a tempo
best . . . is Love.
rit.
f
a tempo
fp

Soprano
pp
From the o - ver-shad-ow-ing Of Thy gold and sil-ver wing, Alto
pp
From the o - ver-shad-ow-ing Of Thy gold and sil-ver wing,
Tenor
pp
From the o - ver-shad-ow-ing Of Thy gold and sil-ver wing,
Bass
pp
mf
From the o - ver-shad-ow-ing Of Thy gold and sil-ver wing, Shed on pp Sw.
mf Gt.
Gt. to Ped. in
Gt. coupled mf
Shed on cres.
mf
Shed on us, who to Thee
mf
cres.
Shed on us, who to Thee sing, . . . shed on
cres.
us, who to Thee sing, shed . . on us, who to Thee sing, . . on cres.

cres.
us, who to Thee sing, who to Thee sing, . . . Ho - - - sing, on us, who to Thee sing, . . . Ho - - - us, . . . on us, who to Thee sing, . . . Ho - ly, Ho - - - us, on us, who to Thee sing, . . . Ho - - -
- ly, heav'n - - - ly Love. . . .
- ly, . . heav'n - - - ly . . Love. . . .
- ly, . . heav'n - - - ly Love. . . .
- ly, . . heav'n - - - ly Love. . . .
(32 ft.)

NOVELLO'S EDITION OF BACH'S CHURCH CANTATAS

	No.
*BIDE WITH US	6	Bleib' bei uns
*Ditto. (Welsh Words.)
CHRIST LAY IN DEATH'S DARK PRISON	4	Christ lag in Todesbanden
CHRISTIANS, GRAVE YE THIS GLAD DAY	63	Christen, ätzet diesen Tag
COME, REDEEMER OF OUR RACE	61	Nun komm, der Heiden Heiland
FROM DEPTHS OF WOE I CALL ON THEE	38	Aus tiefer Noth schrei' ich zu dir
GIVE THE HUNGRY MAN THY BREAD	39	Brich dem Hungrigen dein Brod
GOD GOETH UP WITH SHOUTING	43	Gott fähret auf mit Jauchzen
GOD SO LOVED THE WORLD	68	Also hat Gott die Welt geliebt
*GOD'S TIME IS THE BEST	106	Gottes Zeit ist die allerbeste Zeit
*Ditto. (Welsh Words.)
*HOW BRIGHTLY SHINES	1	Wie schön leuchtet
IF THOU BUT SUFFEREST GOD TO GUIDE THEE	93	Wer nur den lieben Gott lässt walten
*JESUS, NOW WILL WE PRAISE THEE	41	Jesu, nun sei gepreiset
JESUS SLEEPS, WHAT HOPE REMAINETH?	81	Jesus schläft, was soll ich hoffen?
LET SONGS OF REJOICING BE RAISED	149	Man singet mit Freuden
LORD IS A SUN AND SHIELD, THE	79	Gott der Herr ist Sonn' und Schild
*LORD IS MY SHEPHERD, THE	112	Der Herr ist mein getreuer Hirt
LORD, REBUKE ME NOT (Funeral Ode)	198	Lass, Fürstin (Trauerode)
*MY SPIRIT WAS IN HEAVINESS	21	Ich hatte viel Bekümmerniss
O CHRIST, MY ALL IN LIVING	95	Christus der ist mein Leben
O JESU CHRIST, THOU PRINCE OF PEACE	116	Du Friedensfürst, Herr Jesu Christ
*O LIGHT EVERLASTING	34	O ewiges Feuer
O PRAISE THE LORD FOR ALL HIS MERCIES	28	Gottlob! nun geht das Jahr zu Ende
O TEACH ME, LORD, MY DAYS TO NUMBER	27	Wer weiss, wie nahe mir mein Ende?
PRAISE OUR GOD WHO REIGNS IN HEAVEN	11	Lobet Gott in seinen Reichen
PRAISE THOU THE LORD, JERUSALEM	119	Preise, Jerusalem, den Herrn
SAGES OF SHEBA, THE	65	Sie werden aus Saba Alle kommen
*SLEEPERS, WAKE!	140	Wachet auf
STRONGHOLD SURE, A	80	Ein' feste Burg
THERE IS NOUGHT OF SOUNDNESS IN ALL MY BODY	25	Es ist nichts Gesundes an meinem Leibe
THOU GUIDE OF ISRAEL	104	Du Hirte Israel, höre
WAILING, CRYING, MOURNING, SIGHING	12	Weinen, Klagen, Sorgen, Zagen
WATCH YE, PRAY YE	70	Wachet, betet
WHEN WILL GOD RECALL MY SPIRIT?	8	Liebster Gott, wann werd' ich sterben?
WHOSO DOTH OFFER THANKS	17	Wer Dank opfert

ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE EACH

THE SOLOS FROM THE CANTATAS

IN TWELVE BOOKS (THREE BOOKS FOR EACH VOICE)

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE EACH

BACH'S MOTETS

*BE NOT AFRAID	Fürchte dich nicht. 8*d.*
Ditto. (New Edition) (Edited by G. R. SINCLAIR)	1*s.*
*BLESSING, GLORY, AND WISDOM	Lob und Ehre und Weisheit und Dank. 8*d.*
COME, JESU, COME	Komm, Jesu, komm. 1*s.* 6*d.*
*I WRESTLE AND PRAY (J. C. BACH)	Ich lasse dich nicht. 6*d.*
*JESU, PRICELESS TREASURE	Jesu, meine Freude. 1*s.* 6*d.*
*Ditto. (Welsh Words)	1*s.* 6*d.*
*NOW SHALL THE GRACE	Nun ist das Heil. 8*d.*
*SING YE TO THE LORD	Singet dem Herrn. 1*s.* 6*d.* [1*s.* 6*d.*
*SPIRIT ALSO HELPETH US, THE	Der Geist hilft unserer Schwachheit auf.

* May be had in Tonic Sol-fa.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

(Sept., 1925.)

which the first movement floats into nothingness. The slow movement more definitely ends with its long D major peroration. But the Finale has no beginning of its own; it dawns where the first movement faded in twilight, and it cannot pick up its tale across an interference of applause. This was the first of about fifteen performances of the Symphony heard by the writer at which this continuity was made actual in sounds and silences, and the pleasure of it was his chief experience. Moreover, if one's memory of old performances is reliable, this was the best that Sir Henry Wood had given. The purely orchestral annotations that he used to make were toned down, and the whole brought into a better relation as a musical drama, and into a more plastic treatment of the Elgarian speech.

Shortly afterwards we were listening to the clever and emphatic Gustav Holst of the 'Planets' (Mars, Venus, Mercury, and Jupiter). This is music that can be enjoyed with a pipe in one's mouth—no one ought to enjoy smoking to Elgar's Symphony. However well one may know these descriptive studies (and probably there is not a secret left in them after two hearings) they rivet you every time. There is room in music for mental athletics as well as for poetics.

Between Elgar and Holst came Chopin in F minor, with orchestra. Every fault that can be ascribed to this Concerto is redeemed ten times by the beauty of the pianoforte writing, and this Mr. Arthur Rubinstein gave us scatheless. It is customary to mention the Overtures to symphony concerts as if they were mere packing. In this case custom is unfair, for the Overture was the Prelude to Act 2 of Dame Ethel Smyth's 'The Wreckers,' a fine piece of symphonic and descriptive writing that took effect among the experiences of the concert. M.

WEINGARTNER

Weingartner's programme contained Schumann's first Symphony and Beethoven's seventh, Brahms's Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and Holst's 'Mercury,' 'Venus,' and 'Jupiter.' The Holst did not amount to very much; the notes were played, but without understanding of the various moods. The Siciliano and the closing fugue were the two most exalted moments in the Brahms—spacious and reserved. Schumann's Symphonies prattle delightfully, and to take them in a fresh, spring-time mood, as Weingartner took the B flat, is the way to get the best out of them. To write pianistically for the orchestra is the penalty of writing orchestrally for the pianoforte. Schumann's one successful long work was where he combined both. That we do not often hear his Symphonies is due to our having become orchestrally sensitive. But the music itself, behind its medium, makes an appeal of its own with its wayward sentences and unencumbered logic. There is no waywardness in Beethoven, and the art of setting every sentence in relation to its context, forwards and backwards, is one which no one understands better than Weingartner. M. F.

ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS

Sunday orchestral music, lately at a low ebb, has suddenly risen to full tide. Sir Landon Ronald's series of concerts with the Royal Albert Hall Orchestra, at the Palladium, have proved successful beyond all expectation. Illness has lately kept Sir Landon from his task, but Sir Henry Wood has consented to take up his duties. On March 21 Sir Henry had the pleasure, out of season for him, of conducting a Wagner concert before a crowded audience.

At Queen's Hall, Sir Thomas Beecham has been helping to animate Sunday afternoon existence. On February 28 he took that rather discredited work, César Franck's Symphony, in hand, and made us think over it again. A week later he resuscitated Liszt's 'Orpheus,' without, however, bringing about any change of opinion.

The London Chamber Orchestra gave a concert full of excitements and satisfactions at Æolian Hall on March 5. Bach's second 'Brandenburg' Concerto (with Mr. Herbert Barr garrulous on the high trumpet) was the beginning, and Mozart's G minor Symphony was the end. Mr. Frederick Thurston played Debussy's Clarinet Rhapsody, which is probably unknown Debussy to ninety-nine concert-goers out of a hundred; Stravinsky's 'Pulcinella' Suite was followed by the Delius Violoncello Concerto, the one causing strange and the other beautiful noises. Miss Beatrice Harrison was the violoncellist. This admirable programme was admirably played, and Mr. Anthony Bernard may be credited with one of the most interesting of recent concerts.

Two amateur orchestras have shown their paces. The Strolling Players were conducted by Mr. Joseph Ivimey on February 18 in Beethoven's eighth Symphony, which taxed their capacity for delicate playing. The chief works played by the Royal Amateur Orchestra, under Mr. Arthur Payne, on February 26, were the 'Meistersinger' and 'Di Ballo' Overtures. The solo player of the concert was an organist—a fact to be noted. Mr. Leonard Blake played part of Rheinberger's sixth Sonata.

The British Women's Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Dr. Malcolm Sargent, gave a concert on March 9. The best playing, not only of the concert but in the Orchestra's career, occurred in Parry's 'English Suite.' M.

SIR HENRY WOOD AND THE RUSSIANS

Sir Henry Wood went back to his old love, the Russian school, at the Queen's Hall Symphony Concert on March 6. The Symphony was Scriabin's 'Divine Poem,' and the Concerto Tchaikovsky's in B flat minor for pianoforte (soloist, Nicolas Orloff).

That the audience was not as large as usual and its pulse somewhat languid (apart from the excitement caused by the pianist's surprising display), showed how cruel are the veerings of fashion. Is it five or six years ago since Scriabin's vogue was at its height? Probably the reaction is unjustly violent, but in spite of the conductor's splendid advocacy that afternoon, the weakness and frothiness of the Symphony were not to be disguised. As for Tchaikovsky's Concerto, we have all long since given up commenting on its musical content, and restrain ourselves to the exhibition of the soloist. What a lion of the pianoforte like Rubinstein may have made of it we can only guess. For pure spiritedness and gallant grace one need not ask that Mr. Orloff should better himself. In this sort of thing the young man is a marvel. The instrument quivered, but he did not go through its tone.

Among the smaller pieces was Honegger's creaking and grinding 'Pacific 231,' which exploits a series of dry orchestral sounds in amusing contrast with the lusciousness beloved by previous generations.

C.

THE STRANGE CASE OF MR. KUBELIK

There was a time—not so very long ago—when Mr. Kubelik was the rage of this and other towns. We were told wonderful stories of his powers which excelled those of the magic flute; audiences stormed the halls in which he was to be heard. Fate played into his hands, for was there not also a shipwreck and storm, with escapes and recovery of Stradivari fiddles of untold value? And in the circumstances perhaps Mr. Kubelik is not to blame if he never learnt to know himself, his powers and his limitations. Most people who achieve sudden prosperity are apt to find it embarrassing at times, and such swift fame apparently generated in Mr. Kubelik the belief that life and art had nothing more to teach him. He appears to have devoted most of his time no longer to the overhauling of his repertory, but to composition. Six full-blown Violin Concertos bear evidence to this strange misapprehension; one of these we heard at the Albert Hall, played by the composer, on March 7. The critics were unanimous in declaring the work 'guilty of dullness without extenuating circumstances,' and to that verdict the best friends of Mr. Kubelik will say 'Amen.' But the saddest fact about this and the later recital at Queen's Hall was the unprecedented drop in technical skill. The violinist played pieces from his old repertory, but not one of them with the old sureness of touch. A few tricks came off creditably enough, but neither tone, nor intonation, nor dexterity are now what they were. As far as one could judge from a distant seat in the hall he appears to have evolved a new system of bowing with rigid fingers flat on the heel of the bow. The result is a tone such as one gets from a bow the hair of which has not been screwed to the right degree of tension. The sooner Mr. Kubelik goes back to his old method, the better. It is far better to be the first of technicians than the last of composers. His true friends ought to tell him that but for his early successes his Concerti would never have had a chance of being heard in public. When he has regained the old mastery the public will forgive him if he should insist on playing a movement from one of his creations. At present he offers us whole concertos and no technical mastership. This will never, never do.

B. V.

CHAMBER MUSIC

A comprehensive tribute must be paid to the four concerts which Mr. Harry Isaacs (pianoforte) has given at Grotrian Hall in partnership with Mr. Jean Pougnet (violin), Mr. Harry Berly (viola), and Mr. Douglas Cameron (violoncello). The music was all by living British composers, and that is to say it was elaborate, difficult, and generally rather a ticklish business. None of these young men seemed to notice the strain. With the utmost sang-froid—which is not merely a matter of deportment, the lack of platform mannerisms being an outward sign of an inner artistic commonsense—they made themselves familiar and sympathetic with B. J. Dale, Arnold Bax, Rebecca Clarke (Viola Sonatas); McEwen, Delius, Bax, and Ireland (Violin Sonatas); Bridge, Ireland, Godfrey Sampson, and Delius (Violoncello Sonatas); Bridge, Matthay, and Elgar (Quartets and a Quintet).

The Blofield Quartet (Mr. Louis Blofield, Mr. Walter Price, Miss Annie Wolfe, and Mr. Granville Britton) made its début in February, winning good opinion for itself and for Dr. George Dyson, composer of two well-made Rhapsodies.

M.

Nicholas Gatty's set of 'Variations on a Traditional Theme,' played by the Spencer Dyke Quartet on February 22, seems to have given pleasure to everybody who heard it. Korngold's work 'in A minor' was heard at Kensington Town Hall, where the Rosé Quartet paid a flying visit on the same evening. It is fibrous, cerebral, and rather unmusical music of a kind that many composers try, and fail, to imitate. A distinguished little work by Dame Ethel Smyth—a set of Variations on 'Bonnie Sweet Robin,' for flute, oboe, and pianoforte—was played at Mr. Fransella's concert on February 23. There is genuine style in its musicianly chatter.

The chief works heard by the Contemporary Music Centre on March 2 were a Pianoforte Trio by Rebecca Clarke, a Duo for violin and violoncello by Kodály, and a Sonata for violoncello by Hindemith. The players were Mr. Arthur Alexander, Mr. Zoltan Szekely, and Mr. Paul Hermann.

The Casals Quartet, led by M. Enric Casals, came from Spain to the Music Society (in exchange for the Music Society's Quartet, recently touring in Spain) on March 9. The players gave straightforward, acceptable performances of Beethoven (Op. 95) and some lighter Caprices by Conrado del Campo.

HUNGARIAN QUARTET

The Hungarian Quartet (which is neither the Budapest Quartet, nor the Quartet from Budapest led by Mr. Jenner) gave its only recital of the season at Wigmore Hall on February 22, beginning with the music of its countryman, Béla Bartók, before proceeding with the more serene moods of the classics. Some years ago the late Arthur Johnstone defined Bartók as a gifted madman. The Quartet (No. 2, Op. 17), played by Messrs. Emerie Waldbauer, Jack Kessler, Jean de Temesvary, and Eugène de Kerpely, fully bears out that description. Lest there should be any misapprehension, let it be added that there is no intention to cast any doubts as to his sanity as a man. It is only the artist that is in question, and the artist undoubtedly suffers from what appear to be hallucinations. How else can one define his curious belief that a phrase needs only to be repeated countless times to become interesting and significant? Or explain the rude strength he now and then exhibits, or the cunning of his tricks? Let us admit, however, that genius is allied to madness, and maybe what to us are symptoms of decay are in reality signs of a new life. In the midst of death there is life as surely as in the midst of life there is death. The Hungarian Quartet played Bartók's work with great care yet with zest, and Beethoven's Quartet with equal care but with distinctly less zest.

B. V.

BLOCH'S PIANOFORTE QUINTET

The idea of utilizing equal temperament quarter-tones occurred last to Busoni, who theorized but did not put it in practice. M. Bloch seems to believe (1) that strings can agree upon the same (indeterminate) quarter-tone, and (2) that something would be gained if they could. Of course (1) they cannot and (2) they merely sound out of tune. Quarter-tones as actually used in melodic music are something quite different. This and other 'stunts' were mere obstacles in the way of understanding M. Bloch's music. That does not appear to be particularly abstruse, and we may accept it naïvely as a merit, because 'stunts' are more apt to conceal the academic mind. The players, five ladies, handled the works with skill, and gave us still greater enjoyment with Brahms and Mozart. M. F.

HOLST'S NEW TERZETTO

At a concert given by the Faculty of Arts, Holst's Terzetto for flute, oboe, and violin was played for the first time. It consists of an Allegretto and a Scherzo, and the programme was excellent. The instruments are very independent, and at a single hearing one can get no further than to follow their individual fortunes with something between interest and admiration · the harmonies they coincide to make may become obvious later. The combination of tone is happy, and the hearer does not tire of it; it also sounded well in a small room. The Scherzo seemed to have rather more character of the two movements, with a dance rhythm clearly felt, but not insisted on. At this concert Mr. Ireland's playing of his own Sonata was something to be thankful for : composers ought to play their own works, when they can. When they do, we forget about the instrument altogether. Mr. Eisdell sang some less well-known songs of Brahms with a good legato and clear diction. M. F.

MAURICE EISENBERG

A young violoncellist, Maurice Eisenberg, well earned admiration on February 18 at Æolian Hall. He played a Sonata of Locatelli; a Concerto in B flat of Boccherini; and a Suite in D of Bach. This last (No. 6) was that written by Bach for the five-stringed Viola Pomposa, and on the ordinary 'cello its difficulty is extreme. Boccherini's Concerto, too, demands an abnormal amount of high-position work. The young man's technique, and above all the light flexibility of his execution, justified his choice, although one could never forget the perils of the way. It was curious that his extremely elegant playing was given a foil the very next night in the same hall by the performances—the very remarkable performances—of another new 'cellist, who had cultivated a much squarer and more robust style. It is a great pity that the Bach Suite verges so near on the impossible, for it is in the master's most magnificent manner, and the Saraband in particular is perhaps the most beautiful in his unaccompanied string works. C.

THE CHAMBER MUSIC PLAYERS

The concert given by the Chamber Music Players at Wigmore Hall, on March 10, left no doubt in our mind that they constitute a combination second to none. Albert Sammons is often at his best as a quartet leader, and that is why we much regretted his resignation from the String Quartet. Indeed, it seems rather singular that the Chamber Music Players have not developed into a quintet, so as to bring string quartets within possibility. Of course, a second violin worthy of Sammons, Tertis, and Cedric Sharpe will not easily be found; with a little tact, however, this should be a possible proposition. At any rate, an attempt in this direction would be well worth while, since the string quartet would reproduce some of the features which delighted us in the performances of the Chamber Music Players—chief amongst them the playing of Tertis. Certainly not one of the famous string quartets which have visited us lately can boast a viola player of his class, and with William Murdoch at the pianoforte, the readings both of Brahms's C minor Quartet and of Schumann's Quartet in E flat were most inspiring. F. B.

LÉNER QUARTET

The Léner Quartet's interpretation of Mozart's D minor and Brahms's A minor Quartets at Wigmore Hall were no less excellent than the readings of these Hungarian players usually are. Yet on thinking over our impressions we find that M. Jeno Léner has a greater part in them than he should if the Quartet were the ideal diminutive democracy a string quartet is supposed to be. Surely there is here one law for the first fiddle and another law for the rest. We remember distinctly the leader's deliciously warm tone, the accuracy and devotion of the others. But even when they have their opportunity—and they had many in Brahms's work—the players appeared to avail themselves of it with an air of apology, as if they had been anxious to show that they had no intention to dispute the authority of their leader. We did not enjoy their playing any the less because of this, and we leave it to others to discuss whether the ideal quartet, or the ideal State, is that based on equality, or the one which recognises and admits the opportunity for degrees of responsibility and distinction. F. B.

GERALD COOPER

Zoltan Kodály is the only Hungarian composer of the present whose name is almost as well-known outside his native country as that of Béla Bartók, and consequently there was a good deal of curiosity as to the qualities of his Sonata for 'cello alone which was played for the first time in London at the last Gerald Cooper Concert at Æolian Hall. We found it infinitely more attractive than any of the Bartók works heard here recently. Although the two Hungarian composers have obviously something in common, Mr. Paul Herman's exceedingly able performance made it quite clear that in two respects at least Kodály has the advantage over Bartók. In the first place he is a trifle more restrained in the use of dissonance—and this is important, for if modern composers go wrong it is not because they use dissonances and oddities, but because they use them at the wrong time and place. Then his inspiration is more poetic, more sensitive, and consequently goes deeper than Bartók's. We are not in love with left-hand pizzicato and the other tricks of the moderns, but Kodály convinced us that he has something to say which does not depend entirely on these extreme effects of tone-colour.

Songs were contributed by Mr. Mark Raphael, and the accompaniments were in the capable hands of Mr. George Reeve. B. V.

PHILHARMONIC CHOIR

The Philharmonic Choir began its concert at Queen's Hall on March 11 with Arnold Bax's 'St. Patrick's Breastplate.' It is one of the composer's recent works; the same Choir had given the first performance of it a year ago. It is a setting of a prose version of the hymn. Those who are familiar with the splendid traditional tune associated with a rhymed version in the 'English Hymnal' may feel that the composer has missed an opportunity in having made no use of it. In musical effect the work gives us gorgeous moments, but the logic of the whole is not taut. It is pretty difficult, but Mr. Kennedy Scott's singers stood up boldly to it, and once again earned our respect. We are lucky indeed to have such a Choir.

Has there ever before been such a season of Delius? At this concert we had 'The Song of the High Hills.' Delius at his best, surely. Great spaces of quietude; a burst of rapture from a solitary spirit; and a beautiful ending like a slow summer sunset.

Finally Mozart's 'Requiem' was sung, with Miss Gladys Currie, Miss Carys Davies, Mr. Steuart Wilson, and Mr. Kenneth Ellis as soloists. Mr. Kennedy Scott, who does so many things well, is on the way to being a conductor in the large sense. His control is becoming stronger and his outlook broader. There is still rather too much made of individual trees and too little of the wood as a whole when he presents a big work. C.

CHORAL CONCERTS

On February 27 the Royal Choral Society gave one of its best performances of 'The Dream of Gerontius.' With an inspiring conductor like Sir Hamilton Harty and music that they must know by heart, the singers were able to enter into their task with a certain freedom. Miss Margaret Balfour sang the part of the Angel, Mr. Kenneth Ellis that of the Priest. Mr. Steuart Wilson showed himself to be, in temperament and in the bodiless tone of his voice, the successor of Gervase Elwes.

The longest work sung by the Westminster Choral Society on February 25 was Mozart's 'Requiem.' The most important was Bach's 'Magnificat,' which is rarely sung nowadays, presumably on account of its elaborate detail and consequent demands on rehearsal. Mr. Vincent Thomas had evidently given devoted study to the work, and both he and his choir may be commended highly for their achievement.

Other choral concerts that deserve honourable mention are the performance of Brahms's 'Requiem' by the Ealing Philharmonic Society (Mr. Victor Williams) on February 20; a miscellaneous concert by the Stock Exchange Choir (Mr. Cecil Engleheart), with the help of famous soloists, on February 23; the singing of 'The Golden Legend' by a choir drawn from Insurance Companies (Mr. Frank Idle) at Queen's Hall on March 4; and the performance of 'A Tale of Old Japan' at Cannon Street Hotel by the Midland Bank Choral Society (Mr. W. Cleverly Hunt).

Two choirs have distinguished themselves by giving excellent performances of Verdi's 'Requiem'—the South West Choral Society (which also gave 'Blest Pair of Sirens') at Battersea Town Hall on March 3, under the direction of Mr. Arthur R. Saunders; and the People's Palace Choral Society at the Palace on March 13, under Mr. Frank Idle.

SOME PIANISTS OF THE MONTH

Mr. Harold Rutland has attractive qualities. At Wigmore Hall he played a gay Sonata in G, by Arne, with great neatness and finish, and an admirably clear and rhythmic performance of Bach's Toccata in C minor followed. He was more unequal in Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 31, No. 2, not fully revealing the beauty of the slow movement, and giving a too blurred effect to the Allegretto by taking it too fast. A light, cleverly-written Suite by Hugo Anson provided the novelty of the programme, and was well played.

Mr. Henry Bronkhurst, at his recital at Wigmore Hall, plunged from Bach straight into romanticism and the picturesque—indeed, his Bach had a romantic flavour—but then, was not the piece a Fantasia? He introduced a Danza Festiva by Medtner, a modern composer unashamed of using a melodic line. Two Dohnányi Rhapsodies were played with understanding and verve. Mr. Bronkhurst has studied to some purpose, but his tone too frequently tends to become metallic.

Miss Olga Thomas (Wigmore Hall) is skilful, and plays with the exuberance of youth. Exuberance may be exhilarating, sometimes exasperating. It exasperates when it tends to obscure the essential significance of the music and stresses the more material side of things. Miss Thomas missed the beauty and character of some of the music she played, but none the less has powers which, with further æsthetic development, should enable her to achieve much. In the Brahms G minor Rhapsody there was the requisite energy, but she blurred what should be a definite and crisp progression, and in her desire to 'push on' missed the 'approaches' which give interest and variety to this work.

Miss Isabel Gray gave two Saturday afternoon recitals at Wigmore Hall, the first being entirely a Beethoven programme. Miss Gray has convictions which she is able to express with no uncertainty, and her interpretations showed understanding. Though her playing is somewhat academic, she rose nobly to that great Sonata, Op. 110, which seems to hold so much of life's experience, leading to a serene contemplation of wide horizons. The principal work in her second programme was Schumann's 'Die Davidsbündler,' played with vigour, variety, and certainty of technique, but lacking in breadth of vision. A tendency to hard tone mars Miss Gray's otherwise finished playing.

It was a pleasure to hear Miss Fanny Davies, who, as President of the Society of Women Musicians, gave a recital to members and friends on March 6. In a programme which contained the 'Appassionata' Sonata, Schumann's 'Davidsbündler,' and Brahms's Variations on an Original Theme, Miss Davies displayed all the mature artistry, warmth, and vigour which one associates with her personality.

At Wigmore Hall, Miss Jeanette Lamb played Bach's French Suite, in G, with sensitive delicacy of touch and sprightly grace. There was too much sustained pedalling in the fugues that followed. Miss Lamb has an ear for refinement of tone—a great asset. Her 'colour' is perhaps a little flat for the more dramatic moods, but how much more agreeable this than the so frequent heavy loading and splashing! There was an exaggerated contrast of tempo between the first and second parts of Chopin's Nocturne, Op. 37, No. 2; on the other hand, in the Brahms Ballade, Op. 10, No. 1, there was not enough difference of tempo and expression between the Andante and Allegro. But if her power of interpretation matures with experience, her playing will count as having charm and purpose.

Miss Marcelle Meyer opened her recital at Wigmore Hall with a spirited reading of Bach's Italian Concerto. Two pieces by Ravel, 'Oiseau Triste' and 'Alborada del graciozo,' were charmingly played, but Debussy's 'Poisson d'or,' which followed, was much too heavy. Miss Meyer played also works by Lord Berners, Satie, Poulenc, and Auric, which struck one as being alternately (and often simultaneously) childish and cacophonous.

Miss Betty Humby, a young pianist of decided gifts, opened, at Wigmore Hall, with Bach's Toccata and Fugue in C minor, in which there was all the joyous and festive character of the Fugue. Some Chopin and Liszt Etudes followed, in the playing of which there was considerable character, but, though alert, there is a want of nuance in her phrasing.

M. Alexandre Borovsky gave the first of five recitals at Æolian Hall on March 16. M. Borovsky has great power and breadth of expression. His playing of Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 111, was remarkable—boldly conceived and subtly expressed. In the six Etudes by Scriabin which followed—not the later and more abstruse Scriabin, but early works—his playing was of a comprehensive character, whether graceful, fiery, or romantic. A player who has something to say worth hearing.

The principal groups in Mr. Leslie England's recital at Wigmore Hall were Beethoven, Chopin, and Debussy. In the Sonata, Op. 31, No. 2, the Adagio wandered on in too uneven and lengthy a manner. Apart from this Mr. England's reading was interesting. The general impression, after hearing his Chopin and Debussy, was that the musical content was not quite on the same plane as the technical efficiency. D'A.

SOME SINGERS OF THE MONTH

The Italian baritone, Cesare Formichi, who won good opinions for himself at Covent Garden in 1924, sang at the Albert Hall on March 14, along with an American-Norwegian soprano, Miss Grace Holst. As is usual with these singers who condescend to look in at the concert-room from time to time, in intervals of the really important business of opera, they had neither of them a concert repertory, but contented themselves with a string of operatic excerpts—Massenet, Giordano, Ponchielli, Puccini, and so on.

There was a small audience, but the handful of people who were there recognised in Formichi, as Covent Garden audiences had done, a first-rate singer. He is a big man with a big voice—so comfortably big, that he never once all the afternoon gave the effect of getting anywhere near the limits of his resources. He sang with an ease born of long experience. His technique was so much part of himself that it made the illusion of being purely natural. It was a pleasure to hear such a nobly-sustained resonance. The common sort of manufactured alliance between words and vocal tone became in Formichi's art a real unity. We got great, broad phrases delivered, not piecemeal with a good note here and an uncertain one there, but an eloquent statement, organized and whole, cast in one mould.

In point of interpretation Formichi cannot be called a very subtle singer. We felt him to be at his best in Gérard's monologue in 'Andrea Chenier,' in which the straightforward vigorous expression seemed to come from his own nature. We have seldom heard the 'Pagliacci' Prologue more finely sung, but more could have been done with it in the way of fine shades, reticent moments, and hints of wistfulness.

Miss Holst was a newcomer. We make allowances for her first acquaintance with one of the most difficult concert-rooms in the world. Better than her operatic pieces we liked her Scandinavian songs (Alness, Torjussen, and Sibelius). She had a good dramatic soprano voice, fairly homogeneous. There were signs of technical uncertainty in the production of her higher notes. A singer above the average, then, but not one to lose our heads over. H. V. C.

Mr. Plunket Greene sang a programme which was in itself a work of art, at Æolian Hall. Here was a veteran's lesson to the younger generation. The evening's songs were not a muddled mob, but had been chosen and arranged. They were songs the singer cared about and knew. Some of them we had all heard him sing before. And every now and then there would be a surprise—for instance, among the Schubert songs, a rarity, 'Der Sieg,' and then a very fine Parry song, 'Dirge in the Woods' (reminiscent of Brahms's 'Churchyard,' Op. 105).

In the actual singing there were still moments when one could admire, as in the dramatic, hushed mutter at the opening of the 'Doppelgänger' and the wistful pathos of the expression in the above-mentioned 'Der Sieg.' Here we felt the personal force of the Plunket Greene whom Nature surely meant to have been a great actor. Against those impressions one must set down—it would be lack of candour not to do so—the fact that some of the singing that evening occasioned one distress, sheer distress.

It had been years since we heard Reinhold von Warlich sing, but on February 16, at the Chenil Galleries, Chelsea, he looked not an atom changed. Accompanied by Mr. Berkeley Mason, he cheerily sang the whole of the 'Schöne Müllerin' cycle of Schubert. It was a pleasure to renew acquaintance with such a true artist, even though his actual singing was far from the present writer's ideal. It was singing that 'dated'—it belonged to the period when the glorious voices and the great vocal technicians were mostly devoted to poor or tiresome music, and were moreover tyrants, actively hostile to songs that were poetical or fresh or out-of-the-way. In opposition to them arose the school of intelligent singers who concentrated on singing music for its own sake with careful diction and vivid interpretation of the sense of the song. If to-day we are inclined to react against that school, it is because it has engendered a whole generation of recitalists who think themselves artistic on the strength of having neglected to cultivate good vocal tone. Of course, if they all were as good as Reinhold von Warlich we should hardly grumble!

He kept us interested throughout all the twenty songs, even though we felt we could have spared some of the 'repeats' (in Nos. 8, 9, 10, and 20 in particular). What he did so admirably was, by means of apt facial expression (never overdone), perfect diction, a general sense of the situation, and something of the actor's art, to dramatise the whole cycle. The unlucky lover of the fickle Milleress was there before us, somehow—a likeable and pathetic young rustic, in spite of ordinary evening clothes. It was a puzzling feat. And yet the singer who cannot create some such illusion is only half a singer. We guess that he was visualising the words and conjuring up each situation as he sang. One could enumerate all sorts of dainty touches, from the deferential tone of his 'Frau Meisterin' in the first song (a touch we can remember getting from no one else), onwards. The other side of the account was the fact that the singer's actual voice was dry and unbeautiful. It served well enough in all the songs (a good many) where a quasi parlando tone sufficed. But wherever active warmth and beauty were called for there was a disappointment. Let us insist that this is not the fault of grudging nature, but a sheer technical shortcoming. That could be proved by the fact that every now and then in his slowest and softest sostenuto the singer was out of tune. Now a Reinhold von Warlich has as keen an ear as anyone. Where he failed it was through lack of breath control. One such place was at the change of time in 'Neugierige,' and on the same account 'Morgengruss' was dull. The singer, lacking the right heat, power, and drive, really failed in 'Mein!' All this sounds, perhaps, like captiousness at the expense of an artist whom no serious listener could fail to like and respect and want to hear again, but it is the best I can do to be fair.

At the last of the Gerald Cooper concerts Mr. Mark Raphael sang some Schubert (culled from the less-trodden ways, for the most part) and some Breton songs. He has reached that stage at which, having acquired a solid technique, he has still to relegate it to the 'unconscious.' His effects lack spontaneity. The whole audience is aware of his tensity. One feels that he could now well afford to relax, if only he would.

Among the newcomers of late Miss Millicent Knight (Wigmore Hall) was the best. Not a perfect singer, indeed; but a singer, all the same, and that is not at all common in these days of recitals in a dreary, spineless sort of 'Sprechgesang.' She straightway made unambiguous songlike sounds. It was as though she were swimming boldly in deep water. The average recitalist one hears is a mere paddler. Her tone was healthy and resonant. I could not stay to hear all she did, but noticed that her French and Italian were rather artificial, and that she was inclined to stiffen her tone in climbing. But she has the root of the matter in her. The rest will come.

Miss Isobel McLaren, at Æolian Hall, had arranged her programme with skill, and she showed lively signs of intelligence as an interpreter. Yet one could not feel more than a flicker of interest in most of her songs, because of the poorness of her tone. She lacked the fundamental technique, and it was a pity, for one could see she had an aptitude for self-expression—not to speak of the personal charms which will be remembered by those who have seen her act at Hammersmith Lyric Theatre. She had a success with certain small things, such as 'En Passant par la Lorraine' and a Hebridean Lullaby.

Mr. Dale Smith and Mr. Bertram Ayrton gave a joint concert at Wigmore Hall. The former had this merit, that his words were consistently clear, and he pleased the audience in some children's songs by Fraser Simpson. I confess they struck me more as childish than child-like, but that is beside the point, for the whole performance cannot have pretended to any musical consideration. Mr. Ayrton's words were not as clear as those of Mr. Dale Smith, but his voice was more alive and his higher notes belonged to the category of real singing.

An American soprano, Miss Esther Dale (Wigmore Hall, March 10), showed in two minutes that she knew a good deal about singing and had an attractive voice. She was one of the best new sopranos heard for a long time. Her quality was delightful, particularly on high, soft notes, and her legato was well knit. Occasionally she let her temperament take her too far, and in the production of the wider vowels she worked a little too much 'to help,' so to speak. The programme was good, apart from one or two songs at the end. Bloch's setting of Psalm 137 was among the several modern pieces.

'Lohengrin' was revived at the 'Old Vic.' There was a good bass, Mr. Harry Brindle, as the King. His high notes were not remarkable, but at least they were well covered and did not spoil his scale. On certain vowels in his middle and lower voice the quality was beautiful. His words, too, were good, and always there was a flow of warm tone. In 'Faust,' on the same stage, we heartily applauded the Mephistopheles of Mr. Joseph Farrington, whom we had never seen to more advantage. He was lively and telling in behaviour. His tone was resonant (bass parts alone really suit him); and his phrasing was musicianly.

H. J. K.

Letters to the Editor

THE R.C.O. AND CHOIR TRAINING

Sir,—I have read with much interest a letter from the pen of Mr. Desmond MacMahon in the December, 1925, issue of your journal.

I think it is time that something definite were done to place choir-training in its right place in the estimation of the R.C.O. We hear much of the importance of choir-training in the work of a Church organist, and of the unsatisfactory state of things in regard to efficiency in this branch of his activities, but I think the fault is really the R.C.O.'s. The College raises the standard of organ-playing to the very highest level, and grants diplomas and hoods for it, but neglects choir-training.

It has often been pointed out that the clergy and all who are responsible for the appointment of organists and choir-masters look for more efficiency in the art of choir-training and organ accompaniment, and less brilliancy of technique in solo-playing. This idea, however, seems to be contradictory to the practice of the R.C.O., which refuses to recognise efficiency in choir-training unless coupled with the highest standard of performance.

To my mind, the standard of A.R.C.O. playing is quite high enough to expect from a choirmaster, if performance is considered essential; I go further, and say that it is quite enough also for a Church organist.

Why not grant the F.R.C.O. diploma in the three important branches of solo-playing, choir-training, and organ accompaniment? This would not lower the standard of the diploma, but, rather, make it more widely useful.

The L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. diplomas are none the less respected because they are granted for so many subjects—even without insisting on the subjects being mentioned. I think F.R.C.O. as it stands at present encourages solo-playing at the expense of the equally or perhaps more important branches of choir-training and organ accompaniment for Church organists, which should not be the case.

Let me quote from the writings of two eminent organists—one a past President, and the other the present President of the R.C.O. Prof. Buck, in his book on the organ, writes:

> 'It is a curious fact, but one admitted on all sides, that an organ player of fine attainments as a soloist is often (and sometimes because of those attainments) a very poor accompanist. The Vicars of England are gradually awaking to this fact, and some already, erring on the other side, are refusing to entertain testimonials which refer too pointedly to the applicant's ability as a solo-player. It is obviously a pity that this paradox should exist.'

Dr. Richards, in his book on 'Organ Accompaniment,' says :

'But it is by no means clear that this fact [i.e., the importance of organ accompaniment] is sufficiently realised, judging from the indifferent and thoughtless accompaniments that are still often heard, and that in spite of the increasing number of organists who have attained great technical skill. We have said "in spite of," but perhaps "because of" would more clearly express the truth, for very often it is the desire to "show off" his technical powers that causes the young organist to forget to accompany in the real sense. The clergy are realising more and more the value of an organist who can accompany the service in a dignified, as well as in a devotional and helpful, manner, and the organist who has not the ability to do this, although a brilliant player, will not—and clearly should not—stand the same chance of preferment as his more artistic and self-abnegating rival. This is becoming more evident every day.'

Could any pronouncements on the subject be more authoritatively and explicitly expressed?

I would suggest that any A.R.C.O. who can satisfy the examiners in the new Choir-Training Test, or in an Organ Accompaniment Test, should be granted the F.R.C.O. without any further test at the organ. The F.R.C.O. paper work should of course be taken. Should this be tried, I am confident that a host of really efficient organists and choirmasters would soon be raised.—Yours, &c.,

A Colonial Reader.

THE R.C.O. AND THE CINEMA

Sir,—I am glad to see that the R.C.O. is to recognise the special requirements of organists at cinemas. If American firms are to continue building organs for the cinema theatres in this country, will it not also be necessary to provide a console for the initiation of students into the highly (and I think needlessly) complicated form prevalent in America? I do not wish to make comparisons with British workmanship, but undoubtedly the electrification of the organ (when it is reliable) enables the player to get the most out of it.

One feature I hope the R.C.O. cinema lecturers will put their foot on, is this: at an American cinema in London the organist sings a comic-song with realistic effects at the organ.

It is an importation we can do without. Comic effects, or 'traps,' abound in American organs, apparently. A recent work, entitled 'Theatre Organists' Secrets,' contains instructions for producing 'Dog bark,' 'Snore,' 'Aeroplane,' 'R. R. Train,' 'Bagpipes,' &c. I fail to see why these things should have place in an 'orchestral' organ.—Yours, &c.,

F.R.C.O.

OFFICIAL SUB-ORGANISTS AT WESTMINSTER ABBEY

Sir,—On p. 271 of the Musical Times for March, in answer to 'Canadian' under above heading, I think the name of my old friend, the late W. J. Winter, might be added. I do not know whether he was an official sub-organist, but that he assisted Sir Frederick Bridge, I know. In Sir Frederick's book 'A Westminster Pilgrim,' p. 343, the author has written, 'At the Abbey I had for many years the most devoted and conscientious help of Mr. W. J. Winter, and later, Dr. Alcock and Mr. E. S. Roper.' Mr. Winter was formerly organist and choirmaster at St. Luke's, Nutford Place, and Holy Trinity, Sloane Square.—Yours, &c.,

W. M. Wait.

55, The Common,
Upper Clapton, E.5.

FREE SCHOLARSHIPS

Sir,—May I, as a winner of a free scholarship, bear testimony to the value of one I was awarded by a well-known private teacher? I have had an excellent course of training, and have been 'brought out' in a first-class manner. Incidentally, as a direct result of my connection with my master, I have received to date over £50 in fees. I paid an entrance fee of 5*s*. The master referred to furnished me with a list of singers of the first class whom he had trained. When I applied for a similar list to a singer who extensively advertises a free scholarship (one guinea entrance fee), it was not forthcoming.—Yours, &c.,

Tenore.

Sir,—May I comment on your remarks on Free Scholarships in the February issue (p. 139)? In the first place, from what source does the writer derive his 'information'? Imagination is of little assistance in dealing with facts, and, as arithmetic is one of the exact sciences, 'a very little knowledge' of that subject is useless without figures. I have been giving free scholarships for public competition since 1913. In not a single instance have the entrance fees paid for the expenses. For your information (but, of course, not for publication) I enclose the figures concerning my latest competition. You will see that there is a debit balance of £100. This, I submit, knocks the bottom out of the statement 'that the teacher gets handsomely paid for a year's "free" tuition.' It seems nugatory to write of evidence without producing a shred of it; and to refer to the support of 'American musical journals' is sheer futility. There are three outstanding delusions in the minds of the English people : (1) if you send your son to Eton, he is a gentleman ; (2) if he goes to Cambridge, he is intelligent ; and (3) if he studies at the Royal Academy of Music, he is musical! It would appear that to these must now be added a greater hallucination—that one must not issue a prospectus of a Free Scholarship without the Nihil obstat and Imprimatur of the editor of a musical paper. No sensible person would accept a scholarship without being satisfied as to the results of the teaching of the donor. Many private teachers are in a position to satisfy their competitors in this respect, and candidates would be well advised to test the teacher's ability to do so.—Yours, &c.,

Clifton Cooke.

[We can give no better answer to Mr. Clifton Cooke than is found in the letter from 'Tenore,' which was in type before Mr. Cooke wrote. It provides ample evidence that there are bogus as well as genuine scholarships ; the genuine have everything to gain and nothing to lose from such comment as that to which Mr. Cooke takes exception. —Editor.]

BENJAMIN BANKS, OF SALISBURY

Sir,—During the two years 1871-73, when I was a pupil of Mr. C. J. Read, of Salisbury, I frequently heard at least three of Banks's instruments played upon. Mr. Reid himself possessed a viola by this maker, the tone of which was really beautiful ; his brother, R. W. Read, used to play upon a sonorous double-bass from the same work-shop, and one of the members of the string quartet which met regularly every Monday evening in Mr. Read's music-room played upon a Banks 'cello. The above-mentioned viola, when purchased in 1870, by Mr. Read, at an auction sale at Salisbury, was in as bad a condition as that described by Mr. E. Lloyd Simon, but it amply repaid the expense of renovation in London. So far as I remember, these Banks instruments differed from others of the same date in their shape—which was rather suggestive of the old viol form.—Yours, &c.,

C. W. Pearce.

46, Henleaze Avenue, Bristol.

ABSOLUTE PITCH

Sir,—I entirely agree with your correspondent who says that the possession of absolute pitch is a sheer joy and ever-constant delight.

He asks 'Is it common or uncommon?' I should say uncommon, as few go to the trouble to cultivate that degree of precision of which it is born. The want of it accounts for all muzziness of quality and singing out of tune.

I take it that the pitch in question is that of the new philharmonic, which I believe is now that in almost universal use.

There is in all sensitive or sensible people (which is much the same thing) a distinct connection between eye and ear, and I am not ashamed to say that when singing to an accompaniment in a different key from that in the music from which I am singing, I am all at sea. I make this confession in defiance of all who look upon those who are pitch perfect as some kind of monstrosity.

Those who have not acquired this sense are unaware of the potential subtle beauties in singing, and are mere mechanics in the art, especially when singing in harmony.

In view of the above facts, the necessity of keeping pianofortes and other instruments at the standard pitch is obvious.—Yours, &c.,

Cecil Hamilton.

10, Applegarth Road, W.14.

Sir,—Your correspondent 'A. P.' (March issue, p. 256) raises an interesting question when he refers to the 'sense of absolute pitch.'

I should like to know what is the exact meaning of the phrase. I have heard it bandied about during conversation amongst musicians, but have never been able to elicit what was meant. In these days of Relativity, the word 'absolute' has fallen into disrepute, so that its employment courts criticism. As the phrase stands, it would appear to me that certain people are so acutely sensitive that they are able to produce on unkeyed instruments, without external aid—or even to name, when correctly heard—notes within the musical range. If this be the right meaning, then how far is the gift absolute?

It is common knowledge that the fundamental pitch of a note is represented by a definite number of mechanical vibrations. How near to the prevailing standard number must a note be sounded before it is correctly named by the absolutist? In short, to what degree of refinement is the gift manifest? The semitone mentioned by 'A. P.' is, of course, far too gross a unit of pitch (except in the very low notes) to warrant the word 'absolute.'

In your original remarks in the January number, you indicate that the gift is congenital, but many musical executants, after hundreds of practices at the same piece, must acquire the faculty within limits. Similarly, even singers eventually get to know the exact physical adjustment necessary to produce certain notes.

I suppose that, granted 'absolute pitch,' the 'key of the absolute' follows without trouble.—Yours, &c.,

F. T. Walker.

12, James Grove,
Kirkcaldy.

'WITTY' OR 'INTELLECTUAL'?

Sir,—On page 252 of the March issue, your critic 'C.' translates 'Concerts Spirituels' by 'Sacred Concerts,' and wonders why they are so called. As a fact 'sacred' is only one meaning of the word 'spirituel,' its other meanings being 'witty' and 'intellectual.' Judging from the programmes so far, only one item has any semblance of humour, viz., the 'Masks' of Arthur Bliss, so I don't think the term 'witty' can be applied to these concerts. The most obvious meaning seems to be 'intellectual,' judging from the kind of fare offered.

This mistranslation on the part of 'C.' suggests one more reason why he is right in saying that foreign terms should generally be avoided. They are often ambiguous.—Yours, &c.,

Gabriel Sharp.

36, Finborough Road, S.W.10.

SIR WALFORD DAVIES AND THE PERFECT FOURTH

Sir,—I had hoped that some abler pen than mine would have exposed the fallacy which underlies the whole of Sir Walford Davies's lecture, published in the Musical Times of February last. 'The Perfect Fourth, from Hucbald to Holst,' if it means anything, certainly tends to confirm Emil Naumann's belief that a thousand years of musical progress will be followed by a similar period of decadence. Does Sir Walford really mean to suggest that Hucbald's consecutive fourths are beautiful, and worthy of imitation? Of course, the perfect fourth is more consonant than the minor third: that is why it is so much less agreeable. The thirds, major and minor, with their delightful inversions, hold the balance between consonance and dissonance, between too much unity and too much variety, as John Curwen pointed out many years ago. The perfect fourth is nearly as smooth as the perfect fifth: it is only a succession of either that offends the cultivated ear. The objection to two second inversions of triads is quite absurd, and should be discarded, with much other contrapuntal rubbish. Sullivan, for instance, in his Festival Te Deum, in the first sentence of 'We believe that Thou shalt come,' has followed the second inversion of the tonic triad with the second inversion of the dominant seventh, with excellent effect. But these are not bare fourths.

Sir Walford Davies invites us to note the beauty of the chord D-G-C. But whoever suggested that discords were not beautiful? As well might he ask us to note the flavour of a sip of excellent port. But we do not hold it in the mouth for half-an-hour: we resolve it—that is, we swallow it. There is nothing wrong with this 'elegant extract' except that it requires resolution. Sir Walford has, with infinite pains, discovered a mare's nest.—Yours, &c.,

Arthur T. Froggatt.

5, Richmond Mansions,
Denton Road, Twickenham.

CONCERTS FOR CHILDREN

Sir,—I desire to thank you for the comments in the March number of the Musical Times, in which the practice, fortunately rare, of putting silly words to themes of classical works is strongly condemned. At Manchester our Children's concerts started in 1916, and have run continuously every winter since that year. They have been self-supporting, and the Concerts Committee has varied the character of the programmes in every possible way.

Experience justifies my saying that the interest of the children in the highest types of music has been fully maintained without any tricks such as those you describe; indeed, it would probably be correct to say that the teachers and children of Manchester schools would resent any such methods. In the Municipal Orchestral Concerts, conducted by Sir Hamilton Harty in Free Trade Hall, Manchester, and attended by large numbers of school children, only brief printed notes are given, and every one is glad that the time of the concerts is not taken up by verbal explanation and tiresome reiteration of themes. It is true that at Manchester we have many advantages. Music appreciation is taught as a regular subject in the elementary schools of the city by special teachers admirably fitted for the work. Since 1919 ten thousand of our scholars have enjoyed, every year, this training in the love and appreciation of music, and in the cultivation of the power of good listening. During the whole of this period our plan has been to place before the children the highest and best music, well chosen and well performed. Our experience is that only a little verbal explanation is needed, and that the children, whose ages range from eleven to fourteen years, do not require frivolous or weakly humorous words as aids to memory. They always enjoy fine music finely played, and occasionally they hum the themes before or during performance.

I trust that the practice of associating the greatest ideas of the greatest composers with the tame verbal effusions of enthusiastic but misguided teachers will cease forthwith, and that your courageous appeal in that direction will be met in the right spirit.—Yours, &c.,

Walter Carroll
(Musical Adviser to the Manchester Education Committee).

Education Office,
Manchester.

'THE BANKS OF ALLAN WATER': WHO COMPOSED IT?

Sir,—The broadcasting of this favourite ballad seems to point to the fact that its popularity has not dimmed even after a century's vogue. There is scarcely a doubt that it is still as welcome a number in concert programmes as when Mrs. Bland charmed London with it in 1812. Yet during a century, though speculation has been rife as to the composer of the air, no solution has been found to identify the fair composer—for, in most editions of the song, the name is given as 'A Lady,' while some copies bear the statement: 'Words by M. G. Lewis, Esq. Composed by Lady C. S.'

In the historical notes, by Mr. Frank Kidson, appended to 'English Songs of the Georgian Period,' by Moffat and Kidson (1907), we read that the actual name of this mysterious lady of title 'is difficult to guess.' However, it is added: 'She or Horn has succeeded in producing an excellent piece of pathetic melody, and one which from its vocal qualities has always been a favourite.'

About a quarter of a century ago the late J. S. Curwen was very keen on solving the mystery, and he wrote me two or three letters on the subject. At the time, I failed to elucidate the matter further than the fact that Dr. Power O'Donohue told me that the composer was 'Lady C. S——.' Since then I followed up the quest, and not long since discovered that the melody must be attributed to an Irish titled lady.

There is no difficulty whatever as to the writer of the words; they were written by 'Monk' Lewis, otherwise Matthew Gregory Lewis, and occur in his play 'Rich and Poor,' acted in 1812, and first sung by Mrs. Bland (1769-1838). It was arranged for publication by Charles Edward Horn, in the winter of 1813, and was published by James Power, the Dublin publisher, who had settled some years previously in London. Horn successfully arranged the music for Tom Moore's opera 'M.P.,' produced at the English Opera House, on September 4, 1811, followed by 'The Beehive,' and the musical setting of 'Rich and Poor' in 1812.

While the greater number of the versions of the song give the composer's name as 'A Lady,' and 'Lady ——,' James Power issued a collection in which the name appears as 'Lady C. S.' This latter put me on the track, and by a happy coincidence, just as I had satisfied myself that these initials stood for Lady Caroline Stewart, I discovered an edition of the song, published c. 1830, in which the composer's name was more fully revealed as 'Lady C. S——t,' and which a later owner had fortunately unmasked by pencilling the letters 'tewar'—between the S and t, thus making the name 'Lady C. Stewart.'

All that remained was to determine who in reality was the titled Lady C. Stewart? But a difficulty again arose—because in the period 1808-12 there were two ladies bearing this name, one Lady Catherine Stewart, née Bligh, wife of Sir Charles Stewart, created Baron Stewart in 1814, and the other Lady Caroline Stewart, daughter of the Earl of Castle Stewart. However, without going into genealogical details, the latter lady was certainly the composer of the song. It may be well to add that in January, 1815, she became the wife of Col. Bathurst, son of the Bishop of Norwich.

To praise this pathetic ballad would be superfluous. However, it may be mentioned that the uncommon interval at the word 'daughter,' in the sixth bar, was a real stroke of genius. The locale of the song has been identified by the late Mr. Curwen as the stream which flows under the Bridge of Allan, near Stirling (Scotland), close to which stood a water-mill, where lived the 'miller's daughter.'

Lady Caroline Stewart's father, Andrew, first Earl of Castle Stewart (created, December 29, 1800), died on August 21, 1809, whereupon the title devolved on her brother, Robert Stewart, as second Earl. She composed the song in 1811, and got Horn to arrange it.—Yours, &c.,

Enniscorthy, Ireland. W. H. GRATTAN FLOOD.

'YET IN MY FLESH'

SIR,—It is hardly to be expected that you can lend your columns to theological controversy, but I trust you will allow me to say that it is most sincerely to be hoped that sopranos will not make the alteration in the above-mentioned text, as suggested in your last issue.

Our Lord Himself in His risen and glorified body said that He had flesh and bones (St. Luke 24, 39), and as we are told in 1 John 3, 2, that 'we shall be like Him,' it must of necessity be in our flesh that we shall see Him—certainly not without.

We now see things in our flesh from our particular viewpoint, and so it will be in our glorified bodies.

When we think of the many thousands who have been comforted beyond measure by this beautiful solo, I would submit that the change suggested is most unnecessary and harmful.—Yours, &c.,

41, Avondale Road, South Croydon. GEORGE DENHAM.

MOZART'S DIVERTIMENTI

SIR,—In the Musical Times for March (p. 225) reference is made to Mozart's Divertimenti for wind instruments. I am fortunate in having secured a copy of some very delightful Divertimenti for two clarinets and bassoon, which were published in 1905 by Breitkopf (Série xxiv., Supplement No. 62). I have recently tried to obtain another copy, but find they are out of print. The Divertimenti were mentioned in a paper read before the Musical Association by the late Oscar Street, who refers to them as models of part-writing, as indeed they are. They are simple and straightforward, the very thing for players in the early stages.

There is a long German preface to this edition, the gist of which I understand to be that some horn parts which existed in earlier editions were spurious, having been added afterwards, and are described as being 'unmozartisch' (blessed word!) and awkward ('ungeschickt').

These works ought certainly to be more widely known than they are at present, now that the study of wind instruments is becoming so much more general.—Yours, &c.,

Whitehall, Stroud. R. H. WHALL.

PIANISTS' HANDS

SIR,—In a recent Press article on musicians' hands, it was mentioned that famous pianists like Liszt and Rubinstein had 'freak' hands, and that the former could stretch an octave easily with his thumb and first finger. But, surely, there is nothing wonderful about that! Anyone with even moderately-sized hands can do the same, and I have a little girl pupil, aged thirteen, who can not only strike a ninth, but also reach a tenth with the same fingers.—Yours, &c.,

22a, Carlton Vale, N.W.6. ALGERNON ASHTON.

JOHN DOWLAND'S 'LACHRIMÆ,' ETC.

SIR,—In the March issue of the Musical Times, Mr. Heseltine, during the course of an excellent 'Note on John Dowland,' states that only one copy survives of 'Lachrimæ; or Seaven Teares figured in Seaven Passionate Pauens' (1605).

I beg to call your attention to the existence of another copy in the Henry Watson Music Library, Manchester. This was presented to Dr. Watson by Mr. G. W. Bebbington, in 1906, along with seven other music books of the same period, short titles of which are set out below:

Dowland, John. 'The First Booke of Songes or Aires,' newly corrected and amended (1603).
Dowland, John. 'The Second Booke of Songs or Ayres' (1600).
Dowland, John. 'The Third and Last Booke of Songs or Aires' (1603).
Hume, Tobias. 'The First Part of Ayres: French, Pollish, and others together' ('Captaine Humes Musicall Humors') (1605).
Hume, Tobias. 'Captaine Humes Poeticall Musicke,' 2 vols. (1607).
Jones, Robert. 'The Second Booke of Songs and Ayres' (1601). Incomplete: Two pages, J and J2 missing.

All the volumes are in excellent condition. Two are bound in full vellum with leather thongs, apparently a renovated contemporary binding, and the others are half-vellum with marbled paper sides. Presumably at some period the whole set was bound together into two rather bulky volumes, the unwieldiness of which restricted use and contributed to the present good state of preservation.—Yours, &c.,

Portland Street, Manchester. JOHN F. RUSSELL (Librarian, Henry Watson Music Library).

STANDARD PITCH

Sir,—Some seventy years ago there met an international commission to settle upon a uniform pitch for the whole world. I may assume on the part of readers a knowledge of the more than chaotic conditions which prevailed at that time. The result of this conference was the fixing of the pitch at 870 vibrations (435 double vibrations). The achievement of this result was felt at the time to be a boon and blessing. One might have supposed that those interested in music, professional musicians and lovers of the art, would have done all they could to see that this uniform pitch of 870 vibrations was adhered to. Such a supposition is erroneous. Those acquainted to any extent with modern musical circles are aware that we are well on the way to reaching once again the chaotic state of things that prevailed a hundred years ago. That this is so is a witness to the weakness of character—pardon the expression—prevalent in the present-day world of practising musicians.

The great orchestras of to-day are far from complying with the beneficent normal pitch. The standard most in use at the present time is a pitch of 882 vibrations.

The main cause of this evil condition of things is to be found in the general endeavour to raise the pitch, for every instrumentalist who uses a higher pitch finds his playing easier. The peculiarities and the limitations associated with this fact are known only to those who have had to work with orchestras and choirs for decades past. It might be good to enlarge upon this point later. One peculiar fact to be noted just now is that not only do single members of orchestras have a tendency to raise the pitch, but even the various large orchestras among themselves try their best to put the pitch as high as possible, in the supposition that the higher it is the better the playing sounds. There may be an element of truth in this opinion, but it should not be allowed to run to the point of making a uniform world pitch, which to every one acquainted with the essentials of the matter must seem a necessity, impossible of realisation.

The writer has thought it well to take up the task of bringing the question forward for treatment in the musical press throughout the world, and he invites all who are interested to co-operate with him in the matter. He considers the active collaboration of the entire musical press of the world to be an important factor towards the attainment of the end in view. For this object he invites all artists, lovers of music, and colleagues in the instrument manufacturing industry to a public exchange of views in the press.—Yours, &c.,

J. N. Mollenhauer
(Proprietor of J. Mollenhauer & Sons).

Fulda.

The Amateurs' Exchange

Flautist wishes to meet first-rate pianist for mutual practice, also violinist and 'cellist. Sonatas, &c., from Bach to ultra-moderns.—J. T. T., c/o 68, Princes Road, Middlesbrough.

'Cellist (learner), keen amateur, wishes to meet another, also accompanist, good reader, for mutual practice and trios. Croydon district, or near.—Cocks, 158, Morland Road, Croydon.

Tenor and baritone singers (young) wanted to join vocal group at Southampton. Enthusiasm rather than experience welcomed, especially for compositions of Bach and Palestrina.—R. E. W., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist (lady), moderate player, wishes to meet violinist, 'cellist, and vocalist for mutual practice. N. or N.W. London districts.—D. M. S., c/o Musical Times.

Good 'cellist wanted to join violinist and pianist for weekly practice of classical trios, at Grove Park, S.E.—N. H., c/o Musical Times.

Soprano vocalist wishes to meet pianist for mutual practice of classical works.—A. Santi, 66, Peckham Rye, S.E.15.

Lady pianist wishes to meet singer for mutual practice.—D. H., 95, Forth Avenue, Bordesley Green, Birmingham.

Violinists and 'cellist (medium ability) wish to meet pianist for mutual practice.—W. R. W., 7, Mayflower Road, Clapham, S.W.9.

Viola player wanted to join trio for quartet and quintet work. S.E. or S.W. districts.—A. V. H., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist (studying for L.R.A.M.) wishes to meet another for practice of duets and two-pianoforte music.—Miss M. E. Armitage, 101, Narbonne Avenue, Clapham, S.W.4.

Singers wanted to form double quartet (S.A.T.B.) to sing part-songs, &c. Also accompanist required. Rehearsals, Mondays, 7.30 to 9.30. S.W. London.—J. W., c/o Musical Times.

Violinist wishes to meet pianist for practice of classical music. Paddington district.—Violinist, c/o Musical Times.

Violinist wishes to meet keen chamber music players for mutual practice. S.E. district.—A. L. P., c/o Musical Times.

Young lady pianist (excellent sight-reader) wishes to meet vocalist or violinist for mutual practice.—S. or S.E. districts.—A. T., c/o Musical Times.

Young lady pianist (L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.) wishes to meet other instrumentalists to form trio or quartet for practice of classical works.—Miss Rawlings, 7, Avondale Buildings, Bath.

A student of singing (soprano) wishes to meet good accompanist for mutual practice. Good reader essential. No ballads.—Miss Quint, 20, Hilda Road, S.W.9.

Pianist wishes to meet advanced violinist for mutual practice (Kreutzer Sonata, &c.). Also 'cellist for trio work. W. or N.W. London.—Gray, 5, Erskine Hill, Golders Green, N.W.11.

'Cellist required for practice with strings and pianoforte.—B. M. D., 19, Wyatt Park Road, Streatham Hill, S.W.2.

Violinist (male) wishes to meet pianist (male) for mutual practice, also with a view to forming trio.—C. Norris, 50, Cotleigh Road, W. Hampstead, N.W.6.

Sharps and Flats

Bereft of satire and parody, we are threatened by the boredom of the pompous manners resultant from the pose, the boresome cult of the blatant 'Big Bow-wow.' Without humour to leaven, choirs and audiences can bear a reiteration of such things as 'He gave them hailstones for rain,' until dull monotony converts the tonal missiles into mud-clods, and the mentality of performers and auditors emerges in correspondingly sodden state, if not the art of music itself.—Leigh Henry.

I never took up the study of music. Mr. Irving Berlin and Mr. Herman Darewski advised me not to do so. They knew I had many tunes in my head, and said that if I studied music I should lose my natural flow of melody.—Marc Anthony.

I think it would be abnormal, unnatural, to suffer willingly what seems to us the pretentious emptiness of Beethoven.—John H. Culley.

What is the musical world coming to when a correspondent, though he be only an obscure amateur, can have the outrageous effrontery to speak of 'the pretentious emptiness of Beethoven'!—Algernon Ashton.

Miss B—— sang very feelingly 'There's nae luck about the Horse.'—New Zealand Paper.

We know that horse.—Punch.

The notable reception accorded the Philharmonic Society was not only merited but deserved.—Provincial Paper.

The Pied Piper by Parry, the Revenge by Villiers Stanford, and Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto. . . . The last mentioned was a superb effort in which the chorus showed themselves at their best.—Provincial Paper.

It was hard to make distinctions between them all [works by Auric, Poulenc, and Satie]; one thought of Dr. Johnson when he was asked to decide between the poetic merits of Smart and Derrick,—'Sir, there is no settling the point of precedency between a louse and a flea.'—Ernest Newman.

All the summer Kubelik composes himself.—Daily Paper.
An executant's rest-cure.—Punch.

A Sonata by Pijper proved richly emotional without effusion, a music damask in fabric and broadly decorated in oxydised metallic motives.—Leigh Henry.

Is not 'Elijah' rather like the human appendix? Although omnipresent, it is of no use to anybody; but to cut it out is rather a painful process, and so one prefers to leave it where it is.—Eric Blom.

I detest Bach; Beethoven leaves me utterly cold; I abominate 'The Messiah'; Mozart and Verdi make me furiously angry, and I loathe Weber and Schubert. On the other hand, Vaughan Williams moves me to such an extent that sometimes I feel I can bear it no longer; Holst excites me so much that I could stand up and shout for joy; Elgar has many times moved me to the verge of tears; Ireland I find lovable. Now, why is this?—John Read.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

The last month of the spring term was remarkable for an exceptionally interesting students' chamber concert held in the Duke's Hall on March 3. Not only was the programme well put together—and programme-making in itself a difficult art—but many of the various items were extremely well performed. This was especially true of the first movement of César Franck's Quintet. The ensemble was excellent, as also was the grip the five players had of the work. Enthusiasm combined with imagination was plainly evident, and the performance was most enjoyable. There was some good Mozart playing in the Quintet in G minor, and the girl leader, Miss Eleanor Heine, is to be commended for her efficient command of her four boy colleagues. A young singer from Glasgow, Miss Jean Campbell Kemp, sang Schubert's 'Du bist die Ruh' and 'Das Lied im Grunen.' The choice of two such songs is a considerable trial for any vocalist, student or otherwise, but she came through the ordeal with infinite credit. Miss Kemp might with advantage cultivate a little more facial expression; the voice, however, is distinctly promising. Another voice of real possibilities was revealed when Miss Norah K. Moore sang two Lieder by Brahms, and in her case the production was noticeably facile, the general effect being marred only by a predilection for a marked sibilant pronunciation of such words as ich. A pleasing performance was given of 'Ondine,' from Ravel's 'Gaspard de la Nuit,' by Mr. Frederic Jackson. This pianist has not only an easy execution, but a fine sense of Ravel's music. Good violoncello players are the exception, but Miss Doris Vevers showed undoubted talent in her reading of the Prelude and Minuets Nos. 1 and 2 from Bach's first Suite in G.

Two Royal Academy instrumentalists, Messrs. Jean Pougnet and Harry Isaacs, gave an interesting violin and pianoforte recital at Grotrian Hall on February 17. Two of the Sonatas played demanded something more than mere executive ability. Reference is made to J. B. McEwen's 'Little Sonata,' and Delius's Sonata No. 1. Both have that elusive quality best described as atmosphere, and both artists realised it most happily. Furthermore, these two players were joined on March 10 by Messrs. Hugo Rignold and Douglas Cameron, and some very capable quartet playing was heard. They need only a little maturing to be quite first class. It was a pity that the Fauré Quartet had to be substituted at the last moment for the all too seldom heard Elgar Quartet, owing to the absence of Mr. Harry Berly on the Continent.

Miss Phyllis Browning-Turner, a contralto student from Perth, Australia, has gained the gold medal and silver challenge trophy at Bristol.

It is of interest to record in connection with the eighty-first birthday on March 7, of Mr. Edward Lloyd, the famous tenor, that his mother was King's Scholar at the Royal Academy in 1834, and her name is kept green for all time by the Louisa Hopkins Prize.

In connection with the Burney Centenary the Londoner's Circle will hold a commemorative gathering at Chelsea Hospital on April 11. Prof. J. C. Bridge will preside, and some of Burney's music will be played on the organ.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Of the seven or eight concerts and recitals given during the last month, those devoted to chamber music were the most successful as well as the most varied. Brahms's Pianoforte Quartet in A major and Ernest Walker's Fantasia for string quartet were the noteworthy features of the instrumental ensemble works, and some Elizabethan Madrigals and Ballets, and vocal quartets by Ernest Walker, reflected great credit on the vocal ensemble classes. First performances of songs by College composers were also given, including three by Elizabeth Maconchy and three by Eric Freeman. The concerts of the second and third orchestras gave the usual opportunities for College conductors, a dozen or more of whom took charge in performances of symphonies, overtures, and concertos, as well as in a new Scena for voice by Frederic Westcott (student).

A student's recital given by Miss Edna Stanton, who is about to return to South Africa after completing her studies at the College, proved to be, if somewhat unusual in design, highly successful. Her programme was made up entirely of Fantasias (Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Schumann, and Chopin), and yet was found to be full of variety and interest. The Schumann Fantasia, for instance, which can so easily be made to sound dull, was played with the vitality, sensitiveness, and feeling for colour that are associated with the mature and experienced artist.

The last Patrons' Fund Rehearsal of the term brought forward new works by British composers, viz., Percy Turnbull, Harold Rhodes, Edric Cundell, and Allan Sly.

The Ernest Palmer Opera Study Fund, established by Sir Ernest Palmer, announces that Mr. John Mottershead has been elected 'Ernest Palmer Opera Exhibitioner,' and that performances of Gustav Holst's 'At the Boar's Head,' 'Savitri,' and a Ballet founded on his 'St. Paul's' Suite will be given at the College by the Sandon Studios Society of Liverpool, and two performances of Monteverde's 'Orfeo,' by the Oxford University Opera Club, will take place during the summer term. The Fund has also arranged for the performance of the incidental music specially written by Mr. Herbert Howells, in the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art's production of Mr. John Masefield's 'Trial of Jesus.'

EAR, EYE, AND HAND IN MUSIC STUDY

On January 12, Mr. Ernest Fowles read a thoughtful and suggestive paper with the above title before the Musical Association at Central Hall, Westminster. He began by pointing out that it was possible to trace five phases in the comparatively recent development of the teacher's craft. There was the phase of experiment, brought about partly by the pressure of public opinion and partly from the desire in the hearts of teachers for better methods. Then there was the aural phase, which insisted upon attention to the needs of the ear. The third was the pianoforte phase. In the last twenty years pianoforte-playing had been reborn, and had become an extremely sensitive, ductile, and vivid form of personal expression. The fourth phase brought us into touch with psychology, and the fifth, the philosophical phase, was that vivid movement known by the not altogether suitable name, appreciation.

With respect to the appreciation of music, matters had now been brought to a head by the institution of wireless transmission. At the present time many thousands of those who listen have never seriously touched a musical instrument, and in all probability would neither have the time nor the inclination so to do. The fact placed the British public in two classes. To the first belonged all who studied or practised music; in the second were those who were musically unlettered and unattached, but who, nevertheless, listened to music. Though these latter might have much concern with the aural reactions, it was clear that they could have little to do with the reactions of the eye and hand. Consequently we must look into this question as it affected those who were actually engaged in the study of music. If our students were to appreciate music, to understand its full message, they must get right inside music. To achieve this they must attack it from every possible point of view, from every angle. They must be continually discovering new phases of contact, new avenues of approach, and this they could not do until they had learned to discipline the senses through which, and by which, musical impressions were received and transmitted.

For musical needs the senses used were three in number, and the solution of every problem connected with musical mediocrity, musical dullness, or musical skill lay with a clear understanding of the operation of any one of the three, of any two, or of the three combined. Reaction was one of most real things in this world of Nature. The tendency of all human reactions was towards expansion and completion in the sphere of the mental. This was another way of saying that the sense-reactions of man started their career in a purely physical form, and were straightway transmuted into mental impulses. The physical reactions of man were beyond his power to control, though he could modify them by the application of science. The extent of the transference of the physical reactions into the mentality of man depended upon the receptiveness and perceptiveness of that mentality. Education might be defined as the force which developed the accumulative effect of every physical reaction, and which increased the number of sensations and associations possible to the individual mind.

Many a fine musician whose ear was alert, responsive, and perceptive, was totally unable to understand the man or woman in whom the aural powers were slow to react, halting in perception, and limited in area. One consequence of this inability to get within the circle of another mentality was to credit that mentality with powers it did not possess. It was, therefore, natural that the teacher should give little or no attention to their development. As regards students, do what you can in the invigoration of the rudimentary reactions by devices borrowed from the aural expert, but do not anticipate that the real message will gain an entry into a mind empty of all enthusiasms save those of music. The first lessons given to beginners, whether instrumental or vocal, should be devoted to the formation of the habit of listening. Throughout the whole of studentship, all mistakes should be referred to want of aural attention, all suggestions should bear directly or indirectly upon the needs of the ear.

Many students went to their instrument to reproduce sounds which, until then, they had not heard. By this means they formed the habit of referring the conquest of notation, not to the ear, but to a perfect correlation of eye and hand in which the ear had no part. Bad reading was the impoverished and degenerate child of poor listening. If the accumulation of aural sensations be left to the occasional aural class, and the habit of listening be not insisted upon as the first of all duties, progress in the accumulation of sensations received through the act of reading could not for a moment be anticipated. You must hear the written word before you could read it. You must hear the sound, chord, or phrase before its notation could be other than a barrier between music and yourself.

Turning to the tactual side of the subject, the lecturer said the issue must always lie with the difference between the simple tactual reaction which was merely conscious of the cold ivories of the keyboard or the muscular attack of the voice, and the touch or attack which was instantly transferred to a mental plane. The aural and visual faculties must be correlated with the tactual. There was a very important and ill-recognised difference between the last-named and the other two which could be summarized in the one word 'anticipation.' The aural and visual powers could not function until the sound or sign which set them in vibration was presented to them, but in its highly developed forms, the tactual power functioned before the actual physical act. Every player of experience knew that the hand prepared itself beforehand for every chord or passage. Every cultured vocalist knew that the muscles of the vocal apparatus pre-adjusted themselves to the coming sound.

The world at large—to say nothing of the professional world—was very imperfectly informed upon the points raised. It was our great desire that men and women, and parents in particular, should regard music as an integral part of education. To achieve this, we should be able to demonstrate the utility of music in the general life with logic and conviction. If we were agreed upon the main thesis, that was, upon the necessity for an equal development of the aural, visual, and tactual powers, did it not follow that no better way existed for testing the powers, potential or actual, of students? What was the exact difference between us and the men of finance and commerce? Was it not to be found in our possession of that trinity of attributes delineated in this lecture, and which we called musicianship, but which might well be described by a larger and more comprehensive name?

At the conclusion of the lecture there was a discussion by a number of members, including Dr. Yorke Trotter, who occupied the chair, Mr. James Swinburne, Mr. Ernest Fowles, and others.

Competition Festival Record

Bedford (March 1-12). — The first thing a writer feels bound to note in regard to this Festival is its amazing growth. The overworked term 'amazing' is, for once in a way, fully justified—for how else can one describe a rate of progress that in six years has made the Bedfordshire Festival the biggest in the kingdom? This year the entries numbered 2,063, and the competitors were 10,486—formidable figures that, we are assured, constitute a national record. Obviously a full report of such an affair is impossible in this journal. All that can be said is that, so far as our personal knowledge of this year's Festival goes—we spent two days and a-half listening to school choirs—the standard has risen notably. On the showing of the junior section this year the singing of the Bedfordshire schools, elementary and secondary, can now at least hold its own, in quality and quantity, with that heard anywhere in the country. This happy result has been brought about primarily through the encouragement given to the Festival by the county educational authorities—encouragement that takes the practical shape of grants in aid of travelling, and refreshment for the competitors who live in the more remote parts of the country. Without this, the skill and enthusiasm of the teachers would be of no avail; with it, the teachers have profited to the full from the experiences and adjudications of the past five years. The Festival is happy, too, in the support it receives from the public. Crowded audiences are the rule, and so the executive is spared the worries of making both ends meet. Dr. Harding (to whom, if we remember right, the Festival owes its inception), Captain Gedge, and his army of helpers have every cause for pride. But success on such a scale brings new worries, and it was evident at the recent Festival that the limit has been reached on the score of accommodation and time. Too often the day's work was so congested that adjudications had to be pared down to a point at which they ceased to have value; and there was too little opportunity for the combined singing and demonstration that constitute one of the greatest educational factors of a festival. Perhaps the best thing for the Bedfordshire meeting would be a few years without increase (or even with a slight decrease), in order that the ground so quickly and brilliantly won might be consolidated. Incidentally, we note with approval that the local press strongly urges the dropping of the title 'Eisteddfod' in favour of 'Competition Festival.' The event is English in every way, so why use a Welsh name?

Carlisle.—This Festival was held on March 6-11. A successful children's day included the massed singing of the cantata, 'Little Sir Hugh,' by Sydney H. Nicholson. Over a hundred choirs from the rural areas of Cumberland competed in tests that were mainly from Bach's 'Peasant Cantata,' and this work was performed at the evening concert. On the final day the choirs that distinguished themselves were Stanwix (Ladies') Choral Society, and, in the chief mixed-voice class, Carliol Choir.

Derry.—The Feis opened on March 8, the adjudicators being Sir Richard Terry, Mr. Wyren Reeves, Mr. Percy W. de Courcy Smale, and Mr. J. Smith, with Miss Louie Barnes (Coleraine) as official accompanist. Mrs. A. M. C. Stewart, than whom there is no more painstaking official, was again

hon. secretary, and Capt. J. C. Herdman was chairman of executive and hon. treasurer. The entries were larger than last year, but the choral competitions showed a lack of interest. Among the novelties were band competitions and songs, and chorus competitions for Boy Scouts and Girl Guides. Sir Richard Terry deplored that there were so few choral entries, and, strange to say, so few baritones. Only one candidate entered for the organ test (Class A), and two for Class B. Out of three entrants in the senior pianoforte test, Miss V. King, of Dublin, was awarded first prize. On the whole the Feis was a great success.

KETTERING. — The seventeenth Eisteddfod of the Kettering and District Sunday School Union (February 17-20) was one of the most successful of the series. There was a large entry, a capital standard, and crowded audiences. The only disappointing factor was the smallness of the choral entry. The few choirs that came, however, showed excellent form. The chief event for mixed voices was won by Mrs. Palmer's Choir, Bedford; the ladies' choir class, by Market Harborough Symington's (conductor, Mr. G. E. Remington); and the B mixed choir winners were Irthingborough Madrigal (Mr. W. E. Jacquest). Among the solo performances that of the winner in the soprano class deserves mention: Miss Margaret Hiscock, of Barton Seagrave, sang 'With verdure clad' with delightful purity and charm.

PEOPLE'S PALACE, E.—The Junior Competition took place on February 23 and 27, when there was a record entry of sixty-three choirs, mainly from elementary schools. The general level was good, with some outstanding work by the best schools. The beautiful tone and delicate singing of some of these East-End children's choirs made one wonder whether climate has much to do with tone after all. We have heard in hilly, bracing districts school singing not to be compared with that of these East-End youngsters. As a result of hard, patient work by the teachers, and nineteen years of People's Palace Festivals, environment seemed to matter very little. The chief results were: Elementary Schools, Boys (sixteen entries): Wilton Road, Dalston (Mr. W. C. Waterman); Girls (twelve entries): Woolmore Street, Poplar (Miss A. U. Lord). Challenge Class (nine entries): Wilton Road Boys, Dalston. In addition to winning their own and the Challenge Class, the Wilton Road Boys won the sight-reading with 100 per cent. marks, and the Challenge Banner for the best aggregate. Sight-singing was done by all the schools. A special word is due to the excellent class for violin bands, won by St. George's-in-the East, Central (Mr. E. Miller).

GREENOCK.—The Renfrewshire Festival, held here from February 26 to March 6, carried on the record of expansion and improvement made by the previous seven Festivals. The competition generally speaking was well supported and well contested. Some of the most interesting items were concerned with matters that are unknown or less known further south, such as Gaelic songs and psalmody singing. The chief choral awards were made to Linthouse Choral Society, Glasgow (Mr. W. A. Ronald), Greenock Male-Voice Choir (Mr. A. J. Gourlay), and Helensburgh Lyric Choir (Mr. T. H. Allwood).

PERTH.—The sixth Perthshire Festival brought about three thousand competitors for trial in some hundred and twenty classes on March 5-13. Every department produced good results, and by general consent the choral singing showed a decided improvement. The choirs that won first place in the three chief competitions were Errol Choral Society (ladies) (Mr. P. J. Porteous), Kilsyth Co-operative Male-Voice Choir (Mr. J. H. Gibson), and Auchterarder Institute Choir (Mr. David Martin).

SOUTHAMPTON.—Eight hundred entries were received for the first Southampton Festival, held on March 1-4 with a final concert on March 6. This readiness to support a new venture and the standard of singing and playing shown by all classes of competitors led the chief adjudicator to describe Southampton as a musical town, a compliment which seems to have been received with gratification. We regret that want of space precludes a full report of this interesting and well-managed event.

Other competition festivals that have been held recently are the BRISTOL EISTEDDFOD, SKIPTON (February 20 and 27), HAZEL GROVE (February 26 and 27), WITNEY (March 2 and 3), TAUNTON (March 3 and 4), TODMORDEN (March 6 and 13), MANSFIELD (March 12 and 13), NORTHAMPTON (March 12 and 13), and many others of one day's duration.

FESTIVALS IN LONDON

The GUILDHOUSE Musical Festival, held on February 15-20, was for the first time a combined Festival for the League of Arts, the Guildhouse, the City of Westminster, and the Borough of Chelsea. The result was that last year's total of a thousand competitors was more than doubled, and in every way the Festival proved a success. There were classes for solo singing and solo playing, and the concerted work of individuals, but the chief interest of the Festival was choral singing, especially the classes for girls' clubs and the like, which were very well supported. One of the Mothers' Meeting Choirs boasted a member eighty-three years old. A feature of the Festival was the prominence given to poetry-speaking competitions, judged by Miss Marjorie Gullan.

A Festival organized by the South Suburban Co-operative Society, and held at BROMLEY, terminated in the singing of 'The Silver Swan' and Dr. Harold Darke's 'England, awake,' by massed choirs from Bromley, Catford, Penge, and Beckenham, under Dr. Darke's direction.——Dancing competitions at Wimbledon are not confined to fox-trots. Greek, operatic, character, and 'semi-character' dance competitions were held in connection with the WIMBLEDON Music Festival in February. Elocution also occupied a prominent place in the syllabus. Prizes for choral singing were awarded to Wimbledon Church Choral Society, Wimbledon Central School (both conducted by Mr. F. Wilment Bates), Clapham Parish Church, and St. James's Girls' Club, Weybridge. —— Festivals were held at BECKENHAM (for the fifth year) on February 27-March 3; MILL HILL (the seventh Eisteddfod) early in March; ENFIELD (the eighth year) on March 6. The junior competitions of the SOUTH-EAST LONDON Festival were decided on February 13. The senior competitions of this Festival occur too late for record in this column, as also do the great LONDON Festival, and the ELIZABETHAN Festival, which must be reserved for next month.

Music in the Provinces

ACOMB.—A Coleridge-Taylor concert was recently given by the Choral Society, under Mr. T. E. Robinson. The principal works were 'Kubla Khan,' 'The Death of Minnehaha,' the 'Petite Suite de Concert,' and the Variations in B minor for violoncello, played by Mr. Douglas Bentley.

ALNWICK.—Stanford's 'Phaudrig Crohoore' and Brahms's 'Song of Destiny' were performed at the Corn Exchange on February 24, with the help of an orchestra that also added Mozart's 'Jupiter' Symphony. Mr. George C. Gray conducted.

BARNSLEY.—The Barnsley St. Cecilia Society, the Sheffield Amateur Musical Society, and the Chesterfield Musical Union joined forces on March 11 for a complete performance of 'Hiawatha,' under the direction of Dr. J. Staton.

BIRMINGHAM AND DISTRICT.—The last concert in the Max Mossel series brought a visit from the French composer, Maurice Ravel, to play some of his own pianoforte music and to accompany Miss Dorothy Silk in his 'Chansons Populaires.' An eager and representative audience gathered in the Town Hall, not a few to see what the famous composer looked like in the flesh, and some to acquire a deeper understanding of his music. Many listeners were a little nonplussed by the elusive, delicate beauty of the pieces he played, but before the evening was over they were won to enthusiasm. The 'Mother Goose' Suite proved especially acceptable. A new violoncellist, Mr. Gerard Hekking, played the Bach Suite in C, and Signor Zino Francescatti showed himself the possessor of a brilliant violin technique, and the ability to play with passionate feeling on occasion. Miss Silk sang some Bach songs in her usual impeccable style.——It was felt by all music-lovers that Madame Gerhardt made a mistake in singing as her first item at a 'celebrity' concert on March 22, a set of Scottish songs arranged by Beethoven. The music is dull, and lacks the direct simplicity of the Scottish folk-song. A group of Schubert and Brahms songs were magnificently given. At the same concert the Léner Quartet played Mozart's B flat Quartet, the Andante cantabile from Tchaikovsky's Op. 11, and part of Schubert's 'Death and the Maiden' Quartet.—— On February 25, the City of Birmingham Choir and the Wolverhampton Musical Society joined forces in a performance of 'The Hymn of Praise.' The '5I.T.' orchestra, conducted by Mr. Joseph Lewis, gave us some uncomfortable moments during the evening, and when the choirs were in full swing its efforts went for little. Miss Carrie Tubb and Mr. Walter Hyde were the soloists. ——The singing of Mr. Charles Hedges in the Evangelist music was the outstanding feature of a performance of Bach's 'St. Matthew' Passion by the Midland Musical Society on February 21. His voice has the right lightness and ease, and when his diction equals his tonal beauty Mr. Hedges's vocal equipment for this part will be complete. Madame Parks Darby, Miss Elsie Napier, Mr. William Bennet, and Mr. Leslie Bennett were the other soloists. Dr. Darby conducted.——Mr. William Murdoch was the soloist at the Symphony concert of the City Orchestra on March 2. In the first movement of Beethoven's Pianoforte Concerto in C minor his playing bordered on the commonplace, but he got better as the work proceeded, and the final movement had a brilliant performance. A Dance Suite by Béla Bartók was the novelty of the evening, and was well played by the orchestra. Its amazingly intricate score and daring harmonic scheme aroused much discussion. Mr. Adrian C. Boult conducted.——The classical Bohemian composers were well represented at a Sunday concert on February 22, when Smetana's 'Vltava' and Dvorák's fourth Symphony figured in the programme. On this occasion the soloist was Mr. Andrew Clayton. He is the possessor of a fine tenor voice, and his singing showed real artistic insight.—— Mr. Joseph Lewis, the deputy-conductor of the City Orchestra, took charge of a performance of Schubert's 'Tragic' Symphony at a subsequent Sunday concert. He handled the score capably, and drew from the players a sound if not an inspired reading of the work. The remainder of the programme, conducted by Mr. Boult, included a Beethoven Scherzo and Ravel's 'Mother Goose' Suite.—— The Sunday concert on March 14 offered a somewhat miscellaneous programme. Miss Joan Willis played Tchaikovsky's Variations on a Rococo Theme for 'cello and orchestra. Always a good artist, Miss Willis's playing has improved technically as well as artistically since she was last heard in the city. Her pianissimo notes had special beauty, and she revealed her capacity for some finely emotional playing. Ravel's Introduction and Allegro for harp, string quartet, flute, and clarinet, and a Scherzo in C minor by Frederick Morrison, were also given. Mr. Sydney Lewis sang some songs by Korbay and a Handel aria extremely well. ——At a Mid-day concert on March 2, Miss Beatrice Hewitt and Mr. Johan Hock gave Beethoven's Sonata in A and the same composer's Sonata in C for 'cello and pianoforte. At another concert in this series the Philharmonic String Quartet played Schubert's 'Death and the Maiden' Quartet. Miss Kathleen Frise-Smith gave a mid-day pianoforte recital on another occasion, when her playing of Busoni's arrangement of Bach's Chromatic Fantasia was a thing to be remembered for its masterly style. The Organ Prelude and Fugue in D were equally good. It was only when she attempted to play Chopin that one could find serious fault with her general musicianship. Her interpretation did less than justice to the Polish composer's Polonaise in A flat.——The last concert in the Catterall series was given on March 10. The programme consisted of three Beethoven works—the Quartet in G, Op. 18, that in C, Op. 59, and the big Quartet in B flat, Op. 130. All these works were beautifully played.

Bognor.—Parry's 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin' and Stanford's 'The Revenge' were given by the Philharmonic Society at the Theatre Royal recently, under the direction of Mr. Norman Demuth, who also contributed a new 'Aubade' to the programme. Mr. Albert Sammons played the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto.

Bournemouth.—Programmes at the Winter Gardens have been maintaining a high level of interest and variety. Prokofiev's first Pianoforte Concerto on February 18 stood for the one and Stanford's 'L'allegro ed il pensieroso' Symphony on March 1 stood for the other. A new Suite by Dr. H. V. Pearce, entitled 'A Summer Night,' was introduced under the composer's direction.

Bradford.—The Bradford Old Choral Society gave its last concert in St. George's Hall on March 10. Mr. Wilfred Knight had chosen a mixed English programme for the occasion, the chief choral works being Elgar's 'The Music-Makers' and Coleridge-Taylor's 'Bon-Bon Suite.' Miss Astra Desmond sang the fine setting of the 150th Psalm by Granville Bantock.——The Bradford Permanent Orchestra took its farewell of the hall on March 13, when Mr. Julius Harrison conducted the 'Eroica' Symphony and Schumann's 'Genoveva' Overture.——A Triennial Festival of chamber music has been proposed, the originator of the idea being Mr. Keith Douglas.

Brighton.—Walford Davies's 'Everyman' was given at the Dome, on February 27, by members of the Brighton and Hove Harmonic Society, under the direction of Mr. Percy Taylor.——Mr. Basil Cameron came from Hastings to conduct a concert at the Dome on March 15, the programme of which included the Overture to Offenbach's 'Orphée aux enfers,' and 'Finlandia.'

Bristol.—The Women Students' Choir at the University gave its first concert on February 27, singing excellently in short choral works by Rootham, Schubert, Holst, and Walford Davies, and in folk-songs. Mr. Robert Percival sang several groups of songs, and Miss Dorothy Godwin played Pierné's Impromptu Caprice for harp solo. Mr. Arthur S. Warrell conducted.

Burton.—The Musical Society engaged the City of Birmingham Orchestra to assist at a concert on March 9, when the chief items were Brahms's 'Song of Destiny,' Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens,' the E flat Symphony of Mozart, and Max Bruch's G minor Violin Concerto, played by Mr. Harold Fairhurst.

Cambridge.—The Musical Society, which is looking forward to its three-hundredth concert, gave an exceptionally good performance of Brahms's 'Requiem' in February, under the direction of Dr. Cyril Rootham. The solo and choral singing were of high quality throughout.——The Philharmonic Society gave 'The Creation' at the Guildhall on March 10, Mr. J. F. Shepherdson conducting.——The Léner Quartet played at the Guildhall on March 11.

Cheltenham.—M. Maurice Ravel came to Cheltenham to take part in the last of the present season of Max Mossel concerts at the Town Hall. He played his 'Sonatine,' 'Le Tombeau de Couperin,' and, with Mr. George Reeves as second pianist, 'Ma Mère l'Oye.' Signor Zino Francescatti played the 'Tzigane' for violin, and three 'Chansons Populaires' were sung by Miss Dorothy Silk.

Chesterfield.—The Musical Union was assisted by Dr. J. F. Staton's other choirs from Barnsley and Sheffield in the performance of 'Hiawatha,' on March 2. There were two hundred and fifty voices in the combined choir.

Clare. — The old-established Choral Society, now eighty strong, recently gave Gade's 'The Erl-King's Daughter' and a selection from Gounod's 'Faust,' under Mr. E. Percy Hallam.

Derby.—At a recent concert of the Co-operative Choral Society creditable performances of 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast' and 'The Death of Minnehaha' were given with the assistance of a small orchestra, Mr. F. J. Stevenson conducting.——Elgar's Quintet was played at a Municipal Concert by the Catterall Quartet and Mr. R. J. Forbes.

Exeter.—The programme of the Chamber Music Club for February 24 included Ireland's Phantasie Trio in A minor and Mendelssohn's Octet.

Guernsey.—The Festival of the Guille-Allès Choral and Orchestral Association was held on February 11 and 12. The works chosen were Brahms's 'Requiem' and Elgar's 'Caractacus,' both of which were excellently performed by a choir and orchestra of over two hundred, under the direction of Mr. John David.

Halifax.—Dr. A. C. Tysoe conducted the Halifax Choral Society in a mixed programme to end the season, the chief items being Cliffe's 'Ode to the North-East Wind' and Balfour Gardiner's 'News from Whydah.' The Leeds Symphony Orchestra played Vaughan Williams's Overture to 'The Wasps.'

Hanley. — The performance of 'The Dream of Gerontius,' given on February 25 by the North Staffs Choral Society, which may be considered to specialise in Elgar, was on a festival scale and at festival standard. The choral singing was beyond praise, the orchestral part was played by the City of Birmingham Orchestra, and the solo parts were sung by Mr. Steuart Wilson Miss Ivy Phillips, and Mr. Horace Stevens. Mr. John James conducted.

Hitchin.—The Choral Society made its first appearance in February, and gave promise of becoming an efficient body, under the guidance of Mr. W. E. Shepherd. The works performed included Stanford's 'The Revenge,' Cornelius's 'Surrender of the Soul,' and other well-chosen part-songs.

Hull.—The Harmonic Society concluded its season on March 5, with a performance of Bach's Mass in B minor, competently sung under the direction of Mr. Walter Porter. ——Mr. Porter's choral piece 'To-night' was part of the Vocal Society's programme a few days later. Dr. Coward conducted a miscellaneous programme, including his own 'The Secret,' and chamber music was interpolated by Messrs. Albert Sammons, Cedric Sharpe, and William Murdoch.

Ipswich.—German's 'Theme and Six Diversions' and the second 'Salomon' Symphony of Haydn were the principal works played by the Orchestral Society on February 16, under Mr. E. R. Wilby.——The Wind Quintet, who are five well-known London wind players, gave works of Holbrooke and others.

Leeds.—A four days' Festival of ancient chamber music was given at the University, on February 23-26, by Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch and his family. As usual all the music — Bach, French, English — was played on the instruments for which it was written.——Byrd's 'Great' Service was introduced to Leeds on March 3, by Dr. Bairstow and the Philharmonic Society. Dr. Bairstow gave a short explanatory lesson, the morning and evening portions were separated in the programme, the choral singing and the solo singing were performed with a proper sense of style, and everything was done to make the work thoroughly appreciated. —— Schumann's 'Rhenish' Symphony was conducted by Mr. Julius Harrison on March 6.

Manchester.—At the last four Hallé concerts under notice the chief interests have been Respighi's 'Pines of Rome' and Strauss's 'Till Eulenspiegel' (February 18); the second Symphony of Sibelius (February 25); Brahms's third Symphony and the 'Beatrice and Benedict' Overture of Berlioz (March 4); and 'The Apostles' (March 11). The solo singers in a sensitive performance of Elgar's oratorio were Miss Dorothy Silk, Miss Muriel Brunskill, Mr. Walter Glynne, Mr. Herbert Heyner, Mr. Dennis Noble, and Mr. Norman Allin. 'Hiawatha' was performed at the Brand Lane concert of February 13. Celebrities occupied that of February 20. At the next, Sir Henry Wood conducted a mixed orchestral, choral, and solo programme. Gerhardt and the Léner Quartet performed on March 13.—— The Catterall Quartet played Eric Fogg's Quartet in A flat on February 17.

Mansfield.—On March 3, under Mr. Frank Jessop, a successful concert was given by the local Choral Society. The programme consisted of Parts 1 and 2 of 'Hiawatha' and short miscellaneous selections.

Melton Mowbray.—The first of Elgar's larger choral works to be heard at Melton Mowbray was 'King Olaf,' performed by the Choral Society, under Dr. Henry Coleman, on February 24.

Newcastle.—The Chamber Music Society brought its season to an end on February 25 with a notable concert at which the London Wind Quintet played Klughardt's Quintet, Mozart's in E flat, and, with Mr. Edgar Bainton, Albert Roussel's Sextet.——Sir Henry Wood conducted Haydn's 'Surprise' Symphony in a good mixed, popular programme on March 3.

Norwich.—One of the first concerts of Stuart Hall, which seats four hundred and makes a useful small alternative to St. Andrew's Hall, was given by the Norwich String Quartet, on February 18. The programme opened with Mozart's Quartet in C.——The fourth concert given at St. Mary's Lecture Hall, by Mr. Cyril Pearce and his small string orchestra, had the following interesting programme: Suite for strings from Purcell's 'King Arthur' music; bass cantata, 'Amore traditore,' by Bach (Mr. T. G. Stringley); Serenade in E, Op. 22, by Dvorák; Suite for string orchestra, by Frank Bridge; Concerto Grosso No. 7, by Handel.——Dvorák's 'Requiem Mass,' a work far less often heard, or heard of, than the 'Stabat Mater,' was performed in the Cathedral, on March 4, by the Philharmonic Society, under Dr. Bates.——A successful recital was given on March 20 by Mrs. H. T. Case (vocalist) and Miss Molly Mack (violin). Mrs. Case was heard in a capital choice of songs by Wolf, Brahms, Strauss, &c.; and Miss Mack gave admirable performances of Sonatas by Franck and Brahms (A major), with an able colleague at the pianoforte in Mr. James Sherrin.

Nottingham.—The annual concert of the William Woolley Choral Society was held with great success on February 18. The chief items in a programme of part-songs and madrigals were Byrd's 'All hail, thou merry month of May' (six-part), 'While the bright sun' (four-part), and 'Lullaby, my sweet little baby' (five-part), Elgar's 'Serenade,' Bantock's 'Music, when soft voices die,' and other works of similar calibre in the second half.—— Macfarren's 'May Day' was performed by the choir of Derby Road Baptist Church on March 11, under the direction of Mr. C. E. Blyton Dobson.

Oxford.—The Rosé Quartet played at the Town Hall on February 25, the programme including Haydn's Quartet in B flat (Op. 76), Beethoven's first 'Rasoumovsky,' and Schumann in A.

Penryn.—The newly-formed Choral Society came out recently with a performance of 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast' that did credit to the conductor (the Rev. C. Daly Atkinson), the fifty singers, and the twenty players.

Plymouth.—With the help of the Royal Marines String Band the Madrigal Society gave an excellent performance of Brahms's 'Requiem' at the Guildhall (which was crowded) on March 3. Dr. Harold Lake was the conductor.

Reading.—A very successful concert was given on February 20 by University College Orchestra and Choral Society, under Mr. W. Probert-Jones. 'Jesu, priceless Treasure' and Vaughan Williams's 'Old King Cole' Ballet Suite were the principal features of the programme.

Richmond (Yorks).—The programme given on February 16 by the Richmondshire Choral Society, an enterprising body directed by Mr. Arthur Fountain, deserves to be quoted in full (the chamber works were played by the Yorkshire String Quartet): Choral Hymns from the 'Rig Veda,' Holst; Quartet in D, Op. 18, No. 3, Beethoven; 'Liebeslieder Waltzer,' Brahms; Quartet in F, Op. 96, Dvorák; 'The Spirit of England,' Elgar; 'Jerusalem,' Parry.

Seaford.—Purcell's 'Dido and Æneas' was given as an opera on March 3 by the Seaford Musical Training Society, conducted by Miss Strudwick. The work of Miss Dorothy Greenhill as stage manager, Miss Mabel Marks as dance mistress, and of the principals, chorus, and orchestra all contributed to a successful performance and the reward of singular local enterprise.

Sheffield.—The chief choral event to record is the concert of the Sheffield Musical Union on March 4, for it was the opening of Dr. Coward's jubilee year as a choral conductor. The four hundred voices of the choir gave him their most loyal support in the singing of a selection from 'The Flying Dutchman' and 'Hiawatha,' and a great reception was given to the popular conductor.——'King Olaf' was performed by the Victoria Hall Choral Society on March 13, under Mr. Arthur Burrows.——Schubert's 'Unfinished' Symphony and Brahms's Violin Concerto (Miss Jelly d'Aranyi), played by the Queen's Hall Orchestra under Sir Henry Wood, and the usual tour-programme of the London Symphony Orchestra under Sir Thomas Beecham, were the principal events of mid-February.——Debussy's 'L'Enfant Prodigue' was given a complete performance at one of the Misses Foxon's concerts. A later programme of the same series included Walford Davies's six Pastorals for four solo voices, string quartet, and pianoforte.

Stoke-on-Trent.—Mr. Ernest C. Redfern conducted the Choral Society in a performance of 'Judas Maccabæus' on March 11.

Truro.—The Cornwall Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Dr. Rivers, played Schubert's C major Symphony and, with Miss Kathleen McQuitty, Rachmaninov's second Pianoforte Concerto, at a recent Monday concert, having played the same programme at Camborne on the Sunday.

Ulverstone.—Singers from Kendal and Barrow and players from the Hallé Orchestra came to join in the performance of 'Elijah,' given by the Ulverstone Choral Society, under Mr. E. Telfer, on March 10. The choral singing was of high quality, and the occasion a great success.

Weston-super-Mare.—The Choral Society, which was formed three years ago as a successor to the old Philharmonic Society, gave a concert recently that was evidence of great enterprise on the part of Mr. Seymour Dossor and his singers and players. The programme, which was modern and all-British, consisted of Walford Davies's 'Everyman,' Holst's 'Two Psalms,' and Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens.'

Winchester. — Dr. Dyson provided an unusually interesting programme for the Music Club on February 24. The choral works were Palestrina's 'Stabat Mater' and a selection of choruses from 'Israel in Egypt.' Mr. Steuart Wilson sang the Aria from Bach's Church Cantata No. 85 and the Romance from Méhul's 'Joseph.'

York.—A Stanford concert was given by the York Musical Society on February 24. Dr. Bairstow conducted the choir and orchestra in masterly performances of the 'Stabat Mater,' 'Phaudrig Crohoore,' and 'Songs of the Fleet,' the last-named sung by Mr. Plunket Greene.—— The Old Priory Choir, conducted by Mr. J. H. Forster, sang Gibbons's 'Dainty, fine bird,' Wilbye's 'Sweet honey-sucking bees,' and a programme of part-songs, on March 10.

THE ÆSTHETIC VALUE OF THE ENGLISH MADRIGAL

At its meeting on February 2 the Musical Association broke new ground, for in co-operation with the Anglo-Belgian Union, it had arranged with M. Charles van den Borren, of Brussels, to deliver a lecture in French on 'The Æsthetic Value of the English Madrigal.' It is satisfactory to record that a large audience assembled to greet the distinguished visitor, who had travelled especially from Belgium, and that the room was crowded to capacity. The chair was occupied by the Rev. Dr. Edmund H. Fellowes.

M. van den Borren said that his first contact with the music of the Elizabethan period was accomplished not by the madrigal, but by virginal music, and in this connection he mentioned with appreciation the labours of Mr. J. A. Fuller-Maitland and Mr. W. Barclay Squire in their edition of the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book. To go through the pages of that collection was like exploring an unknown country. True there were arid tracts sometimes, but these did not take long to cross, and the oasis was always close at hand. There was in all this art an atmosphere of youth and of springtime. It was the work of pioneers who advanced with boldness to the conquest of new lands, and leaped over obstacles with the impetuosity of young colts, in their realisation of free and joyous life. What they loved above all was the dance and the popular song, which in their hands was decorated, coloured, and surrounded with a thousand devices. It was the art of adolescents, full of awkwardnesses and of absurdities; it was wild, undisciplined, but in it all there was a revolutionary, instinctive impulsiveness which overturned tradition.

Passing to polyphonic vocal music, the lecturer said that in the time of Elizabeth this was no new thing, and towards the end of the 16th century there existed in this country a well-established secular tradition of contrapuntal vocal music. Doubtless this tradition had experienced vicissitudes and anomalies with which one did not meet to the same extent in any other country. But if it seemed that the tradition had been broken by a kind of ill-explained lethargy during nearly the whole of the latter half of the 15th century, it was not less true that the whole of the 16th century was dominated in England by a school of polyphonists comparable in every way to the schools of the Netherlands and other Continental centres. In consequence of the dispersal of the great Netherlands disciples, and thanks also to the invention of music printing, polyphonic technique had become by this time a vast international reservoir, from which all the nations of Western and Central Europe came to draw.

After a brief critical analysis of the nature of the English sacred music of the period, M. van den Borren turned to the madrigal, which musically was a tentative liberation from certain literary forms which reduced the rôle of music to a strict minimum. Psychologically it was an effort to make polyphonic music serve subjective ends hitherto not apprehended. Of course, the inventors of the madrigal never dreamed for a moment of expressing their intentions in that way, but for us who could enjoy a bird's-eye view of the period, the evolution of the madrigal could be followed in the light of such a definition. The early efforts of the madrigalists after expression, often wore an almost puerile appearance. They invented a musical vocabulary which had its source in the word or in the visual image which it evoked rather, than in the sentiment which the text expressed. When this spoke of heaven, the voice ascended, when of the earth, it descended. The idea of distance occasioned wide intervals. Such expressions as 'laughter,' 'gaiety,' were interpreted by rapid and somewhat conventional passages. Words like 'hard,' 'martyrdom,' 'bitter,' 'harsh,' 'dead,' &c., led to dissonances in the harmony. But the ultimate progress of the madrigal showed clearly that the rhetoric was not, at bottom, so childish as might seem at first sight, and that it had in fact a mysterious correspondence between it and psychological reality. The difficulty lay solely in the mode of adapting a new vocabulary to an ancient technique, set in an expressive sense, which was quite different. This difficulty had been definitely overcome by the madrigalists of the period of 1560-90.

At the time when the madrigal began to obtain a foothold in England, it had reached its culminating point in Italy. The genre, become very fashionable, had crossed the sea and had been well received by English dilettanti. What characterized, before all, the English madrigal was that, despite its Italian derivation, it became in its beginning, and never ceased to be to the end of its career, a purely insular genus, in consequence of the unconditional adoption of the English tongue as the vehicle of the musical thought. What really constituted the great originality of the madrigalists of England was that, having received faithfully the heritage of the Italian madrigal and adopted the greater part of its technical properties, they had, through the medium of their own tongue, breathed into those ready-made formulas the poetic genius of their race, and created in that way works which left the impression of freshness, spontaneity, and novelty.

In comparing the work of the English madrigalists with that of the virginalists, one was struck by the many points in common. Nevertheless there was a fundamental difference between them; that of the virginalists was a beginning, while that of the madrigalists was an end. The virginalists had to invent everything: the madrigalists had only to avail themselves of what already existed. Their rôle was the adaptation of new elements to a technique which had already come to its full maturity. Taken as a whole the English madrigalists played in their country a rôle analogous to that of Marenzio and Monteverde in Italy. They triumphantly closed the madrigal era by carrying the genus to its farthest degree of formal and expressive perfection. But they had one advantage over their Italian rivals, which sprang from the fact that they lived and worked at a period in which the poetic spirit of England attained its culmination. Those musicians really lived in the higher spheres of the art, and it was, in great part, that which gave to the least amongst them that skilful refinement and that supreme distinction by which their work was characterized.

The lecturer went on to refer to the services of Dr. Fellowes in publishing so many English madrigals, by which we were enabled to study them. M. van den Borren analysed the works of the principal composers, concluding with descriptions, given in English, of the illustrations to the paper. These were sung by members of the Morley College Choir, conducted by Miss Jane M. Joseph, and included 'Lullaby' (Byrd), 'O care' and 'Hence, care' (Weelkes), 'All pleasure' (Wilbye), 'Dainty, fine bird' (Gibbons), and 'Come, shepherds' (Tomkins).

Dr. Fellowes, in a brief but happy speech, voiced the appreciation of the meeting to M. van den Borren and the choir, the vote of thanks being seconded by Mr. W. W. Cobbett, who spoke in French.

Music in Wales

Aberystwyth.—On February 18, at the hundred and ninety-fifth concert, held in University Hall, the programme contained two Beethoven Trios—in B minor, Op. 9, No. 3, the first movement from that in B flat, and Brahms's Pianoforte Quartet in G minor.——On March 4, Dr. Vaughan Thomas lectured to the students on 'Schubert as a Song-Writer.' At the evening concert, in University Hall, the College Quartet was heard in Schubert's String Quartet in C.——On March 11, the College Choral Society sang four movements from Brahms's 'Requiem,' and the College Orchestra played the first movement from Beethoven's Symphony No. 2. Miss Sybil Eaton gave a much appreciated performance of Beethoven's Violin Concerto. Dr. David de Lloyd conducted throughout.

Bangor.—College concert programmes have recently included songs and a Violin Sonata by Madame Marthe Servine, a North Wales resident; the Pianoforte Quartet of Herbert Howells; and chamber music, including Boughton's 'Celtic Prelude,' for an audience of children. ——At the Musical Club's sixth concert Miss Isolde Menges and Mr. Howard-Jones played Elgar's Violin Sonata.——On March 6 Mrs. Gough's Orchestra, conducted by Ceridwen Lloyd, played Haydn's 'Oxford' Symphony and Corelli's Concerto for two solo violins, solo 'cello, and string orchestra, at St. Mary's College.

Caerleon.—'The Inchcape Rock,' a setting for baritone solo and male chorus, by W. M. Lewis, was given its first performance under his direction by students of the Monmouthshire Training College on March 11. Schumann's 'The Luck of Edenhall' was also in the programme.

Cardiff.—The second of a series of lectures inaugurated by the Cardiff Male-Voice Choir was given on February 26, by Dr. Hopkin Evans, at the Y.M.C.A. Hall. Dr. Evans spoke on 'The Choral Art,' and employed many illustrations.——On February 27, at Cory Hall, the Blue Ribbon Choir, under the direction of Mr. Jenkyn Morris, gave a performance of 'The Hymn of Praise' and 'The Death of Minnehaha' assisted by an orchestra.——On March 5 a concert was given by a massed choir of school children, directed by Miss Lumley, in celebration of St. David's Day.——At University College, on February 27, the Treharris Orchestra, under the conductorship of Mr. Oliver Eynon, played among other items Haydn's 'Surprise' Symphony, and 'Finlandia.'——At Park Hall, on March 14, the first performance in Wales was given of the Ninth Symphony. The performers were Mr. Herbert Ware's orchestra and the Cardiff Musical Society, assisted by the Misses May Blyth and Enid Cruickshank, Messrs. Parry Jones and William Michael (vocalists), and Mr. Ploteny Worth (violin). Mr. W. H. Reed was leader of the orchestra.

Llansamlet.—A performance of 'Judas Maccabæus' was given on February 22 at the Parish Hall. Mr. W. Bodycomb conducted, and Miss Jones presided at the organ.

Neath.—The Maria Street Congregational Church Choir, on March 3, gave a performance of Devant's 'David and Jonathan,' under the direction of Mr. Gilbert Harris, assisted by the local orchestra. Mr. D. J. Davies accompanied.

Newbridge (Mon.).—A performance of 'The Creation' was given on February 28, in the Workmen's Hall, by the Newbridge and District Choral Society, conducted by Mr. Archelaus Jones.

Newport.—Under Mr. Brinley Williams the Newport Musical Society gave a successful concert during the visit of the British Empire Exhibition at the Pavilion on March 3. The choir of eighty sang 'The Lady Oriana' and a selection of part-songs.

Rhos (North Wales). — A full orchestra, largely professional, took part in the performance of 'The Creation,' given on February 24 by the Rhos United Choral Society, a body of two hundred and fifty voices, under the direction of Dr. Caradog Roberts.

Swansea. — The Swansea Chamber Music Society arranged an interesting programme of purely Welsh vocal and instrumental works of Welsh composers, at Llemellyn Hall, on February 23. The works played were nearly all in manuscript, and therefore were quite new to the audience. As a first concert of the kind the event was a distinct success. The programme included examples by Walford Davies, Hubert Davies, Hebr Evans, Leigh Henry, F. Humphries, Purcell Jones, Fawe Jones, D. J. de Lloyd, Claudia Lloyd, Vaughan Thomas, Afon Thomas, and Gwyn Williams. The principals were: Mr. Hubert Davies and Miss Gladys Hayes (violins); Mrs. Russel Earl (viola); Mr. Purcell Jones ('cello); Mr. John Cockerill (harp); Miss Claudia Lloyd (pianoforte); Misses Megan Lloyd and Leonora Weeple, and Mr. David Brazell (vocalists).

Music in Ireland

Belfast.—On February 19, the thirty-seventh annual concert in connection with the Railway Benevolent Institution was held in Ulster Hall, and was an unqualified success. The principals were Madame Clara Serena, Miss Dora Labbette, Mr. George Baker, and Mr. Morgan Kingston (vocalists), Miss Margaret Fairless (violin), with Mr. Frank Mummery (pianoforte)—all of whom gave of their best.——Dame Melba, who had been staying for two days at Government House, Hillsborough, gave her farewell concert in Ulster Hall on February 2, and had a vociferous reception from an overflowing audience. The programme was practically a repetition of that at Dublin, and it only remains to add that the diva's 'Home, sweet home' will long be remembered.——At a meeting of the Ulster Society of Professional Musicians, at Belfast, on February 18, under the presidency of Capt. Brennan, two interesting papers, one by Dr. Norman Hay on 'The New Music,' and the second by Dr. Fitzsimons, on 'A Survey of Contemporary Music,' were read.——Madame Gerhardt and the Léner Quartet attracted a large audience at Ulster Hall on March 1. The Belfast critics found fault with Madame Gerhardt for 'vigorously shaking her head and shoulders, which does not enhance dramatic effect or passionate declamation,' but paid tribute to her fine voice; and they agreed that the Léner Quartet was delightful. ——The Bangor Operatic Society gave two admirable performances, on March 1 and 2, in Dufferin Hall, of 'A Country Girl,' under the direction of Mr. E. H. Emery. On the second night there was a change in the cast.——Strauss's 'Riquetto,' a musical comedy, at the Grand Opera House, during the week March 1-6, drew large houses.

DERRY.—The Derry Philharmonic Society's second subscription concert, in the Guildhall, on March 5, attracted a crowded audience, the programme including Stanford's 'Phaudrig Crohoore' and selections from Haydn's 'Seasons.'

DUBLIN.—The R.D.S. chamber music recitals were given in the Members' Hall on February 15 (the Catterall Quartet), on February 22 (Esposito, Bridge, and Twelvetrees), and on March 1 (Sir Hamilton Harty's Chamber Music Orchestra—two brilliant performances, including Esposito's 'Neapolitan' Suite), attended by 4,536 persons, a record in the hall.——Dame Melba's farewell concert at the Theatre Royal, on February 20, was a huge success. Dubliners invariably give old friends a good send-off, and Melba's 'farewell' was no exception. Mr. Lionel Tertis, Mr. Hackett-Granville, and Mr. Harold Craxton lent valuable aid in a diversified programme.——Dr. W. H. Gater presided at a meeting of the Leinster Society of Organists and Choirmasters, on February 22, when Dr. H. G. Smith read a paper on 'The German School of Organ Music.'——The musical comedy, 'Riquetto' had six performances at Dublin during the week February 22-27, prior to its production in London, and was very well received.——The O'Mara Opera Company occupied the boards of the Gaiety Theatre for a short season commencing on March 1, opening with 'Tannhäuser' and closing the first week with the perennial 'Bohemian Girl,' under the baton of Messrs. Walter Meyrowitz and R. Gasnier. During the second week 'Lohengrin' (Mr. O'Mara's farewell appearance in opera), 'Rigoletto,' 'Maritana,' 'Faust,' 'Carmen,' and 'The Jewels of the Madonna,' received adequate treatment.——Dublin University Choral Society, under Dr. Hewson, gave a fine performance of Beethoven's Mass in C, on March 5.——The Army School of Music No. 1 Band gave a sacred concert at the Theatre Royal, on March 14, under the conductorship of Col. Fritz Brase, with Mr. P. Duffy as vocalist.——Much interest centred in the visit of the Cambridge University Singers, under Dr. A. H. Mann, who gave an interesting concert in the Examination Hall of Trinity College, on March 16. Included in the programme was an item specially composed for this visit by Dr. Charles Wood, and the works of John Dowland, of Dublin, the great Irish Elizabethan, were also drawn on. In addition, instrumental selections were given, including Brahms's String Quartet in C minor. For a man of seventy-six, Dr. Mann displayed wonderful vigour; he is now in his fiftieth year as director of the choir of King's College, Cambridge, and has many old friends in Ireland.

[We regret that our Scottish correspondent is unable to send Notes this month.—EDITOR.]

Musical Notes from Abroad

GERMANY

ALBAN BERG'S 'WOZZECK' AT THE BERLIN STAATSOPER

I have not so far had an opportunity to refer to a musical event which took place late in 1925 (December 14), and which has since aroused the greatest curiosity—viz., the first performance of 'Wozzeck,' by Alban Berg. I do not remember any new opera in the last decade so interesting from all points of view as this example by the Viennese composer. Happily, and unlike the greater part of modern operas, it has not disappeared soon after its première, and sustains a modest but ingenuous life in the repertory.

Alban Berg needs no introduction to readers of the Musical Times. He is known as one of the most ascetic of the younger composers of to-day, a distinction that he inherits as a pupil of the great ascetic, Arnold Schönberg. The Pianoforte Sonata and String Quartet that had been best known among this composer's output, would have led none to expect from him so passionate a score as 'Wozzeck.' All the force and energy spared in his former creative work appear to have been gathered into it. It is as though his imagination had found a powerful impulse in the drama of Georg Büchner, a revolutionary expressionist of the first half of the 19th century. This piece had been performed with great success at Berlin, and had then passed to a Vienna theatre, where Alban Berg was greatly excited by it. Büchner, an eloquent advocate of the human type impersonated in the figure of the soldier Wozzeck, has in some respect forecast the spiritual development of Germany after the war. Alban Berg had commenced his opera before the war, and it was finished under the greatest difficulties. The fact that the Berlin Staatsoper accepted it for performance is evidence of great courage on the part of the directorate, and was principally due to the enterprising spirit of Erich Kleiber.

Considering the musical part of the opera (although the work hardly deserves this designation), we find the score to present only the idea of pure music. The old forms, such as prelude, fugue, passacaglia, &c., have been filled with new substance. But this strictly musical architecture nowhere hinders the truest expression of what 'Wozzeck' means and says in its series of fifteen scenes. The last offspring of 'Tristan,' this score is nevertheless highly individual. Richard Strauss's naturalism and Debussy's impressionism have found striking unification in this work, and nature is made to speak a passionate language. Of course, so many virtues can but contain a weak point, and that of this opera is found to lie in its tendency to follow too logically the principles of Arnold Schönberg in treating the human voice, which leave nothing to the singer, however exacting they may be with regard to the expressive side of a single part. The consistency of the composer, who never makes sacrifices to the taste of the public, is astonishing. So far as the stylistic side is concerned, 'Wozzeck' may be considered as the most striking musical event in the history of opera since 'Pelléas et Mélisande.' The enormous difficulties of the score as well as of dramatic expression were overcome in unexpected fashion.

ALOIS HABA'S QUARTER-TONE CONCERT

Much has been said about the quarter-tone experiments undertaken by Alois Haba, the Czecho-Slovakian theorist and composer. But it was very important for him to show before a Berlin audience the results of his efforts. When the quarter-tone pianoforte built by August Förster, at Löbau, was exhibited in the Berlin Singakademie, the hall was crowded—musicians and non-musicians, enthusiastic music-lovers, and sceptical listeners, being attracted by the novelty. I doubt whether their curiosity was fully gratified. None of the items—played in masterly fashion by Erwin Schulhoff on this instrument of three keyboards—proved the necessity for the quarter-tone scheme, save one, a Fantasia by Haba himself. This at least proved that some new shades of dynamism may be produced by the use of quarter-tones. On the whole, it became evident that a further enlargement of tone material is not the first condition for a new and better art. While fully appreciating the analytical and technical skill alike of Alois Haba and of the firm which evolves his constructional devices, we yet hold fast to the idea that composers should address themselves principally to the enrichment of the essence of music.

A NEW MASS

Nothing is more consoling for the future of music than the fact that young composers, turning aside from experiments in instrumental music, are writing vocal scores—for the audaciousness of the modernist cannot but be hampered by the natural limitations of the human voice. Kurt Thomas, a young musician born at Leipsic, has written a Mass which, as an Opus 1, deserves the highest praise. Thomas has thoroughly studied modern music, and since this Opus 1 has written some purely instrumental works, but he never forgets that the voice remains the basis of music. His Mass, performed for the first time at Berlin by the Dome Choir, under Prof. Hugo Rüdel, on February 23, is remarkable for some extraordinarily skilful vocal part-writing as well as for the complete freedom with which he handles his material. As is natural in the work of a beginner, not all the parts are of equal value, but there is no doubt that, far from being exclusively absorbed in technical work, Thomas here gives expression to some intimate thoughts. We may expect more and greater things from him.

RICHARD STRAUSS FESTIVAL

After a long interval, Richard Strauss again appeared at the desk of the Berlin Staatsoper. His conducting of 'Salome,' 'Intermezzo,' 'Rosenkavalier,' and 'The Frau ohne Schatten,' afforded a welcome opportunity for comparing his work with that of the younger composers. First of all, the manner in which he directed his own operas did not fail to excite the audience. Here we beheld a creative spirit gradually becoming familiar with ideas whose genesis he had willed, but which now lay behind him. In him, the conductor as a creator surpassed all the non-creative conductors whom we had seen and heard in the meantime. The orchestral performance moulded itself to the humour of the composer, and grew in excellence as Strauss came to feel the warmth and appreciation of his greeting. All this, however, cannot overshadow the fact that his later works display merely a masterly routine, and only occasionally have something important to say to us.

NEW MUSIC IN DIFFERENT PLACES

The German section of the International Society for Contemporary Music has for the active concert propaganda a local sub-section at Berlin, giving concerts at the magazin of Messrs. Steinway. The room is small, and the number of visitors consequently not very great; neither is the music performed always interesting. A Violin Sonata by Karol Rathaus, however, may be mentioned on behalf of the serious and successful way in which the problem of form has been attacked by the composer. In its outlines the old scheme has been preserved, but the texture has been enlarged and refined.

Orchestral and chamber music novelties are just now very numerous in public concert programmes. It is clear that Paul Hindemith begins to be infectious. A Violin Concerto played by Alma Moodie under the baton of Heinz Unger, on February 18, may be in some parts interesting, but does not reveal any new aspect of the composer. Much better, though rather weak from the standpoint of invention, are Hindemith's Serenatas, a romantic song-cycle with the accompaniment of viola, 'cello, and oboe. Of course this is, or pretends to be, a new kind of romanticism. The atmosphere in which the composition moves is that of a rather delicate melancholy. The November-Group continues to be very active in performing new German and foreign chamber music works.

Adolf Weissmann.

HOLLAND

The presence of Igor Stravinsky at Amsterdam and the large number of performances of his works during the time he has been here have for a week or so made the musical life of the commercial capital of Holland a kind for one-man festival, though opportunities have been given for comparing his music with that of his contemporaries and predecessors. Two performances of 'L'Histoire d'un Soldat,' under the sympathetic direction of Paul F. Sanders, have been given by the art-circle Kosmos in the Theatre Royal, and attracted almost as much attention for their histrionic effects as for those of the music. These performances and those by the Concertgebouw Orchestra of 'L'Oiseau de Feu,' the Pianoforte Concerto, with the composer as soloist, and 'Le Sacre de Printemps,' with several chamber music concerts, have aroused the very greatest enthusiasm, and Stravinsky personally has been one of the most popular figures here for a long time. His methods and ideas have won nothing but praise from both critics and public, and the former have contributed long articles as well as the usual concert notices. The only numbers which have received serious adverse criticism have been the 'Pièces enfantines,' which are generally regarded as clever but of no musical significance. Stravinsky himself also seems to have been pleased, and has written to the Dutch press a letter in which he expresses great satisfaction at being able to work with such an extraordinarily perfect ensemble as Mengelberg and his orchestra. After Stravinsky came Respighi, whose less strenuous but more colourful efforts have given rise to many interesting comparisons. Somewhat curiously, the work of the Italian seems to have created greater difficulties of understanding than did Stravinsky's. Respighi's Pianoforte Concerto, also with the composer as soloist, and the 'Concerto Gregoriana,' for violin, are admittedly works which a single hearing scarcely allows of any real appreciation, but these and others are described as being of too little universal interest. Nevertheless they were well received, and still more so were the 'Antiche Danze ed arie,' the 'Fontana di Roma,' and the 'Pini di Roma,' the last of which was conducted by Respighi himself. Other works which the Concertgebouw Orchestra has played recently have been Charles Martin Loeffler's 'A Pagan Poem,' which had a mixed reception, many people finding it dry and tiresome, and others a study in modernism they were unable to understand; Cherubini's 'Anacreon' Overture; Bruckner's second Symphony; and some light Berlioz. One of the most interesting concerts in the scheme of the Residentie Orchestra, under van Anrooy, was that in which Mozart's Pianoforte Concerto, in C minor, and the Nachtmusik, in G, were contrasted with de Falla's 'Nights in the Gardens of Spain' and the Introduction to Act 3 of 'Tristan,' the last of which gave an opportunity for hearing the fine cor anglais playing of Stotyn. The pianoforte soloist was Willem Andriessen, one of the best in Holland, and particularly happy in these lighter and more delicate kinds of music.

With a flood of chamber music performances, only a few of the most striking may be pointed out. One of these is that of the Concertgebouw Sextet, comprising pianoforte, flute, oboe, clarinet, horn, and bassoón. A very promising work for this combination was that by Silberman, a young Dutchman, who possesses qualities not often found in the young men of to-day—i.e., fancy, a real knowledge of the characteristics of his instruments and their capacity for blending, a sense of tone-colour and form, and a knowledge of when he has said enough. When, in the 'Burleske,' he tries to be light he is less successful than when he allows his somewhat melancholy nature to express itself. The same programme included Paul Hindemith's 'Kammermusik No. 3,' for eleven instruments, and Poulenc's 'Rapsodie Negre.' The 'dadaistic' music and words of this last failed to make any good impression. Wolf-Ferrari's 'Kammersymphonie' also suggested that the composer was less happy in this than in his work for the stage. Hindemith's early Violin Sonata, Op. 11, No. 2, played by the American, Cyril Towbin, at his recital, served the purpose of showing the development in style and power of the German composer, though in itself it is a pleasant work suggestive of Brahms. The Music Society String Quartet performed here for the first time before large audiences, and evidently pleased all hearers. These players have certainly improved in matters of vigour and unity since I heard them a couple of years or so ago, and although they are still some distance from their objective of being one of the great quartets of to-day, they are decidedly in the right direction. Two Fantasies for four strings, by Purcell, created very great interest, and delighted and surprised many by their 'modern' feeling. Vaughan Williams's Quartet in G minor was a subject of more criticism, and the search for influences resulted in those of Debussy and Tchaikovsky being discovered by several critics. The Old English dance character of the Finale missed all of them, probably because their knowledge of old (or new) English music is less than that of the moderns. The Dresden String Quartet was content with familiar works, but played these with a fine sense of their character. Of new Dutch works played during the last few weeks, there are to be mentioned two very short Sonatinas, of a somewhat experimental character, though not without real musical interest, by Willem Pijper, and a second Sonata by Sigtenhorst Meyer, which is one of his strongest and most personal works. The middle movement of this is particularly rich in its melodic and harmonic character. The Italian Opera brought a very successful season to a close with a performance of 'snippets' from some of the most popular works in the repertory, and 'Co-Opera-tie,' after a visit to Paris, is doing better than ever. As a return compliment the Parisians are sending the Grand Opéra Ballet to The Hague—this being, it is stated, the first time that the Ballet will appear outside France. The date is fixed for the third week in April, and the programme will include the 'Sylvia' and 'Coppelia' ballets of Délibes; 'La Péri,' of Paul Dukas; 'Les Abeilles,' of Stravinsky; 'Castor and Pollux,' of Rameau; and the ballet from Gounod's 'Faust.'

Herbert Antcliffe.

TORONTO

Two great pianists and two very great tenors have been with us since my last notes were penned—Paderewski, Friedman, Roland Hayes, and John Coates. As the ex-Premier of Poland chose an all-Chopin programme, and many hundreds failed to gain admission, all that has previously been written concerning the magnetism of Paderewski's art may be repeated—mentally. He came, and the hall rose to welcome him. He played, and the audience yelled. Somehow one feels it is more the world-war statesman and the man than the actual musician who now attracts. Yet what a stupendous vitality!

There followed Friedman, the 'master-technician,' the 'mechanically stupendous,' as he has been called, one of the most vital executants before the public eye, yet a pianist who somehow fails to draw the greater interest. It may be that his very super-brilliance in actual performance has deadened the spirit of the man and the interpreter. Somehow the art does not speak. Friedman's finest moments were realised in the Chopin B minor Sonata and the Schumann Fantasia.

Last year I drew special attention to the unusual perfection of the work of Roland Hayes, the negro tenor. This city has, at last, realised that Hayes is one of the greatest living lyric tenors, and has taken him to her heart. Certainly no vocal artist has ever gripped an audience here with so little appeal to sentiment and the dramatic instinct, and so great a demand upon the deeper sense of pure beauty and almost spiritual sincerity. Hayes is fortunate in possessing a perfect tonal quality and an irresistible personality.

Delightful, indeed, it was to welcome with a good audience John Coates, who showed us not only how English songs can be sung, but also what a wealth of almost unknown melody there is in our own land. And yet our vocalists sing the trash which they say the public demands! Coates, in fifteen minutes, won the whole audience to a type of song almost foreign to this operatic-aria-soaked community, and proved that personality, plus artistry, can touch the heart and the mind of even average obstinacy. Coates gave us what it is seldom possible to find here—cultured, soundly-trained artistry of the most sincere variety. Never will his interpretation of Thomson's 'The Knight of Bethlehem' be forgotten, nor his performance of Schubert's 'Erlkönig,' with such astounding work from his accompanist, Gerald Moore, whom we are proud to claim as our own.

A capacity audience turned out to hear Paul Wells play the Liszt 'Hungarian Fantaisie' for pianoforte and orchestra, at the forty-fourth Twilight concert of the New Symphony Orchestra. Orchestral offerings were the 'Lohengrin' Prelude and the last two movements of Tchaikovsky's fourth Symphony. The members of our own Hart House Quartet returned from one of their New York recitals to present three well-contrasted works to a powerful following—Brahms's C minor, Op. 51, No. 1; Haydn's G major; and Dvorák's F major, Op. 96, No. 5.

The National Chorus, under Dr. Albert Ham, recently gave further proof of an unusually high standard of choral efficiency, especially as regards tone, attack, intonation, and balance, at the annual concert, with Alberto Salvi (harp) assisting. Dr. Ham has taken infinite pains in training his choir for smaller choral works and part-songs, with the result that his programmes are quite unique in the season's activities. No other choral body at Toronto concentrates solely upon this type of work. Such numbers as Holst's beautiful 'Lullay, my liking,' were handled most effectively.

The Women's Musical Club is to be congratulated upon introducing the harpsichord to this city, in the form of a recital upon that instrument, and also upon the pianoforte, given recently by Wanda Landowska. Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart, and the French 17th-century composers were represented in the exceedingly interesting programme.

Although snow is still here, the fact that spring is whispering to us is brought home by the crowding of concerts towards the pinnacle of the season. Mischa Elman drew his customary thousands, and, as usual, pleased those who looked only for imposing tone and technique. Sophie Braslau, one of the few contraltos on this side with a soul and the mind of a musician, gave us one of her faultless programmes, and Edward Johnson, Canada's one great tenor, appeared with a young New England soprano, Joan Ruth (also of the Metropolitan Opera), in costume excerpts from operas of Puccini, Verdi, and Gounod.

Other news concerns the efforts of our own artists, except one item—a brilliant organ recital by Edwin H. Lemare. Two concerts have come from the New Symphony Orchestra, under Luigi von Kunits, two talented pianists taking part—Evlyn Howard-Jones, who made his début here with the Beethoven 'Emperor' Concerto, and a young Pole, Mieczyslaw Munz, who adequately expressed as much music as he could find in Liszt's Concerto No. 2. The orchestra enjoyed a variety of experiences in Berlioz's 'Carnaval Romain,' 'L'Après-midi d'un Faun,' the 'Egmont' Overture, and a beautiful, sensitive romance, 'The Temple of the Goddess,' by F. H. de Massi-Hardman. In a recital, Mr. Howard-Jones's dignified musicianship found expression in works by Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, Chopin, Debussy, Delius, and Ireland.

For chamber music we now rely solely upon our own Hart House Quartet, whose last concert afforded a feast of modern works both interesting and fascinating. The Goossens Fantasy and the Macmillan Quartets were familiar, but the Ernest Bloch 'Paysages' was a novelty we should like to hear again—for its distinctiveness if for nothing else.

Thomas J. Crawford has taken hold of the Eaton Choral Society this year (Eaton's at Toronto corresponds to Harrod's in London), and in a comparatively short time has drilled it into sound enough shape to produce 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast,' 'The Little Sandman' (Brahms), 'Pan's Holiday' (Bridge), 'A Border Ballad' (Maunder), 'Moonlight' (Faning), and 'The Banner of St. George' (Elgar). The soloists were Maria Kurenko, a famous Russian coloratura, and Allen McQuhae.

An outstanding addition to the Hambourg Conservatory staff has been made in Edouardo Ferrari-Fontana, a renowned operatic tenor from La Scala, who gave an introductory recital a few days ago. He was supported by Boris Hambourg ('cello) and Clement Hambourg (pianoforte), two artists who were also heard this month with Harry Adaskin (violin) and Reginald Stewart (pianoforte), in the first two Hambourg Concert Society programmes.

Other recitals are recorded by Geza de Kresz (violin) (works by Bach, Saint-Saëns, Trapp, and Ysaye); the William Hardiman String Quartet; Florence Singer (pianoforte); Elizabeth Campbell (vocalist); and Elsie Charlton (vocalist). It may be of interest to some readers to learn that the programme given by the London String Quartet from Station WEAF, New York City, on the Atwater-Kent Radio Hour, was received at Toronto (viâ Buffalo or Cleveland) as perfectly as could be wished, due allowance being made for local interference.

Two organ recitals at Montreal, by H. Matthias Turton, the newly-appointed organist of Erskine Church at that city, included characteristic works by Bonnet, Bossi, Couperin, César Cui, Handel, Basil Harwood, Hofmann, Hollins, Hoyle, Jongen, Piatti, Purcell, Max Reger, and Russell. H. C. F.

VIENNA

BALLET AT THE REDOUTENSAAL THEATRE

One of the unsolved problems of the Staatsoper is that of the ballet. It is true that Heinrich Kröller, whom Richard Strauss brought to Vienna to produce his 'Legend of Joseph,' has done away with some of the most obsolete features of what was formerly known as the Viennese Ballet School, and the choregraphic feats of the Staatsoper's corps de ballet are, at least, no longer confined to tiptoe dancing and pirouettes. A few reforms have found entrance, but the Staatsoper's ballet work is still far removed from the modern ideas on dancing taught by Laban and Mary Wigman, and widely spread in the German Opera Houses even of smaller size and means. One of the chief ailments of the Staatsoper's ballet performances lies in the fact that Richard Strauss, during his directorship, relegated them to the Redoutensaal Theatre, the beautiful historical hall situated in the ex-Imperial castle — a gorgeous environment but, through its 'stylized' stage and primitive scenic possibilities, little suited for productions on a larger scale. Director Franz Schalk is now transferring the ballet productions back to where they belong — the big and excellently-equipped stage of the Staatsoper. The latest, and last, attempt to stage ballets at the Redoutensaal was the production of Heinrich Kröller's 'Tanzbilder,' an evening consisting of four ballets. Bizet's 'L'Arlésienne' Suite (interspersed with fragments from the 'Carmen' ballet) was conceived in the nature of a 'divertissement,' and the 'Wedding of the Doves,' from Braunfels's opera 'The Birds,' a ballet exhibition in old style. It is unfortunate that Kröller bestows time and work upon such insipid products, rather than coping with modern and interesting ballets and pantomimes, such as, e.g., those of Bartók or Milhaud. His attempt to invest 'absolute' music such as Milhaud's 'Saudades de Brazil' with a sort of symbolical plot remained as unsuccessful as the still more dangerous undertaking to adapt Moussorgsky's 'Pictures from an Exhibition' (impressionistic programme music in itself, and purely pianistic in character) to an allegorical plot, in a doubtful orchestral setting. The talented dancers of the Staatsoper, of whom Tilli Losch, Hedy Pfundmeyer, Willi Fränzel, and Toni Birkmeyer are the most gifted and best trained, would warrant a better vehicle.

ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS

An orchestra notable both for size and perfection, assembled under Felix Weingartner's baton for what was frankly announced as a 'monster concert.' The big body, formed of the Philharmonic Orchestra and Symphony Orchestra, boasted a hundred and seventy-five members, among them a hundred and eight string players, including thirty-two first violins, and sixteen basses. The acoustic result was overwhelming, and Weingartner drew tremendous effects from his men in his own symphonic poem, 'Das Gefilde der Seligen,' and in the 'Tannhäuser' Overture, with its threefold repetition and attendant threefold climaxes of the 'Venus Song.' Still, the discriminate hearer will prefer subtler work to such mass effects, and delight far more in a performance such as the Philharmonic Orchestra, also under Weingartner's direction, gave of a 'Suite for Seventeen Wind Instruments,' by Franz Moser. This composer is a deserving member of the Philharmonic. He builds solidly upon tradition, rather than working as an experimenting modernist. The Suite is partly archaic, partly romantic, and partly operatic, but at all times a brilliant task for the fine wind section of the Philharmonic Orchestra. Also for seventeen solo instruments were three orchestral songs by another Philharmonic member (and also a double-bass player), Wilhelm Jerger. He is far younger than Moser, and more enterprising, and his songs are both very singable and finished in form.

The Workers' Symphony Concerts, which constitute so important a factor in the musical life of the city, brought Alexander von Zemlinsky (a Viennese, and now operatic director at Prague) back to his native city for what was not chronologically but in quality the first Viennese performance of Mahler's posthumous tenth Symphony. Zemlinsky—who has re-scored Ernst Krenek's first version of this fragmentary work—knows, probably better than any other conductor, how to carry concision into the seeming formlessness of Mahler's Symphonies, and in this particular piece to establish inner connections between the apparently detached portions. His performance of this work—Mahler's 'Parsifal,' in its mood of resignation—was one of the most beautiful orchestral productions heard here for years. As a composer, Zemlinsky proved rather classicistic in his '23rd Psalm,' composed in 1912, and distinguished more for its excellent treatment of the chorus than for originality. The last novelty of the programme was Hugo Kauder's new Violin Concerto, of which Franz Malcolm Höne, a young American violinist of supreme technical proficiency and of the unemotional type, gave a brisk and virile production. Kauder, who has long lost himself in rather speculative and pensive music, in this latest piece reveals a new vitality, but does not always succeed in evading the conventional.

The 'Concerto Grosso' No. 2, by Ernst Krenek, abounds in harshnesses, both orchestrally and harmonically, and the emphasis laid on rhythm over melody, in the 'obstinate' motives and 'rapping' themes built on only one tone, challenges opposition. But Krenek's talent and temperament captivate even the adversely disposed. Dr. Erich Cheirander, who gave this work its Viennese première, brought also an historical novelty, viz., the Overture 'The Destruction of Jerusalem,' by Carl Löwe, the famous German song composer. This piece, over a hundred years old, contains a principal theme virtually identical with a motive from Mahler's eighth Symphony; and the similarity to Mahler does not end there, but extends even to certain formal peculiarities.

RECITALS

Franz Steiner, the Viennese Lieder singer, introduced a 'novelty' by Franz Schubert—a song entitled 'Lied der Abwesenheit,' which has recently been unearthed and published in connection with three other unknown Schubert pieces for pianoforte solo. They are a 'Minuet' from Schubert's youth; a 'Ländler' whose time of origin is unknown; and a Waltz written about 1826. The latter had appeared in a collection printed at Vienna in 1825, and containing also a Waltz by Beethoven. The other three Schubert works are hitherto unpublished, the manuscripts being in the possession of one of Schubert's surviving grand-nieces.

The return of Jascha Heifetz, the widely famed Russian violinist, after a long absence, proved an admitted disappointment: a truly phenomenal technical equipment such as his could not atone for the complete absence of feeling, and what the Germans call 'style,' in classic compositions. Heifetz's very reverse is Eugen d'Albert, with whom pianistic technique has become a negligible quantity in recent years. D'Albert's gigantic conceptions of the great classics are still unsurpassed in their grandeur, but his failing dexterity has come to a point where it mars his interpretation. A notable pianist is Alexander Tcherepnin, a young Russian who served as interpreter for his own brilliant and grateful compositions. As a composer, Tcherepnin ponders little on problems, and allows his imagination to stream forth unaffected by intellectualism. His native Russian temperament affords a satisfying synthesis with an elegance of style and fluency of diction acquired in France, the country of his adoption. Still young, and also eminently gifted, is Erhard Kranz, one of the very few of our young musicians to covet the laurels of the organist. The modern orchestra with its advanced devices for colouring and shading, offers new scope to the organist with modern ideas, and this artist made full use of them. Paul Bechert.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths:

Thomas Ernest Plater, at Portsmouth, on March 5, aged forty-four. For the past twenty-six years he had been on the staff at Fratton Road Boys' School, the whole of the musical work being in his charge. Outside the school he laboured hard in the cause of music, being secretary of the Juvenile Welfare Association Festival and the Portsmouth Competitive Festival, choirmaster at Lake Road Baptist Church and at St. Simon's Church, and conductor of the Portsmouth Temperance Choral Union. With the last-named body he gained many successes in competitive festivals. Plater was not only a skilled vocal trainer; he had also a real genius for choral conducting. One of our most vivid recollections is the Choral Union's singing, a few years ago, of 'As Vesta was' and Elgar's 'Death on the hills.' In beauty of tone, poetic insight, and finished style the performances stamped his choir as one of the best of its size and type in the country. A genial and unassuming man as well as an accomplished teacher, Thomas Plater will be mourned by hosts of friends in the Portsmouth district.

Anton Sistermans, at The Hague, on February 6, in whom Holland has lost one of her ablest and best-known musicians. Sistermans was born at 's-Hertogenbosch, in 1865, and after a short time in business discovered that he had a voice of excellent quality. He studied under Stockhausen, and a brilliant first appearance in Verdi's 'Requiem,' at Strasbourg, paved the way for a tour of the whole of Europe, in which he won success wherever he went. Later he settled at Berlin as a teacher. In 1917, driven by the conditions obtaining there, he left Germany for his native country, and was invited to take charge of the opera class at the Royal Conservatory at The Hague. He also did other teaching, incidentally forming the 'Sistermans Ensemble,' which gave concerts in various towns. He was a great friend of Brahms, and an ardent admirer of all his works.

The Hon. Mrs. Robert Lyttelton, née Santley, on February 14, at St. John's Wood. She made her first public appearance at the age of sixteen, at Liverpool, with the Carl Rosa Opera Company in 'The Water Carrier,' and during the following eight years she was a brilliantly successful soprano. All the signs pointed to a career rivalling that of her famous father, but she retired from public singing on her marriage in 1884. She had an unusual distinction in having drawn the admiration of Jenny Lind for her singing, and Rubinstein for her pianoforte playing. During recent years she devoted herself unsparingly to philanthropic and religious work.

Albert Hannington, in his seventy-eighth year. He began his musical life as solo boy at various London Churches, including Brompton Oratory and the Italian Church, Hatton Garden. At the age of twenty he gave up the prospect of the Civil Service career for which he had prepared, and took a position in the Smith American Organ Company, later opening a branch of the business and carrying on also an extensive tuning connection. He also did much work as a teacher, and wrote many articles for trade journals.

Nicholas Phillips, on February 6, at Plymouth, aged seventy-three. He was principal of the firm of Turner & Phillips, music dealers of that town. Mr. Phillips was the first apprentice of John Brinsmead, and later became his factory manager. To his main business he added that of concert manager, in which capacity he served Albani, Patti, Paderewski, and other famous artists. He was a prominent figure in the West Country, not only in musical affairs but also in sport, being a famous swimmer and diver.

Thomas Cramp, on March 4, aged eighty. For nearly sixty-six years he had served as organist at Holy Trinity, Hastings, and though blind from birth had always found his way from his house to the church unaided.

John Millar Craig, at Edinburgh, aged eighty-seven. He studied singing in Italy, and on his return to Scotland won a high reputation as performer and teacher. He was very successful, too, as a choir-trainer, and among other bodies directed by him was the Glasgow Select Choir, which became widely known during his twenty-one years of office, touring in England and Scotland, and being for many years heard in London at St. Andrew's Day celebrations.

Miscellaneous

The Annual Report of the Organists' Benevolent League shows a flourishing state of affairs. The receipts for 1925 were £136 more than in the preceding year, and £447 more than in any other year but one since the inception of the Fund. Organ recitals for the benefit of the Fund showed an increase, but much more ought to be done in this direction. At present the Fund is in the happy position of being able to meet demands, but the committee looks forward to being enabled to increase the grants in necessitous cases. As the chairman, Mr. Sydney Nicholson, said at the annual meeting, it is highly satisfactory to find the League able to fulfil its object with the sole aid of organists themselves. A copy of the Report may be had from the secretary, Mr. Thomas Shindler, at the Royal College of Organists.

'The Music Trades Diary, Year-Book, and Directory for 1926' is a well-planned and informative companion for the musician's desk. It comprises an exhaustive dictionary of technical terms used by pianoforte makers, articles on the law of copyright, the care of player-pianos, the Shops (Early Closing) Act, Patents, Trade Marks and Designs, Hire Purchase Trading, &c., a list of musical instrument patents from 1924 to 1925, import and export statistics, various trade directories (home and foreign), &c., and the diary space is ample. An astonishing half-crown's worth. (G. D. Ernest & Co., Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.2.)

It is proposed to hold a Three Choirs Festival for West Wales, at Carmarthen, on September 15, 16, 17, and 19. The performances will take place at St. Peter's Church and St. David's Memorial Hall. The programmes will include Bach's 'A Stronghold Sure,' Elgar's 'For the Fallen,' 'The Hymn of Praise,' 'The Messiah,' 'Elijah,' a work by Sir Walford Davies (to be selected), and a new work by J. Charles Williams, the conductor. Choralists wishing to take part should write to Mr. Williams.

In connection with sixteen Open Scholarships at the Royal College of Music, preliminary examinations will be held on May 26 in various local centres. The Scholarships are for composition (1), pianoforte (3), organ (1), violin (2), violoncello (2), singing (3), and not less than four among harp, oboe, bassoon, trumpet, and horn. Full information and entry forms may be had from the Registrar, Royal College of Music. Last day of entry, April 26.

The String Orchestra of the London Academy of Music gave a concert at Hampstead Conservatoire on February 18, playing works by Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Grieg, and West, conducted by Mr. Carl Weber. Miss Madeleine Wermecke, a pupil of Mr. Charles Fry, recited admirably Shelley's 'Ode to the West Wind'; and Mr. Cecil Turner, pupil of Mr. Weber, showed great promise in Grieg's Pianoforte Concerto.

The Annual Dinner of the Musicians' Benevolent Fund will take place on April 15 at 7 for 7.30 at the New Princes Galleries, Piccadilly. Lord Darling will be in the chair, and among the speakers will be Mr. J. R. Clynes and Mr. Albert Coates. Tickets (15*s.* 6*d.*) may be had from the secretary, Mr. Frank Thistleton, 5, John Street, Bedford Row, W.C.

In the course of a lecture on his 'Brain to Keyboard' System at Grotrian Hall, on February 25, Mr. Macdonald Smith said that a lady who was asked to report on the strength of her ring finger replied crisply, 'None worn'; and another pupil, on being given a 'lunge' exercise, wrote pointing out that his lungs were 'Quite sound, thank you.'

An Oxford Festival of Music, in commemoration of the Tercentenary of the foundation of the Heather Chair of Music, will take place on May 2-8, under the direction of Sir Hugh Allen. The programme, &c., reaches us too late for details to be given. It may be had from Messrs. Charles Taphouse & Son, Magdalen Street, Oxford.

We have received, too late for detailed notice, the programme of the Bournemouth Musical Festival (April 1-11). The scheme is as attractive as usual, and we cannot imagine a more desirable Easter holiday for musicians than a fortnight at Bournemouth shared between the Winter Gardens and the beach.

Mr. Rhys Evans has conducted the Porth Harmonic Society for twenty-five years, and as a token of appreciation the Society and the Salem Welsh Baptist Church recently presented him with a handsome album and address and a selection of musical works.

Answers to Correspondents

G. L.—The Primers you mention will take you far enough for the A.R.C.O. paperwork, but we do not advise you to confine yourself to them. For Counterpoint add 'Diatonic and Modal Counterpoint,' by Ralph Dunstan (Novello), and 'Applied Counterpoint,' Kitson (Oxford University Press). Widen your views on musical history by reading standard biographies and the principal articles in 'Grove'; there is no more interesting way of adding to your all-round knowledge of the art. (2.) Mendelssohn's Organ Prelude in D minor: Your inquiry as to the treatment of the passage on the first page is answered by the composer himself. Ad libitum, he says. This does not imply (as you seem to think it does) a quicker pace. It has to do rather with rhythm, the point being the contrast between the free movement of the quaver interludes and the weighty groups of chords. A very little freedom will suffice; mere eccentricity would ruin the dignity of the movement. The player will show his taste and sense of style by the way he makes the chords and quaver passages contrast and cohere. A frenzied rushing of the quavers will provide contrast; a stolid strict time will ensure coherence. Only good playing will bring about the two. Organ music abounds in this alternation of free passage work and strict writing (chiefly because in the early days of the instrument such alternation was one of the few methods of obtaining variety); and much of the loose and unbalanced playing to be heard is due to a failure to apply this simple principle of contrast and coherence, or unity in variety. Too often one is obtained at the cost of the other. The pace of this Prelude should be brisk, say about crotchet=112. It may be worked up slightly towards the climax which leads into the last page, but in putting on the pace don't forget that the actual increase need be no more than slight, because the gradual change from the opening quaver duplets, viâ triplets, to semiquavers, produces a fine impression of accelerated motion. What a fine movement this Prelude is! Folk who sniff at Mendelssohn should study the organ, and play the D minor and C minor Preludes and Fugues and the best of the Organ Sonata movements.

E. B. P.—(1.) For the information you require about the Oxford degree you had better write to the University. (2.) You ask if the addition of three vocal parts to a given melody or bass (A.R.C.O. paper work) is to be regarded as a harmony or counterpoint test. In a sense the answer is 'Both.' The examiners would think little of a working that consisted merely of plain chords; a certain amount of independence in the part-writing would be looked for, and this of course means that the examinee must be able to write free counterpoint. An important point in the test would be the style of the writing—it should be vocal. We advise you to work such a test in three ways: (1) Add three plain parts; (2) three vocal parts; and (3) three string parts. All would be markedly different in style, but the contrapuntal element would be present in all, though only markedly so in the third. We suggest working thus in three styles, because too many students are content to produce part-writing that may be sung or played on a keyboard or by a string quartet, but which (as a result of this undefined and accommodating character) is not effective on either medium. Let every bar you write be for some definite instrument or combination. You will add interest to your task, and the result will gain in character, being music of sorts instead of mere paper abstraction.

H. A. R.—The R.A.M. list of books recommended for use in preparing for the L.R.A.M. examination does not include one on accompanying. A recently issued work that would probably meet your needs is Welton Hickin's 'Pianoforte Accompaniment' (Novello, 5s.). See also articles in the Musical Times of November and December, 1924, by Hubert J. Foss, on 'The Art of Accompanying Songs.'

Worried.—The trembling in the bow arm is probably due to involuntary stiffening of the muscles. As this occurs mostly in playing solos, the origin is no doubt nervousness. It is difficult to diagnose without exact information. Next time the trembling occurs observe closely whether the arm is moving as freely as it should. In all musical performance stiffness is a fatal enemy.

Nomen Belli.—(1.) Yes; harpsichords are still made in this country. They are costly delights, of course. Write to Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch, 'Jesses,' Haslemere, Surrey. (2.) We know nothing of Continental second-hand dealers in Roman Catholic Church music. Perhaps some of our readers can give us information. If so, we will send it along.

H. R.—Francesco Geminiani was a famous violinist and composer, b. Lucca, 1680, d. 1762. (His birth-year is sometimes given as 1667.) He lived much in London. He wrote many Sonatas, Concertos, &c., for violin; also pieces for clavecin and harpsichord; and some technical and theoretical works. A biographical article is in 'Grove,' vol. 2.

L. G. R.—(1.) Apparently the metronome about which you inquire was the 'Pinfold.' This was stocked by Messrs. Metzlers, but they tell us that it is no longer made. Write to them for particulars of other kinds. (2.) Chesters stock a good many photographs of musicians; ask them for a list, or say which ones you want.

C. M.—We cannot answer questions concerning a harmonic progression unless you send us the work in which it occurs, or, better still, copy out the passage. Nor can we advise on the interpretation of a piece unless a copy is sent.

A. McK.—(1.) We do not know the meaning of the letters 'A.P.N.Cons.L.' (2.) Our ignorance extends even farther, and we cannot essay a 'description of the academic costume of the A.R.C.M.'

E. C.—An article on 'The Immortal Hour' appeared in our issue for June, 1921. The writer was Robert Lorenz.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

Charges for Advertisements:—

	£	s.	d.
Two Lines	0	3	0
Three Lines	0	3	4
For every additional Line	0	0	10
One inch (displayed)	0	10	0
Half a Column	2	0	0
A Column	4	0	0
A Page	7	10	0

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.
A remittance should be sent with every Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To insure insertion in their proper positions, Advertisements for the next issue should reach the Office, 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1, not later than WEDNESDAY, APRIL 21 (First Post).

CONTENTS.

	Page
Samuel Sebastian Wesley	305
Personalities among Musical Critics.—III. Edward Dent. By Basil Maine	307
The Anthems of Samuel Sebastian Wesley. By Edward C. Bairstow	308
The Organ Music of Samuel Sebastian Wesley. By Harvey Grace	309
Ad Libitum. By 'Feste'	312
Dr. Burney. By Anthony Clyne	315
Music in the Foreign Press. By M.-D. Calvocoressi	317
Purcell's 'Dido' in Germany	317
Points from Lectures	318
The Musician's Bookshelf	320
Player-Piano Notes. By William Delasaire	324
Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus'	325
Occasional Notes	327
New Music	330
Church and Organ Music	334
Royal College of Organists	334
New Hymnals and Psalters	335
London Concerts	344
Letters to the Editor	350
The Amateurs' Exchange	354
Sharps and Flats	354
Royal Academy of Music	355
Royal College of Music	355
Ear, Eye, and Hand in Music Study	355
Competition Festival Record	356
Music in the Provinces	357
The Æsthetic Value of the English Madrigal	360
Music in Wales	361
Music in Ireland	361
Musical Notes from Abroad	361
Obituary	366
Miscellaneous	366
Answers to Correspondents	367

MUSIC.

'Now on land and sea descending.' Evening Anthem. By Ernest Halsey ... 337

TWO EXTRA SUPPLEMENTS are given with this number:

1. Portrait of Samuel Sebastian Wesley.
2. 'Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost.' Short Anthem for Whitsuntide and General use. By Hugh Blair.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED.

COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S.—Suite ("Nero"). Cornetti, transposed from Trumpet part. 2s. 3d.

DUNCOMBE, Rev. W. D. V.—"Guide us in Thy way, O Christ." Anthem for Bass Solo and Choir. 4d.

GERMAN, EDWARD.—"The Camel's Hump." Arranged as a Two-part Song. (No. 220, Novello's Two-part Songs.) 4d.

HALSEY, E.—"Now on land and sea descending." Evening Anthem. (No. 998, The Musical Times.) 2d.

HARRIS, C.—Te Deum Laudamus. In free chant form. (No. 1144, Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 2d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 406, contains the following music in both notations.—"Let me wander not unseen." Air from "L'Allegro." Handel. "O hush thee, my babie." A. Sullivan. Arranged as a Unison Song, with optional descant. 2d.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

SCHOOL SONGS.—Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

		A.	B.
No. 983.	"There is a green hill." (Arr. as a Two-part Song.) Ch. Gounod	—	3d.
1163.	"Come unto Him." Soprano Air from "The Messiah." Handel	2d.	—
1404.	"The Camel's Hump." (Arr. as a Two-part Song.) Edward German	—	3d.
1405.	"Dreamland Calling." Two-part Song. Alec Rowley	4d.	—
1422.	"The meeting of the waters." (Arr. with descant by Geoffrey Shaw)	2d.	—
1423.	"There's nae luck about the house." (Arr. with descant by Geoffrey Shaw)	3d.	—
1424.	"Drink to me only." (Arr. with descant by Geoffrey Shaw)	2d.	—
1425.	"Let Erin remember." (Arr. with descant by Geoffrey Shaw)	2d.	—
1426.	"The Bailiff's Daughter" (Arr. with descant by Geoffrey Shaw)	2d.	—
1427.	"The Bells of Aberdovey." (Arr. with descant by Geoffrey Shaw)	3d.	—
1431.	"The bonnie banks of Loch Lomond." Two-part Song. (Arr. by John E. West)	—	2d.
1432.	"The Ash Grove." Welsh Air. (Arr. as a Two-part Song)	2d.	—

SCOTTISH FOLK-SONG.—"The bonnie banks of Loch Lomond." (Arr. as a Two-part Song by John E. West.) (No. 222, Novello's Two-part Songs.) 3d.

SMITH, W.—The Lord's Prayer. Sacred Song, for Soprano or Tenor. 2s.

THIMAN, ERIC H.—"Immortal, invisible, God only wise." Anthem. (No. 1140, Novello's 8vo Anthems.) 4d.

TONIC SOL-FA PUBLICATIONS:

Bach, J. S.—"God so loved the world." Cantata for Whitsuntide. 1s.

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:

No. 2511.	"Sweet is the work." Hymn-Anthem. R. Walker Robson	1½d.
2512.	"The Drums of Freedom." For Soprano (or Tenor) Solo (ad lib.) and Chorus. H. E. Crimp	3d.
2513.	"On the plains." Ballet. S.S.A.T.B. T. Weelkes	3d.

WILLIAMS, C. LEE.—"Break, break, break." Part-song for S.A.T.B. 3d.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK.

BANKS, H. C.—Caprice. For Organ (St. Cecilia Series, No. 364.)

BECKER, R. L.—Elegie. For Organ (St. Cecilia Series, No. 369.)

DIECKMANN, C. W.—"A Song of Sunshine." For Organ. (St. Cecilia Series, No. 368.)

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

DONOVAN, R.—6 Two-part Songs. Complete. 50 cents (2s. 6d.). Or separately, No. 1, "Oranges and lemons," 10 cents (6d.); 2, "Dame, get up," 12 cents (6d.); 3, "The Frog and the Crow," 12 cents (6d.); 4, "The Ploughboy in luck," 12 cents (6d.); 5, "There was a lady," 10 cents (6d.); 6, "King Arthur," 10 cents (6d.).

DOUGLAS, W.—"O Esca Viatorum." Motet for Men's Voices. 12 cents (6d.).

GAUL, H. B.—"O Lord, the Maker of all thing." Mixed Voices, unaccompanied. 12 cents (6d.).

HELD, P.—"Cradle Song." For Organ. (St. Cecilia Series, No. 381.)

McCOLLIN, F.—"Cherubs at play." For Organ. (St. Cecilia Series, No. 383).

PHILLIPS, H. D.—"Behind the clouds." For Organ. (St. Cecilia Series, No. 380.)

TILY, H. J.—"Abide with me." Anthem for Mixed Voices. (Solos for S.A.T.B.) 15 cents (8d.).

TRADITIONAL SPANISH.—"In Joseph's lovely garden." Easter. Mixed Voices unaccompanied, Soprano Solo. Arr. by C. DICKINSON. 12 cents (6d.).

A NEW PART-SONG.

"BREAK, BREAK, BREAK, ON THY COLD GREY STONES, O SEA!"

WORDS BY ALFRED LORD TENNYSON

MUSIC BY C. LEE WILLIAMS.

Editions for A.T.B.B. and S.A.T.B. can now be obtained.

Price Threepence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

HOLY COMMUNION IN C, including AGNUS, BENEDICTUS, ETC.

By HERBERT ROLFE, F.R.C.O.

Third thousand, 9*d.*

". . . . One of the most pleasing and devotional compositions of its class with which we have met for some time."—Church Review.

". . . . thoroughly devotional in tone."—Musical News.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Music and Books

at Great Reductions.

Foyles hold a wide range of Second-hand Copies in good condition of Pianoforte and Organ Music, Oratorios, Operas, and Choral Works of every description, Standard Musical Text-books, Dramatic Literature and Plays, which they offer at tremendous reductions. Send for Catalogue 122 (free); mentioning definite requirements if possible.

New Books and Music supplied on best terms, and prompt delivery guaranteed.

Music and Books Purchased.

FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,

121-125, CHARING CROSS ROAD, LONDON, W.C.2.

FOR SALE.—"DEUX LIVRES D'ORGUE," 1531.

(See Musical Times, March, page 232.)

Tome I. Published at £2. Post Free for half price.

Techniquer. Best Grade. Post Free for 35*s.*

"Allentando," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

AN APPOINTMENT is DESIRED in Suburban or Provincial School of Music, by experienced teacher. Violin, piano, harmony. Sound musician, organist. Ex-scholar R.C.M. Excellent references. Or would consider partnership. "W. F. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160. Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED, Lady Margaret Road Wesleyan Church, Kentish Town. Must be good Choir-Trainer. Apply before April 9, stating qualifications, experience, and salary required, to Mr. C. Powell, 15, Montpelier Road, N.W.5.

MARCH'S BULLETIN OF OXFORD MUSIC

Oxford Orchestral Series s. d.

No. 015. Sinfonia from Church Cantata No. 18 (Bach) (Gleich wie der Regen).
Edited by W. G. WHITTAKER Score 3 0
Parts, 4*d.* each.

No. 017. Wachet Auf (Sleepers, wake).
No. 4 of Church Cantata 160 (Bach).
Arranged by MICHELE ESPOSITO Score 3 0
Parts, 4*d.* each.

No. 014. Toccata, Aria, Minuetto, Giga.
By ALESSANDRO SCARLATTI.
Arranged by MICHELE ESPOSITO Score 4 0
Parts, 4*d.* each.

Chamber Music

Bach Choral Prelude (O Lamm Gottes Unschuldig).
Arranged by LEONARD BORWICK 2 6
Three Sketches for String Quartet. By ALFRED WALL 5 6 Parts, 10*s.* 6*d.*

Solo Songs

"I wish, and I wish." By NORMAN PETERKIN 2 0
"A Piper" (O'Sullivan). By NORMAN PETERKIN ... 2 6
For Voice and Viola.
"The Jolly Carter." By E. J. MOERAN 2 0
"The Nurse's Song." By HUBERT J. FOSS 2 0

Oxford Choral Songs. Some New Numbers

UNISON.
No. 48. "To Violets" (Herrick). By HAROLD RHODES 0 3
No. 50. "Take, O take" (Shakespeare).
By R. VAUGHAN WILLIAMS 0 3

TWO-PART.
No 138. "With Margerain Gentle." By B. VAN DIEREN 0 3
No. 139. "Good Day, Sire Cristemas."
By B. VAN DIEREN 0 3
(Both unaccompanied.)

OXFORD CHORAL SONGS—continued. s. d.

THREE-PART. For Male Voice.
No. 124. "Rutterkin." By ROBIN MILFORD 0 3
No. 215. "Parson Hogg." By ROBIN MILFORD... ... 0 6
For Mixed Voices.
No. 701. "I see His blood upon the rose" (Plunkett).
By ARTHUR BENJAMIN 0 6
No. 706. "The Virgin's Cradle Hymn" (Coleridge).
By EDMUND RUBBRA 0 3

Oxford Piano Series

No. P6. "Powder and Patches." By COLIN TAYLOR. Pp. 12. (Menuet; Sarabande; Gavotte) 2 6
No. P22. Invention and Pavan. Grade C-D.
By HARRY FARJEON 2 0
No. P23. "Cinderella." A short Suite. By ETHEL BOYCE. Book 1. Pp. 8 ("The Lonely Girl"; "Fairy Gifts"; "The Journey"; "Dancing") 2 6
No. P25. Grimm's Fairy Tales. Grade D.
By MICHAEL MULLINAR 2 6
No. P26. Canzonet. Grade E. By NORMAN DEMUTH... 1 6

CATHEDRAL ANTHEMS

A new series of Anthems of the old English School, edited and arranged by C. HYLTON STEWART, Organist of Rochester Cathedral.

C1 O give thanks (Greene) 0 8
C2 Hear my prayer, O Lord (Croft) 0 8
C3 How long wilt Thou forget me (Greene) 1 6
C4 Let my complaint come before Thee (Greene) ... 0 8
C5 Acquaint thyself with God (Greene) 0 6
C6 Lord, how long wilt Thou be angry (Greene) 0 8
C7 Arise, shine, O Zion (Greene) 1 2
C8 O Lord, rebuke me not (Croft) 1 0
C9 The Lord shall comfort Zion (Walmisley) 1 6
C10 O Lord, Thou hast searched me out (Croft) 0 8

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

AMEN HOUSE, WARWICK SQUARE, E.C.4, AND 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1.

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVALS.

HYMNS AND TUNES

PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED.

Price Three-Halfpence each.

		Words by	Music by
1.	COME, CHILDREN, ON AND FORWARD	F. Bevan	G. C. Martin
2.*	FOR THE FRESHNESS OF THE MORNING	W. St. Hill Bourne	Lady Euan-Smith
3.	I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY	Emily H. Miller	F. Clay
4.	COME, O COME, IN PIOUS LAYS	G. Wither	J. Stainer
5.	THINE FOR EVER! GOD OF LOVE	Mary F. Maude	W. C. Harvey
	NOW THE DAYLIGHT GOES AWAY	F. R. Havergal	J. Adcock
6.	JESU, WHOM THY CHILDREN LOVE	J. F. Wheeler	H. E. Button
7.*	SWEETLY O'ER THE MEADOWS FAIR	F. A. Challinor	F. A. Challinor
8.	WOULD YOU GAIN THE BEST IN LIFE	H. R. Palmer	C. J. May
9.	ON OUR WAY REJOICING	J. S. B. Monsell	W. B. Gilbert
10.	AGAIN THE MORN OF GLADNESS	J. Ellerton	J. Stainer
11.	THE ANGEL'S SONG	F. R. Havergal	A. Randegger
12.	FORWARD, CHRISTIAN CHILDREN	Helen W. Selby	A. Moffat
13.	THE GOLDEN SHORE	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
14.	SAVIOUR, BLESSED SAVIOUR	G. Thring	John E. West
15.	ENTER WITH THANKSGIVING	W. St. Hill Bourne	F. H. Cowen
16.	MAN SHALL NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE	W. H. Draper	J. V. Roberts
17.	STARS, THAT ON YOUR WONDROUS WAY	J. Bogue	J. Stainer
18.	THE DAY IS PAST AND OVER	J. M. Neale	J. Barnby
19.	WE MARCH, WE MARCH TO VICTORY	G. Moultrie	J. Barnby
20.	HARK! HARK! THE ORGAN LOUDLY PEALS	G. Thring	G. J. Bennett
21.	O WHAT CAN LITTLE HANDS DO	G. W. Hinsdale	H. E. Button
22.	THE ROSEATE HUES OF EARLY DAWN	C. F. Alexander	A. Sullivan
23.	LORD, THY CHILDREN GUIDE AND KEEP	W. W. How	A. S. Cooper
24.	THE BEAUTIFUL LAND	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
	JESU, TENDER SHEPHERD, HEAR ME	M. L. Duncan	H. Parker
25.	THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF ENGLAND	J. Compston	J. Stainer
26.	THE CITY OF LIGHT	F. Alder	E. J. Troup
27.	GOD IS IN HEAVEN! CAN HE HEAR	A. Gilbert	H. E. Button
	GENTLE JESUS, MEEK AND MILD	C. Wesley	J. Stainer
28.*	HE DWELLS AMONG THE LILIES	W. St. Hill Bourne	Lady Euan-Smith
29.	THE CROWN IS WAITING	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
0.	RAISE YOUR STANDARD, BROTHERS	G. Spiller	E. J. Troup
31.*	FLOWERS	F. R. Havergal	A. Randegger
32.	THE GOOD SHEPHERD	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
33.	ABOVE THE CLEAR BLUE SKY	M. Bourdillon	H. E. Crimp
34.	WHEN LOVE DRAWS NEAR	L. Whitehead	E. J. Troup
35.	COME, SING WITH HOLY GLADNESS	J. J. Daniell	G. W. Torrance
36.	WE WILL PRAISE THEE	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
37.*	WHAT CAN I GIVE JESUS	A. C. Benson	A. M. Goodhart
38.	COME, PRAISE OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR	W. W. How	H. A. Chambers
39.	NOW THE DAY IS OVER	S. Baring-Gould	F. W. Blunt
40.*	WE THANK THEE, LORD, FOR THIS FAIR EARTH	G. E. L. Cotton	W. C. Harvey
41.	THE LESSON OF LOVE		J. Barnby
42.	COME, FRIENDS, THE WORLD WANTS MENDING		E. J. Troup
43.	CREATOR, GOD, AND LORD	Mary Bradford Whiting	J. H. Maunder
44.*	O GOD, WE COME BEFORE THEE	J. Gibson	Tune—"Ellacombe"
45.	WHAT IS THE GIFT THAT I CAN BRING	Mary Bradford Whiting	H. A. Chambers
	HOSANNA WE SING	G. S. Hodges	H. A. Chambers
46.	HEAVENLY FATHER, SEND THY BLESSING	Christopher Wordsworth	W. C. Harvey
47.	THE DAYS OF OLD	Ethel Boyce	Ethel Boyce
48.*	BLESSED JESU, WE CAN SEE THEE	Doris Rowley	Alec Rowley
	THE EARTH IS FAIR AND SWEET	Doris Rowley	Alec Rowley
49.*	WHILE OUR LORD WAS PASSING BY	Ethel Boyce	Ethel Boyce
50.	PILGRIMS OF THE NIGHT	F. W. Faber	Oliver King
51.*	THE HOLY LIGHT	W. M. W. Call	C. H. Lloyd
52.*	NOW SINKS THE SUN THAT LIT OUR FESTAL MORN	Mary Bradford Whiting	C. J. May
53.	LIFE'S GLAD MORNING	Kate Hopkins	G. C. Martin
54.	JESUS, BLESSED SAVIOUR	F. R. Havergal	A. Herbert Brewer
55.	COME, CHRISTIAN YOUTHS AND MAIDENS	T. A. Stowell	Harvey Grace
56.*	THY WORD IS LIKE A GARDEN, LORD	E. Hodder	Eric H. Thiman
	WHEN THE LORD OF LOVE WAS HERE	Stopford A. Brooke	Eric H. Thiman
57.	GOD OF OUR FATHERS	Mary Rowles Jarvis	E. J. Hopkins
58.	CHILDREN OF GOD	F. G. Russell	F. G. Russell
	GOD OF MERCY, THRONED ON HIGH	H. Neele	Harvey Grace
59.	THE CHILDREN'S PRAYER	Robert McLeod	Robert McLeod
60.	THE LORD BE WITH US	J. Ellerton	C. J. May

* These Hymns are suitable for Flower Services.

The above are also published in Seven Sets, containing Ten Hymns and Tunes, price 6d. per Set.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVALS.

HYMNS AND TUNES.

PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED.

SET VII.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Price 6d. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

May also be had in separate numbers, Price 1½d. each.

CONTENTS.

1.	Life's glad morning	GEORGE C. MARTIN
2.	Jesus, blessèd Saviour	A. HERBERT BREWER
3.	Come, Christian youths and maidens	HARVEY GRACE
4.	Thy Word is like a garden	E. H. THIMAN
5.	God of mercy, throned on high	HARVEY GRACE
6.	God of our fathers	E. J. HOPKINS
7.	When the Lord of love	E. H. THIMAN
8.	Children of God	F. G. RUSSELL
9.	The Children's Prayer	R. MCLEOD
10.	The Lord be with us	C. J. MAY

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ANTHEMS, ETC.

Sacred Unison Songs for Soprano Voices (or Solos).

Children's Angel, The (both Notations)	CH. GOUNOD	2d.
Come, let us all this day (both Notations)	J. S. BACH	2d.
Lord, at all times I will bless Thee (both Notations)	MENDELSSOHN	3d.
Lord of our being (botb Notations)	G. F. HANDEL	1½d.
O for the wings of a dove (both Notations)	MENDELSSOHN	2d.

Sacred Two-part Songs and Anthems for Soprano Voices.

Except the Lord build the House (both Notations)	M. J. MONK	3d.
Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard (both Notations)	MYLES B. FOSTER	4d.
Faint not, fear not, God is near thee (both Notations)	HENRY SMART	4d.
God sends the night (both Notations)	G. RATHBONE	4d.
Like as the hart (both Notations)	V. NOVELLO, arr. by H. ELLIOT BUTTON	2d.
Lord is my Shepherd, The (s. & c., both Notations)	HENRY SMART	3d.
O for the wings of a dove (Staff Notation only)	MENDELSSOHN, arr. by J. E. WEST	4d.
O how amiable are Thy dwellings (Staff Notation only)	J. H. MAUNDER	4d.
Songs of Praise the Angels sang (Staff Notation only)	ATTWOOD	2d.
Within the fold (both Notations)	ROLAND ROGERS	4d.

Hymn-Anthems for Children and Choir.

		O.N.	Tonic Sol-Fa.
Happy Day! Festal Day!	H. A. CHAMBERS	4d.	3d.
Hosanna be the children's song	E. M. BARBER	3d.	1½d.
Hosanna we sing	JOHN E. WEST	4d.	2d.
I love to hear the Story	MYLES B. FOSTER	4d.	2d.
Lord, Thy children	J. H. MAUNDER	4d.	2d.
Sweet is the work	R. WALKER ROBSON	2d.	1½d.
Sweet is Thy mercy	J. BARNBY	2d.	1½d.
Thine for ever	H. ELLIOT BUTTON	4d.	2d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ANTHEMS FOR ASCENSIONTIDE.

*Above all praise and all majesty ... ... Mendelssohn 2d.
Achieved is the glorious work ... ... Haydn 1½d.
*Achieved is the glorious work (2nd Chorus) ... Haydn 2d.
*All glory to the Lamb ... ... Spohr 2d.
Awake up, my glory ... ... M. Wise 4d.
*Christ became obedient unto death ... ... J. F. Bridge 2d.
Christ is not entered into the Holy Places ... ... E. Faning 2d.
Come, ye children ... ... H. J. King 4d
For it became Him ... ... O. King 2d.
God is gone up ... ... *Croft, 6d.; W. B. Gilbert 3d.
*God, my King ... ... Bach 2d.
Grant, we beseech Thee ... ... H. Lahee 2d.
Grant, we beseech Thee (Collect) ... ... A. R. Gaul 4d.
*Hallelujah, unto God's Almighty Son ... ... Beethoven 4d.
*How excellent Thy Name, O Lord ... ... Handel 2d.
*If ye then be risen with Christ ... ... I. Atkins 6d.
If ye then be risen ... *F. O. Carr and J. Naylor, ea. 4d.
If ye then be risen (Two parts) F. W. Wadeley, 2d.; M. B. Foster 4d.
In My Father's house ...H. E. Button and J. M. Crament, ea. 4d.
In that day ... ... G. Elvey 6d.
In that day (Open ye the gates) ... ... F. C. Maker 4d.
*It shall come to pass ... ... B. Tours 2d.
I will not leave you comfortless ... ... W. Byrd 4d.
*King all-glorious ... ... J. Barnby 8d.
King all-glorious (with Chorus arr. for four voices) J. Barnby 6d.
*Leave us not, neither forsake us ... ... J. Stainer 2d.
Let not your heart ... E. Faning and G. Gardner, each 4d.
Let not your heart be troubled (Double Chorus unac.) M. B. Foster 4d.
*Let not your heart (Four-part) ... ... M. B. Foster 4d.
*Let their celestial concerts all unite ... ... Handel 2d.
*Lift up your heads ... Handel and J. L. Hopkins, each 2d.
*Lift up your heads ... ... S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.
Lift up your heads ... ... W. Turner 3d.
*Look, ye saints ... ... M. B. Foster 4d.
O all ye people, clap your hands ... ... H. Purcell 4d.
*O clap your hands ... ... J. Stainer 8d.
O clap your hands ... ... T. T. Trimnell 4d
*O God, the King of Glory ... ... H. Smart 6d
*O God, when Thou appearest ... ... Mozart 4d.
*O how amiable ... ... J. Barnby 4d.
*O Lord our Governour... ... ... H. Gadsby 4d.
O Lord our Governour ... ... Marcello 2d.
*O risen Lord ... ... J. Barnby 2d.
*Open to me the gates ... ... F. Adlam 6d.
*Rejoice in the Lord ... ... J. B. Calkin 2d.
*Sing unto God ... ... F. Bevan 4d.
*Ten thousand times ten thousand ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
The earth is the Lord's ... ... T. T. Trimnell 6d.
*The Lord is exalted ... ... J. E. West 2d.
The Lord is King H. Gadsby, 8d.; H. J. King, 6d.; W. King 3d.
Thou art a priest for ever ... ... S. Wesley 4d.
*Unfold, ye portals ... ... Ch. Gounod 4d.
*Where Thou reignest ... ... Schubert 4d.
Who is this so weak and helpless ... ... Rayner 3d.

ANTHEMS FOR WHITSUNTIDE.

And all the people saw ... ... J. Stainer 8d.
*And suddenly there came ... ... H. J. Wood 4d.
And when the day of Pentecost ... ... C. W. Smith 4d.
*As pants the hart... ... ... Spohr 2d.
*As the hart pants... ... ... Mendelssohn 2d.
Behold, I send the promise ... ... J. V. Roberts 6d.
*Come, Holy Ghost ... ... Attwood 2d.
Ditto (Three-part, S.S.A.) ... ... Attwood 4d.
Come, Holy Ghost ... ... Elvey and J. L. Hatton, each 6d.
Come, Holy Ghost C. L. Williams and *Palestrina, each 3d.
Come, Thou Holy Spirit ... ... J. F. Barnett 4d.
Do not I fill heaven and earth... ... ... H. Blair 4d.
*Eye hath not seen (Two-part setting) ... M. B. Foster 4d.
*Eye hath not seen (Four-part setting) ... M. B. Foster 4d.
Fear thou not ... ... J. Booth 2d.
Give thanks unto God ... ... Spohr 6d.
Glorious and powerful God ... ... O. Gibbons 4d.
*God came from Teman... ... ... C. Steggall 6d.
*God is a Spirit ... ... W. S. Bennett 2d.
*Ditto (Two-part, S.S.) ... ... Bennett 2d.
Ditto (Male Voice, A.T.B.B.) ... ... Bennett 3d.
Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost ... ... H. Blair 4d.
*Great is the Lord... ... ... W Hayes 6d.
*Grieve not the Holy Spirit ... ... J. Stainer 4d.
Hail! breath of life ... ... T. Adams 2d.
Happy is the man ... ... E. Prout 1s.
He that dwelleth in the secret place... ... ... J. Booth 6d.
*Holy Spirit, come, O come (Ad Spiritum Sanctum) G. C. Martin 2d.
I was in the spirit ... ... Blow 8d.
*I will magnify Thee ... ... Bunnett, 4d.; J. H. Parry 4d.
*I will not leave you comfortless ... ... B. Steane 3d.
I will pray the Father ... ... G. W. Torrance 2d.
If I go not away... ... A. J. Caldicott, 4d.; *T. Adams 2d.
If ye love Me ... Bunnett, 4d.; B. Steane, 3d.; C. S. Heap 2d.
*If ye love Me ... W. H. Monk, Tallis, and R. P. Stewart, each 2d.
If ye love Me H. W. Wareing and W. J. Westbrook, each 4d.
*In divers tongues ... ... Palestrina 3d.
In My Father's house ... ... J. M. Crament 4d.
It shall come to pass ... ... *B. Tours, 2d.; G. Garrett 8d.
Let God arise ... ... T. T. Trimnell, 6d.; Greene 8d.
*Let not your heart be troubled ... ... H. G. Trembath 2d.
Look down, Holy Dove... ... ... B. Luard-Selby 4d.
*O clap your hands ... ... J. Stainer 8d.
*O give thanks ... ... G. Elvey 4d.
*O God, my soul thirsteth ... ... F. R. Greenish 4d.
*O Holy Ghost, into our minds ... ... G. A. Macfarren 2d.
*Oh for a closer walk with God ... ... M. B. Foster 2d.
Ditto ... ... H. A. Chambers 4d.
O taste and see *Sullivan 2d.; Goss and A. H. Mann, each 4d.
O thou, the true and only Light ... ... Mendelssohn 3d.
O where shall wisdom be found ... ... Boyce 8d.
*Our blest Redeemer ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
*Peace I leave ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
*Praised be the Lord daily ... ... J. B. Calkin 2d.
Sing to the Lord ... ... Smart 1s. 6d.
*Spirit of mercy, truth and love H. A. Chambers, B. L. Selby, ea. 2d.
The eyes of all wait upon Thee ... ... Gibbons 6d.
*The Glory of the God Israel ... ... T. Adams 4d.
*The Lord came from Sinai ... ... J. E. West 4d.
The Lord descended ... ...Hayes 2d.
The Lord is in His Holy Temple ... ... J. Stainer 6d.
The Lord is in His Holy Temple J. W. Elliott; E. H. Thorne, ea. 2d.
The love of God is shed abroad ... ... S Reay 2d.
There is no condemnation ... ...H. S. Irons 4d.
The Spirit of God ... ... A. W. Marchant 4d.
*The Wilderness ... ... J. Goss, 3d.; *S. S. Wesley 8d.
*When God of old came down from Heaven ... E. V. Hall 4d.
We will rejoice ... ... Croft 6d.
When the Day of Pentecost ... ...A. Kempton 4d.
Whosoever drinketh ... ... J. T. Field 2d.

ANTHEMS FOR TRINITYTIDE.

*Almighty and everlasting God ... ... Gibbons 2d.
Almighty God, Who hast promised ... ... H. E. Button 1½d.
*Angel Spirits, ever blessed ... ... Tchaikovsky 3d.
Ascribe unto the Lord ... ... S. S. Wesley 6d.
Behold, God is great ... ... E. W. Naylor 6d.
*Beloved, if God so loved us ... ... J. Barnby 2d.
Beloved, let us love one another ... ... G. F. Cobb 2d.
Be ye all of one mind ... ... A. E. Godfrey 4d.
Blessed is the man ... ... J. Goss 6d.
Blessing and glory ... ...Boyce 2d.
*Blessing, glory ... ... Bach 8d.
Come, ye children ... ... J. Booth 4d.
God came from Teman ... ... C. Steggall 6d.
*God so loved the world ... ... M. Kingston 2d.
Grant, O Lord ... ... Mozart 2d.
Grant to us, Lord ... ... H. E. Button 1½d.
*Hail, gladdening Light ... J. T. Field, 3d.; *G. C. Martin 6d.
*Holy, holy, holy ... ... Crotch 4d.
Holy, Lord God Almighty ... ... T. Bateson 6d.
*How goodly are Thy tents ... ... F. Ouseley 2d.
*How lovely are Thy dwellings ... ... Spohr 2d.
Hymn to the Trinity ... ... Tchaikovsky 2d.
I am Alpha and Omega Ch. Gounod and J. V. Roberts, each 4d.
*I am Alpha and Omega... ... ... J. Stainer 2d.
I beheld, and lo! ... ... Blow 8d.
I know that the Lord is great ... ... F. Ouseley 2d.
I saw the Lord ... ... C. Harris, 4d.; *J. Stainer 8d.
I will magnify ... ... J. Shaw 4d.
I will sing of Thy power ... ... Greene 6d.
*I will sing of Thy power ... ... A. Sullivan 2d.
I will sing unto the Lord ... ...H. Wareing 4d.
*In humble faith ... ... G. Garrett 2d.
*In Jewry is God known ... ... J. Clarke-Whitfeld 2d.
In sweet consent ... ... E. H. Thorne 4d.
In the fear of the Lord ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
Let the peace of God ... ... J. Stainer 6d.
*Let Thy merciful ears ... ... A. R. Gaul 2d.
*Light of the world ... ... E. Elgar 4d.
Lord of all power and might ... ... E. T. Chipp 4d.
*Lord of all power and might ... ... W. Mason 2d.
Lord of all power and might (Men's voices) ... J. Barnby 3d.
Lord, we pray Thee H. A. Chambers and *J. V. Roberts, ea. 2d.
O Father blest ... ... J. Barnby 2d.
O God, Who hast prepared ... ... A. R. Gaul 3d.
O joyful Light ... ... B. Tours 6d.
*O Lord, my trust... ... ... K. Hall 2d.
O taste and see ... ... *J. Goss and A. H. Mann, each 4d.
*O taste and see ... ... A. Sullivan 2d.
O where shall wisdom be found? ... ...Boyce 8d.
Ponder my words, O Lord ... ... A. D. Culley 2d.
*Praise His awful Name ... ... Spohr 3d.
Rejoice in the Lord ... ... G. C. Martin 8d.
*See what love hath the Father ... ... Mendelssohn 2d.
Sing to the Lord ... ... Mendelssohn 1s.
*Stand up and bless ... ... J. Goss 6d.
Teach me Thy way ... W. H. Gladstone, 2d.; F. L. Moir 4d.
*The Lord hath been mindful... ... ... S. S. Wesley 4d.
*The Lord is my Shepherd ... ... G. A. Macfarren 2d.
*The Lord is my Shepherd ... ... J. Shaw 4d.
The Lord will comfort Zion ... ... H. Hiles 8d.
Thou art worthy, O Lord ... ... F. E. Gladstone 4d.
Thou shalt shew me the path of life... ... ... A. Gray 2d.
Three in One and One in Three (S.S.) ... F. W. Wadeley 3d.
We humbly beseech Thee ... ... H. E. Button 1½d.
Whatsoever is born of God ... ... H. Oakeley 4d.
Who can comprehend Thee ... ... Mozart 4d.

 Anthems marked thus () may be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d. to 3d. each.*

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE DESCANT HYMN-TUNE BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF WELL-KNOWN TUNES

ARRANGED BY

GEOFFREY SHAW

TUNES, AND APPROPRIATE HYMNS.

TUNE.	METRE.	HYMN.
Austria	8.7.8.7.D.	Glorious things of thee are spoken
		Praise the Lord ! ye heavens, adore Him
Bishopthorpe	C.M.	This is the day the Lord hath made
Darwall's 148th	6.6.6.6.4.4.4.4.	Ye holy Angels bright
Ein' feste Burg	8.7.8.7.6.6.6.7.	A safe stronghold our God is still
		Rejoice to-day with one accord
Eisenach	L.M.	Great God, Who, hid from mortal sight
		O Love, how deep ! how broad ! how high
Hanover	10.10.11.11.	Disposer Supreme, and Judge of the earth
		O worship the King, All-glorious above
Hyfrydol	8.7.8.7.D.	Alleluia ! sing to Jesus
Irish	C.M.	The Son of Man from Jordan rose
Lasst uns erfreuen	L.M. (with Alleluias)	Light's glittering morn bedecks the sky
		Ye watchers and ye holy ones
Leoni	6.6.8.4.D.	The God of Abraham praise
Luther	8.7.8.7.8.8.7.	Great God, what do I see and hear?
Melcombe	L.M.	New every morning is the love
Morning Hymn	L.M.	Awake, my soul, and with the sun
Nun danket	6.7.6.7.6.6.6.6.	Now thank we all our God
Old 100th (1st Version)	L.M.	All people that on earth do dwell
Old 100th (2nd Version)	L.M.	Before Jehovah's awful Throne
Old 104th	10.10.11.11.	Disposer Supreme, and judge of the earth
		O worship the King, All-glorious above
Richmond	C.M.	Praise to the Holiest in the height
Rockingham	L.M.	My God, and is Thy Table spread ?
		When I survey the wondrous Cross
St. Anne (1st Version)	C.M.	O God, our help in ages past
St. Anne (2nd Version)	C.M.	The Son of God goes forth to war
St. Theodulph	7.6.7.6.D.	All glory, laud, and honour
St. Thomas	S.M.	The Advent of our God
Surrey	8.8.8.8.8.	The Lord my pasture shall prepare
		We have not known Thee as we ought
Tallis' Canon	L.M.	Glory to Thee, my God, this night
Unser Herrscher	8.7.8.7.8.7.	Come ye faithful, raise the anthem
Victory	8.8.8.4.	The strife is o'er, the battle done
Wareham	L.M.	O Saviour, Lord, to Thee we pray
Warrington	L.M.	Now that the daylight fills the sky
Wiltshire	C.M.	Through all the changing scenes of life
Winchester New	L.M.	On Jordan's bank the Baptist's cry
Winchester Old (1st Version)	C.M.	When God of old came down from Heaven
Winchester Old (2nd Version)	C.M.	While shepherds watched their flocks by night

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

Voice Parts only, 8*d*.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

COMPOSITIONS

BY

SAMUEL SEBASTIAN WESLEY.

1810—1876.

ANTHEMS.

	s.	d.
All go unto one place	0	4
Almighty God, give us grace	0	4
Ascribe unto the Lord	0	6
Behold how good and joyful. A.T.B.	0	2
Blessed are they that alway keep judgment	0	2
Blessed be the God and Father Sol-fa, 1½d.	0	3
Blessed be the Lord God of Israel	0	2
Blessed is the man. A.T.T.B.	0	2
Blessed Lord, Who hast caused	0	3
Cast me not away from Thy presence	0	4
Collects, Three, for the first three Sundays in Advent. Two for Treble Voice and one for Bass... Folio Almighty God, O give us grace. Most Blessed Lord. Lord Jesus Christ, Thou Who at Thy first coming.	2	6
Face of the Lord, The Folio	3	6
For this mortal must put on immortality	0	4
Give the King Thy judgments Folio	6	0
Glory be to God on high Sol-fa, 1½d.	0	3
God be merciful unto us	0	4
He will swallow up death in victory	0	2
I am Thine, O save me	0	2
Lead me, Lord (from Praise the Lord, O my soul) Sol-fa, 1½d.	0	2
Let us lift up our heart Folio	6	0
Lord hath been mindful of us, The (from Ascribe unto the Lord) Sol-fa, 2d. Welsh Words, 4c. Sol-fa, 2c.	0	4
Man that is born of a woman	0	3
O give thanks unto the Lord	0	6
O God, Whose nature and property Sol-fa, 1½d.	0	2
O Lord Jesu Christ	0	3
O Lord, my God (Solomon's Prayer) Sol-fa, 1½d. Welsh Words, 3c. Sol-fa, 1½c.	0	2
O Lord, Thou art my God	1	6
O worship the Lord. S.S.A.A. (From Ascribe unto the Lord)	0	4
Praise the Lord, my soul	0	8
Thou Judge of quick and dead (from Let us lift up our heart) Sol-fa, 2d.	0	4
Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace Sol-fa, 2d.	0	4
To my request and earnest cry Sol-fa, 2d.	0	2
Wash me throughly Sol-fa, 2d.	0	4
Wilderness, The Sol-fa, 3d.	0	8

HYMNS AND CAROL.

Brightest and best. Carol	0	1½
Church's one foundation, The (Aurelia). Hymn	0	1½
Lift your heads, ye gates of God (Processional). Hymn Words only, 2s. per 100.	0	1½
Onward, Christian soldiers (Excelsior). Hymn	0	1½

SERVICES, Etc.

MORNING AND EVENING SERVICE in E. Edited, with a Preface, by G. M. Garrett	4	0
Or, separately: Te Deum, 8d.; Jubilate, 8d.; Communion Service, 1s. 6d.; Nicene Creed, 4d.; Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, 1s.; Benedictus, 6d.
MORNING AND EVENING SERVICE in F (Chant Form) (Short Score)	0	6
Or, separately: Te Deum, 2d. (Sol-fa, 2d.); Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, 3d.; ditto (Unison), 3d.
Ditto. Te Deum and Jubilate Folio	3	0
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis Folio	1	6
MORNING AND EVENING SERVICE in F	1	6
Or, separately: Te Deum, 6d. (Sol-fa, 2d.); Jubilate, 3d.; Kyrie, Sanctus, and Creed, 6d.; Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, 6d.

SERVICES, Etc.—continued.

	s.	d.
BENEDICITE, OMNIA OPERA	0	2
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS in F (Chant Service, Letter B)	0	2
TE DEUM, JUBILATE, MAGNIFICAT, AND NUNC DIMITTIS in G (Chant Service)	1	0
RESPONSES TO THE COMMANDMENTS in C sharp minor, E, and F each	0	3
FOUR-FOLD AMEN	0	1½
HUNDREDTH PSALM, THE, arranged with various Harmony for Choirs	1	6
LEAD ME, LORD (Vestry Prayer)	0	1½

PART-SONGS.

At that dread hour (Faith). A.T.T.B.	0	4
I wish to tune my quiv'ring lyre. A.T.T.B.B.	0	6
Shall I tell you whom I love?	0	4
When fierce, conflicting passions. A.T.T.B.B.	0	8

SONGS.

Butterfly, The	2	0
By the rivers of Babylon	1	6
Orphan hours, the year is dead	1	0
Wert thou like me	2	0

ORGAN MUSIC.

ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS. Edited by G. M. Garrett:—

1.	Andante in G (3-4 Time)	1	6
2.	Larghetto with Variations (F sharp minor)	1	6
3.	Andante in E flat (2-4 Time)	1	6
4.	Andante in E flat (C Time)	2	3
5.	Andante in F	2	3
6.	Choral Song and Fugue in C	2	3
7.	Voluntary (Grave and Andante)	1	6
8.	Andante Cantabile in G (C Time)	1	6
9.	Introduction and Fugue (C sharp minor)	3	0
9a.	Introduction and Fugue (First Edition)	2	3
10.	National Anthem with Variations in G	3	0
	Selection of Psalm Tunes, arranged as Studies for the Organ with Pedal obbligato:—
11.	Psalm Tunes (St. Stephen, St. Matthew, 104th Psalm)	2	3
12.	Psalm Tunes (St. David, St. Bride, St. Ann, 100th Psalm)	2	3
13.	Psalm Tunes (Westminster, Angel's Hymn, Irish, St. Mary)	2	3
14.	Psalm Tunes (Windsor, Liverpool, Bedford, Manchester)	1	6
15.	Voluntary in C. Edited by John E. West	1	6
	An Air composed for Holsworthy Church Bells, varied	3	0
	Andante in A	3	0
	Andante in E minor	2	0
	Choral Song, A ("Village Organist." Book 47)	1	6
	Larghetto in F minor	1	0
	Studio for the Organ (a Series of Exercises in the strict and free styles)	2	3
	Voluntary (Grave and Andante)	1	6
	Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace. Anthem (arr. Westbrook), "Young Organist," No. 11	1	6

HARMONIUM MUSIC.

(ARRANGED.)

All go unto one place (Elliott, Harmonium Treasury, 21)	1	6
Solomon's Prayer ,, ,, ,, 23)	1	6
Andante and Chorale ,, ,, ,, 24)	1	6
Lead me, Lord O worship the Lord ,, Voluntaries, Book 1)	1	6
Blessed are they Moderato ,, ,, ,, 3)	1	6
Gloria in excelsis ,, ,, ,, 5)	1	6

PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

March and Rondo	4	6
March, singly	1	6

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Y.B.P. THREE LISTS.

*RECENT CHORAL WORKS.

NO.	TITLE.	COMPOSER.	PRICE. O.N. S.-F.
261.	Faire is the Heaven (Motet, S.A.T.B.) ...	W. H. Harris	6d.
259.	Wassail (S.A.T.B.)	C. Wood	3d.
249.	The girl I left behind me (Air with Variations, T.T.B.B.)	C. Wood	9d.
248.	Come lasses and lads (Air with Variations, S.A.T.B.)	C. Wood	1s.
236.	On Music (S.A.T.B.) ...	Sir C. Stanford	4d.

*RECENT CHURCH MUSIC.

A37.	O come, Thou Spirit divinest (Motet, S.S.T.)	John Amner	2d.
A36.	The Voice of Joy and Health (Motet, S.A.T.B.)	Giuseppe Jannaconi	4d.
A35.	Ave Verum (Motet, S.A.T.B.) ...	J. M. Tatton	3d.
A34.	An Easter Carol (S.A.T.B.) ...	C. Wood	3d.
A32.	Glory and honour (S.S.C.C.T.T.B.B.)	C. Wood	6d.

RECENT MISCELLANEOUS PUBLICATIONS.

A LITTLE ORGAN BOOK. 12 Organ Pieces by well-known composers. Dedicated to the memory of Sir C. H. H. PARRY. Paper, 6*s.* 6*d.*; cloth, 10*s.* 6*d.*

KIKIRIKEE. 34 Unison Songs for Children. Words by Christina Rossetti. Music by well-known composers. 3*s.*

* Specimen Copies, or Approval Parcels Post Free, from

H. F. W. DEANE & SONS THE YEAR BOOK PRESS LTD.,
31, MUSEUM STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

CHURCH MUSIC
RECENT ISSUES

THY HARVEST-TIDE. Anthem for Harvest or General Use (TR.A.T.B.), by LESLIE DUPÈRE. Price 6*d.*

COME TO US, WE BESEECH THEE. Anthem for Compline (S.A.T.B.), by WILLIAM BYRD. Adapted by W. BARCLAY SQUIRE. Price 8*d.*

COME, O CREATOR SPIRIT, COME. The Mechlin tune, "Veni, Creator Spiritus." (S.S.A.T.B.) Set by WALTER GANDY. Price 6*d.*

GEOFFREY SHAW.

EVENING SERVICE (Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis). (TR.A.T.B.) Price 8*d.*

MARTIN SHAW.

EVENING SERVICE (Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis). (S.A.T.B.) Price 6*d.*

ADAM CARSE.

PRAISE THE LORD, OH MY SOUL. Anthem for Church Festivals. (S.A.T.B.) Price 1*s.* (Band parts on hire.)

A. SIDNEY MARKS.

COMMUNION SERVICE in B♭. (S.A.T.B.) Price 1*s.* 6*d.*
COMMUNION SERVICE in D. (S.S.A.) Price 1*s.* 6*d.*

Complete list of Church Music, also Organ Works, free on application.

SPECIMEN COPIES OF ANY OF THE ABOVE AT HALF PRICE (post free).

JOSEPH WILLIAMS LIMITED,
32, GREAT PORTLAND STREET, LONDON, W.1.

NEARLY EIGHT MILLION COPIES OF CALEB SIMPER'S Compositions in Church Music now sold.

GLORY AND STRENGTH.
COMPOSED BY CALEB SIMPER.

Price 5*d.*; Sol-fa, 3*d.*

Specimen FREE to C. M., from the Composer, Barnstaple.

A new, inspiring, and interesting Anthem for Festivals and Whitsuntide. Contains spirited, striking choruses with richly harmonized soft movements. Also powerful and expressive Bass Solo. The first Choirmaster who heard it played exclaimed, "Splendid! splendid! 24 copies, please!"

Also an easier Anthem, "MY PEACE." 4*d.*; Sol-fa, 3*d.* Pleasing, melodious, and very effective.

London: A. WEEKES & Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.1.
Chicago, U.S.A.: CLAYTON F. SUMMY Co., 429, S. Wabash Ave.

These Compositions are exceptionally Melodious, Interesting, and effective. Have attained world-wide appreciation.

POPULAR WHITSUN ANTHEMS.
COMPOSED BY EDWYN A. CLARE.

	HE WILL GUIDE YOU	4th 1000	4d.
	New. A great favourite and much appreciated.
*	PEACE I LEAVE WITH YOU	24th 1000	4d.
*	ABIDE IN MY LOVE	15th 1000	4d.
	AND WHEN THE DAY OF PENTECOST...	14th 1000	4d.
	PRAISE THE LORD, O JERUSALEM	50th 1000	4d.
	Sung at Choral Festivals, Wem and Downpatrick Cathedral.
*	THE LORD REIGNETH	22nd 1000	4d.

* Also issued in Tonic Sol-fa.

London: NOVELLO & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.
New York: THE H. W. GRAY Co., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.

JUST PUBLISHED.

ANTHEM.

"GUIDE US IN THY WAY, O CHRIST"

FOR BASS SOLO AND CHORUS.

BY THE
REV. W. D. V. DUNCOMBE.

Price Fourpence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

START THE TERM WITH PROGRESSIVE STEPS

THE MODERN INSTRUCTOR
FOR THE PIANOFORTE

BY J. A. O'NEILL

Author of "A Practical Guide to the Theory of Music," "Exercises for the Weak Fingers," "Melodious Technique," "Picturesque Technique."

Containing features of new and special interest. Valuable hints are given on practising, both in technique, ear-training, and memorising.

"Progressive Steps" is a modern Tutor, embodying the latest ideas concerning piano playing, especially in the early stages. It is well within the comprehension of young minds. It is different from the old-fashioned Tutor, which was often musically harmful.

The main object of "Progressive Steps" is to help pupils in their practice, by suggesting ways and means for making it less irksome and more successful.

In Two Books. Each 2*s.* net.
English or Continental fingering.

Copies of "Progressive Steps" can be had on approval, as well as copies of the Rowland Series of Piano Albums. Thematic List and descriptive leaflet regarding "Progressive Steps" sent free on request.

ROWLAND'S, 10, TALBOT MANSIONS,
MUSEUM STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

SOLOS FROM THE CHURCH CANTATAS

OF

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH.

In Twelve Books—each Book, One Shilling and Sixpence.

FIRST SET.

SOPRANO.

Air — WITHIN MY HEART OF HEARTS ("A Stronghold Sure").
Air — OUR JESUS HATH FOR AYE ("God goeth up").
Air — MY HEART EVER TRUSTING ("God so loved the world").
Air — O GRANT US, MIGHTY LORD ("Jesus, now will we praise Thee").
Air — SIGHING, WEEPING ("My spirit was in heaviness").

TENOR.

Air — LORD, TO US THYSELF BE SHOWING ("Bide with us").
Recit. — WHY HAST THOU THEN ("My Spirit was in heaviness").
Air — FAST MY BITTER TEARS ,, ,, ,,
Air — REJOICE, O MY SPIRIT ,, ,, ,,
Recit. — THE MIGHTY GUARDIAN ("Thou Guide of Israel").
Air — HIS FACE MY SHEPHERD ,, ,, ,,
Air — AND WHY ART THOU, MY SOUL ("When will God recall").

ALTO.

Air — THOU, WHOSE PRAISES NEVER END ("Bide with us").
Recit. — THE FATHER HATH APPOINTED HIM ("God goeth up").
Air — MY SPIRIT HIM DESCRIES ("God goeth up").
Air — INTO THY HANDS ("God's time is best").
Air — REJOICE, YE SOULS, ELECT AND HOLY ("O Light Everlasting").

BASS.

Recit. — HE COMES, THE LORD OF LORDS ("God goeth up").
Air — 'TIS HE, WHO ALL ALONE ("God goeth up").
Recit. — IT IS NOT MINE ("God so loved the world").
Air — ON MY BEHALF ,, ,, ,,
Recit. — YEA, THIS THY WORD ("Thou Guide of Israel").
Air — WHOM JESUS DEIGNS ,, ,,
Air — YET SILENCE ("When will God recall").

SECOND SET.

SOPRANO.

Air — OPEN WIDE, MY HEART ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — FATHER, WHAT I PROFFER ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — COME, VISIT, YE GLOWING ("How brightly shines").
Air — I HAVE WAITED FOR THE LORD ("If thou but sufferest").

TENOR.

Recit. — THE SAVIOUR NOW APPEARETH ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — COME, JESU, COME ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — WHAT VOICE IS WITH THE TEMPEST ("From depths of woe").
Air — TUNEFUL HARPS AND VOICES ("How brightly shines").
Air — THOU ART MY GOD ("Lord, rebuke me not").

ALTO.

Air — GOD'S ENSAMPLE THUS TO FOLLOW ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — JESUS SLEEPS ("Jesus sleeps, what hope remaineth").
Recit. — INCLINE THINE EAR ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — THE LORD HATH HEARD ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — ALL EARTHLY POWERS FROM GOD INHERIT ("Praise thou the Lord").

BASS.

Air — THE PASCHAL VICTIM HERE WE SEE ("Christ lay in death's dark prison").
Air — DO THINE ALMS ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — WITH JESUS WILL I GO ("Wailing, crying").
Recit. — AH, WHEN ON THAT GREAT DAY ("Watch ye, pray ye").
Air — BLESSED RESURRECTION DAY ,, ,,

THIRD SET.

SOPRANO.

Recit. — O LORD, HEAR ME WHEN I CALL ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — HOW LONG, O LORD ,, ,,
Air — O PRAISE THE LORD ("O Praise the Lord").
Recit. — O JESU, OUR REDEEMER ("There is nought of soundness").
Air — HEARKEN WHEN WITH TREMBLING ACCENTS ,, ,,
Air — THOUGH REVILING TONGUES ASSAIL ME ("Watch ye, pray ye").

TENOR.

Recit. — LORD, WHY SO FAR AWAY ("Jesus sleeps").
Air — IN BILLOWS THE RIVERS OF BELIAL ("Jesus sleeps").
Recit. — O HAPPY TOWN, O FAVOURED LAND ("Praise thou the Lord").
Air — O BLEST ARE ALL THAT FEAR HIM ,, ,, ,,
Recit — REJECT IT NOT ("Sages of Sheba").
Air — SAVIOUR, TAKE ME FOR THINE OWN ("Sages of Sheba").
Air — UPLIFT YOUR HEADS ON HIGH ("Watch ye, pray ye").

ALTO.

Air — BE WELCOME, THOU GREAT ANGEL ("O teach me, Lord").
Air — AH, TARRY YET ("Praise our God").
Air — GOD IS EVER SUN AND SHIELD ("The Lord is a sun and shield").
Recit. — BE STEADFAST IN AFFLICTION ("Wailing, crying").
Air — PAIN AND SORROW WORK SALVATION ,, ,,

BASS.

Air — GOD, WHOSE POWER ("Let songs of rejoicing").
Recit. — ALTHOUGH AN HOST ENCAMP ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — O LORD, THY MERCY ,, ,,
Air — FARE YE WELL ("O teach me, Lord").
Recit. — THESE THINGS THAT ISAIAH OF OLD ("The Sages of Sheba").
Air — GOLD OF OPHIR IS BUT VAIN ,, ,,
Air — AH, WHERE SHALL I SUCCOUR ("There is nought of soundness").

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Lay of St. Cuthbert

WORDS FROM

THE INGOLDSBY LEGENDS

SET TO MUSIC FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

BY

WILLIAM H. SPEER

Vocal Score, 2s.; 1st Violin, 2s.; 2nd Violin, 2s.; Viola, 2s.; Violoncello, 1s.; Basso, 1s. 6d. Wind Parts, MS.

PRESS NOTICES.

"The Concert given by Mr. Edward Mason's Choir in Queen's Hall on the 6th inst. will further enhance its reputation. The most ambitious work performed was Dr. William H. Speer's 'The Lay of St. Cuthbert,' which received its first performance. The 'Ingoldsby Legends' seem to be in demand by modern composers, and Dr. Speer has chosen one which is well devised for such a purpose. The composer has well realised the humour in the poem, and translated it into musical terms which excited the hearty smiles and cordial appreciation of those privileged to hear it. Cleverness stamps every stanza, but it is never employed to the detriment of the spirit of the work. Its length and treatment rank it high amongst modern productions, and we shall enjoy hearing it again."—Musical News.

"It is a fairly simple piece of musical humour, and delighted the large audience."—Daily Mail.

"Dr. W. H. Speer has done his work in a way that indicates that the subject has won his complete sympathy, and has inspired him to put forward one of his best efforts."—Morning Post.

"The broad humour and whimsical fancies of the text are skilfully reflected and developed in the score."—The Scotsman.

"A brilliant setting of 'The Lay of St. Cuthbert.'"—Musical Standard.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN

BY

ROBERT BROWNING.

SET TO MUSIC FOR SOPRANO SOLO AND CHORUS

BY

GEORGE RATHBONE.

Price Two Shillings.

Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

FOUR TENNYSON LYRICS

SET TO MUSIC BY

PERCY E. FLETCHER.

1. A LULLABY.
2. THE CITY CHILD.
3. THE REIGN OF THE ROSES.
4. THE THROSTLE.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Produced at the Leeds Musical Festival, 1925

FIRST CHORAL SYMPHONY

THE WORDS SELECTED FROM THE POEMS OF

JOHN KEATS

AND SET TO MUSIC FOR

SOPRANO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

BY

GUSTAV HOLST.

(Op. 41.)

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

FULL SCORE (in the Press) PRICE £3 3s.

Separately from the above:

Ode on a Grecian Urn

FOR CHORUS AND SMALL ORCHESTRA.

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

Band Parts of the Complete Work and of the

SCHERZO

which may be played as an Orchestral Piece without Chorus may be had on hire.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

SCHOOL MARCHES

FOR PIANOFORTE SOLO

BOOK III.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

CONTENTS.

Arrival of the Visitors...	H. Hofmann
Bright and Buxom Lasses, from "Martha"	Flotow
Instrumental Band, The	Percy E. Fletcher
Little March, A	J. D. Davis
March from "Egmont"	Beethoven
March from "St. Polycarp"... ...	F. A. G. Ouseley
March	Th. Kullak
March from "Tannhäuser"	Wagner
Marching off to Bed	Myles B. Foster
March of Priests, from "The Magic Flute"	Mozart
Soldiers' Chorus, from "Il Trovatore"	Verdi
Toy Soldiers' March	Tschaikowsky

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Produced at the Gloucester Musical Festival.

Just Published.

A SPRIG OF SHAMROCK

FOUR OLD IRISH AIRS.

For Soprano or Tenor Voice, with String Quartet or Pianoforte Accompaniment.

POEMS BY

F. W. HARVEY.

MUSIC ADAPTED AND ARRANGED BY

A. HERBERT BREWER.

Price Three Shillings and Sixpence

STRING PARTS, Price 8*s*.

An Edition for Contralto or Baritone is also published.

Price 3*s*. 6*d*.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

Produced at the Gloucester Musical Festival.

Just Published.

LOVE INCARNATE

A SETTING OF LINES

By ROBERT BROWNING.

With a Verse of the Hymn, "Jesu, dulcis memoria,"

BY

ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX.

Translated by the Rev. J. M. NEALE.

Composed for Chorus, Semi-Chorus, Orchestra, and Organ

BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

(Op. 37.)

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

HIAWATHA'S WEDDING-FEAST

AND

THE DEATH OF MINNEHAHA

COMPOSED BY

S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR.

ARRANGED FOR PIANOFORTE SOLO

BY

JOHN POINTER.

Price Five Shillings and Sixpence each.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

Just Published.

The Lording's Daughter

BALLAD.

WORDS

ELIZABETHAN.

MUSIC BY

EDWARD GERMAN.

TWO KEYS.

Price Two Shillings each.

London: Novello and Company, Limited

Just Published.

ON A NANKIN PLATE

SONG.

WORDS BY

AUSTIN DOBSON

MUSIC BY

HARVEY GRACE.

TWO KEYS.

Price Two Shillings each.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

Just Published.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS.

Book 273.

THIRTY SONGS

BY

FRANZ SCHUBERT.

BOTH NOTATIONS.

Price Two Shillings.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

HOW TO CHOOSE NEW SONGS AND CHORAL MUSIC.

If you require New Songs or Choral Music and do not quite know how to make your choice, the ordinary stereotyped list will not help you. What you want is a comprehensive list containing full details of vocal music suitable for all occasions, and, what is more important, THEMATIC extracts of the music.

Paxton's Vocal List, C. 201, is the most useful reference list published. Send for a copy gratis to-day.

Specimen copies of publications will gladly be sent on approval to Teachers, Conductors, Festival Committees, and others, enclosing professional card or letter-heading, and mentioning the "Musical Times."

W. PAXTON & Co., Ltd.,
22, High Street,
New Oxford Street,
London, W.C.1.

NOW READY

CHANTEYS AND SEA SONGS

FOR FOUR-PART MALE CHORUS WITH SOLOS FOR TENOR AND BASS.

COLLECTED AND ARRANGED BY HOWARD CARR.

This notable collection of rousing chanteys was mostly gathered in the Southern Hemisphere, where sailing ships still occasionally ply their gallant trade. Many of the chanteys were transcribed while the crews were actually at work.

CONTENTS.

1. Prelude and Chantey ... "A-roving"
2. Chantey ... ... "Rio Grande"
3. Sea Song ... "Come, loose every sail"
4. Chantey ... ... "Whiskey!"
5. Chantey ... ..."Blow, boys, blow!"
6. Chantey ... ... "Hanging Johnny"
7. Chantey ... "Blow the man down"
8. Chantey ... ... "Sally Brown"
9. Sea Song ... "Sling the flowing bowl"
10. Sea Song ... ... "A Jug of this"
11. Sea Song ... ... "Blow, ye winds!"

Optional bridges and endings are given so that the work can be performed as a whole or each number separately.

Price 1/6 net.

Specimen copy will gladly be sent on approval to Teachers, Conductors, Festival Committees, &c., sending card and mentioning the "Musical Times."

W. PAXTON & Co., Ltd., 22, High Street, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.1.

Send for Complete Vocal and Choral Catalogue, C. 201, gratis.

Just Published.

OVERTURE IN D MINOR

COMPOSED BY

HANDEL.

ARRANGED FOR THE ORGAN

BY

H. F. ELLINGFORD.

FROM THE ORCHESTRAL TRANSCRIPTION

BY

EDWARD ELGAR.

Price Two Shillings and Threepence.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

Just Published.

THE

ORGAN WORKS

OF

RHEINBERGER

BY

HARVEY GRACE.

Cloth Gilt, xii. + 130 pages.

WITH 127 MUSICAL ILLUSTRATIONS.

Price Five Shillings net.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

Just Published.

TWELVE

Short Introductory Voluntaries

FOR THE ORGAN

BY

W. G. ALCOCK.

Price Three Shillings.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

Just Published.

No. 101.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

EAR-TRAINING

INCLUDING

MUSICAL APPRECIATION AND RHYTHMIC MOVEMENTS.

BY

MABEL CHAMBERLAIN.

Complete, Six Shillings,
Paper Boards 7s.
Or,
In Two Books: Letterpress and Illustrations, 4s.
Music only, 3s.

The Ear-Training Course outlined in this book is intended primarily for Class use, but if a judicious selection be made from the exercises, the course can be used with equal benefit by private teachers for individual pupils. Senior pupils and students who desire to Study music, and who have received little or no previous tuition, cannot do better than work rapidly through these progressive exercises and tests. A Prospectus will be sent on application.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

No. 63.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

BREATHING

FOR

VOICE-PRODUCTION

(Rewritten and brought up to date).

PART I.

OF

EURHYTHM: THOUGHT IN ACTION

BY

H. H. HULBERT.

Price ... Three Shillings.
Paper Boards, 4s.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

Just Published.

No. 100.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

PRONUNCIATION

FOR

VOICE-PRODUCTION

FROM

EURHYTHM: THOUGHT IN ACTION.

BY

H. H. HULBERT.

Price, One Shilling and Sixpence.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

EMPIRE SONG BOOK

A COLLECTION OF SUITABLE MUSIC FOR CHILDREN'S FESTIVALS WHICH IS SO ARRANGED THAT IT MAY BE PERFORMED WITH OR WITHOUT ACTIONS.

"SHE STANDS A THOUSAND-WINTERED TREE"

"AN EMPIRE SONG"

AND THE

MEDLEYS

COMPOSED BY

PERCY E. FLETCHER.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Vocal Parts (Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations combined), Sixpence.

Orchestral Parts may be obtained.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS.
BOOK 274.

FOLK-SONGS

FOR SCHOOLS.

COLLECTED AND ARRANGED BY

CECIL J. SHARP.

No.	SET IX.
1407	BLACKBIRDS AND THRUSHES
1408	DABBLING IN THE DEW
1409	THE BONNY LIGHTER-BOY
1410	THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON
1411	THE TREE IN THE WOOD
1412	THE BOLD FISHERMAN
1413	MY BOY WILLIE
1414	SCARBOROUGH FAIR
1415	SEARCHING FOR LAMBS

Price Twopence each number.

Price One Shilling.

Voice Parts only, 4*d*.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

OLD ENGLISH
VIOLIN MUSIC

EDITED BY

ALFRED MOFFAT.

PREFATORY NOTE.

Although considerable attention has been given to the resuscitation of Church Music, Glees and Madrigals, Organ and even Harpsichord Music by the older English composers, very little has been done to make known the large mass of music for the Violin written by English musicians from the time of Purcell to the close of the 18th century. These works for the most part consist of Suites or Sonatas written for a solo violin with a figured bass, or for two violins and violoncello with a figured bass for the harpsichord or organ; another favourite form was the Concerto grosso.

It is with the object of making known to the public a selection of the best of these compositions that the present series has been undertaken. ALFRED MOFFAT.

			s.	d.
No. 1.	SONATA in G major ...	... JAMES LATES	3	0
,, 2.	SONATA in D minor ...	... HENRY ECCLES	3	0
,, 3.	SONATA in B flat major	...WILLIAM BABELL	3	0
,, 4.	SONATA in G minor ...	... JOHN STANLEY	3	0
,, 5.	SONATA in A major ...	... JOHN COLLETT	3	0
,, 6.	TRIO-SONATA in E minor	THOMAS AUGUSTINE ARNE	4	6
,, 7.	SONATA in D major ...	... RICHARD JONES	3	0
,, 8.	TRIO-SONATA in D minor	... WILLIAM BOYCE	4	6
,, 9.	THREE PIECES	... WILLIAM BOYCE	3	0
,, 10.	SONATA in E major ...	CHARLES MACKLEAN	3	0
,, 11.	SONATA in G minor ...	... WILLIAM CROFT	3	0
,, 12.	SONATA in D minor ...	... JOSEPH GIBBS	3	0
,, 13.	SONATA in D minor ...	...JOHN HUMPHRIES	3	0
,, 14.	SONATA in A minor ...	...THOMAS VINCENT	3	0

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TEXT-BOOKS

BY

ALBERT HAM, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O.

OUTLINES OF MUSICAL FORM

WITH ANALYSES FROM

WELL-KNOWN CLASSICAL WORKS.

Price ... Five Shillings.

"In all respects this is an admirable little work, with no waste, no hiatus of a serious nature, handy in size, and with a practical scheme well carried through."

Dr. C. W. PEARCE, in alluding to the above work, says:

"Quite the best I have ever seen, and I shall lose no opportunity for recommending it."

THE RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC AND ELEMENTARY HARMONY.

THIRD EDITION.

Price ... Five Shillings.

"Dr. Ham's admirable little work may be cordially recommended."—Musical Times.

ANTHEMS: The Desert shall rejoice. S. or T. Solo and Chorus (S.A.T.B.) ... ... 3d.

I heard the Voice of Jesus say. Bar. Solo and Chorus (T.T.B.B.) ... ... 3d.

PART-SONG: Music, when soft voices die (S.A.T.B.) ... ... 3d.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

JAMES LYON, Mus. Bac.

ELEMENTS OF HARMONY

3*s.* 6*d.*

Answers to Questions and Exercises on the Elements of Harmony.

2*s.* 6*d.*

BANKS & SON, Music Publishers, YORK.

ARNOLD CAPLETON

Three Meditations for Spiritualists.

PIANO SOLO.

Time of performance, 12 minutes.

Price 2*s.* (money order), post free.

Address: A. CAPLETON,

Palacky St. 31, Prague XVI, Czechoslovakia.

Just Published.

SIX SEA SONGS

ARRANGED FOR

PIANOFORTE DUET

BY

GEOFFREY SHAW.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

EURHYTHM: THOUGHT IN ACTION

The Principles and Practice of Vocal and Physical Therapy.

DESIGNED FOR THE USE OF TEACHERS AND STUDENTS OF VOCAL AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION

By H. H. HULBERT

Capt. R.A.M.C., M.A. Oxford, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., Etc.

176 Pages, Octavo Size, Cloth, Gilt Lettered - - - - Price Seven Shillings net.

SHORT SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTERS.

I.—DEFINITION OF EURHYTHM. II.—THE ENGLISH PHYSIQUE AND ARTISTIC MOVEMENT. Science and games of skill—Movements of novice and master-man—Co-ordination in movement—Discipline of games. III.—THE POISE OF THE BODY AND TONICITY. Common deformities—Correct poise—Correct figure—Lumbar curve the centre of balance—Degrees of tonicity—Position of attention—Special exercises. IV.—THE SCIENCE OF APPRECIATION AND THE CONCEPTION OF THE BEAUTIFUL. Power of imagery—Knowledge of self—Kinds of appreciation—The five senses and experience—Sense of touch in music and games. V.—THE ART OF EXPRESSION AND CONTROL. Three nervous levels—Will and movement—The guiding sensation of movement-feeling—Self-control of the actor and public speaker—Euphonetics. VI.—THE CENTRAL APPARATUS OF SPEECH. VII.—THE SOUNDS OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. VIII.—BREATHING FOR VOICE. Diagrammatic sketch of apparatus—Different kinds of breathing—Effects of types of breathing on voice hygiene and figure. IX.—THE ARTICULATORY APPARATUS. X.—THE LARYNX. XI.—HYGIENE FOR VOICE-USERS AND ORDINARY HEALTH EXERCISES. Voice-user's throat—Physiological congestion of throat—Voice-training prevents voice-user's throat—Loss of health through civilization—Physical exercises for health—Positions: movements of arms, head, body, and legs: balance exercises, jumping, and marching XII.—EURHYTHMICS.—THE PRACTICE OF EURHYTHMICS.

"It was very much wanted, and now that it has arrived it proves to be the best book on the subject we have ever seen . . . One would like to dwell lovingly on every stage of this monumental work did space permit, but it will only allow of a general commendation of every word from the beginning . . . to the end, which consists of music to accompany the rhythmic physical exercises."—The Morning Post, February 17, 1922.

"No teacher of singing should be without this wonderful book."—Musical Opinion.

"This is a thoughtful and thought-compelling book which touches life at most points. Eurhythm the author defines as perfect harmony, and discusses with a fine enthusiasm the practical means of bringing about in the individual this desirable condition. The book should be of great value to teachers of singing and physical education, while the intelligent student can also derive great benefit from a careful reading."—Glasgow Herald.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

EDITED, ARRANGED IN GROUPS, AND THE FINGERING REVISED AND SUPPLEMENTED BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

THIS Collection of Studies is intended to illustrate the various elements of a complete course of pianoforte technique, and to provide students with the means of attacking and overcoming the different special difficulties which have to be encountered. With this view, the Studies have been arranged in groups, those in each group being placed in progressive order, and having reference to some one particular difficulty. The greater part of the Studies themselves have been selected from the standard works of the most eminent Study-writers, and with these are included numerous others, which, though of equally great practical utility, have hitherto been less generally accessible.

1.	FIVE-FINGER STUDIES	Part 1
2.*	,,	,, 2
3.	SCALES	Part 1
4.	,,	,, 2
5.	BROKEN CHORDS	Part 1
6.	,,	,, 2
7.	,,	,, 3
8.	,,	,, 4
9.	,,	,, 5
10.	LEFT HAND	Part 1
11.	,, ,,	,, 2
12.	,, ,,	,, 3
13.	,, ,,	,, 4
14.*	ARPEGGIO	Part 1
15.	,,	,, 2
16.	,,	,, 3
17.	VELOCITY	Part 1
18.	,,	,, 2
19.	,,	,, 3
20.	,,	,, 4
21.	,,	,, 5
22.	,,	,, 6
23.	,,	,, 7
24.	FIGURES IN SEQUENCE	Part 1
25.*	,,	,, 2
26.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	Part 1
27.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	,, 2
28.	SHAKES	Part 1
29.	,,	,, 2
30.	,,	,, 3
31.	DOUBLE NOTES	Part 1
32.	,, ,,	,, 2
33.	,, ,,	,, 3
34.	,, ,,	,, 4
35.	OCTAVES	Part 1
36.*	,,	,, 2
37.	CHORDS	Part 1
38.	,,	,, 2
39.*	STACCATO
40.	REPETITION	Part 1
41.*	REPETITION AND TREMOLO	,, 2
42.	,, ,,	,, 3
43.*	PART-PLAYING	Part 1
44.	,, ,,	,, 2
45.*	ORNAMENTS	Part 1
46.	,,	,, 2
47.	ACCOMPANIED MELODY	Part 1
48.	,, ,,	,, 2
49.	EXTENSIONS AND SKIPS	Part 1
50.*	,, ,,	,, 2
51.	RHYTHM	Part 1
52.*	,,	,, 2
53.	EXERCISES FOR THE WEAKER FINGERS. By J. A. O'NEILL.
54.	WRIST STUDIES (Handgelenksübungen). By ARNOLD KRUG.
55.	EXERCISES FOR FACILITATING INDEPENDENCE OF THE FINGERS (Übungen für die Selbständigkeit der Finger). By ARNOLD KRUG.
56.	PRELIMINARY STUDIES IN PLAYING POLYPHONIC MUSIC (Vorübungen für das polyphone Spiel). By ARNOLD KRUG.

* These Books contain Studies composed by Mr. Franklin Taylor specially for this Series.

FIFTY-SIX BOOKS, PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE EACH.

FROM THE ABOVE:

SELECTED PIANOFORTE STUDIES

PROGRESSIVELY ARRANGED BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

THE present collection of Studies is designed to provide teachers with a short course of Pianoforte Technique adapted to the needs of the average pupil, the intention being to spare the teacher the labour of choosing a sufficiently varied selection from the large mass of material existing, and at the same time to ensure that the different departments of technique shall be undertaken in the order which experience has proved to be the most beneficial.

The Studies are grouped in two Sets, and are so arranged that the different Books in which they are contained may be taken in consecutive order, but pupils who are already further advanced than the elementary stage represented by Set I. may commence at once with Set II., which will be found to be complete in itself, and to illustrate all the essential elements of technique.

Where additional studies are desired, or studies on certain subjects which are not touched upon in this series, the larger collection, published under the title of "Progressive Studies" (from which the present examples have been selected), is of course available.

IN TWO SETS (EIGHT BOOKS), PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH BOOK.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

A Remarkable New Work on Singing

THE MELBA METHOD

DAME MELBA'S
Personal Advice on
The Art of Singing

PUBLISHED at the climax of a wonderful career, Dame Melba's description of her Method of Voice Production and Singing is of outstanding consequence to every vocal teacher and student.

This historic work unfolds the principles which have made Melba's voice so flawless in its purity, such a miracle of flexibility, and so perfect in its preservation.

"The Melba Method" is so lucid and so practical that teachers and students can watch every step of Melba's Work, and understand how her wonderful voice has become what it is.

All the chit-chat of the average "celebrity" has been avoided in this book. Instead, Dame Melba takes the student into the very workshop of her art, and shows why and how each principle is applied: covering every essential point with the clarity which comes only from those who really understand the art of singing.

To possess this book is to own a memento of this great artiste, and to gain the advice of a singer whose name will be conjured with for generations to come.

COMPLETE, PRICE SIX SHILLINGS NET.
(By Post, 6*s.* 6*d.*)

CHAPPELL & CO., LTD., 50, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.1.
NEW YORK AND SYDNEY.

TWO MODERN CONCERTOS FOR PIANO AND ORCHESTRA.

ALEXANDER TCHEREPNIN
CONCERTO IN F MAJOR.

TRANSCRIPTION FOR TWO PIANOS, EDITED AND FINGERED BY I. PHILLIP.

PRICE, FIVE SHILLINGS NET.

The present Concerto is a fine piece of work in one movement, solidly constructed and abounding in brilliant and effective writing. An accomplished solo pianist will delight in solving its interesting technical problems, and find it an excellent vehicle for the display of his virtuosity, more especially as it presents at the same time a good deal of musical interest, and the accompaniment is admirably orchestrated.

GERMAINE TAILLEFERRE
BALLADE

ARRANGEMENT FOR TWO PIANOS BY THE COMPOSER.

PRICE, SIX SHILLINGS NET.

This work, which is dedicated to Ricardo Viñes, is one of the most remarkable recent compositions for piano and orchestra. The writing for the solo instrument is arrestingly novel, and not only confronts the player with a surprising number of new digital problems, but also rewards him with a succession of striking and unfamiliar effects.

The orchestral treatment is equally interesting, and the two elements blend perfectly in performance without sacrificing that feeling of two contending forces which is so exhilarating in a good piano concerto. At the same time the work loses nothing in a performance on two pianos, the composer having taken especial care in adjusting her arrangement perfectly to the special conditions.

ORCHESTRAL MATERIALS TO BE HAD ON HIRE.

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD., 11, GREAT MARLBOROUGH ST., LONDON, W.1.

London:—Printed by NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W.1. Thursday, April 1, 1926.

No. 999

THE MUSICAL TIMES

FOUNDED 1844

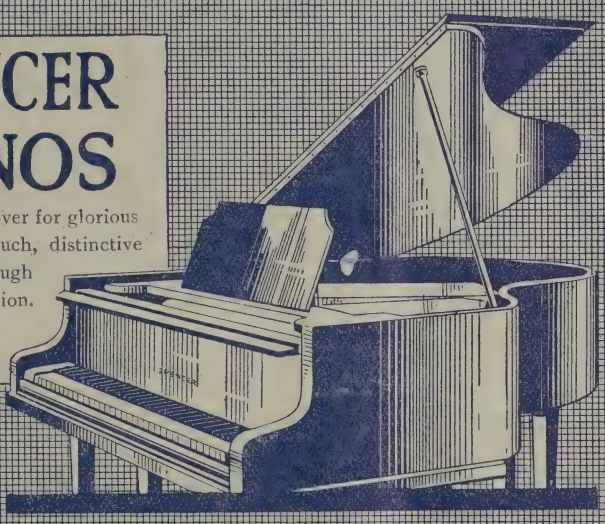
MAY 1, 1926

Price 6d.

SPENCER PIANOS

Famous the world over for glorious Tone, responsive Touch, distinctive Design, and thorough All-British Construction.

Write for Art Catalogue.



MURDOCHS (THE GREAT PIANO HOUSE) 461/463 Oxford Street LONDON W1

ARCHIBALD RAMSDEN, LTD.

Pianoforte Merchants.

Established 1864.

SCHIEDMAYER PIANOS.

Sole IMPORTERS of the

BEULHOFF PIANOS

also the horizontal Grand Pianos, manufactured by

BORD

PARIS.

65, Wigmore Street, London. 12, Park Row, Leeds.

Branch Establishments at Scarborough, Doncaster, Darlington, and Middlesbrough.

The Great English Piano.

ALLISON
PIANOS LIMITED

LEIGHTON ROAD, KENTISH TOWN, N.W.5.

Telephone: NORTH 1660.

— AND —

Telephone: LANGHAM 1418.

60, WIGMORE STREET, LONDON, W.1.

ESTEY ORGANS
ESTEY PIANOS

ONLY ONE GRADE OF EACH.
THE HIGHEST POSSIBLE.
Largest Stock of Organs in the World.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE POST FREE. CORRESPONDENCE INVITED.

Telephone: Museum 1317. Telegrams: "ESTEY WESTCENT, LONDON."

Estey Organ Co.
- 12 -
RATHBONE PLACE,
OXFORD STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

METZLER'S
OPERATIC TWO-PART SONGS
SIMPLY ARRANGED FOR BOYS' OR GIRLS' VOICES.
(OLD NOTATION AND TONIC SOL-FA).

1. THE SPINNING CHORUS - - - Wagner
("The Flying Dutchman.")
2. GIPSY AIR (Carmen) - - - - - - Bizet
3. MARCH and TOREADOR SONG (Carmen) - Bizet
4. THE BOYS' CHORUS (Carmen) - - - - Bizet

Price, 6d. each net.

SPECIMEN COPIES FREE.

METZLER & CO. (1920), Ltd., 142, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

(ESTABLISHED 1788.)

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 999—Vol. 67.
Registered at the General Post Office for Canadian Postage.

MAY 1 1926

Price 6d.; Postage, 2d.
Annual Subscription, post-free, 7s. 6d.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.
Principal: JOHN B. McEWEN, M.A., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

SPECIAL COURSES
FOR CONDUCTORS and OPERA.

THE TRAINING COURSE for TEACHERS which has now been entirely reorganized and associated with a definite examination and diploma, will be inaugurated Michaelmas Term, 1926.

L.R.A.M.

EXAMINATIONS held Michaelmas, Christmas, and Easter.

MIDSUMMER TERM begins Monday, May 3rd.

FORTNIGHTLY CONCERT, Wednesday, May 19th, at 8 p.m

Full information and prospectuses of the above on application.

J. A. CREIGHTON, Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7.

Patrons: { HIS MAJESTY THE KING / HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, C.V.O., M.A., MUS. DOC.
Honorary Secretary: GEORGE A. MACMILLAN, Esq., D. Litt.
Registrar: CLAUDE AVELING, Esq., M.A.
Bursar: E. J. N. POLKINHORNE, Hon. R.C.M.

The College offers a Complete Course of Musical Education to pupils of both sexes, both professional and amateur. Upwards of seventy Scholarships and Exhibitions are founded which provide free musical education.

Classes for Score Reading, Conducting, Training of Teachers, Musical Criticism, and Ballet, are held at the College.

The OPERA CLASS has the use of the fully-equipped College OPERA THEATRE, with SUNKEN ORCHESTRA.

EXAMINATIONS for Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.), in all subjects, held three times a year, in April, September, and December. Syllabus and all particulars may be obtained from the Registrar of the College.

Guildhall School of Music.

(Founded in 1880 by the Corporation of London, and managed by the Music Committee.)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4.

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE Lessons in any single Musical Subject, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera; Classes in Conducting.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £9 9s. and £12 12s. Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

Telephone: Cent. 4459; and City 5566.

MR. HERBERT HODGE will give an Organ Recital (1,905th) at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, on May 4th, and every Tuesday at 1 p.m

The Royal College of Organists.

Candidates for Fellowship are requested to note that in the first few copies of the current Regulations, the requirement for question 3 (C.) of the morning paper was left blank; it is Septet in E flat, Op. 20, Beethoven, Miniature Score. (Goodwin & Tabb.)

The SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Prelude (without Fugue) in E flat, "St. Ann." J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 6, page 28; Augener, p. 133; Peters, Vol. 3, No. 1.)

Choral Prelude on Newtoun, Charles Wood. (No. 6 of 16 Preludes, Vol. 1, Stainer & Bell.)

Fantasia in F minor, Mozart. (Best's arrangements, No. 76, p. 1000; Novello.) This arrangement only.

The selected pieces set for the July, 1926, A.R.C.O. Examination, differ from those set for January, 1926.

Candidates selecting Group 5 of the Associateship pieces are requested to note that the Choral Prelude, "All men must die" ("Alle Menschen müssen sterben") is on page 119, Book 15, of Novello's old edition, and on page 121, of the new edition.

The Choir-Training Diploma and Certificate Examinations will both begin on Tuesday, May 11th.

A FREE LECTURE will be delivered at the College at 11 o'clock on Saturday, May 15th, by Quencin M. Maclean, Esq., organist at Shepherd's Bush Pavilion. Subject, "The Cinema Organist's Profession." Chairman, H. Cart de Lafontaine, Esq. No tickets required.

All Candidates for the next Examinations must send in their Names for FELLOWSHIP by JUNE 10th, for ASSOCIATESHIP by JUNE 17th. In the case of NEW MEMBERS proposal forms duly filled up must be sent in before JUNE 3rd. No names will be entered after the above dates.

Examination Regulations, list of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College. Associateship or Fellowship, 6d. each (post free).

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

96 & 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1.

TOBIAS MATTHAY
PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON CLASS by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

Mr. FREDERICK MOORE takes alternate Wednesdays.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS.
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council.)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, MRS. MARION COLE, Secretary.

ROYAL
MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.
Principal: DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY.
Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are required to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the training of Teachers, approved by Teachers' Registration Council.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

New Pianoforte Professor, Mr. CLAUD BIGGS.
New Professor of Singing, Miss MARGUERITE SWALE.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE
SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus.Doc., LL.D.
Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D.Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1925-1926.

The Season consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 22 to December 20); WINTER TERM (January 14 to April 11); SUMMER TERM (April 20 to July 4).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—
H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.
Paradise Street, Birmingham.

GLASGOW
ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC.
SESSION 1926-27.

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 14 to December 5, December 7 to March 13, and March 15 to June 11.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes.
Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:
STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

MANCHESTER SCHOOL OF MUSIC.
16, ALBERT SQUARE.

Principal and Founder (1892): J. A. CROSS
Late Principal (1897-1925): ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras, Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, &c. Single Subjects taught.

New Pianoforte Professor:
MR. ROBERT GREGORY.

Mr. Gregory was Professor of the Pianoforte in Vienna for many years, having studied there under the eminent Leschetitzky, teacher of PADEREWSKI.

Prospectus from the Secretary, 16, Albert Square.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COMPETITIVE CHOIRS.

PRESIDENT:
JOHN E. TURNER, ESQ., HALIFAX MADRIGAL SOCIETY.

The objects are for the binding together for mutual help of all the Competitive Choirs in the Country, to deal with all matters affecting the interests of the choirs, and to be the channel of communication between the choirs and the various Musical Festival committees in the Country.

Further particulars from the Hon. Secretary,
H. STEVENSON, 6, Laneside Street, Todmorden.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS.
FOUNDED 1913.

PRESIDENT FOR 1926: HARVEY GRACE, F.R.C.O.

Organists, Assistant-Organists, and Choirmasters of all denominations are eligible. Register of vacant appointments.

Particulars and application to the Hon. Sec., DR. J. WARRINER, De Crespigny House, Denmark Hill, S.E.5.

THE LONDON COLLEGE FOR CHORISTERS.
6 and 7, BLOMFIELD CRESCENT, PADDINGTON, W.2.
Founder: Mr. JAMES BATES.

Solo Boys and Chorus Boys supplied at short notice for Church Services, &c. Telephone: Paddington 5990. Sec., ARTHUR G. BATES.

THE ST. BOTOLPH'S, ALDERSGATE, CHORAL SOCIETY will give a Performance of Bach's Cantata, "CHRIST LAY FAST BOUND";
César Franck's 150TH PSALM;
and part of "JESU, PRICELESS TREASURE," at St. Botolph's, Aldersgate, on Friday, May 28th, at 7 p.m.

CORRESPONDENCE TUITION.

1. L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Papers.
2. A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Papers.
3. Short comprehensive Course for L.R.A.M. "Form and Teaching" Paper.
4. Touch and Technique (Matthay Method) for L.R.A.M., vivâ voce.
5. Fingering and Pedalling.
6. Rudiments, Harmony, Form, Art of Teaching, as separate subjects.
7. Courses on Mr. Stewart Macpherson's "Melody and Harmony."

Over 90% Postal Successes at Diploma Examinations.

MR. GILBERT THOMAS,
M.A. (Cantab.), L.R.A.M., A.Mus.T.C.L.
Private Pupil of STEWART MACPHERSON, BACKHAUS, OSCAR BERINGER.

Formerly Student at Matthay Pianoforte School, London.

Terms, Appreciations, on application:
ASHCROFT, 42 BURTON ROAD, S.W.9.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.
OVER 1100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS.
"Your lessons and ideas splendid."
"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."
RECENT SUCCESSES,
including the only pupil sent up, January, 1925.
2*s.* 6*d.* per lesson and postage.
"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160. Wardour Street, W.1.

CHARLES A. GILLETT
PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.

SPECIALIST IN THE Teaching of Modern Technique
AND
The Production of Beautiful Tone.

PERSONAL LESSONS AND CONSULTATIONS DAILY, OR,
CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS.

AS A PIANO ENTHUSIAST have you seriously considered the possibilities afforded you by the Charles A. Gillett Correspondence Lessons in Modern Pianoforte Playing, based on the "Gillett Method of Applied Weight Touch," and "The Real Use of Relaxation," being instruction by post on exactly the same lines as the personal lessons, designed for those living at a distance, and including FREE postal consultations on all individual difficulties.

Invaluable to every pianist—whether Amateur or Professional, Student, Teacher, or Soloist.

Write or call—
CHARLES A. GILLETT
Pianoforte School,
11, SOUTH MOLTON STREET, LONDON, W.1.

CHARLES KNOWLES

BARITONE.

For Press Notices and Terms, apply,
87, ALEXANDRA ROAD,
ST. JOHN'S WOOD, N.W.8.
Or,
MESSRS. IBBS & TILLETT, 124, Wigmore Street, W.1.

ALBERT GARCIA'S

VOCAL STUDIO.

59, QUEEN'S ROAD, ST. JOHN'S WOOD, N.W.8.

VOICE-PRODUCTION AND SINGING.
TRAINING FOR OPERA AND CONCERTS.
PUPILS PREPARED FOR A.R.C.M. AND L.R.A.M. EXAMS.

MANUEL GARCIA'S "ART OF SINGING"
revised from the original edition by
ALBERT GARCIA.

Publishers: Messrs. LEONARD & Co., 47, Poland St., W.1. Price 6*s*.

PIANOFORTE RECITAL-LECTURES.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING

(Mus. Doc., Lond.).

For vacant dates, &c., apply,
46, CLARENDON ROAD, REDLAND, BRISTOL.
Telephone: Bristol 3033.

LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING.

20a, Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square, W.1.
President: A. NETTLEFOLD.
Principal: DAVID GODELL.

Complete training in all subjects for the Vocalist, Professional and Amateur. Evening Lessons. TWO FREE SCHOLARSHIPS. All voices. Last day of Entry, May 8. Particulars from Secretary, Mayfair 3819.

THE TECHNIQUER

Invented and Patented by R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac.

FOR FLEXING, STRENGTHENING, STRETCHING, and DEVELOPING THE HANDS.

Send for testimony of LAMOND, POUISHNOFF, FRYER, REDDIE, WALENN, and many other eminent musicians.
"The excellent 'Techniquer' of Mr. Pitcher has been used by the writer with advantage. It does a good many things."—The Music Teacher, April, 1926.
Treatise on "Hand Development," with Photos, 1*s*. 6*d*.
Full particulars from the Secretary—
MISS F. J. FITCH, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.
For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS, Glennholme, The Common, Hessle, E. Yorks.

NOTE PERFECT WITHOUT MUSIC!

Memorising is no longer a "gift" of the favoured few, but is the established reality of thousands who have become my pupils. Memorise your music by the

Master-Method

OF

Memory-Playing

and you will be able to overcome your memorising difficulties in a few short weeks with ease, certainty, and confidence.

NO KNOWLEDGE OF HARMONY REQUIRED.

REPETITION ELIMINATED.

SUCCESS GUARANTEED.

POST THIS COUPON FOR FREE BOOK.

(Unsealed envelope, ½*d. stamp only.*)

MR. REGINALD C. FOORT,

F.R.C.O.,
19, BEACON HOUSE, HEMSTAL ROAD,
LONDON, N.W.6.

Please send me, free and post free, a copy of your Book, "The Master-Method of Memory-Playing." I play the Piano, Violin, 'Cello, Organ, and am a Beginner, Intermediate, Advanced Player. Cross out which do not apply to you.

Name.....
(Mr., Mrs., or Miss.)
Address.....
.....

HOW TO PLAY DIFFICULT MUSIC WITH EASE

PIANISTS who wish to play the music which affords the greatest enjoyment and relaxation—the compositions of the world's greatest musicians—and who are averse to the drudgery of wearisome keyboard practising in order to obtain the necessary technical proficiency, will find the "From Brain to Keyboard" method of the greatest help. Practice on this System, much of it away from the keyboard, is never wearisome; and after some weeks of it, spending quite a short time each day, a degree of technical proficiency is obtained which would be impossible even after years of keyboard practising for several hours daily. Musical News describes my System as "the most striking discovery of the present generation for practical musicians." Send to-day for full particulars. (See free book offer below.)

From Brain to Keyboard

Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

20,000 Successful Pupils of all ages.

MY ILLUSTRATED BOOK

"LIGHT ON PIANOFORTE PLAYING"

will gladly be sent to any pianist. It fully explains the principles and advantages of the methods used in the System. When applying please do not omit to state whether comparative beginner, average, or advanced pianist. The book will be sent free of charge, and post free.

M. MACDONALD SMITH, 19, BLOOMSBURY SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.1.

CORRESPONDENCE COACHING FOR EXAMINATIONS.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING

Mus.Doc. (Lond.).

Full Preparation for Mus. Doc., Mus. Bac., A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M., and all Diplomas of T.C.L. and R.C.O.

SPECIAL COURSES THIS MONTH.

1. L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.
   Full Preparation in all Paper Work, and in the viva voce portion of these Examinations.
2. Revision R.C.O. and T.C.L. Courses for July Diplomas.
3. (a) Durham Mus. B. and Mus. D., Sept.
   (b) London Mus. B. and Mus. D., Dec.

NUMEROUS SUCCESSES.

These Postal Courses enable you to study at home, in your own time, and at your own convenience. Their thoroughness is made manifest by the great number of successes achieved by Dr. Sprankling's pupils, at home and abroad, at all the leading examinations for Degrees and Diplomas in Music.

—— PERSONAL LESSONS ALSO in BRISTOL and LONDON. ——

Telephone: Bristol 3033. Address: 46, CLARENDON ROAD, REDLAND, BRISTOL.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

PRINCIPAL:

ARTHUR McALISTER, B.A.

1ST MUS. BAC., MARCH, 1926.

No. OF CANDIDATES - -	30
TOTAL SUCCESSES - - - - -	7
PERCENTAGE - - - - -	23%

Modern Corr. College Students.

ENTRIES - - - - - - - -	5
SUCCESSES - - - - - - - -	3
PERCENTAGE - - - - -	60%

NOTE.—Had other students done as well as M.C.C. students the number of Passes would have been 18 instead of 7.

Letters of appreciation from SUCCESSFUL STUDENTS, March, 1926:

"I thank you for the splendid coaching which the Modern Correspondence College has given me. After being successfully coached for MATRIC., 1ST MUS. BAC., and the L. MUS. T.C.L. Diploma, I cannot help admiring my Tutors, who have shown not only fine musicianship, but great patience with a 'not over-brilliant' student."

"You will be glad to know that I have passed my examination, 1ST M.B., AT THE FIRST ATTEMPT. I am more than grateful for your coaching, which is excellent.

"The models and remarks are most lucid and helpful. It will be a great pleasure to me to recommend your College.

"With renewed thanks,

"Believe me, very truly yours,
"FIRST M.B., F.R.C.O."

"In informing you of my success in passing First Mus. Bac., Durham, this March, I hasten to add that it is, in my opinion, THE CAREFULLY GRADED COURSES, with attendant DILIGENT MARKING and WELL-PLANNED MODELS, which your Tutors prepare, that inevitably must lead to the culminating point—SUCCESS: a word constantly being reiterated in the Modern Correspondence College Advertisements.

"I THANK THE ADVERTISEMENT which first attracted me to become one of your students, as I now thank you for your wonderful help."

Guarantee Courses - MATRIC., MUS. BAC., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.R.C.O., F.R.C.O., A. MUS. T.C.L., A.T.C.L.

MODERN

20, SHERWIN ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

Mr. F. C. FIELD HYDE'S HOLIDAY COURSE will be held in LONDON, THURSDAY, JULY 29th to AUGUST 7th, 1926.

MORNING and AFTERNOON LECTURE DEMONSTRATIONS will be given in

THE ART OF VOICE TRAINING and EVENING LECTURES on

THE TEACHING OF SONG INTERPRETATION
THE SINGING CLASS AND ITS TRAINING

Practical Lessons illustrative of the methods described will be given to individuals and to a class of children. The course is specially designed to give just the help needed by teachers of singing, and students preparing to teach, to choirmasters and teachers of class-singing. Every aspect of vocal teaching is included in the course, and all vocal methods of repute are reviewed and compared.

Opinions expressed by Members of Previous Courses

"The best Holiday Course of many I have attended."
"All my expectations were more than fulfilled."
"I have never before met such a comprehensive, generous, and sane view of the subject of Voice Training."
"One of the best investments I have ever made."
"Your course has filled me with new ideas and fresh enthusiasm."
"Your course has done for me what I am sure nothing else could."

Early application should be made for full particulars. Address:
F. C. FIELD HYDE, 43, UPPER GEORGE STREET, BRYANSTON SQUARE, LONDON, W.1.

ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 5TH, AND THURSDAY, MAY 6TH.

Under the patronage of H.E. The FRENCH AMBASSADOR.

GRAND ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS

BY THE WORLD-FAMED

CONCERTS COLONNE.

100 INSTRUMENTS, CONDUCTED BY

MAÎTRE GABRIEL PIERNÉ

(Membre de l'Institut de France).

SEATS: Reserved, 10*s.* 6*d.*, 8*s.* 6*d.*, 7*s.* 6*d.*, 5*s.* 9*d.*, 3*s.* 6*d.* Unreserved, 3*s.* 6*d.*, 2*s.* 4*d.*
Obtainable at Royal Albert Hall, usual Agencies, and Libraries.

TO CONCERT DIRECTORS.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF
(British).

The well-known Pianist is arranging a Recital Tour for the coming season.

Special terms can be quoted for a Recital or part programme if immediate application is made.

Managers of suitable Concert-Halls also please send terms for hiring.

Please address all communications to
ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

"MASTERY OF THE KEYBOARD."

SIGHT-READING LESSONS.

COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS,
THREE GUINEAS.

Personal Lessons if desired.

PRESS EXTRACTS.

Aberdeen Press and Journal: "The scarcity of good sight-readers, and even among capable pianists, is proof of the need for a more systematised form of training than obtains at present, and Mr. Denham's system has the double advantage of being both simple and practical."

Music: "Mr. Denham goes fully and thoroughly into his subject from every possible standpoint, and deals with it in clear and informant fashion. Cannot fail to be of service to the earnest seeker after improvement in pianoforte playing."

The Times: "Deals with the subject systematically from the first stage."

GEORGE DENHAM, L.R.A.M., ETC.,
41, AVONDALE ROAD, S. CROYDON: AND 32, WIGMORE STREET, W.1.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.

Prof. Singing, G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Musical Appreciation to L.C.C.

"Recit. and its Rendering." 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers." 6d.

Preparation for all Exams. by Post and Personal Lessons.

Special Courses of Papers: Singing, Piano, Touch, Musical Appreciation, &c.

Nearly 1,000 Successes for Degrees and Diplomas.

Send for Prospectus,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Owing to increased output, we have reduced the price of our Popular Model to 14 guineas cash. Deferred payments if desired.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions, and References to

THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.

London address: 11, Ashlake Road, Streatham, S.W.16.

ADMINISTRATIVE COUNTY OF LONDON.

The London County Council invites APPLICATIONS for the position (whole-time) of MUSICAL ADVISER AND INSPECTOR in the Education Officer's Department.

SALARY—£500 a year, rising by four annual increments of £25 a year and four annual increments of £50 a year, to a maximum of £800 a year, with a temporary addition, making the probable total commencing salary at the time of appointment £696.

DUTIES.—To inspect and advise on the teaching of music in schools, institutions, and colleges within the Administrative County of London.

Other things being equal, preference will be given, in the case of male candidates, to those who have served or attempted to serve with H.M. Forces.

In the case of women, marriage terminates contract of service.

Apply to the Education Officer (C.I.), The County Hall, Westminster Bridge, S.E.1 (stamped) addressed foolscap envelope necessary), for form to be returned by 10th May, 1926.

Canvassing disqualifies.

MONTAGU H. COX,
Clerk of the London County Council.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS WINIFRED DENHAM.

SOPRANO.

"A clear, well-produced voice—exceedingly well sung."—Musical Standard.

41, Avondale Road, South Croydon.

MISS LYDIA JOHN

(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.

Concerts, Oratorios, Organ Recitals, &c.

Recital-Lectures of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
Pupils received for Voice-Production and Singing.
Prepared for L.R.A.M., Associated Board, &c.
28, ALBION ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.
Tel.: Hampstead 5797.
Lessons given at West-End Studio or above address.

EVELYNE KING

(L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.), CONTRALTO.

Concerts, Recitals, At Homes, &c.
Oratorio. BACH a speciality.
All Modern and Standard Works.
Pupils received for Voice-Production and Singing.
WEST-END STUDIOS.
For Lessons or Vacant Dates, apply,
117, Hampstead Way, Golders Green, N.W.11.
'Phone: Speedwell 2209.

HAROLD KNOWLTON

TENOR

St. Paul's Cathedral, E.C. 4.
1, Hatherley Gardens, Crouch End, N.8. Mountview 5289.

EDMUND LANG

TENOR

ORATORIO, CONCERTS, ETC.
93, Kelvin Road, Highbury, N.5

VERNON HARRISS,

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medallist. BASS.
Oratorio, Concerts. Vocal Coach and Adjudicator.
Senior Music Master, Downside School, near Bath.

FRANK POULTON (L.R.A.M.).

BASSO-CANTANTE.

Available for Oratorio, Choral Societies, &c.
33, Hounslow Avenue, Hounslow. 'Phone: Hounslow 1536.

MR. HERBERT TRACEY

BASS.

8, Cavendish Mansions, E.5. London Wall 4033.

R. ARNOLD GREIR

F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.

Organist to the Royal Choral Society, London.
RECITALIST AND ACCOMPANIST.
2, Highview Road, West Ealing, W.13. Ealing 201.

MISS MARY LINDSAY

L.R.A.M. (Teacher's Diploma).

Gives lessons in Voice Production and Singing.
Moderate Terms.
17, Cromwell Road, South Kensington. Tel.: Western 3565

ELIZABETH LEVY

L.R.A.M., GOLD MEDALLIST.

TOBIAS MATTHAY'S PIANOFORTE METHOD taught by her at pupils' houses or her studio. SPECIAL COACHING for Scholarships, Medals, and all Examinations. 52, Fairhazel Gardens, Hampstead, N.W.6.

HARRY LYTTLER

SOLO FLUTE (AND PICCOLO), L.R.A.M.

London, 2LO, and Provincial Concerts.
Concerts, Recitals, Masonics, &c., also Tuition.
20, Hampstead Road, London, N.W.1. 'Phone: Museum 9365.

H. FORSTER RICHARDSON

R.C.M. (Leipzig), A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M.
(Pupil of Tobias Matthay, Plunket Greene, Gregory Hast), gives lessons in Pianoforte Playing, Voice-Production and Singing.
Tuition on the most modern technical principles.
Coaching for Concert Work and Examinations.
Wigmore Hall Studios, Wigmore Street, W.1., and
2, Connaught Avenue, East Sheen, S.W.14.

ALFRED MORRIS, L.Mus. T.C.L.
POSTAL TUITION.

Graded Lessons especially prepared to suit individual needs—every student assured of personal care and attention.
Rudiments, Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, &c.
Preparation for Diplomas and other examinations.
Moderate terms. 9, West Lorne Street, Chester.

MISS MARY WILSON F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London,
Gives SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS to Candidates entering for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Singing Teachers' Diplomas.
Particulars on application.
Address: 10, Harley Street, London, W.1.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who OBTAINED DEGREES OF MUS.B. and Mus.D. at Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, London, and Durham Universities, Diplomas of L.L.C.M. (April, 1924), L.R.A.M., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. L.C.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medals, Silver Medals, Scholarships, Prizes, Certificates, and valuable professional appointments. Dr. Allison is willing to teach those who neither require nor desire to pass examinations. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Analysis of Compositions by Post, to correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, and Piano. 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.
Dr. Horton Allison, 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O.,
L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight-Reading Courses, Study Aids, 9*d*. Studies in Modulation, 3*s*.
Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.
HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B. Dunelm.,
F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Square, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—
(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
(3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.
L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-26 ... 286 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-26 ... 76 " " "
MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
(2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
(3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work.
(4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint.
(Address as above.)

MR. BIBBY also gives PERSONAL Lessons in Manchester. Complete Preparation (Practical and Paper Work) for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., &c. Address as above.

MR. RONALD BRIDGER, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
&c. (Registered Teacher), prepares pupils for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. examinations in singing, either personally or by correspondence. Lessons also given in Voice Production and Singing. Highest references. Full particulars from 54, Pembridge Villas, W.11.

J. C. BRYDSON, Mus. B. (Dunelm.). Correspondence Coach. Preparation for Degrees and Diplomas (Ordinary and Guarantee Courses). Special offer—May only. First six students enrolling for A. Mus. T.C.L. Course allowed reduced fees throughout course. Kegworth, Derby.

DR. FRANK A. CHAPPLE (Mus. Doc. Dunelm.),
F.R.C.O. Correspondence Coach for Degrees and Diplomas. Recent Successes: 1st Mus. Bac. (2), Mus. Bac., Final, F.R.C.O. (Turpin Prize), A.R.C.O., and A.T.C.L. Address: The Mount, Pontefract, Yorks.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. SPECIAL COACHING by ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Pianist. Paper-Work Postal. Address, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

FREDERICK GREEN, L.R.A.M., ETC. Voice Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Preparation for L.R.A.M. c/o Rushworth & Dreaper, 11, Islington, Liverpool.

MISS RUTH GURDEN, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
Teacher of Singing, has VACANCIES for a few private pupils. All examinations prepared for, and correspondence coaching undertaken. For full particulars, apply, by letter, to 21, Cavendish Mansions, West Hampstead, N.W.6.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm.,
F.R.C.O., SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 410 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., and A.R.C.O., &c. 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. HARRIS REVISES and PREPARES MSS.
FOR PUBLICATION. Accompaniments to Songs written.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply, Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D. Mus. Oxon., 1922,
L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates, personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.,
Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, Queen Victoria Street, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London, at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey. Many recent F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. successes.
5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195

A. EAGLEFIELD HULL, Mus. Doc. Oxon.,
F.R.C.O. For Lectures, address E. L. Robinson Direction, 199, Piccadilly, London, W.1; for personal and correspondence lessons, address Dr. Eaglefield Hull, 19, Berners Street, W.1. For Organ Recitals, address Secretary, 48, New North Rd., Huddersfield.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O.
SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING.
Latest Successes: Durham, Sept., 1925, 7 Final Mus. Bac. passes. Also 1st Mus. Bac. pass. Mus. Doc. and Mus. Bac. Exs., after prelim. course in composition, also in 1925. Both Mus. Doc. passes in 1924. 170 Successes at Durham alone, besides R.C.O. Diplomas. The Durdans, Reigate.

DR. F. J. KARN (Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Mus. Doc.
Toronto) continues to give lessons in Harmony and other Theoretical subjects, and prepares for all Musical Examinations. Compositions revised and Analyses written. Candidates prepared by Dr. Karn have gained the Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. degrees at the Universities and diplomas from the Musical Colleges.
Address: 106, Haverstock Hill, London, N.W.3.

DR. KNOWLES (Manchester 1919, Durham 1920) specialises in preparing candidates by post for the Paper-work of all examinations in music. Solutions, with methods of working. Address, "Cramond," Oakhurst Avenue, East Barnet, London, N.

MR. C. E. de M. LEATHES, M.A., MUS. BAC.,
F.R.C.O. Tuition in Piano, Harmony, Composition, &c. Pupils successfully prepared for all examinations. Cramer's Studios, 139, Bond Street, W.1, and 128, Kensington High St., W.8.

DR. ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, MUS. DOC.,
University of Toronto; Mus. Doc., Trinity University, Toronto; F.R.C.O.: F.A.G.O., &c., Sirsa House, Cheltenham. Correspondence Lessons. Revision of MSS. Scoring, editing, and arranging. Examination pieces analysed and annotated.

PREPARATION L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all
Associated Board Exams. 1925 Successes include 5 L.R.A.M. (Pianoforte). Courses of study, or single lessons, arranged at home or West End. Alan May, 31, Bonham Road, S.W.2.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning," prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.
10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O.,
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Twenty-five years' experience in Private Tuition and Coaching for Degrees. More than 800 of Dr. Middleton's Pupils have obtained Degrees at the Universities, R.A.M., R.C.M., and R.C.O. Address, 60, Berners Street, W.1.

A. MUS. T.C.L. EXAMINATION, July, 1926.—
Special Revision Courses just beginning. Each Student's work carefully corrected, and the Student guided the best way to ensure success.
Inclusive Fee, 1½ guineas, for period to Examination, irrespective of number of lessons taken.
ALFRED MORRIS, L. Mus. T.C.L., 9, West Lorne Street, Chester.

L. R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Exams. Correspondence lessons in Harmony, Form, Teaching, &c. 23 pupils' successes. Moderate terms. Arthur W. Morrison, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., 39, Clarendon Road, Fulwood, Sheffield.

SIGHT-READING SPECIALIST, Pianoforte, Singing. Miss Penrose, Diplômée, Leipzig Conservatorium. Special course of 25 lessons for Adults with no previous knowledge of Music. Definite results in stated number of Lessons guaranteed. Infallible method of simplifying time and rhythm difficulties. Studio, 157, Kensington High Street, W.8. (Telephone, 778 Western.)

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., prepares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes, 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4.

MRS. J. SHARP, A.R.C.M. (Pianoforte), Coaching for Examinations and Festivals. Visits Streatham, Willington, and Westminster. Address: Wigmore Hall Studios, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

DR. TAYLOR'S POSTAL PUPILS HAVE passed Mus. Bac. 1st and final. A.R.C.O.; L.R.A.M.; A.T.C.L. Pupil gained the Stillie Bursary at Glasgow for Counterpoint. Latest success, A.R.C.O. for 1924. Portland Place, Lancaster.

J. W. WILSON, Mus. Bac. Dunelm., F.R.C.O., Postal Tuition for R.C.O., R.A.M., T.C.L. Exams, &c. Solutions and Model Essays. Moderate Terms. 47, Hinckley Road, Leicester.

W. G. WEBBER, F.R.C.O. Recitalist, &c. Preparation for Exams. Organ lessons given on new four-manual Willis. Address, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E.1.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) A.R.C.M. (Theory of Music).
(4) A. Mus. T.C.L. and L. Mus. T.C.L.

Several recent successes in all these examinations.

R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."

SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.

279 A.R.C.O. Successes since 1909.
174 F.R.C.O. " " "

RECENT SUCCESSES IN PAPER WORK:

4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.
5 F.R.C.O., July, 1915.	9 A.R.C.O., July, 1915.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1916.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1916.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1917.	4 A.R.C.O., July, 1917.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918.
1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.	10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920.	6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.	7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.
6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921.	8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921.
5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922.
8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.	9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1924.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1924.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925.	8 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925.
7 F.R.C.O., July, 1925.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1925.
5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926.

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

MISS MARGARET YOUNG, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Pianoforte); A.T.C.L. (Vocal and Pianoforte), Registered Teacher, T.R.C. Postal Tuition for Theoretical, above Diplomas; also General Musical Knowledge and Advice. Bawburgh, Norwich.

A.R.C.O. DESIRES EVENING WORK. Home correction of Theory Exercises for Correspondence College or others. 60, Woodland Rise, London, N.10.

ACCOMPANIST.—Excellent sight-reader, desires engagement by Artiste, or in Ladies' Trio. Address: Miss C. M. Hogben, 35, Rollscourt Avenue, Herne Hill, S.E.24.

ACCOMPANIST.—Keen, excellent sight-reader, desires appointment with singer or instrumentalist; capable of secretarial work if required. "A. V. T.," 33, Kensington Road, Ipswich.

VOCALISTS, Instrumentalists, desiring rehearsal with accompanist, write, Smith, L.R.A.M., 40, Coniston Road, Muswell Hill, N.10.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone, and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for.—Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

CITY OF LONDON CHOIR COLLEGE.—Solo and Chorus Boys for special engagements or permanent choirs. Apply to F. W. Sutton, F.R.C.O., St. Stephen's Walbrook, E.C.4.

CHOIR BOYS required for St. Matthew's, George Street, Croydon. Ages 9-11 years; pocket money; sports; every encouragement. Apply, "Organist," 22, Wellesley Road, Croydon.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE, OXFORD.

VACANCIES for LAY-CLERKS, ALTO. A trial to fill one or possibly two such vacancies will be held early in July. Duties for the first to begin in October, 1926, for the second in January, 1927. Commencing salary, £110, increasing every three years up to a maximum. A pension after a certain number of years guaranteed. For further particulars, apply to The Rev. Dean of Divinty, Magdalen College.

ALTO WANTED.—St. Andrew's, Holborn. Fridays, 6.30. Sundays, 11 and 6.30. £15. Write, "W. G. H.," 20, The Avenue, Brondesbury, N.W.6.

ALTOS WANTED (male) for above Church. £16-£20, according to qualifications. Apply, "Organist," as above.

RIPON CATHEDRAL.—A Junior Minor Canonry will shortly be vacant; a district Church and a parochial charge are attached to the office. Stipend, £350. Apply to The Dean, enclosing three testimonials, one of which must specially refer to parochial experience and efficiency.

TENOR WANTED.—St. Mary's, Bryanston Square, W.1. £20 to £25. Dr. R. H. Hunt, 7, Woodgrange Avenue, N. Finchley, N.12.

S. MARY'S, Stoke Newington. TENOR WANTED. £20 per annum. Apply by letter, to Norman Collie, 52, Queen Elizabeth's Walk, Stoke Newington, N.16.

SOLO TENOR (Good Reader) REQUIRED at a Kensington Church. Salary, £18 per ann. Write, "A. A.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

BARITONE (£18 per annum) REQUIRED for Essex Church (Unitarian), The Mall, Notting Hill Gate. Apply left side Vestry, Monday or Wednesday, at 8.30 p.m., or, write Alfred R. Stock, F.R.C.O., 8, Crondace Road, Hurlingham, S.W.6.

WELLS CATHEDRAL.

WANTED, a BASS SINGER (under 30). Stipend, £80 per annum, with small house in due course. (£100 for the first year.) Apply, stating age, before May 15, to Canon Davis, The Liberty, Wells, Somerset.

VOLUNTARY HELP ASKED FOR CHOIR of a poor Church, South Lambeth. Miss A., Organist, 54, Compton Road, Wimbledon, S.W.19.

ORGANIST (no choir-training) WANTED at Michaelmas. Competent player. Apply, by letter only, to Clerk, Second Church of Christ, Scientist, 108, Palace Gardens Terrace, W.8.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED for Cannon Street Baptist Church, Accrington. Salary. £80 per annum. Apply by letter on or before 15th May, 1926, stating age, qualifications, and references to Bridge B. Clayton, 111, Whalley Road, Accrington.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for Baptist Church in North London. Two-manual organ, electrically blown. Apply, by letter, giving experience, testimonials, and salary required, to Mr. V. L. Edwards, 21, Devonshire Road, Palmer's Green, N.13.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER WANTED.—June. Communicant. Sung Eucharist; able train Choir, £65. State qualifications, references, age, to Vicar, All Saints', Child's Hill, N.W.2.

REQUIRED for South Nutfield Church, Surrey, at once, ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, resident if possible. Simple services. Voice-Trainer essential. Apply, with references, letter only, to The Vicar.

WANTED.—ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for a small and beautiful Church in North Surrey, near London. Two Sunday Services. Salary, £50. Apply to the Rev. E. H. ELAND, Cuddington Vicarage, Worcester Park, Surrey.

ISLE OF WIGHT.—VACANCY for ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER. Good salary for competent man. Apply, Vicar, St. John's, Sandown, I.W.

WANTED.—ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, F.R.C.O., by Balham Congregational Church. Sunday Services; one weekly practice. £70 per annum. Full particulars, stating age, to Secretary, 64, Endlesham Road, S.W. 12.

ASSISTANT-ORGANIST WANTED (male), able to play simple Services, for St. John's, Fitzroy Square, W.1. Write, F. Bird, 117, Brownlow Road, New Southgate, N.11.

ORGANIST (lady), good recommendations, small income, seeks re-engagement small Church, or Chapel. Plain Services. "L. G.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour St., W.1.

ORGANIST of Parish Church in Kent desires EXCHANGE of House and Duty during month of August. East Coast preferred. "G. J. K.," "Uplands," The Drive, Tonbridge.

ORGANIST.—Can deputise mid-week or Sundays, or take entire charge. Expert choir-trainer. 17 years Organist and Choirmaster, Parish Church, Rendell. A.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., 31, Old Park Villas, Palmers Green, N.13. Tel.: 0021. (Late Mus. Dir. D'Oyly Carte Opera Co.)

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF MUSIC at a Public School, requires Pupil-Assistant. Exceptional advantages for gaining experience in the rendering of Plainsong, and in Choir training. £60 a year offered to one able to help in pianoforte teaching. "D.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER, having exceptional references and recommendations, desires post in London. Recitalist, Choir-Trainer, Choral and Orchestral Conductor. Good organ essential; remuneration secondary. (Has recently completed sixteen years' continuous service.) Anglican or Nonconformist (latter preferred). Write, "C. H.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER, Church of England, requires appointment after Easter, South of England or Scotland preferred. Experienced accompanist, choir-trainer, and conductor. Address, "S. G.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

A.R.C.O. Deputises in London and Suburbs. Plainsong, Eucharist, &c. H. Eaton Cooter, 17, The Cloisters, Windsor Castle.

STUDENT-ORGANIST, with experience of Choir-Training, desires POST as SUB-ORGANIST at City Church. Would sing bass in Choir. "Anglican," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PIANIST AND ORGANIST (Gentleman). Keen Musician, desires engagement with small orchestra; or as secretary-accompanist to Instrumentalist, Singer, or Teacher of Singing. Excellent sight-reader, accompanist. Address, C. G. English, 10, St. Erkenwald Road, Barking, Essex.

VIOLA (Lady) requires Engagements, Orchestras, Lessons, &c. Write, Miss M. A. Pitman, 17, Bycullah Road, Enfield, Middlesex.

MASSAGE and MEDICAL ELECTRICITY by St. Dunstan's Blinded Soldiers, fully certificated; established all parts of London and Provinces. Apply, Superintendent, Massage Department, St. John's Lodge, Regent's Park, N.W.1. (Telephone, Langham 2780.)

ORGAN LESSONS DESIRED.—Apply, stating terms, to "R. E.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGAN LESSONS and PRACTICE required. City (or near) preferred. Reply, stating terms and full particulars to "Hessey," c/o 113, Newlands Park, Sydenham, S.E.26.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

CHURCH ORGANS STANDARDISED.—Two Manuals, Pneumatic Pedals, various sizes: specially built. Five to fifteen stops. Introduced to meet the requirements of the times at minimum cost. W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Manchester, S.W.

APOLLO ORGAN (new condition), and quantity of Organ and Pianoforte Music. 37, Richmond Terrace, Darwen.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—1*s.* 4*d.* an hour, or 6*s.* a week. Hydraulic-blown, two manuals and pedals (R.C.O. scale). Reduced fee for combined lessons and practice. Single practices (pupils only), 9*d.* an hour. The Fulham School of Music, 2, Edgarley Terrace, Fulham Palace Rd., S.W.6. Tel.: Putney 4208.

FOR SALE.—"ORGANIST'S PIANO," Two Manuals and Pedals, with bench, by George Rogers. Owner going abroad. Particulars, Gilberthorpe, 23a, Sidwell St., Exeter.

WANTED, Immediately.—PEDALS for Piano, Radiating and Concave. By Norman & Beard. Cheap. Moore, 18, Grosmont Terrace, Bramley, near Leeds.

BROADWOOD (Rosewood) GRAND PIANO. Excellent condition. Brass Frame, Check Action. Apply, "B. F.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR HIRE.—Broadwood Semi-Grand. Very good condition. Carriage from Maple, £2. £1 monthly. Apply, Robinson, Alderholt, Stour Road, Christchurch, Hants.

BABY GRAND PIANOFORTE FOR SALE.—Good make and tone, and in thoroughly good condition. Apply, "M. E.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

VIOLIN.—Fine tone, lovely instrument, beautiful scroll head. Maker unknown. Sell £25. Horner, 54, Hercue Loan, Musselburgh.

FINE OLD VIOLIN, dated 1749. Advertiser has had it sixty years. £8, or nearest offer, including old Bow and Case. "B.," 22, Chivalry Road, S.W.11.

WHEATSTONE'S TREBLE CONCERTINA, C. 522, new; R.C.O. Examination Papers (1881-1906), vols.; "Messiah," folio, cloth. Offers. "Organist," 30, Lithos Rd., N.W.3.

ORGAN PHOTOGRAPHS.—Cases and Consoles in any situation, photographed by BENHAM, "Bramerton," New Barnet.

ORGAN MUSIC, PIANO MUSIC, ETC., cheap. List, stamp, "Organist," 168, Ivydale Road, Peckham.

ORGAN AND PIANO MUSIC FOR SALE; Baritone Songs. Send stamp for list. 107, Oxford Street, Church Gresley, Burton-on-Trent.

QUANTITY OF ANTHEMS FOR SALE.—Send stamp for list. "Choirmaster," 107, Oxford Street, Church Gresley, Burton-on-Trent.

GROWING MUSIC CONNECTION FOR SALE. 40-45 pupils. Good Class. Apply, "L. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

'CELLISTS and BASSES can absolutely prevent instruments slipping on polished surfaces. Get a "BULZI." Only 1½-oz. Fits vest-pocket. As wonderful as it sounds. Price 3*s.* Percy Sheard, "Redholme," Droitwich.

LYRIST wishes to hear from Composer willing to co-operate for publication. "A. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSIC COMPOSERS and LYRICISTS.—Songs, Lyrics, and Musical Compositions wanted for Publication. We set Lyrics to Music if desired. Send MSS. (words or music) to the Carlton Music Agency, 8, Lloyd Square, London, W.C.1.

FOR SALE IN LOTS.—Oratorios, Operas, and Cantatas. Large quantities of Male-Voice Music, and other works. Good condition. What offers? List on application, "Organist," 6, Gwendwr Road, W.14.

A.R.C.O., ESSAY, JULY, 1926. Special Series of Six Model Essays on the book, "William Byrd." Valuable Hints on Writing the Essay work. Very successful at recent exams. Send P.O. 4*s.* 6*d.* to "Essays," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., AURAL TESTS. Special important paper. Success assured. This paper gives details how to work. Send 4*s.* 6*d.* to "Aural Tests," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

NINE-FOLD KYRIE.—An adequate Setting for dignified Choral Eucharist. Not difficult, but requiring good singing. Sample copy gratis, from George C. Phelps, "The Peabody," Boston-24-Mass., U.S.A.; or, Banks & Son, York.

A TREATISE ON CONDUCTING.

12,000 WORDS. 1*s.* 9*d.* Illustrated Method!

Post 2*d.* 700 Copies sold.

Invaluable to Leaders and Members of any Orchestra, Band, or Choir.

M. T. Cooper, M.D., 23, Beech Avenue, Blackpool.

MUSIC COMPOSERS and LYRIC WRITERS. The Cosmos Publishing Co. are open to consider Songs, &c., with a view to publication. Send MSS. with stamp for reply, to Glenholme, The Common, Hessle.

A.R.C.O. EXAMINATION AIDS.

A series of practical papers outlining courses of study and giving helpful hints with expert advice on the following Tests:

SOLO-PLAYING. SCORE-READING.
TRANSPOSITION. ACCOMPANIMENT (with list of 75 Solos).
ESSAY.

3*s.* each. 10*s.* 6*d.* the set.

At the request of many who have derived valuable help from the above, the writer has now prepared a similar AID to the

A.R.C.O. PAPER-WORK TESTS.

Price 5*s.*

"A.R.C.O. EXAMN. AIDS," 44, BLANTYRE RD., LIVERPOOL.

DEATH.—PYE. On the 15th inst., at 239, Welholme Road, Grimsby, James Thomas Pye, Mus. Bac. Oxon. Aged 75.

MUSIC COPIED, neat work, Transposition and Duplicating. E. W. Cartwright, 25, Irving Rd., Bournemouth.

MUSIC COPYING, Transpositions, Arrangements, Band Parts. Smith, 40, Coniston Road, Muswell Hill, N.10.

THE "SIMPLEXA" FINGER TRAINER.
(Registered No. 692810.)
FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS.
A SIMPLE AND VERY EFFECTIVE APPLIANCE FOR GIVING STRENGTH AND FLEXIBILITY TO THE FINGERS.

Extract from "Musical Times."—"We have given a trial to the 'Simplexa Pocket Finger Trainer,' and have no hesitation in recommending it to our readers as a means of stretching the fingers and keeping them generally in good playing condition. Instrumentalists who are travelling, or unable to obtain regular practice, will find the appliance a boon. It is well-named, being simplicity itself, and so portable that it can be carried in the waistcoat pocket."
IMPROVED MODEL, 2*s.* 6*d.*, POST FREE.
1, LONGFORD TERRACE, FOLKESTONE.

GLOUCESTER
(ON THE SLOPES OF ROBINSWOOD HILL.)

BRUTON, KNOWLES & Co.
are instructed by C. LEE WILLIAMS, Esq., to sell by auction at the Bell Hotel, Gloucester, on Saturday, May 8, 1926, at 3 o'clock punctually, the following valuable FREEHOLD PROPERTY
as a whole or in lots:

LOT 1.—TUFFLEY KNOLL, a charming residential property of moderate size, occupying a delightful situation on high ground overlooking the Severn Valley. It comprises a stone-built residence of character, containing spacious hall, 4 reception rooms, including a music room 35-ft. by 20-ft., which is a most attractive feature; 8 bed rooms, 2 bath rooms, excellent domestic offices, interesting half-timbered entrance lodge of the early 17th Century, garage and stabling; picturesque half-timbered cottage, gardens and grounds, pasture orcharding, pasture and woodland having a total of 10a. 0r. 2p.
Excellent water supply, gas and main drainage.
This is one of the most attractive residences within easy reach of the City. It was designed by the late Mr. F. S. Waller, is particularly well built, and the music room was added under the direction of Mr. C. Lee Williams, thus rendering the house one of exceptional interest.
Vacant possession of the residence on 29th September, 1926.

LOT 2.
A MODERN DETACHED DWELLING HOUSE.
Situate adjoining the main road at Tuffley and containing entrance porch, 2 sitting rooms, kitchen, back kitchen and 3 bed rooms, large garden with long frontage to the road. Gas and water laid on. It is in the occupation of an employee, and vacant possession may be had on 29th September, 1926.

LOT 3.
A VALUABLE ACCOMMODATION PASTURE FIELD, with entrance from the main road at Tuffley, affording a most attractive building site, and having an area of
3a. 1r. 36p.
Further particulars may be had of Messrs. HANNAM, CLARK & SON, Solicitors, Queen Street, or of the Auctioneers, Albion Chambers, Gloucester.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SIX
SEA SONGS
ARRANGED FOR PIANOFORTE DUET
BY
GEOFFREY SHAW.
PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.
London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Memories and Music:
Thirty-five Years of Conducting
BY SIR DAN GODFREY WITH A FOREWORD BY SIR CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD
FRONTISPIECE, AND TWENTY-TWO OTHER ILLUSTRATIONS
Published at 18*s.*; offered at 7*s.* 6*d.*
Postage 6*d.*
BRIGHT & COLSON, LTD., BOOKSELLERS, BOURNEMOUTH.

JUST PUBLISHED.

FINAL BOOK
OF THE
BREARE VOCAL SERIES
No. 5,
"VOCAL ANALYSES:
SENSITISING BREATH—
EMOTIONAL EVOLUTION."
Price 5*s.*, by Post, 5*s.* 4½*d.*

Previous Books of the Series—No. 1, "Vocalism: Its Structure and Culture, from an English Standpoint." No. 2, "Elocution: Its First Principles." No. 3, "Vocal Faults and their Remedies." No. 4, "Vocal Technique: How it Feels to Sing."
Books No. 1 to No. 4, price 3*s.* 6*d.* each, till pre-war editions exhausted.
By W. H. BREARE, J.P., M.I.J., Vocal Adviser.
Address: HERALD BUILDINGS, HARROGATE, ENGLAND
Publishers:
London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & Co.
Harrogate: R. ACKRILL, Ltd.

A NEW PART-SONG.
"BREAK, BREAK, BREAK, ON THY COLD GREY STONES, O SEA!"
WORDS BY ALFRED LORD TENNYSON
MUSIC BY C. LEE WILLIAMS.
Editions for A.T.B.B. and S.A.T.B. can now be obtained.
Price Threepence.
London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JAMES LYON, Mus. Doc.
ELEMENTS OF HARMONY
3*s.* 6*d.*
Answers to Questions and Exercises on the Elements of Harmony.
2*s.* 6*d.*
BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

THE SUPERB

BECHSTEIN PIANOS

You can examine a magnificent selection of Bechstein Pianos—new and second-hand—at 126, NEW BOND ST., W.1.

Can be purchased by instalments, no deposit required.

Old Pianos taken in exchange, highest value allowed.

Call or write for Catalogue.

The Autoplayer Co., Ltd.,
BECHSTEIN PIANO SPECIALISTS.
Mayfair 2653.

STEINWAY STUDIOS

COMFORTABLY FURNISHED
ELECTRIC LIGHT
CENTRAL HEATING
TELEPHONE LIFT
NEW STEINWAY PIANOS

Full particulars from

STEINWAY & SONS
THE NEW STEINWAY HALL,
1 & 2, GEORGE ST., CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.1.
'PHONE: MAYFAIR 6641-5.

PIANOS

BECHSTEIN. BORD.
SCHIEDMAYER. ROGERS

NEW AND SECOND-HAND
CASH OR HIRE PURCHASE

Pianos taken in exchange.

Apply for lists:

CHAS. STILES & CO.
74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.
'Phone: MUSEUM 439.

A BLIND MUSICIAN'S IMPRESSION

SKETCH (FOR PIANO) SUGGESTED BY

The Flight of an Aeroplane

BY

HUBERT G. OKE, A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.

Mr. Ernest Fowles, F.R.A.M., wrote of this in the Music Teacher, July, 1922: "A fine study in agility playing, including double notes."

PUBLISHED BY

RYALLS & JONES, LTD.,
107, GRANGE ROAD, BIRKENHEAD.

London Agents—
EVANS & Co., 72, Wells Street, London, W.1,

IN THE

NATIONAL INSTITUTE EDITION
OF THE WORKS OF
BRITISH BLIND COMPOSERS.

PRICE 2*s.* 6*d.*

This remarkable composition, by one who has never seen the actual flight of an Aeroplane, is an interesting example of the power with which the sightless visualize for themselves things which the ordinary person would imagine were entirely beyond their ken. Incidentally it is a fine Pianoforte Recital Piece.

Music and Books

at Great Reductions.

Foyles hold a wide range of Second-hand Copies in good condition of Pianoforte and Organ Music, Oratorios, Operas, and Choral Works of every description, Standard Musical Text-books, Dramatic Literature and Plays, which they offer at tremendous reductions. Send for Catalogue 122 (free); mentioning definite requirements if possible.

New Books and Music supplied on best terms, and prompt delivery guaranteed.

Music and Books Purchased.

FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,
121-125, CHARING CROSS ROAD, LONDON, W.C.2.

HARK! THE SONG OF JUBILEE

ANTHEM FOR FESTIVALS OR SERVICES OF PRAISE

BY

R. WALKER ROBSON.

Price, Fourpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 3*d.*

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

ARNOLD CAPLETON
TWO MEDITATIONS FOR POETS.

(a.) Quasi Legenda. (b.) After Andersen's story "The Bell."

PIANO SOLO.

Price 1*s.* 6*d.* (money order), post free.
Address: A. CAPLETON,
Palacky St. 31, Prague XVI., Czechoslovakia.

IN THE PRESS. Will be Published shortly.

THE BEAUTIFUL FOLK-SONGS OF FRANCE

BOOK I.

(Novello's School Song Book, No. 277)

COLLECTED BY

AUSTIN DE CROZE

AND HARMONIZED BY

GUSTAVE FERRARI

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS COMPLETE

Or, Separate Numbers

No.		PRICE
1440	NOËL DE STRASBOURG	2*d.*
1441	BERCEUSE	2*d.*
1442	LE MOULIN	2*d.*
1443	HOPSA! LISELLA	2*d.*
1444	LE MIRACLE DE SAINT NICOLAS	4*d.*
1445	LA RONDE DU ROSIER	2*d.*
1446	CHANSON À BALLER	2*d.*
1447	LE BEAU GALANT	2*d.*
1448	LÉGENDE DES PÉLERINS	2*d.*
1449	LE PREMIER JOUR DE MAI	2*d.*
1450	LES TROIS JUPONS BLANCS	2*d.*
1451	CELUI QUE J'AIME	2*d.*

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

INCLUDED IN THE LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL REQUISITION LIST.

THE BEAUTIFUL SONGS OF FRANCE

BOOK II. (1925).

TWELVE SONGS AND DANCES

OF

FLANDERS, ARTOIS, PICARDY, NORMANDY, CHAMPAGNE, LORRAINE, and ALSACE

COLLECTED AND EDITED BY

AUSTIN DE CROZE

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENTS

BY

LEOPOLD ASHTON, GUSTAVE FERRARI, AND OTHERS.

With Illustrations, English translations, and descriptions and diagrams of the dances.

PREFACE BY DR. W. H. D. ROUSE, Perse School, Cambridge.

FOREWORD BY HARVEY GRACE and LASTWORD BY EDWIN EVANS.

CONTENTS.

FLANDERS-ARTOIS -	Ah! le joli Bois, Mesdames; Sur les Clanquarts.
PICARDY - - - -	Les trois Canards; Semons la Salade.
NORMANDY - - -	Les trois Pommes blanches; Compère et Commère.
CHAMPAGNE - - -	Le petit Bonnet rond; Eh! qui marierons-nous?
LORRAINE - - - -	Vous n'êtes par mon Berger; Je vais entrer dans la Danse.
ALSACE - - - - -	La Chanson des Beignets; Le Maître et Jacquot.

Messrs. NOVELLO & CO. beg leave to announce that they have acquired the Sole Agency for all British Territory and the United States of America for the sale of the Work above described, and that copies are now on sale.

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS EACH.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ALBUMS FOR THE ORGAN

PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH. CLOTH, SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH.

No. 1.

No.		No.
1.	Interlude ... ... Th. Dubois	7.	Grand Chœur No. 2 ... ... Alfred Hollins
2.	Chanson de Matin ... ... Edward Elgar	8.	Andantino in D flat ... ...Edwin H. Lemare
3.	Fantasia on the old melody "Urbs Beata"... ... W. Faulkes	9.	Chanson Triste ... ... P. Tschaïkowsky
4.	There is a green hill far away ... ...Ch. Gounod	10.	Prelude to "Lohengrin," Act I. ... ... R. Wagner
5.	Marche Triomphale ... ... Alexandre Guilmant	11.	Romanza ... ...W. Wolstenholme
6	Ave Maria ... ... A. Henselt	12.	Allegretto in E flat... ... ...W. Wolstenholme

No. 2.

1.	Chanson de Nuit ... ... Edward Elgar	7.	The Curfew ... ... Edward J. Horsman
2.	Alla Marcia ... ... Myles B. Foster	8.	Pastorale in E ... ... Edwin H. Lemare
3.	Minuetto ... ... Alexandre Guilmant	9.	Ave Maria d'Arcadelt ... ... Franz Liszt
4.	Lied ... ... H. Hofmann	10.	Cantique d'Amour ... ... Theo. Wendt
5.	Barcarolle ... ... H. Hofmann	11.	The Seraph's Strain ... ... W. Wolstenholme
6.	Spring Song ... ... Alfred Hollins	12.	Le Carillon ... . W. Wolstenholme

No. 3.

1.	Scherzo in A flat ... ... Edward C. Bairstow	7.	Aubade ... ...A. Strelezki
2.	Melody ... ... S. Coleridge-Taylor	8.	Nocturne in C sharp minor ... ... P. Tschaïkowsky
3.	Serenade ... ... H. Hofmann	9.	Procession to the Minster ("Lohengrin") ... ... R. Wagner
4.	Bridal March ... ... Alfred Hollins	10.	Passacaglia ... ... John E. West
5.	Berceuse ... ... Edwin H. Lemare	11.	Fantasia upon the Plain-song Melody "Ad cœnam Agni"... ... ... Healey Willan
6.	Melodie in E... ... ... S. Rachmaninoff	12.	Allegretto in A flat... ... ...W. Wolstenholme

No. 4.

1.	Arietta... ... ... S. Coleridge-Taylor	7.	Allegro alla Marcia ... ... A. L. Peace
2.	Souvenir de Printemps ... ...Joseph Holbrooke	8.	Visione ... ... J. Rheinberger
3.	Andante in D ... ... Alfred Hollins	9.	Chant sans Paroles ... ... P. Tschaïkowsky
4.	Pavane in A ... ... Bernard Johnson	10.	Prelude to Act III. ("Die Meistersinger") ... ... R. Wagner
5.	Harmonies du Soir ... ... Sigfrid Karg-Elert	11.	Allegro Pomposo ... ... John E. West
6.	An Eton Memorial March ... ...C. H. Lloyd	12.	Canzona ... ... W. Wolstenholme

No. 5.

1.	Jour de Noces ... ... J. Stuart Archer	7.	Alla Marcia ... ... John N. Ireland
2.	Festival Prelude on "Ein' feste Burg" ... ... W. Faulkes	8.	Adagio Cantabile ... ...Edwin H. Lemare
3.	Legend ... ... Harvey Grace	9.	Fanfare ... ... J. Lemmens
4.	Allegretto Pastorale ... ... H. M. Higgs	10.	Intermezzo ... ... B. Luard-Selby
5.	Benediction Nuptiale ... ... Alfred Hollins	11.	Easter Morn... ... ... John E. West
6.	Sursum Corda ... ... John N. Ireland	12.	Finale in B flat ... ...W. Wolstenholme

No. 6.

1.	Nocturne ... ... Thomas F. Dunhill	7.	Allegro in B flat ... ... F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy
2.	Postludium... ... ... William Faulkes	8.	Choral Prelude on "Rockingham" ... C. Hubert H. Parry
3.	Andante Tranquillo ... ... H. M. Higgs	9.	Præludium Pastorale ... ... J. Stainer
4.	In Springtime ... ... Alfred Hollins	10.	Romance in F minor ... ... Tschaïkowsky
5.	Madrigal ... ... Edwin H. Lemare	11.	Romance in A flat ... ... H. Sandiford Turner
6.	Triumphal March ... ... J. Lemmens	12.	Festal Commemoration ... ... John E. West

No. 7 (Funeral Music).

1.	Funeral March (Pianoforte Sonata, Op. 26)... ... Beethoven	7.	Funeral March ("Lieder ohne Worte") ... Mendelssohn
2.	Blest are they that mourn (Requiem)... ... ... Brahms	8.	O rest in the Lord ("Elijah") ... ... Mendelssohn
3.	Funeral March (Pianoforte Sonata, Op. 35)... ... Chopin	9.	Marche Solonnelle... ... ... Schubert
4.	Funeral March ... ... William Faulkes	10.	Marche Funèbre ... ... Tschaïkowsky
5.	Funeral March ("Saul") ... ... Handel	11.	Finale from "Symphonie Pathétique" ... Tschaïkowsky
6.	I know that my Redeemer liveth ("Messiah") ... Handel	12.	Lament ... ... John E. West

No. 8 (Christmas Music).

1.	Chorale Prelude, "In dulci jubilo" ... ... J. S Bach	7.	For unto us a Child is born ("Messiah") ... ... Handel
2.	Pastoral Symphony ("Christmas Oratorio") ... J. S. Bach	8.	Pastorale ... ... Theodore Kullak
3.	Quem Vidistis, Pastores... ... ... W. T. Best	9.	Chorus of Shepherds ... ... J. Lemmens
4.	Venite in Bethlehem ... ... W. T. Best	10.	Christmas Pastorale ... ... Gustav Merkel
5.	December—Christmas Morn ... ... Frederic H. Cowen	11.	A Christmas Pastoral ... ... B. Luard-Selby
6.	Fantasia on Old Christmas Carols ... ... William Faulkes	12.	Fantasy on Two Christmas Carols ... ... John E. West ("The First Nowell" and "Good King Wenceslas.")

No. 9 (Wedding Music).

1.	Wedding March ... ... William Faulkes	8.	Wedding March ... ... Mendelssohn
2.	Happy Pair ("Alexander's Feast") ... ... Handel	9.	Bridal March and Finale ("The Birds" of Aristophanes) C. Hubert H. Parry
3.	Love Song—Liebeslied ... ... Henselt	10.	Finale ("Blest Pair of Sirens") ... C. Hubert H. Parry
4.	Benediction Nuptiale ... ... Alfred Hollins	11.	Serenade ("Schwanengesang") ... ... Schubert
5.	Bridal March ... ... Alfred Hollins	12.	Bridal Chorus ("Lohengrin"... ... ... Wagner
6.	Minuet Nuptiale ... ... Edwin H. Lemare
7.	Spring Song ("Lieder ohne Worte") ... Mendelssohn

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOW READY.

THE ENGLISH PSALTER

CONTAINING

THE PSALMS OF DAVID

TOGETHER WITH

THE CANTICLES

AND

PROPER PSALMS FOR CERTAIN DAYS

EDITED AND POINTED FOR CHANTING

UPON THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURAL SPEECH-RHYTHM

BY

CHARLES MACPHERSON, Mus. Doc.
(ORGANIST OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL).

EDWARD C. BAIRSTOW, Mus. Doc.
(ORGANIST OF YORK MINSTER).

PERCY C. BUCK, M.A., Mus. Doc.
(DIRECTOR OF MUSIC IN HARROW SCHOOL).

PRICES:

Demy 8vo size ... Four Shillings net.
Imperial 32mo ... One Shilling and Sixpence net.

THE CANTICLES ONLY

Demy 8vo size ... ... Sixpence net.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1.

President:
THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O., C.B.E.

Chairman of Board and Director of Studies:
Professor J. C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus.D., F.S.A.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus.D.

May 5th, 12th, 19th, at 3 p.m.—Students' Concerts.

May 26th, at 3 p.m.—Lecture on Elocution by Mr. Alexander Watson, with illustrations.

Admission is free to both the Concerts and the Lecture.

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Dramatic and Operatic Elocution. The Lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student; pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

The ORCHESTRAL, CHORAL, the OPERATIC, and CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES are open to sufficiently competent persons who are not College Students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

There are between Forty and Fifty Scholarships tenable at the College and open to all British subjects up to certain age limits, and the Bambridge Pianoforte Scholarship, value £100 per annum; also Eighteen Scholarships which provide complete preparation for the Degree of Bachelor of Music.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

ELKIN & CO.'S

CHORAL SERIES

(General Editor: DR. JOHN BORLAND).

LATEST ISSUES

INCLUDE NEW

PART-SONGS and UNISON SONGS

BY

ELGAR, QUILTER, BRENT-SMITH,
PERCY JUDD, CHARLES WATERS
LESLIE WOODGATE, ETC., ETC.

Specimen copies will gladly be sent on approval.

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,
20, KINGLY STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD

MODERN

AMERICAN ORGAN ALBUMS

(PAUL HASSENSTEIN)

CONTENTS.

VOLUME I.

1. VICTOR - - - BERCEUSE.
2. SQUIRE - - - SLUMBER SONG.
3. TELLIER - - - PLAINTE D'AMOUR.
4. ZUREICH - - - CHANT SANS PAROLES.
5. JENSEN - - - BRIDAL SONG.
6. BARNARD - - - PLAINS OF PEACE.
7. HUBAY - - - REVERIE.
8. BORODINE - - ANGELUS.
9. TSCHAIKOWSKY - CHANSON TRISTE.
10. FORSTER - - ANDANTE RELIGIOSO.
11. CORNELIUS - - THE EXALTED SONG.
12. TSCHAIKOWSKY - FEUILLET D'ALBUM.
13. ZUREICH - - - A FOLK-SONG.
14. LEONCAVALLO - ROMANESCA.
15. REE - - - - CHORALE.

VOLUME II.

1. MARCHETTI - - REVERIE.
2. TSCHAIKOWSKY - CHANT SANS PAROLES.
3. MEYER-HELMUND HYMN.
4. REE - - - - NOCTURNE.
5. ZILCHER - - - THE SHEPHERD.
6. CORNELIUS - - MELODIE.
7. BULL - - - NORWEGIAN FOLK-SONG.
8. PAUL - - - LONGING.
9. RIPPL - - - EVENING HYMN.
10. BYFORD - - - VISION.
11. DUBOIS - - - PENSEE.
12. HAUSER - - - CRADLE SONG.
13. FLEMISH FOLK-SONG.
14. TELLIER - - - MORNING GREETING.
15. JENSEN - - - MURMURING BREEZES.
16. HASSENSTEIN - THE WITCHES' SONG.

Price 2s. 6d. each.

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.,
8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

LONDON TOWN

SONG.

THE WORDS BY

JOHN MASEFIELD.

THE MUSIC BY

EDWARD GERMAN.

IN TWO KEYS.

Price, Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

MAY 1 1926

(FOR LIST OF CONTENTS SEE PAGE 463.)

SCYLLA AND CHARYBDIS

BY ALEXANDER BRENT-SMITH

Readers of 'Alice-through-the-Looking-Glass' will remember that the white knight drew a fine distinction between the name-of-a-thing and what-a-thing-is-called. So though this essay is called Scylla and Charybdis, its real name is ''Twixt the Devil and the Deep Sea,' or, perhaps, 'On the difficulty of serving two masters.' These two real names I have rejected, the first because it might prove rather uncomplimentary in its application, the second because it is rather too circumloquacious. I prefer, therefore, to call this essay 'Scylla and Charybdis,' because though it does not quite fit my subsequent argument, it is an undeniably attractive name which in its application can offend no one.

Exactly who and what Scylla and Charybdis were, not even the professors of classical literature can tell us; at least Dr. Cobham Brewer, that world-renowned mine of information upon all matters of phrase and fable, tells us that Charybdis-and-Scylla were two whirlpools, but that Scylla-and-Charybdis, were two rocks—an explanation satisfactory perhaps to professors, but somewhat baffling to mere searchers after knowledge. Anyway, we may infer that they were two danger-points which the adventurous mariner had to face, and therefore I have chosen this classical myth as the title of my essay to suggest two grave difficulties which the adventurous composer has likewise to face. And these two difficulties are the difficulty of serving the general music-loving public, and the difficulty of satisfying the little band of critics and highbrows. It is here that the applicability of my title ceases, because the problem that faced the mariner was that of steering a safe course between the two dangers, whereas the problem which faces the musician is entirely different—that is, if he does not please the critics he will have no opportunity of reaching the general public, and if he does please the critics, he will assuredly fail to please the public; thus the composer, like the village batsman who was caught-and-bowled, is had either way.

Until the close of the 18th century, composers wrote for all classes of society, irrespective of rank, calling, or the intelligent altitude of the forehead. Thus the tunes of Mozart were hummed and whistled everywhere—in the Court of Royal Dames and in the Court of Criminal Appeal. Nowadays there is a distinct cleavage between the various classes of musical society and (more unfortunately still) between the composers who cater for these different classes. There is one class, a large multitude, which is catered for by gentlemen with friendly, and even familiar, names, such as Alf and Erny. There is another large class which is served by Bach, Handel, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Chopin, and Brahms, and there is a small class which is served by the particular hero of to-day, or yesterday. The large multitude we may ignore, because its opinions are valueless. There remain, then, two classes—the large class of normal, healthy music-lovers, and the small class of hyper-æsthetical critics and much-too-frequent concert-goers. These two classes, the Highbrows and the You-and-I-brows, are the Scylla and Charybdis of the modern composer. Which is Scylla and which is Charybdis, I cannot with certainty state. Phonetically Scylla suggests stupidity, but that in itself does not determine its application. Charybdis, with its rather hard intellectual sound, seems to qualify for the part of the critic, and that being so, Scylla cannot choose but stand for the general public. Let us consider their natures and demands separately.

Scylla, the ordinary music-lover, is a healthy individual to whom music is an ornament of life, a comforter in his periods of distress, a creator of happy illusions, and an art which makes the beauty of the invisible as real and as ennobling as the beauty of the visible. He is not concerned with the theories of art, nor with all the subtle differences which distinguish the works of those two living masters, Tweedledum and Tweedledee, though, if anything, he prefers Tweedledum. He sets the greatest store upon melody, and awards the title Poet-King to the composer who can pour out naturally and simply the most heart-easing tunes. Next in importance to melody, he ranks rhythm; not rhythm for its own sake, but as an ingredient—as necessary to music as yeast is to bread. For colour, apart from design, he has but little admiration.

Charybdis, the hyper-æsthetical concert-goer, is of an entirely different disposition. He began life as a music-lover, enjoying all kinds of music in a healthy manner, but through his over-indulgence in concert-going his taste has become so spoiled and vitiated that he can no longer find any pleasure in the rich, warm music of humanity, but prefers, or thinks he prefers, the desiccated drivel which passes for the emotions of dolls, pigs, elephants, and marionettes. Melody he despises unless it mocks its own beauty. Architecture he despises as being antiquated. Colour for its own sake he loves:

> Like a monkey, peeping in a mirror,
> Admireth all his colours, brown and warm,
> And never once perceives his ugly form.

Extravagance is to him the hall-mark of originality, and if a man were fool enough to write an ode (wordless and toneless, of course) for soprano solo and two half-muted euphoniums, he would be hailed as a transcendent genius.

Now Charybdis, though in a minority, is a dangerous fellow, because through him the general public is advised of the happenings of to-day. To please him performers give a first performance in England of some strange work which they think will tickle his sense of novelty, though they would much prefer to perform music which, in their inmost hearts, they know will endure long after these musical mushrooms, born of decaying soil, have crumbled into dust. To please him, conductors include in their programmes works which they know will empty the hall. To please him, composers with a real love of beauty and simplicity (qualities which will assuredly be respected by some) deliberately cacophonize their music in order that it may look progressive, and that they may be classed as misunderstood by their own generation.

Alas! to win the disapproval of the ordinary cultured man of to-day does not mean winning the approval of the cultured man of a hundred years hence. To be despised to-day does not mean to be honoured to-morrow, nor does appreciation to-day mean oblivion to-morrow. Handel, Purcell, Michael Angelo, and Christopher Wren were the glory of their age, nor has the passing of centuries dimmed or destroyed their fame. There is no more reason to believe that the Rima of Jacob Epstein will be considered sublime a hundred years hence because it is considered grotesque to-day than that the David of Michael Angelo should be considered grotesque to-day because a hundred years ago it was considered sublime. Let not Charybdis deceive himself. Scylla is no fool, and though the praise of a little mutual admiration society may be sweet to the taste, yet in the end the judgment of humanity will prevail.

Scylla, the general public, knowing nothing of the difficulties which beset the young composer's path, asks plaintively:

> Why don't you young composers give us something modern without being macabre, light-hearted without being grotesque; something which reflects the spirit of to-day as the music of Mozart reflected the spirit of his time.

Alas! poor things, they cannot, because Charybdis, ever seeking something sensational, says, 'No.' If perchance a young composer writes a gay and spontaneous little piece, as fresh in its way as the Serenade in G major of Mozart, his work is greeted with patronising smiles or undisguised contempt, while another piece, gloomy as the gallows and as long as a miner's holiday, is spoken of with an enthusiasm which transcends intelligibility.

How then is the composer who feels that he has some message to deliver to the world to encompass his object? The answer is obvious. It is by—but no, I will not reveal the secret, lest I deprive the aspiring composer of the joy of discovering it for himself. After all, the discovery of secrets like this is the test and the measure of the man.

We have received from the Library Association a copy of the December, 1925, issue of 'The Subject Index to Periodicals, 1922: Music'—a very useful work of reference. (Grafton & Co., 51, Great Russell Street, W.C.1. 2s. 6d.)

PERSONALITIES AMONG MUSICAL CRITICS

IV.—FRANCIS TOYE

By Basil Maine

It is a nice question as to whether enthusiasm or cynicism is the more antagonistic to critical balance. I have heard it said that if two critics disagree as to the merits of a work, he who likes it is more certain to be right than he who dislikes it. I suppose this assertion is based upon the view that dislikes are formed of prejudice and inhibition, while likes are founded upon more general notions of what is apt and fitting. If so, the basis of the statement is faulty, for, of course, a man's likes are often as intimately bound up with his organic structure as his dislikes. Good digestion waits on appetite; many other things also wait thereon. But there is this at least to be said for the enthusiastic critic—he inspires more confidence on the whole than the other kind, that is so long as he is not discovered in the act of declaring an obvious goose to be a swan. Criticism, moreover, which reveals a desire to be well pleased, is not the least of the elements which make for efficient performance.

I remember an incident which was a revelation to me. A friend of mine was giving a pianoforte recital; after the first group, which was admirably performed, I went to the artist's room to congratulate her. At that moment her agent came bounding in, and in his haste, said excitedly: 'Mr. —— is here; yawning as usual.' Now, as Mr. —— happened to be the one critic who always strikes terror into the hearts of aspiring recitalists, this was a foolish, ill-timed remark. My friend was quite obviously frightened, and played very badly for the rest of the recital—as badly as Mr. —— could have desired in the evil of his heart!

There is a great deal to be said for big-hearted, unsubtle, roseate criticism. There is a great deal to be said for Mr. Francis Toye, for instance. Of all the musical critics I know he is the most zealous and kindly. Even his dislikes are expressed with a zest which tells you at once that the man is intensely in earnest. In earnest about what? Well, he is greatly anxious to improve the performance of English artists, and especially to rescue the singing art from mediocrity. He is keen about all kinds of music which can yield definite enjoyment—to him. Handel? 'What a splendid fellow!' Offenbach? 'I like his music enormously.' There's the word. Enormously! Toye can harbour no sneaking fancy or aversion. Cards on the table, gentlemen! Perhaps he does betray a little misgiving over his liking for George Gershwin's music. Between the lines I think I can detect a faint note of apology here. It is a pity, for it is the only flaw in a glorious consistency. It is surely no matter for shame to acknowledge Gershwin's genius for melodic invention—a genius which has given a new lease of life to legitimate musical comedy. His songs and choruses for 'Primrose' and 'Tell me more' are important contributions to the preservation of a musical style, the existence of which has been threatened on all sides. His 'Rhapsody in Blue,' on the contrary, I find as disturbing and confusing as the headlights of some powerful car. But Toye is never disturbed or confused. If he is confronted with the glare of some newly approaching musical problem, he has one simple, effective method. When others are in the dark and trying to seek safety at the side of the road, he drives ahead, switches on his own intensely bright enthusiasm, and hopes for the best. So it is that all the swift problems and theorems of music pass him by untouched. Music is not for wordy discussions and fallible theories, but for enjoyment. It is an essentially English point of view.

What Edward Dent calls the 'Faust' element in music—the problematisch element—does not exist for Toye; he would say that it had no right to exist. German critics can use the derisive word Kitsch of certain kinds of music as much as they will; he will merely sit back in his chair and pity them for their lack of normal health. 'My dear fellows [I can hear him say], you may think yourselves mighty clever, but as a matter of fact you are undermining the very foundations of all that has hitherto been known as music. Your endless dialectic on musical form and concept is a weariness to the flesh. Music is set apart from the other arts to express unspeakable things. And for me, music which can do this is music in very truth; no other kind will I endure. Kitsch, indeed!'

There can be no denying that this epicurean point of view is an extremely useful element in contemporary musical criticism.

For the past ten years the world of music has been suffering from an excess of Puritanism. So severely have we denied the flesh, so vigorously have we disciplined the senses, that we have arrived at the paradoxical position of reacting with pain to a pleasure-stimulus. It is an age wherein everybody delights to confuse the ordinary plain concepts of Beauty and Ugliness, Good and Evil, Delight and Torture. Our case is exactly that of the man who steps into his excessively hot bath and cannot for the moment tell whether his foot is being scalded or frozen. At such a time we need such a one as Toye to put us right on these elementary points. His attitude is essentially that of commonsense, 'than which,' as Edwin Evans says, 'none is more rare.' I hope he will forgive me when I tell him that his consistency in this attitude brings forcibly to mind an incident in Mr. Harry Tate's music-hall sketch 'Motoring.' There is the inevitable break-down, and the mechanic attempts an elaborate explanation, drawing upon the binomial theorem, the co-efficient of the tangent, and πr^2 for his evidence. Mr. Tate is patient for a time, but finally breaks in with, 'I merely want to know why the car won't go; that's all I want to know.' It is a good point, and carries as weighty an implication as Toye's criterion: 'Does the music sound well? That's all I want to know.' Both are naïve, but profound, platitudes.

ON PLAYING WRONG NOTES

By J. A. Westrup

One of the fallacies with which a well-known choral conductor deludes his singers is the assertion that it is just as easy to sing the right notes as the wrong. The fallacy is successful. They believe him, and sing the right notes. But it is none the less a fallacy—for it is indeed painfully obvious that, there being many wrong notes and only one right, it is as likely as not that the unskilful will pitch on one of many alternatives. One finds that singers are specially prone to this error. The amateur vocalist, having sung a phrase a fourth too high, relies only on the feeling of uncomfortable height to tell him that he is wrong. So much established, he will turn to the amateur accompanist for verification. That worthy has been as much occupied in sifting out the accidentals in his own part as he has been oblivious of the misfortunes of the singer. The partners are thus equally dubious, and recapitulation is found the only remedy.

The instrumentalist is generally less at sea. His troubles are time (which never worries singers) and intonation. Mistakes in playing the actual notes are confined mainly to accidentals ignored and rapid passages insufficiently comprehended. The violinist sees a thick-set ladder of demisemiquavers, rushes into the breach and emerges in triumph at the top, dusty and shaken. Of course many seeds fall by the way-side. Equally the amateur is disposed to forget the key-signature, and to be puzzled by successions of awkward and unusual accidentals. Low F double-sharp is as momentarily embarrassing to the violinist as low B sharp to the organist. The trumpeter playing on a B flat instrument may forget that his part is for trumpet in F. The trombonist may read his part in the tenor clef instead of in the alto. How thick beset with thorns is the musician's path! Little wonder that the amateur orchestra leaves the concert room, if successful, with an air of hardly-won superiority; if otherwise, with the consciousness of having faced overwhelming odds.

Most of all is pity due to the bassoon player. He, according to the books on orchestration, is engaged in correcting the defects of an imperfect instrument. This seems unfair. He does not even start 'scratch.' Others may blame their instruments for faults of execution, but who will believe their report? We know that they can play correctly if they choose. The bassoon player, however, is not even expected to play correctly. If he does succeed in correcting the defects of his instrument it is a triumph, an event worth recording in his life as a bassoonist. The notes which he has played in tune are landmarks in his career. Many a 'cellist, able to plead only an occasional 'wolf,' envies him his excuses.

The string-player after all has the hardest task. He knows that wood-wind players are reclining in profitable ease behind him with twenty bars or so to count, while he himself sweats through the worst part of an Allegro con fuoco. To add insult to injury, his part may be marked brillante or energico, or, still worse, sehr energisch. Again in the tutti he is embarrassed by the combined efforts of the brethren. So strange, so fearful, so incomprehensible are brass instruments to the string-player that he is often ignorant of what a horn or a tuba looks like. He can only tell you that it

> Came whiffling through the tulgey wood
> And burbled as it came.

It is not surprising that mistakes are made. Happy is the man who wields the cymbal or the tambourine. He cannot play wrong notes. His notes are made for him—the eternal taunt levelled at the pianist by the fiddler. And yet how many rehearsals are occupied with vigorous sallies between the conductor and the gentlemen of the percussion! One would have thought it was so easy to keep time and count bars.

In all this we have postulated the amateur. It is his misfortune to know his incompetence and to be reviled for it. But what of the professional? From him we expect perfection, even if he is a bassoonist. A mistake from him seems almost like sacrilege. With what righteous horror does the critic record a fault in the horns, a squeak on the clarinet, a drum out of tune! So it is that we come to regard professional players as demigods, sent to bring light to those who know it not. Not that the professional weds well with the amateur. Mutual suspicion is often fostered. There was an amateur double-bass player who incurred the grave disapproval of his professional partner for tuning his strings to G, D, G, D. The sound of a resonant E flat aroused all those bitter and jealous feelings which we suppose even deities to harbour. Yet the association with one sent from a higher sphere cannot but be ennobling and inspiring for the amateur with a moderate technique and abundant enthusiasm. More than this, a stiffening of professionals covers a multitude of sins. They are not blameless, but their errors are so exalted as almost to be capable of application as universal maxims. It is not of them we sing, but of the amateur orchestral player and his twin-brother, the chorus singer.

The epigram which so blandly remarks that

> Swans sing before they die ; 'twere no bad thing
> Did certain persons die before they sing, always seems particularly applicable to the man (or woman) of whom it can only be said that he (or she) has had long experience of chorus work. Such folk will make mistakes by the score, yet their enthusiasm never wanes. Almost ferocious in their intensity, they form a living backbone to the choral societies in the suburbs of the metropolis and in the provinces. Their voices are generally worn out many years before they give up singing, but they never realise it. They make mistakes because they are not afraid of any difficulty. Singers of the opposite kind rarely make mistakes because they rarely try. Of both kinds, most conductors will agree that sopranos are the least intelligent and tenors the most virulent. Solid worth is generally to be found in basses and to a less degree in altos. Yet so like are they all to the sheep to which they annually compare themselves in chorus, that if one goes astray the many will follow.

Why should one sing or play wrong notes? Who can say? Through nerves, carelessness, inexperience, loss of memory, one cause or another, we all pass through the same valley of humiliation. Many a time we know the right note, and as we move our fingers or our lips, or whatever it may be, to play it, some little devil, some poltergeist, plays hobgoblin tricks with us, and before we are fully aware of it the wrong note has been heard. Organs whose pneumatic key-action is so up-to-date that the flick of a duster is enough to bring a whole medley of sound tumbling out of the responsive pipes, are a sore trial to the temper of the performer. He counts himself fortunate if he gets through Matins without serious mishap, or at least without public execration. Even on less sensitive instruments an incautious cuff (O heartless laundress!) will often recall the dreamer to his responsibilities. Mistakes once made, we frequently, in metaphor, go off the deep end. Error succeeds error. Who shall tell how oft he offendeth? Nor are the faults always secret. But companionship will cloak the less conspicuous blemishes. Hence the popularity of ensemble playing. Become wise after long wrestlings with quartets, quintets, or trios, we apprehend danger in advance and learn to 'cook' when experience tells us it is necessary. 'We have no time to practise,' we say. But we are past masters in the art of deception, so that even critical judges will pronounce us sound performers. And if there are occasions when, like Dr. Johnson, we 'have always been more afraid of failing than hopeful of success,' the discipline is salutary. We emulate the phœnix, and rise again from the ashes of a past catastrophe.

ADVICE ON PIANOFORTE PLAYING

By I. Philipp

(Professor at the Conservatoire, Paris)

Methods of instruction are continually being modified according to the age and ability, dexterity and enthusiasm of the pupils, whose complexity of temperament and intellect give occasion for the most varied counsel imaginable. It is the teacher's object to obtain the best results in the shortest space of time. Virtuosity has to become a means of expression, instead of being the main end and object of pianoforte study. The effort put forth should give an artistic result corresponding with the trouble taken. Appeal must be made to the pupil's reasoning faculties ; he must be compelled to work with his brain even more than with his fingers, to think and to concentrate. He should be made to understand that mechanical work, lacking attention, gives no results. Above all else, it is important that he should be told how to work.

The first condition for the would-be pianist is for him to become assured that progress can come only by degrees, that things must be done with the utmost possible perfection, that mental and muscular effort go together, and work is accompanied by thought, that the purely mechanical repetition of a passage is merely unprofitable fatigue, and that the pupil's aim and object is to produce the maximum of progress with the minimum of effort.

It is a truism to say that technique is but a means, not an end. Everybody knows this perfectly well. The difficulty is in acquiring this technique. Good technique is only a beginning. Unfortunately, many regard it as an end in itself. The essential factor is the mental effort.

The style should be correct, natural, and simple, religiously observant of the various nuances and indications of a composer. On one occasion when a great pianist had just finished playing the fourth Ballade of Chopin, introducing nuances and movements of which Chopin had never dreamt, we discussed his interpretation, which he stoutly defended. All the same, he was unable to find a reply when I asked him the simple question : 'What would you think of a pianist who dealt with your own works in the way you have just dealt with Chopin?'

'I do not aim at originality,' said Mozart, 'and I should find it very embarrassing to have to define my method.' And yet, in these days, the most insignificant pianist distorts the works of the masters with the utmost effrontery in his efforts to be original.

Avoid fatigue, whether mental or physical. Stop playing as soon as you feel tired. It is difficult to appreciate instantaneously the progress which each day brings. This progress is very perceptible, however, when after an interval you resume a piece that has been carefully practised. You find yourself more at ease, the fingers are more obedient, and the ensemble more alive.

The studies must frequently be varied ; in each of them something fresh will be found. Digital dexterity will become more and more perceptible. Insist only on such difficulties as seem insurmountable. After working hard, however, lay aside these problems for others, and continue them later. I also recommend you not to spend too much time over a difficulty, but to attack it several times the same day.

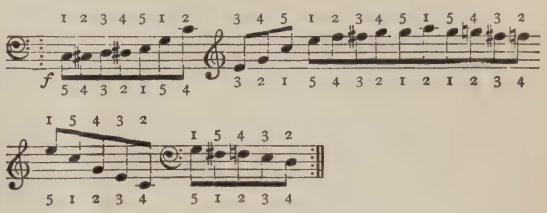
Always work the left hand alone, trying to play with the utmost possible accuracy—and faster than the piece really ought to be played. It is on the bass that everything rests. The basses can never be too decided or confident.

When working at a new piece, first read it without playing and analysing it, then read it on the pianoforte correctly. Afterwards work separately at all the technical or rhythmic problems. Then combine the whole, listening with the utmost attention. It is at this moment that we begin to exercise memory. There are three ways of doing this : by the eyes, by the ears, and by the fingers. I also recommend that passages particularly difficult to remember be written from memory when the student is away from the pianoforte. Unity of interpretation is afterwards easily acquired. Do not be indulgent towards your own playing.

Study of the scales, so necessary for speed and evenness of touch, should not be mechanical. To practise scales for hours together is profitless. At first the rhythms will give life to this study. But above all, the scales must be worked at with different nuances from ff to ppp, crescendo when ascending, diminuendo when descending, and vice versâ.

Work at the scales in all the tones with both the C and the regular fingering. Press very heavily, then very lightly. Work in thirds, in sixths, in tenths ; then f with one hand and p with the other ; staccato with one hand and legato with the other. Do not forget the chromatic scale.

Manual strength and dexterity are increased by working at contraction and extension in the same exercise. For instance :



You should frequently study fragments of morecaux, difficult passages, and so be in possession of a number of these, already mastered. Great variety is essential in working at exercises. If it is found that certain exercises give a particularly satisfactory result, they should be repeated many times. But as soon as you feel that a difficulty is mastered, it is good to aim at mastering something else.

Practise with changes of intensity of sound and movement and accent and rhythm ; first with similar action in both hands, then with different action—f in the right, p in the left ; smooth and continuous in the right hand, detached in the left.

Legato pp and slow is very difficult, because for smooth and continuous playing pressure is necessary ; on the other hand, to press is to play loudly. Pressure of the fingers should be strong enough to produce the smooth effect, and yet soft enough not to produce the loud effect.

Do not practise too strenuously. Everything should be free and supple ; body, shoulders, arms, wrists, hands—but the fingers should remain firm. Always choose that method of fingering with which you feel most at ease.

In practising any musical instrument, the most difficult thing, in my opinion, is to be able to listen to oneself intelligently. What wasted hours when a pupil works uncontrolled and without concentration ! We should endeavour to attain to the utmost degree of perfection even in the slightest details. Rather do we content ourselves with too little, and work too often without thinking. Why spend hours over difficulties which can easily be solved? Dwell upon the technical problem that worries you ; pass over what you can do naturally and without effort.

Real playing of the pianoforte is impossible without perfect technique ; this alone enables you to interpret a work with the requisite perfection. The best work of all is that of the brain ; it is from this that we obtain the greatest economy of time.

To obtain a beautiful sound [says Thalberg] one must, as it were, knead the keyboard with a hand of velvet, the keys being felt rather than struck. The utmost possible suppleness of fore-arm, wrists, and fingers is indispensable. Avoid the method — so ridiculous and in bad taste—of delaying the striking of the song notes until those of the basses have been struck, thus producing throughout the piece continuous syncopated effect.

There should be nothing extravagant in the movements of the body, which, none the less, must be free and untrammelled. And there must be considerable repose in arm and hands, which latter should remain supple. It is a good thing to be always listening to oneself while playing, in order to learn to judge oneself with the utmost severity. As a rule, we play too much with the fingers, not sufficiently with the mind. To play too quickly is a most serious defect. It is far more difficult than one thinks not to hurry, not to play quickly. Some pianists use the pedals with such a lack of reason and logic that their sense of hearing is perverted and they lose all idea of pure harmony.

Pass gradually from a slow tempo to a quick one, and that rhythmically.

Sound is the most appreciable quality of the pianoforte. It should be worked at from the very beginning. What is the reason why we play loudly? Evidently because we are made to work hard. We should be made to play piano, or at most mezzo-forte. Articulation should be assured, and without the slightest violence, the soft finger-ends attacking. Immediately the result will be found to be excellent. The sound will improve and become more singing in quality. Methods of instruction are continually being modified, according to age and ability. The pupils' difficulties are not the same for all alike. One hand will quite naturally play a shake or double notes, which another can master only with great difficulty. Field, for instance, could never play a loud shake, in spite of his best efforts. By slow and concentrated work, however, listening to oneself the while, the pupil will always succeed in improving the sound-quality obtained from the pianoforte.

Too great insistence cannot be laid on the utility—nay, the necessity—of slowness: on this point the greatest masters are unanimous. Georges Mathias told me that Chopin forced his pupils to work slowly and legato at first, with a very full, effortless sound. Stephen Heller was fond of repeating the pregnant phrase: 'If work is very slow, progress will be very rapid.' And Saint-Saëns would often say in his humorous manner: 'Work slowly, then more slowly, and finally very slowly.'

Never lose patience at the necessity of very slow practice. Only thus do we attain the requisite sureness and accuracy. This slowness, which I regard so highly, necessitates incessant attention being bestowed on touch and on the quality of the sound resulting therefrom. Instead, therefore, of accustoming yourself to play fast, practise playing slowly; this is the only efficacious way of making progress.

Before beginning work, we must know what we want to do: think first, then play. A technical problem studied inteiligently, aiming at effective variants, brings speedy results and certain progress.

Accentuation in the language of music corresponds to punctuation in the language of literature. The whole theory of style is based on the analogy of music with spoken language, on the necessity of separating the phrases, of punctuating and graduating the strength of the sound:

> To play the pianoforte [said Stephen Heller] four qualities are requisite: will, reflection, expression, and intelligence. These four qualities create an artistic individuality. Play musically, work with the head more than with the fingers, think of the quality of sound you produce, play rhythmically. Rhythm is life.

He also said:

> The progress of a pupil depends more on the extreme attention he bestows on study than on the number of hours seated before the pianoforte.

The greater the speed you attain, the less should be the articulation. Remember that you distort a piece of music when you constantly play it fast; slowness is indispensable for perfection; too great a speed is invariably accompanied by inaccuracy.

The metronome is indispensable for fixing a movement and ascertaining its continuance at the end of a certain time of playing, and consequently for rectifying mistakes or discrepancies either in accelerando or in rallentando, and in increasing or diminishing speed by very short intervals.

Mozart said:

> It is easier to play fast than slowly. But is it good to do so? The listeners see the pianoforte played, but they hear only a noise incapable of inspiring them with emotion.

Does it not seem strange to maintain that virtuosity is opposed to beauty when Bach, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Weber, Schumann, Liszt, Chopin, and Saint-Saëns composed specially for the virtuosi? Is any music more beautiful than the Studies of Chopin, more dazzlingly brilliant than those of Liszt?

Are not the Concertos of Saint-Saëns—the rhythmical and melodious character of which is suitable only for virtuosi—and those of Liszt—even in these days amazing in their variety, audacity, and ingenuity—works for virtuosi? And is not modern music, Debussy and Ravel, intended for them also?

I cannot bring these reflections to a close more fittingly than by quoting the following lines from a letter addressed to me a few months ago by Francis Planté, one of the noblest of contemporary artists:

> More than ever am I a scholar persevering in the search and pursuit of the better; that better which is calumniously called the enemy of the good when we advise lone to 'let well alone,' but which nevertheless constitutes the true essence of art.
>
> (Authorised translation by Fred Rothwell.)

NEW LIGHT ON LATE TUDOR COMPOSERS

By W. H. Grattan Flood

XVI.—William Daman

Of the creative powers of William Daman (whose name is variously written Damon, Dammon, De Man, and De Maunde), both as composer and arranger, ample evidence is forthcoming; but as to his biography, the most meagre details were absent until the publication of vol. 10 of the Huguenot Society's Publications. Not even in the second edition of Grove's monumental work is there any attempt at biographical detail, save that 'he was certainly dead before March 23, 1593.' Mr. Henry Davey's account of him is short, therefore I quote it in full:

> William Damon (Daman) was apparently one of the Royal Household. Besides the harmonized Psalter of 1579, and the contrapuntal one of 1591 (in which he is described as 'late one of Her Majesties Musitions'), he composed motets and anthems. There are five in the Christ Church part-books, and others in Add. MSS. 29,372-7 (Myriell's Collection), and in Paston's Lute-books.

One thing is certain: William Daman, though living thirty years in England, was a native of Liège. Mr. G. E. P. Arkwright suggests that Daman 'came to England between 1561 and 1565'; but a more definite date may be fixed from an entry, dated 1580, in the Huguenot Society's Publications (vol. 10, part 2, p. 370):

> Guillam Damon, one of her Majestes servantes, borne in Luke, hath bene here xvij yeares, and is of the Italian Churche. No denison. He hath v children, borne in England.

We can fairly assume that Daman was born c. 1538, at Liège, and came to England between the years 1561 and 1563. As his children—five in number—were all born in England, we can fairly assume that he married an Englishwoman. An entry of 1568 describes him as 'Gulielmo de Ammano of Liège.' Another entry in the Huguenot publications, under date of 1571, describes him as 'William Demawnde, musician, an Italian, and hath been in this realm x years.' He was then living in Broad Street Ward, in the parish of 'St. Peters le Poore,' and had, apparently, arrived in England in 1562, having been brought over by Thomas Sackville, Lord Buckhurst, who, according to the 'Dictionary of National Biography,' throughout his life 'entertained musicians the most curious which anywhere he could have.' Lord Buckhurst was created Earl of Dorset in 1567.

It is evident that Lord Buckhurst retained William Daman as a household musician from 1562 to 1579, and in the latter year he was taken into the service of Queen Elizabeth.

In 1579, at the request of his friend, John Bull, 'citizen and goldsmith of London,' Daman arranged an edition of psalm-tunes, entitled:

> The Psalmes of David to English meter with Notes of foure partes set unto them, to the use of the Godly Christians for recreatying themselves instede of fond and unseemly Ballades.

The Preface to this scarce volume was written by Edward Hake, one of those who had harmonized Day's Psalter of 1563. It is well to note that Daman himself more or less disowned the publication, which was put on the market by John Bull, and had not been revised by Daman, who roughly jotted down the four-part arrangement at his friend's house.

Daman retained his position as 'one of her Majesty's musicians' from 1579 till his death. Not unnaturally, as being of the Italian Church, he composed numerous Latin Motets, of which three are in Christ Church Library, namely, 'Confitebor tibi,' for five voices; 'Omnis caro,' for six voices; and 'Prædicabo laudes,' for six voices. One of his English Anthems, 'O Heavenly God,' for five voices, is also in Christ Church Library, as is also an instrumental piece in six parts. The British Museum (Add. MSS. 29,246-7) has a lute arrangement of Daman's sol-faing solo, and of his setting in Italian tablature of his 'Spem in alium,' in two parts (Add. MSS. 31,992), for five voices. One of his best-known compositions is his five-part 'Miserere,' which is praised by Dr. Walker in his 'History of Music in England' (1924) as 'sincere and expressive.' It is now easily accessible in Mr. Arkwright's 'Old English Edition,' No. 21.

Daman died early in the year 1591, and his nuncupative will was proved by his widow, Anna Daman, executrix, in the person of her proctor, Thomas Ashwood, notary public, on July 2, 1591, the inventory being sworn at £21 7*s*.

Curiously enough, a few months after Daman's death his best-known work was issued posthumously, viz.:

> The former Booke of the Musicke of M. William Damon, late one of her Majesties Musitions, containing all the tunes of David's Psalms, as they are ordinarily sung in the Church; most excellently by him composed into 4 partes. In which sett the highest part singeth the Church Tune. Published for the recreation of such as delight in Musicke, by W. Swayne, Gent. Printed by T. Este, the assigne of W. Byrd, 1591.

This 'sett' was published in four volumes, followed by another set of four volumes, being the second part of the work, and entitled:

> The second Booke of the Musicke of M. William Damon, containing all the Tunes of David's Psalms, differing from the former in respect that the highest part singeth the Church tune.

In regard to this publication, the learned Bishop of Truro (the Right Rev. Dr. Frere) tells us that it is 'the earliest systematic setting of the melody in the upper part in England,' and he adds: 'Two new four-line tunes appear, which were not in the earlier collection and are of present interest, Psalm 25, London (or Southwell), S. M., and Windsor (or Eaton).' Complete sets of these two publications are extremely rare.

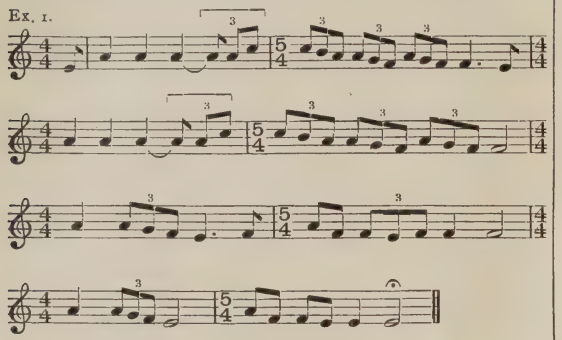
MUSIC IN ALBANIA

By Paul Edmonds

I found two kinds of music in Albania—the modern imported article as performed by a brass band in front of the President's house at Tirana, and the true music of the country, which is now played and kept alive only by gipsies. The brass band music was of the usual popular order—American jazz (the players had been trained in the States), the Barcarolle from 'The Tales of Hoffman,' the Toreador's Song, extracts from 'Faust,' and so forth—decently played, but uninspiring. The gipsy music, on the other hand, was extremely stimulating, and on the first hearing I became keen to learn, if possible, something about it. But it was not until I reached the ancient Mohammedan city of Elbasan, in mid-Albania, that a chance occurred. Here, however, I made the acquaintance of one, Lef Nossi, an educated Albanian who spoke English, and he, on my expressing a desire to know more about the music of the country, arranged, with the assistance of the gendarmerie, for some gipsy girls to come to the 'khan' at which I was staying and sing to me, in order to give me an opportunity of transcribing some of the tunes. Accordingly, one morning the gipsies arrived. There were four of them, two girls and two older women. The girls wore the traditional dress of the dancer—a short dark-coloured bodice of velvet, and Turkish trousers of an amplitude that would make the widest Victorian crinoline look meagre. Yards and yards of material must have gone to the making of them, and yards more to the numberless frilly petticoats which showed through the thin stuff of which the trousers were made. Brightly-coloured handkerchiefs were bound round their heads, and long braids of black hair hung loose. Neat shoes, pointed and high-heeled, peeped out below the vast trousers. The two girls, gathering the ample folds of their garments around them, seated themselves on chairs, while the older women squatted on the floor. All had big tambourines.

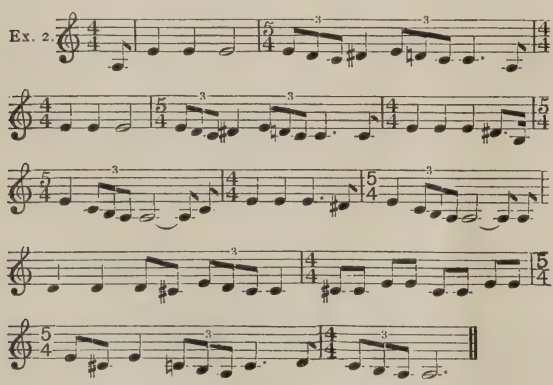
Then, as is customary in Albania, cigarettes were handed round and tiny cups of black coffee, of which we all partook—the gipsy girls, the gendarme, the owner of the 'khan,' M. Lef Nossi, and myself. These ceremonies concluded, the music began. Swaying gently from side to side and beating a rhythm with their fingers on the tambourines, the girls began to sing. I got out paper and pencil and tried to write down the tune, and after a good many repetitions evolved the following approximate transcription :

Ex. 1.



The song, I was told, concerned the adventures of a certain young man of Durazzo who was inveigled into a room by gipsy girls and robbed of all he possessed. I am afraid it was hardly a drawing-room song, and I refrained from asking for more details either of this or of a second song, of which the tune, as nearly as I could get it, was as follows :

Ex. 2.

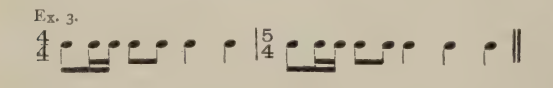


Of a third tune, which was exceedingly intriguing and which I should have much liked to transcribe in its entirety, I could secure only the opening phrases, and these but very roughly ; after that it became too intricate and too elaborate for my powers of transcription.

'Our music,' said M. Lef Nossi, 'is very difficult,' —and I heartily agreed with him.

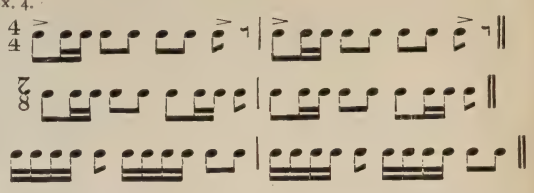
Another factor which added to the difficulty of transcription was the intricacy of the tambourine rhythms, and the fact that the voice part, on the contrary, was smooth and had no outstanding accents or strong beats whatever. A favourite tambourine rhythm was the following :

Ex. 3.



Other rhythms which I heard frequently on this and on other occasions were :

Ex. 4.



The voice part of most of the songs included unexpected progressions and scale-passages which appeared to belong to no particular key. There was in consequence no tonality, as we know it, and its absence gave the music a character and charm impossible to describe. Many Western listeners would doubtless class it vaguely as 'Oriental music,' and dismiss it as of no further significance, but there is a great deal more in it than such people may think, and it is well worth recording in Western notation.

RUSKIN'S PROGRESS IN MUSIC

By Eva Mary Grew

Of all the arts, music has been most often lowered to the position of providing merely amusement ; but as in Ruskin's phrase the end of art is as serious as that of all beautiful and significant things, whether in nature or in the world of thought, its function is a deeper office than to afford entertainment only. Therefore the serious views held by all great writers on the subject of music have a special value—though very few of the great writers have proved to be able exponents of its powers and spiritual essence, its profound meanings and educative influences. Ruskin grew but slowly into a realisation of the particular value of this art ; yet from the beginning it is interesting to note the many references he made to it, because he so frequently found music one of the clearest and most forceful means of illustrating ideas otherwise difficult to express.

His appreciation was hardly an instinctive matter. It was too much a matter of reasoning—of a philosophy derived from reading—to be of impassioned character or highly personal ; and it was not until late in life that he perceived the range of its power and its importance in that education which forms individuality. At first he was struck only by its purely sensuous and 'ear-tickling emotionalism' ; his love of painting held him captive, and though he could not arrest his slowly expanding regard for music and the 'power of sound,' that stronger love appears to have made him jealous of this art. Certainly, in his earlier years he refused to allow it to exert any important influence upon him : the 'intangibility of sound' fascinated him, and he was perplexed to find that he could not grasp the nature of its hold on him in the way he could explain the hold exerted by colour. Unlike Browning, he was never able to master music scientifically or technically ; yet eventually, with a curious confidence, he actually laid down the laws for composers.

In a long essay on the 'Comparative Advantage of the Studies of Music and Painting,' Ruskin sets painting far above music as a means both of education and of recreation :

> The power of enjoying music [he says] is like the power of distinguishing tastes in food, a naturally implanted faculty ; the power of being gratified by painting is either the acquired taste of a cultivated mind, or the peculiar gift of an elevated intellect.

Such a statement, made in a controversial discussion, would have to be met first with the challenge, Define 'music'; for there is much music that requires of its hearer as highly elevated an intellect and as exact an acquired taste as any painting. It is, indeed, the remark of a man who knows a good deal about painting but very little of music, the music he does know being of an elementary kind. Ruskin goes further, and says that as brutes can enjoy music, the faculty of appreciating music, being common to brutes and men, must be held inferior to the faculty of appreciating painting, which last is peculiar 'to him who is made after the image of God.' The rats of the legend certainly followed the piper out of the town of Hamelin; snakes are 'charmed' by musical sounds (or, it may be, by musical rhythms); dogs may howl in duet with a pianist or singer; and the cat who will stay in a room with a gramophone may leave it the moment the player-piano is made to operate. But none of these can be said to be enjoying or objecting to musical sounds, and still less to music as music. The truth of the matter is, that when writing in these terms Ruskin could perceive music only as a crude gratification of the senses, in which even the feelings were scarcely touched.

A second stage in his growth is indicated when he writes:

> I do not mean to depreciate music; let it be loved and reverenced as is just, only let the delight of the eye be reverenced more. The great power of music over the multitude is owing, not to its being less, but more sensual in colour; it is so distinctly and so richly sensual, that it can be idly enjoyed; it is exactly at this point where the lower and the higher pleasures of the senses and imagination are balanced, so that pure and great minds love it for its invention and emotion, lower minds for its sensual power.

Here Ruskin admits inventive (that is, creative) genius in music, and high feeling, and he allows that the music-lover may be the man of pure and great mind, 'made after the image of God,' and far removed from the brute. Lower minds, one can agree, love music solely for its sensual power and its excitement; but the same kind of minds love painting only in the same way and only to the same ends—they demand that every picture shall tell a story, or that it shall stimulate in them certain crude emotions.

The following personal record shows how some latent musical quality in him was eventually touched:

> It puzzles me that I have no recollection of any first sight and hearing of an opera . . . To be taken now to Paris to the feebly dramatic 'Puritani' was no great joy to me; but I then heard—and it will always be a rare, and only once or twice in a century possible, thing to hear—four great musicians (Grisi, Malibran, Mario, Lablache), all rightly to be called of genius, singing together, with sincere desire to assist each other, not eclipse; and to exhibit, not only their power of singing, but the beauty of the music they sang.

But the following expression of opinion shows how ignorant he was in his early and middle periods of the nature of musical creation:

> . . . consider the difference between a fine air and a fine painting. The first thing that strikes us is the proportionate time and labour requisite to produce them. The tune may be dashed off by the inspiration of five minutes; the picture is the result of the labour and thought of months.

Ruskin had probably heard that Rossini, for example, could hit on a good tune in a moment, and that Schubert wrote a song while waiting for his glass of beer to be brought into the garden; but he should have known that painters likewise enjoy the 'inspiration of five minutes,' and that a Beethoven would labour a 'tune' over a day, a week, a year, or half a life-time, while a symphony may take as long to make as the mightiest painting. And the following quotation (taken from the 'Essay on Literature and Letters') intimates that his musical tastes—when excited by surrounding conditions—could be what a refined musician of to-day would frankly call vulgar, or 'sensual' at least:

> I heard a noble service in one of the parish churches yesterday, and a hour and an half of magnificent organ and chorus—three organs answering each other—and the whole congregation joining—as Italians can do always—in perfect melody [here comes an ornate and glowing description of the interior of the church, and then the musical matter resumes], and every possible power of music used to its fullest extent—the best pieces of melody chosen out of standard operas and every variety of style, exciting, tender, or sublime, given with ceaseless and overwhelming effect, one solo unimaginably perfect, by a chosen voice thrilling through the darkness. All music should be heard in obscurity.

This, of course, is still the young man speaking; but it is the young man rather over-confident, and over-confidence becomes rather curiously condescending:

> Let both the arts be admired and encouraged, but let them never be considered as equal; let the musician be honoured, but the painter be revered.

As years passed, Ruskin grew to love, perhaps more than any other, the music of Mozart and Scarlatti, and he gradually realised that due study is necessary for the appreciation of the higher qualities in music. Like most critics, however, he held to the common opinion of Mozartean libretti, declaring those of 'The Magic Flute' and 'Don Giovanni' to be the 'foolishest and most monstrous of conceivable human words and subjects of thought.' And learning to play a little and sing a little, and at the same time turning his attention to matters of metre, prosody, and rhythm, he must needs compose songs as models for all present and future composers—these are given in his collected works, for the amusement, if not the instruction, of musicians.

In the end, Ruskin began to rate music almost sufficiently high, and he certainly set it above architecture as a thing of human value. He almost curses that general degradation which, in his time, had lowered music from the great office it filled educationally among the Greeks, 'to enlist it almost wholly in the service of superstition on the one hand, and of sensuality on the other'; and though his philosophy at the best was rather conventionally Hellenic, he eventually made many comparative illustrations, and uttered many thoughts of a truth that render them valuable for executant and creator. As a general example of this later condition, I quote a few further lines, now from the essay entitled 'Two Paths':

> A well-disposed group of notes in music will sometimes make you weep and sometimes laugh. You can express the depth of all affections by these dispositions of sound; you can give courage to the soldier, language to the lover, consolation to the mourner, more joy to the joyful, more humility to the devout. Can you do as much by your group of lines? Do you suppose the front of Whitehall, a singularly beautiful one, ever inspires the two Horse Guards, during the hour they sit opposite to it, with military ardour?

Yet Ruskin finally leaves the reader with the assured belief that, after all, he was a very muddled thinker about music; for when in his 'Fors Clavigera' he remarks on 'the demoralising effect of sad music,' he throws in the parenthetic declaration that Verdi's sad music is, for instance, the most corrupting type hitherto known. It is by his entirely general remarks, recommendations, and comments that he is of high value to us: it was Ruskin who declared that children should be taught to sing merrily when they are happy, and earnestly when they are sad; which is, I think, one of the wisest things ever said about the application of music to education; and it was Ruskin who, in what was probably his last recorded idea of music, said that it became in certain circumstances 'an expression of the purest hearts.'

THE HANDEL FESTIVAL, PAST AND PRESENT

Although the Handel Festival as we know it dates only from 1857, its genesis may be seen in the Handel Commemoration which began three-quarters of a century earlier and continued till 1791. Burney's 'Account of the Musical Performances in Westminster Abbey and the Pantheon, May 26th, 27th, 29th, and June 3rd and 5th, 1784, in Commemoration of Handel,' is well-known as to its title, but the contents are sufficiently unfamiliar to justify quotation at the present time, when both the author and the subject happen to be topical. Our glance backward to the first large-scale Handel performances will lead naturally to a few words about the Festival fixed for next month.

First, a note on the actual origin of the Handel Commemoration. Burney says that in a conversation between Viscount Fitzwilliam, Sir William Watkins Wynn, and Joah Bates, at the beginning of 1783, Bates remarked that, as London contained at the time more eminent performers, vocal and instrumental, than any other city in Europe, it was a pity there was no periodical event at which they could be brought together for a performance 'on so grand and magnificent a scale as no other part of the world could equal.' It then occurred to the trio that the following year would mark the centenary of Handel's birth, and the twenty-fifth anniversary of his death: why not a Handel commemoration? Steps were at once taken, and a plan for a two-days' celebration arranged. But the King, who took a lively interest in the affair, pointed out that two days 'would not be sufficient for the display of Handel's powers, or fulfilling the charitable purpose to which it was intended to devote the profits.' A third day was therefore decided on,* and, for various reasons, the date was shifted from April to the end of May, a change 'which seems to have been for its advantage,' says Burney, 'as many persons of tender constitutions who ventured to go to Westminster Abbey in warm weather would not have the courage to go thither in cold.'

It is interesting and amusing to read that the first event of its kind, like so many of its successors, was damned in advance. After showing that the band and chorus was the largest on record, Burney says:

> The effects of this amazing band not only overset all the predictions of ignorance and sarcasm, but the conjectures of theory and experience. By some it was predicted that an orchestra so numerous could never be in tune; but even tuning, to so noble an organ, was, for once, grand and productive of pleasing sensations. [An effect that was after all not left for the Shah of Persia to discover!] By some it was thought that, from their number and distance, they would never play in time, which, however, they did most accurately, and without the measure being beat in the usual clumsy manner. By others it was expected that the band would be so loud that whoever heard this performance would never hear again; however, the sound of these multiplied tones arrived as mild and benign at the ears of the audience as they could from the feeble efforts of a few violins in a common concert-room. And, lastly, that no single voice had the least chance of being heard by those who had places remote from the orchestra; but, luckily, this was so far from being true that not a vocal breathing, however feeble by nature, or softened by art, was inaudible in any part of the immense space through which it diffused itself in all directions.

One or two comments suggest themselves here. Note first that this 'amazing' force was a smallish one judged by the standards of to-day. Players and singers together totalled a little more than five hundred, made up thus: first violins, 48; second violins, 47; violas, 26; violoncellos, 21; double-basses, 15; flutes, 6; first oboes, 13; second oboes, 13; bassoons, 26; double-bassoon, 1; trumpets, 12; trombones ('or sacbuts'), 6 ('these performers played on other instruments when the sacbuts were not wanted'); horns, 12; kettle-drums 3; 'double kettledrum,' 1—an orchestra of 250, in which the generous proportion of wood-wind is a striking feature.

Coming to the choir, we find a body of 275, comprising 60 sopranos, 48 counter-tenors, 83 tenors, and 84 basses. The choir was entirely male, except for about a dozen of the sopranos. Among the boys were 10 Chapel Royal, 10 St. Paul's, 8 Westminster, and 6 St. George's, Windsor. It seems odd to-day to think of the alto part in a Handel Festival being sung entirely by men. Each section of the choir, by the by, was allotted 'Principals,' like the various families of the orchestra.

Then, as now, hearers were surprised (some of them perhaps disappointed) to find that the effect of a large body of voices was, after all, very far from being deafening, though it was left to a later generation to discover that the chief thrill of a large choir lies in its pianissimo.

The conductor was Joah Bates, who conducted from a harpsichord connected (presumably by 'trackers') with the specially erected organ:

> The keys of communication . . . extended 19-ft. from the body of the organ, and 20-ft. 7-in. below the perpendicular of the set of keys by which it is usually played.

This must have been one of the first examples of the 'console' principle in this country. Burney adds that > . . . similar keys were first contrived for Handel himself, at his oratorios; but to convey them to so great a distance from the instrument, without rendering the touch impracticably heavy, required uncommon ingenuity and mechanical resources.

The somewhat disparaging reference to the 'usual clumsy manner' of beating time is not isolated. Later Burney says:

> Foreigners, especially the French, must be much astonished at so numerous a band moving in such exact measure without the assistance of a Coryphæus to beat the time either with a roll of paper or a noisy baton or truncheon. Rousseau says that 'the more time is beaten, the less it is kept'; and it is certain that when the measure is broken, the fury of the music-general, or director, increasing with the disobedience and confusion of his troops, he becomes more violent, and his strokes and gesticulations more ridiculous in proportion to the disorder.

* So great was the success, that two days in June were added.

And he goes on to relate (not without gusto) the fate of Lulli, who 'may be said to have beat himself to death by intemperate passion in marking the measure to an ill-disciplined band.'*

Bates was assisted by 'sub-directors,' who

> . . . arranged the performers and conveyed signals to the several parts of that wide-extended orchestra: departments which fell to the lot of Dr. Arnold and Mr. Dupuis, organists and composers to his Majesty, and Mr. Redmond Simpson, eminent and respectable professors of great experience, who may be said to have acted as Adjutant-Generals on the occasion; Dr. Arnold and Mr. Dupuis having been placed, on different sides of the orchestra, over the vocal choir, and Mr. Simpson in the centre over the subordinate instrumental performers.

There was only one general rehearsal for each day's performance, and the present custom of making Rehearsal Day a public occasion originated in the fact that at the first rehearsal held in the Abbey

> . . . more than five hundred persons found means to obtain admission, in spite of every endeavour to shut out all but the performers, for fear of interruption, and, perhaps, of failure in the first attempts at incorporating and consolidating such a numerous band. . . . This intrusion, which was very much to the dissatisfaction of the Managers and Conductor, suggested the idea of turning the eagerness of the public to some profitable account for the charity, by fixing the price of admission to half a guinea for each person.

It happened, too, that the intruding five hundred proved to be as many publicity agents: so great was their surprise 'at the small mistakes and great effects of this first experiment, which many had condemned by anticipation,' that their pleasure and astonishment 'were soon communicated to the lovers of music throughout the Town, to the great increase of subscribers and solicitors for tickets.' In fact the tickets (which had hitherto hung fire with the general public) sold with such dispatch that the subscription had to be closed,

> . . . which was done so rigorously that the author of this account was unable to obtain tickets of any kind on any terms for some of his friends who had neglected to give in their names sooner.

There was only one price for tickets, by the bye—a guinea.

The first performance (which was announced to begin 'precisely at Twelve') narrowly missed opening with a disastrous panic:

> Early in the morning, the weather being favourable, persons of all ranks quitted their carriages with impatience and apprehension lest they should not obtain seats, and presented themselves at the several doors of Westminster Abbey, which was advertised to be open at Nine o'clock; but the doorkeepers not having taken their posts, and the Orchestra [the platform, &c.] not being wholly finished . . . till near Ten o'clock; such a croud of ladies and gentlemen were assembled together as became very formidable and terrific to each other, particularly the female part of the expectants; for some of these being in full dress, and every instant more and more incommoded and alarmed by the violence of those who pressed forward in order to get near the door, screamed; others fainted; and all were dismayed and apprehensive of fatal consequences: as many of the most violent among the gentlemen threatened to break open the doors; a measure which, if adopted, would probably have cost many of the most feeble and helpless their lives; as they must infallibly have been thrown down and trampled on by the robust and impatient part of the croud.

However, 'except dishevelled hair and torn garments, no real mischief seems to have happened. In about an hour the Abbey was full, the doors shut to everyone but their Majesties and their suite, who arrived soon after Twelve'—Royalty being less punctual then than now.

The programme was divided into three parts, and was as follows: Coronation Anthem, 'Zadok the Priest'; Overture to 'Esther'; Dettingen Te Deum; Overture to 'Saul'; Dead March in 'Saul'; part of the Funeral March, 'When the ear heard her'; Gloria Patri from the Utrecht Jubilate; the Anthem, 'O sing unto the Lord'; and a short selection from 'Israel.'

In view of the present-day interest in Handel's operas and other secular work it is worthy of note that at the first of the Pantheon performances the programme included excerpts from the following operas: 'Orlando,' 'Sosarme,' 'Richard the First,' 'Julius Cæsar,' 'Atalanta,' 'Ptolemy,' 'Ætius,' 'Ariadne,' 'Otho,' 'Rodelinda,' and 'Alcina,' together with four Concertos; the choir had an easy time with four oratorio choruses, and the anthem, 'My heart is inditing.' Among these choruses was the 'Hailstone,' which was encored, as it seems to have been at every Festival performance since. Burney's note is worth reproducing:

> This spirited and masterly movement, which was clamorously called for a second time, is written a due Cori. It is one of the few Choruses composed by Handel in which there is no fugue or point of imitation, except in the echoes of the two choirs; but, en revanche, the instrumental parts are so active and full, without occasioning the least confusion, that if the eight voice-parts were silent, the accompaniment might be played with good effect, as a movement in a Concerto; a circumstance difficult to point out in the works of any other composer than Handel—though not so difficult to-day, when Bach is beginning to rival Handel as a popular choral writer.

Financially the commemoration was a huge success, a profit of nearly £8,000 being made, £7,000 of which was bestowed in charity. It is of interest to see how the costs of so vast an undertaking (for that period) worked out, so here is the balance sheet in as condensed a form as possible:

RECEIPTS:	£	s.	d.
Three Westminster Abbey Performances	2,966	5	0
	2,626	1	0
	2,117	17	0
Two Pantheon Performances ...	1,690	10	0
	1,603	7	0
Admission to rehearsals	944	17	10
Donation from the King	525	0	0
Sale of books of words	262	15	0
Total ...	£12,736	12	10

* In beating time by striking his cane on the floor, Lulli injured his foot, causing a wound which mortified with fatal results.

Expenditure:	£	s.	d.
Building platforms, &c., in Abbey and Pantheon	1,969	12	0
Band, &c.	1,976	17	0
Rent, &c., of Pantheon	156	16	0
Advertising	236	19	0
Printing	289	2	0
Doorkeepers	102	1	6
Use of Organ	100	0	0
High and petty constables ...	100	5	0
Gratifications	167	5	0
Medals, tickets, porters, and other sundries	351	8	10
To the Society for Decayed Musicians...	6,000	0	0
To the Westminster Hospital ...	1,000	0	0
Balance	286	6	6
	£12,736	12	10

A fine sounding word is 'Gratifications' for tips!

This 'Account' of Burney is full of capital reading, but no more can be quoted here, as the available space must be given to certain new features and arrangements at the forthcoming Festival.

OPERATIC SONGS AND CHORUSES

Interest in the programmes will centre largely in the operatic extracts, which will be on a far more extensive scale than has been customary. It will of course be urged that the vast transept of the Crystal Palace is not a fitting place in which to demonstrate Handel's work in this line. As, however, the Festival promoters are taking the lead in recognising the growing interest in Handel's operatic work, it would be ungracious to complain on that ground, the more so as the initiative thus taken at the Festival is pretty sure to be developed elsewhere.

Sir Henry Wood tells me that he spent three days at the British Museum examining about forty of the operas, from which he chose five choruses and a number of arias. These have all been scored by Sir Henry, and the Italian text has been done into good singable English by Miss Helen Douglas-Irvine. The whole of Part 1 of the concert on June 8, and practically all Part 2, will be devoted to these operatic numbers. There will be nine arias, two choruses for female voices, three for mixed, and three instrumental extracts. The operas drawn on will be 'Admetus,' 'Rinaldo,' 'Tamerlano,' 'Rodelinda,' 'Deidamia,' 'Sosarme,' 'Alessandro,' 'Lotario,' 'Atalanta,' 'Acis,' 'Alcina,' and 'Xerxes.' The soloists will be Mesdames Carrie Tubb and Margaret Balfour, Messrs. Walter Widdop and Robert Radford. As this programme includes also an Organ Concerto (with M. Marcel Dupré as soloist) and ends with 'Zadok the Priest,' it is surely one of the most attractive in the annals of the Festival.

The remainder of the programmes are inevitably on more or less familiar lines.

THE CHOIR

Here are a few further details. The London contingent of the Choir was practically up to full strength by the beginning of April, and Sir Henry Wood began rehearsals on April 19. There will be a strong force of singers from Yorkshire (trained by Dr. Henry Coward) and another section from Wales. Sir Henry Wood has edited all the music, and Mr. Walter Hedgcock is again in the post he has so long and successfully filled as general musical director and organist. The changing of the hour of the Tuesday and Thursday concerts from the afternoon to the evening will no doubt tap a new public, as well as being more convenient for the Choir. These evening concerts will last from 6.30 to 9, with a fifteen minutes' interval.

The appointment of Sir Henry Wood as conductor adds enormously to the interest of the event. This country is rich in purely choral conductors, and almost as well off in regard to orchestral; but comparatively few stand out as conductors of large-scale works for orchestra and choir combined, and in this small group there is no more prominent figure than Sir Henry Wood. Under Sir Frederic Cowen the Festival showed the hitherto unsuspected potentialities of a huge choral force in subtlety and range of nuance. The best of the performances given under his direction did much to answer the old stock objection that the choral side of the Festival was mere lumbering, stodgy, musical jumboism. Sir Henry may be counted on to develop the choral singing to such a degree as to convert all but a handful of irreconcilables. For, after all, the proof of the pudding is in the eating, and if the Handel Festival, as a result of its unique blend of organization and control can give us a genuinely artistic result that is no less unique, it needs no further justification. The Festival has been killed over and over again—on paper. Its actual end will come when it ceases to give us fine music finely performed, and not before.

G.

THE LOST SYMPHONIES OF CLEMENTI

By Herbert Westerby

I was pleased to see in the Musical Times for February a letter from Mr. Carl Engel, the music librarian of the Congress Library at Washington, directing attention to the sketches of at least four Symphonies by Clementi, which are in the possession of that Library. Previous to this I had already received from M. Georges de St. Foix, of Paris, his pamphlet on 'Les Symphonies de Clementi,' giving an account of these manuscript sketches, and a discussion of the missing Symphonies in general.

I have translated and made a digest of the essential portions of the pamphlet, and trust it will be of some assistance in solving this problem of the lost Symphonies. M. St. Foix begins by pointing out that it is the misfortune of Clementi to be known nowadays as the composer of Studies and juvenile Sonatinas. As he says: 'Clementi, malgré tout son génie, demeurait l'auteur des trop célèbres sonatines' (the 'too celebrated sonatinas'); in other words, that the outlook and musical knowledge of the average student is not really enlarged beyond that of his early days.

How many of those who learn 'music' know anything of Beethoven's Sonatas by the time they have 'finished' their 'musical' education? Probably not one in twenty. True, they may have heard of, and even tried the 'Prelude,' one or two of Mendelssohn's 'Songs without Words,' and Chopin's Nocturnes, and that, perhaps, is the limit of their subsequent musical knowledge. Who can blame them, therefore, if their vision in the case of Clementi should be limited to the 'too celebrated Sonatinas.' Personally, I never use sonatinas—the sonata-form, I think, should be avoided for the earlier stages of pianoforte teaching; but if sonatas are used subsequently, then the best of Clementi's are worthy to stand with those of Beethoven, not to mention Mozart and Haydn. To resume :

> Auber [says M. St. Foix], had he not told the pianist Marmontel that the orchestral compositions of Clementi had only relative merit, and that they seemed very weak [pâles] beside those of the three great masters of the classic age?
>
> But now [says M. St. Foix] that the work of Clementi begins to be better known, and that it gives place to serious study, now that a remarkable biography (that of Paribeni, in Italian, 1922) allows a 'vue d'ensemble' at once serious and profound of both his life and his art, it seems to us that the moment has come to call attention to a discovery which we take to be indispensable for the musical biography of the Roman master in the first place, and very important as regards the history of the Symphony in general. . . . With the exception of two Symphonies written at the opening of his career, in 1787 (London: Longman & Brodrip), in a 'spirituel' style—a blend of light Italian with that of Haydn—all the orchestral compositions of Clementi had somehow disappeared, without leaving, strange to say, the slightest trace of their existence. . . . After long years had passed in vain research, we had begun to believe the hypothesis that Clementi in a moment of despair at the end of his career had done away with all his Symphonies, which the most famous orchestras in Europe had been eager to play.

M. St. Foix then relates how by a 'hasard providentiel' the Clementi manuscripts were revealed, and acknowledges his indebtedness to Mr. Carl Engel, of the Congress Library at Washington, whose letter (already referred to) appeared in the February number of the Musical Times. How that > . . . after a sorting out, followed by a serious examination of a confused heap of unclassified manuscripts, often very difficult to read, covered with erasures, suppressions, and transformations, one could see emerge a work at once 'spirituel' and grandiose. These interesting manuscripts show us with what unwearied patience the old master, never satisfied, wrought his work to a high level, and how high was the artistic ideal which he aspired to in the latter years of his life.

Dr. Mansfield refers to the fact that > . . . between 1785 and 1832 more than twenty of Clementi's Symphonies were performed in London alone, not to speak of performances at Paris and the various German musical centres.

Of these, Mr. Engel, in his note, says that

> . . . the greater portion of at least four Symphonies by Clementi, and a great many sketches of other orchestral compositions, all in the handwriting of Clementi, are in the Washington Library, having been 'bought at an auction sale at Sotheby's.'

These manuscripts comprise a hundred and fifty-four sheets of music, the Symphony pieces containing about four hundred bars :

> Clementi, with his naturally critical and unsatisfied disposition, had never been able to decide about publishing any of his great Symphonies, and it is there that the discovery of the manuscripts at Washington sheds new light on a problem hitherto reckoned as insoluble.

Clementi would not attempt to destroy them, and > . . . the truth is that he had not been able to consider his symphonic creations as sufficiently perfected. . . . He would not cease to improve and correct them, to suppress or readjust such and such a passage, and at the same time transfer such and such a portion of one Symphony to another! Also one sees him correcting orchestral parts which have already served in the orchestra, covering them with erasures or new sketches which makes the reading of his manuscripts almost impossible.

The margins had been cut, but where they still exist they contain curious notes. For instance, on the Symphony in D, in English, there is :

> Lent to Emma [that is, his wife, who was English] 50 + 5 − 10 sh. 110 + 50 + 15 + 4.

In another instance, Clementi, who was fond of the classics, has tried to scan in Latin verse, or to inscribe Greek words. What purposes the following served we do not know :

> Non cuicumque datum est habere nasum.

And, further :

> Risu inepto res ineptior nulla est.

But we can guess.

We read also :

> Pour ma Symphonie in G, two airs—'Vive Henri IV.' and 'Charmante Gabrielle.'

And it is interesting to note that these two airs, which had become National Airs under the Restoration Government, ought to figure in one or another of the Symphonies which Clementi had performed at Paris in 1816-17.

M. St. Foix says further :

> There are two periods, quite distinct, in the symphonic career of Muzio Clementi. The first work appeared in 1786, with the two Symphonies, Op. 18—all that he ever published. . . . This period ended about 1796, and should comprise at least ten Symphonies or Overtures performed between 1790 and 1796 at the great London concerts, where they alternated with those of Haydn and of his young pupil Pleyel, both of whom came to the English capital during this period. To gain some idea of these compositions (vanished, alas!), we must be content to read some of the great Pianoforte Sonatas, written by Clementi between 1790 and 1796. Of these there is, notably, one in G minor (Op. 34), of which we know, from a definite statement by his pupil Louis Berger, that it is only a transcription of a Symphony played in London between 1790 and 1796. This admirable and vigorous work impresses by the novelty of its form, the beauty of ideas, its wealth of development, and the 'Beethoven' influence which inspires it throughout. But in spite of all that, nothing, alas! can reveal to us the beautiful effects which the composer had been able to obtain from the orchestra, and the absence of any orchestral score of Clementi's from this period makes us all the more regret this disappearance, inasmuch as the style of the great master's Sonatas appears more grandiose, more noble, and more persuasive.
>
> These Sonatas, especially those in F major (of Op. 36), and G minor and D minor from Op. 40, are only, in our opinion, transcriptions of Symphonies, and the more one knows them the more he can explain how the contemporary press, in recording the performances of Clementi's great Symphonies, did not hesitate to rank them with those of Haydn and sometimes with Beethoven.
>
> One can admit without going very far that the accounts given, and the exceptional eulogies bestowed both in England and Germany, could not be prompted except by the appearance of works of real and exalted worth. . . . At first sight it would seem that the Washington MSS. belong to the second symphonic period of Clementi. This period opens with the year

1813 and closes in 1824, the date of the last Symphony, named the 'Grand National' Symphony. In 1813 the London Philharmonic Society was founded. This memorable event gave Clementi the opportunity to use an admirable orchestra, that for which Beethoven, in 1823, wrote the Symphony with chorus, which likewise figured in the programmes of the famous Society with the great Symphonies of Clementi. At once the old master (between 1813 and 1824), renewing his untirable strength and youth, begins a new symphonic cycle as rich and brilliant as the first; and this time, if the influence of Haydn is still noticeable in the themes of some of the Finales, one feels that the art of Beethoven, and the force of the Romantics, monopolises his thoughts. Ten great Symphonies and some Overtures followed during the course of these eleven years. One in 1813, for the foundation of the Philharmonic Society; the second, dated April, 1816, would be performed at the Italian Theatre, Paris, in December, 1816, and January, 1817; and a third played at the same theatre in the spring of 1817; then two other Symphonies were composed in 1818 and 1819, and performed in London on January 11 and March 1, 1819—this should be the first portion of one of those which are preserved in the British Museum. It consists of a sombre, slow, and somewhat 'Wagnerian' Introduction in D minor, and a big and powerful Allegro. The MS. bears the title 'Sinfonia 4a per grande orchestra di Muzio Clementi.' Max Unger thought this piece to be identical with one of which an analysis was sent to Breitkopf & Härtel, of Leipsic, on August 26, 1819, but it did not prove, on examination, to be so. It appears that the master, returning to work on these MSS. in D minor and D major, transposed them into the keys of C minor and C major in view of the performance of three new Symphonies for the concerts of the Gewandhaus at Leipsic in 1822. One should recognise them by the reproduction of the initial themes of two of the Symphonies on the saucer of a cup in Saxon porcelain, given as a souvenir to the composer by the directors of these concerts, which unfortunately has disappeared to-day. It is quite certain, however, that the manuscript entitled 'Sinfonia 4a' and the piece in D major prove that the London version is the earlier one.

A Symphony was played in November, 1821, at Munich, and, as we have said, three new Symphonies by Clementi from January to March, 1822, at Leipsic; their success was evident, and the reports very enthusiastic; their publication was considered by Breitkopf. They are written in the keys of G minor, D major, and C minor.

The following year, in April, 1823, a new grand Symphony (never played, however) was written for the Philharmonic Society, London, and on March 5, 1824, at the first of the concerts of 'Ancient and Modern Sacred Music' (a Society similar to our ancient 'Concerts Spirituels' at Paris, with a hundred and twenty performers under the direction of Rossini), was performed at the beginning of the second part of the concert. This should be one of the Symphonies previously heard, for it does not bear the description 'new.'

To resume. The following March 22, an Overture (MS.) was played at a 'première audition' to terminate the first concert of the Philharmonic Society, and it is probable that it acted as a real 'Overture'—in one movement only.

Finally, the last Symphony of Clementi, in which comes the British National Anthem, with canons and grand variations, and which gives to the work the title of 'Grand National' Symphony, was performed for the first time at the 'Concerts of Sacred Music Ancient and Modern,' on March 26, 1824.

It remains now to give some brief indications of the MSS. at Washington:

Symphony No. 1 (in C)

The initial part is wanting, but a re-entry of the first theme gives it thus:

Ex. 1.

The second movement, of a hundred and sixty-seven bars, is complete. It begins in the key of F:

Andante con moto.

Ex. 2.

It is followed by a Minuetto Allegretto:

Ex. 3.

and the Finale, Allegro vivace:

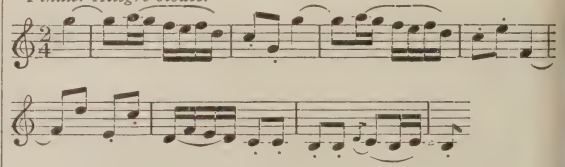
Ex. 4.

Finale. Allegro vivace.



Symphony No. 2 (in D)

The first movement is wanting. The Larghetto cantabile is, however, complete in the key of G:

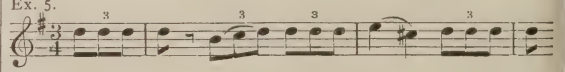
Ex. 5.



This Symphony was:

> . . . one of the two Symphonies of Clementi performed in London in 1819, and which the audience preferred, so it is said, to a Symphony of Beethoven.

The Menuet Pastoral which follows, begins:

Ex. 6.

The Finale Allegro leads off with this—a piquant theme:

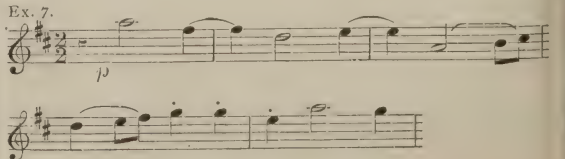
Ex. 7.



SYMPHONY NO. 3 ('National')

Of this, the last of the Roman master's, as played in London for the first time on March 26, 1824, only sketches remain of the first movement. One of these sketches contains the indication 'Suona il pianoforte'—a reminder to direct the work from the pianoforte, as was then customary.

The first theme—an Allegro—reads:

Ex. 8.

The Andante presents, by way of a Prelude, a curious inversion of the National Anthem:

Ex. 9.

followed by its principal theme:

Ex. 10. Andante un poco mosso.

and the Minuet in G:

Ex. 11. Minuetto allegro.

The Finale is also in G:

Ex. 12. Finale.

SYMPHONY NO. 4 (in D)

Of this Symphony there exists only a sketch of the Finale, Allegro vivace, which has three hundred and eighty-three bars. There are some fragments of the Andante cantabile, in G:

Ex. 13.

and a fine Minuet (Allegretto moderato in D minor), which has the direction, in English: 'This Minuet should come immediately after the first Allegro.'

Here is the theme of the Minuet:

Ex. 14. Allegretto moderato.

and of the Finale:

Ex. 15. Allegro vivace.

M. St. Foix has done his part well in focussing our attention on this problem of the lost Symphonies of Clementi, and it seems likely that the next discovery will be made in London, where the composer's life's work was mostly accomplished.

Ad Libitum

BY 'FESTE'

The marked popularity of the early classics, especially Bach, is being explained in a variety of ways. A leading article in the Daily News (what a good omen for the future of music, the growing frequency of such articles in the daily press!), headed 'Back to Sane Music,' says that the > . . . re-discovery of Bach's beauty has given to many of our generation such a thrill as came to stout Cortez when he stood 'silent upon a peak in Darien.'

But is 're-discovery' the right word? Bach's greatness as a composer seems to have missed his contemporaries, who were more concerned with his gifts as a performer and improviser.

Evidence for this is seen in the almost complete oblivion that enveloped his compositions immediately after his death. The discovery of Bach is, after all, an affair of a mere generation, and the present enthusiasm is the natural fruition of the seeds sown by Mendelssohn in Germany and the Wesleys and Benjamin Jacob in England. It began in this country with organ music and the '48,' and its spread to the general public is due largely to the steady output of excellent editions of works that were hitherto practically unknown save by name—e.g., the Chorale Preludes, and the Cantatas and other choral works; and to the work of conductors—above all, Sir Henry Wood—in familiarising the public with the concerted works. Even these factors, however, do not fully explain the present vogue. The Daily News rightly says that 'the secret of the triumphant return of these masters' (Purcell, Handel, and Bach) is due to a characteristic they share in common, 'a sane and serene vision of life, poise of spirit; and they carry their hearers into a larger and calmer atmosphere.'

Dr. Agnes Savill gets even nearer the secret in a recent article in the New Health Society Bulletin. After claiming that music is 'a valuable therapeutic agent,' she goes on:

> The curative value of music, in my belief, lies partly in the healthy physical effect of its rhythm, but still more important is its liberating effect upon the spirit. The music of the older masters—Bach, Mozart, Scarlatti, Haydn—appeals almost to everyone, partly because of its marked rhythm. Such rhythm appears to have a beneficial action upon both body and mind.

I think the case may be put simply in this way: One of the most marked of the psychological results of the war is a desire for movement. It shows itself not only in the dancing craze, but in the practical affairs of life—e.g., the astounding development in transport, whether by land, sea, or air; and in sport we may see its effect in the speeding-up of all games. Thus, when you and I played football we got over the ground with some expedition, but the game was slow compared with that of to-day, when speed is cultivated, often at the cost of skill. I believe some of this feverish unrest has infected even so static a diversion as croquet! Naturally, the desire for movement is shown also in the things of the spirit, and in our particular art it is satisfied by two types of work. For the musical (whether so by instinct or training) there is the vitally-rhythmic music of the early classics; for the rest there is jazz. The latter soon exhausts its appeal—the life of the most popular examples is short—because it has little or no musical interest or variety, either melodic or harmonic. Even its touches of orchestration soon weary. As a vehicle for dancing it will have its use, and so long as people are dance-mad they will be to some extent jazz-mad. I say 'to some extent,' because signs are not wanting that many dancers would welcome something better.

The present appeal of Bach, then, is most probably due to the rhythmic vitality of his music. Its continuity, energy, and tunefulness count for much, too; and we may be sure that the crowds of new devotees who have become so mainly because of its obvious and external qualities will gradually appreciate its more subtle virtues. If so, the Bach vogue has come to stay, for no other composer has left so vast an amount of work in various fields, with so small a proportion of failures.

Another theory is put forward by Mr. W. J. Turner, in the Illustrated London News. First, it is to be noted that he does not speak of a 're-discovery' of Bach. He says instead that we are 'in the last stage of the great revival of Bach which began under Mendelssohn's leadership, and has continued ever since [my remark above to pretty much the same effect was written before I saw Mr. Turner's article] until it has now reached its apex in a popularity which would have astonished our grandfathers, who thought Bach good but dull.' And he continues:

> There is no greater magnet than Bach to-day to draw the musical public into the concert-hall. And the public goes to hear Bach, not at the dictates of fashion, but because it is genuinely thrilled and delighted by his music. It is a fact that the modern school-girl enjoys Bach, enjoys hearing Bach played, and enjoys playing Bach herself. This extraordinary revolution in public taste is the consequence of the increased pleasure in intellectual activity which is so marked a characteristic of our age. Bach fascinates the young because of the intellectual enjoyment they can get out of him.

I am afraid Mr. Turner is unduly kind to our age in crediting it with marked enthusiasm for intellectual activity. Such evidence as may be deduced from the enormous circulation of 'best sellers' of the 'Sheik' and Ethel Dell school, the stacks of journals of the gibbering, chattering type, and the prosperity of the section of the Sunday press that exists largely for the retail of salaciousness from the law courts, hardly supports so comfortable a belief.

The despised Victorian era contained fewer writers, because writing was a vocation, whereas to-day anybody and everybody can and does rush into print, from prize-fighters to cabinet ministers and their wives; and the proportion of people able to read was smaller than to-day. Yet I doubt if there is more intellectual activity now than at the time when such young late-Victorians as Mr. Turner and I were in the pothook-and-hanger stage of writing. So I don't think the intellectual side of Bach appeals much more than ever it did. After all, there were early composers no less brainy, but where are they to-day? They are forgotten because they had not Bach's variety and power of invention.

I write this after having come from Queen's Hall, where there were played at a sitting the six Brandenburg Concertos, with a violin concerto midway. Here was a test for a composer, above all for one who wrote at a time when orchestration as we know it to-day was an undiscovered art. Yet the last of the seven works found me as fresh as at the start, and, so far as one could judge, that was the feeling of the audience in general. And the reason for this extraordinary maintenance of interest lay, I felt, in the music's vigour, continuity, and rhythmic strength. I was conscious of no markedly intellectual reactions. There was tunefulness, expression, humour, thought, and cheerfulness amounting to jollity. At the back of all its moods, however, was rhythmic life and interest, obtained by a variety of means—insistent use of a figure, definite dance measures, cross rhythms and other devices, and perhaps above all by long stretches of typical Bach bass. Some of the most vital pages were founded on little more than the tonic chord. See, for example, what Bach does with the first and second viola parts in the opening section of the sixth Concerto—the first viola being chased at a quaver's distance by the second, while the lower strings, simply sawing out repeated chords of tonic, dominant, and subdominant, seem to be holding the ring. The jazz-mongers talk much of 'symphonised syncopation.' Bless their innocent transatlantic hearts! Bach and his fellows have them beaten hollow by devices that we can go on enjoying all our lives, whereas the 'Rhapsody in Blue' palls after a few hearings.

Yet another explanation of the Bach vogue is put forward by Mr. Carl Saerchinger in the Musical Courier. He says that > . . . we have just reached the degree of musical intelligence which permits us to appreciate Bach. It is not that we are re-discovering him; we are discovering him, in his whole grandeur, for the first time.

I am not so sure that I agree with Mr. Saerchinger in his suggestion that the Bach cult is due to a revolt against sentiment and romanticism. For Bach has his share of these qualities, and the immense popularity of the Passions, the Mass, and the cantatas, is proof that we go to Bach for a good deal more than mere intellectual interest or lively patterning in sound. It must not be forgotten that Bach was the first of the romantics, and if, as Mr. Saerchinger and Mr. Turner seem to predict, there will shortly be a Beethoven revival, it will have little or nothing to do with Beethoven's having been a romantic. It will be the outcome of a re-valuation of his work as a whole, and will involve (1) the scrapping of a good number of weak things that have been kept alive by pianoforte recitalists and other performers, and (2) a more frequent performance of such masterpieces as the Ninth Symphony (complete), the pick of the chamber music, the 'Missa Solemnis,' and 'Fidelio.' The revival may be attended by a new placing of the composer, for it will be seen that the proportion of incontestable masterpieces left by him is small when his huge output is taken into consideration.

One more theory calls for quotation. Mr. Compton Mackenzie in the April issue of the Gramophone says:

> I am beginning to revolt against this excessive worship of Bach at the moment . . . I fancy that the contemporary vogue for Bach is a revolt against noise. Modern composers have been trying to compete with railway trains, motor cars, and omnibuses. This is one reason why modern music is unpopular, for that it is unpopular one must admit. Moreover, people are still emotionally tired, and this worship of Bach is more likely to be the sign of a fatigued public than of improvement in its taste.

But this idea seems to be knocked on the head by the fact that among the safest draws in the concert-room at the moment are Wagnerian extracts, and such dramatic, dynamic, and emotional works as the C minor Symphony. There is plenty of noise in the 'Ride of the Valkyries,' and of emotion in the 'Liebestod,' but I have not observed any diminution in their appeal since the early days of the 'Proms.' when Wagner first got hold of us as we smoked our pipes and, tightly jammed, stood first on one leg and then on the other. And I seem to remember that among the most crowded nights at last season's 'Proms.' were those devoted to Wagner.

Mr. Mackenzie, by the way, responds to 'Discus's' recent challenge, and defends 'Traviata'—very ingenuously. He admits that the accompaniment is mere 'rum-tum-tum,' but holds up as an excuse the fact that 'there is a good deal of rum-tum-tumminess about the libretto that Verdi was using':

> To be bored by the tunes and rum-ti-tum of 'Traviata' means that the listener is bored by the memory of his own youthful folly, or that he is too young to think that he could ever be so foolish himself. To be bored by 'Traviata' is either to admit that the arteries are hardening or that one hasn't any arteries worth hardening.

The case is really far more simple. To be bored by 'Traviata' is no reflection on one's arteries; it merely means that one finds the music poor and lacking in interest.

> Verdi wrote the tunes that 'Traviata' required. To have supplied it with the music he wrote for 'Otello' would have been ridiculous.

The objection to 'Traviata,' however, is less on account of its tunes than of its orchestration. But let us take Mr. Mackenzie's own ground of debate: Verdi wrote the tunes that he was capable of writing at that stage of his development. Had the dates of 'Otello' and 'Traviata' been reversed, 'Otello' would have been weak and 'Traviata' a masterpiece, in spite of the rum-tum-tumminess of its libretto:

> Puccini appears to do something more elaborate with 'Bohême,' but there's plenty of rum-tum-tummi-ness in his melodious bass. Charpentier tried to be too clever in 'Louise,' and the result is that 'Louise' is already falling behind 'Traviata' and 'Bohême' in its appeal to an audience. After all, that finally is what an opera must do, and that is what 'La Traviata' does.

C

'Louise,' I fancy, never appealed much on this side of the Channel. Its hold to-day is certainly small, and the cause lies in its musical weakness. The last time I attended a performance I left half-way through, bored to fury. As to that 'appeal to an audience,' I don't know how 'Traviata' stands, but I fancy its performances are not very frequent. Even if they were, however, the fact would not prove its merit, for the 'Bohemian Girl' and the 'Lily of Killarney' draw steadily in the provinces.

Mr. Mackenzie is a newcomer to music, and naturally his taste is unformed. (I say this with no desire to be offensive.) One has only to read his monthly outpourings on gramophone records to see that. Of course those outpourings are full of life and interest, because literature is his job. But imagine a man who, having spent his life in composing, or as a music teacher, had suddenly become at middle age as susceptible to the appeal of literature as Mr. Mackenzie has to the appeal of music. Imagine this musician at once starting a literary monthly and contributing critical reviews. Should we not find some queer obiter dicta? Think out a few of the astonishing critical statements the sudden enthusiast would make—among others, that a failure to appreciate 'Sketches by Boz' is due to some defect in a reader's arteries, followed by an explanation that Dickens wrote the 'Sketches' in that style because it was the style that suited them; had he used the style for 'David Copperfield' it would have been ridiculous. I dwell on this point because it is one more manifestation of the present-day tendency to attach too much importance to the views of amateurs whose set of values has been arrived at hastily after a few years of casual concert-going, or gramophone orgies. Their views are interesting and occasionally instructive, and their freshness has a charm, but actually they have little weight beside those of critics who have lived with music all their working lives, and who have acquired that historical perspective without which no sound criticism is possible, whether of literature, painting, or music. As Paul England says in his new book, 'Fifty Favourite Operas,' 'Traviata' 'is perhaps the most faded of all Verdi's surviving operas, containing few numbers of outstanding beauty, and several that show the composer at his worst.' It is poor because Verdi as yet showed little of the genius that was later to give him a place beside Wagner himself. Mr. Mackenzie's liking for it is no evidence as to the flourishing state of his arteries; it merely shows that his musical taste is undeveloped.

The limit in the attaching of 'programmes' to well-known music is surely reached in a recent article in the Etude, entitled 'Chopin's Preludes as Interpreted by Liszt.' The author says he is indebted 'to one Laura Rappoldi-Kahrer, a pupil of Liszt, for the main items.' It is a pity he is not more explicit. We should like to know exactly how to share the responsibility for the fantastic 'interpretations' between Liszt and his pupils—for the author tells us that the evidence of Laura Rappoldi-Kahrer is supported by Madame de Kalergis and Wilhelm von Lenz. Here is the programme of No. 12 (the suggested title is 'Duel'):

> Chopin was very jealous of George Sand, who gave him all reason for so being. Here we have another one of those scenes in which the duellists attack one another. Compare, for example, the groups of two notes in the right hand in ascending motion, which depict the encounter of the combatants, who withdraw a few paces after a bit. At the fortissimo (measure 21) the clashing of shields is plainly audible. The opponents take better aim, swords flash (short chords in the left hand). Chopin is wounded. Help comes to him (eighth notes in the right hand). Confusion arises. The wounded one is carried away.

A miniature Battle of Prague!

In No. 15, 'Raindrop,' I like especially the detailed references indicative of the bad state of repair into which the house had been allowed to fall:

The tones on A flat, which are later changed enharmonically to G sharp, are to be played, according to Liszt, most evenly, from the standpoints of both rhythm and dynamics; for raindrops are uniform as to size. Only the melody is to express soul-full-ness. The mood of the second part is quiet, even though there is the sultriness preceding the storm. The wind is heard in the fire-place (C sharp minor part). The storm draws nigh, lightning flashes. There is a peal of thunder, the lightning strikes (E major portion), while the rain now falls in torrents. The sky again darkens, lightning and thunder alternate, and the rain comes through sundry crevices in the ceiling. It is heard coming through holes in the roof. The enharmonic change signifies a brightening of the sky. The first melody is again heard. Finally, the dropping ceases altogether. Chopin, with candle in hand, looks whether the rain is still falling. In his dreams he seems to hear the rain still dropping, though round about him everything is at rest.

However, this is not the only example of bad weather. In No. 24, we are told that . . . the left-hand figures portray an intense storm, while the right hand gives expression to a dramatic motive. Lightning rends the firmament. A tree is felled. Everything is illuminated by the frequent electrical displays. Again the force of the storm is renewed, only to become more demoniacal. Still no rain falls. In the distance are heard gloomy sounds (C minor portion). They draw nearer and nearer (D flat major). All of a sudden (A in the right hand) an electrical display illuminates the entire scene. The storm draws near until a cloudburst (chromatic scale descending)' transpires. Trees are uprooted, the thunder peals, lightning [why not 'electrical display' once more?] continues until the close. Everything is annihilated!

This programme makes considerable demands on the pianist. He has to get off the mark promptly with 'an intense storm,' and to show its becoming more demoniacal almost at once; clearly the storm is directly overhead, as the firmament is rent, everything illuminated, and a tree felled; yet a moment later the player has to show the storm drawing near; and all the while he has to keep something up his sleeve for the cloudburst, the uprooting of more trees, and the final annihilation of everything.

It is a relief to go indoors and witness a discussion, evidently between husband and wife. This is illustrated by No. 22, called 'Ill-humour':

A forceful melody in the left hand represents an individual, who begins in the bass, impatiently pushing his way forward, while the right hand represents another person seeking to quiet him. The angry tamping of feet is heard (fortissimo), which becomes ore and more violent. Impatience reaches its ight, and both parties slam the door in each other's es.

dently the impatient stamper who began in the ent from bad to worse, and finally got so 'het o become the actor in No. 18, 'Suicide':

An unfortunate person is seen climbing a high tower, in insane excitement. The precipice lies yawning at his feet. As he looks into the depths he is overcome by dizziness. Still he continues in his mad career. Now he has reached the tower (eighth notes). One step, yet another—only four more remain; then comes the fall, and his body is dashed to pieces (trill with figure). The spectators are awe-stricken, and shudderingly turn away from the terrible sight. Two short chords, and the tragedy is brought to a close.

Let us pursue the adventures of this 'unfortunate person' to the bitter end—No. 16, 'Hell':

The jaws of Hell open up. A bevy of noisy devils jump out, pushing one another with vigorous strokes. By and by they return to the awful abyss. At the stretto there is a general scuffle, as if all wanted to descend simultaneously. Finally, one of the imps reappears. All of a sudden (B flat major) he jumps into the air with a rushing noise and falls again; the others follow suit, and then all together enter the nether world. The jaws of Hell close upon the scene.

(What perverse imp makes me associate that 'bevy of noisy devils' with certain hard-hitting pianists?)

One would have thought that the climax of gruesome 'interpretation' had been reached in 'Hell.' It is, however, beaten by No. 9, 'Vision,' a product of sheer stupidity and diseased imagination that must be read to be believed:

Chopin is convinced that he cannot write any more music and attempts to locate the spot in his brain where new thoughts are conceived. In order to do this, he splits his skull in twain. It is imperative to differentiate sharply between the sixteenth and thirty-second notes. In the third and fourth measures the trill in the left hand represents the blood trickling. The master is desperate not to find anything (measure 5). The blows of the hammer grow more and more intense, until at the A flat portion (measure 7) he succeeds in discovering his lost power. Calmed thereby, he puts the parts together again, and closes in satisfied mood.

Being in one of my literal frames of mind at the moment of writing, I feel that the main weakness of this programme lies in the impossibility of a man splitting his own skull, investigating the contents, and afterwards doing the necessary repairs. Such an operation could be managed only by a second party. I suggest a much more feasible scheme—'Explaining a Joke to a Friend':

Chopin finds that a joke he has made is not fully comprehended by a friend. In order to bring about the desired result he splits his friend's skull in twain. (It is important to differentiate sharply between the sixteenth and thirty-second notes, the former representing the sharpening of the surgical instrument, the latter the nervous forebodings of the friend.) In the sixth and seventh measures the staccato semiquaver chords, pianissimo, show the friend furtively counting the loose change in his pocket before losing consciousness. Chopin finds his drastic method of explaining a joke far less expeditious than he had expected (measures 12-20), and his efforts become more and more intense (measures 20-25). At the 27th measure one half of the split head smiles faintly, while the other murmurs, 'Hoots, mon!' Relieved by these signs of dawning intelligence, Chopin puts the parts together again, and a few hours later a further remark, 'Och, aye!' shows the operation to have been entirely successful.

Silly? Of course it is, but not a bit more so than the 'interpretations' put forward above.

Seriously, I hope that Mr. Calvocoressi or some other authority on Liszt will be able to assure us that he was innocent of these ridiculous 'interpretations.'

Points from Lectures

Amusing things about choir-boys were said in the course of an address at Bristol, by the Rev. J. H. White, vicar of St. Mary's, Tyndall's Park. One boy, on being told he would be given a penny a service, rejected the penny, like the labourers in the vineyard, but decided to join the choir on condition that he received all the choirmaster's cigarette cards. Whereas the average boy enters the 'sacred edifice' as the pressman calls it, with a certain degree of awe and trepidation, after wiping his boots and removing his hat, the choir-boy enters as though he had bought the place, or at least with the assurance that it could not continue its chequered existence without his patronage. School was barely reached up to time by boys who, when they became choir-boys, were seldom less than half an hour to an hour before the time for practice or service. A specimen of letters received by vicars called attention to the pandemonium caused by choir-boys:

> Not content with walking along my wall and swinging on the garden gate three times a week, this evening a section of the boys tied a sky-rocket to my wife's tortoiseshell cat. She has not returned: I refer, of course, to the cat. I must ask you by virtue of these presents either to indemnify my wife or return the cat.

Although by report choir-boys have been guilty of every form of wickedness, they never seem to come within reach of the arm of the law. This is through no lack of complaint, but it would seem that the seeing eye and the hearing ear of the police constable are directed towards the top of the spire when passing a church on practice nights. Yet the choir-boy is a very lovable creature, and we owe more to him than we are wont to concede.

In Scotland, books, sermons, and bitter discussions used to be devoted to the question of the introduction of the organ into divine worship. One of the Baird lectures of the Rev. Dr. Wauchope Stewart manages to summarise the situation in these few lines: The question was whether or not there was Scriptural authority for the use of the instrumental music. The position taken up by the opponents was, that if the Christian Church accepted it from the Old Testament, it was logically committed to the whole sacerdotal system. It was not by the superiority of their arguments in the Scriptural discussion that the champions of instrumental music gained the day, but by the pragmatic test of its value as an aid to devotion.

Concluding his series of Aberdeen University music lectures, Mr. Willan Swainson propounded two questions, the answers to which are rather involved—in fact, verbally polyphonic: (1) What did polyphonic practice achieve in itself? and (2) What influence has it had on subsequent art, and what may it be expected to have in the future? Polyphonic art, he said, had given us the most serene and lofty expression of religious aspirations that the world had known. The greatest change at the time of Bach was the turning from modal tonality to the entirely different harmonic one. The stages of development are understood by musical readers. Mr. Swainson sees that in the present day the process is being begun all over again. And it might almost be said with certainty that the music of the future would lean even more strongly to the polyphonic side. Everything we know about the artistic framing of words to music we had learnt from the polyphonic age. In that particular, our most successful song-writers to-day are going back to the methods of the polyphonists, and finding therein a new freedom.

Musicians could not do without audiences. On this theme, Mr. D. Breen told students at the Cork Municipal School of Music that if music of the symphonic kind was composed in Ireland, composers would find very few people to listen to it. The three men of Irish birth who made the greatest mark in the history of Irish music had to go to England simply because they could not make a living in Ireland.

That Reading has a musical history is appreciated from the fact that 'Sumer is icumen in' originated there; but in a lecture given to the local Literary and Scientific Society, Mr. S. T. Chamberlain establishes other claims. Extracts from old Church accounts showed that mystery or miracle plays were early performed at Reading, and that the town was not behind in the provision of organs, and therefore of choirs. The musical festivals held there were said to be the forerunners of the Three Choirs Festivals. Early experiments of John Curwen in connection with Tonic Sol-fa were made while his father was the minister of the Congregational Church in Castle Street. Dr. F. J. Read was associated with the town, and one of his most worthy pupils was Sir Hugh Allen.

'To announce a Bach concert is to make certain of a full hall.' This fact had surprised Sir Henry Wood, so Mr. Rutland Boughton told an audience at the Birmingham Midland Institute. Mr. Boughton theorised that it was the post-war revolt against emotionalism which had caused the present generation to seek its musical solace in two directions, one being to endeavour to write music that was free from emotionalism, and the other to search back into the past for music such as that of Bach to minister to their need. Yet it was wrong, he thought, to regard Bach as an unemotional and frigid constructor of permutations and combinations in sound, guided solely by a regard for musical mathematics. The polyphonic energy displayed was so great, and the forms adopted so trying to his hearing, that the beginner failed to grasp the nature and substance of the material offered him. Yet the Bach student of to-day might listen to the master's concertos, and marvel at the beauties of their slow movements. When he heard the greatest works, such as the B minor Mass and the 'St. Matthew' Passion, there was both an appeal to the emotions and the dramatic sense of the audience in those massive compositions. Certain it was that the re-discovery of Bach was a genuine thing. Bach was a Church musician (added the report of 'C. F. M.' in the Birmingham Mail), and naturally he devoted a very great part of his time to music for the Church, but he did not confine himself to it. He did not wrap himself in mysticism, and express that in his music, but he was a man of every human attribute, and his humanity revealed itself in his compositions. He was gifted with a sense of humour of the homely German type, as the 'Peasant' and 'Coffee' Cantatas and 'Phœbus and Pan' showed us. And he did not disdain the ordinary affairs of life—for was he not a keen business man?

Taste in music was discussed by Mr. S. E. Lovatt at the Newcastle Clef Club. Speaking of musical criticism, he said that the newspaper musical criticism of this country was unsurpassed in the whole world for the soundness of its judgment, its sanity, and its sincerity. Musical critics, like doctors, sometimes disagreed ; but as a corrective for those who criticised the critics, he advised them when next they went to a concert to sit down and write an account of the performance, setting out in good English their impressions, and having due regard for the music and the performers, while keeping in the background as well as they could their own prejudices. J. G.

Occasional Notes

The June issue of the Musical Times will be the thousandth number. There will be some special features, literary and pictorial, and the Supplement will include a facsimile of No. 1.

The April Musical Times contained a brief announcement of the Oxford Festival of Music in commemoration of the Tercentenary of the foundation of the Heather Chair of Music. We are now able to give some particulars. The Festival will open in the Cathedral on Sunday, May 2, with a performance by the combined choirs of New College, Magdalen, and Christ Church, directed by Drs. W. H. Harris, H. C. Stewart, and H. G. Ley, the programme consisting of anthems, &c., by Charles Wood, Stanford, Ouseley, Crotch, Croft, C. H. Lloyd, and the conductors. On May 3, an orchestral concert will take place (Birmingham City Orchestra : works by Haydn, Balfour Gardiner, Ernest Walker, Butterworth, &c.) ; there will be a Bach concert on Tuesday (Oxford Bach Choir and Oxford Orchestral Society : 'The Spirit also helpeth us,' 'Sing ye to the Lord,' Overture in D, &c.) ; on Wednesday the Oxford Orchestral Society plays works by Borodin, Dohnányi, Franck, de Falla, &c. ; on Thursday, following the presentation of Honorary Degrees and the Heather Oration by Sir Hugh Allen, the 'Weekly Practice' instituted by Dr. William Heather will be taken by the Choragus, the music being drawn from Elizabethan composers ; on the evening of the same day there will be performances of Vaughan Williams's 'Shepherds of the Delectable Mountains,' Bach's 'Coffee' Cantata, and 'The Gentleman Dancing-Master,' a ballet adapted to music by Purcell (this programme will be repeated on Friday and Saturday evenings) ; a choral concert is down for Friday, when Vaughan Williams's 'Sancta Civitas' will receive its first performance, and Parry's 'L'Allegro' will be heard ; and the Festival will wind up on Saturday with folk-dancing and folk-music in New New College Gardens. There is a capital list of soloists, and the Festival will be under the general direction of Sir Hugh Allen, Heather Professor. The agents are Messrs. Taphouse, Magdalen Street, Oxford.

A tablet in memory of Dr. William Heather will be unveiled in Westminster Abbey at a special service on May 11, at 5 p.m. by the Chancellor of the University of Oxford, Viscount Cave. Admission is by ticket.

We have been much interested by an account of the doings of the Bombay Symphony and Chamber Orchestra. During the five years of its existence it has given twenty symphony concerts, ninety-eight chamber-orchestra concerts, eleven chamber music recitals, and one promenade concert. The repertory comprises about two hundred compositions, including many symphonies, concertos, and other large-scale works.

This admirable record has been achieved in the face of great difficulties — chiefly financial. Rehearsal problems are sometimes acute, and much of the work has to be done sectionally. The conductor, Mr. Edward Behr, and his fellow enthusiasts, have their reward in a regular and appreciative audience (there is a free gallery), and in the encouragement and help from occasional visiting soloists from Europe. We wish them continued success in their excellent work.

Judging from inquiries we receive on musical copyright and kindred matters, the work of the Society of Authors, Playwrights, and Composers Incorporated is not so well-known to musicians as it ought to be. Perhaps the usually shortened form of the title ('Society of Authors') has misled them into regarding it as a purely literary organization. It is worth while pointing out, therefore, that the Society comprises various committees, that which looks after the musicians' interests (called the Composers' Committee) being made up of nine well-known musicians, among them Howard Carr, Nicholas Gatty, Armstrong Gibbs, Katherine Eggar, and Sir Richard Terry, with Thomas F. Dunhill as chairman. The Society, in return for a modest subscription, helps its members by advice in regard to copyright, agreements and contracts, performing rights, collection of fees, &c. The prospectus and other information may be had from the secretary, Mr. G. Herbert Thring, 11, Gower Street, W.C.1.

The following letter of greeting to the Bach Cantata Club was received by the secretary, Mr. Hubert J. Foss :

Leipzig-Thomaskirche,
Good Friday, 1926.

In order to express our pleasure at the presence of Prof. C. Sanford Terry in Leipzig on the occasion of the performance of J. S. Bach's Matthaus Passion in the Thomaskirche this evening, conducted by Dr. Straube, we the undersigned send heartiest greetings to the Bach Cantata Club.

(Sgd.) Dr. Karl Straube, Thomaskantor ; Prof. Walter Seidel ; Dr. Heinrich Bach, sen. ; Dr. Nipcke ; Dr. Heinrich Bach, jun. ; Dr. Johannes Wolgart ; Bernard Muller ; Dr. Fritz Marburg.

Apropos of the Bach Cantata Club, we are glad to hear that the public response has been so hearty as to place the Club in a secure position among musical organizations. We are asked to announce that membership privileges and admission to the remaining three concerts (May 25, October 26, and November 23) can be had at reduced rates. For particulars write to the secretary, Oxford University Press, Warwick Square, E.C.4.

Among the lectures to be given at the Royal Institution of Great Britain (21, Albemarle Street, W.1) during the post-Easter session are two by Prof. P. C. Buck on 'The Song Form in England, as represented by Stanford and Parry' (May 1 and 8, at 3) and three on 'The Acoustics of Public Buildings,' by Dr. G. W. C. Kaye, Superintendent of the Physics Department, National Physical Laboratory (May 11, 18, 25, at 5.15).

Music in the Foreign Press

By M.-D. Calvocoressi

CONTEMPORARY DANCING

The March-April issue of the Musikblätter des Anbruch is devoted to dancing and dance-music. It contains useful essays by twenty-six writers, among whom are Paul Stefan, Hugo von Hofmannsthal, Andrei Levinson, Erwin Felber, Egon Wellesz, and R. St. Hoffmann. Victor Belaiev deals with stage dancing in Russia, André Cœuroy with the spirit of the French ballet. A symposium on the distinctive characters of modern dance-music enables Casella, Krenek, Wellesz, Schulhoff, Petyrek, Rieti, and others to express their views. The number contains a quantity of photographs of dancers (most of them German or Austrian), some of which are extremely attractive, and show the results of original and intelligent work.

RUSSIAN MUSIC

The March Melos is a special 'Russian' number containing articles by Igor Glebov, on Musical Science in Russia; A. Finaghin, on Glinka's forerunners; Roman Gruber and A. Finaghin, on various problems of musical form, with special reference to the Russian school.

SMETANA'S TEACHERS

In the February Auftakt, Dr. Ernst Rychnovsky gives interesting information on this little-known topic:

> We know little about Johann Chmelik, Smetana's first teacher; and comparatively little about Franz Ikavec, who gave him lessons in singing and in playing the violin, the viola, and the pianoforte. We know absolutely nothing of two other teachers with whom he worked, Matucha and Batka. Fortunately we are not in the dark with regard to Josef Proksch, to whom Smetana owed all his theoretical knowledge. Proksch was born in 1794; at the age of thirteen he was stricken with blindness. He died in 1864. He was a keen musician and an excellent instructor. Smetana studied four years with him (1843-47), and benefited by his influence.

KEY RELATIONSHIP IN BACH'S 'ST. JOHN' PASSION

In the March Zeitschrift für Musik, Walter Flath, considering the tonalities used in the recitatives in Bach's 'St. John' Passion, comes to the conclusion that practically every key, major or minor, is used by Bach with a definite expressive purpose—e.g., B flat major is associated with contempt, E flat major with coldness and callousness, E major with warmth of heart, C sharp minor with sin, C minor with hatred and malice, and so forth. The examples given by the writer are convincing enough; and an analysis, chord by chord, of Recitative No. 28, confirms the impression that his conclusions are founded on facts.

OLD HUNGARIAN VIRGINAL MUSIC

The third instalment of Benedikt Szabolcsi's essays on old Hungarian music (March Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft) is devoted to 17th-century virginal music:

> The Kájoni Codex (1634-71) contains two transcriptions of native folk-tunes. A manuscript dating from the second half of the 17th century contains some more elaborate pieces, which are genuine virginal music, and interpret native tunes far more fully. The Codex Vietoris (1680) contains a wealth of typically Hungarian examples, many of which the writer quotes. It is very doubtful, he adds, that these examples are really the work of Johann Vietoris.

A WORK BY MOUSSORGSKY RE-DISCOVERED

In the February Musik, Andrei Rimsky-Korsakov describes a manuscript in Moussorgsky's handwriting which recently turned up among papers preserved in the Leningrad Public Library. It is a comic scene, written in 1866. The music consists of ninety-one bars, and is live and picturesque, although it does not represent Moussorgsky at his best. Parts of it were used in 'Boris Godunov.' This work, entitled, 'Pachómich's Adventure,' will shortly be published.

TONAL AND ATONAL MUSIC

In the same issue, Werner Karthaus avers that atonal music is the negation of most of the principles to which music (tonal music) owes its significance:

> It ignores the tension and relaxation from chord to chord which is so marked in tonal harmony. It exploits not the simplest available efforts, but the most complicated, and also the least rich in contrasts.

THE SAME, CONTINUED

In Le Menestrel (March 12), Stravinsky is reported to have said in the course of a recent interview:

> I am not modern; I am altogether incapable of understanding atonal music.

BOIELDIEU

The February Revue Musicale is devoted chiefly to Boieldieu. André Schäffner writes on 'La Dame Blanche,' G. de Saint-Foix on Boieldieu's pianoforte music. A number of Boieldieu's letters appear for the first time in print.

GIURO EISENHUTH

The Sveta Cecilija (Zagreb) contains an article by Dr. A. Goglia on this composer:

> Eisenhuth was born at Zagreb in 1841, and died there in 1891. The catalogue of his output comprises two hundred and twenty numbers, among which are choral and symphonic works, and a couple of operas. He was a professor of violin at the Zagreb Conservatorium.

JULI GARRETA

The December Revista Musical Catalana contains articles by various writers on this Catalonian composer (1875-1925), among whose works an orchestral 'Pastorale' and a Suite (both introduced by the Casals Orchestra in 1922 and 1925 respectively) come in for high praise.

CZECH MUSIC

The February Muzyka (Warsaw) is devoted to Czech music and musical activities. Z. Nejdely shows how in the 18th century Czech music influenced Polish music, whereas later Chopin's influenced Smetana's. Jan Lowenbach expresses the opinion that the best among contemporary Czech composers are Förster, Novák, Suk, and Janáček.

KARLOWICZ

The March issue of the same periodical is devoted to the Polish composer Mieczyslaw Karlowicz (1876-1909), whose tone-poems are described as the mainstay of the orchestral repertory of modern Polish music.

New Music

CHORAL WORKS

The revival of interest in Handel, especially on the secular side of his work, is unmistakable. The appearance of 'Semele' in an abridged edition is therefore opportune, the more so as its many attractive features were revealed by the stage performances at Cambridge last year. The aim of the new edition just issued by Messrs. Novello is to provide choral societies with a practicable version for concert use. In its complete form 'Semele' was too long; moreover, the proportion of recitative and solo numbers was unduly liberal for a performance unaccompanied by stage action and properties. A good deal of the solo work has therefore been omitted, among the 'cut' sections being the whole of the part of Athamas (very inconveniently written for a male alto). The choral portions remain intact, and there is a connected story, which gains rather than loses by the dropping of the subsidiary episode of the love of Ino for Athamas. The only textual alterations are the transposition of a few bars of recitative in order to ensure satisfactory joins where 'cuts' have been made. Thus shortened, 'Semele' takes about an hour and three-quarters in performance, plus an extra ten minutes if all the repeats in the Overture are made. Act 1 (which may be had separately) is suitable for performance as a short choral item (thirty-two minutes). It calls for two soloists—soprano and bass. For the whole work the customary four solo voices are necessary. The orchestration is for strings, two oboes, two bassoons, two horns, two trumpets, drums, and continuo. A specially written continuo (pianoforte) part has been provided, in which appear all the essential notes of the oboe and horns; the bassoon parts contain no independent features; and the trumpets (which occur only in the final chorus) and the drums (used only in three numbers) may be dispensed with. The work may thus be performed with strings and pianoforte only. Certain passages left unscored by Handel have been added to the string parts in case the use of pianoforte is inconvenient. It will thus be seen that everything possible has been done to make this delightful and unfamiliar work practicable for choral societies of all kinds—large or small, rich or poor. It should be added that the choruses consist of straightforward, four-voice writing, with no division of parts. One would prophesy for 'Semele' a new lease of life but for the fact that the expression can hardly be applied to music that has been consistently neglected. In fine, here is a Handel creation that is virtually new, sprinkled with a few airs already popular (e.g., 'Where'er you walk' and 'O sleep, why dost thou leave me?'), and others that should speedily become favourites.

Gone are the days when a reviewer could pass an opinion on a new choral work from a mere study of the vocal score! Faced with such recent examples as Vaughan Williams's 'Sancta Civitas' and Honegger's 'King David,' he can do little more than sit on the fence and hope for a chance of hearing them performed. In the case of the former, two such opportunities will shortly occur, one at Oxford, the other in London. All that need be done now is to give a general idea of the scope of the work. Sancta Civitas' is for baritone and tenor soli, chorus, semi-chorus, distant chorus, and orchestra—a scheme that will at once suggest the need for a highly-skilled body of singers. The subject is the Heavenly City of the Apocalypse, and the words are drawn from the Authorised Version, with some additions from Taverner's Bible and other sources. A note directs that the semi-chorus should sit behind the full chorus, and should consist of about twenty voices (6-6-4-4); the distant choir—of boys' voices, if possible—should be out of sight, with a special conductor. There is also a distant trumpet which should be placed with this body. The idiom is that blend of plainsong, strings of consecutive triads, false relations, sudden transitions, and enigmatic dissonances that we now expect from the composer. On paper there seems to be some monotony, but actual performance, with its nice adjustment of balance and texture, may of course remove that impression. Clearly there is much beauty of an aloof, otherworldly type, and an imposing climax is built up towards the end. The actual close, like the opening, should produce a striking effect of remoteness. It is worth noting that the composer calls the work an oratorio—a courageous step to-day when that form is rather too readily assumed to be dead. Of course it will prove to be as much alive as the sonata, symphony, and fugue, for composers who have something vital to say. The length of 'Sancta Civitas,' however, suggests that 'cantata' would be a more suitable title. (Curwen. Pp. 50. The number of pages in the vocal score is given as some guide to length.)

Honegger calls 'King David' a symphonic psalm, and bases his work on the drama by René Morax. The various numbers are separated by passages read by a Narrator. The music is a curious mixture of styles. There are naively simple vocal solos accompanied by extreme dissonances, some passages of straightforward diatonic choral writing suggestive of conventional oratorio, a touch of the German chorale, barbaric instrumental pages (such as the three Marches, the Incantation of the Witch of Endor, a final chorus, 'The Dance before the Ark,' &c.), and even an 'Alleluia' Chorus with a tuneful subject which is almost threatened with fugal treatment. The 'Dance before the Ark' is a lengthy movement, arranged for pianoforte duet. Here, as elsewhere, there is much that one can imagine to be vividly effective when played by orchestra. The libretto has been done into singable English by Edward Agate. It is a pity, however, that the text of some beautiful passages could not have been given in their familiar English form, e.g., 'Man that is born of a woman hath but a short time to live, and is full of misery. He cometh up, and is cut down, like a flower,' appears as 'Man that is born of woman lives but a little while. Whichever way he turn, the path he must pursue is heavy to his feet. He cometh up like grass, which in time shall be mowed down.' One examines this work of Honegger's with great interest. It has abundant strength—sometimes of a brutal kind—and imagination. Apparently the chief defect is a lack of unity. A performance would be welcome. Perhaps the always enterprising Philharmonic Choir will oblige. (But see what comes of the constant leg-pulling by 'the Six.' It is impossible to avoid a suspicion that some day we may be told that 'King David' is merely one more attempt to épater le bourgeois.) (Edition Fætisch, Lausanne; Chester. Pp. 90.)

[A report of a performance of 'King David' at Rome appears on p. 459.]

We return to normality in Rutland Boughton's 'Pioneers,' a setting for tenor solo, mixed voices, and orchestra, of Walt Whitman's well-known poem. The orchestra called for is of the 'small' type, but the string parts are so cued that performance is possible with string band only, or with strings supplemented by such wind instruments as are available. The music is attractive, and of reasonable difficulty (Curwen. Pp. 42).

Rather more off the beaten track is 'The Dancing Seal,' a setting by Edgar L. Bainton of a poem by Wilfred Wilson Gibson. This is picturesque, both in text and music, and fairly difficult. No soloists are required, and apparently a full orchestra is essential (Oxford University Press. Pp. 44).

From the Oxford University Press comes also the latest of its issues of the Bach Cantatas—the Motet, 'Jesu, Priceless Treasure,' edited by Dr. Whittaker. Both notations are given, but the advantage of this is somewhat discounted by the crowded appearance of the page.

Armstrong Gibbs's 'Songs of Enchantment' is a short work (pp. 28) for soprano solo, mixed choir, and small orchestra—a setting of three little poems by Walter de la Mare. The music would suit a small choir accustomed to modern music and able to sing with delicacy (Curwen).

We have received also vocal scores of Purcell's 'Dido and Æneas,' newly edited by Edward J. Dent, with a German translation by Dr. Anton Mayer (Oxford University Press); a short concert version—thirty minutes—of 'Carmen,' arranged by Maurice Besly (Winthrop Rogers); and 'Lionel and Clarissa,' the ballad opera by Dibdin and others, arranged by Alfred Reynolds, which was so successful at the Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith (Elkin).

H. G.

UNISON SONGS

Joseph Williams issues two tiny songs by Harry Farjeon, under one cover—'Ewes' and 'Arundel.' These have the advantage of Eleanor Farjeon's neat words. The first song, 'slow and sleepy,' is less fresh than the piquant 'Arundel.' Sustained slow singing is asked for in the same composer's 'St. Leonard's Forest.' Tongue, lips, and teeth must be neatly used.

In Novello's School Songs, No. 1163 is a transposed version of the 'Messiah' air, 'Come unto Him,' in A flat. This is a fine cantabile exercise. The triad might have been omitted on page 3, since children will not, of course, attempt it.

PART-SONGS FOR CHILDREN'S AND FEMALE VOICES

Dr. H. D. Statham has arranged two Plantation songs ('Uncle Ned' and 'South Carolina') for S.S., with two violin parts, which can be played on the pianoforte when strings are not available. There are solo bits, and a rousing chorus. Clubs and 'Cubs' would enjoy these (Curwen).

A. Brent-Smith's 'Choral Dance' is a pleasant, easy song for S.S., about a 'glade enchanted.' His 'Fear no more the heat o' the sun' has good, broad melodic lines (S.S.C.), and is not difficult (both Elkin).

Alec Rowley's 'Dreamland calling' (S.S.) is a light, dreamy little thing, pleasant, if rather conventional (Novello).

MALE-VOICE

Curwen's batch includes a light, graceful trifle, 'Through the glen,' by Markham Lee, a simply-arranged old melody to 'Caleno custure me,' for baritone solo and chorus, by S. T. Harris, and Armstrong Gibbs's 'Fol dol do' (words by de la Mare). This last trips lightly, at speed.

Elkin's list contains Rowley's 'The Songster' (gentle, mild, and very easy), Henry Coleman's arrangement of 'Drink to me only' (rather too many chords here and there; otherwise pleasant), and Leslie Woodgate's setting of the negro song 'I got a home in-a dat Rock.' A few chromatic touches seem rather out of the picture, which is in other respects pleasant to look upon. The chorus in all these pieces is in the usual four parts.

MIXED-VOICE

Martin Shaw's vigorous 'Easter Alleluia' on the tune 'Orientis partibus' (S. & T. solo, S.A.T.B. chorus) is intended for unaccompanied singing. Its bell-like heartiness is attractive. The music is simple enough (Curwen). From the same firm comes another 'Alleluia'—Boughton's Prelude to 'Bethlehem.' This is plain, wholesome fare, also. The same phrase might be applied to Vaughan Williams's Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis, for village choirs. The part-writing is very simple, and in case of need the tenor part can be omitted altogether. Boys' voices alone may be used, or men's alone, or boys' and men's in octaves. The bar-lengths vary, but there are no complications. A certain stark strength, characteristic of the composer, is seemly here.

Some repetitions slightly mar the progress of Herrick's quaint lines in 'Amarillis,' set by Leslie Woodgate, with a good sense of style (Elkin). 'Slow, slow, fresh fount' is more conventional, though very singable. There is good instruction here for young choirs, in matters of simple, unforced expressiveness and easy tone-production. These, and Denis Wright's setting of Scott's 'Pibroch of Donuil Dhu' (straightforward, if not notably fresh), are for S.A.T.B.

'The love of comrades' is a setting by Felix White of a Whitman poem (Schirmer; Hawkes). It has a bold fling, matching the poet's conception. Some of the rather Scriabinesque harmonies are a bit far-fetched, but most of them are worth fetching. He divides the three lower parts several times. I like the tang in this piece.

The Winthrop Rogers pieces mentioned in last month's notes are to be had of Hawkes, now agents for this edition. (In my second line, under the heading 'Unison Songs,' I wrote 'stock times,' by the way, not 'tunes.')

W. R. A.

Vol. 3 of 'Songs of the North,' the words edited and written by Harold Boulton, the Gaelic edited by Neil Shaw, and the music arranged by Robert McLeod, has just been issued by Cramer. The set contains twenty-seven songs. Owing to the large page, thick paper, and stout cloth binding, the volume is perhaps inconveniently substantial; and the cost (21*s.*) seems heavy for a collection of the kind to-day, when so many excellent arrangements of folk-songs can be obtained at an average cost of a copper or so apiece. Our concern here is with the music, and while we are not unappreciative of the many picturesque touches in Mr. McLeod's arrangements, we wish he had avoided certain chromaticisms of the weaker type. The Preface anticipates criticism on another ground by saying that 'The academic musician may find what he would call a mixture of styles in several places, but these mixtures have been intentional.' But the hearer, whether 'academic' or not, is merely concerned with the effect, and he is not likely to be reconciled to a lack of unity (which, after all, is a serious fault in style) by being told that it is intentional. In regard to the use of chromatic harmony, one need not be a purist to object to some details of Mr. McLeod's harmonizations. For example, in his Preface he alludes to an arpeggio figure used in the cadence of a 'Highland Pastoral,' and explains its point. We agree that the figure is excellent, but we wish he had avoided the D flat in the cadence of F major. There is surely no more threadbare progression than such cadential use of the flattened submediant. It has vitiated more than enough music already; let us keep it out of our folk-songs, or at least use it far more sparingly than is the case in this collection. Such fine expressive tunes need no such inexpensive garnishing. H. G.

EASY PIANOFORTE MUSIC

Of a number of pianoforte albums for elementary players one of the best is E. Markham Lee's 'The Windy Hill' (Hawkes). This is a little suite of five pieces—'Sun and Shower,' 'Wild North-Easter' (Vivace), 'Noontide Rest,' 'Harebells' (Tempo di Valse), and 'Down we go.' The pieces are well contrasted, attractively written, and admirable for technical purposes. The left hand is well catered for. Two short pieces—(a) 'Pastorale,' (b) 'Evening'—by Hubert Hales (Joseph Williams), are melodious and good practice for cantabile playing in both hands. Another set of two pieces—'Sunbeams' and 'The Rivulet'—under the title 'Slender Themes,' by R. H. Walthew (Paxton), may also be recommended. The first is a charming little Allegretto, with some graceful flowing writing in which both hands are equally interested.

Young people who like playing well-known tunes will doubtless be attracted by George A. Armstrong's easy arrangements of Folk-Songs of the British Isles and Songs of England (Forsyth). The seventeen tunes in the book include such favourites as 'The British Grenadiers,' 'It was a lover and his lass,' 'John Peel,' 'The Vicar of Bray,' 'Golden Slumbers,' &c. The arrangements are usually extended, so as to give the left hand a share in playing the tune. For this reason the book will be found useful as well as entertaining. Musically, however, the pieces as a whole would have gained in interest and value had a little more enterprise been shown in the choice of harmonies. One or two are particularly crude in this respect.

Colin Hood's 'Jungle Tunes' (Forsyth) are imaginatively and skilfully treated, and make an attractive set. The tunes are ten in number, and are widely varied in style. Besides being musically interesting they are of considerable technical value. Thus, No. 3, 'Tree-top Chatter,' is excellent for phrasing and staccato; No. 5, 'The Kangaroo,' is a little study in rotation; No. 10, 'March of the Beasts,' is good in rhythm, and so on.

Six little pieces under the title 'Day Dreams,' by Herbert Dennison (Joseph Williams), are written in single notes. They are tuneful and flowing in style, but the treatment, generally, lacks the distinctive quality that is found in some of the pieces noted above. The composer's persistent use of legato also lessens the value of the music educationally. Charles Vincent's 'Three Short Greetings' (Hawkes) are 'Good Morning' (a bright little piece in $\frac{6}{8}$ time), 'Good Afternoon' (a quiet piece made up of simple chords in each hand), and a brief 'Good Night.' They are attractive and quite simple.

Some recent additions to the Oxford Pianoforte Series, edited by A. Forbes Milne (Oxford University Press), should find favour with teachers. They are mainly of about Elementary or Lower Division standard, though a few examples exceed this. Ethel Boyce's 'Cinderella' is a charming little suite issued in two books. Particularly bright and attractive are the last three numbers of the first book. Five little pieces under the title 'Wayside Pictures' (Set 2), by Arthur Baynon, are excellently written, and are admirable for technical purposes. Gordon Slater's 'Three Little Pieces' are for elementary pupils. They are written in two parts, and give useful work for the left hand. Well-varied and attractive fare will be found in Jane M. Joseph's 'Suite of Five Pieces' (Minuet, Bourrée, Sarabande, Air, Jig). The treatment of these little dances is distinctive, and the Suite should interest both teachers and pupils. Eric Mareo's 'Storyettes' may also be cordially recommended. These five pieces are imaginatively treated, and should appeal to young people. More difficult are Felix Swinstead's 'Two-part Inventions.' These comprise a Polonaise, Air, and Gigue. The last calls for a neat non legato touch, the Air is an excellent study in syncopation, and clean phrasing and nimble finger-work are required for the Polonaise. These characteristic examples of Mr. Swinstead's work provide admirable material for developing hand independence.

From the same publishers come two works by Tobias Matthay. The 'First Solo Book' is intended for use as a supplement to Books 1 and 2 of 'The Pianist's First Music Making,' and 'The Child's First Steps.' In a Preface, entitled 'The Main Cause of Bad Technique, Pianistically,' the writer remarks that:

> . . . most of the mischief must be laid at the door of the now happily out-of-date so-called 'Tutor.'

After discussing the difficulties that beset the teacher of the beginner, he goes on to say:

> To write musical studies and pieces in accordance with this knowledge of the technical pitfalls in the path of the beginner, manifestly implies a set of formidable restrictions and a severe problem for any composer, however gifted. . . . The present set of little studies (for the first year, or the second or third year studentship) were written as tentative examples of what should be striven for. . . . My main purpose has been to endeavour to stimulate and prompt composers of perhaps higher genius than myself to provide the educative material on these lines so urgently needed.

In 'Playthings for Players, Young and Old,' Book 2—which includes the Preface referred to above—Mr. Matthay has provided eight little pieces more advanced in difficulty, which should prove interesting, musically, to pupils of any age. G. G.

PIANOFORTE DUET

Four-handed works of unusual interest are the 'Quatre Sonatines Françaises,' by Charles Kœchlin, issued in separate numbers by the Oxford University Press. They are a curious and fascinating blend of simplicity, complexity, economy, and audacity. The simplicity and economy are in the thematic material and texture, the complexity in the highly ingenious polyphonic and canonic writing ; and the audacity in sudden spasms of dissonance. Technically they are deceptive. Often the players are lured along an apparently easy path, only to be brought up standing by some snag of an unconventional type. At such moments one half-suspects a touch of malice on the part of the composer. Certainly he seems to take a delight in awkward transference of parts from hand to hand and from player to player ; and the secondo player who is inclined to be—shall we say ?—globular in build will see something approaching personal insult in the frequency with which he is called on to play with his left hand in territory that is usually the preserve of his colleague. It is all excellent practice, and often good fun ; and although some of the harmonic perversities may never become convincing, there are enough pages of unmistakable beauty to make the Sonatines appeal to all but the most conservative. The primo and secondo parts appear on the same page—a plan for which there is much to be said, but which is not always convenient in this instance, owing to the type being rather small (though beautifully clear), and to the fact that, much of the music being in irregular time, with dotted bar-lines, the players are apt to be bothered by complicated passages that occur on the outside edge of the page. But these are details that should hinder no four-hand enthusiasts from enjoying this unusually fresh and original music. Perhaps its quality is best described by a wretched, over-used word that one writes with an apologetic shudder : it is 'intriguing.'

Augeners have just issued a couple of Schubert's duets—'Divertissement à la Hongroise,' Op. 54, and the Fantaisie, Op. 103, edited by A. Roloff. The latter seems to be by far the better work. True, it suffers from Schubert's besetting sin of repetition, but there is a lot of good, vigorous stuff. A couple of well-advanced pupils would benefit from it, as the editor has fingered it fully.

PART OF A SONATA FOR VOICE AND PIANOFORTE

Medtner's Sonate-Vocalise (Zimmermann, Berlin ; Novello), is an interesting essay in a new path. A casual glance suggests a work for violin (or flute) and pianoforte. Indeed, the Sonata would probably stand a better chance in that form, seeing that most instrumental players can keep time, whereas most vocal soloists can't—or won't. The composer gives the singer full directions : the vowel most used should be the broad a, especially on loud or long notes ; for comparatively unimportant notes less open sounds should be used, preference being given to e, both in its long and short forms ; transition from vowel to vowel should be gradual, and so forth. The voice part is very singable, and the pianoforte part not unreasonably difficult ; but there is need for careful study in ensemble. The vocal compass is modest for a work on this scale—from middle C to A flat above the staff, the latter appearing only once, lightly touched. There are, however, plenty of high G's, some of them long-sustained. The music is less craggy than one would expect, judging from some previous essays of Medtner's ; in fact, there are moments verging on the conventional. Let us hope that this attractive and interesting experiment will soon be heard in public.

CHAMBER MUSIC

Sir Richard Terry has edited three Old English pieces (Curwen) to add to his notable collection. 'Almaine,' for string orchestra, by Richard Dering (1575-1630) ; 'Almaine,' for string trio, by W. Cranford (17th century), and a third 'Almaine,' by Thomas Forde (1580-1648). It is unnecessary to discuss again here the importance of these publications of some of the earliest chamber music ever written. Their value is nowhere questioned in Europe, and our comments concern not the Editor but the publishers, whom we would beg to be a little more generous and refrain from printing the score on the back of what should be the cover. We feel sure that no purchaser would hesitate to pay a bigger price to have an essential part of the music duly protected. And perhaps the curious would be grateful to Sir Richard for some indication of the original scoring.

B. V.

SCORES

Orchestral players will be glad to hear that Mr. Holst has followed up the two Suites from Purcell's 'Gordian Knot' with another, drawn from 'The Virtuous Wife.' It consists of six movements—Overture (Andante maestoso, leading to a capital fugal Allegro), Slow Air, Hornpipe, a couple of Minuets, and a final Allegro. The arrangement is for strings, but Mr. Holst has added parts for flutes, oboes, clarinets, bassoon, horns (two), trumpets (two), and drums, any or all of which may be added at will. Fresh, engaging music, this—the very thing for orchestras of all sorts and sizes (Novello).

The 'Oxford Orchestral Series' grows rapidly. An enterprise of unusual interest is that undertaken by Dr. Whittaker, the general editor. He proposes to issue all the purely instrumental numbers from Bach's cantatas except the few that Bach himself drew from the concertos. Some of these cantata preludes have not hitherto been published in orchestral parts, appearing only in full score in the Bach-Gesellschaft volumes. A large number of beautiful and unknown movements will thus be made available for the first time, and should prove a boon to orchestral societies that are unable to tackle the concertos. Dr. Whittaker has made the edition thoroughly practical, suggesting substitutes for obsolete or infrequently used instruments. Where possible the arrangements are adapted for use by chamber-music parties, or small, incomplete orchestras ; bowing and tongueing marks are added ; and each number is prefaced with a note as to its source, methods of performance, &c. Some half-dozen of the series have been issued, and players interested should write to the publishers—The Oxford Press—for a list. From the same house come also a Suite—Toccata, Aria, Minuetto, and Giga—by Alessandro Scarlatti, and a set of four pieces by Domenico Scarlatti, arranged by Michele Esposito for strings, with ad lib. parts for flute, bassoon, and timpani ; the well-known chorus from 'Sleepers, wake' (familiar in Bach's own version as a chorale prelude), arranged by Dr. Esposito for strings, wood-wind, horns, and trumpet ; Bach's Violin Concerto in G minor, transcribed by J. Bernard Jackson for strings, with an optional part for pianoforte designed to take the place of the customary harpsichord ; and a Suite for chamber orchestra by Robin Milford.

In the Curwen edition appears Thomas F. Dunhill's 'White Peacocks,' for full orchestra, including harp and glockenspiel. A special horn part is provided for use where only two horns are available.

Under the title 'Masque Suite,' Mr. Dunhill has arranged for string orchestra six short movements from Handel—a collection that would be specially useful for school bands. This comes from Curwen's, as does also Carl Ruggles's 'Angels,' for six muted trumpets. With the full score is bound up an organ version by Lynnwood Farnam. The piece is quite short, and apparently contains more dissonance to the square inch than any other work of recent times. It is impossible to hear the effect of the trumpets mentally, but the keyboard version suggests an order of supernatural beings very different from those mentioned in the title. It will be remembered that this work was produced at the Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, at Venice, in 1925, and report told us that even the elect made disrespectful noises at its close.

Among the miniature scores of chamber music received are a String Quartet by Egon Kornauth, Op. 26 (Vienna Philharmonic Edition); a String Sextet by Otto Siegl, Op. 28, and Serenade for string quartet by Franz Ippisch (Ludwig Doblinger, Leipsic); a String Quartet by Delius (Augener); a Serenade for flute, violin, viola, violoncello, and harp by Albert Roussel, and a String Quartet by André Pascal (Durand); a Poem for string quartet by John Beach; and Poème, 'Le Pavillon sur l'Eau,' for violin, viola, violoncello, flute, and harp, by Timothy Mather Spelman (Chester).

Adam Carse's Waltz Variations for full orchestra should meet the needs of well-equipped amateur bodies on the look out for new light music of good quality (Augener).

The Oxford University Press issues Vaughan Williams's Romance, 'The Lark Ascending,' for violin solo and small orchestra (two flutes, one oboe, two clarinets, two bassoons, two horns, triangle, and strings). The work is so cued that it may be played also by chamber orchestra of reduced strings and single wind instruments. An arrangement for violin solo and pianoforte is also published. H. G.

STRINGS

Fashions come and go, and after the death of Grieg there has been no one to claim his inheritance. This month, however, two composers come forward with Scandinavian melodies: a true-born Norwegian, Inga Lærum Liebich (if Liebich be a Norse name), whose 'Romance' is issued by the Norsk Musik Forlag of Christiana, and a Briton, Fred Adlington, whose four Norwegian Tunes are published by Paxton. Adlington's work, however, has another connection with Norway besides that of its title, for the four melodies are dedicated to the 'memory of days with Edvard Grieg.' Whatever the composer of to-day may have learnt from Grieg, he has not assimilated that composer's happy turn for saying things in a striking way. Perhaps to-day's fashion, which has certainly not reacted favourably upon Grieg, makes us look upon these modest essays with other eyes. But when all allowance has been made for the times and our own changed outlook the fact remains that we can read 'From Old Norroway' from cover to cover without finding a single one of those slight but finished touches which delighted so the dilettanti at the close of the last century. On the other hand, these pieces are easy to play, and hence fall into a category to which the violin music of Grieg never belonged. They may thus be looked upon as commendable efforts to put something with a foreign flavour before the budding fiddler. Inga Lærum Liebich's 'Romance' is not quite so easy to play, yet its heart is the heart of the child. Some little attempt has been made to give it harmonic distinction—not altogether successfully, however.

More interesting than these is Medtner's 'Second Canzona with Dance' (Zimmermann, Leipsic) in spite of the neologism in its title. Medtner is never extravagant harmonically. He gives us just enough modernity to make us think that we are gay sparks, but no more. He may place chords in such a way as to produce an impression of unconventionality, but he is not afraid of a perfect cadence; he gives us a very unusual rhythm in the Canzona ($\frac{11}{8}$), but then the dance goes back to the measure of the old waltz—often with a plain, strong accent on the first beat. He strikes us as a man who can and does make the best of two worlds, and if he does not say anything very profound—well, that is perhaps one of the penalties of easy success. B. V.

The Musician's Bookshelf

'Monographien zur Russischen Musik. Band II.: Modest Petrovitch Moussorgsky.' By Oskar von Riesemann.

[Munich: Drei Masken.]

This book (of over five hundred pages) is the first of its kind in which part of the wealth of materials concerning Moussorgsky which cropped up during the past fifteen years or so is utilised and made available in a language other than the Russian. Hence it will be found very valuable.

In his preface the author emphasises the difficulty of writing on Moussorgsky without having access to Russian public libraries and private archives—a serious situation, indeed, and one in which most of the writers who are keenly interested in Moussorgsky find themselves nowadays. He apologises with engaging simplicity for the unavoidable shortcomings of his work.

It would be both ungracious and unfair to dwell upon these shortcomings rather than upon the merits, which are considerable. However, let it be pointed out that the author remained in ignorance of the true date of Moussorgsky's birth, a date established in 1911 by the publication in the Russian Musical Gazette of Moussorgsky's baptism certificate. It seems hardly credible that he should not have penetrated to one single document giving the right date. In fact, since he reproduces the full catalogue of Moussorgsky's works which appeared in the special Moussorgsky number of the Muzykalny Sovremmenik (1917), he must have had access to this special number in which the real date is given.

His bibliography of materials in the English language is preposterously inadequate, consisting merely of the mention of three articles published in one periodical. And it would have been desirable to draw more freely on Moussorgsky's correspondence; especially on his letters to Stassov, referring to 'Khovanstchina.'

But such as it is, the biographical part of the book is both serviceable and readable. The author has succeeded in providing interesting sidelights on Moussorgsky's surroundings, on the influences he underwent (the non-musical influences: the problem of the musical influences remains to be solved), and the public he wrote for.

The critical part is subsidiary. Herr von Riesemann often tends to steer a middle course to reconcile the point of view of Moussorgsky (or of his enthusiastic supporters) with the point of view against which Moussorgsky was up in arms. This is almost an impossible undertaking. Let it be remembered that not a single one of Moussorgsky's brother composers was able to consider his achievements from his own point of view: neither Balakirev, nor Rimsky-Korsakov, to say nothing of Tchaikovsky. And, perhaps, in order to do so, it would be necessary to forget all Moussorgsky's theoretical utterances (on truth versus beauty, on the inanity of working-out, &c.) as completely as one should forget the commonplaces of music-making. Then only will it be possible to see Moussorgsky's music as it really is, and to learn the lesson which it embodies.

Herr von Riesemann, now and then, is well on the way—especially, perhaps, when he discusses Rimsky-Korsakov's re-arrangement of 'Boris Godunov.' Most of the people who go praising this re-arrangement will be surprised to see how definitely he sides with the few writers who, knowing both the original and the revision, consider that Rimsky-Korsakov deserves anything but praise. He writes, e.g.:

> As things are, it is difficult not to feel irritated by Rimsky-Korsakov's doings. . . . He took up his pen with the set intention to correct. Unfortunately, he was often struck with temporary blindness, and his pruning-knife wrecked a few of Moussorgsky's finest inspirations.

Very rightly, Herr von Riesemann points out that Rimsky-Korsakov's orchestration, however brilliant it may be, is not always in keeping with the musical style of 'Boris Godunov'—a remark which I have not yet seen in print, but which I heard as early as 1908 from the lips of a Russian conductor who knew Moussorgsky's music well, and was a great admirer of Rimsky-Korsakov.

But, after criticising freely and pointedly, Herr von Riesemann says the fairest thing that has ever been said on the matter:

> The merit of Rimsky-Korsakov's revision remains that it helped to popularise Moussorgsky's masterpiece.

Having served its purpose, this revision should now be discarded in favour of the genuine version—of which one scene is given at the end of the book.

M.-D. C.

'The Melba Method.' By Dame Nellie Melba. [Chappell, 6*s*.]

The essence of this treatise lies in its opening sentences:

> It is easy to sing well, and very difficult to sing badly! How many students are really prepared to accept that statement? Few, if any. They smile, and say: 'It may be easy for you, but not for me.' And they seem to think that there the matter ends. But if they only knew it, on their understanding and acceptance of that axiom depends half their success. Let me say the same in other words: 'In order to sing well, it is necessary to sing easily.'

Nobody can listen to the singers of to-day without being painfully conscious that whatever qualities they may possess, ease is rarely present. Listening to their painfully-achieved high notes, unsteady tone, and laboured phrasing, one can prophesy for them no such long innings as that of Dame Nellie, Ben Davies, and a few veterans of the past. A short vocal life, and a not over merry one, is the fate of too many.

'The Melba Method' is comparatively small in bulk, its letterpress consisting of but a few pages, and its exercises are far fewer and far simpler than those in most singing primers. But nothing necessary seems to have been omitted. The studies range from sustained notes to the various graces; the three pages of 'My Daily Exercises' are simplicity itself; and the work closes with some straightforward vocalises for low and high voice. A few words of advice are attached to some of the studies. Here, then, is the method by which a great singer has achieved success spread over a long career—at all events, as much of the method as can be expressed on paper. The rest—perseverance, patience, and that concentration without which (as Dame Nellie says) no practice should ever take place—lies with the student. This is obvious, of course; but the fact is generally obscured by sheer bulk of technical exercises, anatomical diagrams, and cloudy verbiage. A singing treatise that from first to last lays stress on the importance of concentration, ease, and naturalness, and that deals with the fundamentals of singing (which after all are few) briefly and simply, is a welcome novelty. The fact that the Method has produced a Melba is no guarantee that it will produce another; but its diligent study may be counted on to save the public from vocal efforts of a type that make present-day singing the least satisfactory branch of executive music.

'Mozart: The Man and the Artist revealed in his own words.'
'Beethoven: The Man and the Artist revealed in his own words.' Compiled and Annotated by Friedrich Kerst.

[Geoffrey Bles, 5*s*. each.]

These little books are made up of quotations from letters, diaries, &c., of the two composers. No doubt there is much in Mr. Kerst's claim that more is to be learned of the composers' personality from such intimate sources than from voluminous biographies. The reader, however, must be on his guard against being misled by brief pronouncements torn from a context that might conceivably modify them considerably. Both books provide excellent reading, especially the Mozart, which is full of liveliness and good sense. The temptation to quote liberally must be resisted, but here is a pronouncement on rubato that is of interest, as it anticipates by many years a familiar saying by Chopin (or was it Liszt?):

> Herr Stein sees and hears that I am more of a player than Beecke—that without making grimaces of any kind I play so expressively that, according to his own confession, no one shows off his pianoforte so well as I. That I always remain strictly in time surprises every one; they cannot understand that the left hand should not in the least be concerned in a tempo rubato. When they play the left hand always follows.

A note to this extract tells us that Mozart 'learned this principle from his father, who in his method for the violin condemned the accompanists who spoiled the tempo rubato of an artist by waiting to follow him.' We must assume, however, that the deviation from strict time at that period was far slighter than that of some eminent and erratic pianists of to-day; otherwise an inflexible left hand (or accompanist) would be playing one harmony while the melody required another.

'Bach: The Cantatas and Oratorios.' Books 1 and 2. By Charles Sanford Terry. ('The Musical Pilgrim Series.')

[Oxford Press, 1*s.* 6*d.* each.]

The two latest additions to the admirable 'Musical Pilgrim' handbooks give in a highly-condensed form practically all the available information concerning Bach's cantatas. In Book 1, Dr. Terry discusses the cantata form and its place in the Lutheran Service, and gives two tables: (1) The whole of Bach's Church cantatas in numerical order, with particulars of the structure, scoring, solo voices, amount of chorus work, &c.; (2) The relation of the cantatas to the Church year. Book 2 deals with the libretti and chorals of the Church cantatas, gives a list of the secular cantatas (with a prefatory note), and ends with two sections of great interest and value, dealing with Bach's orchestra, and the part played by various keyboard instruments in the accompaniment of his choral works. These closely-packed and scholarly booklets are indispensable to the Bach student.

'Orchestral Music.' By F. Stephen Clark.

[Arthur H. Stockwell, 2*s.* 6*d.*]

The quality of this book may be judged from the following samples:

> Double-basses and 'cellos . . . keep the rhythm . . . but they are seldom entrusted with a melody.
>
> The clarinet is used for solos, harmonizing, &c.
>
> The French horn is the only brass instrument which can lay any real claims to a beautiful tone.
>
> The tuba is the bass of the brass section, and, like the double-basses, does little more than keep the rhythm.
>
> The smaller instruments have to play the melody, and the larger ones have to keep the rhythm.
>
> Music is an art, not a science.
>
> Never talk or cough in a concert-room. If you must cough, cover your mouth with your handkerchief.
>
> [Concerning the use of opus numbers.] For example, Bach wrote forty-eight Preludes and Fuges (sic); in this instance the opus number becomes an absolute necessity.
>
> Contrapuntal music is music which contains two melodies entwined one with the other, or the same melody on two instruments, the melody on the one instrument entwining with the melody on the other instrument.

As an example of musical snobbery, the following would be hard to equal:

> . . . the atrocious Rachmaninov Prelude . . . The famous Prelude of Rachmaninov is one of the worst examples of musical hypocrisy, and its great popularity is a disgrace to British audiences. It is an absolute sham, and it belongs to the sentimental rubbish of the Victorian era.

There are misprints galore — Hayden (twice), Scraabin, Moursorgsky, tremelo, pizzacato, stacatto, Il Don Giovanni, Capricco, &c., and Frank Bridge is labelled 'Sir.' Why do we spare the space to gibbet this book? The answer is that no musical book is so bad that it will not be highly praised in some quarters, and justice demands that writing so faulty and misleading as the above should be exposed. The need is specially great in the case of a work which opens thus:

> This is not a book for musicians: it is a book for the concert-goer. The uninitiated lover of music may take it up without fear; it is not going to hurt him; it is not going to bother his head about perfect fifths and things he does not understand; it is written solely with a view to help him to a better understanding of orchestral music.

Musicians can take care of themselves when reading a book; the 'uninitiated lover of music' needs protection. Hence this review, which we take no pleasure in writing.

'Fifty Favourite Operas: A Popular Account, intended as an Aid to Dramatic and Musical Appreciation.' By Paul England.

[Harrap, 12*s.* 6*d.*]

The title is an indication that this book covers little new ground. The only modern and unfamiliar operas discussed are 'Pelléas et Mélisande,' 'Boris Godunov,' 'Le Coq d'Or,' and 'Der Rosenkavalier.' But though Mr. England does what has often been done before, he does it with a difference. He manages to make the stories less bald than they usually appear when thus reduced to plain narrative; his critical commentary on the music is well written and helpful; he drops in a good deal of historical matter en route; and he gives a capital lot of illustrations and caricatures, many (apparently) from old periodicals. The treatment is full—'Tannhäuser,' for example, is given twenty pages. The author is helped by Mr. Peter Latham, who deals with the later operas of Wagner, and a few other works; and by Mr. Alec Robertson, who treats of 'La Bohème' and 'Madame Butterfly.' Music-type quotations of principal themes would have been a useful addition. There is a very complete index. Those in search of a guide to the opera need ask for nothing better than this interesting and well-turned-out volume.

'Piano and Gown: Recollections.' By Fred E. Weatherly.

[Putnams, 10*s.* 6*d.*]

In pleasant, gossipy fashion the veteran writer of words for songs tells the story of his life. He has had a good time, with congenial work, hosts of interesting friends, and long and continuous success in his side-line as versifier. Many of his verses are included, and only when seeing them thus in bulk does one realise that this talent for turning out neat rhymes with a pretty thought, a touch of sentiment, or simple homely humour, is less common and more estimable than it is generally held to be. On the whole, remembering the settings of some of these songs, one feels that, after all, the credit for their success was due far more to Mr. Weatherly than to most of his musical collaborators. The proof seems to lie in the fact that the best of the verses are sufficiently good to hold their own in that large field of pleasant versifying that lies on the border-line of poetry, whereas a corresponding claim could be made for very little of the music to which they were set. Mr. Weatherly draws on his legal experiences for some good stories, and there are portraits of Santley, Sims Reeves, Irving, Ellen Terry, &c. Mr. Justice McCardie writes a Foreword.

'Carillon Music and Singing Towers of the Old World and the New.' By William Gorham Rice. [John Lane, 16*s.*]

This is a new and revised edition of 'Carillons in Belgium and Holland,' which made its appearance in 1914. It was evidently the first book on the subject, and the author has since followed up his quest by exploring old cities in Europe and new ones in America, delving in libraries, and conversing with carillonneurs and enthusiasts in many quarters. The result is a fat volume of genuine charm, as well as of considerable historical interest. The appendices contain lists of carillons (both existing and destroyed) in the Netherlands, Belgium, France, and in other countries, ranging from Denmark to South Africa. There are also tables of the pitch and weight of the carillons at Ghent (fifty-two bells), Mechlin (forty-five), New York (fifty-three), and Morristown (thirty-five). The illustrations are very interesting, and sometimes beautiful, e.g., the frontispiece of the Mechlin Singing Tower, the belfry of Douai, the Antwerp spire, &c. Other pictures show bells in process of manufacture and tuning, carillonneurs at work, &c. Describing the Mechlin school for carillonneurs, the author alludes to the difficulty of obtaining practice in the ordinary way. As he says, one cannot enclose a regular carillon in a sound-proof room or shut off the sound while the learner practises. And he goes on :

> One young Belgian girl got her first practice, she told me, while the automatic hour play was taking place. So she came to know the feeling of the keys in action, and listeners, mystified perhaps, laid to a disordered automatic mechanism the confusion of sounds that resulted. This gave her but four minutes practice at most each hour, but it was experience she could get in no other way without attracting the attention of the entire town.

Mr. Rice's book will delight all who are interested in this ancient, beautiful, and (happily) still flourishing art.

'The Violinist's Dictionary.' By Frederic Barclay Emery. [William Reeves, 4*s.* 6*d.* paper ; 6*s.* 6*d.* cloth.]

A new and greatly enlarged edition of a work that has evidently proved its value, since it appears to be the only dictionary concerned exclusively with terms used in connection with the violin. Its four thousand references, however, go considerably beyond its nominal scope, for it includes information about operas, symphonies, &c. ; the appendices comprise rules for pronouncing French, Italian, and German ; and there are lists of writers of violin music, symphonies, and operas, the chief violin and bow makers, &c. It would not be difficult to point out an occasional lack of accuracy or completeness in some definitions, but they are not enough to detract seriously from the value of an unusually handy work of reference.

'Music and Its Creators.' By Neville d'Esterre. [George Allen & Unwin, 6*s.*]

If musicians are no more likely than the rest of the world to achieve the feat of seeing themselves as others see them, they can occasionally do something almost as useful—see their art through the eyes of a sober-minded but enthusiastic amateur.

All of us find the keen amateur a little trying at times, when judgment is not in step with eagerness ; but amateurs such as Dr. Agnes Savill, the Rev. J. D. M. Rorke, and the author of 'The Promenade Ticket,' are a great help to us all, because they give us a perspective by allowing us to get inside the mind of the man who is not so wrapped up in music as some of us necessarily are.

Mr. d'Esterre chats pleasantly about his musical pilgrimage. It has left him (presumably in middle age) with a mellow view of music. He worked his way through the more superficial delights, such as the noisy emotionalism of Tchaikovsky, to the heights of Bach, Beethoven, and Wagner, who seem to him to stand out above all the rest. As to Mozart, 'the space that separates him from them is but a hair's breadth.' The enjoyment of great music was not attained by attendance at lectures, or by any very conscious process of enlightenment, we gather. Mr. d'Esterre 'just growed' into it.

Probably, like a wise man, he took every chance of intelligent help he could get. There are more aids to the plain man's understanding nowadays than when our author began his adventures among music. That is all to the good ; but a certain sturdy determination to find out as much as possible for oneself is a good thing. The pianola has helped, Mr. d'Esterre says ; but he has little use for the gramophone (to which he scarcely does justice). The student 'must himself direct the machine,' he insists : so that the 'all done for you' pianola does not seem to him really helpful.

There are some acute sayings here that may usefully be pondered by musicians—such as the denial of the too-frequently-heard fallacy that 'truly musical people' recognise the superiority of the great masters as soon as they meet them. They don't, and Mr. d'Esterre does well to remind us of the truth—one which musicians almost always forget, in argument and in catering for their fellows.

The literary style is easy. This is a thoughtful book, and its sense is as good as its taste.

W. R. A.

BOOKS RECEIVED

[Mention in this list neither implies nor precludes review in a future issue.]

'The Spell of Music.' By J. A. Fuller-Maitland. Pp. 108. John Murray, 3*s.* 6*d.*

'Chopin's Tempo Rubato.' By Mania Seguel. Pp. 26. The Old Parsonage Press, Altham, Accrington, 1*s.*

'Guillaume Dufay : Son Importance dans l'Evolution de la Musique au 15ème Siècle.' By Charles van den Borren. Pp. 370. Brussels : Marcel Hayez.

Player-Piano Notes

By William Delasaire

ÆOLIAN

Duo-Art.—The biggest work this month in every sense is Schumann's 'Fantasie,' Op. 17, of which the last two movements are now issued, Nos. 0235-6. I discussed the whole work some time ago when the first movement, No. 0234, was issued, but I must again commend it far and wide. It is played superbly by Miss Katherine Goodson, in a style that is really worthy of the composer. Often one hears a work of this sort played quite competently, and in such a way that its essential greatness cannot be disguised, yet lacking that indefinable 'little more' which is truly revealing. This is the sort of music that gains a great deal by being available for reproducing pianos; it is so difficult both to play and to understand that even the not too accomplished ordinary player-pianist is apt to fight shy of it. But with the effortless marvel of just 'switching on' we may listen to the work again and again, and so get a real grasp of it.

Two very interesting pieces in the Debussy-Ravel idiom are 'La Danse d'Olaf,' by Pick-Mangiagalli (6667), and de Séverac's 'Cheval dans la prairie' (0240), from his suite for pianoforte, 'En Languedoc.' Both are piquant pieces of programme music, the second reminding me, both in harmony and rhythm, of Ravel's 'Jeux d'Eau.' It is played by William Murdoch quite adequately; the other is recorded by Backhaus, who again leaves nothing to be desired. The composer is new to the 'Duo-Art' catalogue, I believe, which makes the roll additionally valuable. Such pieces as these are salon music in the best sense, and being the work of musicians have a wider and more lasting appeal than the usual ephemeral stuff.

Such, I am afraid, is 'Sylvia' (0718), played by Robert Armbruster. In its way it is nicely done, but is too sugary for my taste.

Despite Cortôt's playing, I find Chabrier's 'Idylle' ('Pièces Pittoresques,' No. 6) (6910) dull. It looks as if the roll editor thought so too, for the monotony of the accompaniment is emphasised by the use of one solitary bass dynamic, which persists at such a length that I should imagine no pianist could match its effect.

That prolific writer of Barcarolles, Rubinstein (Arthur), provides a good piece of pianoforte writing in his first of the series, Op. 30, in F minor (6883). It is played by Edwin Hughes, and very well, too. The rhythm alone demonstrates the aptness of the title, but although quite pleasing, it is an unoriginal work of no special importance.

Wolstenholme's 'Improvisation' (0239) is certainly very interesting, and leaves no doubt in the mind that it was genuinely improvised, but I don't think the heavenly fire was burning very brightly when he recorded it. The melody and harmony are unmistakably his—one can imagine him at the organ console—but personally I am a little disappointed.

Hand-played.— For the most part Liszt's ninth Hungarian Rhapsody ('Le Carnaval de Pesth') is at least pretty and, until the end, not merely noisy. It is played by Arthur Friedheim (A883) with wonderful brilliance, but the player-piano brings us so much virtuosity nowadays that perhaps one looks for something more. The roll is difficult to play, chiefly by reason of the fact that so many accompanimental notes are left unprolonged. The music itself is surely exciting enough without the performer having to play a game of catching one- or two-punch perforations with the sustaining pedal. It may be that the pianist caught such notes with his pedal, but the automatic sustaining pedal is really not so smart as Friedheim in this respect.

The Brahms 'Rhapsody,' in E flat, Op. 119 (A885), is a noble piece of music with a magnificent vigour both of theme and rhythm; the Trio is the composer in his most beautifully lyrical vein, and Myra Hess responds to each mood in a remarkably fine way. Altogether it is an outstanding roll.

I like Henselt's 'Ave Maria' (A879) very much, except for Mark Hambourg's pedalling, which produces a smudgy effect, and so rather spoils the music. It has a beautiful little melody, most sweetly harmonized, and is one of the best small pieces of good, light music that I have encountered for some time. I remember hearing the pianist play it as an encore some time ago, and liked it so much then that I wrote to him inquiring its title. I am thus delighted to find it in roll form.

Ordinary.—The only important roll is Bach's Prelude and Fugue in F sharp minor, No. 14 of the 'Forty-Eight' (T24682). I am glad to see that my hope last month was not unfounded, and that the makers intend to complete the issue of this work. I heartily congratulate them.

Schutt's 'Canzonetta' in D (T24693) is typical of his style, except that the melody is rather squarer than usual. It just avoids the ultra-sentimental, however, and has a charming final cadence.

HUPFELD

Tri-phonola.— Blumenfeld's name is appearing rather more frequently on recital programmes of late, which lends an additional interest to Charlton Keith's recording of his Prelude, Op. 17, No. 4, in E minor (T54514). It is strong music, conceived in a modern harmonic style which adds particular point to the lovely movement of the left-hand part. Technically the roll is notable for some good pianistic 'spanks,' which, as I have remarked before, are often conspicuous by their absence from some reproducing pianos.

The famous 'Romance' from Chopin's E minor Concerto (T51348) exhibits a beautiful use of tempo rubato by Francis Planté. Added to this, a general refinement of tone-control makes the tunes sound more attractive than ever. The other movements (T51768-9) are equally well played, although the scale of the work must not mislead us into thinking of it as the composer at his best; it is brilliant rather than significant.

A Ballade, Op. 36, No. 5, by a compatriot of Grieg, Agathe Backer-Gröndahl, is not marked by any very strong nationalism, neither is it very original. It has a mournful atmosphere, which is, however, dispelled by a fine climax. It receives a competent reading at the hands of Fridtjof—presumably her brother, who also plays his own Etude, Op. 2 (T55712)—a brilliant morceau with a modern flavour, and very effective.

A singularly good example of dynamic phrasing is to be found in Brassin's 'Au Clair de la Lune,' played by Sally Liebling. Both the melody and accompaniment are enhanced by every variety of nuance, which lends an air of distinction to what is otherwise no more than good salon music, albeit very pleasing.

Animatic (Hand-played).— I am more impressed by the cleverness of Holbrooke's 'Barrage' (59046) than its musical content. Certainly it excites not unfamiliar emotions as suggested by the title, but it seems to tax the energies of the pianist, Anton Rohden, to no great effect.

Mendelssohn's Scherzo from the 'Midsummer Night's Dream' (53841) is delightful. Delicate rhythmic accent is a sine qua non in playing it, but is quite easy to employ; one need do no more than gently mark the beats with the pedals—scarcely a single additional stroke is necessary.

Glazounov must have written his 'Raymonda' ('Grand Pas Espagnol') (55940) after a very bad meal in Spain. It is so obviously music of the 'Spaniard who blighted my life' type, and the offence is aggravated by the fact that it is arranged for several hands, which produces a genuine 'mechanical' effect.

Students of chamber music will be glad to have an arrangement of Brahms's Pianoforte Quartet, Op. 25, in G minor (55038-41). The music is strong enough to come through, of course, but it is also arranged for four hands, and so must not be regarded as good or interesting pianoforte music.

Moszkowski's Etude, Op. 24, No. 1, is a brilliant study, finely played by Godowsky (50770). Great care must be exercised with the accompaniment. The solo device should be released as often as possible between the notes of the tune, so that the running passages may be played on open wind; otherwise they may become colourless and monotonous. But when the theme is re-stated fortissimo, beware of playing these runs too loudly. To do so is at once unpianistic and unmusical.

The same composer's 'Melodie Italienne,' Op. 38, No. 4 (51577), has a charmingly romantic tune, giving excellent scope for careful phrasing.

Gramophone Notes

BY 'DISCUS'

COLUMBIA

After having given us portions of Vaughan Williams's 'London' Symphony, the Company has now courageously recorded the complete work, played by the London Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Sir Dan Godfrey (L1717-1722).

Both in its texture and scoring the Symphony as a whole is the type of work that does not show the gramophone at its best. Perhaps better results would have been achieved by the 'new' recording. The 'London' Symphony can ill afford to lose much in the way of colour and contrast, and one cannot but feel that the performance itself is over-restrained. Still, here is the notable work, complete, and Vaughan Williams enthusiasts will not complain if the gramophone tends to accentuate the drab side of it.

Quite another class of gramophonist is catered for by No. 9080—a record of the D major 'Pomp and Circumstance' March, played by the Grenadier Guards Band, with Harold Williams singing the 'Land of Hope and Glory' chorus, with fine sonority. On the other side Mr. Williams sings the song in full, supported by band and chorus. This is a capital record, especially on the instrumental side.

I found myself wishing for the new recording when listening to the E minor Beethoven Quartet, played by the London String Quartet (L1724-27). The playing is delightful, but there is too narrow a range of power. After all, even a string quartet can give us the extremes of ff and pp, with all the grades between, and a long work loses much if the gramophone reproduces this as mf to pppp, with p as the norm. One has the impression at times of listening through the wrong end of the telescope, so to speak. This perhaps sounds hypercritical, seeing that the playing is so good, and the result always clear. Nevertheless, chamber music records do exist in which the dynamic contrasts have all the vivid effect of a first-hand performance, and, this being so, we ought not to be satisfied with mere clarity.

Mayer Gordon's violin playing is of the fluent, assured type that records well. At present his excellences seem to be confined to music of the showy kind—mere fiddling, in fact. Hence, in No. 9081, he is better in Wieniawski's Scherzo-Tarantella than in Dvorák's Slavonic Dance No. 2, the slower parts of which need more breadth and warmth of tone.

W. H. Squire is recorded in Senaillé's still attractive Allemande, and a transcription of a Schubert song. The new recording is only partially successful here. It gives us sonority, but at a cost; the 'cello tone becomes almost brazen, and the lower notes of the pianoforte boom at times (D1538).

Among the vocal records the best is that of Riccardo Stracciari, in 'Te Deum' from 'La Tosca'—a rich blend of voice, orchestra, and bells. He is less good in 'O star of eve': there is a general impression of slight flattening (7372).

Frank Mullings sings Quilter's 'O mistress mine' and 'Blow, blow, thou winter wind' (D1537). He is not light enough for the first, and his diction is frequently stilted.

H.M.V.

Interest in this month's large parcel is well spread, with chamber music and choral music as items of special interest.

Orchestra and choir combine with stirring effect in the Pilgrims' Choruses from 'Tannhäuser,' Acts 1 and 3, conducted by Albert Coates, the soloists being Bessie Jones, Walter Widdop, and Edward Halland. The last-named is richly sonorous (D1074). In this connection should be mentioned a couple of 'Tannhäuser' records issued in March, and received too late for notice last month—the Venusburg Music, and Prelude to Act 3, also conducted by Coates. The frenzied bacchanalian portion must be heard to be believed; it is, in fact, too much for the average drawing-room — as anything like an adequate reproduction ought to be. I am all for power in cases such as this, where power and climax are vitally essential factors (D1071-2). For those who want orchestral music of a lighter kind there are good records of Luigini's 'Ballet Egyptien' Suite, played by the New Light Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Percy Fletcher (C1254-5).

Two first-rate sets of chamber music records call for notice. The Budapest String Quartet plays Haydn in G, Op. 76, No. 1 (D1075-7). This is capital Haydn, worthily played—a little lacking in variety, perhaps, but beautifully clean. The sixth side gives us a Dittersdorf Allegro, pleasant music by a composer who knew his job, and would have made a considerable figure had he been born less near to the Haydn-Mozart era.

Good as these Budapest party records are, they are beaten all round by those of the Virtuoso Quartet in Debussy's G minor (D1058-61). For vividness and sonority this is surely among the finest achievements of the Company. There are still a few opponents of the 'new' recording—folk who concentrate on some occasional defects of the process, instead of balancing the gains and losses and arriving at a fair estimate. If this Debussy Quartet fails to convert them, nothing will. They deserve no better fare than the early chamber music records—three apologetic upper parts and a bass of a retiring disposition where the bottom octave was concerned.

Mark Hambourg plays the Finale of Beethoven's C major Sonata, Op. 2, with the right brio, but why does he choose for companion piece such a hackneyed work as 'the' C sharp minor Prelude? Having made such a choice it is perhaps natural that he should play it perfunctorily (D1073).

Moiseiwitsch is good in Chopin's B flat minor Scherzo, though personally I prefer him in music of the glittering, showy type (D1065).

Both these records leave one little to complain about in the matter of tone. The 'steel rod' effect that spoilt the early samples of new pianoforte recording has been eliminated.

Further proof that the problems of big-choir recording are being overcome is seen in the three records of the Westminster Abbey Special Choir singing Weelkes's 'Gloria in Excelsis,' Parry's 'Never weather-beaten sail' (D1083), the final chorus of the 'St. Matthew' Passion (D1084), and Pearsall's 'In dulci jubilo' (E419). The best, I feel, is the Bach chorus. 'In dulci jubilo' seems on the slow side. Apparently the attack generally leaves something to be desired. (I say 'apparently,' because we don't yet know how much of the defect is due to the space of the auditorium or the recording.) But the tone throughout is admirable. Are the clarity and blend due largely to the fact that the trebles are boys and the altos men? In most mixed choirs there is a proportion of unsteady and unblending tone among the women. The clear timbre of the boy-voice ought to be exceptionally successful for recording purposes. These and other big-choir readings come at a good moment. The stock operas have been pretty well combed out for extracts. Many of these detached numbers were poor quâ music, and of little dramatic significance when divorced from their surroundings. I am sure that to a very large number of English gramophonists fine choral records will make a greater appeal, besides being of considerable value as models.

The conquest of the organ is slower, but it is being achieved. It is good to see that the choice of music shows improvement. Reginald Goss-Custard is recorded in Bach's 'Gigue' Fugue and Widor's Toccata from the fifth Symphony (E416). The playing is brilliant, but the gramophone cannot yet tackle music of such a pace. Only those who know their Bach will be able to follow it. More successful from the recording point of view are the three movements from Boëllmann's 'Suite Gothique' (misleadingly labelled 'Introduction-Prière,' instead of 'Choral; Menuet Gothique; Prière'). These movements being free from rapid passage work and complications of any sort, come through well, though the Prière is too loud in comparison with the rest (C1238).

Another record by Mr. Dawson gives us the 'Pontifical March' of Widor and Guilmant's 'Prayer and Cradle Song' (C1258). The March comes off splendidly, with a real fat rich pedal and plenty of power without blurring. The general effect, however, is over-reedy: we miss the diapason basis. The Guilmant work raises yet one more little problem for the research department: though a quiet piece, its least quiet passages sound practically as loud as the March. The same thing occurs in the 'Prière' of the Boëllmann Suite.

Mr. Dawson is better employed in the Boëllmann and Widor than in what the list calls a 'Grand Fantasia on Easter Melodies' (B2274). This consists of a series of well-known hymn-tunes with connecting passages of the weak improvisation type. Surely the player could write, or get somebody else to write, interludes that one can listen to without squirming?

Renée Chemet has a couple of well-contrasted violin solos—Tchaikovsky's Nocturne in C sharp minor, and a delightful Minuet of Haydn—but she misses a lot of the contrast by overstressing the accents in the latter. The Nocturne is duly fervid (DB910).

Vocal records are well up to the average, with Tudor Davies in Frank Bridge's 'Love went a-riding' and Coleridge-Taylor's 'Thou art risen, my beloved' (E414); Tito Schipa in a couple of engaging Spanish songs, a Jota by de Falla, and Huarte's 'Madrigal Español,' both sung in Spanish (DA751); and Lucrezia Bori and Tito Schipa in the Death scene from 'La Bohême' (DB911). The Tudor Davies record is by far the best I have heard of him: it is almost, if not quite, free from the throaty production that spoils so much of his singing. The extract from 'La Bohême' is unusually good all round, and its close is quite harrowing. At this rate we shall soon be able to enjoy the luxury of a quiet cry without going to the theatre for it.

The 1926 H.M.V. catalogue calls for a word of praise. It is so well-arranged and cross-indexed as to be more than a mere trade list, becoming, in fact, an interesting and valuable work of reference for musicians of all kinds. Its scope is remarkable. Who, a few years ago, would have anticipated that such a book would run to nearly five hundred closely printed pages? The editor, Mr. V. S. Homewood, may well feel proud of his work.

POLYDOR

Schumann, like most of his fellow romantics, is under a cloud at present—only temporarily, we may be sure. The Polydor records of his fourth Symphony show that work in so good a light that one is surprised at the rarity of its performance in London, even when the aforesaid cloud is taken into consideration. Although German recording is apparently still on the old lines, the result is rather above the average in contrast and colour. I find this Symphony far more enjoyable than some from more august sources. The players are the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, and the conductor Hans Pfitzner. The opening movement fills three sides, the Romance one, and the Finale two (69625-7).

Complete chamber works do not yet seem to be the order of the day in Germany. At all events, only two movements of Haydn's Quartet in F, Op. 3—Presto and Serenade—have arrived (72791). They are admirably played by the Busch Quartet, and the recording is first-rate.

Only two vocal records have come to hand: Schubert's 'Die Forelle' and 'Seligkeit,' sung by Elisabeth van Endert (14673), and a couple of extracts from 'Bohême' ('Man nennt mich Mimi' and 'Wo ich selig von Glück'), the singer being Delia Reinhardt (72788). Both are good, and the orchestral part in the latter is beautifully clear, though, of course, it seems minute after the opulence of the 'new' orchestral records now produced in this country.

VOCALION

Chabrier's 'Rapsodie España,' played by the Æolian Orchestra, under Rhené-Baton, is recorded with due crispness and clarity. More power would be an improvement (A0258).

(Continued on page 437.)

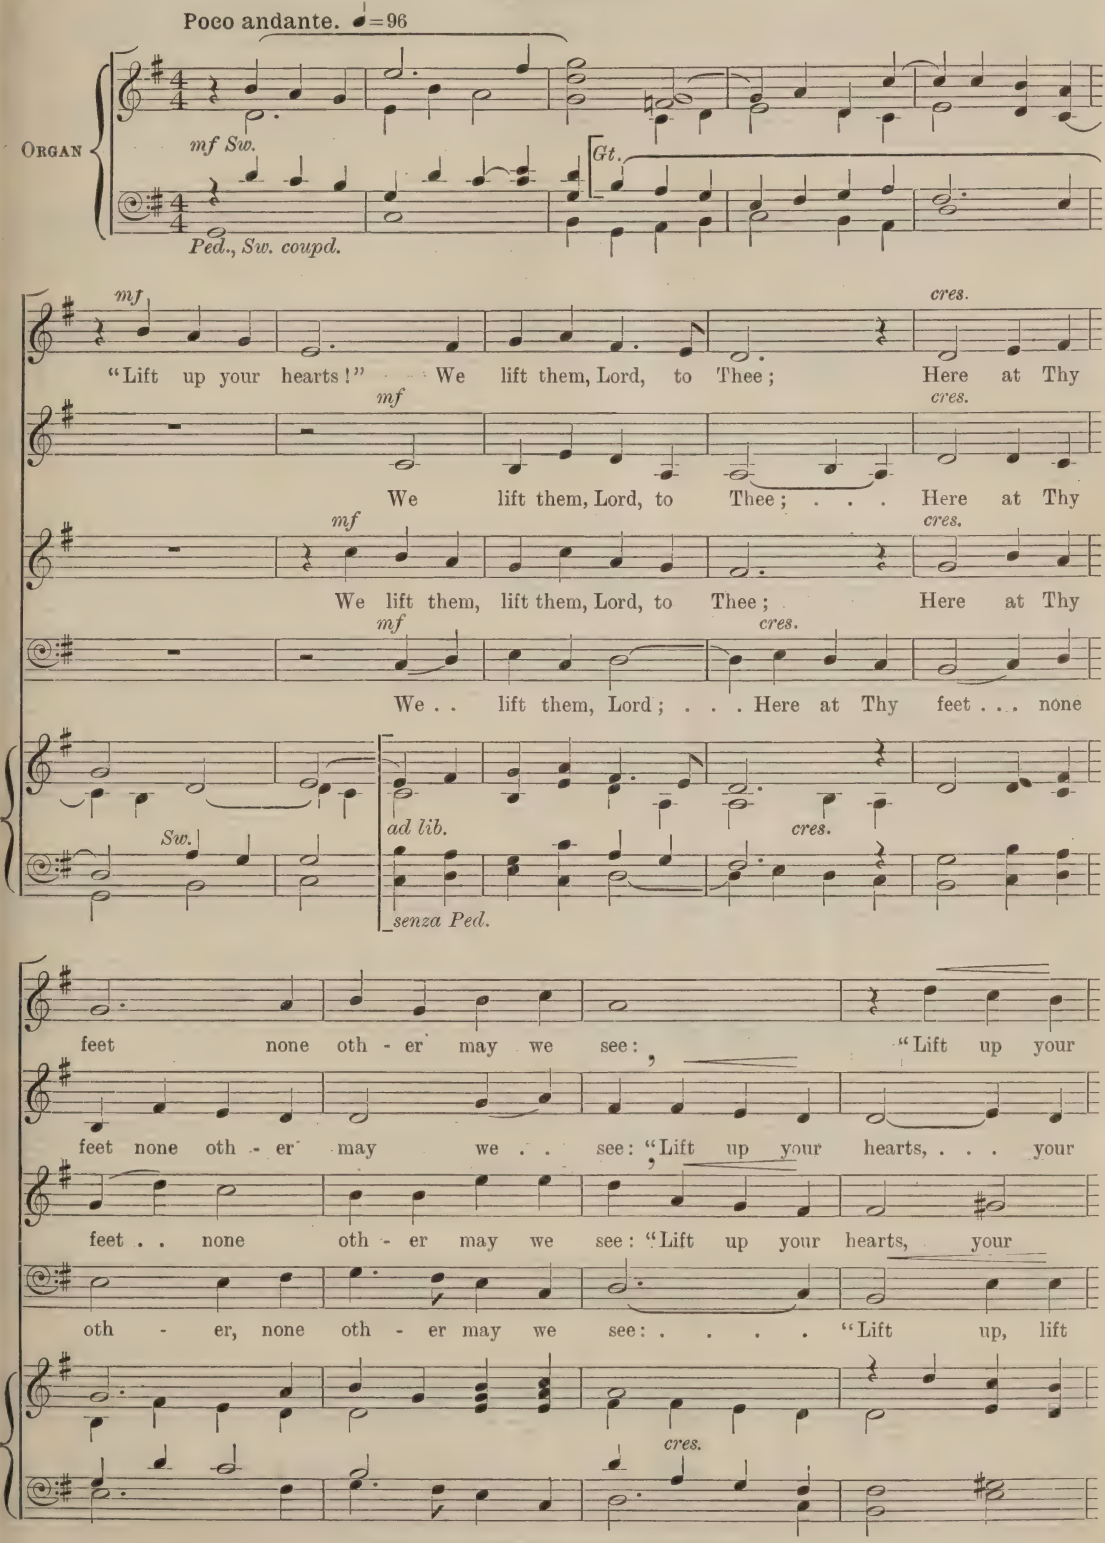
Lift up your hearts

HYMN-ANTHEM

Words from a Hymn by H. M. Butler
(by permission)

Music by H. A. Chambers

London: Novello and Company, Limited; New York: The H. W. Gray Co., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



Poco andante. ♩=96
Organ
mf Sw.
Gt.
Ped., Sw. coupd.
mf
cres.
"Lift up your hearts!" We lift them, Lord, to Thee; Here at Thy mf
cres.
We lift them, Lord, to Thee; . . . Here at Thy mf
cres.
We lift them, lift them, Lord, to Thee; Here at Thy mf
cres.
We . . lift them, Lord; . . . Here at Thy feet . . . none
Sw.
ad lib.
cres.
senza Ped.
feet none oth - er may we see: "Lift up your feet none oth - er may we . . see: "Lift up your hearts, . . . your feet . . none oth - er may we see: "Lift up your hearts, your oth - er, none oth - er may we see: . . . . "Lift up, lift
cres.

Copyright, 1926, by Novello and Company, Limited

cres.
hearts!" E'en so, with one ac - cord, ... We lift them
cres.
hearts!" E'en so, with one ac - cord, ... We lift them
cres.
hearts!" E'en . . so, with one ac - cord, We lift them up, we
cres.
up your hearts!" E'en so with one ac - cord, We lift them
cres.
up, we lift them to the Lord.
up, . . we lift them to the Lord.
lift . . them, lift them to the Lord.
up, . . we . . lift them to the Lord.
Org.
p Sw.
senza Ped.
Full. Soprano mp espress.
Lift ev' - ry gift that Thou Thy - self hast given sempre legato

poco sf
Low lies the best till lift - ed up to heaven;
Low lie the bound - ing heart, the teem - - ing brain
Till, sent from God, they mount to God a - gain.
Increase Sw.
Ped.
Gt, Sw. coupd. cres. molto rit.
Gt. to Ped.
Broadly
Soprano. Alto
f
Then, as the trum - pet - call, in af - - ter years, "Lift up your Tenor. Bass
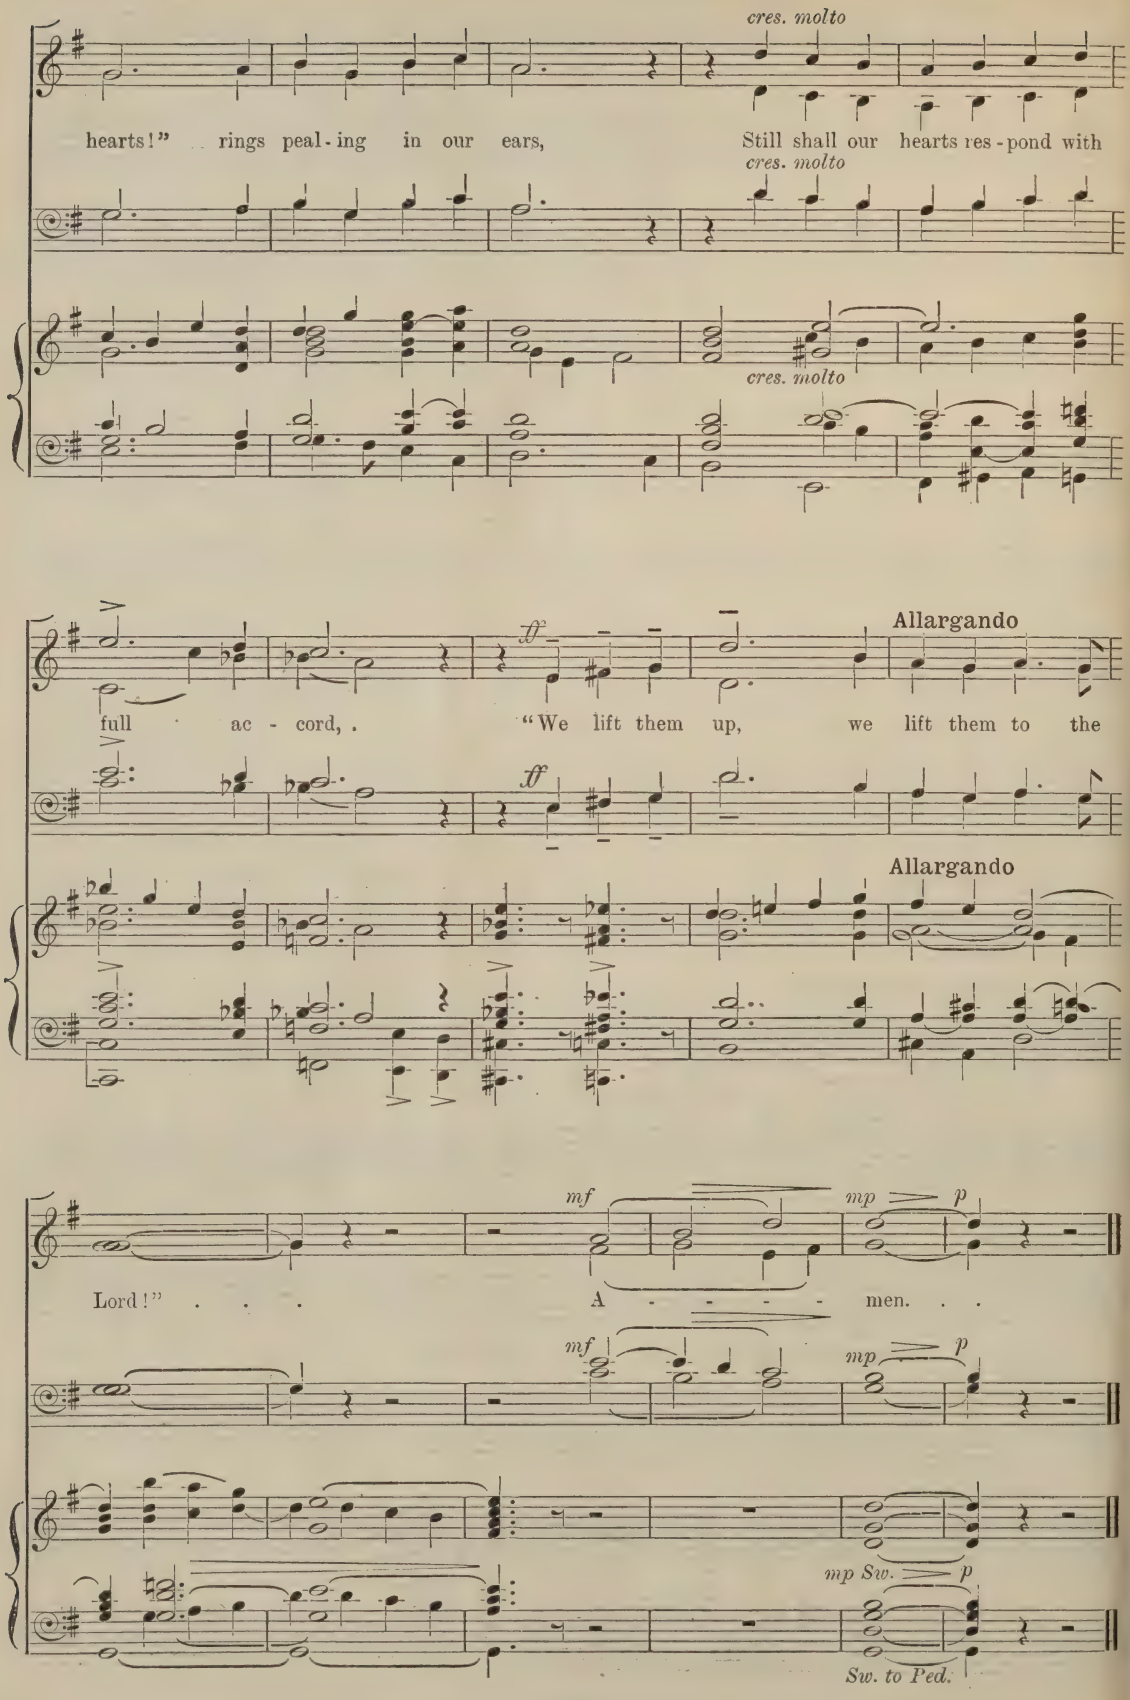
f
Broadly. ♩=88
f



cres. molto
hearts!" rings peal-ing in our ears,
Still shall our hearts res-pond with cres. molto
cres. molto ff
Allargando
full ac-cord, "We lift them up, we lift them to the ff
Allargando
mf
mp
p
Lord!" . . . A - - - - men. . .
mf
mp
p mp Sw.
p
Sw. to Ped.

(Continued from page 432.)

There is no better trio-combination recording than Adila Fachiri, Jelly d'Aranyi, and Ethel Hobday. I have heard them in works of more uniform interest than the Handel Sonata just recorded, but their playing is, as usual, admirable (Ko5222-3).

Fine 'cello-playing is that of Jacques van Lier in a couple of pieces by an old composer long since forgotten—Mazzano (X9748).

German's 'Nell Gwyn' Dances suit a military band almost if not quite as well as an orchestra; they are capitally played by the Life Guards Band (Ko5224).

Of the vocal records an example well above the average is that of Enid Cruickshank in the 'Air de Lia' from Debussy's 'L'Enfant Prodigue,' and the 'Card Song' from 'Carmen.' Here is that rarity, a contralto voice free and expressively coloured throughout (Ko5221).

Roy Henderson's singing of Wallace's 'Freebooter Songs' is somehow less good than it ought to be. The words are not clear, and surely 'Son of Mine' is too strenuous in places. After all, it is a kind of cradle-song, and the belligerent touch in the last verse is most fittingly suggested by a change of colour. I admit that the song is usually sung with a loud ending (indeed, I fancy the composer has so marked it), but that doesn't make it right. To give it tongue thus is to suggest that the freebooter doesn't in the least mind letting the countryside know where he lies hidden—to say nothing of keeping sonny awake (X9744-5).

An elocution record is something of a novelty. Here is the well-known Shakespearean actor, Henry Baynton, in three extracts from the Bard—'Shakespeare's War Cry' (a compote of three battle speeches from 'Richard III.,' 'King John,' and 'Henry V.'), and a couple of soliloquies—the melancholy Jacques's 'Seven Ages' speech, and Hamlet's 'Alas! poor Yorick.' Mr. Baynton has a sonorous and expressive voice, but one is irritated by his audible intake of breath, and his disjunct method. One would expect famous Shakespearean actors to know all that is to be known concerning elocution. But do they? I am a mere musician and scribbler, and in the ordinary way would not venture off my beat. I do here, however; and nobody shall persuade me that the way to speak Shakespearean verse (or anything else) is to break it up into tiny sections of two or three words apiece. Here, for example, is a passage from the 'Seven Ages' speech, as dissected by Mr. Baynton:

> His youthful hose | well saved | a world | too wide |
> For his | shrunk shank | and his big | manly voice |
> Turning again toward | childish treble | pipes |
> [falsetto] And whistles [falsetto] in his sound.

Mr. Baynton's treatment of this speech is too lachrymose, by the way. He misses its blend of humour, humanity, and cynicism; and we could have spared the rather cheap touch of falsetto voice at the reference to the 'shrill piping treble.' Yet such is the magic of these passages that, unsatisfactory as this record is, enough of the familiar spell comes through to suggest that here is a line the companies might well follow up. Records of beautifully-spoken poetry (especially when familiar), should be amongst the most attractive of records. But they must be less 'stagey' and more broadly phrased than the one discussed.

Church and Organ Music

ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS

The Choir-Training Examinations will be held as follows:

The CHM. Diploma Examination and the Certificate Examination will begin on Tuesday, May 11.

Associate candidates are particularly requested to note that the Chorale Prelude, 'Alle Menschen müssen sterben' ('All men must die'), referred to in Group 5 — Examination Regulations — is to be found on page 121 of Novello's new edition of Book 15, and on page 119 of the old edition.

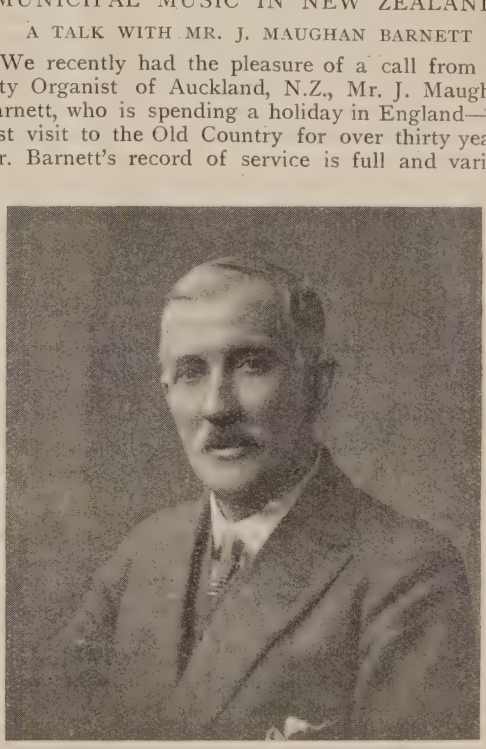
A free lecture will be delivered at the College at 11 o'clock on Saturday, May 15, by Mr. Quentin M. Maclean, organist at Shepherd's Bush Pavilion. Subject, 'The Cinema Organist's Profession.' Chairman, Mr. H. Cart de Lafontaine. No tickets required.

H. A. HARDING,
Hon. Secretary.

MUNICIPAL MUSIC IN NEW ZEALAND

A TALK WITH MR. J. MAUGHAN BARNETT

We recently had the pleasure of a call from the City Organist of Auckland, N.Z., Mr. J. Maughan Barnett, who is spending a holiday in England—his first visit to the Old Country for over thirty years. Mr. Barnett's record of service is full and varied.



MR. MAUGHAN BARNETT

A native of Leamington, he began his career in England, holding posts at the Churches of King Charles the Martyr, Tunbridge Wells, and St. Mary Magdalene, St. Leonard's-on-Sea, going thence to the Cathedral, Hobart, Tasmania. He was City Organist at Wellington, N.Z., for five years, his other musical posts in that place including the conductorship of the Royal Choral Society, Orchestral Society, and Amateur Operatic Society. In 1911 he opened the organ at Auckland Town Hall, and two years later was offered the post of City Organist, which he has filled ever since, devoting himself almost exclusively to the cause of municipal music.

During his long stay in New Zealand Mr. Barnett has seen a marked development in the musical taste of the public.

'I remember,' he said, 'when such players as Carreño could draw no more than a handful of hearers, whereas to-day Heifetz, Kreisler, and others can count on very large audiences. And our public is not made up of mere listeners. There is a good deal of active musical work going on. Our strong suit, I should say, is choral music. Practically every town of any size has its choral society. Naturally the repertory is mainly on somewhat old-fashioned lines—Handel, Haydn, Mendelssohn, with a dash of Elgar, Coleridge-Taylor, &c. Performances of such works as "Gerontius" and Berlioz's "Faust" are not unknown, but they are bound to be rare because of the difficulty of getting together an adequate orchestra. First-rate orchestral players are rather scarce, and the bulk of those available are of course absorbed by cinema work. It is fair to add, however, that, judging from the advertised programmes, a lot of excellent orchestral music is played at the picture theatres. In fact, there is much to be said for the opinion that the public hears more good music by this means than would be the case if they were dependent on an occasional orchestral concert. Reverting to choralism, I add that male-voice choirs are popular; and some remarkably good work is done by amateur operatic societies.'

We asked Mr. Barnett for some particulars of his work as City Organist.

'We are lucky,' he replied, 'in having a large Town Hall and a really excellent Norman & Beard organ of fifty-nine speaking-stops. The Hall seats 2,700, besides providing accommodation for a choir of three hundred. The instrument was presented to the city by Sir Henry Brett, of the Auckland Star, who for many years past has taken a keen and practical interest in the musical life of the community. I began the regular recitals in 1913, and for a while the programmes consisted only of organ music. The scope of the recitals was gradually extended, and now includes vocal and instrumental solos—pianoforte, violin, and 'cello; and once a month choral works (usually unaccompanied) by the Municipal Choir. The recitals take place on Saturday and Sunday nights, as a rule.'

We inquired as to charge of admission, size of audience, &c.

'Until recently,' said Mr. Barnett, 'there was a uniform charge of sixpence for any part of the Hall, but now an extra sixpence is charged for gallery seats. The audience has steadily grown. We began in 1913 with an average of two hundred and fifty; during the past year it has been nearly nine hundred. This is the average, remember: attendances of twelve hundred to over two thousand are by no means infrequent.'

'As to programmes,' he went on, 'I have, of course, to cater for a great variety of tastes, but during the past few years it has been a pleasure to see indications of increased liking for real organ music of the best quality, and, as a result, I have felt justified in increasing the proportion of such works, and making a corresponding reduction in the transcriptions. At one time arrangements from popular orchestral works figured largely in my programmes, but I found myself becoming more and more dissatisfied with this type of organ solo, both as player and listener. After all, there is no lack of excellent real organ music to-day, and, as I have said, there is a large and growing public ready to give it a hearing. My programmes therefore include a good deal of Bach, all the Mendelssohn, Reubke, Elgar, Harwood, and Wolstenholme Sonatas; the most attractive movements from the eight Symphonies of Widor (Nos. 5 and 6 in their entirety), and from Vierne's Symphonies; such big works as the Liszt "Ad nos" and B A C H Fugues, Karg Elert's Chaconne, and the same composer's Handel Variations, as well as shorter examples by Smart (whose best organ music, by the way, is far from being dead), Georges Jacob, Hollins, Barié, &c. Such transcriptions as I indulge in are drawn rather from good pianoforte or vocal than from orchestral works.'

Apropos of recital programmes Mr. Barnett expressed himself as being much struck by the marked change for the better in those now played in England:

'I regularly run my eye down the programmes published in the Musical Times, and the improvement since I was a youngster is nothing short of amazing. The large proportion of Bach's works now played is a striking feature. Instead of ringing the changes on a few stock Fugues and Toccatas, players now draw liberally on the Trio-Sonatas, Chorale Preludes, and other works that were practically unknown to the rank and file thirty years ago.'

CHILDREN'S CONCERTS

Readers who imagine that recitals and concerts for school children are a new feature may be surprised to hear that such recitals started in New Zealand thirteen years ago. The City Council co-operates with the Education Board and the headmasters, who undertake all arrangements of transport and seating of the children. About two thousand children from the primary schools attend the recitals. 'We do not find it necessary to stimulate the attention of the children by singing the chief themes to jingles,' says Mr. Barnett. 'The concerts last about an hour, and the programmes consist of short addresses on subjects such as organ construction, folk-song, or musical form, brief and simple descriptions of the music to be performed, and organ, vocal, and violin solos. The majority of the children attending these concerts are of an age which necessitates a selection of music of the "easily-understood" type. The organ solos, therefore, consist of the simpler examples of good organ music, especially pieces with well-marked rhythms and preferably with a "programme." I also play transcriptions of suitable pianoforte pieces which are likely to be of interest to the numerous pianoforte students amongst the audience. Occasionally folk-songs are sung by the children to pianoforte or organ accompaniment.'

MUNICIPAL MUSIC

As a result of his long experience as City Organist, Mr. Barnett believes strongly in music being made a subject of municipal enterprise.

'Its value to the community is generally recognised,' he says, 'so it should be brought within the reach of all, like other amenities, such as libraries, picture galleries, &c. We have, as I said above, a Municipal Choir which sings regularly at the Town Hall. A Municipal Band has recently been established by the City Council, under the direction of Mr. Christopher Smith, who was, I believe, at one time conductor of the "Besses o' the Barn Band." These municipal players give concerts in the parks and in the Town Hall.'

OPENINGS FOR MUSICIANS IN NEW ZEALAND

We frequently receive inquiries as to the prospects of musicians who wish to leave this country for the Dominions, so we questioned Mr. Barnett on this point:

'It is difficult to advise, save in a general way,' he replied, 'but I consider that a capable man, able to adapt himself, and above all imbued with something of the pioneer spirit, should have no difficulty in making a good position for himself. There are, of course, not many important organ appointments in New Zealand, for the population of the entire country is only about a million and a quarter. I believe that the man on the spot has the best chance when a vacancy occurs, as personal knowledge of the applicant counts with the authorities. An organist (or, indeed, any other musician who wishes to settle in our country) should therefore come out prepared to hold on in readiness for an opening. So far as teaching is concerned, I am sure that a well-equipped teacher has only to prove his ability in order to be able to work up quite a good connection. I need hardly say that New Zealand is a delightful country to live in, especially in regard to climate. And a musician who is also a sportsman can have the best of times. First-rate shooting and fishing, for example, can be enjoyed at a trifling cost.'

CHURCH MUSIC CONGRESS IN HOLLAND

The little town of Tilburg, in North Brabant, was in Easter week the scene of one of the most interesting musical gatherings it has fallen to my lot to attend. A so-called Church Music Week, though lasting only three days, had been arranged by the Netherlands St. Gregory Society, in the diocese of 's-Hertogenbosch, with the object of arousing greater interest in the music prescribed by the 'Motu Proprio' of Pius X. It was expected that about sixty 'students' would attend, instead of which about two hundred and twenty turned up at each of the fifteen lessons (or lectures). Besides this, the Exhibition of printed and manuscript music held in the little Conservatory building was constantly thronged. It was originally intended that the meetings should be held there, but it became evident from the very first that the largest room in the building was far too small for the purpose, and a move was made to a neighbouring club. Even to the non-musician the event was interesting, if only by reason of the people attending it. That there were old and young, known and unknown, goes without saying; but the different styles of clerical dress from various parts of Holland, the half-dozen or more monastic habits, the black and blue shawls and white wings of some of the religieuses, with an odd peasant or two in the dress of his district, gave an outward, picturesque effect that was well in keeping with the music. This music was, with a few small exceptions, performed not as actual illustrations of the lectures, but in its proper place in the Churches. The subjects were Gregorian music, with reference to accentuation and syllabic treatment as well as the proper organ accompaniment, the Palestrina style and the modern style, with incidental notes on voice-training, the liturgical year, and conducting. As lecturers the best the land could provide had been secured—Dr. A. A. Smijers, an international authority on Palestrina and the Netherlands School; Dr. W. Kerssemakers and Prof. A. Andriessen, both of whom are leading authorities on the subject of practical plainsong; Willem van Kalmthout, Director of the local Conservatoire, and himself a composer of high ability; Theo Bosman, a fine example of his own theories of voice production; Alphons Vranken, a leading choral conductor; and the clergy of the district, who are students of their subjects.

The most striking feature, however, was the actual performance of the music, which was all the more remarkable because it was the work of the local Church choirs under the direction of their own choirmasters. The singing of a Gregorian Mass by the choir of a suburban church, directed by the parish priest, was a thing of rare beauty, and an example of excellent methods of choir-training, for boys and men all come from the working classes and give their services freely. In tone, phrasing, and expression, they sang almost impeccably. As a very different example of the same kind of thing, we had the Schola Cantorum of one of the seminaries singing the Proper of the Mass, and also Vespers and Compline (men's voices, with a light harmonium accompaniment).

Palestrina's 'Missa Papæ Marcelli,' sung by another local choir, and Motets by Palestrina and Vittoria, were the works chosen for illustrations of the Palestrina style, and, as the great modern example, the Mass, 'In die festo,' of Alphons Diepenbrock, was sung by a combined choir of eighty voices, under Alphons Vranken. This service, for male voices and organ, is one of the finest modern works in the whole repertory of Latin Church music, and ought to be heard much oftener than it is. For a composition of considerable elaboration it is remarkably free from difficulties, while it is not only a splendid choral work, but fits in perfectly with the requirements of the Latin liturgy. On the whole, the Music Week showed Holland at its best in music. In at least one country it is evident that the 'Motu proprio' has born good fruit in raising the standard alike of composition and of performance by the Church choirs, and the Tilburg district is the one in which this result is most fully seen. H. A.

LENT AND PASSIONTIDE MUSIC

The number of performances of the 'St. Matthew' Passion, 'The Messiah,' and other works suitable to this season is so large that adequate reports, with details of soloists, &c., would fill some columns of this journal. We can therefore do no more than summarize.

The Bach work appears to have been most in favour, and the regularity and frequency of its performance, not only at Cathedrals but also in Parish Churches, indicates a standard of efficiency on the part of choirs and a level of public taste that are the best of auguries for the future of Church music. The 'St. Matthew' Passion has been performed (either whole or in part) at St. Paul's Cathedral; Westminster Abbey (the 'Special Service' Choir of two hundred boys and men: Mr. Sydney H. Nicholson); Southwark Cathedral (Mr. E. T. Cook); York Minster (the Minster Choir and York Musical Society: Dr. E. C. Bairstow); St. Asaph Cathedral (a choir of about seventy drawn from the district: Dr. H. C. L. Stocks); Exeter Cathedral (the Cathedral Choir, augmented by the Voluntary Choir of eighty: Dr. Ernest Bullock); Lincoln Cathedral (the Cathedral Choir and Lincoln Musical Society: Dr. G. J. Bennett); Chichester Cathedral (the Cathedral Choir and Chichester Musical Society: Dr. M. P. Conway); Leeds Parish Church (Dr. A. C. Tysoe); St. Mary's Church, Nottingham (St. Mary's Choral Society: Mr. V. S. Read); Glasgow Cathedral (Glasgow Bach Society: Mr. Michael Diack); All Saints' Church, Maidstone (Maidstone Choral Union: Mr. F. Wilson Parish); Christ Church, Purley (Purley Choral Union: Mr. Harold Macpherson); St. Thomas's Church, Portsmouth (Mr. Hugh Burry); Turret Green (Mr. Gooderham); Walsall Drill Hall (Walsall Madrigal Society: Mr. Graham Godfrey); Pershore Abbey (Bredon Choral Society and Pershore Abbey Choral Society: the Rev. H. Clifford); Clapham Congregational Church (Grafton Philharmonic Society, plus some members of Westminster Abbey Special Choir and the Bach Choir: Mr. Henry F. Hall); the Guildhall, Plymouth (Plymouth Orpheus Society of three hundred, supplemented by forty boys from various parish churches: Mr. David Parkes). The 'St. John' Passion was sung at St. Bartholomew's Church, Armley, Leeds (Mr. H. Bardgett), and at All Saints' Church, Eastbourne (Mr. Philip Miles).

Among other musical performances in connection with Lent and Passiontide have been: Brahms's 'Requiem,' at Rochester Cathedral (Rochester Choral Society: Mr. C. Hylton Stewart); Dvorák's 'Stabat Mater' and William Child's 'O Bone Jesu,' at Alnwick Parish Church (the choir augmented: Mr. George C. Gray); Allegri's 'Miserere,' Gibbons's 'Hosanna to the Son of David,' and Vittoria's 'O all ye that pass by,' at Ripon Cathedral (Dr. C. H. Moody); Bach's 'God's time is the best' and excerpts from 'The Messiah' and the 'St. Matthew' Passion, at St. Margaret's Church, Ipswich (Mr. J. Job); Haydn's 'Passion,' at St. George's Church, Jesmond (Mr. J. M. Preston); the Passion section of 'The Messiah,' at St. Paul's Church, Wokingham (Mr. A. H. Lusty); Dvorák's 'Stabat Mater,' at St. Michael's, Sutton Court (by an augmented choir: Mr. W. J. Frederick Pugh); Brahms's 'Requiem,' at Town Hall, West Hartlepool (Hartlepools Harmonic Society: Mr. J. F. Chalmers Park); and Brahms's 'Requiem,' at St. Paul's Church, Colwyn Bay (the choir augmented: Mr. Morton Bailey).

OPERA BY CHOIRBOYS

During Easter week, in the Abbot's Dining Hall, the Westminster Abbey Choristers gave a series of performances of a new opera, 'The Boy Bishop,' written and composed by Sydney H. Nicholson. The central incident of the libretto is the institution of the Boy Bishop. Between the two Acts is interpolated a delightful adaptation of the old York mystery of the Flood. Mr. Nicholson's verses are neatly turned (with suggestions of Barham and Gilbert in their ingenious rhyming), with many touches of humour, and the music was tuneful and well varied. The young performers not only sang admirably, but also in some cases discovered really marked ability on the dramatic side. The only points that suggested themselves as possible improvements are a shortening of one or two of the opening songs (which hold up the action overmuch), and the giving of the part of the Magister Choristarum to an adult—merely for the sake of variety and realism, and not because of any shortcomings on the part of the boy who played this rôle. 'The Boy Bishop' gave great pleasure, and should be heard again.

THE ORGAN AT ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL

The St. Paul's Cathedral organ has been moved during the restoration of the Dome, and now stands in the N.E. quarter of the Nave. Electric action of the latest Willis design has superseded the old pneumatic system; and the new console contains forty-six adjustable combination pistons, including four adjustable general pistons. The tonal scheme has not been interfered with, though the Dome Tubas are not yet incorporated. The organ in its present condition was first used at the performance of the 'St. Matthew' Passion on March 30. We are glad to be able to reproduce a photograph (taken on the preceding day) of Dr. Charles Macpherson at the console.

VILLAGE DOCTOR AND CHOIRMASTER: CHOIR RECORDS

Dr. I. R. Cory has retired from the honorary choirmastership of Shere Parish Church, Surrey, after nearly forty years' service. A testimony to his work is the fact that the Shere choir includes seven members whose length of membership averages thirty-eight years — a splendid record, and one that it would be hard to equal, we imagine. (Since the above was written, however, we hear of a still more astonishing record—that of six members of the choir at Hinckley Parish Church, whose years of service are as follows: 59, 59, 45, 40, 36, and 34—total, 273; average, forty-five years.)

At many churches the close of the winter's work of choirs and choral societies is marked by performances of choral works of varying scale. We note the following events: 'The Hymn of Praise' at Holy Trinity Church, Ripon, by the Choral and Orchestral Societies of Ripon (Mr. P. R. Pfaff); two performances of 'The Creation' at Durham Cathedral (the Special Choir of a hundred and forty: the Rev. A. D. Culley); the B minor Mass, by the Newcastle Bach Choir (Dr. W. G. Whittaker); 'St. Paul' at the Old Drill Hall, Hailsham (Hailsham Musical Society: Mr. Arthur W. Green); Bach's 'A Stronghold Sure' and Parry's 'Voces Clamantium' at St. Stephen's Church, Prenton (Birkenhead Oratorio Choir: Mr. Teasdale Griffiths—a very enterprising and promising start by a newly-formed choir); and 'The Hymn of Praise' at Headley Parish Church, by the choir (Mr. L. A. Dearle). The last-named work was given also at Farnham Royal Parish Church by the Farnham Common Operatic and Choral Society (Lieut. G. Miller).

From a report of a recital at a Swansea church:

> '"An Ocean Tempest," was an unusual composition. Opening calmly, the theme developed into a representation of a raging storm, with rumbling thunder, rushing wind rising to a shrill crescendo, hissing seas, and, most peculiar of all, the melancholy note of a ship's syren. The piece was melodramatically played, but with the introduction of "Nearer, my God to Thee" and "O God, our help in ages past," the effect, with the dimming of the chapel lights, was a new trick for Swansea.'

The report says elsewhere: 'A very well-known piece, "In a Monastery Garden," played as an encore, was somewhat unexpected.' Not unexpected from a player who could perpetrate that storm, complete with siren and dimmed lights!

Mr. Ellingford's programme at St. George's Hall, Liverpool, on March 27, was unusual and, we should imagine, highly effective. It consisted of five of Mendelssohn's Sonatas, in this order: Nos. 5, 2, 4, 6, and 1.

Somewhat similar schemes were adopted by Mr. Ernest Mitchell at Grace Church, New York, during Lent. One programme was made up of eight of the 'Byzantine Sketches' of Henri Mulet, and another comprised nine numbers from Georges Jacob's 'Les Heures Bourguignonnes.' There is much to be said in favour of thus giving practically complete performances of sets of pieces based on a central idea. (The Mulet Suite deals with the various parts of a cathedral, and Jacob's work is based on a set of pictures by Lena, descriptive of a day in a vineyard district of France.)

The second issue of The Rotunda more than maintains the promise of its opening number. A very full description of the Liverpool Cathedral organ is contributed by Henry Willis; Marcel Dupré writes on 'Improvisation'; Herbert F. Ellingford gives an account of the organ at St. George's Hall, Liverpool; and there are also articles by G. Donald Harrison ('Electrically controlled Swell Shutters'), G. D. Cunningham ('Memory Playing'), Harvey Grace ('Modern English Organ Composers'), and others, besides specifications and miscellaneous matter. The illustrations are again an admirable feature.

Dr. H. Davan Wetton gave a lecture on Handel at the Lecture Hall, Stamford Hill, on March 3. As organist of the Foundling Hospital he had much of interest to say concerning Handel's connection with that Institution. Illustrations were provided by Miss Florence Walter, Miss Marjorie Villars, Miss Barbara Ensor, Miss Elsie E. Manley, Mr. Arthur Scott, and Mr. Cyril Edwards. A week later Dr. Wetton followed up his lecture with a Handel recital at Stamford Hill Congregational Church.

NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF PART-SONGS, GLEES, AND MADRIGALS.

For S.A.T.B. unless otherwise stated. Those marked thus * may be had in Tonic Sol-fa Notation

No.
614	Absence	H. Goetz	3d.
217	* Do. (A.T.T.B.)	J. L. Hatton	3d.
181	* Do.	,,	2d.
67	Adieu love, adieu	G. A. Macfarren	4d.
312	Adieu, my native shore	Pearsall	3d.
943	Adieu, sweet Amaryllis	J. W. G. Hathaway	3d.
1227	Do. ...	C. Macpherson	4d.
390	Adieu to the woods	Egerton	4d.
658	Advice to lovers ...	P. W. Pilcher	3d.
1398	*After many a dusty mile	E. Elgar	4d.
913	After the battle arr.	T. R. G. Jozé	3d.
674	Ah, my dear Son (Carol, 3 V.) ...		4d.
1375	Ah! what is love ...	W. McNaught	4d.
515	Ah! woe is me (6 V.)	H. Lahee	6d.
648	Airley Beacon	C. V. Stanford	3d.
568	Airs of Summer ...	J. L. Roeckel	3d.
17	All among the barley	E. Stirling	3d.
971	*All for my true love	H. D. Wetton	4d.
81	All is not gold that shineth bright in snow (5 V.)	W. J. Westbrook	4d.
394	*All is still ...	G. A. Macfarren	2d.
802	All Souls' Day	J. Rheinberger	4d.
59	All ye woods and trees and bow'rs	J. L. Hatton	2d.
83	* Do. (5 V.)	H. Lahee	2d.
940	Do. ...	H. W. Wareing	4d.
1037	*Allan Water arr.	H. E. Button	3d.
478	*Allen-a-Dale ...	C. H. Lloyd	6d.
1020	* Do.	J. B. McEwen	4d.
334	Already snow has fallen	R. Franz	2d.
113	Alton Locke's Song	G. A. Macfarren	2d.
1011	*Amaryllis I did woo	J. E. West	3d.
1322	*American National Songs (Three)		2d.
972	Amintor's well-a-day	J. E. West	4d.
1364	An address to the nightingale	W. W. Pearson	4d.
175	An Autumn song ...	C. Pinsuti	4d.
20	An emigrant's song	W. Macfarren	3d.
1074	*An Empire song	A. C. Mackenzie	4d.
1053	An end will I bring	Schubert	4d.
1387	*An old Song resung	H. B. Gardiner	6d.
485	And then no more ...	R. Raff	3d.
1103	*Angelic hunter, The	arr. J. Brahms	4d.
1091	Angel's call, The	I. I. Viotta	2d.
960	*Angel's greeting, The	J. Brahms	4d.
1167	*Angelus (Tuscany)	E. Elgar	6d.
1340	*Anglers, The	W. W. Pearson	3d.
30	Angler's Trysting-tree, The	C. W. Corfe	4d.
1039	*Annie Laurie arr.	H. E. Button	3d.
108	Annie Lee	J. Barnby	2d.
182	April showers ...	J. L. Hatton	2d.
218	Do. (A.T.T.B.)	,,	2d.
1318	*Arethusa, The ...	W. Shield	4d.
137	Arise, sweet love ...	H. Leslie	2d.
97	Arise, the sunbeams hail	F. Berger	4d.
520	Around the maypole tripping	J. L. Hatton	2d.
859	*Arranmore Boat Song	arr. T. R. G. Jozé	6d.
457	*Arrow and the song, The	W. Hay	4d.
973	As Amoret with Phillis sat	John E. West	3d.
1054	As dewdrops at morn	Schubert	4d.
525	As I saw fair Clora	F. Corder	4d.
146	As it fell upon a day ...	S. Reay	4d.
619	As the ripples flow	E. A. Sydenham	3d.
1052	As the watcher longs	Schubert	4d.
900	As through the land	J. Pullein	3d.
796	*As torrents in summer	E. Elgar	3d.
1180	As when the sun renews his strength (Madrigal)	C. E. Miller	4d.
1257	*Ash Grove, The arr.	Dunhill	4d.
1105	At Andernach in Rhineland	Abt	4d.
393	At first the mountain rill	G. A. Macfarren	2d.
981	At her fair hands ...	J. Elliott	3d.
788	Do. ...	C. H. H. Parry	4d.
335	At parting	R. Franz	2d.
358	*At the coming of the Spring	J. L. Hatton	4d.
195	Auburn	,,	4d.
582	*Auld Lang Syne arr.	E. Land	2d.
71	Autolycus' Song	C. A Macirone	2d.
1006	* Do. ...	C. Lee Williams	4d.
158	Autumn	W. Macfarren	4d.
274	Do. (T.T.B.B.)	,,	4d.
353	Do. ...	A. C. Mackenzie	2d.
1162	Autumn fields, The	N. W. Gade	4d.
464	Autumn is come again (5 V.)	F. Corder	4d.
403	Autumn song ...	S. Reay	4d.
683	Do. ...	J. Rheinberger	3d.
484	Ave Maria	J. Raff	4d.
241	* Do.	H. Smart	2d.
968	*Awake, awake ...	G. Bantock	4d.
76	*Awake, awake, the flow'rs unfold	H. Leslie	2d.
25	Awake the starry midnight hour	Mendelssohn	3d.
923	*Away to the woodlands	H. W. Warner	4d.
978	*Baby's feet, like sea shells pink, A	C. H. Lloyd	4d.
225	Bacchanalian Song (A.T.T.B.)	J. L. Hatton	4d.
193	Bait, The (Come live with me)	J. L. Hatton	2d.
996	*Ballad, A (8 V.) ...	T. Wendt	4d.
1016	Ballade of Midsummer	,,	4d.
1017	Ballade of Spring	,,	6d.
1044	*Battle of the Baltic, The	C. H. Lloyd	6d.
861	*Battle song, A arr.	T. R. G. Jozé	4d.
578	Do. ...	E. A. Sydenham	4d.
1334	*Beacon, The ...	A. Carse	4d.
689	Beauty, arise ...	K. J. Pye	4d.
841	Before me careless lying (5 V.)	C. H. Lloyd	6d.
1238	*Beleaguered, The	A. S. Sullivan	3d.
56	*Belfry Tower, The	J. L. Hatton	2d.
1311	*Belgian National song	F. Campenhout	2d.
572	Bells across the snow	Ch. Gounod	4d.
432	*Bells of St. Michael's Tower, The	W. Knyvett (5 V.), arr. R. P. Stewart	6d.
1271	*Ben Bowlegs (humorous)	W. W. Pearson	4d.
984	Bendemeer's Stream	J. Pointer	4d.
1216	Beside the river ...	A. Jensen	3d.
793	Better music ne'er was known	C. H. H. Parry	4d.
184	*Beware	J. L. Hatton	2d.
220	Do. (A.T.T.B.)	,,	2d.
111	*Bird of the Wilderness	J. Barnby	4d.
196	Do.	J. L. Hatton	4d.
1157	Birds are singing, The	Hans Sitt	3d.
798	Birthday serenade, A	G. J. Elvey	4d.
1308	Birthright, The ...	E. Elgar	4d.
300	*Bishop of Mentz, The	Pearsall	2d.
1107	*Black Monk, The (Welsh folk-song) arr.	R. Boughton	4d.
55	*Blow, blow thou winter wind	G. A. Macfarren	2d.
1254	Blow, breeze, from the North	G. Elvey	4d.
1369	Blow, western wind	Pearson	4d.
661	*Blue-bottle's fate, The (humorous)	A. H. Ashworth	4d.
544	Blue-eyed lassie, The	F. Brandeis	3d.
933	*Blwyddyn Bywyd	D. Protheroe	4d.
187	Blythe is the Bird	J. L. Hatton	3d.
399	*Boat Song ...	H. Leslie	2d.
357	* Do.	E. Prout	6d.
1088	Do.	F. Schubert	3d.
385	Boat, The	R. Schumann	4d.
3	Boating Song ...	E. G. Monk	3d.
521	*Boatman's Good-night, The	F. Schira	2d.
545	*Bonnie Bell	A. C. Mackenzie	3d.
1310	*Boy, The (humorous)	Brewer	4d.
63	*Break, break on thy cold grey stones, O sea	G. A. Macfarren	2d.
99	Breathe soft, ye winds	J. B. Calkin	2d.
1307	* Do.	W. Paxton	2d.
878	Bridal Song ...	H. Leslie	6d.
639	Bright be thy dreams	Oliver King	3d.
402	*Bright-hair'd morn, The	S. Reay	4d.
584	Bright Moon ...	John E. West	3d.
1222	*Bring me a golden pen	F. H. Cowen	4d.
601	Broken Flower, The	Oliver King	3d.
447	Brook, The	C. G. Reissiger	4d.
1015	*Brownies, The	Moellendorff	4d.
1416	Bushes and Briars ...	(arr.)	3d.
223	Busy, curious, thirsty fly (A.T.T.B.)	J. L. Hatton	3d.
743	*Butterfly, The	J. Blumenthal	6d.
1095	*By a gentle river laid	John E. West	4d.
1002	*By the waters of Babylon	P. Cornelius	3d.
1141	By woodland and wayside	E. Franz	3d.
1272	Call John (humorous)	arr. W. W. Pearson	4d.
1122	Calm is the lake	F. Abt	4d.
359	Calm night	J. L. Hatton	4d.
380	Calm of the sea, The	H. Hiles	6d.
911	*Capture of Cremona, The	arr. T. R. G. Jozé	4d.
314	Caput apri defero...	...Pearsall	4d.
178	*Caravan, The ...	C. Pinsuti	2d.
1251	*Cargoes ...	H. B. Gardiner	4d.
1273	Carrion Crow, The (humorous)	W. W. Pearson	4d.
607	Cavalier, The ...	C. Goodall	4d.
529	Cavalry song	C. A. Macirone	4d.
635	Cephalus and Procris	A. W. Batson	4d.
482	Chafer's Wedding, A (humorous)	Lewandowski	8d.
1087	Chapel, The ...	C. Kreutzer	4d.
427	*Charge of the Light Brigade, The	E. Hecht	6d.
85	*Charm me asleep (6 V.)	H. Leslie	4d.
906	Do. ...	J. B. McEwen	4d.
847	*Chase, The ...	E. German	4d.
757	Cherry ripe ...	A. H. Brewer	3d.
583	Do.	arr. E. Land	2d.
1255	* Do.	W. G. Ross	3d.
731	Do. (6 V.)	S. P. Waddington	4d.
1212	Cheshire cheese, The	arr. J. C. Bridge	4d.
734	Chi la Gagliarda ...	B. Donato	4d.
375	Chieftain to the Highland bound, A	Pearsall	3d.
466	* Do.	O. Prescott	6d.
94	Childhood's melody	F. Berger	2d.
101	Chivalry of Labour, The (5 V.)	J. B. Calkin	6d.
1145	Chloe, that dear bewitching prude	H. Willan	3d.
1147	*Chorus of Empire	C. A. E. Harriss	4d.
66	*Christmas...	G. A. Macfarren	2d.
1109	*Christmas greeting, A	E. Elgar	8d.
314	Christmas song, A ...	Pearsall	4d.
967	Do.	M. Prætorius	3d.
845	Close to my heart...	W. Davies	4d.
677	*Clouds, The	J. Rheinberger	4d.
823	*Come again, sweet days	J. Dowland	3d.
726	*Come away ...	E. German	4d.
873	* Do.	H. Parker	6d.
1169	Come away, come away, death	arr. Arne	3d.
36	Do. (5 V.)	G. A. Macfarren	4d.
51	* Do. (5 V.)	,,	4d.
58	Come celebrate the May	Hatton	2d.
668	Come, fairies, trip it ...	F. Iliffe	4d.
102	Come fill, my boys (A.T.T.B.)	J. B. Calkin	4d.
118	*Come follow me A.	Zimmermann	2d.
1143	Come forth, the summer's murmur hear ...	E. Franz	3d.
14	Come, heavy sleep	J. Dowland	3d.
745	Come if you dare... ...	Purcell	6d.
1210	Come, lasses and lads	arr. J. C. Bridge	4d.
899	Come let me take thee	J. Pullein	3d.
317	Come let us be merry	Pearsall	2d.
507	*Come live with me	W. S. Bennett	2d.
360	Do. ...	J. L. Hatton	4d.
193	Do. (The Bait) ...	,,	2d.
497	Come, May, with all thy flowers	J. L. Gregory	3d.
1052	Come, O come, dearest, come	Schubert	4d.
671	Come o'er the burn, Bessie (3 V.)		3d.
1214	Come out across the heather	A. Jensen	4d.
791	*Come, pretty wag, and sing	C. H. H. Parry	3d.
38	Come sleep... ...	J. Benedict	4d.
1060	Do. ...	J. W. G. Hathaway	3d.
1110	* Do. ...	R. H. Walthew	2d.
945	Do. ...	A. G. Wathall	4d.
1007	*Come to me, gentle sleep	Cowen	4d.
701	Do. ...	H. W. Schartau	4d.
713	Come, tuneful friends (humorous)	C. H. Lloyd	4d.
1032	Come with me, fairest	J. Brahms	4d.
615	Comfort	H. Goetz	3d.
999	*Comfort in tears...	P. Cornelius	6d.
1422	Coming through the Craigs o' Kyle	A. Rowley	4d.
1182	*Comrades' song of hope, The	arr. A. Adam	3d.
383	Confidence (8 V.) ...	R. Schumann	4d.

MADE IN ENGLAND

No. 1402 NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK (SECOND SERIES) Price (4*d.*).

ON MAY MORNING

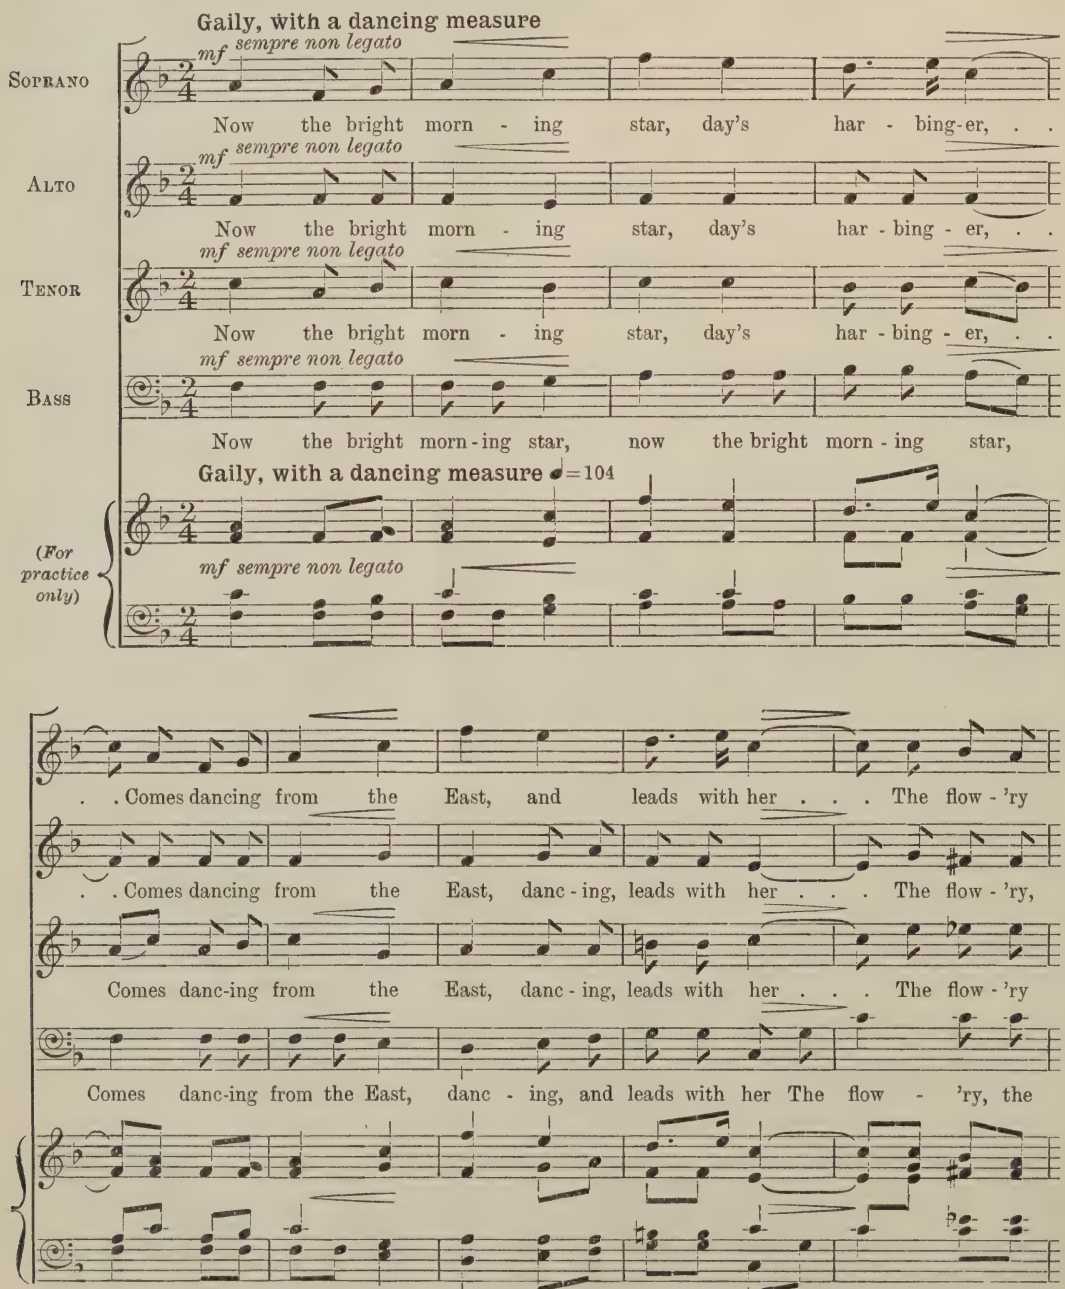
FOUR-PART SONG

WORDS BY JOHN MILTON

MUSIC BY

ETHEL BOYCE

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.



Gaily, with a dancing measure
mf sempre non legato
Soprano
Now the bright morn - ing star, day's har - bing-er, . .
Alto
Now the bright morn - ing star, day's har - bing - er, . .
Tenor
Now the bright morn - ing star, day's har - bing - er, . .
Bass
Now the bright morn-ing star, now the bright morn - ing star,
Gaily, with a dancing measure ♩=104
(For practice only)
. . Comes dancing from the East, and leads with her . . . The flow - 'ry
. . Comes dancing from the East, danc - ing, leads with her . . . The flow - 'ry,
Comes danc-ing from the East, danc - ing, leads with her . . . The flow - 'ry Comes danc-ing from the East, danc - ing, and leads with her The flow - 'ry, the

Copyright, 1922, by Novello and Company, Limited

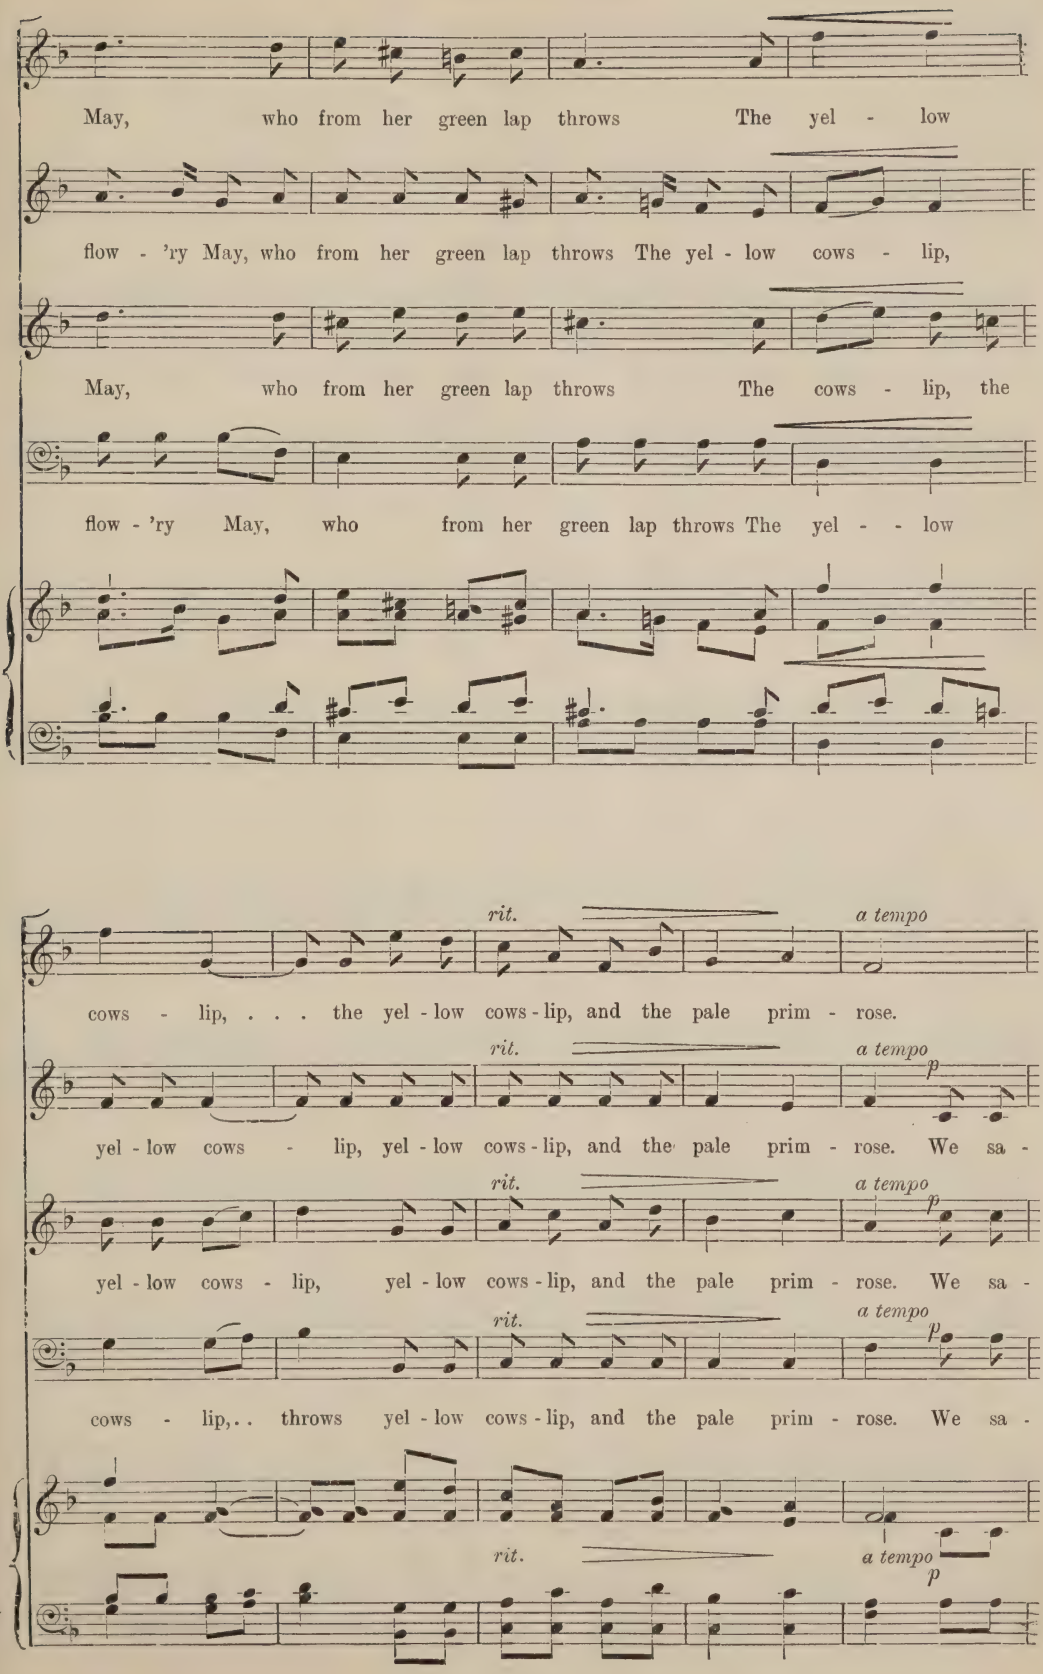
ON MAY MORNING



May, who from her green lap throws The yel - low flow - 'ry May, who from her green lap throws The yel - low cows - lip, May, who from her green lap throws The cows - lip, the flow - 'ry May, who from her green lap throws The yel - - low rit.
a tempo
cows - lip, . . . the yel - low cows - lip, and the pale prim - rose.
rit.
a tempo
p yel - low cows - lip, yel - low cows - lip, and the pale prim - rose. We sa -
rit.
a tempo
p yel - low cows - lip, yel - low cows - lip, and the pale prim - rose. We sa -
rit.
a tempo
p cows - lip,. . throws yel - low cows - lip, and the pale prim - rose. We sa -
rit.
a tempo
p

f
Hail, boun - teous May, that
- lute .. thee, we sa - lute .. thee, Hail, boun - teous May, that
- lute .. thee, thus we sa - lute .. thee, Hail, boun - teous May, . . that
- lute thee, thus we sa - lute thee, Hail, boun - teous May, that . .
dost . . in - spire Mirth, and youth, and warm de - dost in - spire . . Mirth, and youth, and warm de - - dost in -- spire Mirth, and youth, and warm de - - dost in - spire Mirth, and youth, mirth, and youth, youth, and warm de -

mf
- sire; Boun - teous May, that dost in - spire . .
mf
- sire; . . Boun - teous May, that dost in - spire
mf
- sire; Boun - teous May, that dost in - spire Both
mf
- sire; Boun - teous May, that dost in - spire . .
mf
rit.
Mirth, and youth, and warm de - - sire; . .
rit.
Mirth, and youth, and . . warm . . de - - sire; . . .
rit.
mirth, . . and youth, and warm de - - sire;
rit.
Mirth, and youth, and . . warm . . de - - sire; . . .
rit.

Tempo come prima
mf
Woods and . . groves are of thy dress - ing, . .
mf
Woods and groves are of thy dress - ing, . .
mf
Woods and . . groves are of thy dress - ing, . .
mf
Woods and groves are of thy dress - ing, of thy dress - ing, Tempo come prima
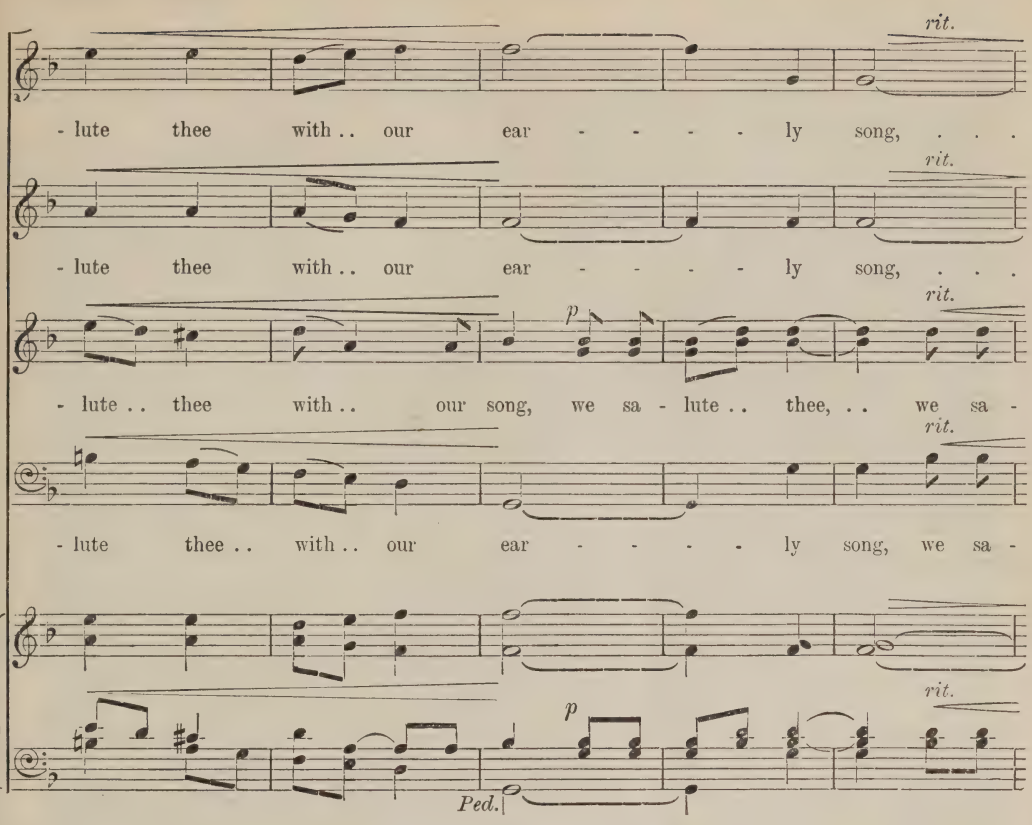
mf

f
. . Hill and dale doth boast thy bless - ing. Thus we sa -
f
. . Hill and dale doth boast thy . . bless - ing. . . Thus we sa -
f
Hill and . . dale doth boast thy bless - ing. . . Thus we sa -
f
Hill and dale doth boast thy bless - ing, boast thy bless - ing. . Thus we sa -
f



rit.
- lute thee with .. our ear - - - - ly song, . . .
rit.
- lute thee with .. our ear - - - - ly song, . . .
rit.
p
- lute .. thee with .. our song, we sa - lute .. thee, .. we sa -
rit.
- lute thee .. with .. our ear - - - - ly song, we sa -
rit.
p
Ped.

Poco più lento e tranquillo
mp
. . . . . And wel - come thee, and .. wish thee long.
p
. . . . . And wel - come thee, and wish thee long.
p
- lute .. thee, . . And wel - come thee, and .. wish thee long.
p
- lute .. thee, . . And wel - come thee, and wish thee long.
Poco più lento e tranquillo
mp

NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF PART-SONGS, GLEES, AND MADRIGALS.

For S.A.T.B. unless otherwise stated. Those marked thus * may be had in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

No.
43	Consolation ...	H. Smart	2d.
591	Contentment ...	F. R. Müller	4d.
1366	Coral Grove, The	W. W. Pearson	4d.
531	Corin for Cleora dying	W. V. Wallace	4d.
1288	*Cornelius March	F. Mendelssohn	4d.
167	Cornfield, The ...	J. Lemmens	4d.
907	*Coronach ...	G. A. Macfarren	3d.
1220	*Coronation Day ...	P. E. Fletcher	4d.
764	*Coronation Song	E. Faning	6d.
651	*Corydon, arise	C. V. Stanford	4d.
893	Cottager to her infant, The	R. F. M. Akerman	3d.
1036	Counsel, The ...	H. F. Simson	4d.
800	Countryman, The	C. Wood	4d.
8	Countryman's song, The	E. F. Rimbault	4d.
267	*Cradle song ...	W. Macfarren	4d.
245	* Do.	H. Smart	2d.
936	Do.	A. Stenz	3d.
832	*Creation's Hymn	Beethoven	3d.
2	Cricketer's song (T.T.B.)	G. A. Macfarren	3d.
252	*Crocuses and Snowdrops	H. Smart	2d.
1205	Crossing the Bar	C. Lee Williams	2d.
1320	*Crown of Empire	E. Faning	4d.
1186	*Cruiskeen Lawn, The	arr. G. Bantock	4d.
433	* Do. (5 V.)	arr. R. P. Stewart	4d.
177	*Crusaders, The ...	C. Pinsuti	2d.
1346	Cryes of London, The (humorous)	R. Deering	8d.
1345	Do.	O. Gibbons	8d.
1343	Do.	T. Weelkes	6d.
1274	Cuckoo Clock, The (humorous)	W. W. Pearson	4d.
707	*Cupid and Rosalind	C. V. Stanford	4d.
667	Cupid is a wayward boy (6 V.)	C. H. Lloyd	6d.
606	Cupid's lottery ...	S. Jacoby	4d.
262	*Curfew Bell, The	W. Macfarren	4d.
1078	Curfew, The (5 V.)	J. W. Elliott	4d.
470	Do. (6 V.) ...	Oliver King	3d.
142	* Do.	H. Smart	2d.
1329	Cyclists, The	W. W. Pearson	6d.
576	Cynthia	W. A. Barrett	4d.
1233	*Dafydd y garreg wen	arr. H. Evans	3d.
413	Dainty, fine, sweet nymph (5 V.)	T. Morley	4d.
161	*Dainty love ...	W. Macfarren	2d.
783	Daisy, The... ...	H. Clarke	3d.
654	Damon's passion	C. V. Stanford	4d.
1233	*David of the White Rock	arr. H. Evans	3d.
379	*Dawn of day, The ...	S. Reay	6d.
868	*Dawn of song, The	E.C.Bairstow	4d.
443	*Day dies slowly, The	H. Leslie	6d.
355	Day of Love, The	A. C. Mackenzie	4d.
625	Day that saw thy beauty rise	W. Jackson and F. Corder	4d.
1235	*Daybreak	H. Brian	4d.
866	* Do.	E. Faning	8d.
1139	Day-dreams	M. Meyer-Olbersleben	4d.
134	*Daylight is fading	H. Leslie	2d.
535	Days of long ago, The	B. Tours	4d.
953	Dear in death ...	C. H. Lloyd	3d.
1127	Dear little Shamrock (Irish Air)	arr. H. E. Button	3d.
1299	*Death on the hills ...	E. Elgar	8d.
1102	Death, the reaper	arr. J. Brahms	4d.
1057	*Deep in my soul...	E. Elgar	6d.
1337	*Deil 's awa' wi' the exciseman	arr. E. T. Sweeting	4d.
1341	*Departed joys	W. W. Pearson	3d.
1081	Departure	Franz Abt	3d.
633	Despairing lover, The	A. W. Batson	3d.
652	*Diaphenia ...	C. V. Stanford	3d.
1120	Dim and grey appear the mountains	F. Abt	4d.
29	Dirge (The glories of our birth)	S. Wesley	3d.
40	Dirge for the faithful lover	J. Benedict	2d.
524	*Dirge of Darthula, The (6 V.)	J. Brahms	6d.
346	Dost thou hear the trees	F. Hensel	2d.
169	Dost thou idly ask ...	H. Smart	4d.
140	Doth not my lady come ...	,,	2d.
564	Douglas raid, The	O. Prescott	4d.
135	Down in a pretty valley	H. Leslie	2d.
311	Down in my garden fair	Pearsall	4d.
247	*Dream, baby, dream	H. Smart	2d.
1392	*Dream-love ...	P. E. Fletcher	4d.
892	Dream of calm, A ...	H. Leslie	6d.
1348	Dream of home, The	Pearson	3d.
384	Dream, The ...	R. Schumann	2d.
31	Do.	R. P. Stewart	3d.
1040	*Drink to me only with thine eyes	arr. H. E. Button	3d.
41	Drinking song, A (T.T.B.B.)	J. Benedict	4d.
162	*Drops of rain ...	J. Lemmens	2d.
1024	*Dry those fair, those crystal eyes	John E. West	3d.
1250	Duncan Gray	arr. C. Macpherson	4d.
827	Each season bringeth pleasure	T. Palmer	4d.
533	Earth with its troubled voices	M. Costa	4d.
497	East Indian, The	J. L. Gregory	3d.
103	Echoes	J. B. Calkin	2d.
638	Do.	Oliver King	3d.
64	* Do.	G. A. Macfarren	2d.
155	* Do.	A. Sullivan	2d.
361	Echo's last word ...	J. L. Hatton	2d.
1178	*Emer's lament for Cuchulain (Irish Melody)	arr. G. Bantock	4d.
1177	*Empire and Motherland	C. Harris	4d.
1146	*Empire of the Sea	C. A. E. Harriss	6d.
672	Enforce yourself as God's own knight (3 V.) ...	E. Turges	4d.
57	*England	J. L. Hatton	2d.
891	English girl, The ...	B. Steane	4d.
1359	Erl-King, The ...	A. R. Gaul	4d.
93	Essay, my heart ...	F. Berger	4d.
1236	Evenèn in the village	Gardiner	4d.
1082	Evening	L. de Call	3d.
88	Do.	H. Hiles	2d.
397	* Do.	H. Leslie	2d.
493	Do.	G. C. Martin	3d.
1356	Do. ...	W. W. Pearson	3d.
693	Do.	L. Spohr	3d.
152	* Do.	A. S. Sullivan	2d.
1417	Do. (6 V.)	E. T. Sweeting	4d.
749	Evening breezes ...	G. R. Vicars	3d.
345	Evening glow on the woods	F. Abt	4d.
969	*Evening hast lost her throne	G. Bantock	3d.
740	Evening Hymn ...	J. Blumenthal	4d.
679	Evening rest	J. Rheinberger	3d.
1000	*Evening scene ...	E. Elgar	6d.
553	Evening song	F. Abt	3d.
425	Do.	E. M. Hill	4d.
514	Do.	R. Schumann	3d.
1376	*Evening star, The	G. Tootell	4d.
687	Evening wind, The	F. J. Harper	4d.
1241	*Evensong	M. F. Phillips	3d.
341	Eventide	F. Abt	2d.
1125	Every rustling tree ...	Kuhlau	2d.
777	*Every sweet with sour is tempered	A. Berridge	4d.
992	*Excelsior	M. W. Balfe	6d.
1030	*Fain would I change that note	R. V. Williams	3d.
1409	Fair are those eyes	M. Cavendish	2d.
994	*Fair Daffodils	H. E. Darke	3d.
90	Do.	H. Hiles	4d.
1075	Do.	H. J. King	4d.
122	Do. ...	A. Zimmermann	2d.
26	Fair flower of Northumberland, The ...	E. F. Rimbault	3d.
517	*Fair land, we greet thee	C. Pinsuti	6d.
1386	*Fair, sweet, cruel	J. G. Williams	4d.
336	Fairest time, The...	R. Franz	2d.
23	*Fairies' song, The	H. R. Bishop	8d.
266	*Fairies, The ...	W. Macfarren	2d.
1347	*Fairies were tripping, The	Tayler	4d.
630	Fairy lover, The	A. W. Batson	3d.
163	Fairy ring, The	J. Lemmens	4d.
118	*Fairy song	A. Zimmermann	2d.
1138	Fairy spring	M. Meyer-Olbersleben	3d.
613	Faithfulness ...	H. Goetz	4d.
848	Faithless Nelly Gray (humorous)	C. L. Williams	6d.
857	*Far away ...	arr. T. R. G. Jozé	3d.
1246	*Far o'er the bay ...	C. Franck	4d.
1410	Farewell, despair	M. Cavendish	2d.
1119	Farewell meeting	Mendelssohn	4d.
1086	Farewell, thou lovely forest glade	H. Esser, arr. F. Abt	2d.
54	Fear no more the heat o' the sun	G. A. Macfarren	4d.
1400	*Feasting I watch ...	E. Elgar	4d.
87	Finland love song, A	H. Hiles	2d.
846	*Fisher boy, The	John E. West	4d.
1263	Fisher-folk lullaby	H. Grace	4d.
15	Fisherman's song, The (5 V.)	E. F. Rimbault	3d.
368	Fishing boat, The	J. L. Hatton	2d.
896	Flight of Summer, The	F. Tozer	4d.
838	*Flora's Queen (6 V.)	J. Stainer	8d.
810	Flower that smiles to-day, The	H. E. Button	3d.
121	Flowers ...	A. Zimmermann	4d.
554	Flowers' review, The	F. Abt	4d.
912	*Fly not yet	arr. T. R. G. Jozé	4d.
1150	*Fly, singing bird...	E. Elgar	8d.
536	Fly to my mistress	C. C. Moseley	4d.
771	*Follow your saint	C. H. H. Parry	3d.
1391	*Folly's Song	P. E. Fletcher	4d.
34	Football song, A	E. G. Monk	4d.
1362	Footsteps of angels, The	A.R.Gaul	4d.
989	* Do.	J. Holbrooke	4d.
72	Do. ...	C. A. Macirone	4d.
1189	*For Empire and for King	P. E. Fletcher	8d.
1187	*Forest bride, The	R. Schumann	4d.
1121	*Forest scene, A ...	H. Goetz	4d.
204	*Forget-me-not, The	J. L. Hatton	2d.
816	Fortunate island, A (8 V.)	B. Johnson	6d.
755	*Fortune-teller's song, The	E. Faning	4d.
1298	*Fountain, The ...	E. Elgar	8d.
678	* Do. ...	J. Rheinberger	4d.
566	Do.	F. Schira	4d.
571	*Four jolly smiths, The	Leslie	2d.
1262	*Franklyn's dogge leped over a style (humorous)	Mackenzie	6d.
1389	Freeman's Song and Chorus	T. Ravenscroft	4d.
1323	*Frog, The (humorous)	E. Newton	4d.
967	From Jesse's stock upspringing	M. Prætorius	3d.
1291	From piercing steel	M. Greene	4d.
1377	From the lone shieling	M.Maclean	4d.
642	From White's and Wills'	J. D. Davis	3d.
604	*Full fathom five ...	C. Wood	3d.
1154	Gallant Swabian captain, A	F. Hegar	4d.
1317	Garibaldi's hymn...	arranged	3d.
519	Garland for our fairest, A	Hatton	4d.
201	Garland for the hero's crest, A	J. L. Hatton	4d.
741	*Gather ye rosebuds	J. Blumenthal	6d.
1302	* Do. ... (5 V.)	John Pointer	4d.
831	* Do.	G. Rathbone	4d.
1193	Gay Madcap ...	R. Schumann	4d.
701	Gentle sleep	H. W. Schartau	4d.
469	Gentle winds around her hover	J. T. Musgrave	3d.
407	*Gently falls the evening shade	L. Marenzio	4d.
851	*Girls and boys come out to play	G. A. Macfarren	4d.
643	Give place, you ladies	Stephens	3d.
645	Go, happy rose	F. Iliffe	4d.
715	*Go, lovely rose ...	A. Berridge	4d.
269	Go, pretty birds ...	W. Macfarren	4d.
1164	*Go, song of mine (6 V.)	E. Elgar	8d.
1335	*God bless the Prince of Wales	arr. B. Richards	2d.
954	*God in the thunderstorm	F. Schubert	6d.
753	*God prosper him—our King	J. Barnby	4d.
1098	God rules alone	J. Raff	3d.
778	*God save the King	arr. J. F. Bridge	3d.
836	* Do.	arr. M. Costa	4d.
885	* Do.	arr. E. Elgar	4d.
1147	* Do. ...	C. A. E. Harriss	4d.
835	Do.	arr. H. Hiles	2d.
834	Do. ...	arr. V. Novello	4d.
32	God speed the plough	E. Richter	3d.
211	Going a-maying ...	J. L. Hatton	4d.
1137	Golden year, The	H. Leslie	8d.
120	Gone for ever	A. Zimmermann	4d.
611	Good advice... ...	H. Goetz	4d.
681	Do. ...	J. Rheinberger	4d.
123	Good-morrow	A. Zimmermann	4d.
5	Good-morrow, fair ladies	T. Morley	3d.
186	Good-night ...	J. L. Hatton	2d.
224	* Do. (A.T.T.B.) ...	,,	3d.
744	Do.	R. O. Morgan	4d.
119	Do. ...	A. Zimmermann	2d.
492	Good-night, from the Rhine	J. Raff	4d.
265	Good-night, good rest	W. Macfarren	4d.
44	*Good-night, thou glorious sun	H. Smart	2d

Photo by] [The Premier News Service, Whitefriars Street, E.C.

DR. MACPHERSON AT THE ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL ORGAN

On St. Patrick's Day, at Ballymacarret Parish Church, Belfast, a new organ—a war memorial, costing £1,350—was dedicated by the Bishop of Down. Dr. Norman Hay presided at the keyboard, and a special address was delivered by the Bishop of Limerick. On the following evening a recital was given by Mr. J. H. MacBratney with vocal selections by the Queen's Island Male Choir, under Mr. John Vine.

A new three-manual organ, built by Messrs. Peter Conacher, has been installed at the United Methodist Church, Bentley Street, Lockwood, Huddersfield. Mr. Ernest Cooper gave the opening recital, his programme including Bach's Prelude and Fugue in E flat, Wolstenholme's Allegretto, Boëllmann's 'Suite Gothique,' and Bernard Johnson's Sonata da camera.

Dr. C. H. Moody gave the opening recital on the new organ at West Hartlepool Town Hall, on March 26. The organ, which was built by Messrs. J. J. Binns, is the gift of Alderman J. Brown, and is a three-manual of twenty stops and twelve couplers. Dr. Moody played Rheinberger's Scherzoso, Boëllmann's Toccata, Faulkes's Sonata in D minor, the 'St. Anne' Fugue, &c.

The current issue of The Organ is, as usual, a budget of good things. There are articles on 'The Organs of York Minster' (Rev. A. Freeman), 'The Development of the Electric Organ' (Reginald Whitworth), 'Organs, Old Style and New Style' (Jean Huré), 'Bach's Chorale Preludes' (A. Eaglefield Hull), &c., with many excellent illustrations.

What is claimed to be the first performance of the 'St. Matthew' Passion in Canada, west of the Rocky Mountains, took place at St. Mark's Church, Vancouver, on March 31, conducted by Mr. George F. Bullen, with Mr. Frederic Chubb at the organ. The choir numbered sixty.

Mr. Hubert S. Middleton succeeds Mr. Noel Ponsonby at Ely Cathedral on the departure of the latter to Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford. Mr. Middleton has been at Truro Cathedral for six years, and has done much to develop musical life in that neighbourhood.

The organ at Harpenden Congregational Church has been reconstructed, the improvements including a new case, console, and blowing apparatus. Mr. R. Scott Evans, the organist and choirmaster, gave the opening recital.

Mr. Henry T. Gilberthorpe, organist and choirmaster at St. Sidwell's, Exeter, has been appointed to a similar post at Bermuda Cathedral, and leaves England during the present month.

Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper have just built an organ for Bowdon Downs Congregational Church, Cheshire—a three-manual of thirty-two speaking stops and twenty-four pistons.

Mr. John Nicholson, organist and choirmaster of St. George's Congregational Church, West Hartlepool, has been appointed Municipal Organist of West Hartlepool.

RECITALS

Mr. Frank E. Newman, St. Peter Mancroft, Norwich—Sonata No. 4, Mendelssohn; Prelude to 'Gerontius'; Finale (Sonata No. 7), Rheinberger.

Mr. G. W. Harris Sellick, Free Trade Hall, Manchester—Symphony No. 1, Guilmant; Finale (Symphony No. 3), Vierne; Festal Toccata, Arthur Baynon; Allegretto in B minor, Guilmant; Rhapsody, Grace.

Dr. H. C. L. Stocks, St. Asaph Cathedral—Pastel in B, Karg-Elert; Prelude, 'Deck thyself, O my soul,' Bach; Postlude in D, Smart.

Mr. Francis W. Sutton, St. Mary's, Bryanston Square—Fugue in the Dorian Mode, Bach; Fantaisie Rustique, Wolstenholme; Marche Héroïque, Saint-Saëns.

Mr. R. Owen Terrington, St. George's, Leeds—Andante in E minor, Smart; Fantasia in G minor, Stanford; Prelude and Variations on a Ground Bass, Farrar; Prelude on 'Dundee,' Parry.

Mr. W. Wallace Thompson, St. James's, Garlick Hill, E.C.—Gloria in Excelsis, Julius Harrison; Cradle Song and Rhapsody, Grace; Fantaisie sur deux Noëls, Bonnet; Preludio, Rheinberger.

Mr. H. Matthias Turton, Erskine Church, Montreal—Introduction and Fugue in F flat, William Russell; Pæan, Harwood; Intermezzo, 'Elfes,' Bonnet; Introduction and Passacaglia, Reger; Etude Symphonique, Bossi.

Mr. Henry Wardale, Liberal Jewish Synagogue, St. John's Wood Road, N.W.—Prelude and Fugue in G, Bach; First movement, Symphony No. 5, Widor; Second movement, Sonata in G, Elgar; Choral Improvisation, Karg-Elert.

Mr. Ralph T. Langdon, St. John the Evangelist, Edinburgh—Concerto in G, Mansfield; Sonata No. 8, Rheinberger; Impromptu in A minor, Coleridge-Taylor; Pièce Héroïque, Franck; Carillon, Brewer.

Mr. Paul Rochard, Kendal Parish Church—'The East Wind,' Rowley; A Lament, Goodhart; First movement, Symphony No. 5, Widor; Sonata, Reubke; Festival Toccata, Holloway.

Dr. Harold Rhodes, St. John's, Torquay—Sonata No. 11, Rheinberger; 'The Wedge' Prelude and Fugue, Bach; Allegro (Sonata in G), Elgar; Introduction and Fugue, Reubke; Sonata No. 3, Mendelssohn; Two Sketches, Schumann; Allegro in F sharp minor, Guilmant.

Mr. William Wolstenholme, Clapton Park Congregational Church—Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Scenes in Kent, F. H. Wood; Overture in F, Faulkes; Cantilène, Wolstenholme.

Mr. Harry Wall, St. Matthew's, West Kensington—Programme by John Stanley: Concerto No. 3; Violin Sonata in G minor; Voluntary in F; Gavotte and Minuetto; Voluntary in D minor.

Dr. Charles F. Waters, St. Lawrence Jewry—Prelude and Fugue in G, Bach; Slow movement and Finale (Sonata No. 5), Rheinberger; Caprice, Sowerbutts; Introduction and Fugue, Reubke; Prelude on 'Rhosymedre,' Vaughan Williams; Finale from Sonata, C. F. Waters.

Mr. Herbert Hodge, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, Queen Victoria Street—A Handel programme: Overture to the 'Occasional' Oratorio; Minuetto (Oboe Concerto); Largo in G; Prelude and Fugue in F minor; Concerto in G. (Vocal items by Mr. Kenneth Ellis.)

Mr. Alfred Wilson, Gourock Parish Church—Prelude in E flat, Bach; Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn; Choral No. 1, Franck; Cortège et Litanie, Dupré; Finale (Symphony No. 1), Vierne.

Mr. Douglas G. Rogers, St. Augustine's, Broxbourne—Toccata in F, Bach; Concerto in G minor, Handel; Scherzo, Grace; Fantasia in F minor, Mozart.

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Leonard Hudson, choirmaster and organist, All Saints', Sydenham.

Mr. Ernest F. Mather, choirmaster and organist, Holy Trinity, Stroud Green.

Mr. Herbert S. Mountford, organist, Waterloo Road Wesleyan Church, Smethwick, Staffs.

Mr. N. S. Wallbank, choirmaster and organist, Lancaster Parish Church.

Letters to the Editor

BEETHOVEN'S CHARACTER, ETC.

SIR,—Referring to the criticism of Paul Bekker's book in your March issue, page 229, I think the judgment of Beethoven's character by 'H. G.' is simply deplorable. This amazing fault-finder seems to have squeezed out of the noblest biographies all the sins of Beethoven, and stands them up without the slightest experience and understanding of Austrian life and history of that time. For instance, it is only in considering the period of three thousand years ago that we can understand Moses telling us all the deceitful tricks of Jacob, who, all the same, had enough virtue to remain the worshipped father of the Jewish tribes. Therefore, I strongly advise 'H. G.' first to study the nation's humour and habits, and when next reading Beethoven's letters and life, as Thayer gives them, to balance carefully the good with the bad, and he must be convinced of the noble character of the great master. Thayer, in a constant reverential attitude, puts at least ten virtues against each one of Beethoven's conventional sins. Beethoven's letters will remain a personal proof of his originality, ready wit, great power of affection, and straightforwardness, which make his errors very transparent. Other proofs of his noble personality are the testimonies of Schubert, Czerny, Cramer, Moscheles, Weber, and other contemporary musicians, as well as the letters of Bettina Brentano to Goethe, and those of many of his devoted friends.—Yours, &c.,

ANNA SEITER.

St. Brelade, Warley Mount,
Brentwood, Essex.

[One need not understand Austrian life of a century ago in order to recognize flagrant dishonesty, even when the culprit is a genius.—EDITOR.]

SIR,—In a recent review in your columns of a life of Beethoven, your reviewer speaks of him as 'one of the world's three greatest composers.' I think most people will agree, and would give Bach a place in this trinity. Personally I picture Bach as a majestic mountain peak in the world of music, lifting his snowy head serenely, aloofly, and immeasurably above all others, Beethoven included.

It would be interesting to ascertain whom your reviewer had in mind as the third. May one suggest Mozart?

A plebiscite amongst your readers as to the twelve greatest composers would be an entertaining feature. My list would be (omitting living musicians) as follows: Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Brahms, Schubert, Handel, Mendelssohn, Wagner, Palestrina, Haydn, Tchaikovsky, and Chopin. Except for the first three these are not in order of merit.

If living composers were admitted I would evict one of these, probably Tchaikovsky, in favour of our own Elgar.—Yours, &c.,

J. W. SOWAN.

42, Hemberton Road,
Stockwell, S.W.9.

PURCELL'S 'EVENING HYMN' FROM PLAYFORD'S 'HARMONIA SACRA'

SIR,—In the editorial note to his edition of Purcell's 'Evening Hymn,' Mr. Harvey Grace mentions a slip made by Vincent Novello in his early arrangement. Recently I have been fortunate in picking up at a second-hand shop both the first edition, published in 1688, and the third edition, issued in 1714. In the third edition the notes are as Novello gave them. From this it appears probable that Vincent Novello had never seen the original edition.—Yours, &c.,

HARRY WALL.

38, Castlenau Gardens,
Barnes, S.W.

AN ARPEGGIO POINT

SIR,—I have read with pleasure Dr. Percy Rideout's able letter (March, p. 256) on the desirability of including the arpeggio of the dominant major ninth, as he calls it, in pianoforte students' practice. I venture to point out, however, that this arpeggio is much better named the dominant eleventh.

There is nothing more illogical in calling it an eleventh than in calling it a ninth. In each case the interval is reckoned from a root which is not present. But the main point is that when the arpeggio occurs in pianoforte music (and it is of exceedingly frequent occurrence) it is almost invariably as an eleventh. For instance, an extended arpeggio on the notes D sharp, F sharp, A, C sharp is of much more frequent occurrence in pieces in C sharp minor (or, with enharmonic change, in D flat major) than in E major. The fact is, of course, the ear does not readily accept the major ninth as such when it is below the third of the chord. The chord E G B flat D may suggest either the key of F major or that of D minor, but the chord G B flat D E most decidedly suggests D minor, as I think Dr. Rideout will agree.

On account of the frequent appearance of this arpeggio in all keys, I have for a long time taught it to pianoforte pupils. But I have always explained it as an eleventh, showing its resolution, both directly and by way of the dominant seventh, on the tonic chord, major and minor, just as one explains the diminished seventh. Like the diminished seventh, this eleventh is common to both the major and minor modes, each chord using the minor ninth of the dominant. Dr. Rideout's chord, on the other hand, applies only to the major of each key. The pupil who has practised the arpeggio of G B flat D flat F, and its inversions, as the dominant major ninth of the key of A flat, and thereafter plays Chopin's Nocturne in F minor, will, when he arrives at bar 87 (fifteenth from end), require some further explanation concerning the chord. Here it proceeds by way of the diminished seventh to the tonic chord of F major. An example (right hand descending) of an eleventh followed by the dominant seventh is provided by bar 8, and again by bar 32, of the Nocturne in D flat. Examples of the arpeggio as an eleventh could be multiplied indefinitely ; examples as a major ninth take a lot of seeking. If this most useful arpeggio appears in examination syllabuses and scale-and-arpeggio manuals, I trust it will appear in the form and under the nomenclature which is least confusing to students.

It is a pity that the indisputably logical principle, so ably set forth by Dr. Rideout, of what may be termed 'reflection' in the fingering of one hand as related to the fingering of the other, is not properly observed in all the scale-and-arpeggio manuals put on the market. One well-known book, for instance, in its common chord arpeggios, fingers A flat C F A flat, right hand ascending, 2, 1, 2, 3, and its left hand descending reflection, G sharp E B G sharp, 2, 1, 2, 4. What has made Franklin Taylor's Novello primer of double scales so generally accepted is no doubt its consistent adherence to the sound principle with which Dr. Rideout's letter deals.—Yours, &c.,

951, Sauchiehall Street, Glasgow. W. WIGHAM PARKER.

'ABSOLUTE PITCH'

SIR,—I think I can answer your correspondent, 'A. P.,' as to why a sense of absolute pitch is considered 'a nuisance.' It is a standing obstacle to those who would—in Thomas Morley's words—'wrest songs out of their nature' by transposing them ; and, like all forces of law and order, it is unpopular with those who like taking liberties.

Many conductors have a theory that it is immaterial, at any rate in unaccompanied music, at what pitch it is taken, so long as it falls within the easy compass of the performers. It is naturally galling to have the bottom knocked out of this convenient theory by uncomfortable people who cannot stomach a familiar piece of music in a strange key or such anomalies as Palestrina in six sharps.—Yours, &c.,

Oakhurst, Harrow-on-the-Hill. HUGH GARDNER.

'UNIFORM PITCH'

SIR,—Mr. Mollenhauer does a service to the true cause of world-wide pitch by drawing attention to the vexed question of uniform pitch.

One does not quite see how an 'instrumentalist who uses a higher pitch finds his playing easier.' It may tend to give an accidental brilliance of tone, such as we find in cheap pianofortes strung up high to sound bright (and tinny !). But true ease in playing comes from blowing and fingering in the case of wind instruments (in parenthesis, the trumpet finds no added ease in high-pitched upper notes), and the string player depends solely upon his technique rather than on the pitch of his fiddle. So we may relegate that idea.

The real point is, What shall be the universal 'diapason'? The French normal A435 serves pretty well, but in practice the heat of the concert-room, plus warm breath, raises a band to something higher. This being the case, Messrs. Broadwood issued a fork styled, I believe, the New Philharmonic, at A439 or C522·4, to regulate the pianoforte (which does not yield to temperature) to suit the orchestra at a reasonable concert-room heat. Electric lighting in place of gas has comfortably moderated the air of concert-rooms, and for practical purposes we may take 58° Fahr. as a standard. At this degree I had the Usher Hall organ at Edinburgh tuned C522·4, and found during the course of Sir George Henschel's rehearsal for the opening ceremony in 1914, that I could add the organ with perfect agreement, although the orchestra had never heard the instrument in its preliminary tuning. This is surely a basic fact on which to proceed.

Finally, let us remember that as pitch has so greatly varied through the centuries, we must have a pitch neither too low nor too high to enable us to present the older masters equally with the moderns. The diapason normal, then, plus warmth, serves the practical purpose.—Yours, &c.,

Edinburgh. T. H. COLLINSON.

MUCH NICER!

SIR,—This is a very trifling matter, perhaps, but I must really draw attention to the method of dealing with living composers in the analytical programmes of the Royal Philharmonic Society. For example, I read: 'R. Vaughan Williams (1872 ——).' To my mind, this is a hateful business. The dash always seems to me like the empty coffin awaiting its occupant, or the urn awaiting the ashes. How much nicer: (1872), with the last bracket close up, as if cuddling the composer, and protecting him from the Enemy!—Yours, &c.,

Hatfield House, Dumfries. WILLIAM STARK.

MEMORIAL TO LEONARD BORWICK

SIR,—The service which Leonard Borwick gave to this country is too well known to need advocacy. It is proposed to recognise it by some fitting memorial which shall at once keep him in honour, and express in an appropriate form the love of art which was one of the chief delights of his life.

After considering many suggestions, his friends have come to the conclusion that this can best be done by the purchase of a work of art for one of our great national collections, which would keep his name before succeeding generations.

There is now the opportunity of acquiring a picture, the presentation of which it is believed would be acceptable, and we are therefore encouraged to ask for contributions towards its purchase. Subscriptions ranging from 10*s.* 6*d.* to a hundred guineas have been already promised, and we are confident that those who hold Leonard Borwick in affectionate remembrance will readily respond to this appeal.

Subscriptions may be sent to Mr. W. H. Leslie, 18, St. James's Place, S.W.1, who has consented to act as treasurer of the Fund, or to Mr. Arthur Somervell, 68, Bedford Gardens, W.8 (hon. secretary).—Yours, &c.,

FANNY DAVIES, H. PLUNKET GREENE, W. H. HADOW, ROBERT LORIMER, HAROLD SAMUEL, ROBERT WITT, HENRY J. WOOD.

FOURTHS, NINTHS, ETC.

SIR,—It is possible that what I have to say is nothing new, but it bears repeating again and again. In reading musical articles I have observed that rarely, if ever, does a critic, reviewer, or writer on musical matters say a real word about the beauty, the poetry, the depth of a work; he concerns himself only with the shell, forgetting the kernel. Much as I have learnt to esteem the Musical Times, I have not noticed that its writers are much better than any others in this respect. Dr. Bairstow in his article on Wesley, tentatively reminds us that it is the essence of music which counts. Others no doubt do the same. But that it is the Soul-essence which counts in Art is a Fact which should be shouted from the house-tops by every critic. Yet when some new composition is discussed, we read about this or that new harmony, about fourths and fifths, bell-ninths, and jam-jar twenty-firsts. This is no doubt very learned. No doubt the composer also is very profound. But if he has nothing to say, if he is empty, then why is his work published, why praised by critics?

I used fourths twenty years ago, because I loved them. For this reason I composed a long study in consecutive fourths. But I said to myself, 'Either you produce something artistically beautiful, or you tear the thing up.' I haven't torn it up. It has been highly praised, but has found no publisher, because I have hardly looked for such, knowing that had I turned out something with empty ugliness behind it, it might have found one. The birth of the fourth in me was caused, I believe, by observing the glaring windows of a lonely house in a March sunset, when the cold east wind sets the heart aglow. Here, then, is a soul-basis for fourths.

What bell-ninths are I don't know. In a recent composition I wanted a 'bell-clang' effect, and found it. First, after reading Casella's article on 'Ravel's Harmony,' which I didn't altogether agree with, I troubled to analyse my 'bell-clang,' and came to the learned conclusion that it was a chord of the thirteenth with a little bit off the top; then to the more sagacious idea that chords of the thirteenth don't really exist, and are legendary; then to the most discerning view—that it all doesn't matter a rap. The point is, that I should no more have thought of using the particular noise for its own sake than I should have thought of flying.

When Beethoven, on his death-bed, saw some of Schubert's work for the first time, and said, 'He has the divine spark in him,' he wasn't thinking of any new chords discovered by Schubert, nor of the same old thirds and sixths used by Schubert as by himself. The mystical chords in the middle of the working-out section of the first movement of Beethoven's Fifth are not less wonderful because they are common. Grieg charms us not only because of his harmonies; Ibsen gained the ear of the world in spite of the everyday language he employed in his plays. Chopin's Nocturne in E flat and 'A Maiden's Prayer' contain about the same harmony; yet there is a vast difference between them. Beethoven's Andante in F begins with consecutive octaves, but the fact of the lofty purity of the music remains. Or, to take a modern example (confound that silly adjective!), I have an eighty-page Sonata, by an American composer, Mr. Ives, which he gives away. This work out-moderns everything modern. The composer prescribes a $14\frac{3}{4}$-in. ruler and the fists to play certain passages. (No, there's nothing to laugh at.) He uses mostly neither key, time, nor bars. Yet on some few pages of the work real genius shows itself, giving us feelings never experienced before, and vindicating the means employed—means that are empty elsewhere in the work.

The clearest thinker in England, Mr. Bernard Shaw, says in the preface to 'Back to Methuselah,' that art to-day is not worth a dam (which is a little Oriental coin), because there is no religion, no meaning, behind it. He is right. Our composers are as numerous as Prague bugs; but if a man of great soul appeared as composer to-morrow, he might remain unknown if he had the moral pluck—yes, it needs a pioneer's courage—to use common chords. Composition has largely become to-day a cerebral disease of dyspeptic ego-maniacal monstrosities, and has infected others, who believe that because their ears have got used to it, therefore it has a worth. Getting used to smoking bad tobacco doesn't make the tobacco good.

The Art of Man, if it be anything, is man's soul-privilege of expression. The Art of Man begins where Nature ends, because Man begins where the Animal ends. The ancients wanted to express in sound what was in their souls, and to escape from the rough sounds of nature they formed scales, intervals, chords, to have an Art-form. To-day, composers, having little in their souls, want to escape from Art, and get back to rough nature, in which there is no Art of Man.

Wanted! A man! A soul! A message! A religion! Not bell-ninths, jam-jar twenty-firsts, fourths, fifths, and elevenths. Could reviewers, critics, publishers, competition committees, and Casellas be moved to see this? It is much more important what a man has to say than how he says it, and it need not necessarily be something new. The sun, the blue sky, the flowers, and love return again and again as nothing new, yet they are always acceptable.—Yours, &c.,

ARNOLD CAPLETON.

Palacky St. 31,
Prague XVI., Czechoslovakia.

WESLEY AT HAMPTON

SIR,—I am desirous of finding out the place and date of a letter written by S. S. Wesley to a lady (apparently a Dean's wife). In it Wesley expresses his deep regret for the unsatisfactory performance of his concluding voluntary at the afternoon service, excusing himself on the ground of the deplorable condition of the blowing, and begging the lady to approach the Dean on the matter, but only 'if it will not give him the least trouble' to make inquiries. Otherwise he will go on suffering. No place or date is given, although the letter is complete. It was purchased for us a few years ago by one of my choirboys at the time, and is exhibited in our vestry.

As was stated in your article of last month about this worthy Church musician, he was organist here for a few months in 1831. The present building was consecrated in October of that year, the King attending. The organ (by J. C. Bishop) was, of course, new; it was the gift of the King, who must have heard Wesley play upon it at this ceremony. It is said that Wesley played at the Sunday evening services only, riding on horseback from London, and returning on the Monday evening or Tuesday morning. Monday he spent in fishing. The Commercial Docks were evidently not enough for his zeal.

When I took up duty here (twenty years to the day after Wesley's death), I found the organ much as he had known it. The tone of the pipes was beautiful, but the action was worn out. So far as I remember, the Swell keys went down to tenor C only, the Great to low G. The pedal-board was the usual CC to F, but there was only one octave of open pipes. It is said that in the 'sixties it had undergone a certain amount of alteration, and some pipes had been removed. The organ has long since become a fine instrument of thirty-five speaking stops; and we have got as far as a 16-ft. Pedal reed and electric blowing, as much of the old organ being retained as was possible. The 'Clarabelle' and the Swell stopped diapason are beautiful stops. The former is the best of its kind I know, but it blends very badly with the diapasons.

It always seems to me that the well-known organ directions in 'Blessed be the God and Father' apply more closely to the Hampton organ than to the Hereford instrument at the time—at least, so the late Dr. Sinclair informed me.

As is well-known, S. S. W. has honoured this place by naming his fine L.M. tune after it. We always use it for Hymn 173, 'A. & M.'—Yours, &c.,

J. C. RIDGWAY (Organist).

Hampton Church, Middlesex.

'YET IN MY FLESH'

SIR,—The letter of your correspondent (April issue, p. 353) seems to be that of a Rip van Winkle who has just woke up with the ancient notion of Heaven as a definite locality instead of a state. The propagation of such materialistic views is what is keeping thinking men from going to church. St. Paul distinctly says that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, and that there are celestial bodies as well as terrestrial—a natural body and a spiritual. To every environment its own particular body—the fish to the sea, the birds to the air, the beasts to the ground. Had St. Paul been alive now he would no doubt have told us that those who live in the ether have ethereal bodies, which we could now see had we a different kind of eye. This flesh belongs to the earth—to dust it will return, and never be needed again, any more than a worn-out suit of clothes. As to texts which appear to contradict this view, a study of the original Greek MSS. often throws a new light upon them, and in the last resource I would prefer to believe that the Evangelists misreported what was actually said. A course of spiritualism would aid your correspondent in understanding the Gospel narratives of the Resurrection. His views are hopelessly at variance with all scientific modern knowledge.—Yours, &c.,

MODERN THEOLOGIAN.

[We cannot continue this correspondence.—EDITOR.]

SAMUEL WESLEY'S EDITION OF THE 'FORTY-EIGHT'

SIR,—I was greatly interested in your article on Samuel Sebastian Wesley. You mention his father as being the Editor of the works of the immortal Sebastian Bach. I have in my possession an original Wesley & Horn complete edition (bound) of the '48,' autographed; with a list of subscribers (this is rather interesting, as names have been added, in ink, in writing so similar to Wesley's signature as to suggest the possibility of its being the edition used by Wesley himself). There is also an Introduction giving advice to those about to try and play the '48,' which is so delightful that I quote a paragraph:

> 'One most essential Advice must be added, that whoever determines upon executing the following Pages with Precision, must steadily resolve upon practising them at first, in very slow Time: for since there is not a single Note among them that can be omitted, without a material Injury to their Effect, it is absolutely indispensable, thoroughly to understand the Career of the whole Modulation, which will not be possible, unless each Bar be studied with that patient Industry which shall secure the true position of each Finger upon its designated Key. This certainly is attainable by no other Means whatever than practising at an exceedingly slow Pace, until the Fingers shall have (as it were mechanically) found the exact Places on the Clavier, which by constant careful Habit they surely will, with hardly a Probability of any Failure. And as soon as the Student can play one of the Pieces set in five or six Sharps, or as many Flats, without the Necessity of looking at his Fingers in order to hit the true Distances, he may surely venture to increase the Speed of his march (although only by slow Degrees) and he will gradually arrive at the true Time of performing those Movements which require a brisk Execution.'

'This new and correct Edition' was printed for the Editors by Rt. Birchall, 133, New Bond Street. I should be very glad of any information respecting it, as to date when published, &c.—Yours, &c.,

(Miss) CONSTANCE RICHARDSON.

67, Kensington Mansions, S.W.5.

WESLEY AND MENDELSSOHN

SIR,—Dr. Bairstow in his interesting article on Wesley's Anthems, writes: 'We love Wesley because he was sincere . . . and because he was English. At a time when it was considered the right thing tamely to copy Mendelssohn and other foreigners.' I find myself unable to agree with Dr. Bairstow here. The whole of the middle section of 'Blessed be the God and Father' is strongly Mendelssohnian in style. Again, in 'The Wilderness,' the section beginning 'For in the desert the waters break out' is pure Mendelssohn, bar after bar, both melody and harmony.

I am not, of course, citing these examples with a wish to detract in any way from Wesley's originality, but I think the fact is very remarkable and worth mentioning.—Yours, &c.,

L. H. OVENDEN.

St. Edward's School,
Oxford.

'CONCERTS SPIRITUELS'

SIR,—Mr. Gabriel Sharp's well-intentioned correction misses fire. 'Spirituel' may mean, of course, 'witty,' and other things besides; but, as I said before, the expression 'Concerts Spirituels' happens to be the exact equivalent of our 'Sacred Concerts,' and nothing else.—Yours, &c.,

C.

CHOIR-TRAINING AND THE R.C.O.

SIR,—With regard to the letters in your April issue, and also to the Occasional Note on Dr. Harding's remarks re the CHM. Examination, it seems to me that sooner or later the R.C.O. will have to include a compulsory examination in Choir-Training in the requirements for the Associate and Fellowship diplomas. In the case of the latter, the choir-training tests should take the place of the bass and melody harmonization tests at the organ, these being of little practical value in an organist's usual work; moreover, the same ground is already well covered in the paper-work.—Yours, &c.,

'DULCIANA.'

COMPOSER AND CRITIC

SIR,—Messrs. Paxton have drawn my attention to a notice in your April number of my Six Choral Preludes, in which your critic finds many misprints.

If not unduly trespassing on your space or on his good nature, I should be very grateful if he would indicate where the lapses may be found.

A most careful examination has, so far, failed to reveal any error which might cast a reflection on my care as proof-reader, or on Messrs. Paxton's high standard of excellence in production.—Yours, &c.,

46E, Leinster Square, W.2. J. STUART ARCHER.

[Our reviewer writes: 'On page 16, bar 5, is the second B natural or flat? The player expects the former as a logical result of the C being sharpened, though of course the flat is possible. Page 17, bar 5: the first two C's should surely be natural; if not, why the sharp on the third C? Is the second B flat or natural?—a similar ambiguity to that first mentioned. Page 18, bar 2, the sixth note in R.H. should surely be G, not F; in bar 9, the C's on fourth beat in R.H. should be sharpened; ditto the last note in L.H. Page 15, bars 1 and 2: are the A's in R.H. sharp or natural? The latter is probable, but the harmony of the preceding bars (G sharp minor) makes the sharp not less likely. Such ambiguities are often more bothering to the player than misprints: the latter are often so obvious as to correct themselves. I am sorry if the comment in my review implied carelessness on the part of Mr. Stuart Archer, but I think he will agree that there was ground for complaint, though the trouble is perhaps due less to actual error than to a lack of accidentals.']

BIZET'S 'L'ARLÉSIENNE'

SIR,—On page 365 of your April issue, Herr Paul Bechert, in an interesting paragraph dealing with ballet at the Redoutensaal Theatre, Vienna, casually refers to Bizet's 'L'Arlésienne' as an 'insipid product.' Though I agree with him that Bizet's 'ravishingly beautiful work' (I am quoting a distinguished countryman of his, Hugo Wolf) does not lend itself to arrangement as a ballet or 'divertissement' of any kind, I feel that to compare it to its disadvantage with a work by Bartók or Milhaud is not a little disconcerting, to say the least. Milhaud himself (an enthusiastic admirer of Bizet) would be the first to deprecate any such derogatory references to a work of such poignancy and inspiration as 'L'Arlésienne.' I fear no living French composer (and Milhaud least of all) has as yet produced a creation of such assured immortality as Bizet's little masterpiece.—Yours, &c.,

JOHN W. KLEIN.

Maple Cottage, Holmwood, Dorking.

THE HANDEL FESTIVAL

SIR,—As one who has attended every Handel Festival for the last thirty-five years, I should like to be allowed to make a suggestion or two that happily, through your courtesy, may attract the notice of the directors of the forthcoming Festival, and be considered by them worthy of some attention.

First, may I express the hope that the music of 'Selection day' will (unlike that at the last Festival) be procurable at least on the day of performance? The book—containing as it always does much fine music, including generally some less-known, and therefore specially interesting, excerpts—is of more than momentary use and interest to its possessor, and to many it is doubtless a valued souvenir of a great musical event, and one tending to foster a love of Handel.

Secondly, I trust those persons whose business it is to sell copies of either words or music will have strict orders not to offer their wares during the actual performance of the music—at least in the enclosure. I have a very painful recollection of a great moment being entirely ruined by the noisy touting of persons actually almost shouting 'Book of words!' during the performance of a great chorus ('The Hailstone')! At what other musical festival, may I ask, would such an outrageous thing be permitted?

Lastly, I venture to question if the Handel Festival is sufficiently advertised. My experience in the past is that comparatively few people are aware of it in the provinces until, perhaps, too late.—Yours, &c.,

GRAHAM H. ARNOLD.

[We have received a number of letters agreeing, and one disagreeing, with our remarks on the conduct of children's concerts. As the matter has now been thoroughly ventilated, no useful purpose would be served by their publication. They were welcome, however, and we thank the writers who have supported us in a protest that we felt called on to utter, though we were well aware that it ran the risk of being regarded as ungrateful cavilling.—EDITOR.]

The Amateurs' Exchange

Tenor wishes to meet good accompanist for mutual practice.—P. PARSONS, 2, Felday Road, Lewisham, S.E.13.

Pianist (lady), moderate player, wishes to meet violinist, and/or 'cellist, or vocalist, for mutual practice.—N. or N.W. London districts.—D. M. S., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist (training) wishes to meet vocalist or pianist (male) for mutual practice. Southampton district.—S. P., c/o Musical Times.

Violinist and 'cellist wish to meet pianist for classical and modern trios. Afternoons or evenings. Also string players. Wallasey and Liverpool districts.—RAWCLIFFE, 12, Westminster Road, Wallasey.

Readers who wish to help in the restoration of the Alexandra Palace organ may do so easily by purchasing photographs of the console (2*s*. 6*d*.) and the case (1*s*. 3*d*.). The photographs are by Mr. Gilbert Benham, whose excellent work in organ photography is well known. The size of the prints is 6½-in. × 4¾-in. (console) and 4¼-in. × 3¼-in.; and we understand that all the stop-names are easily readable. Copies may be had from Mr. Stanham (who is a member of the committee), at 14, Windermere Road, Muswell Hill, N.10.

Sharps and Flats

I have laboured with all my power and influence, with whatever faculties I possess, for about twenty-five years without making the slightest impression on anybody, and I intend going on doing it for the rest of my life, completely happy in the full consciousness that I never shall make the slightest impression on anybody.—Sir Thomas Beecham.

It takes a highly-trained, musically-educated man with a lot of very special personal qualities, like courage, a sense of rhythm, the ability to invent as he goes along, to take his place in a star band, and wind his way through the magic maze of music. When I first tried jazz I couldn't play it. I was 'fired' from the first jazz orchestra I got a job in.—Paul Whiteman.

Work on your own idiom, your own tradition, your own note. Write with a brogue if necessary—but at all costs stop imitating.—Sir Hamilton Harty.

Jazz and onions are alike—they get stronger and stronger.—Paul Whiteman.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

The end of the Lent term was marked by three important happenings, each of which reflected greatly to the credit of the institution and its students. On March 24 the orchestral forces again proved their mettle when they played a thoroughly searching programme under Sir Henry Wood, in Duke's Hall. Both the Symphonies given—that of Haydn, No. 26, in D minor, and Mozart's No. 25, in G minor (K. 183)—demand neatness of execution rather than zest of youthful spirits, and the latter is as a rule the chief equipment of a students' orchestra. But Sir Henry has evidently solved the secret of curbing even the exuberance of the young, and the tone of the strings in the softest passages was admirably controlled. At the same time it must be said that when occasion demanded he found ample response when spurring the enthusiasm. A promising fiddler, Mr. Alfred Cave, gave a sympathetic and intelligent performance of the first movement of the Brahms Concerto. The Academy would seem to be unusually fertile in string players of more than average ability at the present moment. Quite the most distinguished vocal performance was given by Mr. Glyndwr Jones, who sang Figaro's aria, 'Largo al factotum.' This young man has a fine voice.

On the following day the chamber concert was marked by some excellent concerted playing. Franck's Quintet was astonishingly well done, the ensemble being beyond reproach and the slow movement played with real feeling and sympathetic tone. Another performance worthy of note was that of Brahms's Trio in A minor, of which the second and third movements only were given. It is, perhaps, invidious to pick out one member of such a well-balanced trio, but Mr. John M. Richards's 'cello-playing is worth underlining.

The outstanding event of last term—or perhaps it may be said without undue exaggeration of any other term—was the performance of Bach's 'St. Matthew' Passion at Queen's Hall, on March 31. This great work was given in its entirety—a feature in itself remarkable, and probably unique so far as London is concerned. The event is fully referred to on page 449. What the production owed to the patience and genius of Sir Henry Wood is impossible to calculate, but he certainly achieved a tour de force. A fact that was hardly credible was that the performers were students. This enterprise, this great adventure—call it what you will—completely justified itself both as a musical occasion and a first-rate public attraction, two propositions often as wide apart as the poles. Queen's Hall was sold out days beforehand. The cause of music in England is not at such a low ebb as some dismal folk would have us believe.

The following awards have been made: The Hubert Kiver Prize (violin) to Alfred Cave (London), John Hamilton being highly commended. The Sterndale Bennett Prize (pianoforte) to Freda Rich (London), Jessie Furze and Kathleen Dunn-Davies being highly commended.

The Philip L. Agnew Composition Prize to W. Ifor Jones (Merthyr Tydfil), Guirne Creith being commended. The Goldberg Prize (singing) to Arthur Fear (Blaina, Mon.). The Edward W. Nicholls Prize (pianoforte) to Margaret H. Grummitt (Anerley), Violet Lythgoe being very highly commended, and Bertha Ingart and Doris Hibbert commended. The Leonard G. Vallange Prize (violoncello) to Doris Vevers (Bristol), Joan Mulholland being highly commended, and Peers Coetmore Jones commended.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The Lent term came to an end on April 3, after a very successful session. The usual students' concerts have been given, and charming novelty was added by the lectures given by Prof. Bridge on the now seldom-heard harpsichord. Miss Nellie Chaplin provided excellent demonstrations on the instrument which, it is interesting to know, was made in 1789.

The orchestral concert at Queen's Hall, and also the students' concert at Æolian Hall, attracted large and appreciative audiences. At the former MacDowell's second Concerto was admirably played by Mr. W. Parry, a College scholar.

The annual meeting of the Corporation was held on March 19, Mr. W. W. Cobbett presiding. Most satisfactory reports on the work of the College for the year ending December, 1925, were submitted. Dr. W. Creser was elected Vice-Chairman of the College Corporation, vice Dr. C. Vincent, retired. Sir Dan Godfrey and Mr. H. L. L. Howell were elected to the Corporation. Mr. Howell was also elected a Member of the Board.

This season of the year sees the departure of the oversea examiners to the various spheres of work of Trinity College. The following are representing the College this year: Dr. C. Edgar Ford (Queensland, &c.); Mr. Adolph Mann (W. and S. Australia); Mr. Ronald Chamberlain (Canada and New Zealand); Dr. J. E. Borland (New Zealand); Mr. G. F. Vincent and Dr. Mistowski (S. Africa); Mr. C. Egerton Lowe (Egypt, India, &c.); and Dr. E. F. Horner (Newfoundland). Dr. Borland has now joined the permanent examiners, and his long experience as Musical Adviser to the L.C.C. Education Committee will be very valuable.

Two students, Messrs. Adrian W. Beecham and Joseph G. Wardale Lane, satisfied the examiners at the First Examination for the degree of Bachelor in Music at the University of Durham.

Successful distributions were held at Harrogate, Watford, West Ham, Worcester, Walthamstow, Croydon, and Wellingborough, where representatives from the College attended.

'ENGLISH OPERA'

The Musical Association meeting, on March 9, listened to a paper on 'English Opera,' by Mr. Edward J. Dent. Unfortunately Mr. Dent was unable to get away from Germany, where he was superintending the production of Purcell's 'Dido and Æneas,' at Münster, and his paper was read by the Secretary. Mr. Dent said that the most ardent patriot could hardly contend that the history of English opera had been a glorious record, but it had, at least, been an intensely English record of amateurishness and 'muddling through somehow.' Comparing it with that of contemporary opera in Italy and France, what struck one at once was the tentative amateurishness of the English as contrasted with the slick professionalism of the Italians, and eventually of the French as well. It was just this amateurish and experimental quality about the English work which often made it far more interesting and far more valuable to us moderns, as a source of stimulating ideas, than the work of the Italians and the French, who rapidly established a standard convention and a traditional professional routine.

English opera began, it might be said, with the musical plays of Elizabethan choristers. Both these and the masque were amateur entertainments; the latter in particular played a large part in English life, being indeed the only form of English drama that did not suffer a temporary death during the Commonwealth. With the Restoration there began a new era. Theatres were re-opened, but they were no longer the Shakespearean theatres. Professionalism reappeared, but professionalism did not want curious experiments by fumbling native amateurs. Our actor-managers might be very competent business men; they knew what the public wanted. In regard to music, however, they were amateurs—hardly even that, for they seldom had the amateur's love of music and still less his desire to work out a problem, such as the co-ordination of music and drama on logical artistic principles. One isolated experiment stood out, in 1673, the 'Psyche' of Shadwell and Locke. Shadwell may have been a poor dramatist, but he might have developed into a remarkably good operatic librettist. As with Shakespeare, music was for him the rainbow bridge between the natural and the supernatural worlds.

The next decade brought us to the tragic figure of Henry Purcell—tragic in that his marvellous genius and accomplishment never found the right scope for its full development. 'Dido and Æneas' was proof enough that Purcell might in more fortunate surroundings have created a typically native opera that would have utterly eclipsed Lully and Scarlatti. It could hold an audience entranced to-day without the alteration of a single note, without the addition of a single instrument. For concentrated characterization and passion there was no opera by any composer ancient or modern, to equal it. If we were ever to build up a standard repertory of English opera, it was obvious that 'Dido and Æneas' must be its foundation-stone. Purcell's other dramatic works, with all their beauty and power, could hardly pass into a general repertory. What could the modern English composer learn from 'Dido and Æneas'? Purcell's flow of melody and his intensely personal style of harmony belonged to the past. It was useless to hold them up to the modern composer as examples. What we could hold up to him was Purcell's treatment of English words. We might see how the words took sense from the music; the melodic line gave them force and sometimes a quite unexpected point, passionate or witty, as the case might be. And the modern composer might profitably study Purcell's recitatives. It was a commonplace to say that they were perfectly fitted to the declamation of the English language. Attention should rather be drawn to their wonderful swiftness, to their concentrated force of expression, and to their positive melodic beauty. Purcell achieved his swiftness and his dramatic force not merely by the use of short notes corresponding to the short syllables of English; he achieved it by the fact that every recitative of his was a regular musical phrase, or indeed a regular piece of music, quite apart from the words. Another lesson that we might learn from Purcell was that the composer's main thought must be carried by the vocal line. 'Dido and Æneas' could stand that severest test of any opera—performance by the voices alone without any instrument whatever.

The 18th and 19th centuries had comparatively little to contribute to our ideal repertory. 'The Beggar's Opera' would of course find a place in it, but its successors would be of little use. The 19th century at least gave us three operas which were in actual practice the basis of current English opera—'The Bohemian Girl,' 'Maritana,' and 'The Lily of Killarney.' Stay with us they must, whatever we might think of them. There was no getting over the fact that they were brilliantly effective on the stage, and that they were as British as it was possible for any opera to be.

Mr. Dent then went on to discuss a group of quite recent operas. They were all different in character, but they had yet enough in common to be classed together as a school; and we might see in them good reason for hoping that on the basis of that school future composers might be able to develop a really copious and valuable repertory of opera in an essentially British style. 'The Immortal Hour' was the first English opera since the days of Balfe and Wallace which had taken a firm hold on the public. The secret strength of the work lay simply in the fact that Mr. Boughton's real inspiration was almost always carried by the vocal line. Secondly, the vocal music moved at the natural pace of spoken English, which meant that the words came out clearly and intelligibly

Mr. Nicholas Gatty was another composer who had an undeniable sense of the stage. His inspiration was less full-blooded than Mr. Boughton's, but he had a more accomplished technique. People who could not enter into the beauty and dignity of 'The Tempest' must go to an opera-house in search of anything except opera itself. Opera, as a whole, was easily forgotten when singers, painters, and conductors regarded it merely as an excuse for bringing their own selves into prominence. Such an opera as 'The Tempest' required every one concerned to be concentrated on the work of art itself. Ethel Smyth's 'The Bo'sun's Mate' was an undoubted success. Dame Smyth was fortunate in being able to write her own librettos, for this gave her music an exceptional directness and clarity of expression. Her one fault was that she sometimes allowed inspiration to run away with her; even she had her sentimental moments. Her danger was that when she sentimentalized she lapsed, as Mr. Boughton did, from the pace and rhythm of normal English. The moment this happened, the words were drawn out and became difficult to follow; the music took on a character which reminded us of some other, some slower-speaking nationality.

It was perhaps fortunate that 'Hugh the Drover' had not been what might be called a roaring success, though it was steadily winning its way. If it had 'caught on' at once we should have been flooded with imitation folk-song operas—and folk-song was not every British composer's natural language. From a dramatic point of view this folk-song style had its advantages and its drawbacks. It at once created an atmosphere, which was valuable. But it also lowered the emotional temperature. A folk-song ballad might tell a tale of passion, but it was a narrative, not drama. And so it seemed that the folk-song style in this opera set everything in a romantic distance, but removed it from actuality—the sense of which was one of the first essentials of all drama. 'Hugh the Drover' gave us not passion, but wistful remembrance. The work had, however, technical qualities which were of great interest. The music was always rightly related to the words; it moved at the English pace, and that was the secret of its emotional force.

What one noticed about all these operas was that they had had a sort of qualified success when produced at the Royal College of Music, at Glastonbury, or sometimes at the 'Old Vic.,' but that as soon as they had been taken up by a professional company of established reputation, they seemed to have missed fire. When we came to see the works performed under conditions which ought to make for success we were surprised to find ourselves wishing we were back at Lambeth, South Kensington, or Somerset. The reason was simple enough. A new school of English opera was at last arising; but it required a new school of English opera singers. These new singers had got to be intelligent and well educated from a literary as well as from a musical point of view. They must be people who could speak English properly, as well as sing it. The crisis would be acute if a national opera house was established with the idea that certain tenants were quite ready to move in at once. Which type of singer was to predominate there? On that depended the system of vocal education at our music schools.

What was the quality that made an opera English? The answer to this riddle was very much simpler than might be imagined. An English opera was one that was composed to an English libretto. That was all. It must be a good libretto, written in real literary English, which an educated composer could take a pride in setting to music. As to the music, it did not matter in what style it was so long as it fitted the libretto properly. It was not of any use to write sham folk-song stuff, or 'Old English,' or to choose an exclusively English subject for the plot. The result might be an English opera of sorts, but not by any means necessarily a good opera. The essential condition was that English words should be properly set to music. If a composer did not know how to do that, he must go back to Purcell and study him until he did.

SOCIETY OF WOMEN MUSICIANS: A BUSY SESSION

The Society of Women Musicians has had an unusually interesting series of meetings this spring, and large audiences have been attracted. The session opened with a couple of lectures from Dr. W. A. Aikin on 'The Science of Phonology as applied to Voice-Training'—a subject of great interest to all musicians, and not only to singers. In February, Mr. Terrick Williams spoke on 'The National Gallery from a Painter's Point of View,' with the object of interesting musicians in another art besides their own. His lecture proved an alluring exposition of the treasures which are the heritage of us all, and his enthusiasm for his subject was revealed in many illuminating suggestions.

In March the President, Miss Fanny Davies, entertained the Society with a splendid programme of pianoforte music, the audience on this occasion having to be accommodated on every available inch of landings and staircases in addition to the concert-room.

The concluding meeting was arranged by the Chamber Music Section, which gave a programme of string music under the conductorship of Misses Dorothy Erhart and Eveline Fife, assisted by junior conductors. Miss Christine Chalmers was the pianist in a Bach Concerto, and Miss Sybil Scanes sang a Mozart Aria with orchestral accompaniment.

Details of membership can be obtained from Miss Rachel Fell, Society of Women Musicians, 74, Grosvenor Street, London, W.1.

London Concerts

KITESH'

Why 'Kitesh' has never before reached the British public is a puzzle. Probably because Sir Thomas Beecham went out of business before his activities overtook it.

'Kitesh' is very good Rimsky-Korsakov, perhaps as good as the popular 'Golden Cockerel,' and, like that, full of good tunes, varied rhythms, and brilliant orchestration. Like that, too, in effective dramatic qualities—but, of course, not like that in humour—for the subject of 'Kitesh' is a quasi-sacred subject, and beyond a scene which (like that scene in 'Hugh the Drover') gives us the noise of the fair, offers no opportunity for fun.

'Kitesh' is sometimes called 'the Russian Parsifal.' People will make these comparisons, but they usually have little force. There is a valley in Yorkshire which is often advertised as 'the Switzerland of England.' Nidderdale is indeed delightful, but it isn't Switzerland; it is something simpler and less majestic. There is about as much resemblance between 'Kitesh' and 'Parsifal' as between Nidderdale and Grindelwald; or, to compare in a somewhat different way, between a Russian peasant and a German professor, both of whom are capable of being in love, getting drunk, and feeling devotional, whilst doing all these things in very different ways.

It is the directness and simplicity of 'Kitesh' that charm. Everything in it is fresh, unlaborious, and unaffected. There is a sort of leading motive system in 'Kitesh' as in 'Parsifal,' but it is much less systematically worked. Rimsky-Korsakov's eloquence is a plain and convincing statement, where Wagner's is a thoroughly developed argument.

Rimsky seems to return to the same musical theme when he returns to the same thought because it is the easy and natural thing to do. In Act 1 the heroine is in her native forest, and he gives a very happy picture of her state of mind by a sort of 'Forest Murmurs' (not so accomplished, perhaps, as Wagner's in 'Siegfried,' but very effective in producing the 'atmosphere' that is desired). In Act 4, Scene 1, she is again in a forest, and again the 'Forest Murmurs' are heard.

In Act 1, in her first innocent happiness, the heroine calls the birds around her to be fed; in Act 4, Scene 1, in her happiness (now renewed after much tribulation) she does so again. Naturally then flute, clarinet, and piccolo suggest her feathered friends on both pages of the score.

When the composer has once found the appropriate music for a situation he considers it still appropriate if the situation recurs.

There is, of course, in 'Kitesh' something closer to the Wagnerian leading motive system than that—e.g., the little scrap of tune which might be called the 'Happy Kitesh' motive, which, in the time of the city's troubles is differently harmonized and becomes what one may then call the 'Sorrowful Kitese' motive, and then, when happiness returns, becomes again the 'Happy Kitesh' motive. But though Rimsky-Korsakov often uses representative themes in this way, he does not actually weave his score out of them. They have a dramatic significance, as have Wagner's leading motives, but the manner of their employment does not constitute a composing device with him as with Wagner. His manner of treatment of the themes that come to him is very able, but it is not at all technically sophisticated.

Amongst the superficial resemblances of 'Kitesh' and 'Parsifal' are the use of much bell music and a sacred meal—very slightly sacramental, however, in 'Kitesh,' and maintained on the peasant-legend level of naïvety by the heroine's scattering of crumbs to the birds. Much more evident common ground is found in the element of pageantry and ceremonial which appears strongly in both 'Kitesh' and 'Parsifal,' and in the large and important use made of the chorus.

The chorus singing on March 30, by the way, was excellent. It was firm, rhythmic, generally well in tune, (even in unaccompanied passages), and, indeed, a good deal better than we generally get either at Covent Garden or from the B.B.C. (The trainer was Mr. Stanford Robinson, and if he can maintain something like that level at his 2LO Sunday evening services, we shall be grateful to him.)

The vocal soloists were, some of them at any rate, really astonishingly good. It is unthinkable that now we have in this country at last made the acquaintance of the bass Mosjoukin (Burundai and King Yury), and that very dramatic tenor, Pozemkovsky (the drunkard Grisha), we should entirely lose sight of them. The director of the official Covent Garden 'season' was prominent in the middle box of the horseshoe, and he, surely, has taken his notes. The other men, Kaidanov, Caravia, and Popov, were also very good. The women would have been more so had they not suffered from the distressing and prevalent ailment of tremolo. There is, I gather, this excuse for Madame Smirnova (the heroine, Fevronia), that she had rushed post-haste from her place on the Brussels opera stage to her place on the Covent Garden stage, and had hardly had time to get her breath back before she began to sing to us. (Incidentally, she was, I learn, on the Brussels stage again the very next evening, when, presumably, her breath would flow still less steadily.) It was curious to find how much less her tremolo distressed us as the evening wore on, but Fevronia's music is some of the best in the opera, always charmingly melodic and touchingly, though simply, emotional, and presumably the singer's interpretative qualities were sufficiently notable to dull our ears at length to her technical defect—the defect most hated (as hundreds of letters have told me) by the British Broadcasting public. Other singers were Marie Davidova (Otrok) and the English Gwen Knight and May Hemsley (Angel Birds of Paradise).

For the whole production we have most to thank, I gather, two individuals—Captain Lewis, of the B.B.C., whose organization of the whole big venture (in which he was, of course, aided by a host of colleagues) was almost perfect, and Albert Coates, whose enormously successful performance of the work at Barcelona (where he is to repeat it next year) suggested its performance here. Coates was suffering from the then fashionable influenza; one might almost say he got out of bed to conduct. Yet he carried everything through in a fashion that showed not only the most thorough knowledge of the score, but the most thorough sympathy.

In passing from this compliment, let me add another. The score had to be cut, for a broadcast concert performance in Russian, denying both the gratification of the eye and that detailed knowledge of what is proceeding which we get from opera-listening when our (invariably articulate) opera-singers use a language with which we are acquainted, would have become tedious if carried out at full length. We think we heard 'Kitesh' a month ago. Not so! We heard probably less than two-thirds of 'Kitesh.' Yet, musically and dramatically, the passages sung dovetailed so neatly that we were unaware of the omissions.

And, now, when shall we hear 'Kitesh' again? Not two-thirds of 'Kitesh,' but 'Kitesh' complete? Not the music of 'Kitesh,' but 'Kitesh' with all its colour and movement? We would like to see 'Kitesh' as well as hear 'Kitesh'—of course, with Albert Coates again at the desk. Presumably our first chance is in the Covent Garden season of 1927. 'The Invisible City of Kitesh,' the title-page calls it. But it needn't for ever remain quite so invisible.

P. A. S.

THE R.A.M. AND THE 'ST. MATTHEW' PASSION

On the Wednesday before Easter the students of the Royal Academy of Music gave a performance of the 'St. Matthew' Passion in its entirety at Queen's Hall. This may not have been an unprecedented event, though it was certainly unusual, but it was a memorable and noteworthy occasion, for two different reasons. In the first place it revealed the perfect proportions of the Passion, as a work of art. For the first few times of hearing, many who only know the ordinary abbreviated version grow weary of the long-continued high-pitched recitative, and find two hours too long for continuous attention to disjointed music. But by a paradox of art three hours and twenty minutes became shorter than two hours, and the interval of an hour between the two parts seemed almost too generous, though perhaps it was no longer than the sermon of Bach's own day. Narrative and commentary and drama and description fit together into a perfectly balanced whole, and every detail falls into place. This illumination of detail constitutes the second claim of this performance to notice, and as the work offers endless scope for varied treatment, not only in interpretation, but in general lay-out and even in instrumentation, a few of Sir Henry Wood's points are worth recording—for, with a very few exceptions, they were brilliantly successful. Expression was always vivid: the string cadences to the recitatives were always very slow, very soft and tender; many numbers, especially the short choruses like 'Lord, is it I?' were begun quietly, but underwent a continuous crescendo; similarly a huge crescendo was made in the accompaniment of Jesus's recitative, 'Drink ye all of it' (No. 17). In the chorus, 'O tell us, thou Christ,' sibilants have rarely been used with greater spite, while in the sublime little chorus, 'Truly, this was the Son of God,' there was an effect of dazzling glory. The chorales were treated in every possible way—with full accompaniment, with organ accompaniment, unaccompanied, and as a solo quartet. In the matter of accompaniment there were at least six each of flutes, oboes, and bassoons, which added to the sonorousness of the total tone, and gave what must have been the blend and effect intended by Bach, although the actual scale of performance was bigger. The continuo was played on the organ throughout, and no pianoforte or harpsichord was used. Some legitimate effects of colour were obtained by strengthening the basso continuo, here with a bassoon, here with a contrabass pizzicato, here with the G string of two violins, here with the interjection of chords on the organ (e.g., in the 'Thunder and lightning' chorus), and in the last chorus, where Bach makes strings and wind play together, Sir Henry distributed the work between them. The addition of an Alberti bass on the violoncello to the accompaniment of No. 40 was not an improvement, but there was no case where this kind of editing went beyond the legitimate—not to say necessary—expansion of Bach's score. There was a full complement of four obsolete oboes in addition to the six orchestral oboes. Da capo arias were sung in full, except that the singer went straight to the opening of the voice-part without waiting for the repetition of the opening symphony. Part of No. 50 (the duet for two Priests) was transposed after No. 51. Otherwise the work was sung straight through as it stands in the score.

The solo parts were distributed among a large number of students, the part of the Evangelist, for instance, being divided among three tenors, of whom Mr. Eric Greene was far the best singer in the whole company of soloists, who, it must be confessed, were not quite equal to the big demands made of them. Miss Eileen Pilcher, a contralto, came nearest to Mr. Greene in comprehension of what is needed in Bach. The choir sang very well indeed, and never flagged. There was some professional help in the orchestra, but not enough to rob the students of the high praise they deserve. The performance as a whole was a musical experience to be treasured, and it must have given the greatest satisfaction to Sir Henry, who had thought out every detail, and supervised its execution, right down to the tuning of every individual stringed instrument. We hope it will not remain unique, but that every year London will have the opportunity of learning the full stature of the 'St. Matthew' Passion. F. H.

GLASGOW ORPHEUS CHOIR

It is idle to complain, as several have complained, that one concert of the Glasgow Orpheus Choir is very much like another. The Londoner goes to Queen's Hall on a Saturday in April (this year it was a week after Easter) to hear the choir, and to hear this choir is an experience, even if listening to a choral arrangement of 'Scots wha hae' is, per se, not worth the walk up Langham Place. The part of us that appreciates Byrd and Bach and Stanford and Elgar may measure up the amount of real choral music that occurs in an Orpheus programme, and weigh it against the Celtic allusions; never mind, the other part that responds to lovely tone and brightens to pretty tricks of choralism is getting full measure. Tricks, not trickery; the hundred and one accomplishments of the Glasgow Orpheus Choir are legitimate properties of the human voice multiplied. We rarely hear them practised, and we ought to be glad of the privilege when it comes. Among them is a faculty for grading the tone in minute degrees anywhere between mp and pp, and a way of attending closely to the minor facts of rhythm. All this would pass for nothing, of course, if the whole choir were not drilled, or born, to sing with complete unity. It is the exactness all through the body of tone that gives life to this choir's singing, and the kind of music that makes the best use of it is neither broad nor loud. Mr. Roberton is therefore a good showman when he gives a preference to music in which the effects are small, picturesque, and manifold. His London audience has learnt to appreciate the Orpheus for what it gives as well as for what it is, and the spectacle of Queen's Hall being crowded to the last seat on both the afternoon and evening of April 10, was the proof of a very good pudding.

THE ORIANA MADRIGAL SOCIETY

One could listen to the Glasgow choir without jealousy, for only a few days had passed since the pride of the Londoner had been stimulated by one of his own choirs. The Oriana Madrigal Society and the Bach Cantata Club—neither of them, happily, restricted by its title—conspired on March 29 to give a memorable performance of the B minor Mass at Queen's Hall. Nobody doubted that a choir brought up on madrigal singing, with all the independence and self-reliance that it teaches, would be able to deal with any other style of contrapuntal writing; and as for firmness, the Oriana is sixty, seventy, or eighty strong, and can provide enough singers—half a dozen will do, if they have good voices and initiative—to give security to every part. In fact, it was proved in the course of the performance that clear, unhesitating definition of a vocal part was better to be obtained from the tip-top few than from the not-quite-so-tip-top many, e.g., Mr. Kennedy Scott's own Philharmonic Choir. In the choruses that demand an extra firm grip of every part, such as the 'Gloria,' the 'Cum sancto spiritu,' and the 'Patrem omnipotentem,' the Oriana Choir made the texture of the part-writing clearer than we have known it at any Queen's Hall performance of recent years. This was very satisfactory, but it might have been expected from the precedents of the Oriana Choir. What we had not calculated was the strength of the choir. The 'Gratias Agimus' and 'Sanctus' had all the tonal power that we are accustomed to in choirs of double the size—either that, or the ear adjusted itself and received the same range of impressions. In the quieter choruses the choir sang with good effect, but it did not so much excel. Miss Dorothy Silk, Miss Lilian Berger, Mr. John Adams, and Mr. Stuart Robinson were the soloists, Mr. Gerald Cooper was at the harpsichord, and Dr. Harold Darke at the organ.

Mr. Kennedy Scott, why did you leave out the first chorus of the 'Credo'? M.

HANDEL'S 'SEMELE'

The Harold Brooke Choir had at its second concert (April 22, at the Bishopsgate Institute) improved out of recognition. It is a choir of thirty-six—all singers, no passengers. What is there that such a choir cannot do? Thirty-six struck us that night as an ideal number for Handel.

The programme was an abridged version of 'Semele.' The recent Cambridge stage performance rescued this charming work from neglect. At the Bishopsgate concert we missed the pleasure for the eye, but the singing was better than at Cambridge. Handel wrote for good singers—indeed, contemplated no others. The excellence of the soloists at Mr. Brooke's performance was, then, a great part of the success, and all to the good was the degree to which they realised they were singing an opera ('Semele' is an opera in all but name). This degree could have been enhanced. Mr. Clifford Lathlean, for instance, told of the rape of Semele by the celestial eagle with all the stolidity of the oratorio bass too long inured to miracles. And all four soloists sang their recitatives far too slowly. The musical significance of most of the recitatives proves that Handel meant no time to be wasted on them. Our one remaining reproach is that the strings had evidently not been enough rehearsed to be familiar with the conductor's beat, and there was frequent haziness in their playing—contrasting with the perfect assurance of the choir.

Miss Elsie Suddaby sang as Semele. Her 'O sleep' was a full success. She is a musician and an artist. Brilliant were the runs in 'No, no, I'll take no less.' Her fault was to incur harshness and hardness sometimes when in quest of brilliance. The contralto, Miss Cathcart Lynn, was a deeply pleasing singer. Her tone was pure and even, and she could rise to a fine dramatic expression. Mr. Edward Leer sang as Jupiter (tenor). His 'Where'er you walk' lacked elegance and sportiveness. But the voice was big, and there is here no doubt a coming singer of importance. Mr. W. H. Reed led the strings, and Mr. Gerald Cooper played the harpsichord. C.

QUEEN'S HALL SYMPHONY CONCERT

The concert on April 17 was by way of being an 'overflow' from the all-Bach concert given a few weeks earlier. There was again a large audience, which obviously enjoyed a programme that a few years ago would have been deemed quixotic—all six 'Brandenburg' Concertos, with the A minor Violin Concerto interpolated midway. On paper the scheme threatened monotony, but actually it revealed the astonishing amount of variety achieved in form, mood, colour scheme, grouping of soloists, &c. Miss Fanny Davies and Miss Jelly d'Aranyi were the soloists. G.

SOME PIANISTS OF THE MONTH

At Mr. Ronald Chamberlain's recital at Æolian Hall, one wished that he might have brought back from Australasia some of its sunlight, spaciousness, and freedom. Though his technique was adequate for the purpose, there was not enough character in Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 111, or in Schumann's Etudes Symphoniques, to sustain interest or create a definite musical impression. In the shorter works of his programme—Scriabin Preludes and Studies—Mr. Chamberlain was at his best, which can be very good; but in the larger works whole passages were played as by one reading at sight without real observation—the music inevitably becoming 'flat, stale, unprofitable.'

M. Niedzielski made a first appearance in London at Grotrian Hall. In opening his programme with Schumann's Arabesque, he revealed delicacy of touch and expression. Some Chopin Etudes which followed were played with brilliance, but showed a too great love of speed—essential notes in the Study in C, in particular, being inaudible. The Polonaise in A flat was too fast and furious to be telling. His programme was more varied than skilfully mixed—like a salad with too much trace of onion. The following sequence speaks for itself: 'La Cathédrale Engloutie,' 'General Lavine,' 'Cakewalk' (Debussy), 'In the Temple of Memphis' (Scott), Four Humoresques (Jarnach), Cortège and Polish National Dance (Marczewski).

Among the pianists heard recently two stand out as artists of distinction—M. Borovsky (mentioned in last month's article), who has the breadth and simplicity of great art, and that apparent spontaneity which results from severe study and hard work (his last recital takes place on May 5); and M. Nicolas Orloff, who well deserved his enthusiastic reception at Wigmore Hall. A master of his craft, there was character and charm in all the music he elected to play. Beautiful handling was conspicuous in a piece played as an encore—the Gluck-Brahms Gavotte—simple, dignified, rhythmical, vital. We emphasise this, as many lesser pianists seem so inclined to play tricks with such straightforward old music. M. Orloff made an impressive and sensitive opening with Franck's fine Prelude and Fugue in B minor. One enjoyed afresh the romantic and vigorous Etudes Symphoniques of Schumann, in spite of having already listened to many attempts at their interpretation this year. It is to be hoped that M. Orloff will not develop a tendency to virtuosity at the cost of his art.

Mr. Frank Merrick, who is a pianist of mature experience, displayed the courage of his convictfons by arranging an entirely modern programme for the first of two recitals at Æolian Hall. He had also selected for time a spring Saturday afternoon. One wondered whether either choice of time or works was wise, after a prolonged absence from London! The Bax Sonata in F sharp minor—an agglomeration of various unco-ordinated impressions—was well played. The want of coherence in this work left one prepared to welcome the final chord— strangely enough, quite a traditional one—before its actual arrival. 'Ruralia Hungarica,' by Ernst Dohnányi, followed. Mr. Merrick, though musicianly, too frequently produces and prolongs a loud, lifeless, and inelastic tone.

D'A.

SOME SINGERS OF THE MONTH

Joseph Schwarz, the Russian baritone, must certainly be numbered among the few great all-round singers of to-day. He had already shown us how finely he fitted an operatic frame. (His 'Rigoletto,' at Covent Garden, comes readily to mind.) But Mr. Schwarz, cuffed and spatted, and wearing his own face, proved himself no less an artist on this day than when he had stalked the stage in motley. He was, in fact, more successful in songs by Strauss and Brahms than in those old operatic war-horses the 'Prologue' and 'Eri tu,' both of which missed fire at this performance. The intensity and breadth of vision which had characterised his singing of the 'Cortigiani' in Rigoletto were simply not there. It was as though he said to himself: 'Remember where you are. Shut off the "great to swell" and stick to the diapasons.' And in the result he far overdid the repression.

But in Strauss's 'Traum durch die Dämmerung' he exemplified the art and effect of effortless singing. It was full of finely-scored points. Brahms's 'Feldeinsamkeit' was another of his successes. It would be difficult to pick holes in the man's technique, and so careful is he in the use of his voice, that there seems no likelihood of its ever becoming threadbare. And yet, did he wholly satisfy the listener? Those who, regardless of place and time, look for astonishing effects and thrilling high notes, would find him wanting. But those who appreciate a consistent outflow of beautiful tone, an unforced expression, and an unusual armoury of singing arts and graces, would proclaim him their ideal.

Miss Louise Marshall, who sang at Wigmore Hall, has attained a studied rather than a natural utterance. She began most interestingly, and, so long as the music dealt with impersonal qualities, the singer's voice nicely shaped itself to match their needs. But when the phrases developed dramatically, there was no corresponding driving-power or expansion of tone. All the composers represented on her programme found a common denominator in the singer's style. This lack of native impulse, allied with so many delightful effects of a ripened technique (wisely-judged pianissimos, soaring high notes, and so on), made for certain incongruities of performance. I could not help the feeling that it was Miss Marshall's teacher who was really giving the recital, or, at any rate, that he (or she) was still too largely influencing the performer's ways, whereas Miss Marshall could be quite confidently recommended to trust her own wings. Perhaps now the trial flight is over, she will.

For one of her temporary final appearances, Elena Gerhardt chose to sing—along with some little-known Brahms—Schumann's 'Frauenliebe und Leben.' In a way the cycle suited the singer, but to hear Schumann, Chamisso, and Gerhardt conjoining in a fatuous kind of hero-worship was to realise something of what the poet meant when he spoke of roses dying in aromatic pain. In some things, Madame Gerhardt is still in the first rank of Lieder singers, but she is not exactly a students' model, for more than ever has she lost touch with a controlling apparatus of which she never was complete mistress. She is where she is by sheer force of instinct and musicianly intelligence, gifts which in her case quite transcend faulty technical considerations. Madame Gerhardt is a law unto herself.

A New Zealand baritone, Kynaston Franks, gave a recital at Æolian Hall. He had the chief excuse for a singer—a good voice, and he managed to make his words good without losing tone. But one felt that his mental survey was not sufficiently ranging to give us an equal interest in everything he sang, and his voice is not yet used with any formed or characteristic art. Here and there his high notes broke harshly into the listener's pleasure. Mr. Franks showed, however, that he could at times correct the natural heaviness of his voice by floating a string of soft tones, and that he could also find effective employment for his mezza-voce.

H. J. K.

It was good to see Mr. John Coates back home after his travels. We are glad that America should have a chance to know of the best that England can do in the way of song; we are still more glad that Transatlantic lures have not persuaded him to abandon us. Whoever else migrates, we cannot spare John Coates.

At his recital at Chenil Galleries, Chelsea, on March 22, the programme consisted of Shakespearean songs each in an old and in a new setting alternatively. We heard true English truly sung—rather a rarity—and we decided that this can be done only by a singer who is also an actor. Mr. Coates need never have troubled to sing. He would surely have had a roaring success simply as an actor. But happily he does sing. And if we can shut our ears for a moment to the general interpretation, and listen only to the vocal technician, there is ample matter for admiration. It is a lesson to hear a man who can sing a verse of Morley's 'It was a lover and his lass' in two breaths. Then, on the other side of his art—that is, vital, poetic interpretation—such a performance as his 'Blow, blow, thou winter wind' (Quilter) was an admonition to all dull, plodding singers, and a reminder to an audience how interesting singing can and ought to be.

Byrd, Arne, and Linley were some of the older composers, and Parry, Balfour Gardiner and A. R. Cripps were among the latter-day song-writers in the programme. But there was really no great break of style. English musicians have been setting Shakespeare to music continuously for more than three hundred years, and all these songs illustrate a steady tradition and natural development.

Mr. Coates on the whole rather preferred, so one suspected, our older masters with their flowing phrases.

'Full fathom five,' by R. Johnson (1612), has a charm which three centuries have not dimmed. A. R. Cripps's 'O Mistress Mine' was sung with just enough sly humour to raise it above the sentimental. Mr. Gerald Moore was the pianist of the evening. H. O. C.

We regret that owing to the illness of a contributor several important London concerts are omitted.

Competition Festival Record

The Executive of the Wiltshire Festival has shown notable enterprise in arranging a 'Festival Summer School in Music,' to be held at King's House, The Close, Salisbury, from August 23 to 28. The Director will be Mr. Herbert Wiseman, who will lecture during the morning session on School Singing, Choral Work, Preparation for School Concerts, Musical Festivals, and Sight-Reading. The afternoons will be given up to recreation and excursions, and a concert will be arranged for each evening. The fees are moderate. Readers who wish for full particulars should write to Miss E. M. Hill, County Education Office, Trowbridge.

LONDON MUSICAL FESTIVAL, CENTRAL HALL WESTMINSTER

The twenty-first anniversary Festival was held on March 8 to 20. With choirs and individual entries from all parts of England, Scotland, and Wales, this is fast becoming a semi-national event. Even Ireland sent candidates, and France and America were also represented, the latter providing a first-prize vocalist. Mere numbers are valueless without an ever-improving standard, but, with a total number of 4,550 entries, which included 160 choirs, and more than 12,000 performers, keen competition produced a higher standpoint than ever reached before. Provincial Festivals certainly attract greater public interest, but it is equally certain that London holds the record for the number of persons competing.

Cosmopolitan in character, all the choral and many solo classes are 'open events.' Here, London cheerfully admits provincial equality, and in many cases, marked superiority. Excellent object-lessons were frequently given by country competitors, and there is no doubt that the secret of success of this Festival lies in the fact that it invites and welcomes provincials to compete and win prizes, thereby assisting the promoters to attain their educational ideals.

Twenty-seven well-known London adjudicators were engaged to perform the onerous task of judging a hundred and sixty-seven classes. This, in itself, constitutes a record, and on several occasions competitions were being held in five or six halls simultaneously, at Central and Caxton Halls, Westminster.

The management deserves encomiums for compressing a Festival of such magnitude into twelve days' competitions, and the smooth working is a further tribute to efficiency. Mr. T. Lester Jones, who, with Dr. Madeley Richardson, called together the first meeting in 1905, is still hon. secretary, a position he has held from the beginning.

The following are a few of the more important results: Choral Societies—Newport (Mon.) Musical Society (Mr. D. Brinley Williams); Smaller choirs—Beckenham Singers (Mr. Frank Whitaker); Ladies' choirs—Manx Choir (Mr. Noah Moore); Men's choirs—Sheffield Railway Clerks (Mr. A. Butler); Church and Chapel choirs—Queen's Road Wesleyan, Watford (Mr. Wallis Bandy); Equal-voice choirs—Wycombe High School, Girls (Miss K. Murphy); Girl Guides—13th Camberwell (Miss E. M. Leaney); String orchestras—Miss Ethel Loder's Orchestra, Finchley; 'Home music makers'—Alan, Irene, Mavis, Olive, and Bernard Richards, Croydon.

ELIZABETHAN FESTIVAL (LONDON).—At this Festival (March 19 and 20) there was an abundance of distinguished music and musicians to be heard and seen, a bare sufficiency of faithful choirs giving their best, and no public. One wonders how much longer the hon. secretary, Mr. Alan May, will continue his uphill fight to make this Festival worthy of the city in which it is held. The following were the choirs that won the first places: Large Choirs (secular) — Coventry Co-Operative Festival Choir (Mr. Alexander Edwards); Smaller Choirs (secular)—York Musical Society (Mr. J. L. Slater); Smaller Choirs (sacred)—York Musical Society; Female-Voice Choirs—Enfield Ladies' Choir (Miss Ethel Woods); Male-Voice Choirs—High Wycombe Orpheus (Mr. W. Bromage-Smith); School Choirs — Enfield County School for Girls (Miss Ethel Woods).

AYRSHIRE. — This year's Festival—the tenth (March 24-27)—was notable for the very high standard of the choral singing. The entries in this section were not large, however, though the total for the Festival as a whole showed an increase. The chief choral events resulted as follows: Male-Voice Choirs B—Carrick (Mr. Matthew Morton); C—Saltcoats Y.M.C.A. (Mr. Byrce Campbell); Mixed-Voice Challenge Class—Ayr Burgh (Mr. F. Ely); Church Choirs—Portland U.F., Troon (Mr. F. Ely); Female-Voice Challenge Class—Lyric Choir, Kilmarnock (Mr. R. C. McCrone). It is worth noting that Mr. F. Ely, of Troon, made no fewer than twelve appearances as choral conductor during the closing day, accumulating eight firsts! Audiences were large, and the Festival was well carried out in every way.

BOGNOR. — The West Sussex Choral Competitions, initiated by the Duchess of Norfolk in 1913, are now an established and popular institution. This year (March 17-19) forty-seven adult and thirty-seven school choirs entered—in each case an improvement in numbers and in standard. The chief successes were won by Portsmouth Elizabethan and Bach Society, Arundel Choral Society, Chichester Bishop Otter Cottage (female voices), and Petworth Choral Society. In the open class for mixed voices the 'own-choice' pieces of the four competing choirs were 'All creatures now are merry-minded' (Benet), 'Lullaby' (Byrd), 'Come, welcome death' (Bach), and 'This worlde's joy' (Bax).

CAMBRIDGE. — The second Cambridgeshire Festival (March 18, 20, and 27) was an undoubted success, and the Festival may be said to have passed out of the tentative stage. The competitions were on the whole well supported by the choirs of the county, and the culminating point was the performance of 'The Revenge,' under Dr. Rootham, by the massed voices of sixteen village choirs. The children's day, on March 27, went off well.

LEITH HILL.—Although the area from which choirs are admitted is confined to a radius of ten miles around Dorking, this Festival continues to make a name for itself among the musical events that get into the papers. This it does by making concerts the chief end of the proceedings, and by bringing in a distinguished personnel to help them along. This year there were four concerts (April 13-16), at three of which massed choirs took part. Works that were played for the competitors and all to hear included the Bach E major Violin Concerto, the 'Unfinished' Symphony, Delius's 'Cuckoo in Spring,' Holst's 'St. Paul's' Suite, and Vaughan Williams's 'Charterhouse' Suite; and advantage was taken of Miss Jelly d'Aranyi's presence to give the first performance of Vaughan Williams's 'The Lark Ascending,' for violin and orchestra.

MOUNTAIN ASH. — On Easter Monday the annual Eisteddfod was held at the Grand Pavilion, when twelve thousand people attended. The adjudicators were Mr. W. J. Watkins, Mr. Hughson, and Mr. Emlyn Thomas.

PLYMOUTH.—With its ninety classes and something like a thousand entries this Festival now runs to eight busy days (March 18-26). The remarks of the adjudicators in their various departments seemed to show that an all-round improvement was taking place in the ranks of competitors. It was deplored, however, that the support given to the school choir competitions did not represent the full resources of the district.

PONTEFRACT.—This is a well-organized standard country Festival that has brought the music of the neighbourhood up to a certain pitch, and now maintains it there. The entries for this year (March 24-27) were slightly more numerous than last year. Remarkable sight-reading was a feature of the Festival, and the children from Kippax were again prominent in this test of musical ability. One of the awards for pianoforte playing went to a boy of twelve, who has amassed a dozen first prizes in the last few months; and there was a chorister of seventy-eight in the ranks of the Monk Fryston Choral Society, which took first place in every class for which it was eligible.

WINCHESTER.—The Winchester and County Musical Festival is one of those events that employ competitions as the best means of getting local musical people together, and make them take part in concerts—both as performers and as listeners—as the best employment when they are together. The Festival has expanded greatly from its beginnings in 1921, when twenty-two choirs came in. This year there were seventy choirs, and the Festival occupied a whole week (March 15-20). Concerts, usually choral and orchestral, were given daily. The conductors were Mr. Adrian C. Boult, Dr. George Dyson, and Dr. Malcolm Sargent; among the players and singers were Miss Helen Henschel, Mr. Norman Stone, Mr. Leon Goossens, and Mr. Arnold Goldsborough; and the music included Handel's first Concerto Grosso, choruses from 'Judas Maccabæus,' Beethoven's fifth Symphony, part of 'The Creation,' 'Blest Pair of Sirens,' Bach's fifth 'Brandenburg' Concerto, and Mozart's 'Requiem.'

Other Festivals of more than a days' duration were: South-East London (Bermondsey Central Hall), March 15-20; Portsmouth Welfare Association, March 15-19; Tynedale (Hexham), March 19 and 20; Dove and Churnet Valleys (Derby), March 19 and 20; North Lincs (Brigg), March 23 and 24; North Staffs Royal Infirmary (Hanley), March 25-27; Wansbeck (Morpeth), March 26 and 27; Teesdale (Barnard Castle), March 26 and 27; Hampstead and Hendon, April 8-10; Stinchcombe Hill, April 14 and 15; West Lindsey (Gainsborough), April 14 and 15; Mary Wakefield (Kendal), April 14-16; Berkhampsted, April 15-17; North Northants (Oundle), April 16 and 17; Barnsley, April 16 and 17.

IRELAND

DERRY.—The fifth Derry Feis (not to be confounded with the Londonderry Feis), which opened on April 7 and closed on April 11, was a marked success. Particularly gratifying was the rally of schools. The adjudicators were Dr. G. H. P. Hewson, Col. Fritz Brase, and Mr. P. Delaney.

DUBLIN.—The Father Mathew Feis opened on Easter Sunday in the Father Mathew Hall, Church Street. This event, though embracing such competitions as Irish elocution, art, drama, industries, dancing, costume, &c., makes a good show also in vocal and instrumental music. It is worth noting that only indifferent support was forthcoming for the Irish language and Irish singing. Mr. Joseph O'Mara gave much valued help as adjudicator in the vocal items. There was no award for the Gore Cup, as the standard was low, but that for the FitzGerald Cup showed a great improvement. Miss Julia Gray won the McCullough Cup outright, for the best sight-reading of pianoforte accompaniment. The Feis concluded on April 12.

PORTADOWN Feis opened on April 12. The adjudicators were Mr. Stanley Roper, Mr. Herbert Wiseman, and Miss Elsie Fogerty. The entries numbered four hundred and seventy-two, being an increase of fifty-two, as compared with last year.

SLIGO.—Quite gratifying was the success of this year's Feis. The entries totalled five hundred and seventy-three—a record. Much prominence was given to the Irish language and Irish music. There was but one entry for the school choir competition, and one for the children's choir event. Mrs. Glynn (Dublin) won the Denis O'Sullivan Memorial Prize, among ten competitors, and also the Stanford Memorial Cup. Dr. Annie Patterson, Mr. Thomas F. Dunhill, and Mr. R. H. Wilson were the adjudicators.

Music in the Provinces

BATTLE.—'Elijah' was performed for the first time here on Good Friday. The choir, under Mr. Sheehan-Dare, was formed of the Battle and St. Leonard's Choral Societies.

BIRMINGHAM AND DISTRICT.—The last of the series of eight symphony concerts given by the City of Birmingham Orchestra took place on March 24. The outstanding feature was the performance of the Delius Double Concerto by the Misses May and Beatrice Harrison, whose playing proved equal in every way to the demands of the music, and made the performance a memorable one. The lovely, wandering beauty of the work, and more especially the nobility of the last movement, were realised to the full. Both players drew beautiful tone from their instruments, and a perfect balance was obtained. Bach's 'Brandenburg' Concerto No. 3 was also given, and the concert concluded with a repeat performance of Béla Bartók's 'Dance Suite.'—— On March 21, Mr. Adrian C. Boult conducted the last Sunday concert of the season. On this occasion Gluck's 'Iphigenia in Aulis' Overture received a beautiful interpretation. Beethoven's A major Symphony and two Delius pieces, 'On hearing the first cuckoo in spring' and 'Summer night on the river,' were included in the programme.—— Mr. Albert Sammons and Mr. Gordon Bryan were the principal soloists at a concert given by the City of Birmingham Choir on March 28. They played Franck's Sonata for violin and pianoforte, but the performance was marred by the omission of the third movement. In another composer's work such a compression may not have mattered, but Franck's music depends for many of its effects on the cyclic form, and if one movement is relegated the whole balance of the scheme is upset. The Choir sang, among other items, Elgar's 'O wild west wind' and Cornelius's 'The surrender of the soul to the Everlasting Love.'—— The Festival Choral Society gave a performance of Mozart's Mass in C minor on March 23. Miss Agnes Nicholls, Miss Dorothy Moulton, Mr. Steuart Wilson, and Mr. Stewart Robertson were the soloists. Mr. Adrian C. Boult conducted.——The Leicester Orchestra wound up its season's activities with a symphony concert on March 25. Mr. Albert Sammons was the soloist, and played Elgar's Violin Concerto. The Orchestra has suffered some financial losses during recent years, and unless further support is forthcoming it is feared this season will have been its last.——Mr. G. D. Cunningham, the City organist, completed his series of Winter organ recitals on April 14. Several transcriptions of well-known works, the G minor Fantasia and Fugue of Bach, and the E major Choral of Franck, were included in the programme.——Mr. Appleby Matthews's annual Bach Festival, which was held during Holy Week, opened with a lecture by Mr. Rutland Boughton on Bach. Mr. Boughton is an enthusiast for Bach's music, and all who heard him speak must have caught some inspiration from his fervour. Three members of the Dolmetsch family attended the Festival on the second day, and played on their old instruments to an interested and even reverential audience. Probably some of this deference was awakened by Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch's patriarchal appearance. Mrs. Mabel Dolmetsch took part with her son Rudolf in music for viola da gamba and harpsichord, and Mr. Dolmetsch played the violin and clavichord. One of the delights of the concert was Mr. Rudolph Dolmetsch's playing of the 'Italian' Concerto on the harpsichord. The third day brought a performance of the 'St. John' Passion, with Mr. Charles Hedges singing the music of the Evangelist very beautifully. Those who see only dullness in Bach surely had cause to revise their opinion when, on the fourth day of the Festival, a jolly instrumental concert was given at the Midland Institute. Mr. Leon Goossens played the oboe in the little orchestra, and also contributed some solos with Mr. Matthews at the pianoforte. Mr. Paul Beard was heard to great advantage in the A minor Violin Concerto, and Miss Marjorie Wilks took the pianoforte part in the F minor Pianoforte Concerto. Mr. Matthews was the pianist in the A major Pianoforte Concerto, and Dr. Gordon Anderson took charge of the orchestra. The little-known B flat 'Brandenburg' Concerto received its first performance at Birmingham on this occasion. The usual performance of the 'St. Matthew' Passion was given on Good Friday. Miss Dorothy Silk, Miss Helen Anderton, Dr. Tom Goodey, Mr. Charles Hedges, and Mr. Hamilton Harris were the soloists. Mr. Appleby Matthews conducted all the performances.

BOURNEMOUTH. — The Musical Festival (noticed in another column) did not lead to any slackening of musical interests either before or afterwards, the regular series of symphony concerts being continued as usual. Glazounov's sixth Symphony was played on March 29.——Sir Dan Godfrey had the Municipal Choir under his baton on March 17, when the first performance at Bournemouth of 'King Olaf' was given at the Winter Gardens.——The Dolmetsch family gave a concert of ancient instrumental music at Holy Trinity Parish Hall a few days before Easter.

BRADFORD.—At the last subscription concert, Sir Hamilton Harty conducted the Bradford Festival Choral Society and the Hallé Orchestra in his cantata, 'The Mystic Trumpeter.' These concerts are to be continued next season in spite of the closing of St. George's Hall.

BRISTOL.—The thirty-seven-year-old Choral Society, under Mr. George Riseley, is steadily adding Bach to its repertory. Last year it was the B minor Mass; this year it was the 'St. Matthew' Passion, of which a well-prepared performance was given on March 20.——'The Kingdom' was heard for the first time at Bristol on March 27. The Bristol Philharmonic Society gave a sympathetic performance under Mr. Arnold Barter.

BUXTON.—The Buxton Philharmonic Society gave the most notable concert of its career on March 17. This was a performance of 'The Dream of Gerontius,' for which the resources of the choir were almost completely adequate. Mr. G. H. Lockett conducted.

COLCHESTER.—The three principal works performed by the Musical Society, under Mr. W. F. Kingdon, on March 25, were Elgar's 'The Banner of St. George,' Stanford's 'Songs of the Fleet,' and Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens.'

DAVENTRY.—That music exists here apart from 5XX was shown on March 23, when the Daventry Choral Society gave an excellent performance of 'A Tale of Old Japan,' under Mrs. E. A. Turll.

DERBY.—Parry's 'Job' was performed for the first time at Derby on April 7, under Dr. Coward. The singing of the Derby Choral Union was admirable in the oratorio and in the 'Sea' Symphony, which Dr. Vaughan Williams himself conducted.

DONCASTER.—Dvorák's 'Stabat Mater' was sung by the Musical Society, under Mr. H. A. Bennett, on March 18, with full orchestral accompaniment.

EASTBOURNE.—The Y.M.C.A. Choral Society, which was formed in the autumn of last year, recently made its first appearance in a performance of 'King Olaf' at the Winter Gardens and did credit to the training it has received under Dr. W. A. Hall.

FAVERSHAM.—A varied programme given on April 14 by the Faversham Institute Philharmonic Society, under Mr. W. J. Keech, included Brahms's 'Song of Destiny' and the two Psalms of Holst.

GLOUCESTER.—Sir Herbert Brewer conducted the Choral Society on March 25 in an expressive performance of 'The Dream of Gerontius,' at the Shire Hall. The programme also included the Finale of Brahms's first Symphony and Dr. Charles Wood's eight-part motet, 'Glory and Honour.'

HULL.—Glazounov's fourth Symphony was played under Sir Henry Wood, at a concert of the Philharmonic Society, on April 8.

KENDAL.—The Choral Society celebrated its diamond jubilee on March 27, and surpassed all its previous achievements with a performance of Vaughan Williams's 'Sea' Symphony. An admirable interpretation of the vocal and orchestral score was given under Mr. J. Smallwood Winder. Parry's 'Ode on St. Cecilia's Day' was among the smaller works in the programme.

LEEDS.—Under Dr. Moody the New Choral Society was joined by the Symphony Society of amateur players on March 17 in an out-of-the-way programme. This included Purcell's five-part 'Jehovah quam multi sunt hostes,' Mendelssohn's 'Why rage fiercely the heathen?' and 'Sing to the Lord,' and Fletcher's 'Witches' Carnival.'——The Symphony Society, conducted by Mr. Harold Mason, played Stanford's 'Suite of Ancient Dances' and a Haydn Symphony on March 21.——An arrangement by Vaughan Williams and Arnold Foster of Bach's 'Giant' Fugue was played by the Edward Maude Orchestra as part of a novel programme on March 27.

LIVERPOOL.—Brahms's 'Requiem' was sung by the Liverpool Welsh Choral Union on March 27, under Mr. Hopkin Evans.——The Philharmonic Choir brought its season to an end with a performance of Bach's 'St. Matthew' Passion, under Mr. Adrian C. Boult.

[We regret that our Manchester representative is unable to send notes this month—EDITOR.]

MANSFIELD.—The British Women's Symphony Orchestra invaded Mansfield recently, and played Parry's 'English' Suite and Mozart's E flat Symphony, under Dr. Malcolm Sargent.

MARLBOROUGH.—Bach's 'God so loved the world' has been sung at Dauntsey School, under Mr. J. A. Davison.——The Bach Choir of the Marlborough Choral and Orchestral Society has given four performances in the town of Bach's 'St. John' Passion, under Mr. Francis Hill, and one at Pewsey. Choir, orchestra, and soloists were all drawn from local sources.——The Wessex String Quartet has given Beethoven programmes at West Lavington and Marlborough.

NEWCASTLE. — Edgar Bainton's new choral work, 'The Dancing Seal,' was produced by Armstrong College Choral and Orchestral Societies, and the same programme included Holst's 'Ode to a Grecian Urn.'——Newcastle Oriana Choir, under Mr. Arthur Milner, gave a madrigalian and modern programme on March 24.——The B minor Mass was given by the Bach Choir, under Dr. Whittaker, on March 27.

NEWPORT, I.O.W.—The Borough of Newport Philharmonic Society gave a performance of Dvorák's 'At the Foot of the Cross,' at the Grand Theatre, on Good Friday. Mr. H. W. Stubbington conducted.

NOTTINGHAM.—Mr. Allen Gill conducted the Sacred Harmonic Society on March 24, in Mozart's 'Requiem' and Dvorák's 'Stabat Mater.' Excellent performances were given of both works.

OXSHOTT. — The Oxshott Choral Society, recently brought into being, sang 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast' at its first concert. Mr. J. Cornelius Hooker conducted.

SANDOWN.—Selections from 'Judas Maccabæus' formed the bulk of the programme given by the Sandown Choral Society on March 24, under Mr. E. A. English.

SHEFFIELD.—The long-expected Jubilee celebration of Dr. Henry Coward and the Sheffield Musical Union was held with the greatest success on March 25. A programme of 'Old Memories' was drawn from works that had been conspicuous in Dr. Coward's fifty years' association with the choir. Among the composers represented were Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mendelssohn, Rossini, and Sullivan, each with a chorus from an oratorio or cantata.

STOCKTON.—'A Tale of Old Japan' was performed on March 18, by the Choral Society, as part of a successful concert, under Mr. Wilmot Webster.

TAUNTON.—The reputation of the Choral Society was advanced by a creditable performance of 'The Dream of Gerontius' on Sunday, March 21, given under the direction of Mr. Reginald Ward.

WOLVERHAMPTON. — The Orchestral Society played Franck's Symphony on March 15, under Mr. T. E. Clarke.——Mr. Joseph Lewis conducted an impressive performance of 'The Dream of Gerontius' by the Musical Society on March 17.

WORCESTER.—The principal events of late March were a performance of 'Israel in Egypt' by the Festival Choral Society, and the playing of Elgar's 'Enigma' Variations by the Orchestral Society a few days later. Both concerts were conducted by Sir Ivor Atkins.

BOURNEMOUTH FESTIVAL

It was a shorter, more compact, and in some respects less ambitious programme that Sir Dan Godfrey had arranged for the Municipal Festival, which, for the fifth year in succession, was held at Bournemouth at Easter. But four Symphonies in four days, and other music ranging from madrigals to community singing, with the visit of a whole Round Table of musical knights, provided more than enough excuse for anyone who was tempted to snatch a holiday on the South Coast. The Symphonies were an interesting assortment: Sibelius's No. 1, Vaughan Williams's 'London,' Elgar's No. 1, and Beethoven's No. 5; and they reflect the general policy pursued by the Bournemouth musical authorities—viz., a foundation of the classics, with a superstructure of odd, out-of-the-way things like the Sibelius, with frequent opportunities for the hearing of native works. The Sibelius is grey, rather bleak, but forceful music, and, in spite of inequalities, is well worth occasional hearing. The Elgar did not come off very well, although the composer was conducting; its outward splendour had a distinctly hollow ring. The 'London' Symphony is one of the Bournemouth Orchestra's show pieces, in spite of a disparity between the number of the strings and the rest of the orchestra for a work of these dimensions. The best playing of the whole Festival was put into it. A curious misunderstanding was established between the orchestra and Sir Henry Wood when he came down to conduct a programme of Bach, Wagner, and some modern trifles. The fact that the rehearsal was held some days before the performance hardly seems enough to account for the band's reluctance to interpret music in a manner different from routine—a reluctance which led to bewilderment, missed leads, and panic. Of actual novelties there was only one, a fragment called 'Money Musk,' by the American, Leo Sowerby. This was a pleasing country dance tune, piquantly, yet not too luridly, treated. It should be a useful acquisition to an orchestra which has a repertory rich in light music yet always requiring renovation. The visitors to the Festival were Sir Alexander Mackenzie, who conducted, with a vigour and zest that were a joy to behold, his own Violin Concerto, of which Miss Isolde Menges played the solo part; Mr. Holst, Dame Ethel Smyth, Sir Herbert Brewer, and Mr. Maurice Besly, who all conducted various short works of their own; the English Singers, who took one whole concert; and last but not least, Sir Edward Elgar, who directed a complete programme of his own works, including, besides the A flat Symphony, the 'Cockaigne' Overture and the Violoncello Concerto, with Miss Harrison as soloist. The attendances were considerably larger than at previous Festivals, and it is satisfactory to record that a musical success has not meant in this instance a financial failure. F. H.

Music in Scotland

ALVA.—At its annual concert the Hillfoots Choral Society, conducted by Dr. A. F. Barnes, sang Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens,' 'King Harold,' a quite uninteresting work by Cunningham Woods, and some part-songs.

BATHGATE.—Bathgate Choral Union sang Brahms's 'Requiem.' At the close, the conductor, Mr. Hugh Somerville, was presented with a testimonial on the occasion of his retirement after thirty years' service.

DUNDEE.—Dundee Choral Union (Mr. Charles M. Cowe) sang Elgar's 'Caractacus' and Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens.'——Dundee Operatic Society (Mr. D. A. Christie) accomplished the unusual feat of presenting Gounod's 'Faust' and somebody else's 'The Geisha' on alternate evenings in one week.

EDINBURGH.—The Edinburgh Reid Orchestra played Schubert's big C major Symphony and the Elgar Violin Concerto (with Mr. Albert Sammons as soloist); joined forces with the Edinburgh Choral Union in a performance of the Brahms 'Requiem'; and wound up its season with an all-British programme which included Elgar's 'Cockaigne' Overture, Bantock's tone-poem, 'Dante and Beatrice' (conducted by the composer), and Prof. Tovey's own scholarly and dignified Symphony in D.——Prof. Tovey's Sunday concerts comprised a Reid Orchestra evening with the Schubert C major Symphony, the 'Hebrides' Overture, and Mozart's D minor Concerto (Miss Mary Grierson, pianoforte); a violin and pianoforte recital of works by Beethoven, Brahms, and Vivaldi, played by Adila Fachiri and Prof. Tovey; a 'cello and pianoforte recital of Sonatas by Bach, Brahms, Boccherini, and Röntgen, played by Mr. Bernard Beers and Prof. Tovey; a vocal and pianoforte recital by Mr. George Parker and Prof. Tovey, the vocal items covering a wide range of German Lieder and modern English song; a pianoforte recital by Prof. Tovey of large works by Beethoven, Schubert, and Schumann; and an interesting mixed programme which included a Mozart Violin Concerto, a Mozart Concerto for two pianofortes, a Horn Concertino by Weber, and arias by Bach and Gluck.——The series of five Reid historical concerts, given by Prof. Tovey at the University, included a number of classical String Quartets, 'Three Rhapsodies' by George Dyson, for string quartet, Dohnànyi's second Quintet for strings and pianoforte, Spohr's Double Quartet, Op. 87, Mendelssohn's Octet, Op. 20, and the Bach D minor Concerto for cembalo and strings.——The Edinburgh Bach Society (Mr. Douglas Dickson) performed the cantata, 'Aus tiefer Noth,' the Motet, 'Jesu, meine Freude,' and other items.——Mr. R. De La Haye's Select Choir, a welcome newcomer, gave a specially interesting programme, which included Ernest Walker's ballad, 'A Hymn to Dionysius,' Holst's Old English ballad, 'King Estmere,' and the Bach cantata, 'My spirit was in heaviness.'——The Edinburgh Amateur Orchestral Society (Mr. Ralph T. Langdon) made a fair appearance in Haydn's 'Oxford' Symphony and several shorter pieces, but gave some unhappy moments in the Schumann Pianoforte Concerto.——The most ambitious effort of the St. Andrew Amateur Orchestral Society (Mr. De La Haye) at its forty-second annual concert was an orchestral arrangement of a Bach ('48') Prelude and Fugue in G minor.——The most substantial item at the thirty-ninth annual concert of the Leith Amateur Orchestral Society (Mr. W. Gilchrist Cochrane) was a Haydn Symphony.——The orchestra (a hundred strong) of the Edinburgh Highland Reel and Strathspey Society (Mr. Ian C. Menzies) gave its forty-fifth annual concert.——An interesting event was the visit of the L. & N.E. Railway Society's massed male-voice choir of three hundred and orchestra of a hundred, which made a remarkably good appearance under the baton of Col. Johnson Galloway, a conspicuous feature being the quality of the wind instruments.——At the annual pupils' concert of the Edinburgh Choral Union, selections from 'Judas Maccabæus' and part-songs were sung, Mr. Archibald Russell directing.——The Leith Choral Society (Mr. Christie Jupp) presented Coleridge-Taylor's 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast,' Elgar's 'Bavarian Highlands' Suite, &c.——Mr. Godfrey's Choir sang Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens' and part-songs by Elgar, Stanford, and others. Owing to the great preponderance of women in the choir, the part-songs for female voices were much the most successful.——The Edinburgh Catholic Choral Society (Mr. W. B. Moodie) sang Haydn's 'Imperial' Mass and some lesser but interesting works.——Mr. James Moodie's Choir of seventy voices gave a concert of madrigals and part-songs.——St. Serf's Musical Association (Mr. Paterson Lamb) sang Haydn's 'Spring' and Stanford's 'Phaudrig Crohoore.'——The Edinburgh Society of Organists arranged a charity performance of 'The Messiah' with a combined choir of three hundred. The Edinburgh Amateur Orchestral Society assisted, and Mr. T. H. Collinson conducted.——Mrs. Kennedy Fraser gave one of her distinguished recitals of Hebridean song, and demonstrated the inexhaustibility of her treasury by presenting thirteen new songs in a programme of twenty-four items. Miss Beatrice Parker gave a vocal recital, and Miss Joyce Warrack and Miss Kathleen Cooper combined in a vocal and pianoforte recital.

GLASGOW.—An impressive performance of the 'St. Matthew' Passion was given by the Glasgow Bach Society in Glasgow Cathedral, with a double choir of eighty voices and a double orchestra of forty players. Mr. T. J. Pickering, Aberystwyth, sang the exacting part of the Narrator with distinction, and Mr. Francis Harford, London, that of Jesus, with moving fervour but frequent insecurity of intonation. The choir sang the Jew choruses with dramatic verve and the more reflective numbers with fine expressiveness. The performance was directed with quiet but firm authority by Mr. J. Michael Diack, who founded the Glasgow Bach Choir twenty years ago and, having decided to retire, was now making his last appearance as conductor.——At the annual meeting of the Glasgow Choral and Orchestral Union it was reported that the Scottish Orchestra had played at sixty concerts during the season. The Glasgow concerts under the Union had consisted of thirteen Tuesday concerts (two choral and eleven orchestral), sixteen popular concerts (one choral, one choro-orchestral, and fourteen orchestral), and the New Year's Day 'Messiah' performance. Seven concerts had been given under the ægis of the Glasgow Municipality, three popular and four for school children.——The Scottish Orchestra had fulfilled thirteen engagements at Edinburgh, two at Aberdeen, two at Dundee, and one each at Alloa, Dunfermline, Falkirk, Helensburgh, Paisley, and Perth. The Guarantee Fund amounted to £4,303, and the season had resulted in a loss of £769, entailing a call of 3*s.* 6*d.* per £ on the guarantors. At Edinburgh, Messrs. Paterson, having experienced a substantial loss for several seasons back on the Scottish Orchestra concerts promoted there by them, had appealed for and secured from the Edinburgh public for next season's concerts a Guarantee Fund of £2,000. It was announced that M. Vaclav Talich had been engaged as sole conductor of the Scottish Orchestra for next season, and would conduct all the Glasgow, Edinburgh, and other concerts.——Glasgow University Choral Society (Mr. A. M. Henderson) gave a concert of 16th-century madrigals, motets, and modern part-songs. The most interesting item historically in a varied programme was Haydn's little-known motet, 'Insanæ et vanæ curæ.'——The Glasgow Y.M.C.A. Choir chose for its closing concert Mendelssohn's 'Elijah,' of which a good performance was secured by its experienced conductor, Mr. Hugh Hunter. Wellington Church Choir chose 'Elijah' for its annual oratorio performance. Mr. M'Innes Beaton conducted for Mr. Fred Turner, who was at the organ.——Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch, assisted by his wife and his son Rudolph, gave a charming recital of old-time music to the members of the British Music Society, and added greatly to the entertainment of the audience by his piquant and provocative criticisms of things old and new.——Mr. M.-D. Calvocoressi lectured to the same Society on 'Moussorgsky,' Miss Amy Samuel (vocalist) and Mr. John Horner (pianoforte) supplying the illustrations.——Mr. Erik Chisholm, a young Glasgow pianist and composer, gave a pianoforte recital under the auspices of the Russo-Scottish Society, and later played solos at the Glasgow Orpheus Choir concerts. Mr. Chisholm's gifts are as yet rather undisciplined, and in particular his own compositions invited most of the heavy criticism meted out to them by the press.——The attractive programme of a chamber concert given by the Glasgow Bach Society included the Orchestral Suite in D major, two Trio-Concertos in D major and A minor respectively, for flute, violin, pianoforte, and strings, two Chorale-Preludes arranged for string quartet by Harry Hodge, and a Byrd Fantasia for string sextet. The soloists were Miss Bessie Spence (violin), Mr. Alfred Halstead (flute), and Mr. Philip Halstead (pianoforte). The duties of conductor were shared by Mr. J. Michael Diack and Mr. H. F. Bisset.——The most attractive item at the second concert of the Glasgow Amateur Orchestral Society (Mr. Peebles Conn) was the Handel-Hamilton Harty 'Water Music' Suite. Mr. David F. M'Callum, a brilliant young West of Scotland violinist, essayed the Mozart D major Concerto with success, and Miss Nellie Gordon sang Handel's 'Lusinghe più care' and a Dowling air with fluency and good style.——The Glasgow Orpheus Choir gave its annual 'March' concert in St. Andrew's Hall on four successive evenings, and gave also concerts at Perth, Falkirk, Dundee (two), Edinburgh (two), Aberdeen, Brechin, Blairgowrie, and London (two).——The Glasgow Philharmonic Orchestra of fifty players, conducted by Mr. F. O. Sheard, presented at its thirteenth annual concert Haydn's 'Clock' Symphony, and works by Beethoven, Mozart, and others.—— At Glasgow University, Mr. Percy Gordon, musical critic of the Glasgow Herald, gave four illustrated lectures on 'Expression in Music,' under the auspices of the Workers' Educational Association.——Choral concerts were given by the William Morris Choir (Mr. James B. Houston), the St. George Co-operative Choir (Mr. William Wilson), the Glasgow Lyric Choir (Mr. Purcell J. Mansfield), the Glasgow Corporation Tramways Choir (Mr. Wilfred Phillips), the Western Choral Union (Mr. A. M. Ross), the Ingram Choir (Mr. William Nisbet), and Mr. Thorpe Davie's Choir.——Miss Ruth Skene, a young Glasgow soprano, gave an interesting recital of songs ranging from Bach to Kennedy Fraser.——The outstanding feature of the Glasgow Grand Opera Society's performance of Gounod's 'Romeo and Juliet' (conductor, Mr. Hutton Malcolm) at King's Theatre was the original and artistic staging contrived by the producer, Mr. Parry Gunn.——Three Glasgow musicians, Miss Helen Gillespie (vocalist), Miss Helen Young (violin), and Miss Nellie Justice (pianoforte), combined forces in a vocal and instrumental recital.——De Groot and the Savoy Orpheans visited Glasgow and Edinburgh. How far they call for reference in these notes may be left to the reader; the audiences were large, and were obviously unfamiliar with their surroundings.

GREENOCK.—The programme of the annual concert of the Greenock Orchestral Society (Mr. Peebles Conn) included Schubert's Symphony No. 4, Beethoven's 'Coriolanus' Overture, and lighter items.

HELENSBURGH.—At the fourth and last Helensburgh Subscription concert the Hungarian String Quartet made its first public appearance in Scotland, playing Quartets by Mozart and Tchaikovsky, and, with Mr. Wilfrid Senior (now happily recovered from serious illness) as pianist, the Franck Quintet.

KELSO.—Kelso Choral Union sang Handel's 'Judas Maccabæus,' Mrs. J. F. Brown conducting.

KILWINNING.—At the last of the Kilwinning Subscription concerts the Rosé String Quartet, from Vienna, played Quartets by Haydn and Cherubini, and were joined by Miss Ailie Cullen as pianist in the Schumann Quintet. Miss Nan Donaldson, Perth, sang acceptably a number of Lieder.

KIRKCALDY.—Kirkcaldy Musical Society sang Elgar's 'Caractacus,' Mr. Charles M. Cowe, Dundee, conducting. At the close, Mr. Cowe, who has long been one of Scotland's outstanding choral conductors, was presented with a case of silver and a cheque on retiring after twenty-five years' service with the Society.

PAISLEY.—Paisley Choral Union, well handled by Dr. W. Rigby, gave a performance of Elgar's 'King Olaf.'

STIRLING.—Stirling Choral Society celebrated its sixtieth anniversary with a performance of 'Elijah' which probably eclipsed anything in its previous history. The choir sang with confidence and expressiveness, the fullness and quality of tone (particularly in the soprano section) were satisfying, the accompaniments were excellently played by a first-class string orchestra from Glasgow, supported with organ, and the whole performance was conspicuously well controlled and directed by Mr. H. G. Barrett, Glasgow, who has been remarkably successful in revivifying the Society.

The London School of Dalcroze Eurhythmics will hold a Summer Vacation Course (men and women) at Westfield College, Kidderpore Avenue, Hampstead, from August 3-14. Full particulars from the Director, L.S.D.E., 23, Store Street, W.C.1.

Dr. Eaglefield Hull's 'Modern Harmony' is shortly to be published in a German edition by the Verlagsanstalt Deutscher Tönkunstler, translated by Gertrude Hartmann.

A new organ was dedicated at Bethel United Methodist Church, Bradford, on March 20, Mr. Charles Stott giving the opening recital.

Music in Wales

ABERYSTWYTH.—On March 18, the hundred and ninety-eighth concert was held at the College Hall, when Mr. Charles Draper (clarinet) and Mr. Paul Draper (bassoon) were soloists. The last-named played 'Scherzo' (Weisenborn), Mr. C. Draper being heard in 'Concertino' (Weber). Schubert's Octet in F, Op. 166, for strings, woodwind, and horn, was also given. A group of songs by Ravel, sung by Miss Katie Griffiths, and the first movement from the same composer's Pianoforte Trio—played by Mr. Charles Clements (pianoforte), Mr. Kenneth Harding (violin), and Mr. Ronald Harding ('cello)—were included in the programme.

CARDIFF.—At the University College chamber concert, on March 20, the College Trio played Hine's 'Suite des Chants Bretons.' The vocalist was Jessie Taylor, and W. H. Foxall was the violinist.——On Good Friday the Cardiff Musical Society gave a performance of Brahms's 'Requiem' at Park Hall, assisted by the Cardiff B.B.C. Orchestra, under the conductorship of Mr. Warwick Braithwaite.

CARMARTHEN.—On March 17, at Water Street Chapel, a performance was given of 'St. Paul,' Mr. D. Tawe Jones conducting.——The boys of Queen Elizabeth Schools gave a performance of 'H.M.S. Pinafore' on March 26. Mr. E. Williams and Mr. J. Evans shared the conducting.

MERTHYR.—At the Miners' Hall, on March 25, a performance of the 'Gipsy Queen' was given by Ainon Choral Society, Mr. H. J. Oats conducting.

NEWPORT. — The Choral Society performed Elgar's 'The Kingdom,' on March 25, under the direction of Mr. Arthur E. Sims. This was the first time that the oratorio had been heard at Newport. Everything was done to make the occasion worthy of the music. The choir knew the work thoroughly, and the score was in the hands of professionals from the chief orchestras of London. The soloists were Miss Ida Cooper, Miss Rose Myrtil, Mr. Frank Titterton, and Mr. Frederick Woodhouse.

TONYPANDY. — On March 18 the Ebenezer Welsh (Cong.) Church Choir gave a performance of 'The Hymn of Praise' and 'The Revenge.' The artists were Miss Flook, Miss Helen Williams, and Mr. Walter Glynne. Mr. Rees Jones conducted, and Mr. David Jones presided at the organ.

TREDEGAR.—On March 16, at the Workmen's Hall, a performance was given of Dr. Parry's 'Blodwen.' The principals were Mesdames E. M. Lewis, L. Owen, B. W. Morgan, Messrs. Harry Lewis, James Evans, and James Edwards. Mr. J. D. Evans conducted, and Madame S. G. Davies was producer.

WREXHAM.—At the Drill Hall, on March 13, the Philharmonic Society gave Sullivan's 'The Golden Legend,' Dr. Hopkin Evans conducting. The principals were Mesdames Rosa Alba and Edith Rudall, Mr. John Adams and Mr. Harold Williams. Mr. F. Pullein was accompanist, and the orchestra was under the leadership of Mr. W. Whittaker.

Music in Ireland

BELFAST.—At the last concert of the Philharmonic Society's season, on March 19, at Ulster Hall, the programme contained Elgar's 'King Olaf' and 'Enigma' Variations, both works being admirably interpreted by the choir and orchestra under the direction of Mr. Godfrey Brown. The soloists were Miss Stiles-Allen, Mr. Tudor Davies, and Mr. Harold Williams. Mr. J. H. MacBratney was the accompanist. It is gratifying to chronicle a large and appreciative audience.——On March 20, the last, for the season, of the Ulster Hall Popular Concerts, proved very enjoyable. The chief items were selections by the Royal Ulster Constabulary Band, under Mr. George Ferguson, with songs and monologues. Capt. Brennan is to be congratulated on providing admirable entertainments for Saturday nights, and mention must also be made of Mr. Jack M'Keown as accompanist.——The Belfast Masonic Charities annual concert was held at Ulster Hall on March 26, and a goodly sum was realised. Agreeable selections were played by the Queen's Island Band, under Bro. George Dean.——The Portadown Musical Society gave a concert in the Town Hall on March 24, under the conductorship of Mr. S. B. P. Smith, and Lisburn Choral Society's concert, on March 26, under Mr. John Vine, drew a large house.——The O'Mara Opera Company was the attraction at the Opera House during Holy Week. Previously this Company had had a successful fortnight at the Cork Opera House.

DUBLIN.—On March 25, at the Abbey Theatre, in aid of the Sunshine Home, Stillorgan, the Abbey Players presented 'Deirdre' at a matinée performance, followed by a musical programme admirably interpreted by Miss Jean Nolan, Mrs. Boxwell, Mr. Joseph O'Reilly, and Dr. F. W. Starkie, with Mrs. Cecil Watson at the pianoforte.——Miss Culwick's Choral Society and Miss Petite O'Hara's Orchestra gave a fine performance of 'The Messiah' at the Metropolitan Hall, on March 25, in aid of the City of Dublin Cancer Hospital. The soloists included Miss Lilian Whittaker, Miss Agnes O'Kelly, Mr. T. Gill Wallis, and Mr. A. J. O'Farrell.——On April 4, at the Theatre Royal, at an 'Easter Week Commemoration Concert,' Mr. Peter Dawson, Miss Florrie Ryan, Miss Lily O'Byrne, Mr. Gerard Crofts, and others, supplied a diversified programme.

WATERFORD.—A good performance of 'St. Paul,' under the direction of Mr. J. W. Ellis, was given in the Town Hall on March 26, and the programme was relayed from Waterford to 2RN. The result was excellent.

Musical Notes from Abroad

GERMANY

OPERA AT DARMSTADT AND DRESDEN

The fact that the little opera-house of Darmstadt essayed the task of giving the first German performance of some Italian operas, aroused the attention of the music-lover. This theatre, which had once been maintained by the munificence of a prince, now leads a more modest existence at the expense of the State. It is not, of course, very easy for the intendant, Ernst Legal, to maintain the artistic level of this stage with the means now at his disposal. He cannot satisfy his public by always representing old things, but, with a view to stimulating his patrons' interest, must proceed to the performance of new works. Thus we had the production of the three Goldonian comedies by Francesco Malipiero, and, on March 24, of the 'Venetian Convent,' by Alfredo Casella. It is not the first time, as everybody knows, that Goldoni has been set to music. A recent attempt, which met with a certain success, was that of Wolf-Ferrari. Malipiero, who is averse from opera in the popular sense of the word, uses a different method of composing these comedies from that of his fellow-countryman, and in writing for voices he most naturally turns aside from conventional ideas of singing. Such a scheme is facilitated by the character of the pieces. Malipiero's care is to interpret the scene, and to sketch the true Venetian types. Conversation is never obstructed. It proceeds easily as the poet had planned it. The most economic use of the musical motive, not without a short allusion to the Stravinskian manner, enables Malipiero to carry his own intentions, and those of Goldoni, to the desired end. Maybe such a subordination of method leaves the average opera-goer dissatisfied, but the aristocratic art of Malipiero has never before been so well displayed. It need hardly be added that the performance lagged behind the composer's demands. Venice could not be realised at Darmstadt—the local colour was missing. So it was only natural that the public accorded a kinder reception to Casella's Ballet, which, in its pantomimic part, is full of variety, giving the musician an opportunity for employing more glowing colours and strong rhythm. Casella, like the clever composer he is, avails himself of all that is modern, but never forgets that we live in a period when a kind of reactionary modernity is more the fashion than extreme radical tendencies. Stravinsky's use of wind instruments has evidently exercised a deep impression also upon Casella. This ballet proved much to the taste of the public. Casella, who is looking forward to more ballet performances in German opera-houses, is beginning to become popular in this country.

Whereas Darmstadt is inclined to be more provincial, the Dresden State Opera has a metropolitan standard. Fritz Busch, as general-music-director, is ambitious to further modern music there. After having initiated a revival of Verdi's 'La forza del Destino,' in a new arrangement by Franz Werfel, he has allowed the young German composer, Kurt Weill, pupil of Busoni and Philip Jarnach, to speak for the first time to the public and the critics in his opera 'Der Protagonist' (March 27). Kurt Weill, who is twenty-five years old, is already fully conscious of the demands of to-day. Loudly professing his affection for opera, he does not, he assures us, consider it from the financial point of view, but desires only to express in this form of art his inner feelings. Though an intellectual, he betrays the instinct of the true dramatic composer in turning to George Kaiser, the dramatist of European reputation, in whom he hopes to find a congenial partner in his enterprise. What this writer had himself refuted as a piece of spoken drama, he maintains is apt for setting to music. The problem of the dramatist lies in the illusory power of the actor, who, by the raging fury of interpretation, is driven to kill his own sister, whom he dearly loves. This scene has been transported into the Shakespearean age. When Weill made up his mind to compose Kaiser's drama, he apparently forgot that the sonority of the words (which is stronger than his true feelings) was hostile to music. So he is at his best when, in two pantomimes included in the piece, he has freed himself from this tyranny and abandons himself to his imaginative power. It is here that he reveals his real dramatic talent. A certain monotony in the use of half Stravinskian, half Schönbergian means cannot be denied. When will young composers understand that the human voice must be restored to its leading part in opera? No other method commands the same effect. The question is, whether or no a modern melodic line can be found. On the whole, we must take Weill's opera as a proof of talent which, we are sure, will bear fruit in the future. The Dresden State Opera was unsparing in its efforts adequately to present 'Der Protagonist.' The performance occupied an hour and a quarter, and met with sustained applause from the younger generation present. The Dresden public, of course, has nothing to do with these experiments. For it Richard Strauss means the utmost modernity.

'COSÌ FAN TUTTE' AT THE BERLIN MUNICIPAL OPERA HOUSE

Nothing less Mozartian can be imagined than the huge building at Charlottenburg devoted to the representation of opera. But that is no stumbling-block in the way of Bruno Walter, who, as he had done at Munich, gives Mozart due prominence in the repertory. How many times have we heard that 'Così fan tutte' suffers from an impossible libretto undermining the effect of the whole piece. Well, Walter has undertaken the impossible and, by the force of Mozart's music as well as by excellent staging, has made the work so attractive for the public that it draws crowded houses. How Walter loves and understands Mozart, and makes him effective by the insight of his orchestral interpretations, need not be set forth here. Grete Stuckgold, who had been newly appointed to the Opera House, proved a great surprise. She had appeared as Elisabeth in 'Tannhäuser,' and had given us a convincing impersonation of a girl of sixteen years, but as Fiordiligi she reached a still higher standard by her fine singing and by the spontaneity of her acting. Maria Olszewska, Lotte Schöne, and Josef Burgwinkel did much to supply the spirit of Mozart. The ensemble playing, directed by Josef Geis, of Munich, was perfect. The decorations, by Emil Prætorius, helped to complete the impression of the whole. I do not remember having heard 'Così fan tutte' in so satisfying a manner as under the present régime.

ADOLF WEISSMANN.

HOLLAND

With a strong and constant background of the classics, novelties are becoming more and more the order of the day. Of these, we have lately had first hearings of Loeffler's 'Pagan' Symphony, and a highly-developed programme work, 'Visionen,' based on Michelangelo and Dante by the German, Hermann Hans Wetzler—both works, however, being roundly condemned as mere experiments of no musical value. That they each have moments of beauty, along with a small number of points of significance, is not denied, but on the whole critics and public were agreed that it was a mistake on the part of their honoured and beloved conductor, Mengelberg, to have presented these examples. Mengelberg's own popularity increases with every visit he makes abroad, or perhaps it would be more correct to say with each return he makes to his native land. The honorary doctorate bestowed on him by an American University has caused much gratification, though it has also called forth cynical remarks on the fact that it has been left to a foreign body to be the first to show, in this form, appreciation of his work. It should be said that Wetzler's 'Visionen' was conducted by the composer himself—with energy, though with little pliability. A pleasant work by the Dutchman, Emile von Brucken Fock, entitled 'Preghiera,' formed part of the same programme.

The Utrecht Municipal Orchestra, under Evert Cornelis, has introduced the first Symphony of Karl Weigl, formerly pupil of and assistant to Mahler. The work shows many influences, but is musicianly and not altogether lacking in individuality of style.

The International Society for Contemporary Music has recently given a concert the programme of which consisted of Goossens's 'Five Impressions of a Holiday,' Sonatas for 'cello by Kodály and Pijper, one for clarinet by Honegger, another for trumpet, horn, and trombone by Poulenc, and Stravinsky's 'Eight easy pieces for four hands.' Of these, the work of Pijper made the greatest impression, for it is strong and independent in character, and although at times its ideas may be somewhat difficult to follow, it is not eccentric for the mere sake of being so. With the assistance of Bertha Seroen and Hendrik van Oort, Pijper has also given a recital devoted to Dutch songs written during the last fifty years. It was part of a scheme arranged by the Society Kunst aan het Volk for the purpose of showing the 'forms of Dutch art' in that period. For this purpose it was scarcely comprehensive enough, and omitted some of the outstanding examples. Apart from this—that is, as a mere song recital—it was pleasant and interesting.

The Residentie Orchestra has not lately done much of a striking character. Apart from classical representations, the work of greatest interest has been Johan Wagenaar's Sinfonietta, in which the composer's delightful sense of the orchestra, and his graceful phraseology, appear at their best.

A programme of the Dutch Chamber Orchestra, at The Hague, conducted by Anthony Bernard, included Purcell's 'Ayres for the Theatre'; a new Suite for oboe solo and orchestra, by Sigtenhorst Meyer; a Bach Clavier Concerto; a Suite for strings and three flutes, by Dina Appeldoorn; and a Concerto Grosso, by Ernest Bloch. Unfortunately, the conductor was still in a convalescent state after an attack of influenza, a disability which probably accounted for a criticism of his work as 'amateurish.' As I was at Tilburg at the time, I was unable to attend this concert. Reference to Tilburg (see p. 439) impels mention of an excellent performance, under H. E. Hoppenbrouwers, of an oratorio, 'Mary's Seven Joys,' by the local composer, Willem van Kalmthout. The work itself is well written, and contains much that is of a finely expressive character, but it tends to be conservative in style, and, in comparison with some other of the same composer's Church music, would appear to be an early and derivative study. The choir, drawn together for the occasion, sang with such vigour and expressive power as to suggest that with a more permanent association much might be done.

In various towns, particularly at Amsterdam and The Hague, during Lent and Holy Week, performances of the Bach Passions have been given. Where the 'St. Matthew' Passion was too long or too difficult, that according to 'St. Luke' has taken its place.

Rotterdam is to have a new concert-hall replete with up-to-date conveniences, and accommodation for choir and orchestra and an audience of two thousand.

HERBERT ANTCLIFFE.

ROME

HONEGGER'S 'DAVID'

The last of Bernardino Molinari's choral concerts at the Augusteo (the Mausoleum of Augustus) this season, on April 4, consisted of Malipiero's 'San Francesco d'Assisi,' and Arthur Honegger's so-called 'symphonic psalm,' 'King David.' The list of the other choral works performed this season may interest English readers. They have been: Bach's Mass in B minor and 'St. Matthew' Passion, Berlioz's 'Requiem,' and Handel's 'Israel in Egypt.'

These concerts are at five o'clock on Sunday afternoon. The hall, which is built in the upper part of the vast and old mausoleum, is large, and suggests to the Londoner an Albert Hall on a rather reduced scale. The orchestra is placed on one level, and the choir on the rising rostra behind, with the soloists among the singers; and not awkwardly placed (as in London) on a level with the conductor, or even behind his back.

'King David,' which was new to Rome, was sung in French. 'Symphonic psalm' is an unnecessary description of a work which might be quite simply called an oratorio. There is nothing in the composition of the text to disturb those who are familiar with the Biblical oratorios of Parry, Stainer, and Costa. The spirit of the music, let us hasten to add, is remarkably different.

The work covers a big field of action, but this is done expeditiously by the reducing of the usual recitatives to simple spoken recitations. In the earlier part of the oratorio the impression is, indeed, made that the recitations are the main matter and that the musical numbers—so short are they—are mere interpolations. As the thing gathers weight the music comes forward, and sometimes accompanies the narrator—as in the scene of the Witch of Endor, and a little later on (with an uncommon and really blood-curdling effect) in David's lament for Saul and Jonathan, in which the Oriental wailing of the women's voices mingles.

The narration was entrusted here to the eminent French actor, Jacques Copeau. One cannot exaggerate the share he had in the success (the success was undoubted) of the work. His art was a reminder of the beauty of formal rhetorical speech. It was admirable, how he rose from a very quiet start to impassioned eloquence.

Since we have touched on one excellence of the performance let it be said how fine the whole was. Molinari is a good man. He did not show off. But he had a firm grip of this particularly thorny score, and he was sparing nothing to do well by the composer. He had inspired choir and orchestra with the same spirit. The choir appeared to feel downright enthusiasm for a work, the style of the choral writing of which would excite antipathy in the average choral singer's breast. To sum up, it was a festival performance, no less.

And the music itself? Well, it is something to be heard. It affords a sensation, a nouveau frisson. Honegger has written his 'King David' in utter obliviousness of the traditions of complacent Protestant Biblical oratorio. He is sprung (it is said), like Mendelssohn, of the branch of Shem, but there appears the least possible relationship between the elder master's decorous, Sunday-go-to-meeting Israelites and Honegger's Dervishes.

'King David,' then, is exciting rather than homely in the older oratorio manner. The older oratorio insisted that the men of the immemorial Semitic chronicle were to all intents and purposes like the inhabitants of Norwich and Gloucester. Honegger tries to seize on their differences; he aims at bringing out the picturesqueness of a long bygone, turbulent, Asiatic tribe. The joyful psalms are shouted with savage glee; the plaintive ones are howled. David's dance before the Ark is an orgy. Partly because of the composer's deliberate intention, partly because of his peculiar musical language, the common humanity of the story is diminished in the brilliance of the exoticism. We are uncommonly interested by this wild tribe and its rites. We are thrilled by its unbridled rage. We are never once moved.

However little you may love Honegger, the man's ability is not to be denied. He may not say what you would desire to be said, but he says what he means—consummately. 'King David' is fairly cacophonous, of course. The cacophony has its sense. It would be absurd to want it otherwise. What is most curious is how completely the young master avoids lusciousness. You would think that this hard energy could not be kept up long—that sooner or later there must be a fall into easy, luscious ways. But the fierce dryness is maintained, and at the end one is convinced that this style does truly come from the composer's nature, and is no mere Cocteauesque affectation. One does not foresee a very long life for this 'David.' It is too one-sided a picture. A mere sheikh; not a universal man! But while its life lasts it should be merry. It would make a rattling disturbance at a somnolent English festival.

The soloists at the Rome performance were Georges Jouatte, a dry and displeasing French tenor, and two clever women, Mesdames Laura Pasini and Mildred Anderson. The Roman audience was thoroughly interested and appreciative.

IACHINO'S 'GIOCONDO'

At the Costanzi Theatre a new opera, 'Giocondo e il suo Re,' by Carlo Iachino, was produced on April 7. It was new—that is, to Rome. It was the prize opera in a Government competition in 1923, and was first produced at Milan in 1924. The subject comes from Ariosto, and is worked out in three smartly-written Acts by Gioacchino Forzano. Its humorous complaint is that all women are faithless. Giocondo, in Act 1, catches his wife red-handed, or is about to—but he will not be vengeful, for he is too fond, and cannot do without her. In Act 2 he is at the Court of the King of his fairyland country. The King is preposterously self-satisfied, but Giocondo ruins his happiness by revealing a shameful amour of the Queen. Again, no gross revenge. The two luckless husbands will ride forth into the world, hoping for fairer fortune in the humbler ways of life. But in Act 3 they are both simultaneously deceived by an innkeeper's daughter, of whose favour each had too easily felt sure.

A cynical, lively, conventional plot, then. But Iachino was hardly the musician for it. The heartless, flippant story wanted witty and scintillating music. Iachino's art is a slender growth in the shadow of Puccini. The sentimentality of Butterfly and Mimi is his star. He has misused a neat libretto in 'Giocondo.' In Act 1 he actually commented on Giocondo's matrimonial misadventure appassionata, with yearning expressiveness. This was just the wrong start for a farcical situation. A romance for the tenor (Manfredo Polverosi), in Act 2, pleased the public, which treated the whole thing with great indulgence. The performance under Edoardo Vitale was reasonably good. The King was sung by an excellent bass-baritone, Luigi Rossi-Morelli.

'KHOVANSTCHINA'

There has been an interesting revival at the Costanzi of Moussorgsky's 'Khovanstchina,' an opera which in all respects falls much below 'Boris Godunov,' yet still has a noble largeness and unconventional interest. Rome has taken to it with remarkable warmth, although the performance here is a shade tame if it is compared with the 'Khovanstchina' of the old days at Drury Lane.

The Costanzi has some excellent Russian singers for the chief parts, notably Sigismund Zalevski, who was reminiscent of Chaliapin as Dositheus, and Eugene Sdanosky, who was a capital, truculent Prince Khovansky. The chorus made some attempts to be Russian, but relapsed frequently into the detached attitude of conventional operatic choruses.

C.

TORONTO

March is the month of the Mendelssohn Choir, and therefore, to Toronto, one of the most significant months of the season. At the Festival this year there was severed a link which has been tried and tested even at New York. I refer, of course, to the association of the Choir with the Philadelphia Orchestra. A new ally has, however, luckily been discovered, which, judging by public enthusiasm, the attitude of critics, and box-office receipts, has done the Choir nothing but good.

The Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, under its quiet, refined, dignified conductor, Fritz Reiner, came here practically unknown, won over completely about ten thousand people, including the members of the Choir itself, and demonstrated that a body of symphonic musicians, highly-trained and specialised in virtuoso work, can acquire the art of truly sympathetic accompaniment. This quality may be said to be rare. The outstanding successes were undoubtedly Strauss's 'Till Eulenspiegel,' by the orchestra, and Ferrari's 'Nuova Vita,' for chorus and orchestra. One of the programmes is given as a sample: National Anthem, arr. by Stanford; 'The Wanderer's Storm Song,' Strauss; Overture, 'Fidelio,' Beethoven; 'Sweet Honey-sucking Bees,' Wilbye; 'Go, Song of Mine,' Elgar; 'The Twa Sisters,' Rootham; 'Out of a Silence,' Rathbone; Three Carols for Chorus and Orchestra, (a) 'Tyrley Tyrlow,' (b) 'Balulalow,' (c) 'The Sycamore Tree,' Peter Warlock; 'Till Eulenspiegel,' Strauss; 'A Calm Sea and a Prosperous Voyage,' Beethoven. As I write, the Mendelssohn Choir has just completed three concerts at Cincinnati, and, according to native critics, that particular part of the United States is now realising how little it knew about choral singing. Choral and vocal discipline and command of the English language seem to be the most heavily stressed points in the reports.

Our own Symphony Orchestra season has terminated with two very successful concerts—the first presenting some cleverly arranged Variations upon an original Theme, by T. J. Crawford (organist of our own St. Paul's Church), and a distinguished French pianist, Rata Prevost, in the Chopin F minor Concerto. At the second were enjoyed the Mendelssohn 'Midsummer Night's Dream' Overture, 'Transitions,' by Arthur Friedheim, and the Berlioz 'Hungarian March.' Madame Elizabeth Campbell was the guest soloist.

Kreisler gave his annual recital to a capacity audience, and provided a treat for violin enthusiasts in the form of the little-known (nowadays) 'Kreutzer' Sonata. And that is all for the present.

H. C. F.

VIENNA

AN OPERATIC PSEUDO-NOVELTY

The position of a director with the Vienna Staatsoper is not an enviable one. Between the Scylla of public indolence towards new operas on one side and the Charybdis of the press-campaign clamouring for operatic novelties on the other, it is almost impossible for him to find a favourable channel. Moreover, the very critics who bewail the absence of operatic premières are most prone to condemn whatever is produced in this realm by the Staatsoper, as being either too radical or too conventional.

But the première of Eduard Poldini's 'Carnaval Wedding,' at the Staatsoper (February 22), surely did not constitute one of Franz Schalk's heroic deeds. It was palpably staged for the purpose of providing a novelty of wide popular appeal and the consequent box-office reaction. That the piece failed is not the fault of Schalk, who decided to mount it only after some hesitation, and under the pressure of the same journals which lately had condemned it so thoroughly. No pains had been spared to give a fine production. The cast, which included Carl Aagaard Oestvig, Maria Rajol, Alfred Jerger, and Rosette Anday, enlisted also some of the best Viennese singers (according to post-war standards, of course), and the staging was very tasteful. Yet the opera proved disappointing, and entirely failed to duplicate its enormous success at Budapest, where Poldini is proclaimed as the Smetana of his race and 'A Carnaval Wedding' is compared to 'The Bartered Bride.' Poldini, far-famed for his salon compositions, writes indubitably music of the 19th century, and of a sort which approaches operetta. Only one well-built ensemble—a quartet in Act 2—stands out from a wealth of obvious and unoriginal melodies; and only in the Czardas rhythms so profusely distributed throughout his score, and strongly reminiscent of café music, does he strike a note of genuine temperament.

FUTILE NEO-ROMANTICISM

A second Staatsoper production—long clamoured for by the press, and more than coolly received at its ultimate realisation—was the revival of Hans Pfitzner's opera, 'Die Rose vom Liebesgarten' (March 25). Pfitzner, who, in his much discussed book on the 'New Æsthetics of Musical Impotency,' airs his aggressive and chauvinistically tainted grievances against the 'musical futurists' in terms of unprecedented violence, is unfortunately equally unconvincing in his musical output, and far less temperamental. The irate, disgruntled man of the Teutonic professor type has of late become increasingly dry and didactic in his music, and only in his autobiographical and rather self-aggrandising opera 'Palestrina' has risen to more spontaneous utterance—but even here long stretches of score betray the musicologist rather than the creative composer. 'Die Rose vom Liebesgarten' is of earlier date. It is a quarter-of-a-century old, and although by only two years the senior of a work like Strauss's 'Salome,' bears all the signs of premature age. Pfitzner here ventures into Wagnerian romanticism and unfertile symbolism; the stage is populated by characters who are descendants, indeed parodies, of Siegfried, Brünnhilde, Mime, Alberich, and Klingsor, and who indulge in uninteresting and essentially undramatic reflections.

TWO RUSSIAN COMPOSERS

The visit of Igor Stravinsky (March 19) created sudden interest in the music of this composer, whose name had previously been mentioned here with awe. His Pianoforte Concerto, played by Stravinsky himself, was cautiously and politely received, and appealed far less to the audience than his earlier and more vital works, such as the 'Petrouchka' Suite and the 'Fire-Bird.' Stravinsky's suddenly awakened reverence for Bach is perhaps symptomatic. Well does one remember that Richard Strauss, the ex-revolutionary, discovered his enthusiasm for Mozart no sooner than when his own supply of new ideas seemed exhausted. And like the Strauss of 1910, Stravinsky has become the favourite composer of international society. It is a strange parallel, and one which prompts some reserve as to the Russian modernist's future development.

While the best that Stravinsky has given us is firmly implanted in the national music of his country, the music of Nicolai Miaskovsky—generally regarded as the foremost symphonic composer of present-day Russia—is rooted in more cosmopolitan realms; and in this respect makes no exception to the rule of his musical contemporaries. Miaskovsky's Symphony No. 6, which received its première (March 1) under Constantin Saradjev, from Moscow, is one of those monster symphonies which Gustav Mahler was the last composer to undertake. The example of Mahler looms large not only in the proportions of the work, but also in the romantic fervour of the music, in certain formal peculiarities, and in the 'instrumental' treatment of the chorus in the apotheosis of the last movement. For the rest, Miaskovsky allows himself to be inspired by Tchaikovsky's brilliant orchestration, particularly in the Military March, so suggestive of the third movement of the 'Pathetic.' Miaskovsky's Symphony, with its underlying revolutionary programme, is indeed far from revolutionary in character, but rather the work of a solid, conscientious craftsman, with a strong leaning towards classic ideals.

AUSTRIAN NOVELTIES

Josef Marx, more famous for his pleasant songs than for his chef d'œuvre, the 'Autumn' Symphony, has recently turned from the hypertrophic style of this piece, and of his Romantic Pianoforte Concerto, to a more lucid and transparent utterance. His many duties as rector of the Vienna State Academy of Music have restricted his activities as a composer. The 'Idyl on the Pastoral Fourth,' his first work during two years, was produced by Clemens Krauss on March 7. It employs the interval of the fourth not as the problematic harmonic constituent which Schönberg made of it in his Chamber Symphony, but dwells on it as an element of bucolic mood description (the shepherd's shalm). Lyric moods predominate, and the prevailing slow tempo might have created some monotony but for the short duration of the work.

A brilliant piece of comedy music is the 'Overture to a Merry Play' (March 17), by Josef Rosenstock, pupil of Franz Schreker, and now conductor of the Darmstadt Opera. It catches the spirit of a Shakespearean comedy in the amusing principal theme given to the horn, and for its lyric middle portion draws on the tender colourings of Strauss's Act 2 of his 'Die Rosenkavalier.' The short Overture is delightful in its spirited wit, spontaneity, and temperament.

PAUL BECHERT.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths:

ROBERT FINNIE MCEWEN, of Bardochrat, Colmonell, and Marchmont, Berwickshire, on March 31. By his death, music in Scotland suffers a heavy loss. Though trained as a barrister, he devoted much of his time, and a great deal of his wealth, to music. He brought to the Parish Church of Colmonell many famous singers, himself playing the organ. In 1901 he started a series of free concerts, at which he acted as chairman, giving oral descriptions of the works performed, and brief biographical notes of the composers, playing the chief themes on the pianoforte, &c., and occasionally acting as accompanist. The scheme began with programmes of traditional songs and simple, attractive instrumental solos, developing gradually and tactfully into performances of classical music of the best type. The concerts, which were invariably crowded, were discontinued during the war, but were resumed afterwards, the last being given only a week or two before Mr. McEwen's death. He was a keen supporter of the Competition Festival movement, having been one of the founders of the Ayrshire Festival, and a generous donor of trophies to that and other meetings, including Glasgow. He was also a composer, having set a number of Scottish songs; and was an enlightened patron of arts other than music.

RALPH JOSEPH HORNER, at Winnipeg. He was born at Newport, Mon., on April 28, 1848, and received his musical education at Leipsic Conservatoire, coming to London, in 1868, as teacher of pianoforte, singing, and harmony. He did much conducting in London—the English Opera Company for seven years; Sullivan opera for ten years; and also choral and orchestral works at the Alexandra Palace. In 1888 he removed to Nottingham, where he directed the Amateur Orchestral Society, the Operatic Company, and the Philharmonic Choir, and was lecturer at the University for ten years. He took the degree of Mus. Doc. at Durham in 1898. Dr. Horner went to New York in 1906, and three years later to Winnipeg, where he was Director of the Imperial Academy of Music and Arts. During the war he served as bandmaster of the 190th and 250th Oversea Battalions.

GEORGE SPENCER EVANS, on March 18, in his thirty-sixth year. A native of Wales, and nephew of Dr. D. Evans, University College, Cardiff, and of Dr. H. Evans, Liverpool, he was L.R.A.M., and organist and choirmaster of St. Peter's Church, Athlone, from 1922-24.

JOSEF ORELIO, at Amsterdam, aged seventy-two. Like Anton Sistermans, whose death was reported last month, Orelio was born at 's-Hertogenbosch, and served as a boy-chorister. After his voice broke he was taken up as a pupil by Wilhelmina Gips, and later studied under Richard Hol, C. Coenen, and Prof. Wartel, at Paris. His first opera experience was in his own country, and he created the baritone rôles of many Dutch operas. After a short experience in Germany, he returned to Holland to employ his powers in the development of opera there, and won fame as an interpreter of the parts of Hans Sachs and Mephisto. He also did much to encourage the study of Dutch folk-song, and the composition of songs and operas to Dutch words.

STEVEN VAN GRONINGEN, formerly for thirty years Director of the Music School at Leyden, at the age of seventy-four. Van Groningen was born at Deventer, and was educated for an engineer, in which capacity he worked for some time in Germany. On the advice of Rubinstein he decided to make music his profession, and studied under Liszt at Weimar, and at the Hochschule at Berlin. Later he became conductor of several choirs at The Hague and at Zwolle, and was appointed Director at Leyden in 1894. He also composed a number of works for pianoforte and strings and a Suite for two pianofortes.

JOHN MILLAR CRAIG, at Edinburgh, in his eighty-seventh year. Mr. Craig studied in Italy, and became a leading singer and teacher in Scotland. As one of the founders, in 1873, and later the conductor, of Mr. Waddell's Choir, which ultimately bore his own name, he introduced many important choral works to Edinburgh. He was best known, however, as conductor for twenty-one years (from 1883) of the Glasgow Select Choir, which was in its day and generation the best equipped choral body in Scotland.

Dr. D. C. WILLIAMS, at Llanwrtyd Wells, on March 21. He was of musical parentage, his mother being a talented singer. For two years he studied under Dr. Joseph Parry, to whom he became assistant at the South Wales School of Music. He won various composition prizes at the National Eisteddfod and elsewhere; and was conductor of the North Glamorgan Orchestral Society and the Merthyr Musical Society.

ALFRED T. BLANCHETT, organist at Slough Parish Church, on April 19, aged fifty-seven. He was trained at the Royal College of Music, studying the organ under Parratt. His unusual abilities as a player, improvisor, and composer, were worthy of far wider recognition than they received.

JOHN HILTON CARTER, on April 9, aged sixty-nine. For twenty-five years he was manager of the Royal Albert Hall; before taking that office he was secretary of the Guildhall School of Music, and in 1894, in recognition of his services to that institution, the Freedom of the City of London was conferred on him.

MARGARET HOARE, on March 18. She was born in 1852, and studied at the Royal Academy of Music from 1881-85, under William Shakespeare, winning the Parepa-Rosa Prize. She sang at Three Choirs Festivals, Sacred Harmonic Society concerts, at the opening of Queen's Hall, &c., retiring from public work in 1912.

BESSIE MONTEM SMITH (Bessie Stroud), at Clapham, on April 1, in her seventy-fifth year. She was a daughter of Chaplin Henry (H. Stroud) and widow of Montem Smith, sometime lay-vicar at Westminster Abbey.

ARTHUR JOHN THOMPSON, F.R.A.M., at Highgate, on April 9, aged seventy. He was a professor of singing at the Royal Academy of Music and the Guildhall School of Music.

Miscellaneous

ORCHESTRAL MUSIC AT DUMFRIES

We have received a copy of the 'Record of the Dumfries Orchestra' (which, under its new constitution, will be known as the Dumfries and Galloway Orchestral Association), and a notable record it is. Since its inception in 1914, the Orchestra's programmes have included twenty-one classical overtures, seventeen concertos (seven by Bach), seventeen symphonies (five by Beethoven, five by Mozart, and the 'Solway' of McEwen, which had its first performance at Dumfries), and forty-seven miscellaneous works, among them being the 'Enigma' Variations, Bach's Suite in D, Holst's 'St. Paul's' Suite, and works by Sibelius, Grieg, Berlioz, Moussorgsky, Saint-Saëns, &c. Under the Society's auspices, chamber music recitals have been given by the Catterall, London, and Léner String Quartets, and the English Trio. The Orchestra has also collaborated in some notable choral performances, e.g., of four Bach Cantatas by the Newcastle Bach Choir, under Dr. Whittaker, and 'The Dream of Gerontius' by the Sheffield Choir, conducted by Dr. Coward. At a meeting held in the Town Hall a few weeks ago, Dr. T. R. Burnet (Education Officer), Provost O'Brien, Judge Smart, and others, paid high tribute to the work of Mr. W. J. Stark, the conductor. If Dumfries folk are not proud of their Orchestra, they ought to be.

Barclay's Bank Musical Society celebrated its coming-of-age with a concert at Queen's Hall on March 24, under the direction of Mr. Herbert Pierce. The chief works performed were a selection of Stanford's sea-songs for baritone (Mr. Topliss Greene) and male-voice choir, and Beethoven's C major Pianoforte Concerto, played by Mrs. John Mounsey.

Mr. R. G. Carritt is giving a series of ten lectures on contemporary British music at the Holloway Literary Evening Institute, Hilldrop Road, Camden Road, on Monday evenings from April 26.

A presentation was made to Mr. E. A. Coombs when he conducted Beckenham Choral Society for the last time, on April 14. He has been forced to relinquish the post through ill-health.

Brahms's 'Requiem' was given by the Barnet Choral Society at Ewen Hall on March 23, under the direction of Mr. Charles Whittington.

Answers to Correspondents

W. H. P.—We think the best all-round work for your purpose is 'Choral and Orchestral Societies,' by Venables (Curwen, 6*s.*). See also Whittaker's 'Class Singing' (Oxford University Press, 6*s.*), which, though concerned with school work, contains much in the way of general principles that apply to adult choral training. Read also the same authority's article on 'Choral Conducting,' in the current issue of the Festivals 'Year-Book' (3, Central Buildings, S.W.1, 1*s.* 3*d.*). For sight-singing, take the 'Elementary Sight-Singing Course' of George Lane (two books), and W. G. McNaught's 'Sight-Singing Studies' (all Novello).

BEETHOVEN.—In scoring hymn-tunes for orchestra, the treatment of the horns would depend on the compass of the tunes, most of which would probably be too high and too low. A safe plan would be to write good three-part harmony for the four horns, taking care that the doublings should occur on prominent notes. The result should suggest something like smooth, sustained writing for male-voice trio. If only two horns are available, write two parts (which should make good complete two-part harmony); or combine them, either in a simple, independent part, or in the tune itself, if the pitch is convenient.

J. N. B.—The disposition of your eight parts would depend on the laying-out of the part-writing. If for double choir, arrange your forces in two complete S.A.T.B. bodies, side by side. If the eight-part writing is occasional, or mixed, it is usual to work on the principle of the higher voices in each section to the left, in accordance with the placing of the choir as a whole—that is, sopranos and tenors on the left.

STENOGRAPHER.—We heard recently of a music type-writer, but can give no opinion on its capabilities. It was, if we remember aright, somewhat costly. If any reader has had experience of such a machine, and will kindly give us information, we will forward to 'Stenographer.' As our inquirer lives in China, he finds it hard to obtain news of the kind.

N. F.—The original form of the Handel Overture which Elgar recently scored will be found in the Chandos Anthem, 'In the Lord put I my trust,' to which it forms the Introduction. So far as we know, this anthem is printed only in the volumes of the German Handel Society.

CURIOSITY.—The letters 'M.D.' and 'M.G.' (not 'M.C.,' as you write, surely!) in the keyboard arrangement of the Choral are the initials of Main droite and Main gauche, and indicate that the notes so marked are to be played with the right and left hands respectively.

K. A. E.—The Three Choirs Festival this year will be held at Worcester on September 7-10. Write to Messrs. Phillips & Probert, 24, College Street, Worcester, for particulars of seats. We gave a list of the chief works in the programme in our April issue (p. 329).

V. S. M.—Nothing is settled yet as to a Summer School of Church Music for this year. We understand that the committee has the matter under consideration; and an announcement will be made in this and other journals as soon as possible.

TOLLCROSS.—We do not know the standard of the organ examination to which you refer, but you may safely assume it to be a step below that of the A.R.C.O.

GUIDA.—The Concerto you inquire about is that in A minor, for pianoforte, by Grieg.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS:—

	£	s.	d.
Two Lines	0	3	0
Three Lines	0	3	4
For every additional Line	0	0	10
One inch (displayed)	0	10	0
Half a Column...	2	0	0
A Column	4	0	0
A Page	7	10	0

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.

A remittance should be sent with every Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To insure insertion in their proper positions, Advertisements for the next issue should reach the Office, 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1, not later than WEDNESDAY, MAY 19 (FIRST POST).

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Scylla and Charybdis. By Alexander Brent-Smith ...	401
Personalities among Musical Critics.—IV. Francis Toye. By Basil Maine	402
On Playing Wrong Notes. By J. A. Westrup ...	403
Advice on Pianoforte Playing. By I. Philipp ...	404
New Light on Late Tudor Composers.—XVI. William Daman. By W. H. Grattan Flood ...	406
Music in Albania. By Paul Edmonds	407
Ruskin's Progress in Music. By Eva Mary Grew ...	408
The Handel Festival, Past and Present	410
The Lost Symphonies of Clementi. By Herbert Westerby	412
Ad Libitum. By 'Feste'	415
Points from Lectures	419
Occasional Notes	420
Music in the Foreign Press. By M.-D. Calvocoressi	421
New Music	422
The Musician's Bookshelf	426
Player-Piano Notes. By William Delasaire	429
Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus'	431
Church and Organ Music (with Illustration)	437
Royal College of Organists	437
Municipal Music in New Zealand: A Talk with Mr. J. Maughan Barnett (with Portrait)	437
Letters to the Editor	442
The Amateurs' Exchange	446
Sharps and Flats	446
Royal Academy of Music	446
Trinity College of Music	447
English Opera: Musical Association Lecture ...	447
Society of Women Musicians: A Busy Session ...	448
London Concerts	448
Competition Festival Record	452
Music in the Provinces	453
Bournemouth Festival	455
Music in Scotland	455
Music in Wales	457
Music in Ireland	457
Musical Notes from Abroad	457
Obituary	461
Miscellaneous	462
Answers to Correspondents	462

MUSIC.

'Lift up your hearts.' Hymn-Anthem. By H. A. CHAMBERS	433

EXTRA SUPPLEMENT given with this number:

'On May Morning.' Four-part Song. By Ethel Boyce.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED.

BACH, J. S.—"That Word shall still." Choral from "A Stronghold Sure." (No. 253, Novello's Short Anthems.) 2d.

BORTON, ALICE.—Aria for Violin or 'Cello on Bach's Pianoforte Prelude, No. 27. 2s.

—— "We bless Thy Holy Name." Anthem for All Saints' Day. 4d.

BOYCE, ETHEL.—"Charming Chloe." Four-part Song. (No. 1429, Novello's Part-Song Book.) 4d.

BRADLEY, REV. C. L.—"Hope of the world." Anthem. 6d.

BROWN, W. A.—Vesper Hymn ("O God of Peace and Love"). 1½d.

CHAMBERS, H. A.—"Lift up your hearts." Hymn-Anthem. (No. 999, The Musical Times.) 2d.

GERMAN, EDWARD.—"London Town." Song in Two Keys. E flat and F. 2s. each.

HANDEL, G. F.—"Semele." A secular Oratorio. Abridged Concert Edition. For Four Solo Voices, Chorus, and Orchestra. 3s.

—— "The smiling hours." Air for Contralto. From the Oratorio "Hercules." 1s. 6d.

HOWELL, REV. C. M.—Communion Service in E flat. 1s.

KIMBER, P. APOLLOS.—Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in E flat. 4d.

KNIGHT, J. D.—Hymn for Armistice Day ("O Cross, that standeth by the way"). 1½d.

MACKINTOSH, FLORENCE.—"We will merrie be." Song. 2s.

MELLING, REV. E. H.—"My God, my Father." Sacred Song for Soprano or Tenor. 2s.

PALESTRINA.—"O bone Jesu, exaudi me" ("O Blessed Jesu, hear Thou my prayer"). Motet for Double Choir. Edited and English adaptation by Ivor Atkins. (No. 1141, Novello's 8vo Anthems.) 8d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 407, contains the following music in both notations.—"Oh, the Spring." Two-part Song. By Henry Lahee. 2d.

SWABY, R.—Mass in D. For S.A.T.B., with Organ accompaniment (ad lib.). 1s.

THIMAN, ERIC H.—"Jesus, the very thought of Thee." Sacred Song. 2s.

—— "The God of Love my Shepherd is." Sacred Song. 2s.

ALTO and BASS WANTED.—St. Stephen's, College Road, South Dulwich (next door to Sydenham Hill Station, S.R.). Two Services Sunday, Friday night rehearsal. £16. Apply, "Organist," 80, West Hill, S.E.26.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER WANTED for the Upperton Congregational Church, Eastbourne. Apply, stating qualifications and salary required, to the Hon. Secretary, D. R. Duncan, 65, Terminus Road, Eastbourne.

SOPRANO REQUIRED for Clapham Church. £20. Address, "Organist," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

DUO-ART REPRODUCING ROLLS, and ordinary 88-note Pianola Rolls WANTED. Send particulars and lowest prices to H. S. Lewin, 22, Caterham Rd., London, S.E.13.

SPECIAL POSTAL TUITION.

A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M., L.T.C.L., A.T.C.L. (Organ and Pianoforte). Correspondence or Personal Lessons in Rudiments, Harmony, Aural-Training. 2s. 6d. per lesson. Write, "A.," 34, Grosvenor Park, S.E.5.

NOVELLO'S CLASSICAL SONGS.

Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment.

VOLUME I.

THIRTY-FIVE CLASSICAL SONGS.

Alone ... Mendelssohn
Autumn Song ... Mendelssohn
Come, ever-smiling Liberty ... Handel
Come, gladsome Spring ... Handel
Come, happy Spring ... Giordani
Contentment ... Mozart
Cottage, The ... Schumann
Creation's Hymn ... Beethoven
Crusaders ... Schubert
Evening Song ... Mendelssohn
Fairest Isle ... Purcell
First violet, The ... Mendelssohn
Fisherman, The ... Schubert
Forget me not ... W. Sterndale Bennett Greeting ... Mendelssohn
Hark! hark! the lark ... Schubert
Hear thou my weeping ... Handel
Hey, Baloo! ... Schumann
May-dew ... W. Sterndale Bennett
May Song ... Mendelssohn
Mermaid's Song, The ... Haydn
My mother bids me bind my hair ... Haydn
O for the wings of a dove ... Mendelssohn
O sunny beam ... Schumann
Rose, softly blooming ... Spohr
Say, ye who borrow ... Mozart
Slumber Song ... Mendelssohn
Song of May, A ... Beethoven
Sun of the sleepless ... Mendelssohn
To Chloe (in sickness) ... W. Sterndale Bennett
Verdant Meadows ... Handel
Wandering Miller, The ... Schubert
Welcome to Spring ... Mendelssohn
Whither ... Schubert
Who is Sylvia? ... Schubert

VOLUME II.

THIRTY-SIX CLASSICAL SONGS.

Angels, ever bright and fair ... Handel
Ave Maria ... Schubert
Bird is softly calling, A ... Mendelssohn
Blow, blow, thou winter wind ... Arne
By Celia's Arbour (The Garland) ... Mendelssohn
Coming of Spring, The ... Schumann
Cradle Song ... Schubert
Evening Star, The ... Schumann
Fisher's Song ... Schubert
Free Mind, The ... Schumann
Garland, The (By Celia's Arbour) ... Mendelssohn
Gentle zephyr ... W. Sterndale Bennett
Holiday on the Rhine, A ... Schumann
Huntsman, rest ... Schubert
I love thee ... Beethoven
Joy of Spring, The ... Mendelssohn
Know'st thou the land? ... Beethoven
Lay of the imprisoned huntsman ... Schubert
Litany ... Schubert
Lord, at all times I will bless Thee ... Mendelssohn
Lotos Flower, The ... Schumann
O star of Eve ... Wagner
Old German Spring Song (Frühlingslied) ... Mendelssohn
On Wings of Song ... Mendelssohn
Rose among the heather ... Schubert
Sailor's Song, The ... Haydn
Slumber, beloved ... Bach
Smiling dawn of happy days, The ... Handel
Thou art repose ... Schubert
Though far away ... Mendelssohn
Thou'rt like unto a flower ... Schumann
To Music ... Schubert
Trust in Spring ... Schubert
Two Grenadiers, The ... Schumann
Wanderer's Night-Song ... Schubert
Where'er you walk ... Handel
Where the Bee sucks ... Arne

VOLUME III.

THIRTY-EIGHT CLASSICAL SONGS.

Art thou troubled (Dove sei) ... Handel
But the Lord is mindful of His own ... Mendelssohn
Butterfly, The ... Cornelius
Courage ... Schubert
Dawn, gentle flower ... W. Sterndale Bennett
Deep treasur'd in my heart ... Schumann
Erlaf-lake ... Schubert
Fishermaiden, The ... Schubert
Full-orbed moon, The ... Schubert
Good-night, my dearest child ... Brahms
Greeting to Spring, A ... Schumann
How beautiful are the feet ... Handel
I will sing of Thy great mercies ... Mendelssohn
In May ... Schumann
Know'st thou the land? ... Schubert
Lark, The ... Rubinstein
Let the bright Seraphim ... Handel
Little Sandman, The ... Brahms
Lord of our being (Sorge nel petto) ... Handel
Memory, A ... Brahms
Morning Song ... Mendelssohn
Nazareth ... Gounod
Nymphs and Shepherds ... Purcell
O my love 's like the red, red rose ... Schumann
O rest in the Lord ... Mendelssohn
O think of me ... Cornelius
Ode to joy ... Schubert
Oft in my dreams ... Cornelius
Oh! had I Jubal's lyre ... Handel
Out over the Forth ... Schumann
Peace ... Schubert
Sandman, The ... Schumann
Secrets ... Schubert
Sing, Maiden, sing ... W. Sterndale Bennett
Spring advancing (Frühlingsglaube) ... Mendelssohn
Swallow 's flying west, The ... Brahms
Trout, The ... Schubert
Violets ... Cornelius

VOLUME IV.

THIRTY CLASSICAL SONGS.

Cherry Ripe ... Horn
Children at play ... Mozart
Come let us all this day ... Bach
Flower thou resemblest, A ... Rubinstein
Gentle Flowers (" Faust ") ... Gounod
Gentle touch, The ... Goetz
Greenwood calls, The ... Schubert
Harper's Song, The ... Schubert
I attempt from love's sickness ... Purcell
It was a lover ... Morley Jerusalem ... Mendelssohn
Lass with the delicate air, The ... Arne
Legend ... Tchaikovsky
Like to a linden tree ... Dvorák
Longing ... Schubert
Lullaby ... Brahms
My heart ever faithful ... Bach
Now fades the sun's last lingering ray ... Franz
O come, do not delay (" The Marriage of Figaro ") ... Mozart
Organ-grinder, The ... Schubert
Orpheus with his lute ... Sullivan
Prepare thyself, Zion ... Bach
Serenade ... Gounod
Shepherds, The ... Cornelius
Tender wood-dove ... Gounod
Under the greenwood tree ... Arne
Violet, The ... Mozart
Walnut-tree, The ... Schumann
When all was young (" Faust ") ... Gounod
When daisies pied ... Arne

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH VOLUME.

Separate Numbers from 1½*d to* 3*d. In Books, containing six or eight songs, from* 8*d. to* 1*s.*

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

EXPERIENCE AND REPUTATION

BY APPOINTMENT.

Over thirty years' experience in the manufacture of Organ Blowing Machinery is behind the fine reputation held by the "DISCUS" Organ Blower. During this period, installations have been made with complete success to a very large number of Cathedrals, Churches, and Public Buildings both at home and abroad. We can supply blowers to suit any size or type of organ, and the motive power may be either electricity, gas, or oil. Our wide and varied experience is at your disposal. Write now for a free copy of our illustrated booklet, "Organ Blowing," and let us supply free estimate and suggestions from your particulars.

THE "DISCUS"
REGD. TRADE MARK.
ORGAN BLOWER.

SOLE MAKERS

WATKINS & WATSON,
WHITE LION STREET,
LONDON, N.1.
Telephone: North 2039.

JUST PUBLISHED.

AN ABRIDGED CONCERT EDITION OF

SEMELE

A SECULAR ORATORIO

FOR FOUR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

BY

G. F. HANDEL

PRICE, THREE SHILLINGS.

The time of performance of this edition is about two hours, and the orchestral parts have been so cued that it may be performed with accompaniment of: (1) Strings only; (2) Strings and Pianoforte; (3) Strings, or Strings and Pianoforte, with the addition of any Wind up to the complete Score of 2 Oboes, 2 Bassoons, 2 Horns, 2 Trumpets, Drums.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVALS.

HYMNS AND TUNES

PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED.

Price Three-Halfpence each.

		Words by	Music by
1.	COME, CHILDREN, ON AND FORWARD	F. Bevan	G. C. Martin
2.*	FOR THE FRESHNESS OF THE MORNING	W. St. Hill Bourne	Lady Euan-Smith
3.	I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY	Emily H. Miller	F. Clay
4.	COME, O COME, IN PIOUS LAYS	G. Wither	J. Stainer
5.	THINE FOR EVER! GOD OF LOVE	Mary F. Maude	W. C. Harvey
	NOW THE DAYLIGHT GOES AWAY	F. R. Havergal	J. Adcock
6.	JESU, WHOM THY CHILDREN LOVE	J. F. Wheeler	H. E. Button
7.*	SWEETLY O'ER THE MEADOWS FAIR	F. A. Challinor	F. A. Challinor
8.	WOULD YOU GAIN THE BEST IN LIFE	H. R. Palmer	C. J. May
9.	ON OUR WAY REJOICING	J. S. B. Monsell	W. B. Gilbert
10.	AGAIN THE MORN OF GLADNESS	J. Ellerton	J. Stainer
11.	THE ANGEL'S SONG	F. R. Havergal	A. Randegger
12.	FORWARD, CHRISTIAN CHILDREN	Helen W. Selby	A. Moffat
13.	THE GOLDEN SHORE	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
14.	SAVIOUR, BLESSED SAVIOUR	G. Thring	John E. West
15.	ENTER WITH THANKSGIVING	W. St. Hill Bourne	F. H. Cowen
16.	MAN SHALL NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE	W. H. Draper	J. V. Roberts
17.	STARS, THAT ON YOUR WONDROUS WAY	J. Bogue	J. Stainer
18.	THE DAY IS PAST AND OVER	J. M. Neale	J. Barnby
19.	WE MARCH, WE MARCH TO VICTORY	G. Moultrie	J. Barnby
20.	HARK! HARK! THE ORGAN LOUDLY PEALS	G. Thring	G. J. Bennett
21.	O WHAT CAN LITTLE HANDS DO	G. W. Hinsdale	H. E. Button
22.	THE ROSEATE HUES OF EARLY DAWN	C. F. Alexander	A. Sullivan
23.	LORD, THY CHILDREN GUIDE AND KEEP	W. W. How	A. S. Cooper
24.	THE BEAUTIFUL LAND	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
	JESU, TENDER SHEPHERD, HEAR ME	M. L. Duncan	H. Parker
25.	THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF ENGLAND	J. Compston	J. Stainer
26.	THE CITY OF LIGHT	F. Alder	E. J. Troup
27.	GOD IS IN HEAVEN! CAN HE HEAR	A. Gilbert	H. E. Button
	GENTLE JESUS, MEEK AND MILD	C. Wesley	J. Stainer
28.*	HE DWELLS AMONG THE LILIES	W. St. Hill Bourne	Lady Euan-Smith
29.	THE CROWN IS WAITING	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
30.	RAISE YOUR STANDARD, BROTHERS	G. Spiller	E. J. Troup
31.*	FLOWERS	F. R. Havergal	A. Randegger
32.	THE GOOD SHEPHERD	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
33.	ABOVE THE CLEAR BLUE SKY	M. Bourdillon	H. E. Crimp
34.	WHEN LOVE DRAWS NEAR	L. Whitehead	E. J. Troup
35.	COME, SING WITH HOLY GLADNESS	J. J. Daniell	G. W. Torrance
36.	WE WILL PRAISE THEE	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
37.*	WHAT CAN I GIVE JESUS	A. C. Benson	A. M. Goodhart
38.	COME, PRAISE OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR	W. W. How	H. A. Chambers
39.	NOW THE DAY IS OVER	S. Baring-Gould	F. W. Blunt
40.*	WE THANK THEE, LORD, FOR THIS FAIR EARTH	G. E. L. Cotton	W. C. Harvey
41.	THE LESSON OF LOVE		J. Barnby
42.	COME, FRIENDS, THE WORLD WANTS MENDING		E. J. Troup
43.	CREATOR, GOD, AND LORD	Mary Bradford Whiting	J. H. Maunder
44.*	O GOD, WE COME BEFORE THEE	J. Gibson	Tune—"Ellacombe"
45.	WHAT IS THE GIFT THAT I CAN BRING	Mary Bradford Whiting	H. A. Chambers
	HOSANNA WE SING	G. S. Hodges	H. A. Chambers
46.	HEAVENLY FATHER, SEND THY BLESSING	Christopher Wordsworth	W. C. Harvey
47.	THE DAYS OF OLD	Ethel Boyce	Ethel Boyce
48.*	BLESSED JESU, WE CAN SEE THEE	Doris Rowley	Alec Rowley
	THE EARTH IS FAIR AND SWEET	Doris Rowley	Alec Rowley
49.*	WHILE OUR LORD WAS PASSING BY	Ethel Boyce	Ethel Boyce
50.	PILGRIMS OF THE NIGHT	F. W. Faber	Oliver King
51.*	THE HOLY LIGHT	W. M. W. Call	C. H. Lloyd
52.*	NOW SINKS THE SUN THAT LIT OUR FESTAL MORN	Mary Bradford Whiting	C. J. May
53.	LIFE'S GLAD MORNING	Kate Hopkins	G. C. Martin
54.	JESUS, BLESSED SAVIOUR	F. R. Havergal	A. Herbert Brewer
55.	COME, CHRISTIAN YOUTHS AND MAIDENS	T. A. Stowell	Harvey Grace
56.*	THY WORD IS LIKE A GARDEN, LORD	E. Hodder	Eric H. Thiman
	WHEN THE LORD OF LOVE WAS HERE	Stopford A. Brooke	Eric H. Thiman
57.	GOD OF OUR FATHERS	Mary Rowles Jarvis	E. J. Hopkins
58.	CHILDREN OF GOD	F. G. Russell	F. G. Russell
	GOD OF MERCY, THRONED ON HIGH	H. Neele	Harvey Grace
59.	THE CHILDREN'S PRAYER	Robert McLeod	Robert McLeod
60.	THE LORD BE WITH US	J. Ellerton	C. J. May

* These Hymns are suitable for Flower Services.

The above are also published in Seven Sets, containing Ten Hymns and Tunes, price 6d. per Set.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVALS.

HYMNS AND TUNES.

PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED.

SET VII.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Price 6d. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

May also be had in separate numbers, Price 1½d. each.

CONTENTS.

1.	Life's glad morning	GEORGE C. MARTIN
2.	Jesus, blessèd Saviour	A. HERBERT BREWER
3.	Come, Christian youths and maidens	HARVEY GRACE
4.	Thy Word is like a garden	E. H. THIMAN
5.	God of mercy, throned on high	HARVEY GRACE
6.	God of our fathers	E. J. HOPKINS
7.	When the Lord of love	E. H. THIMAN
8.	Children of God	F. G. RUSSELL
9.	The Children's Prayer	R. MCLEOD
10.	The Lord be with us	C. J. MAY

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ANTHEMS, ETC.

Sacred Unison Songs for Soprano Voices (or Solos).

Children's Angel, The (both Notations)	CH. GOUNOD	2d.
Come, let us all this day (both Notations)	J. S. BACH	2d.
Lord, at all times I will bless Thee (both Notations)	MENDELSSOHN	3d.
Lord of our being (both Notations)	G. F. HANDEL	1½d.
O for the wings of a dove (both Notations)	MENDELSSOHN	2d.

Sacred Two-part Songs and Anthems for Soprano Voices.

Except the Lord build the House (both Notations)	M. J. MONK	3d.
Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard (both Notations)	MYLES B. FOSTER	4d.
Faint not, fear not, God is near thee (both Notations)	HENRY SMART	4d.
God sends the night (both Notations)	G. RATHBONE	4d.
Like as the hart (both Notations)	V. NOVELLO, arr. by H. ELLIOT BUTTON	2d.
Lord is my Shepherd, The (S. & C., both Notations)	HENRY SMART	3d.
O for the wings of a dove (Staff Notation only)	MENDELSSOHN, arr. by J. E. WEST	4d.
O how amiable are Thy dwellings (Staff Notation only)	J. H. MAUNDER	4d.
Songs of Praise the Angels sang (Staff Notation only)	ATTWOOD	2d.
Within the fold (both Notations)	ROLAND ROGERS	4d.

Hymn-Anthems for Children and Choir.

		O.N.	Tonic Sol-Fa.
Happy Day! Festal Day!	H. A. CHAMBERS	4d.	3d.
Hosanna be the children's song	E. M. BARBER	3d.	1½d.
Hosanna we sing	JOHN E. WEST	4d.	2d.
I love to hear the Story	MYLES B. FOSTER	4d.	2d.
Lord, Thy children	J. H. MAUNDER	4d.	2d.
Sweet is the work	R. WALKER ROBSON	2d.	1½d.
Sweet is Thy mercy	J. BARNBY	2d.	1½d.
Thine for ever	H. ELLIOT BUTTON	4d.	2d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ANTHEMS FOR ASCENSIONTIDE.

*Above all praise and all majesty ... ... Mendelssohn 2d.
Achieved is the glorious work ... ... Haydn 1½d.
*Achieved is the glorious work (2nd Chorus) ... Haydn 2d.
*All glory to the Lamb ... ... Spohr 2d.
Awake up, my glory ... ... M. Wise 4d.
*Christ became obedient unto death ... ... J. F. Bridge 2d.
Christ is not entered into the Holy Places ... ... E. Faning 2d.
Come, ye children ... ... H. J. King 4d
For it became Him ... ... O. King 2d.
God is gone up ... ... *Croft, 6d.; W. B. Gilbert 3d.
*God, my King ... ... Bach 2d.
Grant, we beseech Thee ... ... H. Lahee 2d.
Grant, we beseech Thee (Collect) ... ... A. R. Gaul 4d.
*Hallelujah, unto God's Almighty Son ... ... Beethoven 4d.
*How excellent Thy Name, O Lord ... ... Handel 2d.
*If ye then be risen with Christ ... ... I. Atkins 6d.
If ye then be risen ... *F. O. Carr and J. Naylor, ea. 4d.
If ye then be risen (Two parts) F.W.Wadeley,2d.; M. B. Foster 4d.
In My Father's house ...H. E. Button and J. M. Crament, ea. 4d.
In that day ... ... G. Elvey 6d.
In that day (Open ye the gates) ... ... F. C. Maker 4d.
*It shall come to pass ... ... B. Tours 2d.
I will not leave you comfortless ... ... W. Byrd 4d.
*King all-glorious ... ... J. Barnby 8d.
King all-glorious (with Chorus arr. for four voices) J. Barnby 6d.
*Leave us not, neither forsake us ... ... J. Stainer 2d.
Let not your heart ... E. Faning and G. Gardner, each 4d.
Let not your heart be troubled(Double Chorus unac.)M.B.Foster 4d.
*Let not your heart (Four-part) ... ... M. B. Foster 4d.
*Let their celestial concerts all unite ... ... Handel 2d.
*Lift up your heads ... Handel and J. L. Hopkins, each 2d.
*Lift up your heads ... ... S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.
Lift up your heads ... ... W. Turner 3d.
*Look, ye saints ... ... M. B. Foster 4d.
O all ye people, clap your hands ... ... H. Purcell 4d.
*O clap your hands ... ... J. Stainer 8d.
O clap your hands ... ... T. T. Trimnell 4d.
*O God, the King of Glory ... ... H. Smart 6d
*O God, when Thou appearest ... ... Mozart 4d.
*O how amiable ... ... J. Barnby 4d.
*O Lord our Governour... ... ... H. Gadsby 4d.
O Lord our Governour ... ... Marcello 2d.
*O risen Lord ... ... J. Barnby 2d.
*Open to me the gates ... ... F. Adlam 6d.
*Rejoice in the Lord ... ... J. B. Calkin 2d.
*Sing unto God ... ... F. Bevan 4d.
*Ten thousand times ten thousand ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
The earth is the Lord's ... ... T. T. Trimnell 6d.
*The Lord is exalted ... ... J. E. West 2d.
The Lord is King H. Gadsby, 8d.; H. J. King, 6d.; W. King 3d.
Thou art a priest for ever ... ... S. Wesley 4d.
*Unfold, ye portals ... ... Ch. Gounod 4d.
*Where Thou reignest ... ... Schubert 4d.
Who is this so weak and helpless ... ... Rayner 3d.

ANTHEMS FOR WHITSUNTIDE.

And all the people saw ... ... J. Stainer 8d.
*And suddenly there came ... ... H. J. Wood 4d.
And when the day of Pentecost ... ... C. W. Smith 4d.
*As pants the hart... ... ... Spohr 2d.
*As the hart pants... ... ... Mendelssohn 2d.
Behold, I send the promise ... ... J. V. Roberts 6d.
*Come, Holy Ghost ... ... Attwood 2d.
Ditto (Three-part, S.S.A.) ... ... Attwood 4d.
Come, Holy Ghost ... ... Elvey and J. L. Hatton, each 6d.
Come, Holy Ghost C. L. Williams and *Palestrina, each 3d.
Come, Thou Holy Spirit ... ... J. F. Barnett 4d.
Do not I fill heaven and earth... ... ... H. Blair 4d.
*Eye hath not seen (Two-part setting) ... M. B. Foster 4d.
*Eye hath not seen (Four-part setting) ... M. B. Foster 4d.
Fear thou not ... ... J. Booth 2d.
Give thanks unto God ... ... Spohr 6d.
Glorious and powerful God ... ... O. Gibbons 4d.
*God came from Teman... ... ... C. Steggall 6d.
*God is a Spirit ... ... W. S. Bennett 2d.
*Ditto (Two-part, S.S.) ... ... Bennett 2d.
Ditto (Male Voice, A.T.B.B.) ... ... Bennett 3d.
Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost ... ... H. Blair 4d.
*Great is the Lord... ... ... W. Hayes 6d.
*Grieve not the Holy Spirit ... ... J. Stainer 4d.
Hail! breath of life ... ... T. Adams 2d.
Happy is the man ... ... E. Prout 1s.
He that dwelleth in the secret place... ... ... J. Booth 6d.
*Holy Spirit, come, O come (Ad Spiritum Sanctum) G.C.Martin 2d.
I was in the spirit ... ... Blow 8d.
*I will magnify Thee ... ... Bunnett, 4d.; J. H. Parry 4d.
*I will not leave you comfortless ... ... B. Steane 3d.
I will pray the Father ... ... G. W. Torrance 2d.
If I go not away... ... ... A. J. Caldicott, 4d.; *T. Adams 2d.
If ye love Me .... Bunnett, 4d.; B. Steane, 3d.; C. S. Heap 2d.
*If ye love Me ...W. H. Monk, Tallis, and R. P. Stewart, each 2d.
If ye love Me H. W. Wareing and W. J. Westbrook, each 4d.
*In divers tongues ... ... Palestrina 3d.
In My Father's house ... ... J. M. Crament 4d.
It shall come to pass ... ... *B. Tours, 2d.; G. Garrett 8d.
Let God arise ... ... T. T. Trimnell, 6d.; Greene 8d.
*Let not your heart be troubled ... ... H. G. Trembath 2d.
Look down, Holy Dove... ... ... B. Luard-Selby 4d.
*O clap your hands ... ... J. Stainer 8d.
*O give thanks ... ... G. Elvey 4d.
*O God, my soul thirsteth ... ... F. R. Greenish 4d.
*O Holy Ghost, into our minds ... ... G. A. Macfarren 2d.
*Oh for a closer walk with God ... ... M. B. Foster 2d.
Ditto ... ... H. A. Chambers 4d.
O taste and see *Sullivan 2d.; Goss and A. H. Mann, each 4d.
O thou, the true and only Light ... ... Mendelssohn 3d.
O where shall wisdom be found ... ... Boyce 8d.
*Our blest Redeemer ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
*Peace I leave ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
*Praised be the Lord daily ... ... J. B. Calkin 2d.
Sing to the Lord ... ... Smart 1s. 6d.
*Spirit of mercy, truth and love H. A.Chambers, B. L.Selby,ea. 2d.
The eyes of all wait upon Thee ... ... Gibbons 6d.
*The Glory of the God Israel ... ... T. Adams 4d.
*The Lord came from Sinai ... ... J. E. West 4d.
*The Lord descended ... ...Hayes 2d.
The Lord is in His Holy Temple ... ... J. Stainer 6d.
The Lord is in His Holy Temple J. W. Elliott; E.H. Thorne, ea. 2d.
The love of God is shed abroad ... ... S. Reay 2d.
There is no condemnation ... ...H. S. Irons 4d.
The Spirit of God ... ... A. W. Marchant 4d.
*The Wilderness ... ... J. Goss, 3d.; *S. S. Wesley 8d.
*When God of old came down from Heaven ... E. V. Hall 4d.
We will rejoice ... ... Croft 6d.
When the Day of Pentecost ... ...A. Kempton 4d.
Whosoever drinketh ... ... J. T. Field 2d..

ANTHEMS FOR TRINITYTIDE.

*Almighty and everlasting God ... ... Gibbons 2d.
Almighty God, Who hast promised ... ... H. E. Button 1½d.
*Angel Spirits, ever blessed ... ... Tchaikovsky 3d.
Ascribe unto the Lord ... ... S. S. Wesley 6d.
Behold, God is great ... ... E. W. Naylor 6d.
*Beloved, if God so loved us ... ... J. Barnby 2d.
Beloved, let us love one another ... ... G. F. Cobb 2d.
Be ye all of one mind ... ... A. E. Godfrey 4d.
Blessed is the man ... ... J. Goss 6d.
Blessing and glory ... ...Boyce 2d.
*Blessing, glory ... ... Bach 8d.
Come, ye children ... ... J. Booth 4d.
God came from Teman ... ... C. Steggall 6d.
*God so loved the world ... ... M. Kingston 2d.
Grant, O Lord ... ... Mozart 2d.
Grant to us, Lord ... ... H. E. Button 1½d.
*Hail, gladdening Light ... J. T. Field, 3d.; *G. C. Martin 6d.
*Holy, holy, holy ... ... Crotch 4d.
Holy, Lord God Almighty ... ... T. Bateson 6d.
*How goodly are Thy tents ... ... F. Ouseley 2d.
*How lovely are Thy dwellings ... ... Spohr 2d.
Hymn to the Trinity ... ... Tchaikovsky 2d.
I am Alpha and Omega Ch. Gounod and J. V. Roberts, each 4d.
*I am Alpha and Omega... ... ... J. Stainer 2d.
I beheld, and lo! ... ... Blow 8d.
I know that the Lord is great ... ... F. Ouseley 2d.
I saw the Lord ... ... C. Harris, 4d.; *J. Stainer 8d.
I will magnify ... ... J. Shaw 4d.
I will sing of Thy power ... ... Greene 6d.
*I will sing of Thy power ... ... A. Sullivan 2d.
I will sing unto the Lord ... ...H. Wareing 4d.
*In humble faith ... ... G. Garrett 2d.
*In Jewry is God known ... ... J. Clarke-Whitfeld 2d.
In sweet consent ... ... E. H. Thorne 4d.
In the fear of the Lord ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
Let the peace of God ... ... J. Stainer 6d.
*Let Thy merciful ears ... ... A. R. Gaul 2d.
*Light of the world ... ... E. Elgar 4d.
Lord of all power and might ... ... E. T. Chipp 4d.
*Lord of all power and might ... ... W. Mason 2d.
Lord of all power and might (Men's voices) ... J. Barnby 3d.
Lord, we pray Thee H. A. Chambers and *J. V. Roberts, ea. 2d.
O Father blest ... ... J. Barnby 2d.
O God, Who hast prepared ... ... A. R. Gaul 3d.
O joyful Light ... ... B. Tours 6d.
*O Lord, my trust... ... ... K. Hall 2d.
O taste and see ... ... *J. Goss and A. H. Mann, each 4d.
*O taste and see ... ... A. Sullivan 2d.
O where shall wisdom be found? ... ...Boyce 8d.
Ponder my words, O Lord ... ... A. D. Culley 2d.
*Praise His awful Name ... ... Spohr 3d.
Rejoice in the Lord ... ... G. C. Martin 8d.
*See what love hath the Father ... ... Mendelssohn 2d.
Sing to the Lord ... ... Mendelssohn 1s.
*Stand up and bless ... ... J. Goss 6d.
Teach me Thy way ... W. H. Gladstone, 2d.; F. L. Moir 4d.
*The Lord hath been mindful... ... ... S. S. Wesley 4d.
*The Lord is my Shepherd ... ... G. A. Macfarren 2d.
*The Lord is my Shepherd ... ... J. Shaw 4d.
The Lord will comfort Zion ... ... H. Hiles 8d.
Thou art worthy, O Lord ... ... F. E. Gladstone 4d.
Thou shalt shew me the path of life... ... ... A. Gray 2d.
Three in One and One in Three (S.S.) ... F. W. Wadeley 3d.
We humbly beseech Thee ... ... H. E. Button 1½d.
Whatsoever is born of God ... ... H. Oakeley 4d.
Who can comprehend Thee ... ... Mozart 4d.

 Anthems marked thus () may be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d. to 3d. each.*

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE DESCANT HYMN-TUNE BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF WELL-KNOWN TUNES

ARRANGED BY

GEOFFREY SHAW

TUNES, AND APPROPRIATE HYMNS.

TUNE.	METRE.	HYMN.
Austria	8.7.8.7.D.	Glorious things of thee are spoken
		Praise the Lord ! ye heavens, adore Him
Bishopthorpe	C.M.	This is the day the Lord hath made
Darwall's 148th	6.6.6.6.4.4.4.4.	Ye holy Angels bright
Ein' feste Burg	8.7.8.7.6.6.6.7.	A safe stronghold our God is still
		Rejoice to-day with one accord
Eisenach	L.M.	Great God, Who, hid from mortal sight
		O Love, how deep ! how broad ! how high
Hanover	10.10.11.11.	Disposer Supreme, and Judge of the earth
		O worship the King, All-glorious above
Hyfrydol	8.7.8.7.D.	Alleluia ! sing to Jesus
Irish	C.M.	The Son of Man from Jordan rose
Lasst uns erfreuen	L.M. (with Alleluias)	Light's glittering morn bedecks the sky
		Ye watchers and ye holy ones
Leoni	6.6.8.4.D.	The God of Abraham praise
Luther	8.7.8.7.8.8.7.	Great God, what do I see and hear?
Melcombe	L.M.	New every morning is the love
Morning Hymn	L.M.	Awake, my soul, and with the sun
Nun danket	6.7.6.7.6.6.6.6.	Now thank we all our God
Old 100th (1st Version)	L.M.	All people that on earth do dwell
Old 100th (2nd Version)	L.M.	Before Jehovah's awful Throne
Old 104th	10.10.11.11.	Disposer Supreme, and judge of the earth
		O worship the King, All-glorious above
Richmond	C.M.	Praise to the Holiest in the height
Rockingham	L.M.	My God, and is Thy Table spread ?
		When I survey the wondrous Cross
St. Anne (1st Version)	C.M.	O God, our help in ages past
St. Anne (2nd Version)	C.M.	The Son of God goes forth to war
St. Theodulph	7.6.7.6.D.	All glory, laud, and honour
St. Thomas	S.M.	The Advent of our God
Surrey	8.8.8.8.8.	The Lord my pasture shall prepare
		We have not known Thee as we ought
Tallis' Canon	L.M.	Glory to Thee, my God, this night
Unser Herrscher	8.7.8.7.8.7.	Come ye faithful, raise the anthem
Victory	8.8.8.4.	The strife is o'er, the battle done
Wareham	L.M.	O Saviour, Lord, to Thee we pray
Warrington	L.M.	Now that the daylight fills the sky
Wiltshire	C.M.	Through all the changing scenes of life
Winchester New	L.M.	On Jordan's bank the Baptist's cry
Winchester Old (1st Version)	C.M.	When God of old came down from Heaven
Winchester Old (2nd Version)	C.M.	While shepherds watched their flocks by night

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.
Voice Parts only, 8*d*.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS.
ORATORIOS, CANTATAS, ETC.

(S.A.T.B. EDITIONS ONLY.)

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE EACH.

ADAMS, T.—†Cross of Christ, The.
——†Golden Harvest, A.
——†Holy Child, The.
——†Nativity, The.
—— Rainbow of Peace, The.
ALCOCK, W. G.—And I heard a great voice.
ANDERTON, T.—Norman Baron, The.
——†Wreck of the Hesperus, The.
ASPA, E.—Gipsies, The.
ASTORGA.—Stabat Mater.
AUSTIN, F.—†Songs in a Farmhouse.
BACH.—†Bide with us.
——† Ditto. (Welsh Words).
—— Christ lay in death's dark prison.
—— Christians, grave ye this glad day.
——†Christmas Oratorio. Parts 1—2.
Ditto Ditto. Parts 3—4.
Ditto Ditto. Parts 5—6.
——†Come, Jesu, come (Motet).
—— Come, Redeemer of our race.
—— From depths of woe I call on Thee.
—— Give the hungry man thy bread.
—— God goeth up with shouting.
——†God so loved the world.
——†God's time is the best.
——† Ditto (Welsh Words).
——†How brightly shines yon star of morn.
—— If thou but sufferest God to guide thee.
——†Jesu, Priceless Treasure (Motet).
——† Ditto (Welsh Words).
—— Jesus, now will we praise Thee.
—— Jesus sleeps, what hope remaineth.
—— Let songs of rejoicing be raised.
—— Lord is a sun and shield, The.
——†Lord is my Shepherd, The.
—— Lord, Pebuke me not.
——*†Magnificat in D.
——†My spirit was in heaviness.
—— O Christ, my all in living.
—— O Jesu Christ, Thou Prince of Peace.
——†O Light Everlasting.
—— O praise the Lord for all His mercies.
—— O teach me, Lord, my days to number.
—— Praise our God Who reigns in Heaven.
—— Praise thou the Lord, Jerusalem.
—— Rise, O Soul.
—— Sages of Sheba, The.
——†Sing ye to the Lord (Motet).
——†Sleepers, wake.
——†Spirit also helpeth us, The (Motet).
——†Stronghold Sure, A.
—— There is nought of soundness in all my body.
—— Thou Guide of Israel.
—— Wailing, crying, mourning, sighing.
—— Watch ye, Pray ye.
—— When will God recall my spirit.
—— Whoso doth offer thanks.
BARNBY, J.—†Rebekah.
BARTON, M.—Mass in A.
BEETHOVEN.—†Choral Fantasia.
—— Engedi.
——†Mass in C (Latin).
——*Mass in C.
—— Mount of Olives.
BENNETT, G. J.—Easter Hymn (On the morn of Easter Day).
BENNETT, W. S.—Exhibition Ode.
——†May Queen, The.
——†Woman of Samaria, The.
BETJEMANN.—Song of the Western Men.
BLAIR, H.—†Harvest-tide.
BRAHMS, J.—Song of Destiny, A.
—— Songs of Love (Vocal Part only).
BREE, J. B. VAN.—†St. Cecilia's Day.
BREWER, A. H.—O praise the Lord.
—— Song of Eden, A.
BRIDGE, J. F.—Hymn to the Creator.
——†Inchcape Rock, The.
——†Lord's Prayer, The.
——*†Rock of Ages.
CARISSIMI.—*Jephthah.
CHERUBINI.—*Mass, Requiem, in C minor (No. 1).
—— Mass (Coronation) in A (No. 3).
—— Mass, in C (No. 4).
COBB, G. F.—My soul truly waiteth.
COSTA, M.—Dream, The.
COWEN, F. H.—†He giveth His beloved sleep.
DALE, B. J.—†Before the paling of the stars.
DAVIES, H. W.—†Hervé Riel.
—— Ode on Time.
DUNHILL, T. F.—†Tubal Cain.
ELGAR, E.—†For the Fallen.
——†Fourth of August, The.
—— Te Deum and Benedictus, in F.
ELLICOTT, R. F.—Elysium.
FRANZ, R.—Praise ye the Lord.
GADE, N. W.—†Christmas Eve.
——†Erl-King's Daughter, The.
—— Zion.
GARRETT, G. M.—†Harvest Cantata.
GAUL, A. R.—†Ruth (Choruses only).
GOETZ, H.—†By the Waters of Babylon.
——†Nœnia.
GOODHART, A. M.—Earl Haldan's Daughter.
GOUNOD, CH.—Daughters of Jerusalem.
—— De Profundis (Latin).
—— Ditto (English).
——†Faust (Selection for Concert Performance).
——*†Gallia.
—— Messe Solennelle, Ste. Cécile (Latin).
—— Out of Darkness.
—— Passion, The.
——†Redemption (Part 2).
—— Ditto (Part 3).
GRAUN.—Passion, The (Choruses only).
GRAY, A.—Legend of the Rock Buoy Bell.
GRIMM, J. O.—Soul's Aspiration, The.
HANDEL.—†Acis and Galatea.
—— Chandos Te Deum.
—— Dettingen Te Deum.
—— Dixit Dominus.
——*Except the Lord build the house.
——†Israel in Egypt (Pocket Edition).
——†Judas Maccabæus (Ditto.)
——†Messiah (Ditto).
——*Nisi Dominus.
—— O come, let us sing unto the Lord.
——†O praise the Lord.
—— Ode on St. Cecilia's Day.
—— Passion of Christ, The (Abridged).
—— Utrecht Jubilate.
—— Ways of Zion, The.
HARRISON, J.—Christmas Cantata.
——†Harvest Cantata.
HARRISS, C. A. E.—Sands of Dee, The.
HARWOOD, BASIL.—Love Incarnate.
HAYDN.—†Creation, The (Pocket Edition).
——*Mass, in B flat (No. 1).
—— Mass, in B flat (No. 1) (Latin).
—— Mass, in C (No. 2) (Latin).
—— Mass, in D (No. 3) (Latin).
——*Mass, in D (No. 3).
——*Te Deum Laudamus, in C.
—— Seasons, The, From:
†Spring, Autumn.
Summer, Winter.
—— Seasons, The (Choruses only).
HECHT, E.—O may I join the choir invisible.
HIGGS, H. M.—Erl-King, The.
HILLER, F.—†Song of Victory, A.
HOLST, G.—Ode to Death.
—— Ode on a Grecian Urn.
HUMMEL.—Mass, in B flat (No. 1).
—— Mass, in E flat (No. 2).
—— Mass, in D (No. 3).
JENSEN, A.—†Feast of Adonis, The.
JORDAN, W.—Blow ye the trumpet in Zion.
LEMARE, E. H.—'Tis the spring of souls to-day.
LEO, L.—Dixit Dominus.
LLOYD, C. H.—O give thanks unto the Lord.
—— Song of Balder, The.
MACCUNN, H.—†Lord Ullin's Daughter.
——†Wreck of the Hesperus, The.
MACFARREN, G. A.—†May Day.
—— Outward Bound.
MACKENZIE, A. C.—†Bride, The.
MENDELSSOHN.—†As the hart pants.
——†Athalie.
——*Ave Maria (Saviour of Sinners).
——†Christus.
——†Come, let us sing.
——†Elijah (Pocket Edition).
—— Ditto (Choruses only).
MENDELSSOHN.—continued.
——†Festgesang (Hymns of Praise).
——†Hear my Prayer.
——†Hymn of Praise (Lobgesang).
——*†Lauda Sion.
——†Lord, how long.
——†Loreley.
—— Man is Mortal.
——*Not unto us.
——*St. Paul (Pocket Edition).
—— Ditto (Choruses only).
——†Walpurgis Night, The First.
——†When Israel out of Egypt came.
MEYERBEER.—91st Psalm (Latin).
—— 91st Psalm (English).
MOZART.—King Thamos.
——*Mass in C (No. 1).
—— Mass in B flat (No. 7) (Latin).
—— Mass in G (No. 12) (Latin).
—— Mass in G (No. 12) (English).
——*†Mass in G (No. 12).
—— Mass, Requiem, in D minor (No. 15) (Latin).
——*†Mass, Requiem, in D minor (No. 15).
NORTH, S.—†In the Morning.
PALESTRINA.—Surge Illuminare.
PARKER, H. W.—Kobolds, The.
PARRY, C. H. H.—†Blest Pair of Sirens.
——†Chivalry of the Sea, The (Naval Ode).
—— Glories of our Blood and State, The.
—— Te Deum Laudamus (Coronation).
PINSUTI, C.—Phantoms.
PROUT, E.—Freedom.
——†Hundredth Psalm, The.
PURCELL.—Te Deum and Jubilate, in D.
——†Te Deum, in D.
—— Te Deum, in D (Latin).
ROMBERG.—Harmony of the Spheres, The.
——†Lay of the Bell, The.
—— Te Deum Laudamus, in D.
——†Transient and the Eternal, The.
ROSSINI.—*†Stabat Mater.
SACHS, ED.—King Cups.
—— Water-Lilies.
SCHUBERT.—Mass, in A flat.
—— Mass, in B flat.
—— Mass, in C.
——†Mass, in F.
—— Mass, in G.
——†Song of Miriam.
SCHUMANN.—Advent Hymn, "In Lowly Guise."
—— King's Son, The.
—— Manfred.
—— Mignon's Requiem.
——†New Year's Song.
—— Pilgrimage of the Rose.
SCHUTZ, H.—Passion of our Lord, The.
SELBY, B. L.—Dying Swan, The.
SILAS, E.—Mass, in C.
SMITH, A. B.—In Glorious Freedom.
SMITH, A. M.—Ode to the North-East Wind.
SPOHR.—Christian's Prayer, The.
——†God, Thou art Great.
—— Hymn to St. Cecilia.
——†Last Judgment, The.
STEPHEN, D.—†Laird o' Cockpen, The.
STOCKER, S.—Song of the Fates.
STOJOWSKI, S.—Springtime.
SULLIVAN, A.—Exhibition Ode.
—— †Te Deum (Thanksgiving).
THOMAS, A. G.—†Sun Worshippers, The.
THORNE, E. H.—Be merciful unto me.
TOURS, B.—Festival Ode, A.
WAGNER.—Flying Dutchman (A Selection from Act II.).
WALKER, E.—Hymn to Dionysus, A.
—— Ode to a Nightingale.
WEBER, C. M.—Jubilee Cantata.
—— *Mass in E flat.
—— *Mass in G.
—— Preciosa.
—— Three Seasons.
WESLEY, S.—Dixit Dominus.
WESLEY, S. S.—O Lord, Thou art my God.
WEST, J. E.—Lord, I have loved the habitation of Thy House.
—— Song of Zion, A.
WOOD, C.—Ode to the West Wind.
WOODMAN, R. T.—Falmouth.

*The Works marked thus * have Latin and English words. Those marked thus † may be had in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.*
Cantatas, &c., for Female and Male Voices (see Novello's Catalogues).

LONDON: NOVELLO & COMPANY, LIMITED.

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6, 1891.
"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC
BY
J. H. MAUNDER

	Staff Notation.	Tonic Sol-fa.
HARVEST ANTHEMS.
Sing to the Lord of Harvest	4d.	3d.
While the earth remaineth	4d.	3d.
Blessed be the Name of the Lord	4d.	3d.
SERVICES.
SERVICE IN G	2s.	1s. 4d.
Or, separately:—
Te Deum	4d.	3d.
Benedicite, omnia Opera	3d.	3d.
Benedictus	3d.	3d.
Jubilate	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion	10d.	8d.
Pater Noster from the above	3d.	3d.
Amen ditto	1½d.	1½d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis	4d.	3d.
SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1)	1s. 4d.	10d.
Or, separately:—
Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion	8d.	6d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis	4d.	3d.
Te Deum in B flat	4d.	3d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison)	4d.	2d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D	4d.	3d.
ORGAN.
Voix Seraphique (for Recitals)	2s. 6d.	—
CHURCH CANTATA.
Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use)	2s.	1s. 4d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

SCHOOL MARCHES
FOR PIANOFORTE SOLO
BOOK III.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

CONTENTS.

Arrival of the Visitors... ... ... H. Hofmann
Bright and Buxom Lasses, from "Martha" ... Flotow
Instrumental Band, The ... ... Percy E. Fletcher
Little March, A ... ... J. D. Davis
March from "Egmont" ... ... Beethoven
March from "St. Polycarp"... ... F. A. G. Ouseley
March ... ... Th. Kullak
March from "Tannhäuser" ... ... Wagner
Marching off to Bed ... ... Myles B. Foster
March of Priests, from "The Magic Flute" Mozart
Soldiers' Chorus, from "Il Trovatore" ... ... Verdi
Toy Soldiers' March ... ... Tschaïkowsky

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Produced at the Leeds Musical Festival, 1925.

FIRST CHORAL SYMPHONY
THE WORDS SELECTED FROM THE POEMS OF
JOHN KEATS
AND SET TO MUSIC FOR
SOPRANO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
BY GUSTAV HOLST.
(OP. 41.)

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.
FULL SCORE (in the Press) PRICE £3 3s.

Separately from the above:

Ode on a Grecian Urn
FOR CHORUS AND SMALL ORCHESTRA.
PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

Band Parts of the Complete Work and of the
SCHERZO
which may be played as an Orchestral Piece without Chorus may be had on hire.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

FOUR
TENNYSON LYRICS
SET TO MUSIC BY
PERCY E. FLETCHER.

1. A LULLABY.
2. THE CITY CHILD.
3. THE REIGN OF THE ROSES.
4. THE THROSTLE.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOCTURNE
FOR VIOLONCELLO (OR VIOLIN) AND PIANOFORTE.
BY
COLIN MACLEOD CAMPBELL.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

ARRANGEMENT FOR SMALL ORCHESTRA.

	s.	d.
Piano Conductor	1	6
String Parts	2	8
Wind Parts, &c.	4	0
Harmonium	0	8

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SMALL

	Full Orchestra.	Small Orchestra.	Full Score.	Piano Conductor.	Violin Conductor.	Piano Solo.	Violin and Piano.	Violin 1mo.	Violin 2do.	Viola.	'Cello and Basso.	'Cello.	Basso.	Piccolo.
AUSTIN, E., Sweet Night	...	2/-	...	...	...	...	2/3	4d.	...	...	8d.	...	...	...
BENDALL, Pas Seul	...	7/4	...	...	...	1/6	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
BENNETT, Eventide Melody	...	4/4	4/-	...	...	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
BLAIR, Serenata	...	5/4	...	...	8d.	2/3	...	8d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
BREWER, Auf Wiedersehen	...	4/4	...	...	8d.	3/-	3/-	8d.	...	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
CAMPBELL, Nocturne	...	7/4	...	1/6	...	...	2/-	8d.	8d.	4d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
CARSE Barbara Allen Variations ...	...	6/-	...	2/3	...	...	...	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	...	...	...
,, Gavotte in G	...	5/4	...	...	...	2/3	2/3	8d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, Waltzes, Four ...	...	19/5	...	...	...	4/-	4/6	2/3	2/3	2/3	2/3	...	...	...
,, Hiawatha (Selection from Wedding-Feast)... ...	...	23/9	...	2/3	...	...	...	2/3	1/6	1/6	...	1/6	1/6	...
§ Nero Music. ,, Prelude, 2nd Entr'acte ...	17/-	...	...	3/-	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
§ Nero Music. ,, Intermezzo	7/4	...	...	8d.	...	2/3	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
§ Nero Music. ,, Finale, 1st Entr'acte ...	18/2	...	...	2/3	...	3/-	3/-	1/6	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	1/6A
§ Nero Music. ,, Eastern Dance	11/8	...	...	1/6	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
,, Novelletten, Nos. 1, 2, & 3 ea. ...	3/8	4/-	...	...	...	...	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
,, ,, No. 4	6/2	4/-	...	...	...	...	3/-	1/6	1/6	1/6	...	8d.	8d.	...
COWEN, English Dances, Four	22/2	...	...	...	...	4/-	4/6	2/3	2/3	2/3	2/3	...	...	...
,, February (Months, No. 2)... ...	6/4	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	4d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
,, May (,, ,, 5)...	4/-	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
,, June (,, ,, 6)...	4/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	...	4d.
,, September (,, ,, 9)...	10/-	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
,, November (,, ,, 11)...	11/10	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	1/6	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
,, December (,, ,, 12)...	7/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
,, Menuet d'Amour	5/8	...	5/6	...	...	2/3	3/-	8d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
DAVIES, Solemn Melody (str. & org.)...	...	2/4	3/-	...	...	2/3	2/3	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
DUNHILL, Chiddingfold Suite	...	9/9	7/6	...	...	...	...	2/3	2/3	2/3	...	1/6	1/6	...
ELGAR, Chanson de Matin	...	4/-	4/-	8d.	...	2/3	3/-	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
,, Chanson de Nuit	...	3/8	4/-	8d.	...	2/3	2/3	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
,, Pleading	...	3/4	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...
,, Serenade (Wand of Youth)	...	2/4	...	1/6A	...	2/3	3/-	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
,, Canto Popolare	...	6/4	4/6	...	...	3/-	3/-	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
FLETCHER, Bagatelles (strings only) ...	...	3/6	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	1/6	...	...	...
,, The Toy Soldiers' March...	...	8/-	...	...	8d.	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.A
,, Valse Lyrique	...	9/6	...	...	...	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
GOUNOD, There is a green hill ...	4/8	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...
HANDEL, Dance of Sailors	7/8	...	...	...	...	1/6	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
HAYNES, Westwood Gavotte	...	6/4	...	...	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
HOLBROOKE, Souvenir de Printemps ...	...	4/4	...	...	...	3/-	3/-	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
IRELAND, Bagatelle	...	7/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
JOHNSON, Elves (Faerie Suite, No. 1)...	...	8/-	...	1/6	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
,, Pavane in A	...	6/8	...	8d.	...	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
KREUZ, Conversation Amoureuse	...	6/10	...	1/6	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	1/6	...	...	...
LEMARE, Adantino	...	5/8	...	1/6	...	...	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
,, Chant sans Paroles	...	5/-	...	...	8d.	2/3	3/-	4d.	8d.	8d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
,, Menuet Nuptiale	...	4/4	...	8d.	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
MACKENZIE, Benedictus	4/8	...	7/6	...	...	...	3/-	8d.A	A	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
PURCELL, Gordian Knot Untied, 1st and 2nd Suites ... each	...	2/8	4/-	...	...	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
,, Suite	...	2/8	1/6	...	...	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
,, The Virtuous Wife (Incidental Music)	...	...	4/-	...	...	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
RAMEAU, Gavotte	6/-	...	...	...	...	2/3	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
RAWLINSON, Serenade	...	3/8	...	...	8d.	2/3	...	8d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
,, Aubade	...	6/-	...	...	8d.	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
REED, Serenade (Suite Venitienne) ...	...	4/8	...	8d.	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d	...	...	...
ROËCKEL, Graceful Dance	6/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
ROWLEY, Andante Religioso in $\frac{7}{4}$ time ...	2/8	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
WADDINGTON, Intermezzo	7/4	...	1/6	...	...	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
WAREING, Summergold Gavotte ...	7/4	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
WENDT, Air de Ballet	7/4	...	...	1/6	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
WEST, Intermezzo	...	5/-	...	8d.	...	...	2/3	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
,, Marjorie Gavotte	5/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
,, Maypole Dance...	14/-	...	...	2/3	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
WOLSTENHOLME, Allegretto in E♭ ...	6/-	...	...	...	...	2/3	2/3	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...

N.B.—Parts marked A, B, C D, E, or F, are printed together.

ORCHESTRAS. SUITABLE FOR CINEMAS, &c.

Flauti.	Oboi.	Clarinetti.	Fagotti.	Corni 1 & 2.	Corni 3 & 4.	Trombe.	Cornetti.	Tromboni 1 and 2.	Trombone 3.	Euphonium.	Tuba.	Timpani.	Cassa.	Piatti.	Side Drum.	Triangle.	Tambourine.	Harp.	Solo-Cornet or Euphonium.	Organ or Harmonium.	Harp or Piano.	Bells.
4d.	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	4d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	4d.	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
1/6	1/6	2/3	1/6	1/6	...	1/6	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
2/3	1/6	2/3	2/3	2/3	...	1/6	...	...	8d.	...	...	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	1/6	...	...	...	...
1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d.A	A	A	A	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
A	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d.B	B	4d.	B	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
8d.	†8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	4d.	...	4d.	8d.A	8d.B	B	A	4d.C	...	8d.	...	...	...	C
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.A	A	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.A	A	...	...	...	...	...
3/-	1/6	3/-	1/6	1/6	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	8d.A	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
§8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...	...	4d.A	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	4d.	...	4d.
8d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...
4d.	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...
4d.	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...
8d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
A	8d.	8d.	8d.B	8d.	...	...	8d.	8d.	...	B	...	...	...	...	8d.C	C	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	1/6	...
d.D	D	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.E	...	E	4d.F	F	...	...	F	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	4d.	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	4d.	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	4dA.	A	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	4d.	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...	...	8d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	..	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	4d.	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	8d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...
8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	4d.	...	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	8d.	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.A	...	...	...	A	8d.	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...

† Oboe has the Melody. X Flute has the Melody. § May be had as a complete Suite.

SOLOS FROM THE CHURCH CANTATAS

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH.

In Twelve Books—each Book, One Shilling and Sixpence.

FIRST SET.

SOPRANO.

Air — WITHIN MY HEART OF HEARTS ("A Stronghold Sure").
Air — OUR JESUS HATH FOR AYE ("God goeth up").
Air — MY HEART EVER TRUSTING ("God so loved the world").
Air — O GRANT US, MIGHTY LORD ("Jesus, now will we praise Thee").
Air — SIGHING, WEEPING ("My spirit was in heaviness").

ALTO.

Air — THOU, WHOSE PRAISES NEVER END ("Bide with us").
Recit. — THE FATHER HATH APPOINTED HIM ("God goeth up").
Air — MY SPIRIT HIM DESCRIES ("God goeth up").
Air — INTO THY HANDS ("God's time is best").
Air — REJOICE, YE SOULS, ELECT AND HOLY ("O Light Everlasting").

TENOR.

Air — LORD, TO US THYSELF BE SHOWING ("Bide with us").
Recit. — WHY HAST THOU THEN ("My Spirit was in heaviness").
Air — FAST MY BITTER TEARS " " "
Air — REJOICE, O MY SPIRIT " " "
Recit. — THE MIGHTY GUARDIAN ("Thou Guide of Israel").
Air — HIS FACE MY SHEPHERD " " "
Air — AND WHY ART THOU, MY SOUL ("When will God recall").

BASS.

Recit. — HE COMES, THE LORD OF LORDS ("God goeth up").
Air — 'TIS HE, WHO ALL ALONE ("God goeth up").
Recit. — IT IS NOT MINE ("God so loved the world").
Air — ON MY BEHALF " " "
Recit. — YEA, THIS THY WORD ("Thou Guide of Israel").
Air — WHOM JESUS DEIGNS " "
Air — YET SILENCE ("When will God recall").

SECOND SET.

SOPRANO.

Air — OPEN WIDE, MY HEART ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — FATHER, WHAT I PROFFER ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — COME, VISIT, YE GLOWING ("How brightly shines").
Air — I HAVE WAITED FOR THE LORD ("If thou but sufferest").

ALTO.

Air — GOD'S ENSAMPLE THUS TO FOLLOW ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — JESUS SLEEPS ("Jesus sleeps, what hope remaineth").
Recit. — INCLINE THINE EAR ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — THE LORD HATH HEARD ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — ALL EARTHLY POWERS FROM GOD INHERIT ("Praise thou the Lord").

TENOR.

Recit. — THE SAVIOUR NOW APPEARETH ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — COME, JESU, COME ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — WHAT VOICE IS WITH THE TEMPEST ("From depths of woe").
Air — TUNEFUL HARPS AND VOICES ("How brightly shines").
Air — THOU ART MY GOD ("Lord, rebuke me not").

BASS.

Air — THE PASCHAL VICTIM HERE WE SEE ("Christ lay in death's dark prison").
Air — DO THINE ALMS ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — WITH JESUS WILL I GO ("Wailing, crying").
Recit. — AH, WHEN ON THAT GREAT DAY ("Watch ye, pray ye").
Air — BLESSED RESURRECTION DAY " "

THIRD SET.

SOPRANO.

Recit. — O LORD, HEAR ME WHEN I CALL ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — HOW LONG, O LORD " "
Air — O PRAISE THE LORD ("O Praise the Lord").
Recit. — O JESU, OUR REDEEMER ("There is nought of soundness").
Air — HEARKEN WHEN WITH TREMBLING ACCENTS " "
Air — THOUGH REVILING TONGUES ASSAIL ME ("Watch ye, pray ye").

ALTO.

Air — BE WELCOME, THOU GREAT ANGEL ("O teach me, Lord").
Air — AH, TARRY YET ("Praise our God").
Air — GOD IS EVER SUN AND SHIELD ("The Lord is a sun and shield").
Recit. — BE STEADFAST IN AFFLICTION ("Wailing, crying").
Air — PAIN AND SORROW WORK SALVATION " "

TENOR.

Recit. — LORD, WHY SO FAR AWAY ("Jesus sleeps").
Air — IN BILLOWS THE RIVERS OF BELIAL ("Jesus sleeps").
Recit. — O HAPPY TOWN, O FAVOURED LAND ("Praise thou the Lord").
Air — O BLEST ARE ALL THAT FEAR HIM " " "
Recit — REJECT IT NOT ("Sages of Sheba").
Air — SAVIOUR, TAKE ME FOR THINE OWN ("Sages of Sheba").
Air — UPLIFT YOUR HEADS ON HIGH ("Watch ye, pray ye").

BASS.

Air — GOD, WHOSE POWER ("Let songs of rejoicing").
Recit. — ALTHOUGH AN HOST ENCAMP ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — O LORD, THY MERCY " "
Air — FARE YE WELL ("O teach me, Lord").
Recit. — THESE THINGS THAT ISAIAH OF OLD ("The Sages of Sheba").
Air — GOLD OF OPHIR IS BUT VAIN " "
Air — AH, WHERE SHALL I SUCCOUR ("There is nought of soundness").

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

Produced at the Gloucester Musical Festival.

JUST PUBLISHED.

A SPRIG OF SHAMROCK

FOUR OLD IRISH AIRS.

For Soprano or Tenor Voice, with String Quartet or Pianoforte Accompaniment.

POEMS BY
F. W. HARVEY.

MUSIC ADAPTED AND ARRANGED BY
A. HERBERT BREWER.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE
STRING PARTS, Price 8s.

An Edition for Contralto or Baritone is also published.
Price 3s. 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Produced at the Gloucester Musical Festival.

JUST PUBLISHED.

LOVE INCARNATE

A SETTING OF LINES
BY ROBERT BROWNING.
With a Verse of the Hymn, "Jesu, dulcis memoria,"
BY
ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX.
Translated by the Rev. J. M. NEALE.
Composed for Chorus, Semi-Chorus, Orchestra, and Organ
BY BASIL HARWOOD.
(Op. 37.)

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

HIAWATHA'S WEDDING-FEAST
AND
THE DEATH OF MINNEHAHA

COMPOSED BY
S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR.
ARRANGED FOR PIANOFORTE SOLO
BY
JOHN POINTER.

Price Five Shillings and Sixpence each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

The Lording's Daughter

BALLAD.

WORDS ELIZABETHAN.

MUSIC BY EDWARD GERMAN.

TWO KEYS.

Price Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

JUST PUBLISHED.

ON A NANKIN PLATE

SONG.

WORDS BY AUSTIN DOBSON

MUSIC BY
HARVEY GRACE.

TWO KEYS.

Price Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS.
BOOK 273.

THIRTY SONGS

BY FRANZ SCHUBERT.

BOTH NOTATIONS.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

OVERTURE IN D MINOR

COMPOSED BY

HANDEL.

ARRANGED FOR THE ORGAN

BY

H. F. ELLINGFORD.

FROM THE ORCHESTRAL TRANSCRIPTION

BY

EDWARD ELGAR.

Price Two Shillings and Threepence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE

ORGAN WORKS

OF

RHEINBERGER

BY

HARVEY GRACE.

Cloth Gilt, xii. + 130 pages.

WITH 127 MUSICAL ILLUSTRATIONS.

Price Five Shillings net.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

TWELVE

Short Introductory Voluntaries

FOR THE ORGAN

BY

W. G. ALCOCK.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 101.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

EAR-TRAINING

INCLUDING

MUSICAL APPRECIATION AND RHYTHMIC MOVEMENTS.

BY

MABEL CHAMBERLAIN.

COMPLETE, SIX SHILLINGS,
Paper Boards, 7s.
Or,
In Two Books: Letterpress and Illustrations, 4s.
Music only, 3s.

The Ear-Training Course outlined in this book is intended primarily for Class use, but if a judicious selection be made from the exercises, the course can be used with equal benefit by private teachers for individual pupils. Senior pupils and students who desire to Study music, and who have received little or no previous tuition, cannot do better than work rapidly through these progressive exercises and tests. A Prospectus will be sent on application.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

No. 63.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

BREATHING

FOR

VOICE-PRODUCTION

(Rewritten and brought up to date).

PART I.

OF

EURHYTHM: THOUGHT IN ACTION

BY

H. H. HULBERT.

Price ... Three Shillings.
Paper Boards, 4s.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 100.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

PRONUNCIATION

FOR

VOICE-PRODUCTION

FROM

EURHYTHM: THOUGHT IN ACTION.

BY

H. H. HULBERT.

PRICE, ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited,

EMPIRE SONG BOOK

A COLLECTION OF SUITABLE MUSIC FOR CHILDREN'S FESTIVALS WHICH IS SO ARRANGED THAT IT MAY BE PERFORMED WITH OR WITHOUT ACTIONS.

"SHE STANDS A THOUSAND-WINTERED TREE"

"AN EMPIRE SONG"

AND THE

MEDLEYS

COMPOSED BY

PERCY E. FLETCHER.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Vocal Parts (Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations combined), Sixpence.

Orchestral Parts may be obtained.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS.
BOOK 274.

FOLK-SONGS

FOR SCHOOLS.

COLLECTED AND ARRANGED BY

CECIL J. SHARP.

SET IX.

No.
1407	BLACKBIRDS AND THRUSHES
1408	DABBLING IN THE DEW
1409	THE BONNY LIGHTER-BOY
1410	THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON
1411	THE TREE IN THE WOOD
1412	THE BOLD FISHERMAN
1413	MY BOY WILLIE
1414	SCARBOROUGH FAIR
1415	SEARCHING FOR LAMBS

Price Twopence each number.

Price One Shilling.

Voice Parts only, 4*d*.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

OLD ENGLISH
VIOLIN MUSIC

EDITED BY

ALFRED MOFFAT.

PREFATORY NOTE.

Although considerable attention has been given to the resuscitation of Church Music, Glees and Madrigals, Organ and even Harpsichord Music by the older English composers, very little has been done to make known the large mass of music for the Violin written by English musicians from the time of Purcell to the close of the 18th century. These works for the most part consist of Suites or Sonatas written for a solo violin with a figured bass, or for two violins and violoncello with a figured bass for the harpsichord or organ; another favourite form was the Concerto grosso.

It is with the object of making known to the public a selection of the best of these compositions that the present series has been undertaken.

ALFRED MOFFAT.

			s.	d.
No. 1.	SONATA in G major	JAMES LATES	3	0
,, 2.	SONATA in D minor	HENRY ECCLES	3	0
,, 3.	SONATA in B flat major ...	WILLIAM BABELL	3	0
,, 4.	SONATA in G minor	JOHN STANLEY	3	0
,, 5.	SONATA in A major	JOHN COLLETT	3	0
,, 6.	TRIO-SONATA in E minor	THOMAS AUGUSTINE ARNE	4	6
,, 7.	SONATA in D major	RICHARD JONES	3	0
,, 8.	TRIO-SONATA in D minor ...	WILLIAM BOYCE	4	6
,, 9.	THREE PIECES	WILLIAM BOYCE	3	0
,, 10.	SONATA in E major ...	CHARLES MACKLEAN	3	0
,, 11.	SONATA in G minor	WILLIAM CROFT	3	0
,, 12.	SONATA in D minor	JOSEPH GIBBS	3	0
,, 13.	SONATA in D minor	JOHN HUMPHRIES	3	0
,, 14.	SONATA in A minor	THOMAS VINCENT	3	0

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

EDITED, ARRANGED IN GROUPS, AND THE FINGERING REVISED AND SUPPLEMENTED BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

THIS Collection of Studies is intended to illustrate the various elements of a complete course of pianoforte technique, and to provide students with the means of attacking and overcoming the different special difficulties which have to be encountered. With this view, the Studies have been arranged in groups, those in each group being placed in progressive order, and having reference to some one particular difficulty. The greater part of the Studies themselves have been selected from the standard works of the most eminent Study-writers, and with these are included numerous others, which, though of equally great practical utility, have hitherto been less generally accessible.

1.	FIVE-FINGER STUDIES	Part 1
2.*	,,	,, 2
3.	SCALES	Part 1
4.	,,	,, 2
5.	BROKEN CHORDS	Part 1
6.	,,	,, 2
7.	,,	,, 3
8.	,,	,, 4
9.	,,	,, 5
10.	LEFT HAND	Part 1
11.	,, ,,	,, 2
12.	,, ,,	,, 3
13.	,, ,,	,, 4
14.*	ARPEGGIO	Part 1
15.	,,	,, 2
16.	,,	,, 3
17.	VELOCITY	Part 1
18.	,,	,, 2
19.	,,	,, 3
20.	,,	,, 4
21.	,,	,, 5
22.	,,	,, 6
23.	,,	,, 7
24.	FIGURES IN SEQUENCE	Part 1
25.*	,,	,, 2
26.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	Part 1
27.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	,, 2
28.	SHAKES	Part 1
29.	,,	,, 2
30.	,,	,, 3
31.	DOUBLE NOTES	Part 1
32.	,, ,,	,, 2
33.	,, ,,	,, 3
34.	,, ,,	,, 4
35.	OCTAVES	Part 1
36.*	,,	,, 2
37.	CHORDS	Part 1
38.	,,	,, 2
39.*	STACCATO
40.	REPETITION	Part 1
41.*	REPETITION AND TREMOLO	,, 2
42.	,, ,,	,, 3
43.*	PART-PLAYING	Part 1
44.	,, ,,	,, 2
45.*	ORNAMENTS	Part 1
46.	,,	,, 2
47.	ACCOMPANIED MELODY	Part 1
48.	,, ,,	,, 2
49.	EXTENSIONS AND SKIPS	Part 1
50.*	,, ,,	,, 2
51.	RHYTHM	Part 1
52.*	,,	,, 2
53.	EXERCISES FOR THE WEAKER FINGERS. By J. A. O'NEILL.
54.	WRIST STUDIES (Handgelenksübungen). By ARNOLD KRUG.
55.	EXERCISES FOR FACILITATING INDEPENDENCE OF THE FINGERS (Übungen für die Selbständigkeit der Finger). By ARNOLD KRUG.
56.	PRELIMINARY STUDIES IN PLAYING POLYPHONIC MUSIC (Vorübungen für das polyphone Spiel). By ARNOLD KRUG.

* These Books contain Studies composed by Mr. Franklin Taylor specially for this Series.

FIFTY-SIX BOOKS, PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE EACH.

FROM THE ABOVE:

SELECTED PIANOFORTE STUDIES

PROGRESSIVELY ARRANGED BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

THE present collection of Studies is designed to provide teachers with a short course of Pianoforte Technique adapted to the needs of the average pupil, the intention being to spare the teacher the labour of choosing a sufficiently varied selection from the large mass of material existing, and at the same time to ensure that the different departments of technique shall be undertaken in the order which experience has proved to be the most beneficial.

The Studies are grouped in two Sets, and are so arranged that the different Books in which they are contained may be taken in consecutive order, but pupils who are already further advanced than the elementary stage represented by Set I. may commence at once with Set II., which will be found to be complete in itself, and to illustrate all the essential elements of technique.

Where additional studies are desired, or studies on certain subjects which are not touched upon in this series, the larger collection, published under the title of "Progressive Studies" (from which the present examples have been selected), is of course available.

IN TWO SETS (EIGHT BOOKS), PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH BOOK.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY LIMITED.

ENGLISH LYRICS

SET TO MUSIC BY

C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

EACH SET, PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

FIRST SET.

1. *My true love hath my heart ...Sir Philip Sidney
2. Good-night ... ... Shelley
3. Where shall the lover rest ... ... Scott
4. Willow, Willow, Willow ... ... Shakespeare

SECOND SET.

1. O Mistress Mine ... ... Shakespeare
2. Take, O take those lips away ... Shakespeare
3. No longer mourn for me ... ... Shakespeare
4. Blow, blow, thou winter wind ... ... Shakespeare
5. When icicles hang by the wall ... Shakespeare

THIRD SET.

1. To Lucasta, on going to the wars ... ... Lovelace
2. If thou would'st ease thine heart ... ... Beddoes
3. *To Althea, from prison ... ... Lovelace
4. *Why so pale and wan ... ... Suckling
5. Through the ivory gate ... ... Julian Sturgis
6. Of all the torments ... ... William Walsh

FOURTH SET.

1. *Thine eyes still shined for me ... ... Emerson
2. *When lovers meet again Langdon Elwyn Mitchell
3. *When we two parted ... ... Byron
4. Weep you no more ... ... Anon.
5. There be none of beauty's daughters ... ...Byron
6. Bright star ... ... Keats

FIFTH SET.

1. *A stray nymph of Dian ... ... Julian Sturgis
2. *Proud Maisie... ... ... Scott
3. *Crabbed age and youth ... ... Shakespeare
4. Lay a garland on my hearse Beaumont & Fletcher
5. Love and laughter ... ... Arthur Butler
6. A girl to her glass ... ... Julian Sturgis
7. A Lullaby ... ... E. O. Jones

SIXTH SET.

1. *When comes my Gwen ... ... E. O. Jones
2. *And yet I love her till I die ... ... Anon.
3. *Love is a bable ... ... Anon.
4. *A lover's garland ... ... Alfred P. Graves
5. At the hour the long day ends ... Alfred P. Graves
6. Under the greenwood tree ... ... Shakespeare

SEVENTH SET.

1. On a time the amorous Silvy ... ... Anon.
2. Follow a shadow ... ... Ben Jonson
3. Ye little birds that sit and sing Thomas Heywood
4. O never say that I was false of heart Shakespeare
5. Julia ... ... Herrick
6. *Sleep ... ... Julian Sturgis

EIGHTH SET.

1. Whence ... ... Julian Sturgis
2. Nightfall in winter ... Langdon Elwyn Mitchell
3. Marian ... ... George Meredith
4. Dirge in woods ... ... George Meredith
5. Looking backward ... ... Julian Sturgis
6. Grapes ... ... Julian Sturgis

NINTH SET.

1. Three aspects ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
2. A fairy town (St. Andrew's) Mary E. Coleridge
3. The witches' wood ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
4. Whether I live ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
5. Armida's garden ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
6. *The maiden ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
7. There ... ... Mary E. Coleridge

TENTH SET.

1. My heart is like a singing bird Christina Rossetti
2. Gone were but the winter cold Allan Cunningham
3. A moment of farewell ... ... Julian Sturgis
4. The child and the twlight Langdon Elwyn Mitchell
5. From a city window Langdon Elwyn Mitchell
6. One silent night of late ... ... Herrick

ELEVENTH SET.

1. One golden thread ... ... Julia Chatterton
2. The spirit of the Spring ... Alfred Perceval Graves
3. What part of dread eternity ... Author unknown
4. The Blackbird ... ... Alfred Perceval Graves
5. The faithful lover ... ... Alfred Perceval Graves
6. If I might ride on puissant wing Julian Sturgis
7. Why art thou slow ... ... Massinger
8. She is my love beyond all thought Alfred P. Graves

TWELFTH SET.

1. When the dew is falling ... ... Julia Chatterton
2. To Blossoms ... ... Herrick
3. Rosaline ... ... Lodge
4. When the sun's great orb ... ... H. Warner
5. Dream pedlary ... ... Beddoes
6. O World, O Life, O Time ... ... Shelley
7. The sound of hidden music ... Julia Chatterton

* Published separately, price 1s. 6d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

EURHYTHM: THOUGHT IN ACTION

The Principles and Practice of Vocal and Physical Therapy.

DESIGNED FOR THE USE OF TEACHERS AND STUDENTS OF VOCAL AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION

By H. H. HULBERT

CAPT. R.A.M.C., M.A. OXFORD, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., ETC.

176 Pages, Octavo Size, Cloth, Gilt Lettered - - - - PRICE SEVEN SHILLINGS NET.

SHORT SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTERS.

I.—DEFINITION OF EURHYTHM. II.—THE ENGLISH PHYSIQUE AND ARTISTIC MOVEMENT. Science and games of skill—Movements of novice and master-man—Co-ordination in movement—Discipline of games. III.—THE POISE OF THE BODY AND TONICITY. Common deformities—Correct poise—Correct figure—Lumbar curve the centre of balance—Degrees of tonicity—Position of attention—Special exercises. IV.—THE SCIENCE OF APPRECIATION AND THE CONCEPTION OF THE BEAUTIFUL. Power of imagery—Knowledge of self—Kinds of appreciation—The five senses and experience—Sense of touch in music and games. V.—THE ART OF EXPRESSION AND CONTROL. Three nervous levels—Will and movement—The guiding sensation of movement-feeling—Self-control of the actor and public speaker—Euphonetics. VI.—THE CENTRAL APPARATUS OF SPEECH. VII.—THE SOUNDS OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. VIII.—BREATHING FOR VOICE. Diagrammatic sketch of apparatus—Different kinds of breathing—Effects of types of breathing on voice hygiene and figure. IX.—THE ARTICULATORY APPARATUS. X.—THE LARYNX. XI.—HYGIENE FOR VOICE-USERS AND ORDINARY HEALTH EXERCISES. Voice-user's throat—Physiological congestion of throat—Voice-training prevents voice-user's throat—Loss of health through civilization—Physical exercises for health—Positions: movements of arms, head, body, and legs: balance exercises, jumping, and marching XII.—EURHYTHMICS.—THE PRACTICE OF EURHYTHMICS.

"It was very much wanted, and now that it has arrived it proves to be the best book on the subject we have ever seen . . . One would like to dwell lovingly on every stage of this monumental work did space permit, but it will only allow of a general commendation of every word from the beginning . . . to the end, which consists of music to accompany the rhythmic physical exercises."—The Morning Post, February 17, 1922.

"No teacher of singing should be without this wonderful book."—Musical Opinion.

"This is a thoughtful and thought-compelling book which touches life at most points. Eurhythm the author defines as perfect harmony, and discusses with a fine enthusiasm the practical means of bringing about in the individual this desirable condition. The book should be of great value to teachers of singing and physical education, while the intelligent student can also derive great benefit from a careful reading."—Glasgow Herald.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

All Pianists will welcome this work of great brilliancy.

MANUEL DE FALLA

"Nights in the Gardens of Spain"

SYMPHONIC IMPRESSIONS FOR PIANO SOLO AND ORCHESTRA.

1. In the Generalife. 2. Danse lointaine. 3. In the Gardens of the Sierra of Cordoba.

Piano Solo	6*s.* net.
Piano Solo with Second Piano part for 4 hands ...	10*s.* ,,
Miniature Score	6*s.* ,,

De Falla's "Nights in the Gardens of Spain" consists of three Symphonic Impressions for Piano Solo and Orchestra. The First Movement, "In the Generalife"—a famous garden near Granada—suggests an improvisation. The gently-swaying chief tune is heard at the opening in the orchestra. The Second Movement, "Danse lointaine," is a distant dance—mostly a lively rhythmical piece. This runs straight into the Third Movement, "In the Gardens of the Sierra of Cordoba," a brilliant piece with a florid chief tune.

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD., 11, Great Marlborough St., London, W.1.

London:—Printed by NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W.1. Saturday, May 1, 1926.

No. 1000

THE MUSICAL TIMES

Price 6d.

FOUNDED 1844

JUNE 1, 1926

THE WORLD FAMOUS

Bösendorfer

PIANOS

(Established 1828.)

BUSONI "The Piano was ideal & helped me to give expression to my highest conceptions".....

HAROLD BAUER "These instruments are sympathetic to me in the highest degree".

PADEREWSKY "The Piano was quite wonderful".....

MORITZ ROSENTHAL "The Piano sounded ravishing"...

SOLE AGENTS

The WIGMORE HALL & PIANO GALLERIES Ltd.

32-40, WIGMORE STREET, W.1

ROGERS PIANOS

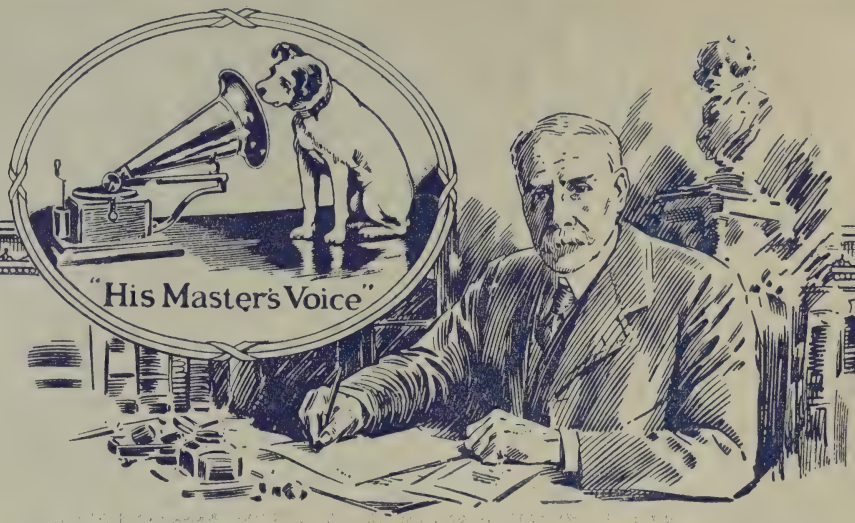
are the outstanding Pianos of the present day for their superb musical qualities, and ahead of all in value.

Call or write for Catalogue

GEORGE ROGERS & SONS

60 Berners Street

London W.1.



Sir Edward Elgar

speaking about the New "His Master's Voice" Instrument, says—

"It is without doubt the most important invention in the history of the gramophone."

The NEW "His Master's Voice" GRAMOPHONE

extends the range of the Gramophone by 2½ octaves. It gives 50 per cent. more volume; eliminates all shrillness and surface noise; reproduces orchestral instruments previously unheard, and is the only Gramophone that gives equal prominence to highest treble and lowest bass.

11 models ranging in price from £7 to £75.

THE GRAMOPHONE CO., LTD.
363-367 OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W. 1.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 1,000—Vol. 67. Registered at the General Post Office for Canadian Postage.

JUNE 1 1926

Price 6*d.*; Postage, 2*d.* Annual Subscription, post-free, 7*s.* 6*d.*

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.

Principal: JOHN B. McEWEN, M.A., Mus. D., Oxon., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

MIDSUMMER HALF-TERM

will begin on Monday, 14th June. ENTRANCE EXAMINATION, Wednesday, 9th June.

ORCHESTRAL CONCERT,

Queen's Hall, Tuesday, 15th June, at 3 p.m.
Conductor: SIR HENRY J. WOOD, Mus. Doc., F.R.A.M.

CHAMBER CONCERTS,

Thursdays, 3rd and 24th June, at 3 p.m.

L.R.A.M.

Last day of entry for the September Examination, 30th June.

SPECIAL COURSES
FOR CONDUCTORS and OPERA.

PERFORMANCES OF

Hänsel and Gretel ... ... Humperdinck
L'Amore Medico ... ... Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari
(First performance in England.)
Venus and Adonis ... ... Dr. John Bull
Dross (A Melodrame) ... ... Paul Corder

And by Special request, one performance of Falstaff ... ... Verdi
will be given at the Scala Theatre, beginning about 12th July.

THE TRAINING COURSE for TEACHERS which has now been entirely re-organized and associated with a definite examination and diploma, will be inaugurated Michaelmas Term, 1926.

Full information and prospectuses of the above on application.

J. A. CREIGHTON, Secretary.

Guildhall School of Music.

(Founded in 1880 by the Corporation of London, and managed by the Music Committee.)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4.

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE Lessons in any single Musical Subject, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera; Classes in Conducting.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £9 9*s.* and £12 12*s.* Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

Telephone: Cent. 4459; and City 5566.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS.

FOUNDED 1913.

PRESIDENT FOR 1926: HARVEY GRACE, F.R.C.O.

Organists, Assistant-Organists, and Choirmasters of all denominations are eligible. Register of vacant appointments.

Particulars and application to the Hon. Sec., DR. J. WARRINER, De Crespigny House, Denmark Hill, S.E.5.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7.

Patrons: { HIS MAJESTY THE KING
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, C.V.O., M.A., MUS. DOC.
Honorary Secretary: GEORGE A. MACMILLAN, Esq., D. Litt.
Registrar: CLAUDE AVELING, Esq., M.A.
Bursar: E. J. N. POLKINHORNE, Hon. R.C.M.

The College offers a Complete Course of Musical Education to pupils of both sexes, both professional and amateur. Upwards of seventy Scholarships and Exhibitions are founded which provide free musical education.

Classes for Score Reading, Conducting, Training of Teachers, Musical Criticism, and Ballet, are held at the College.

The OPERA CLASS has the use of the fully-equipped College OPERA THEATRE, with SUNKEN ORCHESTRA.

EXAMINATIONS for Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.), in all subjects, held three times a year, in April, September, and December. Syllabus and all particulars may be obtained from the Registrar of the College.

The Royal College of Organists.

Candidates for Fellowship are requested to note that in the first few copies of the current Regulations, the requirement for question 3 (C.) of the morning paper was left blank; it is Septet in E flat, Op. 20, Beethoven, Miniature Score. (Goodwin & Tabb.)

The SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Prelude (without Fugue) in E flat, "St. Ann." J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 6, page 28; Augener, p. 133; Peters, Vol. 3, No. 1.)

Choral Prelude on Newtoun, Charles Wood. (No. 6 of 16 Preludes, Vol. 1, Stainer & Bell.)

Fantasia in F minor, Mozart. (Best's arrangements, No. 76, p. 1000; Novello.) This arrangement only.

The selected pieces set for the July, 1926, A.R.C.O. Examination, differ from those set for January, 1926.

Candidates selecting Group 5 of the Associateship pieces are requested to note that the Choral Prelude, "All men must die" ("Alle Menschen müssen sterben") is on page 119, Book 15, of Novello's old edition, and on page 121, of the new edition.

All Candidates for the next Examinations must send in their Names for FELLOWSHIP by JUNE 10th, for ASSOCIATESHIP by JUNE 17th. In the case of NEW MEMBERS proposal forms duly filled up must be sent in before JUNE 3rd. No names will be entered after the above dates.

Examination Regulations, list of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College. Associateship or Fellowship, 6*d.* each (post free).

N.B.—The attention of members and those interested is drawn to the fact that the Annual General Meeting will be held at 2.45, and the Diploma Distribution at 3.15, on Saturday, July 24.

An Organ Recital by Mr. G. Thalben-Ball, Organist of the Temple Church, and a Conversazione will follow the Diploma Distribution.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.
Principal: DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY.
Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are required to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the training of Teachers, approved by Teachers' Registration Council.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

New Pianoforte Professor, Mr. CLAUD BIGGS.

New Professor of Singing, Miss MARGUERITE SWALE.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.

Principal: JOHN B. MCEWEN, Mus. D., Oxon., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

LICENTIATESHIP EXAMINATION.

EASTER, 1926.

The following CANDIDATES were SUCCESSFUL:

HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, and COMPOSITION.—As TEACHER: Jeanne Maude Herbert Smith (Christmas, 1925).

EXAMINERS: A. J. Greenish, Mus. D., Cantab., Stewart Macpherson, William Wallace.

SINGING.—As TEACHERS: Caroline Mary Anderson, Mona Grace Archer, George Brunswick-Bartlett, Winifred Bradley Corbitt, Hilda B. Freeman, Gwladys Kathleen Mary Gibson, Ethel M. Hough, Edith Maud Jackson, Robert McCallum, Dora Gladys Murby, Dorothy Mary Richards, John Edward Smith, Jessie J. M. Warren, Ada Woolfson.

As PERFORMERS: Nelly Bamford, Dorothy E. F. Blagdon, John Bowes, Beatrice Bridges, William Thomas Case, Kathleen May Coombs, Alice Mary Dawes, Maud Donald, Vivien G. Evans, Eva Farrer, Emily Mary Margaret de Guigne, Winifred Hardinge, Hilda Elizabeth Harries, E. Dunstan Hart, Dorothy Gladys Hubbard, Doris Margaret Clifton Izzett, Irene Keeys, Hilda Mabel King, Florence Marian Lance, Luned Lewis-Jones, Helen Lowthian, Elsa Mary Mills, Eileen Milne, Myfanwy Morgan-Jones, Blodwen P. Owen, Annie Geraldine Packman, Eileen Palmer, Betsy de la Porte, Grace Lilian Reynolds, Frederica B. E. Rich, Sarah Jane Rosser, Jennie Swinn, Sylvia Grace Vallance, Dora Wood Vodrey, Edna Hilda Wilson.

EXAMINERS: Thomas Thorpe Bates, John Booth, Edward Iles, J. Frederick Keel, Thomas Meux, Selina Pitt Soper, Marcus Thomson.

PIANOFORTE.—As TEACHERS: Leila Allen, Margaret Andrews, Grace Apthorp, Kate W. Aspin, Margaret Aston, Katherine Marie Atkinson, Kathleen Bailey, Gladys Mary Baker, Nona Margaret Baker, Grace Mary Hatfield Ball, Mary Catherine Beattie, Sylvia Austen Bell, Anna Benington, Nora Bennet, Kathleen Berry, Ethel Nita Betteridge, Ethel M. Blagbrough, Margaret Boffey, Kathleen Grace Boycott, Elsie May Boyes, Joy Marion Bridgens, Freda Broadhead, E. Lucy Brough, Antony Francis Brown, Dora Margarita Brown, Ruth Brownson, Edith Bruck (Christmas, 1925), Gertrude Frances Elizabeth Bryans, Beatrice Eleanor Burling, Ethel Winifred Carr, Kathleen de Carteret, Jane Margaret Amy Cazenove, Violet Layton Chamen, Charlotte Helena Cheetham, Thomas Christy, Nelly Coates, Freda Cockersoll, K. Phyllis Collinson, Kathleen Margaret Collis, Laura Kathleen Connery, Edna Evelyn Cook, William Cooke, Doreen Agnes Coyne, Vera Crabbs, Kathleen Lissett Craddock, Marjorie Hilda Crocker, Margaret Hardie Dalgleish, Grace Emma Daniels, Agnes Gwendoline May Davies, Bessie Davies, Margaret Ellen Davis, Mollie Deverill, Janet O. Dickie, Gertrude Alice Dixon, Janet Kane Duffy, Ivah Dumaresq, Mary Rogerson Dunkerley, Wilhelmina F. Dunster, Harold Durrant, Norah Dale Easter, Mary Ann Elizabeth Eaton, Enid Christine Eddy, Marjorie Kathleen Edwards, Kathleen A. H. Elliott, Margery Ellson, Winifred England, Frances Prudence Evans, Molly Evered, Thomas Fawkes, Ella T. Ferguson, Winifred Rachel Foster, Elsie Kathleen Frank, Susan King Freeland, Eveline E. D. Freeman, Beryl May Furzer, Alexander Gordon Fyfe, Richard Hough Garner, Jean Ross Gibson, Beatrice Gilbert, Edith Gillott, William Edward Glover, Hilda Edith Gough, Agnes Maud Greenland, Idris Griffiths, Margaret Guy, Bertha Mary Haddon, Christine Martin Halliday, Norah Alice Hamer, Mary Hamilton, Phyllis Hardinge, Joyce Haslam, Freda Louisa Hatton, Frances Lois Hawk, Hilda Haysom, Joyce Anstey Hebditch, Kathleen Una Hek, Vera Henry, Henry Henthorn, Winifred Ethel Hogben, Winifred Nicholson Hoggett, Marjorie E. Holden, Kathleen Dinah Hooper, Maud Marion Hough, Gertrude Rose Hull, Lily Ingram, Eric Jackman, Kathleen M. Jaques, Agnes Jessop, Mabel Stewart Johnson, Mildred Mary Johnson, Gladys Jones, Katharine Marshall Jones, Marjorie Jones, Phyllis K. Jones, Elsie Lilian Jupp, Elsie Rose Keevil, Eveline Freda Kenwood, Eileen Mary Knights, Dorothy Knowles, Dorothy Mary Lane, Marion Ruth Langley, Mavis Beatrice Lardge, Doris Emily Larkin, Barbara Larrett, Winifred Ellen Lea, Alexander Elus Levine, Harold Llewellyn Long, Winifred Edith Long, Doris Winifred Longley, Ernest Henry Lush, Mildred E. Mabey, Margaret Macdonald, Mary D. H. MacLagan, Maude Alexandra Madill, Hermione Hilda Maloney, Mildred Mowbray Marriott, Beryl Alice Matchwick, Claudia Elizabeth Matthews, Gertrude Veronica McKeon, Eliza Cooper McRae Agnes Virtue McWhirter, Florence Vera Meakin, Muriel Mettam, Rosamond Millais, Grace Milner, T. Antony Moffitt, Hope Margaret Moncrieff, Gwendoline Moore, Nellie Moore, Gwendolyn Morgan, Mabel Morris, Minna Louise Murray, Florence Louisa Naylor, Dorothy Nicholson, Noel Dorothea Niven, Winifred Amelia Nowlan, Nina Oldfield, M. Gwendoline Owens, Herbert Louis Page, Greta Gertrude Miriam Parkinson, Winifred Blanche de Vere Parkinson, Winifred Mabel Pearson, Katherine Helena Peck, Irene E. Perrett, Edith Elizabeth Perry, Michael Edwin Hamilton Phelps, Kathleen Nora Irene Pickard, Ena Philomen, Henry Pierre, Bessie Porter, ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC—continued.

Alice Vera Preece, Enid Price, Kathleen Augusta Price, Eveline Rose Pritchard, Winifred Jessie Proctor, Catherine Ruth Pugh, Dorothy Muriel Ellen Putland, Eileen Ruth Telford Quick, Lily Doris Rankin, Jean Elizabeth Recordon, Ruth Reichardt, Adelaide Katherine Richardson, Sybil Mary Richardson, William Joseph Riding, Rosalie Mary Roberts, Corinna Alexandra Rolfe, Isobel Wilhelmine Hannah Routley, Frank Rushton, Dorothy Mary Seagrove, Herbert Arthur Shead, Dora Fanny Sheehan, Leonard Thomas Shepstone, Nancy Emily Skyrme, Doreen Slack, Florence Victoria Southworth, Cicely Speid, Hilda Mary Spurge, Marjory Ethel Starke, Marjorie Mary Steele, Mary L. Stevens, Rosalie Westrope Street, Doris Adeline Strong, Ruby Frances Sutcliffe, Esther Elizabeth Way Thacker, Annie Price Thomas, Dorothy M. Thompson, Mary Johnstone Thomson, Norah May Tillstone, Margaret Trail, Lilian Rose Trott, Winifred Laura Turner, Lillian Varley, Carlos Alfonso Colebrook Vazquez, Janet Sharp Wales, Maud S. V. Walker, Barbara Helen Wallace, Alfred Albert William Waller, Mary Warner, Phyllis Warrington, Greta Mary Webb, Jack Werner, Frances Jennings Williams, Rose Wong, Jessie Woods, Nellie Woods.

As PERFORMERS: Margaret Cecilia Albu, Winifred Mona Bowden, Muriel Carolyn Bradford, Cecil May Branson, Chrissie May Harvey, Elsie Gladys May Hogger, Frederic Marsh Jackson, Ethel Kerkin, Reginald King, Olive Mary Page, Joyce Rollitt, Louise Rust, Haydn Lawrence Sail, Phyllis Katherine Mary Sharp, Reginald Francis Shorter, Edna C. O. Stanton, Rhys Donald Lloyd Thomas, John William Trueman, Winifred Doris Whitehead.

EXAMINERS: Carlo Albanesi, Victor G. Booth, York Bowen, Ambrose Coviello, Harold Craxton, Isabel Gray, Welton Hickin, W. J. Kipps, Thomas B. Knott, Vivian Langrish, Dora Matthay, Frederick Moore, Brian Nash, John Pauer, Max Pirani, Claude F. Pollard, Charles F. Reddie, Felix Swinstead, B. McCara Symons, Lawrance Taylor, Egerton Tidmarsh, Percy Waller, Septimus Webbe, Cuthbert Whitemore.

ORGAN.—George Thorn.

EXAMINERS.—Stanley Marchant, Mus. D., Oxon., Reginald Steggall, Walter S. Vale.

ORCHESTRAL INSTRUMENTS.—VIOLIN.—As TEACHERS: Lily Barca, Irene Gyneth Briscoe, Winifred Gavine, Anne S. Harris, May Nesbitt, Elsie L. Smith.

As PERFORMERS: John Marsh, Phyllis Mary McDonald, Doris Smith.

VIOLA.—As TEACHER: Irene Crowther.

VIOLONCELLO.—As PERFORMER: Winifred E. Read.

HARP.—As PERFORMER: Winifred M. Bailiff.

TRUMPET.—As PERFORMER: Arthur William Burton.

EXAMINERS: Spencer Dyke, Marjorie Hayward, James T. Lockyer, Gwendolen Mason, B. Patterson Parker, J. Solomon, Herbert Walenn, H. Wessely.

BANDMASTERSHIP: Robert George Jones (Christmas, 1925).

EXAMINERS: B. J. Dale, Neville Flux, B. Walton O'Donnell.

PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT: Dorothy Clare, Doris Annie Waymark.

EXAMINERS: Welton Hickin, Vivian Langrish, Montague Phillips, Cuthbert Whitemore.

AURAL TRAINING and SIGHT-SINGING: Maud F. Braitch, Marie Dyer, Dorothy Kathleen Fryer, Winifred Kathleen Medway, Muriel Gwendoline Pattison, Edward Henry Taylor.

EXAMINERS: A. J. Greenish, Mus. D., Cantab., Ernest Read, Frederick G. Shinn, Mus. D., Dunelm.

VOICE CULTURE and CLASS SINGING: John Harrison Grayson, William Thomas Hood, George Frederick Lewis, Christina M. Lyle, Catherine Reynolds, Donovan Frank Ryan, Katharine Frances Tower.

EXAMINERS: A. J. Greenish, Mus. D., Cantab., Stewart Macpherson, Stanley Marchant, Mus. D., Oxon.

ELOCUTION.—As TEACHERS: Mabel Baker, Martie Ball, Bessie Barwell, Dorothy Essex Dayus, Charles Leslie Diplock, Hilda Hardie, Alice Winifred Hawes, Gertie Lewis, Eileen Midwood, Florence Muriel Pettle, Grace Nixon Stewart, Ethel Margaret Tate, Harry Martin Triggs, Ida Warrand-Jackson.

As PERFORMERS: Sylva Dartois, Winifred Davies, Mollie Lucy Mainland Dodd, Betty Johnston-Noad, Holly Enid Morgan, Kathleen Noton, Edie Kate Oliff, Ivor Waddington, Rene Winstone.

EXAMINERS: Acton Acton-Bond, Wilton Cole, Cairns James, Cecil Martin, Constance Newell, Katie Thomas.

J. A. CREIGHTON, Secretary.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE

SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus. Doc., LL.D.
Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D. Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1925-1926.

The Season consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 22 to December 20); WINTER TERM (January 14 to April 11); SUMMER TERM (April 20 to July 4).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Orchestra Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—

H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary

Paradise Street, Birmingham.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD

OF THE R.A.M. AND THE R.C.M.
FOR LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

LOCAL CENTRE EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS A).

Written Examinations held in March and November at all centres. Practical Examinations in March-April and November-December at all Centres. Entries for the November-December Examinations close Wednesday, October 13th, 1926.

"SCHOOL" EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS B).

Held throughout the British Isles three times a year, viz., March-April, June-July, and October-November. Entries for the October-November Examinations close Wednesday, October 6th, 1926.

ELOCUTION EXAMINATIONS will be held at certain fixed centres in March-April, June-July, and October-November each year. For full particulars see special Elocution Syllabus.

The Board offers annually SIX EXHIBITIONS tenable at The R.A.M. or The R.C.M. for Two or Three Years.

Syllabuses A and B, Elocution Syllabus, Entry Forms, and any further information, may be obtained post-free from:

THE SECRETARY, 14 & 15, Bedford Square, London, W.C.1.

96 & 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1.

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON CLASS by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

Mr. FREDERICK MOORE takes alternate Wednesdays.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS.
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council.)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, MRS. MARION COLE, Secretary.

GLASGOW
ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

SESSION 1926-27.

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 14 to December 5, December 7 to March 13, and March 15 to June 11.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes. Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

MANCHESTER SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

16, ALBERT SQUARE.

Principal and Founder (1892): J. A. CROSS
Late Principal (1897-1925): ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras, Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, &c. Single Subjects taught.

New Pianoforte Professor:

MR. ROBERT GREGORY.

Mr. Gregory was Professor of the Pianoforte in Vienna for many years, having studied there under the eminent Leschetitzky, teacher of PADEREWSKI.

Prospectus from the Secretary, 16, Albert Square.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.

For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS,
Glennholme, The Common, Hessle, E. Yorks.

CRYSTAL PALACE

GENERAL MANAGER ... HENRY JAMES BUCKLAND.

Great Triennial
HANDEL FESTIVAL

JUNE 5, 8, 10, AND 12.

CHOIR AND ORCHESTRA OF 3,500 PERFORMERS.

SOLO BAND

THE LONDON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Musical Director and Organist: WALTER W. HEDGCOCK.
Conductor ... SIR HENRY J. WOOD.

SATURDAY, JUNE 5, at 12.30 p.m.

GRAND REHEARSAL DAY

Artistes:
FLORENCE AUSTRAL. BEN DAVIES.
EDITH FURMEDGE. NORMAN ALLIN.

TUESDAY, JUNE 8, at 6.30 p.m.

PART 1.
SELECTIONS FROM HANDEL'S OPERAS

PART 2.
MISCELLANEOUS

Artistes:
CARRIE TUBB. WALTER WIDDOP.
MARGARET BALFOUR. ROBERT RADFORD.
MARCEL DUPRÉ (Solo Organ).

THURSDAY, JUNE 10, at 6.30 p.m.

PART 1.
"ISRAEL IN EGYPT"
Preceded by Overture, "SAMSON."

PART 2.
MISCELLANEOUS

Artistes:
FLORENCE AUSTRAL. BEN DAVIES.
MURIEL BRUNSKILL. NORMAN ALLIN.

SATURDAY, JUNE 12, at 2.30 p.m.

"MESSIAH"

Artistes:
FLORA WOODMAN. JOSEPH HISLOP.
MARGARET BALFOUR. HORACE STEVENS.

PRICES AND ARRANGEMENTS:

Reserved Seats	...	REHEARSAL DAY.	From 5/-
,, ,,	...	FESTIVAL DAYS.	From 10/6
Unreserved Seats	...	REHEARSAL DAY.	From 3/6
,, ,,	...	FESTIVAL DAYS.	From 5/-

All Tickets include admission to Crystal Palace and Entertainment Tax.

Apply, BOX OFFICE, CRYSTAL PALACE (centre Entrance): 'Phone: Sydenham 2180; or usual Agents.

CORRESPONDENCE COACHING FOR EXAMINATIONS.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING

Mus.Doc. (Lond.).

Full Preparation for Mus. Doc., Mus. Bac., A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M., and all Diplomas of T.C.L. and R.C.O.

SPECIAL COURSES THIS MONTH.

1. L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.
   Full Preparation in all Paper Work, and in the vivâ voce portion of these Examinations.
2. Revision R.C.O. and T.C.L. Courses for July Diplomas.
3. (a) Durham Mus. B. and Mus. D., Sept.
   (b) London Mus. B. and Mus. D., Dec.

NUMEROUS SUCCESSES.

These Postal Courses enable you to study at home, in your own time, and at your own convenience. Their thoroughness is made manifest by the great number of successes achieved by Dr. Sprankling's pupils, at home and abroad, at all the leading examinations for Degrees and Diplomas in Music.

—— PERSONAL LESSONS ALSO in BRISTOL and LONDON. ——

Telephone: Bristol 3033. Address: 46, CLARENDON ROAD, REDLAND, BRISTOL.

PERFECT TOUCH AND TECHNIQUE
WITHOUT LABORIOUS PRACTICE

THE fundamental principles of my System have stood the test of time. Proof of this lies in the enormous number of pupils who have passed through my hands to piano-mastery—who have found in the System the Royal Road to the whole of the practical side of Pianoforte Playing, without any keyboard drudgery. The results are frequently described by pupils as "miraculous," "magical," &c.

Pianists of every grade of proficiency can benefit from this simple, inexpensive, and unique Postal Course. Many eminent musicians, including the late Sir Frederick Bridge, have used and highly recommended my System—the ORIGINAL POSTAL SYSTEM.

20,000 Successful Pupils of all ages.

From Brain to Keyboard

Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

Send for my Illustrated Book, "LIGHT ON PIANOFORTE PLAYING."

This explains fully how I teach my System by a Series of Postal Lessons, and gives particulars of the very reasonable fee for tuition. No apparatus or special music necessary—just an easily acquired method with much quicker and better results, based on my important discovery in physiology.

Apply for book to-day, but please do not omit to state whether average or advanced player, or, if a beginner, whether you can or cannot play at sight a simple hymn-tune. The book will be sent free of charge and post free.

M. MACDONALD SMITH, 19, BLOOMSBURY SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.1.

CHARLES A. GILLETT

PIANOFORTE SCHOOL,

Specialist in the Teaching of MODERN TECHNIQUE AND THE PRODUCTION OF BEAUTIFUL TONE.

PERSONAL LESSONS AND CONSULTATIONS DAILY, OR CORRESPONDENCE TUITION, being instruction by post on exactly the same lines as the personal teaching, designed for those living at a distance and including FREE Postal Consultations on all individual difficulties.

Invaluable to every pianist—whether Amateur or Professional student, Teacher, or Performer.

Write or call—

11, SOUTH MOLTON STREET, LONDON, W.1.

LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING.

20a, Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square, W.1.

President: A. NETTLEFOLD.

Principal: DAVID GODELL.

Complete training in all subjects for the Vocalist, Professional and Amateur. Evening Lessons. TWO FREE SCHOLARSHIPS. All voices. Last day of Entry, May 8. Particulars from Secretary. Mayfair 3819.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COMPETITIVE CHOIRS.

PRESIDENT:
JOHN E. TURNER, ESQ., HALIFAX MADRIGAL SOCIETY.

The objects are for the binding together for mutual help of all the Competitive Choirs in the Country, to deal with all matters affecting the interests of the choirs, and to be the channel of communication between the choirs and the various Musical Festival committees in the Country.

Further particulars from the Hon. Secretary,
H. STEVENSON, 6, Laneside Street, Todmorden.

LONDON SEMI-NATIONAL EISTEDDFOD,

CENTRAL HALL, WESTMINSTER.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, 1926.

MALE-VOICE CHOIRS ... ... PRIZE £75.
MIXED CHOIRS ... ... PRIZE £25.

SOLOS, ETC.

SYLLABUS (two penny stamps) of Hon. Secs.,
J. DAVIES, 107, Falmouth Road, London, S.E.1.
W. J. WILLIAMS, 37, Denmark Hill, London, S.E.1.

THE LONDON COLLEGE FOR CHORISTERS.

6 and 7, BLOMFIELD CRESCENT, PADDINGTON, W.2.
Founder: Mr. JAMES BATES.

Solo Boys and Chorus Boys supplied at short notice for Church Services, &c. Telephone: Paddington 5990. Sec., ARTHUR G. BATES.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS.

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."
"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

RECENT SUCCESSES,

including the only pupil sent up, January, 1925.

2s. 6d. per lesson and postage.

"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MR. HERBERT HODGE will give an Organ Recital (1,908th) at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, on June 1st, and every Tuesday at 1 p.m.

MEMORISE YOUR MUSIC

Without the monotony of constant repetition.

Memorising is no longer a "gift" of the favoured few, but is the established reality of thousands who have become my pupils. Memorise your music by the

Master-Method

OF

Memory-Playing

and you will be able to overcome your memorising difficulties in a few short weeks with ease, certainty, and confidence.

NO KNOWLEDGE OF HARMONY REQUIRED.
REPETITION ELIMINATED.
SUCCESS GUARANTEED.

POST THIS COUPON FOR FREE BOOK.

(Unsealed envelope, ½d. stamp only.)

MR. REGINALD C. FOORT,
F.R.C.O.,
19, BEACON HOUSE, HEMSTAL ROAD,
LONDON, N.W.6.

Please send me, free and post free, a copy of your Book, "The Master-Method of Memory-Playing." I play the Piano, Violin, 'Cello, Organ, and am a Beginner, Intermediate, Advanced Player. Cross out which do not apply to you.

Name.....
(Mr., Mrs., or Miss.)
Address.....
.....

GIVES CONFIDENCE TO THE ORGANIST.

BY APPOINTMENT.

Over thirty years' experience in the manufacture of Organ Blowing Machinery is behind the fine reputation held by the "DISCUS" Organ Blower. During this period, installations have been made with complete success to a very large number of Cathedrals, Churches, and Public Buildings both at home and abroad. We can supply blowers to suit any size or type of organ, and the motive power may be either electricity, gas, or oil. Our wide and varied experience is at your disposal. Write now for a free copy of our illustrated booklet, "Organ Blowing," and let us supply free estimate and suggestions from your particulars.

THE "DISCUS" REGD. TRADE MARK. ORGAN BLOWER.

SOLE MAKERS

WATKINS & WATSON,
WHITE LION STREET,
LONDON, N.1.
Telephone: North 2039.

ALBERT GARCIA'S

VOCAL STUDIO.

59, QUEEN'S ROAD, ST. JOHN'S WOOD, N.W.8.

VOICE-PRODUCTION AND SINGING.

TRAINING FOR OPERA AND CONCERTS.

PUPILS PREPARED FOR A.R.C.M. AND L.R.A.M. EXAMS.

MANUEL GARCIA'S "ART OF SINGING"

revised from the original edition by

ALBERT GARCIA.

Publishers: Messrs. LEONARD & Co., 47, Poland St., W.1. Price 6*s*.

"MASTERY OF THE KEYBOARD."

SIGHT-READING LESSONS.

COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS, THREE GUINEAS.

Personal Lessons if desired.

PRESS EXTRACTS.

Aberdeen Press and Journal: "The scarcity of good sight-readers, and even among capable pianists, is proof of the need for a more systematised form of training than obtains at present, and Mr. Denham's system has the double advantage of being both simple and practical."

Music: "Mr. Denham goes fully and thoroughly into his subject from every possible standpoint, and deals with it in clear and informant fashion. Cannot fail to be of service to the earnest seeker after improvement in pianoforte playing."

The Times: "Deals with the subject systematically from the first stage."

GEORGE DENHAM, L.R.A.M., ETC.,

41, AVONDALE ROAD, S. CROYDON: AND 32, WIGMORE STREET, W.1.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF HUDDERSFIELD.

"MRS. SUNDERLAND" COMPETITION.

PRIZES FOR ORIGINAL MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.

Open to Natives of Yorkshire or ten years' Resident.

Adjudicator: DR. T. KEIGHLEY.

1. UNACCOMPANIED CHORAL NUMBER FOR MALE VOICES.
   1st Prize—£5 5*s*. and £5 towards cost of publication.
   2nd Prize—£2 2*s*.
2. CONTRALTO OR BASS SOLO.
   1st Prize—£5 5*s*. and £5 towards cost of publication.
   2nd Prize—£2 2*s*.
3. HYMN-TUNE (TO SPECIFIED WORDS).
   1st Prize—£1 1*s*. 2nd Prize—10*s*. 6*d*.

Compositions to be forwarded on or before July 1 next.

Further particulars may be obtained from the Secretary, MR. T. THORP, care of Technical College, Huddersfield.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR.

HOW TO SING
HOW TO TEACH SINGING

Ten-Lesson Intensive Courses for Professional and Amateur Vocalists, Choirmasters, Teachers of Voice-Production and Singing, and Advanced Students taking up a Teaching Career.

Tuition given personally; also BY CORRESPONDENCE. The most comprehensive, thorough, and graded practical Course—and by Correspondence the nearest approach to personal tuition possible.

Testimonials.—"Foremost among leading voice producers"; "Wonderful results"; "Voice improves day by day"; "What I have been struggling for years to know"; "Excellent investment."

WILLIAM WOLLER,
61, GUNTERSTONE ROAD, BARON'S COURT,
LONDON, W.14.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

PRINCIPAL:
ARTHUR McALISTER, B.A.

SUCCESSES achieved by Students of the M.C.C.

MATRIC. - - 135

1st Mus. Bac.	March, 1926. Entries 30. Successes 7. 23%
M.C.C. Students	ENTRIES - - - 5 SUCCESSES - - - 3 60%
A.R.C.O.	A Candidate after failing 4 TIMES (under other tuition), joins the M.C.C., and PASSES at the 5th ATTEMPT.
F.R.C.O.	A Candidate failed 7 TIMES (under other tuition). This Student joined the M.C.C. and PASSED, Jan., 1926.
A. Mus. T.C.L.	Art of Teaching - - - 88% Counterpoint - - - 93% Harmony - - - - 84%
L. Mus. T.C.L.	Two Candidates passed July, 1925. Both were Students of the M.C.C. 95% Orchestration.
L.R.A.M. (Pianoforte)	66% and Failure (under other tuition). 81% and SUCCESS (M.C.C. tuition).

ALL OUR SUCCESSES ARE BY CORRESPONDENCE.

MODERN

20, SHERWIN ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

TO CONCERT DIRECTORS.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF
(British).

The well-known Pianist is arranging a Recital Tour for the coming season.

Special terms can be quoted for a Recital or part programme if immediate application is made.

Managers of suitable Concert-Halls also please send terms for hiring.

Please address all communications to
ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

THE TECHNIQUER
Invented and Patented by R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac.

FOR FLEXING, STRENGTHENING, STRETCHING, and DEVELOPING THE HANDS.

Send for testimony of LAMOND, POUISHNOFF, FRYER, REDDIE, WALENN, and many other eminent musicians.

"The excellent 'Techniquer' of Mr. Pitcher has been used by the writer with advantage. It does a good many things."—The Music Teacher, April, 1926.

Treatise on "Hand Development," with Photos, 1s. 6d.

Full particulars from the Secretary—
MISS F. J. FITCH, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

THE "SIMPLEXA" FINGER TRAINER.
(Registered No. 692810.)

FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS.

A SIMPLE AND VERY EFFECTIVE APPLIANCE FOR GIVING STRENGTH AND FLEXIBILITY TO THE FINGERS.

Extract from "Musical Times."—"We have given a trial to the 'Simplexa Pocket Finger Trainer,' and have no hesitation in recommending it to our readers as a means of stretching the fingers and keeping them generally in good playing condition. Instrumentalists who are travelling, or unable to obtain regular practice, will find the appliance a boon. It is well-named, being simplicity itself, and so portable that it can be carried in the waistcoat pocket."

IMPROVED MODEL, 2s. 6d., POST FREE.
1, LONGFORD TERRACE, FOLKESTONE.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent

St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Owing to increased output, we have reduced the price of our Popular Model to 14 guineas cash. Deferred payments if desired.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions, and References to

THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.

London address: 11, Ashlake Road, Streatham, S.W.16.

A.R.C.O. EXAMINATION AIDS.

A series of practical papers outlining courses of study and giving helpful hints with expert advice on the following Tests:

SOLO-PLAYING.	SCORE-READING.
TRANSPOSITION.	ACCOMPANIMENT
ESSAY.	(with list of 75 Solos).

3s. each. 10s. 6d. the set.

At the request of many who have derived valuable help from the above, the writer has now prepared a similar AID to the

A.R.C.O. PAPER-WORK TESTS.
Price 5s.

"A.R.C.O. EXAMN. AIDS," 44, BLANTYRE RD., LIVERPOOL.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone, and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS WINIFRED DENHAM.
SOPRANO.
"A clear, well-produced voice—exceedingly well sung."—Musical Standard.
41, Avondale Road, South Croydon.

MISS LYDIA JOHN
(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.
Concerts, Oratorios, Organ Recitals, &c.
Recital-Lectures of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
Pupils received for Voice-Production and Singing.
Prepared for L.R.A.M., Associated Board, &c.
28, ALBION ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.
Tel.: Hampstead 5797.
Lessons given at West-End Studio or above address.

HAROLD KNOWLTON
TENOR.
St. Paul's Cathedral, E.C. 4.
1, Hatherley Gardens, Crouch End, N.8. Mountview 5289.

VERNON HARRISS,
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medallist. BASS.
Oratorio, Concerts. Vocal Coach and Adjudicator.
Senior Music Master, Downside School, near Bath.

FRANK POULTON (L.R.A.M.).
BASSO-CANTANTE.
Available for Oratorio, Choral Societies, &c.
33, Hounslow Avenue, Hounslow. 'Phone: Hounslow 1536.

MR. HERBERT TRACEY
BASS.
8, Cavendish Mansions, E.5. London Wall 4033.

R. ARNOLD GREIR
F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.
Organist to the Royal Choral Society, London.
RECITALIST AND ACCOMPANIST.
2, Highview Road, West Ealing, W.13. Ealing 201.

MISS MARY LINDSAY
L.R.A.M. (Teacher's Diploma).
Gives lessons in Voice Production and Singing.
Moderate Terms.
17, Cromwell Road, South Kensington. Tel.: Western 3555.

ELIZABETH LEVY
L.R.A.M., GOLD MEDALLIST.
TOBIAS MATTHAY'S PIANOFORTE METHOD taught by her at pupils' houses or her studio. SPECIAL COACHING for Scholarships, Medals, and all Examinations. 52, Fairhazel Gardens, Hampstead, N.W.6.

ALFRED MORRIS, L.Mus. T.C.L.
POSTAL TUITION.
Graded Lessons especially prepared to suit individual needs—every student assured of personal care and attention.
Rudiments, Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, &c.
Preparation for Diplomas and other examinations.
Moderate terms. 9, West Lorne Street, Chester.

H. FORSTER RICHARDSON
R.C.M. (Leipzig), A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M.
(Pupil of Tobias Matthay, Plunket Greene, Gregory Hast),
gives lessons in Pianoforte Playing, Voice-Production and Singing.
Tuition on the most modern technical principles.
Coaching for Concert Work and Examinations.
Wigmore Hall Studios, Wigmore Street, W.1, and
2, Connaught Avenue, East Sheen, S.W.14.

MISS MARY WILSON, F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London,
Gives SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS to Candidates entering for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Singing Teachers' Diplomas.
Particulars on application.
Address: 10, Harley Street, London, W.1.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight-Reading Courses, Study Aids. 9d. Studies in Modulation, 3s.
Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.
HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who OBTAINED DEGREES OF MUS.B. and Mus.D. at Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, London, and Durham Universities, Diplomas of L.L.C.M. (April & Dec.), L.R.A.M., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. L.C.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medals, Silver Medals, Scholarships, Prizes, Certificates, and valuable professional appointments. Dr. Allison is willing to teach those who neither require nor desire to pass examinations. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Analysis of Compositions by Post, to correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, and Piano. 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS. Dr. Horton Allison, 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B. Dunelm., F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Square, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
(3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-26 ...296 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-26 ... 78 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus.Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

(1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
(2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
(3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work.
(4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint.

(Address as above.)

MR. BIBBY also gives PERSONAL Lessons in Manchester. Complete Preparation (Practical and Paper Work) for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., &c. Address as above.

MR. RONALD BRIDGER, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c. (Registered Teacher), prepares pupils for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. examinations in singing, either personally or by correspondence. Lessons also given in Voice Production and Singing. Highest references. Full particulars from 54, Pembridge Villas, W.11.

MR. ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Organist and Musical Director, The City Temple). 298, Balham High Road, S.W.17. Telephone: Battersea 0916.

Special preparation for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Also L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. ORGAN EXAMINATIONS.

SINGLE LESSONS and PRACTICE on facsimile R.C.O. instrument. Pieces registered.

RECENT SUCCESSES IN ORGAN WORK:

1 L.R.A.M., Dec., 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.
1 A.R.C.M., April, 1920.	1 A.R.C.O., July, 1921.
1 L.R.A.M., April, 1924.	3 A.R.C.O., July, 1922.
1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.	1 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.
1 F.R.C.O., July, 1922.	4 A.R.C.O., July, 1923.
3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.	1 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1923.	3 A.R.C.O., July, 1924.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1925.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1925.
1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926.

"Hints for R.C.O. Candidates" to be obtained from the Publishers, Reid Bros., 26, Eastcastle Street, Oxford Circus, W.1.

J. C. BRYDSON, Mus. B. (Dunelm.). Postal Tuition for Mus.B., R.A.M., R.C.M., R.C.O., and T.C.L. Paper Work. (Ordinary and Guarantee Courses.) Revision Course for 1st or Final Mus. B. (Ten Lessons), 1½ and 2 guineas respectively. Kegworth, Derby.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. SPECIAL COACHING by ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Pianist. Paper-Work Postal. Address, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

FREDERICK GREEN, L.R.A.M., ETC. Voice Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Preparation for L.R.A.M. c/o Rushworth & Dreaper, 11, Islington, Liverpool.

MR. J. D. HANDS, Mus. Bac. (Dublin), L.R.A.M., gives lessons in Harmony by post. Music composed to Lyrics. Pianoforte Accompaniments written to Airs. Moderate terms. 114, Wellesley Road, Clacton-on-Sea.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O., SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 410 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., and A.R.C.O., &c. 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. HARRIS REVISES and PREPARES MSS. FOR PUBLICATION. Accompaniments to Songs written.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply, Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D. Mus. Oxon., 1922, L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates, personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, Queen Victoria Street, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London, at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey. Many recent F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. successes.
5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

A. EAGLEFIELD HULL, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O. For Lectures, address E. L. Robinson Direction, 199, Piccadilly, London, W.1; for personal and correspondence lessons, address Dr. Eaglefield Hull, 19, Berners Street, W.1. For Organ Recitals, address Secretary, 48, New North Rd., Huddersfield.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING. Latest Successes: Durham, Sept., 1925, 7 Final Mus.Bac. passes. Also 1st Mus.Bac. pass. Mus.Doc. and Mus.Bac. Exs., after prelim. course in composition, also in 1925. Both Mus.Doc. passes in 1924. 170 Successes at Durham alone, besides R.C.O. Diplomas. The Durdans, Reigate.

DR. F. J. KARN (Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Mus. Doc. Toronto) continues to give lessons in Harmony and other Theoretical subjects, and prepares for all Musical Examinations. Compositions revised and Analyses written. Candidates prepared by Dr. Karn have gained the Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. degrees at the Universities and diplomas from the Musical Colleges.
Address: 106, Haverstock Hill, London, N.W.3.

DR. KNOWLES (Manchester 1919, Durham 1920) specialises in preparing candidates by post for the Paper-work of all examinations in music. Solutions, with methods of working. Address, "Cramond," Oakhurst Avenue, East Barnet, London, N.

MR. C. E. de M. LEATHES, M.A., MUS. BAC., F.R.C.O. Tuition in Piano, Harmony, Composition, &c. Pupils successfully prepared for all examinations. Cramer's Studios, 139, Bond Street, W.1, and 128, Kensington High St., W.8.

DR. ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, MUS. DOC., University of Toronto; Mus.Doc., Trinity University, Toronto: F.R.C.O.: F.A.G.O., &c., Sirsa House, Cheltenham. Correspondence Lessons. Revision of MSS. Scoring, editing, and arranging. Examination pieces analysed and annotated.

PREPARATION L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all Associated Board Exams. 1925 Successes include 5 L.R.A.M. (Pianoforte). Courses of study, or single lessons, arranged at home or West End. Alan May, 31, Bonham Road, S.W.2.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning," prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte, Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.
10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus.Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Twenty-five years' experience in Private Tuition and Coaching for Degrees. More than 800 of Dr. Middleton's Pupils have obtained Degrees at the Universities, R.A.M., R.C.M., and R.C.O. Address, 60, Berners Street, W.1.

L. R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Exams. Correspondence lessons in Harmony, Form, Teaching, &c. 23 pupils' successes. Moderate terms. Arthur W. Morrison, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., 39, Clarendon Road, Fulwood, Sheffield.

A. MUS.T.C.L. EXAMINATION, July, 1926.—Special Revision Courses just beginning. Each Student's work carefully corrected, and the Student guided the best way to ensure success.
Inclusive Fee, 1½ guineas, for period to Examination, irrespective of number of lessons taken.
ALFRED MORRIS, L. Mus. T.C.L., 9, West Lorne Street, Chester.

PIANO TEACHING EXAMS., A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M., ETC.
(a) Outline of Course of Instruction.
(b) Studies for Special Purposes (first bars given), 5*s*.
(c) Four Special Test-Papers for A.R.C.M., £1 (including corrections).
"J. H.," Mus Bac., L.R.A.M., &c., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.
Prof. Singing, G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Musical Appreciation to L.C.C.
"Recit. and its Rendering." 1*s*. 6*d*. "Vade Mecum for Singers." 6*d*.
Preparation for all Exams. by Post and Personal Lessons.
Special Courses of Papers: Singing, Piano, Touch, Musical Appreciation, &c.
Nearly 1,000 Successes for Degrees and Diplomas.
Send for Prospectus,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., prepares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes, 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4. Chiswick 3267.

DR. TAYLOR'S POSTAL PUPILS HAVE passed Mus. Bac. 1st and final. A.R.C.O.; L.R.A.M.; A.T.C.L. Pupil gained the Stillie Bursary at Glasgow for Counterpoint. Latest success, A.R.C.O. for 1924. Portland Place, Lancaster.

J. W. WILSON, Mus. Bac. Dunelm., F.R.C.O., Postal Tuition for R.C.O., R.A.M., T.C.L. Exams, &c. Solutions and Model Essays. Moderate Terms. 47, Hinckley Road, Leicester.

W. G. WEBBER, F.R.C.O. Recitalist, &c. Preparation for Exams. Organ lessons given on new four-manual Willis. Address, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E.1.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) A.R.C.M. (Theory of Music).
(4) A. Mus. T.C.L. and L. Mus. T.C.L.
Several recent successes in all these examinations.
R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."

SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.

279 A.R.C.O. Successes since 1909.
174 F.R.C.O. " " "

RECENT SUCCESSES IN PAPER WORK:

4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.
5 F.R.C.O., July, 1915.	9 A.R.C.O., July, 1915.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1916.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1916.
2 F.R.C O., Jan., 1917.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1917.	4 A.R.C.O., July, 1917.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918.
1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.	10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920.	6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.	7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.
6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921.	8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921.
5 F.R.C O., Jan., 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922.
8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.	9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1924.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1924.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925.	8 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925.
7 F.R.C.O., July, 1925.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1925.
5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926.

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

GRESHAM COLLEGE, Basinghall St., London, E.C.2. FOUR LECTURES on the MIND OF BEETHOVEN, by SIR WALFORD DAVIES, at 6 p.m., on Tuesday, June 1—HIS LIKENESS TO SHAKESPEARE; Wednesday, June 2; Thursday, June 3; Friday, June 4. Further Analyses and Illustrations from his Sonatas.

CITY OF LONDON CHOIR COLLEGE.—Solo and Chorus Boys for special engagements or permanent choirs. Apply to F. W. Sutton, F.R.C.O., St. Stephen's Walbrook, E.C.4.

ALTOS WANTED for St. Matthew's, George Street, Croydon. £16-£20, according to qualifications. Apply, "Organist," 22, Wellesley Road, Croydon.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE, OXFORD.
VACANCIES for LAY-CLERKS, ALTO. A trial to fill one or possibly two such vacancies will be held early in July. Duties for the first to begin in October, 1926, for the second in January, 1927. Commencing salary, £110, increasing every three years up to a maximum. A pension after a certain number of years guaranteed. For further particulars, apply to The Rev. Dean of Divinity, Magdalen College.

CONTRALTO (female), TENOR, BASS required for United Methodist Church, Carshalton, Surrey. Two Sunday Services, weekly practice (Friday). £25 each. Applicants please consider travelling expenses before applying. Organist, 90, Park Lane, Wallington, Surrey.

NORWICH CATHEDRAL.—There is a Vacancy for a TENOR. Salary not less than £100 a year. Apply, stating age and experience, to Dr. Frank Bates, The Close, Norwich.

BASS, £15; and TENOR, £12; REQUIRED for St. Stephen's, East Putney. Apply, A. R. Saunders, 14, Geraldine Road, Wandsworth, S.W.18.

ORGANIST.—Can deputise mid-week or Sundays, or take entire charge. Expert choir-trainer. 17 years Organist and Choirmaster, Parish Church, Rendell. A.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., 31, Old Park Villas, Palmers Green, N.13. Tel.: 0021. (Late Mus. Dir. D'Oyly Carte Opera Co.)

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF MUSIC (Lady), A.R.C.O., desires ENGAGEMENT London Church offering wider scope than present post in N.W. district. Recommendations, R.C.O. and R.A.M. professors and clergy. Experienced and professional choir-trainer; disciplinarian; keen; methodical. Good organ essential. "C. E.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

HOLIDAY DEPUTY.—England, Scotland, abroad. Experienced Mus. Bac. F.R.C.O., available 4 to 6 weeks, July, August. Apply, "Vacation," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

LONDON ORGANIST can DEPUTIZE in the Isle of Wight during August. Full or Plain Service (Anglican). Good Choir-trainer. Send terms and particulars to "Deputy," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PIANOFORTE TUNING LESSONS given. Postal or Personal. Quick method, great success. Little cost. W. Cawson, 117, Armley Road, Leeds, Yorks.

MASSAGE and MEDICAL ELECTRICITY by St. Dunstan's Blinded Soldiers, fully certificated; established all parts of London and Provinces. Apply, Superintendent, Massage Department, St. John's Lodge, Regent's Park, N.W.1. (Telephone, Langham 2780.)

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

CHURCH ORGANS STANDARDISED.—Two Manuals, Pneumatic Pedals, various sizes: specially built. Five to fifteen stops. Introduced to meet the requirements of the times at minimum cost. W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Manchester, S.W.

HALF ORIGINAL COST.—Three-Manual Chamber PIPE ORGAN. 21 Speaking Stops. Seen London. "J. R.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—1*s*. 4*d*. an hour, or 6*s*. a week. Hydraulic-blown, two manuals and pedals (R.C.O. scale). Reduced fee for combined lessons and practice. Single practices (pupils only), 9*d*. an hour. The Fulham School of Music, 2, Edgarley Terrace, Fulham Palace Rd., S.W.6. Tel.: Putney 4208.

ORGAN PEDALS.—Norman & Beard, Pneumatic, with Seat. As new. Cost £23. Take reasonable offer. Walker, Cromer, Upland Road, Sutton.

NORMAN & BEARD PNEUMATIC PIANO PEDALS FOR SALE. Nearly new. Concave, and with adjustable stool. W. E. Franklin, 13, Hyde Park Corner, Leeds.

FOR SALE.—Hydraulic Engine and Feeders, good condition. Suitable to blow moderate size two-manual. Accept £25, or nearest offer. Arnold G. Vallis, 15, London Road, Headington, Oxford.

BROADWOOD (Rosewood) GRAND PIANO. Excellent condition. Brass Frame, Check Action. Apply, "B. F.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

VIRGIL CLAVIER wanted. Send particulars and lowest price to "Pianist," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE.—CABART OBOE. Conservatoire System. Sterling silver action. £35; listed, £74. Hayes, 15, Lavender Terrace, S.W.11.

GROWING MUSIC CONNECTION FOR SALE. 40-45 pupils. Good Class. Apply, "L. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

A TREATISE ON CONDUCTING. 12,000 WORDS. 1s. 9d. Illustrated Method! Post 2d. 700 Copies sold. Invaluable to Leaders and Members of any Orchestra, Band, or Choir. M. T. Cooper, M.D., 23, Beech Avenue, Blackpool.

MUSIC COMPOSERS and LYRIC WRITERS. The Cosmos Publishing Co. are open to consider Songs, &c., with a view to publication. Send MSS. with stamp for reply, to Glenholme, The Common, Hessle.

MUSIC COPIED, neat work, Transposition and Duplicating. E. W. Cartwright, 25, Irving Rd., Bournemouth.

PALESTRINA.—Choice Selections from, set as Short Anthems (S.A.T.B.), to English words. Specimen copies gratis to Choirmasters, from Dr. H. G. Smith, St. Margaret's, N.C.R., Dublin.

ORGAN MUSIC, PIANO MUSIC, sale or exchange. List, stamp. Organist, 168, Ivydale Road, Peckham.

THE MUSICAL TERMS USED BY CHOPIN, with the full meaning of each Sentence in English. Book 1: Mazurkas, now ready, each 1s., post free; per doz., 6s. No lover of Chopin should be without this book. Copyright. Frederick Brown, Manufacturing Stationer and Music Publisher, Boston, England.

A.R.C.O., ESSAY, JULY, 1926. Special Series of Six Model Essays on the book, "William Byrd." Valuable Hints on Writing the Essay work. Very successful at recent exams. Send P.O. 4s. 6d. to "Essays," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., AURAL TESTS. Special important paper. Success assured. This paper gives details how to work. Send 4s. 6d. to "Aural Tests," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

Can you "IMPROVISE" at the Piano?

Improvisation, or the delightful art of playing and accompanying "by ear" and without the aid of any written music, can be learnt by anyone of average intelligence.

My booklet, "THE PIANO AND ITS POSSIBILITIES," which will be sent free on receipt of a post-card, demonstrates how YOU can learn to improvise, improve your technique, play at sight, and memorise music, without drudgery.

MR. H. CRAWFORD, KINGSLEY GREEN, HASLEMERE.

JUST PUBLISHED.

FINAL BOOK
OF THE BREARE VOCAL SERIES
No. 5,
"VOCAL ANALYSES:
SENSITISING BREATH—
EMOTIONAL EVOLUTION."
Price 5s., by Post, 5s. 4½d.

Previous Books of the Series—No. 1, "Vocalism: Its Structure and Culture, from an English Standpoint." No. 2, "Elocution: Its First Principles." No. 3, "Vocal Faults and their Remedies." No. 4, "Vocal Technique: How it Feels to Sing."

Books No. 1 to No. 4, price 3s. 6d. each, till pre-war editions exhausted.

By W. H. BREARE, J.P., M.I.J., Vocal Adviser.

Address: HERALD BUILDINGS, HARROGATE, ENGLAND.

Publishers.

London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & Co.
Harrogate: R. ACKRILL, Ltd.

A NEW PART-SONG.

"BREAK, BREAK, BREAK, ON THY COLD GREY STONES, O SEA!"

WORDS BY ALFRED LORD TENNYSON
MUSIC BY C. LEE WILLIAMS.

Editions for A.T.B.B. and S.A.T.B. can now be obtained.

Price Threepence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

THE SUPERB

BECHSTEIN PIANOS

You can examine a magnificent selection of Bechstein Pianos—new and second-hand—at

126, NEW BOND ST., W.1.

Can be purchased by instalments, no deposit required.

Old Pianos taken in exchange, highest value allowed.

Call or write for Catalogue.

The Autoplayer Co., Ltd.,
BECHSTEIN PIANO SPECIALISTS.
Mayfair 2653.

STEINWAY STUDIOS

COMFORTABLY FURNISHED
ELECTRIC LIGHT
CENTRAL HEATING
TELEPHONE LIFT
NEW STEINWAY PIANOS

Full particulars from

STEINWAY & SONS
THE NEW STEINWAY HALL,
1 & 2, GEORGE ST., CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.1.
'PHONE: MAYFAIR 6641-5.

PIANOS

BECHSTEIN, BORD,
SCHIEDMAYER, ROGERS

NEW AND SECOND-HAND
CASH OR HIRE PURCHASE

Pianos taken in exchange.

Apply for lists:

CHAS. STILES & CO.
74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.
'Phone: MUSEUM 0439.

THE SPELL OF MUSIC

BY

J. A. FULLER-MAITLAND,

Author of "The Musician's Pilgrimage."

Written by the musical critic of The Times, this book is an analysis of the enjoyment of music. It shows how appreciation may be developed, and is one to be read by those who would follow modern music with intelligence.

Just out. 3s. 6d. net.

LONDON: JOHN MURRAY.

JAMES LYON, Mus. Doc.

ELEMENTS OF HARMONY

3s. 6d.

Answers to Questions and Exercises on the Elements of Harmony.

2s. 6d.

BANKS & SON, Music Publishers, YORK.

HOLY COMMUNION IN C, including AGNUS, BENEDICTUS, Etc.

By HERBERT ROLFE, F.R.C.O.

Third thousand, 9d.

". . . . One of the most pleasing and devotional compositions of its class with which we have met for some time."—Church Review.

". . . . thoroughly devotional in tone."—Musical News.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

RELIEVES COLDS PREVENTS "FLU"

VAPEX (REG TRADE MARK) INHALANT

THE HAY FEVER SEASON

JUST when Summer joys are most alluring, Hay Fever claims its victims. The intense irritation prevents any pleasure out of doors. "Vapex" gives relief, whilst its regular use affords protection. Put a drop on your handkerchief each morning so that you can inhale the vapour during the day.

All Chemists, 2s. and 3s.

Sole Makers:

THOMAS KERFOOT & CO., Ltd.,

BARDSLEY VALE, LANCS.

Just Published.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS.

Book 274.

FOLK-SONGS

FOR SCHOOLS.

COLLECTED AND ARRANGED BY

CECIL J. SHARP.

SET IX.

No.
1407	BLACKBIRDS AND THRUSHES
1408	DABBLING IN THE DEW
1409	THE BONNY LIGHTER-BOY
1410	THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON
1411	THE TREE IN THE WOOD
1412	THE BOLD FISHERMAN
1413	MY BOY WILLIE
1414	SCARBOROUGH FAIR
1415	SEARCHING FOR LAMBS

Price Twopence each number.

Price One Shilling.

Voice Parts only, 4d.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

OLD ENGLISH VIOLIN MUSIC

EDITED BY

ALFRED MOFFAT.

PREFATORY NOTE.

Although considerable attention has been given to the resuscitation of Church Music, Glees and Madrigals, Organ and even Harpsichord Music by the older English composers, very little has been done to make known the large mass of music for the Violin written by English musicians from the time of Purcell to the close of the 18th century. These works for the most part consist of Suites or Sonatas written for a solo violin with a figured bass, or for two violins and violoncello with a figured bass for the harpsichord or organ; another favourite form was the Concerto grosso.

It is with the object of making known to the public a selection of the best of these compositions that the present series has been undertaken.

ALFRED MOFFAT.

			s.	d.
No. 1.	SONATA in G major	James Lates	3	0
,, 2.	SONATA in D minor	Henry Eccles	3	0
,, 3.	SONATA in B flat major	...William Babell	3	0
,, 4.	SONATA in G minor	John Stanley	3	0
,, 5.	SONATA in A major	John Collett	3	0
,, 6.	TRIO-SONATA in E minor	Thomas Augustine Arne	4	6
,, 7.	SONATA in D major	Richard Jones	3	0
,, 8.	TRIO-SONATA in D minor ...	William Boyce	4	6
,, 9.	THREE PIECES	William Boyce	3	0
,, 10.	SONATA in E major ...	Charles Macklean	3	0
,, 11.	SONATA in G minor	William Croft	3	0
,, 12.	SONATA in D minor	Joseph Gibbs	3	0
,, 13.	SONATA in D minor ...	...John Humphries	3	0
,, 14.	SONATA in A minor ...	...Thomas Vincent	3	0

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

AN ABRIDGED CONCERT EDITION OF

SEMELE

A SECULAR ORATORIO

FOR FOUR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

BY

G. F. HANDEL

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS

The time of performance of this edition is about two hours, and the orchestral parts have been so cued that it may be performed with accompaniment of: (1) Strings only; (2) Strings and Pianoforte; (3) Strings, or Strings and Pianoforte, with the addition of any Wind up to the complete Score of 2 Oboes, 2 Bassoons, 2 Horns, 2 Trumpets, Drums.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

IN THE PRESS.

AN ABRIDGED

CONCERT EDITION

OF

CARMEN

AN OPERA

NEW TRANSLATION BY

LUCIA YOUNG.

MUSIC BY

GEORGES BIZET.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

IN THE PRESS.

AN ABRIDGED

CONCERT EDITION

OF

KING ARTHUR

AN OPERA

LIBRETTO BY JOHN DRYDEN.

MUSIC BY

HENRY PURCELL.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE BEAUTIFUL FOLK-SONGS OF FRANCE

BOOK I.

(Novello's School Song Book, No. 277)

COLLECTED BY

AUSTIN DE CROZE

AND HARMONIZED BY

GUSTAVE FERRARI

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS COMPLETE

Or, Separate Numbers

No.		Price
1440	NOËL DE STRASBOURG	2*d.*
1441	BERCEUSE	2*d.*
1442	LE MOULIN	2*d.*
1443	HOPSA! LISELLA	2*d.*
1444	LE MIRACLE DE SAINT NICOLAS	4*d.*
1445	LA RONDE DU ROSIER	2*d.*
1446	CHANSON À BALLER	2*d.*
1447	LE BEAU GALANT	2*d.*
1448	LÉGENDE DES PÉLERINS	2*d.*
1449	LE PREMIER JOUR DE MAI	2*d.*
1450	LES TROIS JUPONS BLANCS	2*d.*
1451	CELUI QUE J'AIME	2*d.*

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

INCLUDED IN THE LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL REQUISITION LIST.

THE BEAUTIFUL SONGS OF FRANCE

BOOK II. (1925).

TWELVE SONGS AND DANCES

OF

FLANDERS, ARTOIS, PICARDY, NORMANDY, CHAMPAGNE, LORRAINE, and ALSACE

COLLECTED AND EDITED BY

AUSTIN DE CROZE

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENTS

BY

LEOPOLD ASHTON, GUSTAVE FERRARI, AND OTHERS.

With Illustrations, English translations, and descriptions and diagrams of the dances.

PREFACE BY DR. W. H. D. ROUSE, Perse School, Cambridge.

FOREWORD BY HARVEY GRACE and LASTWORD BY EDWIN EVANS.

CONTENTS.

FLANDERS-ARTOIS	Ah! le joli Bois, Mesdames; Sur les Clanquarts.
PICARDY	Les trois Canards; Semons la Salade.
NORMANDY	Les trois Pommes blanches; Compère et Commère.
CHAMPAGNE	Le petit Bonnet rond; Eh! qui marierons-nous?
LORRAINE	Vous n'êtes pas mon Berger; Je vais entrer dans la Danse.
ALSACE	La Chanson des Beignets; Le Maître et Jacquot.

Messrs. NOVELLO & CO. beg leave to announce that they have acquired the Sole Agency for all British Territory and the United States of America for the sale of the Work above described, and that copies are now on sale.

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS EACH.

NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED, 160, WARDOUR STREET, LONDON, W.1.

NOW READY.

THE ENGLISH PSALTER

CONTAINING

THE PSALMS OF DAVID

TOGETHER WITH

THE CANTICLES

AND

PROPER PSALMS FOR CERTAIN DAYS

EDITED AND POINTED FOR CHANTING

UPON THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURAL SPEECH-RHYTHM

BY

CHARLES MACPHERSON, Mus. Doc.
(ORGANIST OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL).

EDWARD C. BAIRSTOW, Mus. Doc.
(ORGANIST OF YORK MINSTER).

PERCY C. BUCK, M.A., Mus. Doc.
(DIRECTOR OF MUSIC IN HARROW SCHOOL).

PRICES:

Demy 8vo size ... Four Shillings net.
Imperial 32mo ... One Shilling and Sixpence net.

THE CANTICLES ONLY

Demy 8vo size ... ... Sixpence net.

LONDON NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1.

President:
THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O., C.B.E.

Chairman of Board and Director of Studies:
Professor J. C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus. D., F.S.A.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus. D.

June 16th, at 3 p.m. Pianoforte Recital by students in Mr. Gostelow's class.

June 19th.—Last day of entry for the July Diploma Examinations taking place in London and at certain appointed centres.

June 26th, at 3 p.m. — Orchestral Concert at Queen's Hall, Langham Place, W.1 (sole lessees of the Hall, Chappell & Co.).

July 3rd.—Last day of entry for the next Open Competition for Scholarships.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarship regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL,
Secretary.

ELKIN & CO.'S

CHORAL SERIES

(General Editor: DR. JOHN BORLAND).

LATEST ISSUES

INCLUDE NEW

PART-SONGS and UNISON SONGS

BY

ELGAR, QUILTER, BRENT-SMITH,
PERCY JUDD, CHARLES WATERS
LESLIE WOODGATE, ETC., ETC.

Specimen copies will gladly be sent on approval.

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,
20, KINGLY STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.

BACH
ORGAN WORKS
(HOMEYER—ECKARDT.)

STEINGRABER EDITIONS, 64, 65, 66.

Vol. 1.	Containing	3/0
Vol. 2.	Complete	3/0
Vol. 3.	Preludes and Fugues	3/0

STEINGRABER EDITIONS, 2172, 2173.

Vol. 4.	Containing Selections	2/6
Vol. 5.	of Choral Preludes	2/6

MENDELSSOHN
ORGAN WORKS
(HOMEYER.)

Containing Three Preludes and Fugues, and Six Sonatas.

STEINGRABER EDITION, 77. Price 2/6.

SCHUMANN
(Op. 60)
BACH FUGUES
(HOMEYER).

STEINGRABER EDITION, 78. Price 1/6.

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.,
8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

LONDON TOWN

SONG.

THE WORDS BY

JOHN MASEFIELD.

THE MUSIC BY

EDWARD GERMAN.

IN TWO KEYS.

Price, Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

JUNE 1 1926

(FOR LIST OF CONTENTS SEE PAGE 561.)

OUR THOUSANDTH NUMBER

When any monthly journal—above all one devoted to music—reaches its thousandth number there is a reasonable cause for jubilation. Of course, the distinction between Nos. 999 and 1,000 is almost entirely a matter of sentiment and convenience; but no excuse is needed for making much of it. We see the same curious attachment to round figures in many other departments of life. A batsman may profess to be unconcerned with the statistical side of his achievements, yet in his heart of hearts he can never be indifferent to the passage of his score from forty-nine to fifty, and still less is he unmoved during the collection of the fateful ten runs between ninety and a hundred. To fall short of the century—even by a cipher—is to qualify for the commiserating 'Hard luck!' whereas its attainment may ensure a niche in 'Wisden.' And—to take one more example, of a widely different kind—every shopkeeper knows that the difference between 9*s.* 11¾*d.* and 10*s.*, though nominally a farthing, is actually a profound psychological factor that may turn the balance between sale and no-sale—especially if the hovering customer be a woman. Deference to this respect for the round figure justifies No. 1,000 of the Musical Times appearing with a flourish that, on severely practical grounds, might as fitly accompany Nos. 999 and 1,001.

Our readers are aware that the Musical Times is easily the oldest of English musical journals, but probably few of them realise that it is one of the two or three oldest in the world. Apparently its only rivals in longevity are Le Ménestrel (1835), Cæcilia, a Dutch journal founded in 1844, and Signale für die Muzikalische Welt (Leipsic, 1843).

It is of course easy to attach too much importance to mere age for its own sake. There are, however, some matters in which it becomes the best of credentials. Thus it is conceivable that an excellent musical magazine may be cut off untimely—the article on 'Musical Periodicals' in Grove mentions several instances—but it is hardly possible that a poor one may live long. Even at the present time the public that cares enough about music to read its periodical literature is comparatively small, and a musical journal that does not speedily make itself more or less indispensable to a large proportion of that small public must go under. If this is so to-day how much more was it the case in the early days of the Musical Times!

Yet the test of more recent years has been no less exacting. The Musical Times began its career as one of the only two English journals devoted to the art (its fellow was the Musical World, which lived from 1806 till 1891), and for many years it was almost alone. To-day it is merely one in a considerable group of musical monthlies. This being so, the fact that it is at present larger, not only in bulk and scope, but also in circulation, than at any previous time in its long career, justifies a little sober elation on the part of the staff.

We said above that age is one of the best of credentials for a journal. But is 'age' the most appropriate word? Is not a long-lived journal one of the best examples of perpetual youth? Its salvation lies in its succession of editors and contributors, with every one of whom it has a chance of renewing itself. It may, therefore, be younger in spirit than in far earlier days before the passage of years had brought about frequent infusion of new blood. A journal that has lived only long enough to have had one editor may be in danger of growing old with him; long before it is middle-aged it may suffer from senile decay, while its centenarian rival may be enjoying the vigour of youth.

A comparison between the first issue of the Musical Times—a facsimile of which is presented with this number—and its present form may be taken as fairly representative of the development of musical life in this country during the past century. Although that development helps a musical periodical by increasing its public, and by providing it with ample material, it sets up some problems not easy of solution.

Thus, the Musical Times has now to deal with a far greater variety of matters than at any previous time in its history, and as a result its news department—inevitably the least satisfactory side of a monthly journal's work—is a problem that cannot be solved to the satisfaction of all our readers. We take this opportunity of pointing out that anything like full reports of all the important happenings during the month would more than fill the whole of our space. Moreover, events that take place during the last ten days of the month are too late for notice in the ensuing issue. Held over till the following number they have lost almost all value as news, and must either be 'scrapped' or recorded in the briefest manner. This explanation of an obvious fact seems to be necessary, if we may judge from occasional complaints as to the omission or compression of news. Readers may be assured of our desire to deal with local events as fairly and fully as is possible in an organ that appears monthly, and that has to close its news department about ten days before the date of publication.

Another matter in this connection calls for a word. It is sometimes pointed out that we deal far more fully and critically with London than with provincial events. Here again the explanation ought to be obvious. Criticism is of no value unless it is both authoritative and first-hand. We are able to ensure that our reports of London concerts answer both requirements, whereas many of the critical notices that would come from provincial correspondents would inevitably be neither. It thus seems better to cast the provincial news into the form of a record that shall give a good idea of musical happenings in the country in general rather than confine itself to a few large centres. A performance of a Handel oratorio in a small village or town may be more significant, and may represent musical activity among a bigger proportion of the local population, than many an important concert in a large city. Certainly it is far more worthy of notice than a shekel-gathering affair by a touring party of 'international celebrities.' The policy of the Musical Times from its earliest days has been to encourage music-making, especially choral, in small centres, and, believing that policy to be sound, we continue it. Not in vain, we hope, is the retention of the original sub-title of the journal—Singing-Class Circular. And our recent return to the early practice of the Musical Times of setting out its provincial news in alphabetical order, with the name of the town (however small) clearly displayed, is designed not only for ease of reference, but also in order that conductors and others in remote centres may feel that their efforts, though modest in scale, are not unimportant.

After all, concerts in large towns receive ample notice in the big provincial newspapers, many of which now contain adequate and well-written musical columns; further reference in a monthly journal, save for purposes of bare record, is of little moment, whereas to the village choral society a few lines in the Musical Times may mean much—as we are constantly discovering.

Among recent developments in our columns readers will have observed that the space now devoted to reviews has been greatly increased. We believe this space to be well spent, and, so far as we can judge from their letters, readers are of the same opinion. More books on music are now published than ever before, and the output of new music of all kinds is at least as large as ever. We hold that one of the best services a musical journal can render its readers is to include critical notices of as large a proportion of these new works as possible. This policy has the further merit of being advantageous on the economic side of the art, as it benefits alike authors, composers, and publishers. We claim, therefore, with some pride, that the Musical Times gives far more space to reviews than any other English musical journal—and perhaps more than any other journal whatever, except such special organs as The Times Literary Supplement.

Hereabouts we begin to be uncomfortably conscious that this is a somewhat prolonged solo on our own trumpet. We hope it is excusable in the circumstances, the more so as in our correspondence columns we usually suppress compliments and print complaints.

We take this opportunity of thanking the many rank-and-file readers for the encouragement they constantly give us. If we do not print their letters, or make direct response, it is not from lack of appreciation, but because we think that the best form of acknowledgment is a constant endeavour to make the Musical Times increasingly worthy of their support.

In the Jubilee number of the Musical Times (June, 1894) appeared a number of appreciations from, among others, Parry, Grove, Mackenzie, and W. E. Gladstone. Acting on the precedent thus set, we invited a number of representative musicians to send us a few lines on our thousandth issue. The readiness, kindness, and cordiality of their response leaves us both grateful and—we confess—a trifle embarrassed.

The Musical Times has—by its steady-mindedness and its quiet and happy persistence—secured for itself a warm place in the hearts of all musicians. It never fusses, and is never bitter. It records month by month the making of contemporary musical history, in a form both attractive and readable. Its aims, which are serious and generous, are realised, in the hands of the present Editor, with a touch of devilry and humour which make good and stimulating reading. It is based on humanity and common sense.

I wish the Musical Times many such occasions as this, its celebration of a thousandth issue.

Hugh P. Allen.

It is a lamentable fact that the amount of literature consumed by the average organist is very small. But I think the Musical Times is universally read and appreciated, and still remains the leading musical monthly, though we have several others excellent in their way.

I have noticed immense changes in it. Horace Walpole once said—'I cannot bear to be writing when I want to be reading,' and I, being somewhat impulsive, cannot bear to be cutting when I want to be reading; yet the old issues of the Musical Times always needed a constant use of the paper knife, and were often badly folded. What a contrast to the trim and smart appearance and the excellent type of the present number!

By the by, the Editor, like the printer of a certain old edition of the Bible, might offer a prize for the detection of misprints. He would not have to pay very often.

It is useless, as a rule, to bind or keep monthly magazines; they take up much room and sell for waste paper. But I have kept some of the later numbers of the Musical Times, as the articles are valuable for reference. I don't think I can pay the Editor a greater compliment.

I hope when the two-thousandth number is reached that there will still be organists to read it. But I doubt it. By that time England will have become a kind of Erewhon, and all music will be prohibited by Act of Parliament as encouraging discord and leading to lunacy.

JOSEPH C. BRIDGE.

The Musical Times has done many things for music and musicians, but the best thing it has done has been its steady existence for over eighty years. Month by month it has recorded whatever in the art and practice of music was likely to be of interest to the average English man and woman. It began doing this when Mendelssohn was the most generally interesting figure, and it has pursued its course through all the shifting currents and changing winds which have been characteristic of the 20th century. It has stood for real music, but it has not been too nice in selection or over-anxious to lead public taste. Consequently, its numbers, wherever you take them between 1844 and 1926, present a generally true account of the state of music in this country at the date chosen. If at one moment its columns have seemed more occupied with Anglican chants than with the 'music of the future,' that is because to the average Englishman Anglican chants were at the time a live issue, while he was content to let the music of the future declare itself in its own good time.

Lately I have had a peculiar opportunity to test the value of the Musical Times in a search for precise information, and it has not failed me. I have found it to be the best contemporary history of music in England, and I welcome the opportunity of expressing my gratitude on the occasion of its thousandth issue.

H. C. COLLES.

A thousand congratulations and good wishes to you all upon the issue of your thousandth number.

Chancing to have an old number of your early fellow journal, the Musical World, close at hand, it has been interesting to glance, as I write, at the things written in 1836, eight years before your present friendly and ever-companionable journal appeared. There are signs of genial bigotry in the earlier magazine; but there are also signs of great breadth and of a vision which is truly refreshing to this day. The Musical Times has shown breadth without, I believe, descending to bigotry

At the end of a fine article on Beethoven (in 1836), I see Dr. Gauntlett quoted from Mozart:

> We live in this world to be continually improving, and it is in science and the fine arts especially, that by communicating our sentiments one to another, we are ever making advances.

You have, in your own communicative ways, consistently helped our musical advance in England, and you do so to-day in a style at once sane, humorous, and graceful. (I expect, Mr. Editor, you sometimes think your pages are almost too full of Grace!)

Long may you live and thrive; and may the pages of the two-thousandth number ring as true eighty-three years hence as your pages do to-day.

WALFORD DAVIES.

When a monthly magazine reaches its thousandth number it is obvious that it has become an established institution. It must be eminently respectable, and in these days most people find respectability rather tedious. But it is to the credit of the Musical Times, and more especially to its present Editor, that it is always much more interesting than one expects it to be. Its criticism is seldom stimulating, let alone provocative; but that is not the function of an established institution. The Musical Times is a valuable record and mirror of English musical life. It is only natural that the greater part of that life should be humdrum and commonplace; but the Musical Times has shown us that a co-ordinated record of small local activities can yet be a thing of interest. The paper's other name is the Singing-Class Circular, and it is the 'singing-class' that is the solid foundation of musical life in this country. It may not interest the 'advanced' to read that the organist of some little country church has given a performance of a Bach Cantata; but if one line of small print in the Musical Times can make him feel that his work has been appreciated, and suggest to others that they should follow his example, the Musical Times is doing honourable service for music in England.

EDWARD J. DENT.

The fact that the Musical Times, founded in 1844, has this year reached its thousandth number, when it is remembered what a brief life is the portion of most musical journals, acquires an unusual significance. It will certainly be the pleasure, as well as the duty of all who are interested in our art, to tender heartiest congratulations to this veteran periodical. Since 1844, only two years after the death of Cherubini (and how far back this sounds to a musician!), the Musical Times has accompanied the growth and development of music with a sane and sympathetic criticism which has always been as genially appreciative of real merit as wholesomely free from the extravagant rhetoric we are too often condemned to read in current musical literature. Speaking particularly, as I may do, in the name of the Royal College of Organists, I feel it a privilege to say that we owe much to the Musical Times, and that we salute its past with respect and anticipate its future prosperity with confidence.

H. A. HARDING
(Hon. Secretary, Royal College of Organists).

Musicians pass through certain well defined phases in their attitude towards critics and criticism. The early stage of childlike trust and belief in the printed word does not last very long, and passes away with the discovery that not all critics are trustworthy, nor all criticism unbiassed. There is an inclination then to credit all critics with the ignorance and ill-nature of a few of their number, and to look upon them without exception as potential enemies. This is generally succeeded by indifference and a measure of tolerance as regards criticism and the gentlemen who write it, but the last and best stage coincides with the realisation that criticism is not written for the individual but for the public, and that critics are very much like other people, including musicians—good, bad, and indifferent. In this country one may read criticism written from many different, often contradictory, points of view, but the pleasantest and most useful is that written in the style which on the whole distinguishes the Musical Times from most of its contemporaries—a style of friendly discussion with a dash of philosophy, as if to say, 'These are our carefully balanced opinions, but of course there may be others which we should be glad to hear. In any case there is no need to be anything but good-humoured about it, is there?'

. . . . . .

But I suppose it is impossible to reach the ripe age of a thousand without acquiring a certain amount of broad-mindedness and geniality on the way.

HAMILTON HARTY.

I cannot resist the opportunity of offering my most sincere congratulations to the Musical Times on the appearance of its thousandth number.

With such a long life of usefulness behind it, far from showing signs of impaired health, it stands out to-day as a most virile force in the world of music.

Si monumentum requiris!

At the same time I would like to express my sincere admiration of the part played by your journal in its long and honoured career, which makes it to-day almost an institution in our musical world.

The Musical Times has not suffered for lack of competitors. Of more modern musical journals there are plenty, many of which have sought to wean us away from our traditional choral singing to the fascinations of the orchestra and the super-orchestra, and even the super-super-orchestra; but the Musical Times has always kept its mind fixed upon the principle that the human voice is the greatest asset of all musical revelation, and we are now witnessing a reversion to the faith of our ancestors in the innumerable opportunities that are being afforded us of hearing Bach, Handel, and Mozart, under the inspiring leadership of such conductors as Sir Hugh Allen, Sir Thomas Beecham, and Mr. Kennedy Scott, not to mention many others, with the full additional advantages of a choral technique which has advanced in spite of all Laudator temporis and pessimists may say.

I feel that if we were to re-read the Musical Times articles of the earlier years, we should find predictions of the undying qualities of great choral music; and I am glad to hope that the Musical Times may for a very long while be with us to keep the flag of Choral Music flying for our great nation of choral singers.

Its great tradition can hardly be more worthily upheld than by those who have the care of it to-day.

W. H. LESLIE.

The fact that more than thirty years have passed since I had the pleasure of adding a few lines of similar import to the many congratulatory messages then addressed to the editor of the Musical Times arises in my memory.

This month's issue of the thousandth number of so valuable a record of the progress of our art, at home and abroad, amply fulfils the hopes and wishes for its continued prosperity which we all warmly expressed in those now far-off days: for there can be but few, if any, parallel instances of active longevity to be met with in the history of purely musical journalism.

These lines from Tennyson's 'Two Voices' seem apt enough to this fortunate occasion:

> I said that 'all the years invent;
> Each month is various to present
> The world with some development.'

I venture to hazard the conjecture that it is just owing to the circumstance that so many voices are heard (sometimes in most liberal prose) discussing in these pages the merits, or other, of the inventions and developments aforesaid (always instructive, occasionally bewildering) which the months present, that our old friend and chronicler holds our attention and retains his youthful vigour.

Let me, therefore, after a long interval, repeat the earnest wishes for the continued success of the Musical Times, which I surely share with all its readers.

A. C. MACKENZIE.

Perhaps only those who are experienced in musical journalism, and who know how precarious is the life of the average periodical devoted to music, are in a position to realise what a real achievement it is to have carried the Musical Times to its thousandth number. In a long life, one has seen so many promising undertakings droop and fail for want of public support, and hoped so often for the establishment of an independent and really literary musical journal, that one must be thankful for the continuance of the one which has long held the leading place; and not merely for that, but particularly for the great advance it has made in recent years in the direction of broader views and more complete sympathy with various movements, than were the rule in the days when the only regular readers of musical papers were country organists, who were so busy debasing Anglican Church music, that they had no time to attend to the secular aspects of the art. Within quite a short time music has once more been admitted into the circle of the fine arts; and in return for this recognition, so long denied, there has been noticed a corresponding advance in the style of musical literature. Nowhere has this advance been more conspicuous than in the columns of the Musical Times, and I am delighted to swell the chorus of its praises.

J. A. FULLER-MAITLAND.

The celebration of the thousandth issue of the Musical Times is an event which calls for more than passing notice. Ever since the day, more than forty-five years ago, when a musical friend presented me with some half-a-hundred back numbers of the Musical Times, I have regarded it with gratitude and something like affection. In those days musical literature was neither as plentiful nor as instructive as it is to-day; and the articles in the Musical Times were my first introduction to the wider fields of history, æsthetics, and practical musicianship.

The musical life of the country has been subjected to many changes and developments since I first made the acquaintance of the Musical Times, and an enlightened and progressive policy has induced corresponding changes and developments in its matter and manner, but I am glad to say these have left untouched that dignity and sense of responsibility which have always characterised it, and which have made it a model of what a musical journal ought to be.

JOHN B. MCEWEN.

I heartily congratulate the Musical Times on the attainment of its thousandth issue, and I hope to live to be in at the celebration of the two-thousandth. It is unfortunately even more true of musical journals than of human beings that, in most cases, the good die young; and a life already so prolonged as that of the Musical Times is both remarkable and significant when we consider the increasingly high standard of the paper during the last generation. It has shown in recent years that, venerable as it is, it can adapt itself to changing conditions and interest itself in all the new currents in the world of music. Those of us who have had the pleasure of being associated with it, know how perfectly free is the platform it affords for the expression of musical opinion. Its standard of writing and of thinking has never been higher than it has become under the present editorship, and our British musical life would be decidedly poorer without it. I cordially wish it length of days and continuous increase of influence.

ERNEST NEWMAN.

The Musical Times gives every month a résumé of the musical activities of the world. It is extraordinarily useful.

The comments of 'Feste' are excellent bedside literature, and are always to the point even when one does not agree with them.

The general articles are written by experts, are full of information, and are always (now, at all events, that two well-known critics have ceased to air their personal quarrels in its columns) readable.

R. VAUGHAN WILLIAMS.

I cannot claim to have subscribed to the Musical Times through the whole length of its honourable life, but I have seen it regularly since I was ten years old, and my father was a subscriber to it before that too distant date. I am, I think, entitled to act the part of a candid friend, and to say that it has had, in the course of its thousand issues, both ups and downs.

There was a time when the younger musicians found that it was apt to be groovy and academic. But it had enough vital force to correct this tendency, and for some years there has been no more useful journal of musical criticism. Two characteristics distinguish it in particular. Its news of Continental music is extraordinarily accurate, full, and up-to-date. Even more praiseworthy is the attention which it gives to performances of standard classical works. Obviously, Béla Bartók's Dance Suite or Stravinsky's Pianoforte Concerto provide better copy than any performance of Brahms's Violin Concerto or Beethoven's fourth Pianoforte Concerto or fifth Symphony. But the aim which the Musical Times pursues with disinterested faithfulness is to instruct and to form taste rather than to amuse.

HENRY J. WOOD.

Sir Landon Ronald's private secretary writes to tell us that Sir Landon sends his congratulations and best wishes; 'and but for the fact of his illness, he would have been delighted to say more.'

Finally, we ask for nothing better than a fulfilment of the wish sent us by Mr. Gustav Holst: 'Many "strikeless" returns of a very striking occasion.'

OUR FIRST NUMBER

We hope readers will not be content with a mere hasty glance at the facsimile of the first issue of the Musical Times, presented as a supplement with the present number. It is, we think, worth reading for its own sake, and for the glimpse it gives of musical conditions in this country nearly a century ago. Its opening article shows the genesis of popular choralism, and although it is entitled 'London Amateurs,' much of it applied no less to the provinces, especially to the industrial centres of the North. Readers will observe (without surprise) that there were then, as now, Jeremiahs and 'wet blankets' ready to 'crab' anything in the shape of a new departure. 'Choralism for the Million' was an easy butt, and we may imagine that the efforts of the Hullahs and Mainzers in the direction of cultivating 'the taste for this rational and delightful method of passing the evening' provided plenty of scope for ridicule. As will be shown on another page, the Musical Times was both the outcome and the recognised organ of the movement—a movement without which, be it remembered, the renaissance of British music and the Competition Festival movement would hardly have been possible.

The list of New Publications in our No. 1 shows that the Masses of Haydn and Mozart were for the first time made available in vocal score at a low price. (Incidentally one wonders why Haydn's cost nearly double those of Mozart.) The completion of the issue of Boyce's Cathedral Music ('which previously . . . were sealed books'), and the announcement of the immediate publication of Arnold's collection, must have given an impetus to Cathedral and Church choirs. A long list of Mendelssohn's choral works is advertised, at a price which now seems prohibitive, but which was inevitable in the case of new compositions of large scale. Apropos, it will be noted that 'the greatest event of this unprecedentedly brilliant season' is the coming to town of 'Dr. Mendelssohn'—whose name, by the way, is given an extra l in the heading. One or two items have a familiar ring. Thus 'The Messiah' was already showing signs of becoming the Festival stand-by it has ever since been, judging from several paragraphs. Massed performances were not unknown, and the orchestra of over two thousand at the Cologne Festival must still remain very nearly, if not quite, a record for instrumental performances on a large scale. The encore nuisance was dealt with by the York Choral Society in a drastic way that if persevered in generally would have killed it long ago—'it being a standing rule with the committee to allow no encores, the concert broke up.' Is that sensible rule still 'standing,' at York or at any other enlightened centre?

It is satisfactory to read that 'instances of suicide among musicians are comparatively very rare: although some have met with sad reverses, yet scarcely can an instance be found of cruelty remaining in the breast of a real musician—his soul is all harmony'—perhaps too rosy a view to take of a profession that has rather more than its share of vanity and jealousy.

In connection with the musical supplement (a Purcell chorus that has ever since been a favourite), it is worthy of note that 'the idea of the famous Octavo Editions issued by the house of Novello had its origin in the size selected for the Musical Times'*—not so small a matter as it appears at first sight. One has only to consider the inconvenience in handling, binding, and storing of folio copies in order to see that the spread of choralism owed something to the adoption of so handy and portable (and, in the cases of sensible male garments, even pocketable) a size and shape as octavo.

* 'A Short History of Cheap Music,' p. 33.

Finally, as a matter of comparison, it will be seen that whereas in No. 1 there are (apart from advertisements) only six columns of reading matter, No. 1,000 contains over a hundred.

THE CHARM OF LIMITATIONS

By Alexander Brent-Smith

In spite of riots and revolutions in the cause of Freedom, every one at heart delights in limitations. The political firebrand, while pleading passionately in public for individual independence, is at the same time secretly planning to make himself the slave of some self-seeking damsel. The most enthusiastic champions of feminine emancipation, while demanding complete liberty for women, spend their leisure hours turning themselves neck and crop into slaves of the passing fashion. The most daring innovators in art, while claiming freedom from the rules of Yesterday, are striving to bind themselves with the knotty cords of To-day.

We all want freedom and independence, but we want it within limits. We all want every one to be free to do as he likes and to express his individuality in his own way, so long as he does not do what we disapprove of, and does not want to express his individuality in a dangerous or inconvenient manner. Every man vows to his newly married wife that she may do whatever she wishes provided of course that she does not wish to love another man more than himself.

As in our social state, so in art. We want complete freedom for the artist, provided he works within certain limits. Indeed, the great charm of art lies in the ability of the artist to express himself within certain limitations of time and vocabulary. With no limitations the work of the artist is scarcely distinguishable from that of the novice. It is by noticing how well he works within his rules and restrictions that we can fully appreciate the skill of the artist. If there were no lines or net in lawn tennis many people could hit the ball as hard as Tilden. It is by hitting hard and accurately within such narrow restrictions that the Tildens and Lenglens are displayed. Similarly, many men have thought vaguely about such matters as attempting to work with insufficient knowledge, but it is in such an epigram as 'a little learning is a dangerous thing' that the artist in words is revealed. Again, many men have felt intensely and at great length about the honours, the responsibilities, and the anxieties of kings; but it is in such lines as > Kings are like stars—they rise and set—they have > The worship of the world, but no repose;

or

> Uneasy lies the head that wears the golden crown, that the true poet is revealed.

There is no doubt that the medium in which the artist worked and the limitations and restrictions against which he had to struggle do contribute towards our admiration for his work. A painted photograph may be more accurate than a picture, but it does not please us so well. With brown paper it may be possible to equal or surpass the work of Grinling Gibbons, but it will never receive any long-lived admiration. A mere record of every incident in a man's career does not make a good biography or a good novel. Our admiration for a great story depends upon the skill with which the author has brought together the significant facts of a lifetime, and presented them within the compass of a few hours.

Complete freedom from rules and forms, which is being advocated for music, is really a disservice to music. Formlessness and lawlessness are chaos, and therefore abhorrent to the creative mind. Freedom each creator must have, but he must have restrictions too. Nature herself has restrictions. An ultra-modern woman, Mrs. White, may complain that she cannot get over that narrow-minded woman, Mrs. Black; but Mrs. White should remember that she shares her disability with the lightning which, though given apparently limitless freedom, cannot get over that narrow piece of india-rubber. Mr. White, that fluent and volatile young man, may complain that he cannot get over that abrupt fellow Mr. Black; but he too may console himself that he shares his disability with the streams and rivers which, though so fluent and nimble, cannot get over those abrupt Malvern Hills. And it is just those limitations of form or rule that we cannot get over which are so useful to us by compelling us to cast our thoughts into the moulds and forms which suit them.

By all means let inventive minds create new forms; there is room in the world for a wide variety of forms. We do not wish all blancmanges to be made in the same shape, but if there is a particular shape which has a particular name, let that name be for ever joined to that shape, and let the inventive mind create a new name for his new shape. A poet may strongly object to the form of a sonnet. Let him then write in some other form, but let him not call his new rhapsodical outburst a sonnet. Similarly a composer may object to the form of a sonata. Let him write in some other form, but let him not call it a sonata, which has won an honourable place as a definite form in the works of his illustrious predecessors. He may vary the details, but he should preserve the general structure. To call a work a sonata when it ignores the most general rules of form is misleading, and therefore unfair to the listener, who, expecting a sonata, shapes his mind to receive it. If we buy a thing called a 'box,' we have a right to expect that it will have a bottom; if, however, we buy a thing called a 'tox,' we need not be disappointed if it has no bottom, for it may be the peculiarity of a 'tox' that it has no bottom. And whereas a composer by using the name 'fantasy' frees himself honourably from the restrictions of form, so by using the names sonata, minuet, rondo, he voluntarily accepts the responsibilities and limitations of those forms.

Rules and limitations, though tiresome to serve, are not heartless and unappreciative task-masters. Frequently they give their faithful servants an unexpected reward. Limitations sometimes restrict freedom, but they also increase power. Electricity, with unbounded space to move in has very little power, but when compelled to run within a copper wire it becomes one of the greatest dynamic forces of the world.

The restrictions of rhyme may be an inconvenience to the impatient poet, but the voluntary submission of the poet to the imperious demands of rhyme has given us many lines which we would probably never have had without that voluntary submission. It is doubtful whether Keats would have heard 'Chapman speak out loud and bold' but for the necessity of finding a rhyme for the 'realms of gold.' It is doubtful, too, whether Coleridge would have described the caverns through which the sacred river ran as being measureless to man but for the combined requirements of metre and rhyme.

In music we cannot state so definitely what were the rewards which Form bestowed on those who served her well, but we can say that many of the strange modulations in the works of Beethoven and others were due to the fact that sometimes they found that the imagination had run away with them, and that a bold modulation was needed to bring them back to the right key at the right moment. Hence those harmonic short cuts. Many of the charms of the Elizabethan composers arise naturally from the restrictions under which they wrote, and the happy effects in their music were not so much a beauty sought as a grace received. Their false relations were not cultivated because they were strange, but because they were necessary. So, too, many of the striking passages in the works of Bach are not due to a deliberate cultivation of freedom, but to a faithful application of a rule.

But ignoring the possibility of receiving occasional windfalls from a voluntary submission to rules and limitations, there is a definite value in form if only because it may help a man to keep a firm grasp of his subject-matter. If a man writes in sonata-form, with its exposition, development, and recapitulation, he is compelled at least to find two subjects to expose—two subjects which have in their systems some germ for development, and which he, at any rate, considers are worth recapitulating, and have sufficient distinction to be recognised when recapitulated.

To the listener there are several advantages arising from a faithful, though not too servile, adherence to form. In the first place, it is pleasant to know that we shall meet some lovely tune, which we liked when we heard it in the exposition, restored to us in all its native beauty after the storm and stress of its development, as it is pleasant to look forward to seeing some dear friend after a long sojourn in a foreign country while developing his character and his fortune. Then there is another advantage in knowing exactly where we are, and in recognising landmarks which divide chaos into sections. To endure a restless night without a striking clock is a depressing and excessively tedious experience, because though the proverb says that when the night is darkest it is nearest the morning, it is so difficult to be sure that the darkness around us is really the blackest darkness, and that the morning is consequently at hand. But if we have a striking clock, we do know when we hear four strokes sound that the greater portion of our misery is over. So in a composition. In a rhapsody, a fantasy, a mood picture, or a poem, we endure our misery hopelessly bewildered; it may stop at any moment, or it may go on for hours. In a sonata, or in works built upon sonata-form, we do know, when we reach the recapitulation, exactly where we are, and we can grasp mentally the proportions and design of the music.

On this subject there is much more which could be written, but the title of the essay holds up a warning finger, and, conscience-stricken, I desist.

JOSEPH MAINZER

On a previous page appears a passing reference to Mainzer as an apostle of choral singing in this country. For reasons that will appear later in this article, it seems fitting on the present occasion to say a few words about the part he and his work played in our musical life.

Joseph Mainzer, the son of a butcher, was born at Trêves in 1801. He seems to have had a good all-round musical education, but apparently felt no call to the art as a profession, for he spent some time in the Saarbruck coal-mines with the intention of qualifying as an engineer. While still in the early twenties, however, he became a priest, subsequently being made Abbé. A few years later we find him acting as singing teacher at the Trêves Seminary, and author of a singing method. Compelled to leave Germany on account of his political views, he went to Brussels, and later to Paris, opening in that city workmen's and other musical classes. He wrote much as a journalist, issued some educational works, and composed one or two unsuccessful operas. In 1841 he came to England; aimed at (and missed) the musical professorship at Edinburgh, in 1844; lived in that city for five years; and finally settled at Manchester. Hullah had just started his class-singing crusade in London, and Mainzer took up the cause in the North of England, producing for the purpose a work called 'Singing for the Million,' which had a great popular success. His death at Manchester, on November 10, 1851, was brought about by his over-strenuous labours as a lecturer and teacher.

His connection with this journal lies in the fact that in 1842 he founded a monthly magazine called Mainzer's Musical Times and Singing Circular, which, taken over by Alfred Novello, in 1844, became the Musical Times.

In the editorial office are a few slim, much-faded volumes of Mainzer's journal. In form it resembled No. 1 of its successor, but, not unnaturally, almost all its reading matter is concerned with the activities of Mainzer.

He was undoubtedly a good showman, as well as an enthusiastic and skilful class-teacher. Opening one of the volumes at random we come across, as a good example, a lengthy report entitled 'Entertainment to Mr. Mainzer on the Banks of the Doon,' from which we take a few passages. First, however, note that this 'Entertainment' was the climax of an intensive Scottish tour:

> After the lectures in the Vale of Leven, as reported in our last, Mr. Mainzer, in pursuance of a public invitation, visited the classic town of Ayr, and subsequently Greenock, Paisley, and Kilmarnock, in each of which towns he has produced a great excitement, and, in compliance with the earnest solicitations of the influential inhabitants, has promised to each a third lecture on his return from the principal towns in the North of Scotland, whither he had been invited. On the 15th and three subsequent days, Mr. M. lectured in Inverness, from whence he proceeded to Elgin and Aberdeen. To the latter place he has devoted several days, and proceeds to fulfil engagements in Montrose, Arbroath, Dundee, Perth, &c., on his return southward.

Bearing in mind the travel conditions of that time, such a tour must have been a heavy tax, physical and mental. And this was only one little sample of activities that were carried on at similar high pressure for several years. However, let us see what happened on the banks of Bonnie Doon:

> A very gratifying compliment was paid to Mr. Mainzer by the inhabitants of Ayr. . . . After a third lecture delivered in that town by particular request, and to which eight hundred children of the Sabbath schools were admitted, thanks were publicly voted to Mr. M., and a Committee formed for carrying into practical effect the system which had been developed. Mr. M. was also invited to a déjeûner at the monument of Burns, situate three miles from the town, which he accepted.

In passing, it should be noted that Mainzer was at one with modern musical educators in realising the importance of beginning with children's classes. Here we see him with nearly a thousand school children among his audience; and the chronicles of his tours contain many references to large gatherings of young people.

At the open air lunch ('an inviting repast provided by Mr. Kennedy of the Burns Arms') there were present Mrs. Beggs (the sister of Burns) and two of the poet's nieces. Mr. Mainzer's health having been drunk 'with all the honours in a warm and marked manner,' he rose well to the occasion with a tribute to Burns (reported in full) so glowing as to exert 'an overpowering influence on Mrs. Beggs. In vain she endeavoured to repress the tear which now and again broke away from the surcharged fountains of the heart.'

Mainzer ended on this aspiring and prophetic note:

> Let us exert ourselves in achieving our object, by spreading the principles of musical tuition amongst all, especially in schools; and then when we meet again on this spot, we meet not alone, but surrounded with hundreds of grown-up persons, and thousands of children, singing together in imposing chorus.

Could he revisit the Burns district to-day, he would find his object achieved in the excellent Ayrshire Competition Festival, where (as we can testify from the experience of a few weeks ago) the choral singing is of an unusually high order.

The ovations over, the party adjourned to the Monument, where Scots songs were sung:

> Two German editions of Burns's Poems, brought home some time ago by Mr. Heron, of Dalmore, and presented to the Monument, were handed to Mr. Mainzer, who, by request, sang 'Will ye gang to the Indies, my Mary,' 'My heart's in the Highlands,' and 'Mary in Heaven,' in the German language and to German music. Though differing from the airs to which we have been accustomed to hear the verses, they were admirably calculated to give effect to the sentiments, and it was altogether a treat of no common order to listen to the strains of our national Bard chanted by a foreigner, in a foreign language, on the banks of his native Doon.

We have given space to this episode because it affords a pleasant glimpse into the past, as well as showing some of the influence exerted by Mainzer, who clearly had a way with him.

This Scottish event was chosen for quotation by opening Mainzer's journal at random. We take another hazard . . . and again Scotland turns up, with a report of a class at Glasgow City Hall, at which two thousand singers were present:

> The pupils were admirably arranged so as to produce a powerful, combined effect; the young boys and altos who sang the air, the male tenors and the bass voices all being separated. These masses all sang towards Mr. Mainzer, at which point the sounds seemed to concentrate and rise up with magnificent and thrilling effect. . . . The attention of the Scottish public is very much drawn to the subject of music at the present moment; and the conviction is daily growing that it must be made to constitute a regular branch of education in their seminaries. This is the only mode (but it will be found an effectual one) of rendering a people musical.

A third and final speculative opening gives us what was probably the most astonishing demonstration. It took place at the Vale of Leven, which Mainzer visited in response to a request signed by nearly a thousand people—the elect of the district, for we read that > . . . the Committee (chiefly working men, with whom the matter originated) have been very scrupulous in receiving signatures, so that the list does not contain the name of a man of questionable moral character.

Mainzer duly came; was 'handsomely entertained at the Castle'; there was a progress to Balloch Bridge, whence 'amid the cheers of the spectators, and, under a salute from the Castle, the party embarked in six of the best boats of the Loch Lomond Rowing Club, manned by four and twenty of the finest lads of Leven.' One boat contained a choir; in another was a famous piper who had accompanied Scott on a similar excursion; and there was a concert on the water. On arrival at the Leven at midnight, the party found only one bed was to be had; it was occupied by Mainzer for a brief spell, and the company began the ascent of Ben Lomond at four o'clock next morning. The summit reached, 'a bumper was immediately filled,' and Mainzer's health drunk with 'three times three and one cheer more,' Mainzer, ready and willing, as usual, for the limelight, 'standing on the mound, raised in the centre of the mountain top.' Even all this, however, was a mere preliminary. After the return journey, enlivened with more cheers and concerts (and, presumably, bumpers), there was a procession of seventy boats, amid roaring of guns and beating of drums; at Balloch Bridge were thousands of spectators, waving banners—'a coup d'œil of the most animated and imposing character'; the factories in the Vale had closed for the occasion, and 'the various Societies, in full dress, had turned out with their banners and music. . . . A cavalcade was formed to escort Mr. Mainzer to Alexandria through Bonhill, which proceeded in the following manner' (we abbreviate the list):

Grand Marshals;
Ruston Band;
Rechabites, with insignia and numerous banners;
Glenhead Band;
Juvenile Rechabites;
Piper;
Loch Lomond Rowing Club, with Garlands of Heather;
Two Pipers;
Odd Fellows;
Piper;
Odd Fellows;
Bonhill Band;
Committee;
Mr. Mainzer and his friends;
Boys and men in the costume of Rob Roy;
Foresters on Horseback;
Foresters on Foot;
Inhabitants of the Vale.

The procession was followed by thousands of people; windows and roofs were crowded, and even on tree tops 'were seen the projecting heads of anxious spectators.' A halt was made in a field where a hustings had been erected, and 'the Rev. Mr. Mason, after a neat speech,' presented an address to the hero of the hour.

Mainzer must have been a queer mixture of showman and apostle, yet it may be doubted whether, in days when means of communication and propaganda were scanty, he could have accomplished so much by less sensational means. The point is that he not only succeeded in capturing the attention of the masses, but that he actually taught them to sing, and to keep on singing. What kind of music did he use? At some of his big gatherings, especially in Scotland, psalmody naturally played a big part; but there was also a considerable selection of simple part-music composed, arranged, edited, and published by himself. His little journal usually contained one such work. Here are a few titles: 'Farewell, Scotia,' written to the melody of 'The Cossack's Farewell,' arranged for two and four voices by Joseph Mainzer; 'How beautiful upon the mountains,' by R. A. Smith; 'Gipsy Chorus,' from 'Preciosa'; 'Rule, Britannia,' arranged for two voices, with chorus for S.A.T.B.; 'The Charm of Life,' for S.S.T.B., by Beethoven; some of the Canons of Beethoven, &c. Much of it was feeble, but it was generally attractive, and above all, it had the merit of being easily readable and singable. We may smile at much in Mainzer's Musical Times, and his methods and music were not free from a touch of the charlatan, but he wrought a good work where many a better artist would have failed.

The issue of the thousandth number of the journal that in a sense owes its existence to him, is a fitting occasion on which to draw attention to the work of one who to-day is hardly known, even by name, but who deserves to be held in grateful memory by choralists all over the country, and, above all, North of the Tweed.

PERSONALITIES AMONG MUSICAL CRITICS

V.—RICHARD CAPELL

By Basil Maine

The subject of journalistic musical criticism provides endless matter for debate. Fifty years ago, however, it would not have appealed as a question for profitable discussion. The musical criticism which appeared in the daily press of the 'sixties, 'seventies, and 'eighties was tolerated rather than encouraged by newspaper proprietors. The problem of the form that newspaper criticism should take never seriously presented itself to them. So long as the notices contained a maximum of news-value, the quality of the criticism mattered not at all. For all that, the critics of the period were unconscious pioneers in their laissez-faire kind of way. The work of H. F. Chorley, Dr. Hueffer, C. L. Gruneisen, W. A. Barrett, Sutherland Edwards, and Ebenezer Prout was important in this respect, that it helped to create a critical public—a public which gradually accepted the idea that performance was not a thing for passive reception, but for mental incitement. Perhaps more than to any others, it is due to Joseph Bennett, of the Daily Telegraph, and J. W. Davison, of The Times, that musical criticism is now so widely practised in the daily press; but it is possible that even they would be amazed if they could know how seriously it is practised, even in those papers which are avowedly devoted to the more dramatic incidents of contemporary life.

It is surely a prophetic sign that the Penny Press can now give space to well-considered musical appraisement, whereas a few years ago it was interested in a concert only so far as untoward incidents were concerned. The intrusion of a stray cat upon the platform of the Albert Hall would have ensured the success of the deadliest singer, even a few years ago. Now the critic can afford to ignore such an event, unless he finds a way of using it for a comparison of vocal methods. The practice of criticism in the Penny Press is gradually acquiring a certain dignity. But the process is difficult; there are peculiar problems to be faced. I am of opinion that those problems are more satisfactorily solved in the Daily Mail than in any other paper of the same pretensions and milieu. Richard Capell has evolved for himself and for his paper a new and idiomatic art of criticism. His is the art of miniature. Perhaps there are some who think that it is easier to write a criticism of fifteen lines than one of fifty; those who have tried both, however, know that it is far more difficult to set out ideas in a shapely array when space is confined; for the art of miniature is the art of implication. Each single stroke must suggest a hundred others, which perforce have been excluded. When Capell writes a criticism of fifteen lines he can so kindle the imagination that after a little practice and acquaintance we can supply other lines between his own, and arrive at the complete idea which has impelled his writing. The quality which enables his readers to perform this feat, if so they will, is the sense of proportion in his writing. I am referring now to those few notices of his which escape the maiming hands of that sacredly anonymous person—the Sub-Editor. Even critics of the more spacious journals have to subject themselves to his inquisitorial methods. One does not object to the practice of 'cutting,' but to the thoughtless way in which it is sometimes carried out. Of course, with a journal like the Daily Mail, where the appeal is wide and the interests manifold, the question of SPACE is everything. That word is written on the heart of every single person in its vast organization. And just as it is exceeding difficult to write a brief and well-planned criticism, so does it require a hand of extreme delicacy to make excision in such a criticism, lest the very heart of the matter be destroyed.

Capell has not undertaken this vignette-writing of free will, but through force of circumstance. It is not easy for him to work with a fine point, for actually he is a man of blunt convictions which he expresses in conversation with an overwhelming enthusiasm. He will begin to tell you of Thomas Hardy's poetry or Henry James's prose, and then find himself almost speechless in admiration. And if so be you do not share that admiration, he will regard you with a pitying eye, but never with scorn. Often it has chanced that I have received a portion of his immense store of sympathy when I have failed to see merit where he has seen flagrant genius. Yet even when I have failed to see, I have been a little shaken by the intense conviction which holds him in thrall. And when the high tide of sensibility has swept him away to a wide sea of inarticulate wonder, I feel that Nature made some curious omission when she fashioned my sensitory self. Howbeit when the time arrives for all this large enthusiasm to grow to a point—to the small point of a Daily Mail notice—then it is that we are compelled to admire the manner in which Capell consolidates his earlier advances, as the financiers say, and merges them into one 'mass of manœuvre,' to be drawn upon in emergency. Capell is endowed with that rare thing—the power to remember the brightness of a first enthusiasm, and since enthusiasm with him is 'daily like the waters' song,' it is probable that his critical work will not be staled by years of custom and usage, but rather will gather momentum and grow more intense with every new experience. When others among us have become stiffened by the contemptuous pride which comes of disillusion, and hardened by the endless succession of unperilous adventures which we call 'the World of Music,' Capell will still be telling us of the glorious things we have missed. His will still be the note of exuberant zeal, when the bravest of us have ceased to be intrigued or impelled.

Ad Libitum

BY 'FESTE'

Musical journalists too readily and modestly assume that their work has little more than ephemeral interest. Yet one cannot dip much into volumes of old musical periodicals without being struck by the large amount of excellent reading they contain. Inevitably this is partly due to the passage of time, which imparts a fortuitous interest to almost anything in the shape of old records. But even when allowance is made for this, there remains a good proportion of capital stuff. It is the custom to belittle the musical writers and critics of the past generation, mainly, I suppose, because some of their verdicts have proved to be hopelessly wide of the mark. When, however, we take up an early volume of, say, the Musical World, and read their criticism in bulk, we see that they were more often right than wrong, and are struck by their shrewd and downright judgment, especially in matters concerning performance. On the whole, bearing in mind the fact that their job was almost a new one, they did well. To choose a few of their worst 'howlers,' and use them as evidence of the superiority of criticism of to-day, is too easy to be fair. There is plenty of musical journalism written now that is far less able and vital than that of the usually-despised Chorley-Davison school.

Amongst the most-dipped-into books on my shelves are a set of volumes of the Musical World from 1836 to 1877. Heavily marked and dog's-eared, they are being held in reserve for that rainy day when I shall be gravelled for matter. Though that day has not yet arrived, I am going to draw on the Musical World this month, in order to give readers a peep into the musical conditions and journalism of the period when the Musical Times made its first appearance.

Musical journals at that time were little more than pamphlets. The Musical World consisted usually of sixteen pages, seven inches by four, and the reading matter in one issue could be got into about eight pages of the Musical Times in its present form. (This applies to the earlier years of the M. W. Its pages were enlarged later.) Its first publisher was Alfred Novello, and the contributors included H. J. Gauntlett, Cipriani Potter, Lowell Mason, Samuel Wesley, J. Ella, Joseph Warren, and Samuel Webbe. The concert notices and reviews are unsigned.

In turning over a volume of this sort one is struck by the familiar appearance of certain discussions and news items. For example: 'The Harmonious Blacksmith' has long been a much debated subject. In recent years many paragraphs have been devoted to the exposure of the mythical origin of the title. In the M. W. of May 20, 1836, we hail the familiar caption as an old friend, and find the myth being started:

> A vast deal has been 'said and sung' respecting the beautiful air generally called 'Handel's Harmonious Blacksmith,' which is frequently played at the Antient Concerts, as arranged by the late Mr. Greatorex. The indefatigable Mr. Richard Clarke, of the Chapel Royal, St. Paul's, &c., has traced the melody to its right author.

Then follows the time-dishonoured story about blacksmith Powell and his anvil that sounded the notes B and E; and, for the silencing of all doubters, the paragraph ends:

> Mr. Clarke has the identical anvil and hammer in his possession, the latter having the letter 'P' rudely indented on the head.

Here is proof enough, surely!

The newspapers recently reported a case of a man who was able to sing two notes simultaneously, and, in fact, to hand out a tune together with a simple counter-theme. He was not the first on record, however, for the M. W. of April 1, 1836, has this:

> A Double Voice.—There was a gentleman living some years ago, at Bristol, of the name of Stock (we believe), who could sing in two parts at once; moreover, he could ascend the scale with one tone, while he descended with the other. He sang 'Sigh no more, ladies,' in two distinct parts; but not the words, of course; the tones resembled those of an oboe and a bassoon, the former produced by the voice (falsetto) and the other from the lips.

Yet another hardy perennial: Devices for turning music pages are constantly being invented, but (so far as I know) they are only moderately successful. Inventors were busy with such things in 1836. The very next paragraph to that concerning the double-voiced Mr. Stock reads:

> New Music-Stand.—In our last number we mentioned that a pianoforte maker at Utrecht had invented a stand to turn over the leaves of a music-book. A correspondent informs us that he saw a most ingenious contrivance about twelve months ago, constructed by a gentleman connected with the General Post Office, of a great mechanical turn, which was admirably calculated for the same purpose.

And a hundred years hence, if pianofortes still exist for playing purposes, there will be folk 'of a great mechanical turn' trying to solve this problem.

The period was not without its prototype of our 'international celebrity' touring party. In number after number we are able to follow the fortunes from town to town of a concert party of four—Thalberg; Mori, the violinist; Fanny Woodham, a soprano; and John Parry, junior, a bass-baritone. And like some 'star' pianists of to-day, Thalberg carted round a special instrument, though whether its maker's name was displayed in foot-long letters is not stated:

> The grand pianoforte on which Thalberg played had, we understand, accompanied the party through a tour to the north of England of about 750 miles, to prevent the possibility of his being obliged to perform on an inferior instrument.

In spite of the slender travelling facilities the four managed to cover a lot of ground. Thus, in one month they gave twenty-nine concerts in twenty-seven towns in the North and Midlands, ranging from Cambridge to Newcastle — an itinerary which could hardly be beaten to-day.

It would be easy to multiply examples of this similarity of matter between the musical journals of a century ago and those of to-day. Here is a final one. Last month I quoted some far-fetched 'programmes' of Chopin's Preludes. In the M. W. for June 3, 1836, is a similar absurdity concerning Handel's Fugue in F sharp minor. It is ascribed to Momigny, 'a celebrated French writer who imagines music to be a language, and that nothing was ever written without having some little romance or descriptive scene attached to it.' One would have thought that these six Fugues of Handel were as free from programmatic bases as music could be. Bearing in mind, however, the worst of the Chopin examples quoted in these columns last month, I am not surprised to find Momigny attaching the following 'little romance' to the F sharp minor Fugue:

> A severe father commands his daughter to give up the object on which she has fixed her affections. She, unable to banish from her heart its best beloved, mournfully pleads, 'Ah! dearest father, let me beg your indulgence.' To this the inflexible father replies, 'I will be obeyed'; and while he thus declares his determination, the poor girl appeals to her mother, 'Intercede for me, dear mother.' The progression in the bass admirably describes the growing anger of the father. [What a familiar ring this has!] At this point the different parts become so lively and complicated that the father, mother, and daughter catch only here and there a broken sentence.

And so on, with a wealth of detail that must be omitted on the score of space. To make a long story short, papa makes himself increasingly unpleasant, while, in canon, 'mother and daughter lament their inability to soften' him. But even a worm will turn, and the daughter at last becomes 'vehement,' and 'is even bold enough to mingle with the protestations of her love the bitterest reproaches against her father's cruelty.' What are things coming to?

Father is staggered:

> Astonished beyond measure at such audacity, he is fixed in silent wonder. This is signified by the pedal point in the bass.

And the last word, as usual, is with the women:

> The affectionate mother now endeavours to lead back her daughter to the duty and respect she owes her father—who, however, remains silently impaled on his pedal point.

> This is pretty nearly what we may suppose Handel felt in composing this Fugue.

Let us be thankful that this 'celebrated French writer' apparently had no opportunity of telling us what we may suppose Bach felt when writing the 'Forty-eight.'

Here is an emphatic protest against the inclusion of operatic arias in a Philharmonic concert—a protest which might have been made in connection with most orchestral programmes until a few years ago, when economic considerations practically ruled out vocal soloists from such concerts. (The items concerned were operatic arias by Bellini, Mercadante, and Rossini, sung by Italians from the King's Theatre, at which a season of opera was in progress):

> The vocal music was of that class which ought not to be permitted at such concerts as the Philharmonic. And the audience expressed this feeling by some very unequivocal marks of disapprobation. It is true that these Italians know nothing beyond the airs belonging to those characters in which they have been performing in the various towns on the Continent; and that it would be useless urging them to attempt any compositions of a higher character. They cannot do them; and whenever they make the attempt, an exposure of their ignorance and inefficiency is the almost infallible result. . . . The directors compromise the interests of the Society as often as they engage such people. There were better native singers in the room, who could have sung as well all that the Italians know, and ten times more sterling music than they probably ever will know. Several persons seated near to us were so irritated at the vocal selection, as well as at Madame Coleoni's singing (which was frightful, attributable to her recent indisposition), that there was an evident inclination to make a public appeal to the director of the evening.

Would a Philharmonic audience to-day receive operatic arias (even if the singing were 'frightful') with 'very unequivocal marks of disapprobation'? I doubt it.

The reaction against 'The Messiah' as a stock festival work is sometimes assumed to be a modern development. Yet it is at least nearly a century old. Thus, in a report of the Birmingham Festival of 1837, the account of the concert at which that work was performed opened thus:

> In spite of the assertion that this perfect specimen of oratorio writing is 'put up only to please a few old women,' it never is put up but that young and old throng to hear it. The 'old women' were particularly rife on the present occasion, for not only was every seat (8,000) occupied, but 700 tickets were subsequently sold for standing places. People have a trick of running after that which they like, and know to be good. . . . Esto perpetua of 'The Messiah,' we say—erit perpetua, we believe.

Arising out of this same Birmingham Festival was a warm dispute on the question of fees. The M. W. published a letter from the chairman of the committee thanking Madame Grisi, one of the soloists, for her donation of £100 towards the General Hospital. On this the Editor comments:

> This is very well . . . the same compliment, however, ought to be extended to every member of the band, for they, in relinquishing the extra shillings in their terms of engagement, have in the aggregate given a much larger sum; and individually made an immense sacrifice. The chorus singers were horribly screwed down, so much so that many to whom the pittance of remuneration was an object, walked to Birmingham, living by the way with corresponding economy.

In the same number was a letter signed 'A Ten-Pounder,' asking the Editor to expose 'the unequal manner in which vocal and instrumental performers are paid at provincial Festivals.' He pointed out that Grisi received six hundred guineas for singing at Birmingham; he blamed, not her, but 'those who consented to give her such an enormous sum,' and who engaged chorus singers at £6 per head. He had heard also that 'Master Regondi received forty guineas for playing a couple of Fantasias on the concertina and guitar' [at a Birmingham Festival!].

Far be it from him to detract from the merit of Master Regondi; but he protested against that 'talented youth' receiving for a half-hour's engagement four times as much as the orchestral players were paid for the whole of the week's performances, morning and evening, plus twelve hours' rehearsal; and he remained, dear Sir, on behalf of his 'brother ill-paiders, A Ten-Pounder.'

His spirited letter brought forth one in the following number from 'Your's obliged, A Six-Pounder,' one of the hapless choralists who had been obliged to foot it to and from the Festival, otherwise he would have lost on the engagement:

> How the sisterhood of the profession, who are not gifted with legs strong enough to step from here [place not stated] to Birmingham, contrived, heaven only knows. But doubtless by the next Festival, when the railroad will be completed, we shall be reminded of the comparatively cheap travelling, and treated with a corresponding reduction in the terms.

He goes on to speak of the Committee's gratuity to Mendelssohn for his new Pianoforte Concerto, and says that it might have spent some money on > . . . saving old men from the alternative of catching rheumatisms upon night coaches, and others from that of sleeping night after night upon the road, sick and feverish with fatigue—or of returning to London minus by their engagement.

During the performance of 'St. Paul,' he relates, a member of the chorus fell in a fit, and was carried out in convulsions; the victim had come that morning from some distant place, the writer forgot where. The letter ends with a neat reference to the Hospital (for whose benefit the Festival was held):

> There is, I believe, nothing like fatigue for bringing on fits with those who are subject to them (I thank God I am not so), and thus it would seem that, among the benefits conferred by the Festival on the General Hospital, there is a chance of its occasionally supplying it with a few patients.

As an interesting foot-note to this may be added the fact that the receipts at this Festival amounted to over £11,300.

Mention was made above of a couple of inventions which evidently failed. The M.W. gives particulars of other ingenious contrivances that seem to have come to nothing. What happened to the Glycibarisono, invented by Cotterini of Milan? It was a wind-instrument of the bassoon type, 'and its tones are said to bear a close resemblance to those of the human voice.'

And what of the Æolian violin? This—an invention of Isonard, of Paris—was a violin played by a pair of bellows:

> The performer holds the instrument after the manner of a violoncello; his feet work the bellows (like a knife-grinder) and his right hand directs the stream of air to the string requiring it.

The palm must go, however, to M. Mareppe's 'Automaton Violinist,' which seems to have been a real musical Robot. It was exhibited at the Royal Conservatoire of Paris, and is thus described by M. Bruyère:

> On entering the saloon I saw a well-dressed, handsome figure of a man, apparently between forty and fifty, standing with a violin in his hand, as if contemplating a piece of music which lay on a desk before him. . . . I had but little time for observation before the orchestra was filled by musicians, and on the leader taking his seat, the figure instantly raised itself erect, bowed with much elegance two or three times, and then turning to the leader, nodded as if to say he was ready, and placed his violin to his shoulder. At the given signal he raised his bow, and applying it to the instrument, produced, à la Paganini, one of the most thrilling and extraordinary flourishes I ever heard . . . with a degree of rapidity and clearness perfectly astonishing.

There followed a kind of Concerto 'in which the automaton occasionally joined in beautiful style.' He—or I suppose we should say 'it'—then played a Fantasia, including an Allegro molto on the fourth string, solus. The tone was 'expressive beyond conception.' M. Bruyère felt as if lifted from his seat, and burst into tears, 'in which predicament were most persons in the room.' The Robot went on from triumph to triumph, with 'double and single harmonics, arpeggios on the four strings,' winding up with a 'prestissimo movement played in three parts throughout.'

> This part of the performance was perfectly magical. I have heard the great Italian, I have heard Ole Bull, I have heard the best of music, but I never heard such sounds as then saluted my ear. It commenced ppp, rising by a gradual crescendo to a pitch beyond belief; and then gradually died away, leaving the audience absolutely enchanted.

M. Mareppe then described the origin of the automaton, which he had made in emulation of Vaucanson's flute player; and the company (having dried its eyes) was treated to a peep into the interior, 'which was completely filled with small cranks,' as well it might be. M. Mareppe said that the machine was so well under control that he would undertake for it to > . . . perform within a fortnight any piece of music that might be laid before it. . . . But [adds M. Bruyère] the chef d'œuvre is the manner in which the figure is made to obey the direction of the conductor, whereby it is endowed with a sort of semi-reason.

Let us take a hasty glance at the reviewing department, which, considering the small size of the journal, was given a very creditable amount of space.

We are reminded of the belated knowledge of Bach by a review of a collection of organ works, 'Preludes, Fugues, Toccatas, and Fantasias, never before published in this country, Book 1,' issued by Coventry & Hollier. It is impossible to identify any of the movements, as the keys are not mentioned. Which of the Fantasias is referred to in the following?

> But of all the movements that of the Fantasia is most wonderful in construction. It is an absolute anticipation of almost every modern invention in harmony. It is as profound as anything that Beethoven ever wrote. The admirers of this astonishing man, Bach, will readily believe that we do not over-estimate this composition when we pronounce it to be a stupendous work of genius.

The review ends with this note—a reminder that for a long while Bach's organ music was rarely heard in this country on the instrument for which it was composed:

> The work contains a separate part for the double-bass or violoncello, arranged for the pedals by a man as remarkable in his walk as the author himself—the inimitable Dragonetti.

Thus the Bachite could enjoy the organ music in his home as duet for pianoforte and 'cello (or double-bass). 'With this combination,' says a review of a later volume of Bach, 'they are glorious chamber music.'

I like this note which accompanies the review column in the journal's first issue:

> In starting our work we may as well explain the object we have in view under the head of musical criticism. It is simply this: to notice such compositions as we conceive exhibit ability in their several branches of the science, and to pass over those which in our opinion are not calculated to advance the cause of good music. It is neither our principle nor our interest to polish and point a cutting and ill-natured sentence. Any flippant dapper can make an impertinent speech, and any jackass a brutal one.

The 'ill-natured' was very well avoided in the following notice of '"Signal Fires," a Song written and composed by THE WIFE OF A DISTRESSED CLERGYMAN':

> The simple circumstance of the Archbishop's lady (an accomplished theorist) having subscribed for three hundred copies of this song will of itself obviate any critical remarks we might otherwise feel called upon to offer respecting its simple and affecting beauty.

I wind up this dip into the past with a couple of light paragraphs. By the way, it is worth noticing that the M. W. was anything but highbrow or solemn. Throughout there is a leaven of waggishness, sometimes of the mild-drawn brew, occasionally broadening somewhat, as in this John-Bullish outburst:

> The Sultan Mahomet has commanded the engagement of sixty musicians from Paris, who are to proceed to Constantinople for the purpose of performing at the approaching nuptials of the Sultana. 'Assuredly [says a French paper] the good city of Constantinople will reach the height of our civilisation.' Ha! ha! Because sixty Paris fiddlers are going there! If conceit and stink are to form the standard of civility, Paris will long remain paramount.

We all know that the 'happy ending' has been violently applied to certain of Shakespeare's plays for operatic purposes. Bellini's 'I Montecchi e Capuleti' ('Romeo and Juliet') is an instance, judging from the naïve announcement quoted in the following:

> Bellini's opera 'I Montecchi e Capuleti' was lately performed at Bucharest. At the bottom of the affiche was the following notice: 'To avoid the lamentable effect at the end of the fourth Act, Romeo and Juliet will not die.'

Finally—this really is the last extract—here is an amusing addition to homely instruments of the freak kind:

> THE CHIN-CHOPPER OUTDONE.—There is a man, we are told, who goes about to public-houses to exhibit his extraordinary performances on the common tobacco-pipe. He puts the bell-part against his teeth, and holds the small end betwixt the finger and thumb of his left hand; then with the fingers of his right hand he produces really two octaves. The tone is diversified by the expansion or closing of the mouth, something similar to the Jew's Harp. The manner in which he plays 'The Downfall of Paris' is, we understand, very extraordinary, particularly the last part of it, which runs up and down the scale in semiquavers.

What was 'The Downfall of Paris'?—an odd sort of piece surely for such a feeble instrument. The method is not too clearly shown in the paragraph, and my attempt at the 'Ride of the Valkyries' has so far resulted in nothing more than despairing sighs, and an involuntary assimilation of a small portion of nicotine and other waste product, all my available pipes being of the highly-seasoned and incinerated kind. My next practice (with a somewhat simpler work) must wait till a new instrument is forthcoming.

NEW LIGHT ON LATE TUDOR COMPOSERS

By W. H. GRATTAN FLOOD

XVII.—WILLIAM BLITHEMAN

Evidence in abundance is forthcoming as to the creative powers of William Blitheman as a composer between the years 1560 and 1591, but of his biography the details are very meagre. As a pioneer of organ music, and as the teacher of Dr. John Bull, he deserves inclusion in the present series, especially as neither Husk, nor Davey, nor Walker, seemed able to furnish any particulars about his career.

William Blitheman was born c. 1535-36, and was the son of the William Blitheman, who was one of King Henry VIII.'s Receivers: previous to which—in March, 1535—he had been appointed Registrar of the Commissioners (Layton and Legh) for the suppression of the monasteries in the North of England, and was also Comptroller of Newcastle-on-Tyne. Thus the younger Blitheman was brought up in the 'reformed' atmosphere, and probably became a chorister of the Chapel Royal in 1547. After his voice broke (c. 1551) he continued the study of music, but his name does not appear in the list of Queen Mary's Chapel. In 1564, according to Bishop Tanner, he was Master of the Choristers at Christ Church, Oxford, and at this date his powers as a composer were recognised, inasmuch as John Case, of Woodstock, in his 'Apologia Musices' (1588) refers to Blitheman, whom he brackets with Taverner, Tallis, and More.

Blitheman's early works must be dated as c. 1556-60 — for Thomas Mulliner, of St. Paul's, includes no fewer than fourteen of his organ compositions in his MS., embracing four settings of 'Eterne rerum Conditor' and six settings of 'Gloria tibi, Trinitas.' He also, at a somewhat later period, composed an 'In Nomine' for the virginas. In regard to his organ compositions, Mr. Henry Davey describes them as devoid of stiffness, 'with perfectly free three-part or four-part writing,' and he adds: 'Those of Blitheman are more distinguished by executive difficulties.' In one of his settings of 'Eterne rerum Conditor' occurs the direction Melos suave. Sir John Hawkins quotes 'A Meane'—No. 31 of Mulliner's book—by Blitheman. In his virginal arrangement of an 'In Nomine,' the canto fermo is placed in the alto, 'the figuration consisting,' as Van den Borren writes, 'from one end to the other of regular triplets, without any interruption of the rhythm by the intervention of binary values.' ('The Sources of Keyboard Music in England.' Translated by James E. Matthew. Novello, 1915.)

It is said—and is probably correct—that Blitheman shared with Byrd the post of organist of the Chapel Royal from 1571 to 1585, but it is certain that on the death of Tallis, in November, 1585, he was appointed his successor, Byrd—owing to his strong religious views—merely retaining the honorary post of joint organist.

Blitheman was official organist of the Chapel Royal from 1585 till his death, but it must be noted that in 1586 he graduated Mus. Bac., at Cambridge University. He taught Dr. John Bull, a chorister from 1572 to 1579; and his famous pupil, after two years at Hereford Cathedral, was appointed Gentleman of the Chapel Royal in 1585. It would appear that Blitheman fell into ill health in 1588, at which date his post was filled by Bull, as I find a record in the MSS. of the Marquis of Salisbury (Hatfield Papers, Hist. MSS. Com.) that on February 7, 158$\frac{8}{9}$, a lease of lands valued at £10 to £12 a year was granted to 'John Bull, Organist of H.M. Chapel.' Shortly afterwards Blitheman died on Whit-Sunday, 1591, and was interred in the Church of St. Nicholas Olave, Queenhithe, where a brass plate was placed over his tomb, having the following quaint epitaph—which, though it has disappeared since the Great Fire of London, has been fortunately preserved in Stowe's Survey (iii. 211), as follows:

Here Blitheman lies, a worthy wight,
Who feared God above,
A friend to all, a foe to none,
Whom rich and poor did love;
Of Prince's Chapel gentleman
Unto his dying day,
Whom all took great delight to hear
Him on the organ play;
Whose passing skill in music's art
A scholar left behind,
John Bull by name, his master's vein
Expressing in each kind:
But nothing here continues long,
Nor resting-place can have,
His soul departed hence to Heaven,
His body here in grave.

Music in the Foreign Press

JOHANN CHRISTIAN BACH

In the May Revue de Musicologie, G. de Saint-Foix writes:

The case of Johann Christian Bach, the youngest of Johann Sebastian's sons, is curious indeed. For a long time he was blamed for having cast aside the cherished tradition which his family had obeyed, in order to follow fashion and please the public. He went to Italy, joined the Roman Church, and became the perfect image of an Italian maestro. Towards the end of the 18th century, when people spoke of 'the famous Bach,' they always meant him, not his father, or Karl Philipp Emmanuel. But during the 19th century both his alleged apostasy and his music were severely judged. Nowadays we are learning to acknowledge the enormous influence which he exercised on Mozart. J. C. Bach's Italian operas, his chamber music, and even his orchestral music are in this respect significant enough. But a manuscript book of music in the library of the Paris Conservatoire affords a wealth of fresh evidence. This book is entitled 'Clavier Sonaten Bach,' and the authorship may quite safely be ascribed to Johann Christian. Structure, style, and instrumental writing are characteristic, and recall his Sonatas, Op. 17. But the Johann Christian revealed in these newly re-discovered works is more imaginative and more original. The musical ideas are rich and diversified; the writing is remarkable for its ease and purity.

SCHÖNBERG ON MECHANICAL INSTRUMENTS

In Pult und Taktstock (April), Arnold Schönberg writes:

Mahler once said: 'I consider that my chief duty [as conductor] is to compel my musicians to play that which is written.' And, indeed, few players are willing to play, or are capable of playing, just what is written. Hence, a mechanical production of notes, ensuring an absolute accuracy of pitch, duration, and function in the time division, is most desirable: these elements only represent the actual musical thought, the invariable substance. All other elements—tempo, colour, &c.—are but means of performance, which serve to make the musical thought intelligible, but may vary, e.g., in a quick tempo, dynamic contrasts should be different from what they are in a slow tempo. It is said that in his later years Beethoven used to take all tempi more slowly than before, in order to make the music more clearly intelligible. I do the reverse, and in proportion as works become more familiar, take them in quicker tempi. The relationships determined by the written notes call for interpretation, otherwise they would remain unintelligible. To begin with, every epoch has its own preferences as regard tempi and mode of performance. What is needed is a musician who, while strictly adhering to the true and invariable relations determined by the notes, will adjust them to the requirement of his audience. The musician in command of a mechanical instrument will be able to do all this adequately.

GEORG CHRISTOPH WAGENSEIL

In the April Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft, Walther Vetter writes:

Musical history has not yet said its last word on Wagenseil. As a composer of pianoforte music he is duly appreciated. We have learnt not to underrate his Symphonies, but we know practically nothing of his operas, which are of great interest. They are: 'Ariodante' (1745), 'La Clemenza di Tito' (1746), 'Alessandro nell' Indie' (1748), 'Il Serse' (1748), 'L'Olimpiade' (1749), 'Antigona' (1750), and 'Vincislao' (1750). Wagenseil also took part in the writing of a 'collective' opera, 'Euridice' (1750), together with Hasse, Jomelli, Galuppi, and others. He deserves to be considered as one of the most important and most direct predecessors of Gluck.

HAYDN'S 'CREATION' AND THE PRAG CONSISTORIUM

In the Signale (April 28), Dr. E. H. Müller reprints a little-known letter from Haydn to Ockl (July 24, 1801), referring to the objections raised by the Prag Consistorium against the performance in a church of 'The Creation'; objections that had their true reason in the fear that this oratorio might disseminate subversive ideas among the mass of the people.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC

The March and April issues of Der Auftakt are devoted to a survey of pianoforte music ancient and modern, the chief contributors being Dr. Aber (Ancient Music), Dr. Rietsch (German Music up to Reger), Dr. Pisk (Impressionism), Dr. Deutsch (Modern Middle-European Music), Edwin Evans (British Music), Cœuroy and Perreau (French, Italian, and Spanish Music), Prof. Belaiev and Dr. Stepan (Slavonic Music). An article by Erwin Schulhoff, 'How the Quarter-tone Pianoforte is Played,' is of particular interest.

As a whole, these two numbers constitute a useful repertory. But we live in an age of specialised information, and it is very doubtful whether brief articles such as these—in which lack of space often compels the writers to dismiss a composer's output with one sentence or a bare couple of epithets—will prove stimulating enough to contribute to the diffusion of the works mentioned therein. One would like to know far more about many of the younger composers to whom the writers refer.

BULGARIAN MUSIC

In the April Die Musik, Peter Panoff, after pointing out that Bulgarian folk-music is most undeservedly neglected by investigators, refers to a few young Bulgarian composers: E. Manoloff, D. Christoff, D. Georgieff, A. Krasteff, P. Pipkoff, N. Atanassoff, M. Todoroff. Pantscho Wladigeroff, a composer of Bulgarian origin, working at Berlin is less fundamentally national.

HONEGGER'S 'PACIFIC 231' IN RUSSIA

In the March Sovremmenaya Musyka, two writers bear testimony to the profound impression created at Leningrad and Moscow by Honegger's 'Pacific 231.' Igor Glebov discusses the problem of the objective versus the subjective in music, with special reference to Honegger's work. Both Victor Belaiev and Glebov emphasise the many possibilities which music will find in the direction taken by Honegger.

NEW RUSSIAN COMPOSERS

In the same issue, Victor Belaiev writes on Alexandre Molosov, whose principal works are a Cantata, 'The Sphinx,' a symphonic piece, 'Dusk,' a Pianoforte Concerto, a Ballad for clarinet, 'cello, and pianoforte, five Pianoforte Sonatas, and songs. Brief essays are also devoted to L. Oborin, A. Abramsky, and M. Kvadry.

KRYJANOWSKY

This number contains also an obituary notice of I. Kryjanowsky, together with an autobiographic sketch. This composer (1867-1926) leaves fifty opus numbers, of which about half are unpublished. He wrote two books on the physiology of pianoforte playing, and one (unpublished) on 'The Biological Foundations of the Evolution of Music.'

M.-D. CALVOCORESSI.

CHARLES BURNEY IN THE LIGHT OF HIS LETTERS

BY E. VAN DER STRAETEN

Nothing will bring great and remarkable men of the past so near to us, and reveal to us their human side, as the letters to their friends in which they tell of their joys and woes, their ideas of current events, and give us an insight into the innermost recesses of their heart. This accounts for the fascination which the letters of great musicians like Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Wagner, and others have always exercised upon us, and leaves us to wonder that the letters of one of the most brilliant personalities, with the widest range of interest, among 18th-century musicians should so far have remained unpublished, with the exception of a few which appear in the Memoirs issued by his gifted daughter, Frances d'Arblay.

The writer has so far succeeded in finding only a small number of the letters of Dr. Burney. These, however, are very interesting in showing his relations to some of the eminent musicians of his time, his views of social and political conditions and events of that turbulent period, and his private circumstances. There are three letters to Samuel Wesley, the younger brother of John, and pupil of his elder brother Charles. The first is addressed to 'Saml. Wesley, Esq., 11, Adam's Row, Hamstead Road,' and dated 'Chel[sea] Coll[ege], July 19, ½ past 2, Thursday' [1806?], and runs as follows:

> With best comp. a. Virtuosisimo. Sigr. Vincenzo Novello.
>
> I shall now begin my final note, in the dual number, with
>
> MY DEAR FRIENDS,—If you could send your Lumber-dy Instrumt. sooner than 10 to-morrow morng. I shd be right glad; that it may be tuned in unison with mine, for if its pitch shd be altered, the 2 Giants will not remain in perfect friendp [friendship] an hour. While the weather continues warm, I had rather wait on ye at 11, than 12 or 1—I am now entirely for the performance of the 30 Wariations de suite: as you two virtuous gemmen, doubtless, are so parfet in all these pretty thunes, that you'll go on as swimming from beginning to end, as if wind and tide were both strongly in your favour. I think the forte, i.e. fortis, may begin to storm then works of Engineer Bach, before 12, and if we have any time to spare, after being played over, we can talk them over—or what would be shtill petter auch coot [also good] if little i were to say bis then might, may-hap, be time for a Da Capo. So, fin Dimani [till to-morrow], at least, God bless ye! C. B.

I give on page 515 a photographic reproduction of the autograph, as the letter is a delightful specimen, in its imitation of Handelian German-English mixed with Italian, of Burney's unquenchable humour, which seldom left him.

The second letter of June 27, 1810, from Chelsea College, is likewise given in full:

> MY DEAR FRIEND,—Since we last met I have been but 3 days see able, not so much from age and infirmities as from other complaints with which I have been persecuted. However this delightful warm weather has hit my several cases so well as to enable me to quit my bedroom, and to breathe the more pure air of my library, which being in a Northern aspect I dare not enter during Winter, or Wintery weather in Summer. But now ours is so much Summer Island I shall be very happy in the honour of receiving you and your illustrious Portuguese friend in any room of my etage in alt; but not till the ensuing week: as I have two or three engagements hanging over me, which prevent my offering you and M. Novelli any specific time till after next Sunday the 30th inst. Your comprehensive encomia on the Talents as well as intellectual and mental cultivation of M. N. render me extremely impatient to enjoy both, and if, at noon, any day in the ensuing week shall be more convenient to either of you than another, I beg you will let me know your choice and I shall be ready to shake a hand with you, not only con tutta la stima [esteem] but con amore. C.B.—My daughter Sarah is not at home, or I am sure she would have returned your compliments with thanks.

Who the Novelli mentioned in this letter was, I have been unable to find out.

The third letter, of 1813, bearing no superscription, shows Burney deeply offended by Wesley's habit of unpunctuality and want of consideration. Again it is given in full, as its character would only suffer from shortening, being very concise:

> Though the weather groes daily more cold to my bodily feelings, my mind is not sufficiently cool to forget the vexation your breach of an engagement made upon your own day and hour, without seeming to think it of importance enough to require an excuse. I am sorry to recollect that you have formerly, more than once for frivolous reasons let me expect you in vain—having on the way hither met with some person or thing that caught your attention and made you relinquish or drive from remembrance your engagement. I cannot, at least immediately, bring myself, cordially to name any future time for such a meeting as you seem to wish. I have been long so much detached from the active world and weaned from musical delights, that I now no more wish to renew them than a child who has been several years deprived of the breast—unless coax'd by the civilities of such a performer as yourself.
>
> You say the little Paton (the extraordinary girl of whom you read in the papers) is to be of your party in the country; but I must inform you that I was the first who heard her in England on my P.F. having been honoured with a letter from Lord Buchan desiring me to hear and recommend her to the patronage of my friends. I was her Proneur [eulogist], and if you should ask her whether she knew Dr. B. she will recollect perhaps, how much I was pleased and even astonished with her knowledge and performances of all kinds.

Adieu—believe me yours as much as I can be under present circumstances

Chel. Coll. Augt 29, 1813. C. B.

'The little Paton' refers to Mary Ann Paton (Mrs. Wood), b. 1802, a celebrated operatic soprano, who sang already in concerts at the age of eight, and came with her family from Edinburgh to London in 1811. The manner in which Burney softens the expression of his just anger in the above letter is a fine illustration of his lovable, gentle nature.

There is one letter from Burney to John Wall Callcott, best known by his admirable glees, catches, and canons, congratulating him on successfully passing his examination for the degree of Mus. Doc. (Oxon.), Burney having been one of the examiners. In the letter, dated June 26, 1800, he says that he feels he must break the rule and send his most hearty congratulations even before the official announcement of the results; adding:

But mind!—You have hitherto been composing agreeable and pleasing music—if, henceforth, you do not write in a learned, and unintelligible manner, to 'the fair, the gay, the young,' you may perhaps have your gown stript over your head, by the deep, the dull, the old, but not by your old friends: among the most historian of them all, I beg you will number yours in all fraternity except the French. CHAS. BURNEY.

The latter phrase alludes to the motto, 'Liberté, égalité, fraternité,' of the French republic which Burney absolutely detested for the sake of its horrors.

Among the letters dealing essentially with matters musical, is one to Samuel Rose, residing in Chancery Lane. It is dated from Chelsea College, August 12, 1796:

MY DEAR SIR,—Supposing that about this time you may be returning from your circuit, I trouble you again on the subject of Mr. Prof. Young's commission. If my queries concerning the Pitch-pipe, and double-base string were communicated to him and have been answered I should be obliged to you for his further explanation on these matters: as the last letter which you inclosed from your friend was written previous to his having seen the doubts which prevented Gray the organ-builder from going to work immediately, it has left us where it found us. However if no further instructions are yet arrived, Gray will go to in the best manner he can on those contained in the first letter: lest further delay should incommode and disappoint your ingenious and learned correspondent.

Believe me to be with great regard,
Dear Sir, Yours most truly,
CHAS. BURNEY.

In 1784, the year of the Handel Commemoration Festival in Westminster Abbey, Burney lived in St. Martin's Street, Leicester Square, where his house became the focus of all the most eminent musicians and painters, as well as men and women of letters and of fashion. From that address he wrote, on November 9, 1784, to the English Ambassador at Vienna, Sir Robert Murray Keith, K.B., reminding him of his promise of assistance in his musical researches, which he begs of him now with regard to a point of musical history concerning Vienna. He begins by telling him of the Handel Commemoration and its success, which surpassed the most sanguine expectations of the 'abettors of the enterprise,' as much as it astonished . . . incredulous Theorists, who thinking the undertaking too gigantic and unwieldy had predicted failure. You must long have observed Sir, that there are partisans for every kind of music as well as sectaries of every religion, and that the followers of Handel are very numerous in England: indeed the belief in his infallibility and supremacy forms a part of our national musical creed. But even those who being accustomed to more modern, and as they contend, more graceful, elegant, and fanciful music; and who call his style of composition gothic, inelegant, clumsy, readily allowed that the effect in performance by a band of voices and instruments in Westminster Abbey, amounting to 525, were such as they had never experienced, and excited sensations of delight for which they were wholly unable to account.

Then he describes his own doubts and fears with regard to the performance:

The solo parts I thought would be lost in the expanse . . . unless very coarsely performed; and with the ensemble I expected to be stunned. But incredulity is silenced, and experience and speculation overturned. The loud was not coarse nor the soft inaudible. . . . The success of this enterprise has been so complete as to induce me to prepare a detailed account for immediate publication, which his Majesty, to whom permission is granted to dedicate it, has honoured so far as to peruse in MS. sheet by sheet, as fast as it was written, and it seems as if an event so honourable to the art, to our country, and to the national gratitude, would form an Aera in the annals of music.

After the greatest part of his work was printed, he found in a book of letters of a Frenchman travelling in Germany, an account of an annual musical performance at Vienna, for the benefit of the widows of deceased musicians, by a band of four hundred performers. Not regarding an anonymous book as an authority, he asks Sir Robert, if there were such a performance, to answer some questions about it—which he details under five headings—from his own knowledge as much as possible—

. . . as patriotism almost always inclines the natives of every country to exaggerate whatever will redound to its honour, and be reflected back on themselves.

If he should receive an answer to his queries before the publication of his book, he intends to add a leaf to his account

. . . to mention this Vienna musical assembly, which I shall do [he says] with the more pleasure, as the school of instrumental music in that city stands very high in my esteem, indeed it not only seems to me the first in Europe of the present time, but of all times since the invention of counterpoint.

He tells Sir Robert that his inquiries about the above subject in various quarters have failed, and asks him to present his humble respects to his . . . musical patroness and St. Cecilia of Vienna, the Countess Thun.

Then he continues with the interesting information that he had already been in correspondence with Haydn to induce him to visit London, and that there had been apparently some idea to produce one of Haydn's operas. Fortunately that plan did not mature, as it would not have assured his immediate success in the manner in which this was accomplished by his Symphonies and chamber music. Burney writes:

I had last year [1783] hopes that the admirable Haydn, the chief ornament of the Vienna school and of the age, would have made me a visit; If the universal admiration and performance of his works would be a temptation to visit us, I can assure him of that claim to his favour; but as to the opera, at present its [regimen?] is in such confusion that it is hardly certain whether its existence will be ascertained during the ensuing winter.

I have the honour to be with the most profound respect and regard, your Excellency's obliged and most devoted servant

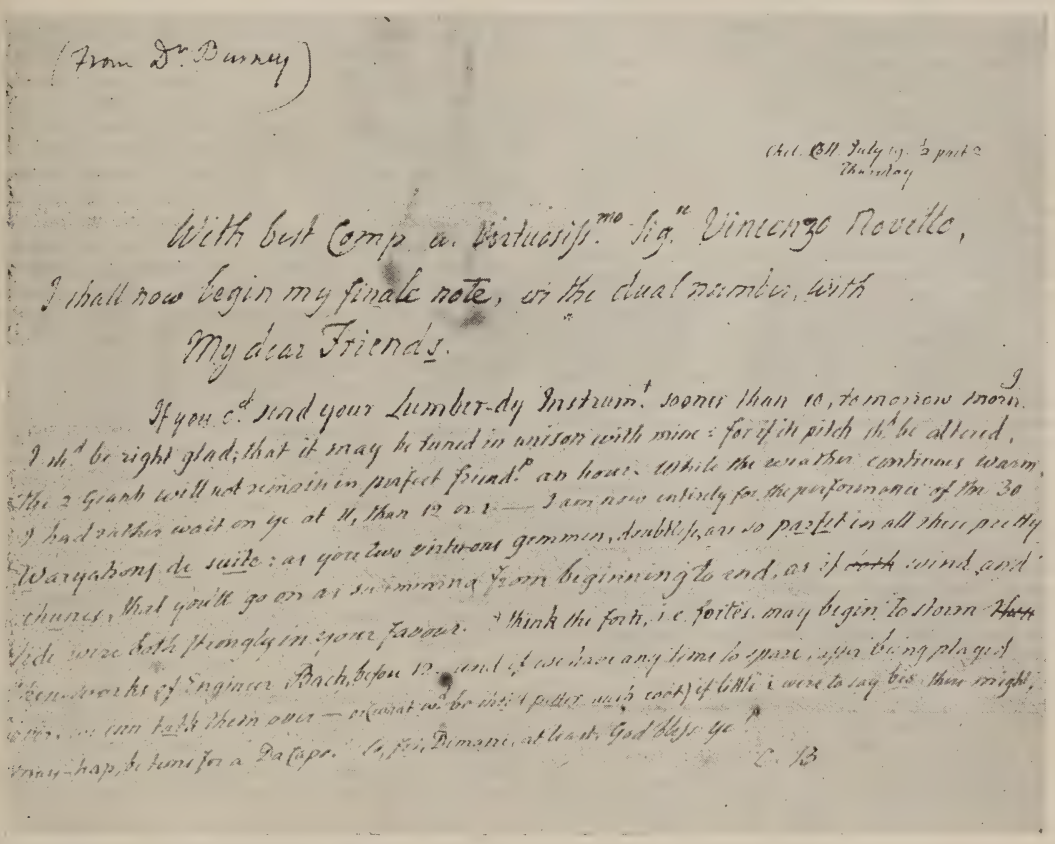
CHAS BURNEY.

An interesting letter to Lady Crewe, the daughter of his friends, Mr. and Mrs. Fulke Greville, and his godchild, gives us an insight into the chain of financial misfortunes which dogged his footsteps all through life, and of which but for this letter we should never have obtained a full knowledge. Yet without knowing how he bore all these, in addition to the greater tragedies of his life, we cannot fully appreciate the noble strength of his character. The letter is important also in another respect, as at the end of it Burney gives us the date of his birth as April 7, O.S. (old style), which corresponds to April 18 according to the modern calendar and the date of the letter. This disposes once and for all of the conflicting statements which we find in his various biographies.

Considering the importance of this letter, which not only gives us a full account of his worldly affairs, but also throws light upon his relations to many eminent and notable people of his time, as well as revealing some admirable traits of his character, it is felt that it should be given in its entirety:

Chel. Coll.
18th April, 1806.

MY EVER AND VERY DEAR LADY CREWE,—I had been so long hopeless as to Place or Pension, after being so many years honoured with the countenance of the Great, and even the friendship of several persons in power, that not a ray of hope had glanced through my mind for many years, till you lately assured me with such confidence that Mr. Windham had kindly and readily undertaken my cause at your request. This revived all the hopes of youth and inexperience from patronage: As Mr. Windham, though a statesman, is not a loose and insincere distributor of moonshine; but like Johnson, 'promises others only, what he promises himself.' Were I to give a list of my hopes and disappointments in the course of my long and laborious life, my friends would not wonder at my scepticism in the smiles of fortune. In 1764, I lost a friend by a sudden death [Mr. Honeywood the banker] who gave me £100 a year for dining with him at Hampstead of a Sunday, by whose sudden death I was supposed by his partner and connections, to have lost much more than the £100 a year. In 1767, I lost my second wife's dower of £5,000, by the bankruptcy of Mr. Gomm the great Russian Timber Merchant to whom the whole had been lent, previous to our marriage, by the advice of Dr. King, Chaplain to our Factory at Petersburg. I lost the reversion of the place of Master of the King's band, of £300 a year, twice, 1st by Ld. Hertford the Chamberlain, 4 of whose daughters were my scholars, and who had promised me the place in case of a vacancy; but asking the K[ing], on the death of Dr. Boyce, whether his Majesty wished him to appoint any particular person, without mentioning my name, Stanley was appointed, 2dly by Lord Salisbury appointing Parsons the instant he heard of Stanley's death, for fear I



(from Dr. Burney)

Chel. Coll July 19. ½ past 8 Thursday

With best Comp.ts a Virtuosiss.mo Sig.r Vincenzo Novello,
I shall now begin my finale note, or the dead number, with My dear Friends.

If you c.d send your Lumber-dy Instrum.t sooner than 10, to morrow morn. I sh.d be right glad; that it may be tuned in unison with mine: for if th pitch sh.d be altered, the 2 Grands will not remain in perfect Found.n an hour. While the weather continues warm, I had rather wait on ye at 11, than 12 or 1 — I am now entirely for the performance of the 30 Wary Gabons de suite: as you two virtuous gemmen, double-fugue so pat-fit in all their pretty chunes, that you'll go on as swimming from beginning to end, as if with wind and tide were both strongly in your favour. I think the forte, i.e. fortes, may begin to storm Hay Fen-works of Engineer Bach, before 12 — and if we have any time to spare, after being plagued with, we can talk them over — (what we be this Potter wish cost) if little i were to say his then might, perhaps, be turn for a Da Capo. Ly for Romance at least. God bless ye!

C. B

FACSIMILE OF LETTER TO SAMUEL WESLEY

should be named to the place by the King, who wished I should have it, and I was expected by all the musical profession to be Stanley's successor as a thing of course. When the Duke of Rutland was Ld Lieutenant of Ireland, Mr. Secretary Ord had procured me a promise of the place of composer and master of the King's band in Ireland of £200 a year in case of a vacancy during the D. of Rutland's regency. A vacancy did happen, when the Prince of Wales, knowing nothing of my claim, asked the place of the Duchess of Rutland for Crosdill, young enough to be my grandson. The Pantheon being burnt down in which I had purchased a share, which cost me £700, and the loss of a place of 100 guineas a year as foreign secretary to engage foreign singers from Italy and Germany. Two mortgages, one in Wales of £1,000, and one in Ireland of £2,000, are I fear beyond recovery. I have received no interest from either for many years. Booksellers breaking who had received subscriptions for my History of Music; and lately others in whose hands I had placed all the remaining copies of the 4 vols. 4to.—and many Et ceteras might be added to the unfortunate events of my life. But though I have not teazed the great for favour, they have honoured me with notice and civilities, which though not so solid as place and pension, have flattered and gratified my heart, and made my life pass more smoothely and honourably than mere filthy lucre could have done. And at last when something of a more solid kind is arrived, which for some time I have felt myself in danger of wanting, its coming through the medium of persons whom I have always respected, loved, and honoured, swells its value from 200, to at least 2000, and so for the present, I shall dilate no more on the subject.—But will your Ladyship (I have kept it off a great while) have the goodness to instruct me how to demean myself (having had no practice that way) on this important occasion! Would it not be right for me to wait upon Lord Grenville, to leave a card at least, and on our Right Honble. and most Honourable Mr. Windham, with a card of grateful thanks to the benignant Mrs. Windham for her benevolent annunciation of the glad tidings.—The Warmth of the weather to-day, and of your friendly heart, have enabled me to think of quitting my bed chamber in order to travel across the cold library into the parlour where I shall now be most happy in the honour of a call from you any day you will have the goodness to name to

Dearest madam, your most devoted Obliged and affectionate servant
The Octogenarian
CHAS. BURNEY
born Apr. 7th O.S. 1726.

MUSIC IN TOLSTOY'S LIFE

BY HIS SON, COUNT SERGIUS TOLSTOY

Translated by Aylmer Maude

Never in my life have I met anyone who felt music so intensely as my father. He could not help listening to it; when he heard music that pleased him he became excited and there was a contraction in his throat; he sobbed and shed tears. The feelings aroused in him were unreasoning emotion and excitement. Sometimes it excited him against his will and even tormented him, and he would say: Que me veut cette musique? (What does that music want of me?) This effect, independent of a rational relation to it, is vividly depicted in 'The Kreutzer Sonata':

> In general, music is a dreadful thing [says Pozdnyshev]. What is it? I don't understand. What is music? What does it do?

Such was the direct action of music on my father throughout his life, beginning in boyhood and finishing in his last year, when he said to V. F. Bulgakov that if all European civilization were to perish, he would regret only the music.

Therefore, in view of his complete frankness and his constant effort to understand the meaning of the feelings and impressions he experienced, his opinion concerning the importance of music in general and the place music occupies in the life of humanity, and in particular his opinions about certain composers and certain musical works, are of special interest.

. . . . . .

Probably Tolstoy began his own musical education in the way that Nicholas Irtenev did in 'Youth.' In 1847, he wrote in his Diary, that one of the aims of his life was to 'attain a moderate degree of excellence in music and in painting'; and during the following three years of his youthful quest (1848-51), before he had yet decided on his future activity, and when he was living now at Moscow, now at Petersburg, and now in the country, he did actually devote much time to music. He took with him to Yasnaya Polyana a German pianist named Rudolph, and had lessons in music from him. Rudolph was a talented musician of a Bohemian type—a frivolous, dissipated man. Some traits of his character are depicted in 'Albert.' He left some compositions, of which I know the 'Hexengalop' (which was published) and two 'Cavalry Trots.' One of these my father knew by heart, and often used to play. At that period of his life Tolstoy gave very serious attention to his musical occupations. He then wrote in his Diary a whole dissertation on music, 'The Fundamental Bases of Music, and Rules for its Study.' Therein, among other things, occur the following definitions:

> Music is a combination of sounds, which strike our auditory capacfty in three ways: (1) In regard to space, (2) in regard to time, and (3) in regard to strength. Music is a means of arousing certain feelings and conveying them to others by sound.

. . . . . .

Already at that period my father tried to explain to himself why music acts so strongly on its hearers. In an original draft of 'Boyhood and Youth,' he delivers the following opinion, which is almost identical with one he expressed much later, in 1906:

> Music acts neither on reason nor on imagination. When I listen to music I think of nothing and do not imagine anything, but some strange, delightful feeling fills my soul to such an extent that I lose consciousness of my existence. It is a memory-feeling. But a memory of what? Though the sensation is powerful, the recollection is obscure. It seems as if one were remembering something that never occurred. Is not memory the basis of the feeling aroused in us by any art? . . . . Does not the feeling aroused by music result from memory of feelings, and of transitions from one feeling to another? . . . . Plato, in his 'Republic,' laid down as an absolute condition that music should express noble feelings. Every musical phrase expresses some feeling—pride, joy, sorrow, despair, and so on—or it expresses one of the innumerable combinations of those feelings. Combinations that do not express any feeling and are composed in order to show off, to explain, or to earn money—in music as in everything else—are abortions which one cannot take into account (among such abortions are attempts by means of music to express forms and pictures). If one admits that music is the memory of emotions, it is easy to understand why it acts differently on different people. The cleaner and happier a man's past has been, the more he loves his memories, and the more strongly does music act on him; on the other hand the more depressing a man's memories are, the less will he sympathise with it.

During the next period of his life (1856-62), when he had returned from Sevastopol and was already a famous writer, my father lived at Moscow and at Petersburg, and twice went abroad. During this time he neglected no opportunities of making himself acquainted with all that was important in the sphere of music. Many of his friends and acquaintances were keen amateurs. Such were the two brothers Islavin, Zybin, V. Perfilev, A. D. Stolypin, Kireeva, Prince Odoevsky, and others. Some of them were themselves competent performers, others organized musical evenings and invited the best artists. To this period belongs Tolstoy's acquaintance with Nicholas Rubinstein, whose gifts he highly esteemed, and with whom he discussed the establishment of the Moscow Musical Society. That idea the brothers Rubinstein eventually realised by the establishment of the Imperial Musical Society. As a relic of this period, may be mentioned a little Valse composed in Lanner's style, which Tolstoy afterwards often used to play. Its composition has been attributed to my father, but, so far as I know, that is not quite correct; he and his friend Zybin probably composed it together. It was eventually written down by S. I. Tanéïèv, who heard my father play it.

. . . . . .

At this time two operas particularly impressed Tolstoy — Weber's 'Der Freischütz' and Mozart's 'Don Giovanni,' especially the latter. Altogether, during his life he saw but few operas; he was not fond of that form of art, and considered that it was impossible to unite two arts—music and the drama; or even three arts, if we consider that painting (decoration) also plays a part. In his opinion, such a conjunction weakened the arts concerned. However, he made an exception of such an opera as 'Don Giovanni,' as in it the music depicts the feelings of the characters. In his view, the lyricism of that opera redeems the defect, common to all operas, of the conjunction of music with drama. In this he was at one with Tchaikovsky, who is known to have been very fond of Mozart, and to have considered 'Don Giovanni' the best of all operas.

. . . . . .

After 1862 my father settled at Yasnaya Polyana, where he remained almost constantly till 1881. During that time he had few opportunities of hearing concert music. Amateur music, on the other hand, flourished at Yasnaya Polyana. K. A. Islavin, who was a good musician and a tolerable pianist, used to pay prolonged visits.

In the 'seventies, my father was so carried away by music that he played for three or four hours a day. The impression produced by his playing is one of the most vivid of my childish recollections. When we children went to bed he used to sit down at the pianoforte and play till midnight and after, sometimes taking part in four-handed pieces with my mother. I well remember how at that time he played Sonatas by Mozart, Weber, and Beethoven (of his first period), some things of Chopin's, Schumann's 'Jugendalbum,' the 'Acceleration Walzer' of Strauss, Rudolph's 'Trot,' and others; how he tried to play pieces of which the technical demands were too great for him, such as Chopin's Scherzo in B flat minor, Schumann's 'Symphonic Etudes,' or Henselt's 'Poème d'Amour'; and how he played (in duet arrangements with my mother) Haydn's and Mozart's Symphonies, Beethoven's Septuor, and other pieces. I remember my first sweet impressions of music heard by me from afar—from the upper story where my father was playing—impressions mingling with childish half-unconscious dreams, merging gradually into sleep. For some reason I specially remember the first bars of Weber's Sonata in A flat major, of which he was particularly fond. Subsequently he expressed to N. Rubinstein his astonishment that this Sonata and other pieces by Mozart and Haydn were scarcely ever performed at concerts. Rubinstein replied that they are difficult, because they must be played faultlessly.

Remembering now my father's playing, I should say it was rhythmical and expressive, but sometimes interpreted in a way of his own rather than as the composer intended; and insufficient technical mastery hindered him from fully expressing what he himself intended.

In playing the pianoforte he had to exert himself greatly. His undeveloped fingers were not sufficiently obedient; he used to bend his body and perspire, but he played with much enthusiasm.

Early in the 'seventies a great event in the musical world of Yasnaya Polyana was the arrival of my father's kinsman, I. M. Nagorny, a remarkable violinist, who rarely performed at concerts in Russia, but had at one time achieved success in Italy and France. He played a great deal at Yasnaya Polyana, among other things the 'Kreutzer' Sonata, a work with which he produced a particularly powerful impression on my father. Perhaps the ideas and images subsequently so vividly expressed in his story, 'The Kreutzer Sonata,' were then conceived. I remember that he was also delighted by Nagorny's performance of other Sonatas by Beethoven, Weber, Schubert, and Mozart (especially the Andante of the E flat major Sonata), and ballads, polonaises, and mazurkas by Wieniawski.

In 1876, on one of his visits to Moscow, through N. Rubinstein, my father made P. I. Tchaikovsky's acquaintance.

From the time he was a young law-student and my father's first works were appearing, Tchaikovsky had preferred them to any others. 'When I made L. N. Tolstoy's acquaintance,' wrote Tchaikovsky ten years later:

> . . . I was seized by fear and a feeling of awkwardness before him. . . . But he, who in his writings showed himself the profoundest reader of the human heart, appeared in his behaviour with others to be a simple, genuine, and frank man, who showed very little of the omniscience I had feared. . . . He simply wanted to chat about music, in which he was then interested. Among other things he was fond of decrying Beethoven, about whose genius he had doubts. This was a trait not at all characteristic of a great man; to degrade a universally acknowledged genius to the level of one's own incapacity is a characteristic of limited minds.

I will not discuss how far Tchaikovsky was right in uttering that reproach, but will only remark that he himself, in his Diary, admits that he was not fond of Beethoven, though he bowed down to him.

During this visit of my father's, Tchaikovsky, with N. Rubinstein's assistance, arranged a musical evening which made a great impression on him.

'Never perhaps in my life have I felt so flattered,' writes Tchaikovsky, 'as when Tolstoy, listening to the Andante of my Quartet, and sitting by my side, broke into tears.'

After his return to Yasnaya Polyana, Tolstoy sent Tchaikovsky a collection of folk-songs, begging him to 'work them up in a Mozart-Haydn style, and not in a Beethoven-Schumann-Berlioz-artificial style, which aims at the unexpected.' This, in all probability, was Kirsh Danilov's collection.

Tchaikovsky replied that > . . . the songs have been taken down by an incompetent hand, and only retain traces of their original beauty. The chief defect is that they have been artificially and forcibly squeezed into a regular, measured rhythm. Moreover, most of these songs have been taken down in a solemn D major, which again is not in accord with the structure of real Russian songs; these almost always have an indefinite tonality, most nearly resembling old Church chants. . . . To take down folk-songs in accord with the people's way of singing them is an extraordinarily difficult thing, and needs the most delicate musical feeling and great historico-musical erudition. . . . But your songs can serve as material for symphonic elaboration and are even very good material, of which I will make use in one way or other.

After this, the intercourse between Tolstoy and Tchaikovsky soon ceased, partly because the latter felt disillusioned at finding in Tolstoy little of the dictator he had expected, and partly because in general he avoided people with whom he was not closely acquainted:

> I reached the conviction [he wrote in a letter to Madame Mein] that Tolstoy is a somewhat paradoxical person, but direct, kindly, and even in his own way sensitive to music, but nevertheless acquaintance with him did not afford me anything but a burden and a torment, as every acquaintanceship does.

In his correspondence Tchaikovsky repeatedly wrote about Tolstoy.

It is noteworthy that Tchaikovsky, who wrote ten operas, held the same critical opinion of the operatic form as Tolstoy. Writing to Madame Mein, he says:

> Leo Tolstoy advised me to abandon the pursuit of theatrical success, and in 'War and Peace' he makes his heroine feel perplexed and suffer at the false conventionality of operatic action. One who, like you, does not live in Society (and who, therefore, abjures all conventionality), or, like Tolstoy, has lived many years constantly in the country, occupied exclusively with family, literary, and school affairs, must feel more acutely than others all the falsity of operatic forms. Similarly when I write an opera I feel myself cramped, and lack freedom. Nevertheless one must admit that much first-rate musical beauty exists in dramatic form, and that its authors were inspired by dramatic motives.

(To be continued.)

THE PIANOFORTE CONCERTO PROBLEM

By Robert H. Hull

Some time ago—in February, 1924—an admirable article by Mr. Kaikhosru Sorabji appeared in the Musical Times, on the subject of neglected works. Mr. Sorabji's concise comments with regard to the lack of enterprise on the part of executive musicians and concert directors are, unfortunately, as true to-day as they were at the time his article was written. For instance, so far as any of London's major orchestral organizations were concerned, in the season 1924-25 the Philharmonic Society alone showed any enterprise or attempt at originality in its programmes, although in the season 1925-26 the Philharmonic programmes were, unfortunately, as dull as any in London. But though the question is certainly acute in connection with purely orchestral works, it is acutely chronic, if I may use such a term, where it touches the concerto problem. Mr. Sorabji dealt at some length with the general aspect of the matter, so that it is unnecessary to do so again; my present purpose is concerned with discussing what I believe to be an important contributary feature to the deplorable stagnation that exists at present amongst the majority of concerto players.

All over the country, and especially in London, we have important centres of musical training which help to provide a substantial proportion of the vast number of solo pianists who flood the market every year. Those who are deemed to be of sufficient ability to play concertos in public are frequently given trial performances at students' concerts, at which a certain amount of latitude in the choice of works is allowed, provided that they do not present unnecessary or extreme difficulties to the orchestra. Nevertheless we find that, almost without exception, the soloists keep to examples already worn thread-bare by the older concerto players of the present day. The Patrons' Fund Rehearsals for British executive artists and composers at the Royal College of Music offer excellent advantages to a limited number of pianists every year, but even those students who are fortunate enough to be selected as performers do not seem to realise the full value of their opportunities. For example, a short while ago I heard the Grieg Pianoforte Concerto performed at one of these rehearsals, a fact which is significant of the lack of enterprise to which I have already alluded. In this respect, however, the pianists are no worse than the 'cellists, who confine themselves almost entirely to the Elgar and Dvorák Concertos, with the Boëllmann Symphonic Variations as an occasional alternative.

The Delius Pianoforte Concerto has been in favour lately, five or six performances having being given within a comparatively short period at one institution or another. We welcome the initiative which governs such acts, but feel that in this case it is somewhat misdirected. To neglect modern works more or less consistently for years, and, by way of repentance, to single out a Concerto that cannot be called either a great or good piece of workmanship, is not calculated to do any lasting good, and may be merely the substitution of one kind of evil for another.

It is now time to examine the situation constructively. To whom should be assigned the responsibility for the absurdly conservative policy governing the choice of works? Investigation goes to prove what is obvious to anyone who has seen the inner working of these schools of music, and that is that the professors themselves are largely responsible for the existing state of affairs. Students usually follow the directions of the authorities in matters connected with choice of works, and therein lies the difficulty. The body of aggressively conservative professors is a large one, and in the fullness of time we have the new students playing the old works, in a routine that is mechanical. In chamber music we find that the same series of quartets are performed again and again, while their equally worthy neighbours lie untouched, thus fortifying Mr. Sorabji's argument that the laxity is widespread. Regarding pianoforte concertos, no isolated venture will serve. The movement, if it is to be of value, must be fundamentally organized. It seems that one way to approach the matter would be to secure the co-operation of some of the more enterprising of the professors. If this were done, the change of policy would become comparatively wholesale, and the efforts of the pioneers would gain proportionately in effect.

The performance of new works at a student's début does not condemn the player for the future, as we are led to suppose, and from a financial point of view would certainly be as successful as the present system. An appreciable section of the public would be quite as ready to welcome new concertos, as others would be to go and hear the Tchaikovsky B flat minor. Mr. Sorabji singled out M. Victor Schiöler for praise, on account of his performance of the Reger Pianoforte Concerto. I add my tribute to his. Such originality is all too rare. It may be asked, 'If the well-worn concertos be given a rest, what shall be put in their place?' The material is not lacking. We can set to work with the Bach and Mozart Concertos, the latter providing an extensive field for research. The Beethoven Concertos may, with profit, be put aside for a while; the fourth and fifth have had too much attention to the exclusion of other works. The Franck Variations are worth much more than an occasional performance, and the same remark applies to Liapounov's Variations on Ukranian Themes. Regarding concertos proper, there is not space to give more than a somewhat superficial catalogue, but, following Mr. Sorabji, I would again draw attention to the Busoni and Reger Concertos. For further material, I suggest the later Rachmaninov works, and Concertos by Prokofiev, Dohnányi, Cyril Scott, Tcherepnin, Herbert Howells, and Palmgren.

Points from Lectures

Mr. Bernard Johnson, speaking at Nottingham, in reference to the well-known borrowings of Handel, discussed them with some freshness. It was true, he said, that Handel stole melodies right and left, without acknowledgment of his indebtedness to other authors; but if he was to be blamed for this, could not a clergyman be called a thief because he 'stole' a text from the Scriptures and preached a sermon on it? Industrious mud-slingers were always pointing out instances in which Handel had 'borrowed' from some obscure composer who lived a hundred years before him. But everything Handel touched he made to live, aud it was only because he had condescended to take some little tune from their works that some of these obscure composers were remembered.

The parallelism of the golden age of music with that of literature led Mr. Adrian Boult to point out how the creation of great music moved in cycles. The interest and activity started with a vogue of simplicity which almost always took its origin from the discovery, or re-discovery, of music that sprang straight from the soul. Folk-music was taken by composers and gradually applied to the needs of the moment, and often as time went on the very people who had taken an interest in the collection of tunes, used them more and more directly in their compositions. Applying this argument to the present day, he took examples from the works of Vaughan Williams, Gustav Holst, and other composers.

'Choir-Training' was Mr. Geoffrey Shaw's subject at Cambridge, when he addressed a gathering of teachers. Most people, he said, learnt the art of conducting only from bitter experience, without ever having a lesson in choir management. A certain standard of musicianship was necessary; it was not enough merely to stand in front of a choir and beat time. Frequently it was much better not to use a baton, especially with children and with a small body of voices, for in nine cases out of ten it brought a rigidity into the singing. Often it was quite enough just to set a choir going; the singers could manage quite well unaided, and the flowing melody of the music was much less likely to be interrupted. Regarding the faults of singing, Mr. Shaw did not think that mistakes in tone, accentuation, light and shade, technique, or rhythm were by any means the chief faults; bad enunciation was the worst mistake. 'Do not bother about bar-lines,' said the lecturer. Much of the charm of singing depended on a beautiful prose rhythm. A choir must sing with significance rather than with expression. Usually choirs sang either very loudly or very softly, and they did not bother to find out much about the country in between. It was up to a singer to try to get the true sense of the message of the music. A conductor should never beat with a rigid arm, and should have intention in every gesture. Whenever possible a song should be memorised, and, above all, should be sung with the clarity of the spoken word.

The story of Irish music which Dr. Annie W. Patterson told a Dublin audience in Molesworth Hall, was not merely a review, but a plea for the development of a National School of Music. Dr. Patterson said that it was not appreciated generally that the old Irish bardic tradition was mainly instrumental. Instead, it was customary to hear a great deal about Irish song. Moore's 'Melodies' made a great sensation, and, later, other settings of traditional songs had been much before the public. Dr. Patterson dwelt on the fame of the Irish harp and its place in history as a prototype of the modern pianoforte. She played on the pianoforte some specimens of early and mediæval harp minstrelsy, including a theme entitled 'The Battle of Arganmore,' which is credited to the 2nd century, and may be one of the oldest recorded pieces of music. The speaker also called attention to characteristic features of this example.

Addressing the Midland Arts Club on nationality in music, Mr. Frederick Thomas characterised French music as sparkling and naïve, Italian music, suave and graceful, Polish music, mournful, Spanish music, poignant and gay, Russian music, unsympathetic and attractive, and Scandinavian music, keen and cutting. German music stood for the expression of the deeper feelings of mankind. The love of the Germans for music arose from their religious and reforming ardour. Mr. Thomas regarded Bach as the musical reincarnation of Martin Luther. The chief feature of English music was its cheerfulness, simplicity, and grace.

Delving into Sussex music of the past, the Rev. K. H. Macdermott produced unique specimens before the Sussex Archæological Society. One of these was a vamp-horn, one of six which existed in England. He had found ancient music consisting of manuscript and printed books, several of which had been printed in the county. Henry Bristow, at the age of eighty-two, sang from memory no fewer than four hundred and twenty songs. George Arnold, of Bosham, who died at upwards of ninety years of age, served in the village choir for eighty years. Old Sussex folk-dances were modal. The old Sussex singers could not bear to be accompanied. The natives had been very fond of making their own tune-books. Mr. Macdermott had discovered literally hundreds of MS. books of songs, dances, and Church music, which had been written laboriously and painstakingly. Great interest was taken in the display of musical instruments formerly used in Sussex Churches and villages.

A teacher's vacation course in music was held for several days in Rushworth Rooms, Liverpool. The lecturers included Mr. Stewart Macpherson, Mr. Cuthbert Whitemore, and Dr. Stanley Marchant. In addition, Prof. E. T. Campagnac spoke on 'Music and Mind.' The other arts, he pointed out, expressed to us the things of this world, while the musician told us of a higher world above this one. J. G.

THE NEW ORGAN-PIANOFORTE

By Anthony Clyne

Little interest has yet been aroused in this country by the descriptions of the new type of pianoforte invented by Mr. J. H. Hammond, jun., of Gloucester, Massachusetts. Those who have read the accounts are eagerly looking forward to an opportunity of examining and hearing the instrument for themselves, and it is to be hoped that arrangements will soon be made for a demonstration in London.

That from it much of the quality of the sounds from a pipe-organ may be obtained, while the characteristics of a pianoforte are retained, is a brief and inadequate description of its nature. Josef Hofmann, the well-known pianist, is greatly impressed by its possibilities:

> I have just returned [he writes] from an extraordinary week-end visit to the home of a master-musician, where I heard a pianoforte demonstrated whose tones grow or die as the performer chooses. I heard volume increased, the tone once struck, and all this without in any way altering the characteristics of the pianoforte tone.

It is stated that professional musicians of the highest standing who have tested the Hammond organ-pianoforte believe that the inventor has achieved the most remarkable improvement that has been made since the pianoforte was evolved early in the 18th century.

John Hays Hammond, jun., is not an expert musician, though it is evident from his performances on his creation, especially his happy improvisations, that he possesses exceptional musical talent undeveloped. He is a scientist already highly distinguished by successful inventions of diverse kinds, and now holds the notable appointments of consulting engineer to the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric Company, and the Westinghouse Company. During the war he invented a type of aluminothermic incendiary projectile, which was employed by the Allies. But his inventions are principally in the field of wireless telegraphy and telephony, and he is the originator of no fewer than three hundred and fifty patents registered or applied for in the United States and the chief countries of Europe. Advanced wireless experimenters in this country will be familiar with his name, especially in connection with devices relating to superheterodyne.

It had long been known that his scientific interests ranged far and wide, but few had any idea that they extended to what may be called the mechanics of music, until last autumn he suddenly revealed his organ-pianoforte. For more than six years he had been working at intervals on the construction of a large pipe-organ in his home at Gloucester. He mastered the whole science of organ-making, and then he must needs study the details of pianoforte-making. Nothing would content him but to attempt to combine in some measure the features of both kinds of instrument.

The principles of the pianoforte, the main elements of its construction, he perceived, have continued unchanged since the first pianoforte was made by Bartolommeo Christofori in 1714. He solved the basic problem by replacing the harpsichord quills which 'twanged' the strings by hammers, adapting the mechanism of the clavichord to secure control by the player over the intensity of sound given out by the strings, and in other respects imitating the harpsichord, while introducing the 'check' which, fixed on the end of the key, catches the edge of the hammer as it falls, and holds it down, thus preventing the hammer from rebounding on the string, and regulating its fall according to the pressure on the key. Since his day the evolution of the pianoforte has been in details and not in principles—minor technical improvements—and the chief aim has been to obtain more sustained tone and power. This has been sought by increasing the rigidity of the frame and by increasing the tension of the strings, more than doubled since 1800. These two methods have been developed to the limit of their effectiveness. From time to time many attempts have been made by ingenious devices to confer upon the player greater power to modulate and control each tone, but all have proved unsuccessful.

Mr. Hammond conceived an entirely new method of giving the player more control over the notes after the keys had been struck. His own brief account, given at a recital attended by many well-known musicians and representatives of the British and Italian Ambassadors, runs as follows:

> By the use of reflectors set inside the instrument and controlled by an additional pedal, it has been possible to build up a tremendous sonority, and the tones may be allowed to escape with any degree of subtlety. In other words, unlike the notes in an ordinary pianoforte, which gradually fade after being struck, those from an instrument fitted with the Hammond pedal may be sustained and even increased in volume many times.

The reflectors mentioned are parallel revolving slats, which can be opened or closed as the player wishes, being operated by the extra pedal as a so-called Venetian blind is opened or closed by its cords. The case of the pianoforte is constructed as soundproof as possible, and the reflectors are ranged along the entire top inside. The tone, therefore, can be built up, as it were, inside the instrument, and then released exactly to the extent desired by the player. The resultant energy when the keys of a pianoforte are struck is sufficient in volume to be measured in foot-pounds, but hitherto only a small fraction of this has been converted into the air-wave-motion which is sound, and human ingenuity has been exhausted in actually neutralising the rest by various devices to absorb the excess. Now a far larger proportion of the energy is utilised to produce greater sonority.

But this is not all. Those who experiment with, or, indeed, play about with, valve wireless receiving sets are familiar with the phenomenon known as regenerative action. But to those who are children in such matters it can be simply explained. In a two-valve set the first valve is a detector and the second is an amplifier. If the second valve not only amplifies the wave-motion, but also returns a proportion of the amplified wave-motion along the path by which it arrived, it will receive it back again from the first valve and, so to speak, amplify again the amplified motion, thus greatly increasing the strength. This phenomenon suggested to Mr. Hammond a method of obtaining a great volume of sound. According to the angle to the sounding-board at which the reflectors are set by the operation of the extra pedal, a less or greater amount of the sound is returned to the sounding-board and reflected again to the reflectors. The analogy with regenerative action in a wireless valve set is not exact, of course, but it makes the phenomenon comprehensible. The Hammond organ-pianoforte acts by a sort of acoustic regeneration, sustaining the vibrations of sound for far greater periods of time than is otherwise possible.

The qualities which differentiate it so greatly from the ordinary pianoforte are set forth as follows: (1) The increased sonority. (2) The maintaining organ-like, as a straight dynamic line, the effect of undying tone. It makes it possible adequately to perform organ music, hitherto only for a great organ, on a pianoforte:

> In Bach's 'Passacaglia,' for example, it is able to hold the major melody while the accompanimental figures do not interfere with the sweep of the basic harmonies.

(3) The differentiation of melodic passages from accompanimental passages is produced through a psychological reaction. Mr. Hammond thus explains it: While the percentage of change, in sonority and maintenance, is the same both for melodic line and the other tones, yet because 5 per cent. of a million-dollar income would be a great enrichment, and 5 per cent. of a hundred-dollar income would be a trifle, so the change in the melodic line is far more striking. (4) The ability to open the reflectors at the same rate as the tone fades, thus gaining the effect of a tone of continuing level volume. (5) The power to change the quality of the upper harmonics after the keys have been struck, so obtaining remarkable tone-colour changes. Accepting that the ordinary pianoforte may be called monochromatic, the Hammond instrument is polychromatic:

> While the invention will give a nuance and an atmosphere particularly fitted to composers like Debussy [claims the inventor], it will be equally applicable to jazz. There will be a tremulando; and the pianoforte will 'giggle' almost like a trombone.

Of course, it demands a special technique in the player. But every player of the pianoforte can acquire this without unlearning any technique now possessed. It is an addition to the pianoforte, extending but not altering its technique. The testimony based on long practice is that gradually the ability to use the extra pedal comes automatically, as the other pedals are used, and only with this semi-subconscious employment can the real value of the innovation be exploited. There is no alteration, apart from the pedal and a slight increase in the height of the case, in the external appearance of the instrument. No change in the notation of music is required. In no respect are existing scores for the pianoforte made obsolete, but on the other hand it may be that music will come to be written specially for the instrument, with the varying use of the additional pedal indicated, or even existing scores may be adapted to it, by having such signs inserted.

While the invention points to the manufacture of a new type of instrument which will gradually supplant the existing type, as pianoforte supplanted harpsichord, the invention is also in a form which can be fitted to an ordinary pianoforte. It is unlikely, however, that this will be done to any great extent, the invention being applied in the form of new instruments. It is applicable, of course, to player-pianos, and rolls for use with player-pianos so equipped have already been produced.

New Music

CHURCH MUSIC

New issues of the Tudor Church Music Series (Oxford University Press) include a Sol-fa edition of William Byrd's anthem, 'Prevent us, O Lord,' S.A.A.T.B., and anthems by Thomas Tomkins and Richard Nicolson, edited by A. Ramsbotham and S. Townsend Warner respectively. The Tomkins work—'Praise the Lord, O my soul'—is for two trebles, tenor, and bass, unaccompanied. Nicolson's 'When Jesus sat at meat' is for S.S.A.T.B., with an organ part arranged from the original accompaniment of viols. These three anthems are fine examples of Tudor work.

A new series of Cathedral Anthems, edited by C. Hylton Stewart (Oxford University Press), should prove of exceptional interest to capable choirs. They can be noticed only briefly, and choirmasters would do well to examine the works for themselves. Two by William Croft (1678-1727) are for unaccompanied singing. 'Hear my prayer, O Lord' is an expressive work for S.S.A.T.B., with a few bars of eight-part writing at the end. 'O Lord, rebuke me not in Thine indignation' is a splendid specimen of polyphonic writing. It is for S.S.A.T.T.B., and is fairly difficult. The same composer's 'O Lord, Thou hast searched me out' is for A.T.B., with organ accompaniment. It includes short solos for bass and tenor, and at the close of the final movement the full choir is employed. On account of its length, certain movements rarely performed are omitted from this edition.

Six anthems by Maurice Green (1695-1755) include the fine verse-anthem for voices, 'Arise, shine, O Zion.' The organ part in the first movement is written on three staves. There is some fine, vigorous chorus writing in the first and last movements, and between these is some expressive solo work for tenor and treble. Another work of lofty character, 'How long wilt Thou forget me?' is for eight voices and organ with a brief middle section for two solo trebles. The remaining works by Greene are 'Let my complaint come before Thee,' for S.S.A.T.B., unaccompanied, 'Lord, how long wilt Thou be angry,' for S.S.A.T.B. and organ, 'Acquaint thyself with God,' for alto solo, chorus, and organ, and 'O give thanks,' for alto and bass soli, chorus, and organ. The remaining number of this series is by a later composer—Thomas Attwood Walmisley's 'The Lord shall comfort Zion,' written in 1840. There is some highly effective writing for four-part chorus, and the work also includes solos for soprano and bass, the latter a dramatically-written movement. Some accidentals are missing from the organ part on p. 6.

Three new settings of the Communion Service from the Faith Press, all modal in style, will suit varied tastes and requirements. For unison singing, Arthur J. Bull's 'Missa Sancti Andreæ' may be recommended. It is very simple, devotional music, and the organ part is treated with taste and skill. George Oldroyd's 'Missa Ave Jesu' in Mode 2 is for unaccompanied singing, and is quite simple. There is a fair amount of writing in thirds—frequently doubled in the octave—and pure four-part writing is comparatively rare. The little ascending passage of five notes which opens the Kyrie is overworked, and is likely to prove monotonous. Choirs who can appreciate music of a somewhat austere type may be recommended to try H. S. Middleton's 'Missa Sancti Michaelis'—a scholarly setting, effectively written for voices, and only moderately difficult. It is for unaccompanied singing. No setting of the Creed appears in any of the above.

Also from the Faith Press comes an Easter Carol Service, consisting of prayers, readings, &c., and a number of carols which are sung at stated intervals. Musically the book wants overhauling. Faulty part-writing occurs in more than one number, while in the setting of 'O Voice of the Beloved,' to a tune by Newsidler (1536), the following are allowed to appear :

and :

Eric H. Thiman's anthem 'Immortal, Invisible, God only wise' (Novello), words by W. C. Smith, is a vigorous, straightforward little work, the music of which is based on a Welsh melody. Except for one verse set for four-part unaccompanied singing, the voices are mostly in unison, with a free organ accompaniment.

An anthem for boys' voices—'King of glory, King of peace'—by William H. Harris (Oxford University Press), is a fine setting of words by George Herbert which competent choristers will delight to sing. Three-part writing—sometimes unaccompanied, with charming effect—is fairly frequent. The organ part is excellent.

G. G.

SONGS

Several numbers have recently been added to the Oxford University Press edition of songs, Vaughan Williams and Whittaker being among the composers represented. Whittaker's 'Two Lyrics from the Chinese' are, like most of his work, notable for strength and power. Rugged, and even angular, they give an impression of originality and sincerity. They are dramatic rather than lyrical, the accompaniments reinforcing fairly free declamation with many skilful touches. There are some beautiful moments in 'My lord is gone away,' and one might call attention to several strikingly apposite pianoforte figures. It is not unfair, however, to say that power is more marked a characteristic here than beauty, as it is usually understood. The realism of the words perhaps demanded this treatment, and Dr. Whittaker has spared nobody. The two Vaughan Williams songs are meant for unaccompanied singing, but are fitted with detachable pianoforte parts. The treatment of Seumas O'Sullivan's two poems shows all the composer's usual skill, and the slight accompaniments are remarkably successful in adding to the effect without obscuring the subtlety and lightness of the vocal line. All the little individualities of style are here ; but in the master's work they sound inevitable and natural, and not affected or facile as they do in the work of imitators. The influence of Vaughan Williams is plainly seen in three songs by Ralph Greaves, and also in Hubert Foss's 'The Nurse's Song,' but this does not mean that these compositions have not also individuality of their own over and above the influences which have helped to make them. There is in 'The Nurse's Song,' moreover, a real quality of atmosphere and poetry. Of Ralph Greaves's three songs to words by Masefield, the best seems to be 'I will go look for Death.' I believe these songs to have been written as part of the incidental music to an Oriental play : in stage performance, perhaps, some of the interludes and certain details in the songs themselves, which seem below the general level, would have point and appositeness, and fall into place. 'The Chestnut Blossom' is one of Norman Peterkin's best songs. A difficult and complex atmosphere is well portrayed, and the setting has many clever details, such as the 'note of the passing bell,' as well as a feeling of consistent growth and unity. It is a good piece of work. Lighter and less individual is the same composer's 'I wish and I wish' ; but it has undeniable charm in spite of a suggestion of the commonplace in some of the harmony. Less easy to discuss are Peterkin's three songs for voice and viola, to words by Joseph Campbell. It is impossible to tell how they will 'come off,' without hearing the viola itself. So far as imagination and a pianoforte carry one, 'The Journeyman Weaver' seems the best ; it has rhythmical unity which makes it easier to grasp than 'A curse on a closed gate,' and the viola has no double-stoppings to deal with. This makes strongly for success, for the sound of a string player, after a portentous snatch, achieving and holding a $\frac{6}{4}$, is never a very satisfactory one. 'The Jolly Carter,' a folk-song collected and arranged by E. J. Moeran, is a pleasant tune, which Moeran's highly sophisticated setting turns into a stimulating and infectious song, suited for 'camp-' or 'bottle-singing.' But the tune is little more than pleasant, and has none of the real individuality of the best folk-songs. It is late in the day now for collecting folk-songs ; all the best flowers have been gathered. A beautiful little work is the same composer's 'In an arbour green,' in which the wistful tenderness of the lovely poem is reproduced without weakness. Again the music is rather sophisticated, harmonically, at any rate, with the flavour of Delius, but there is no mistaking its real and individual quality. Vaughan Williams's 'The Water-Mill,' discussed here some months ago, is now published singly, in a higher key, for mezzo-soprano.

Gerrard Williams is always to be relied upon for a neat-minded sense of humour, dainty individuality, and true craftsmanship. Four songs from Curwen's all show, in one way or another, these qualities. 'The Lonely Tent' is particularly good—it cleverly gets the half-delighted, half-frightened, bed-time bogie feeling ; and equally successful, though attempting rather less, are 'The Philosophe' and 'When Phillis plays,' the last-named a graceful minuet-song. The same publishers send Henry Cowell's 'Where she lies.' The music of this song—a twenty-two-bar setting of six short lines—demands a full page of explanation of symbols for tone-clusters, sympathetic vibrations, fists, and forearms; and as no relevant result emerges from all the effort, one is inclined to feel it out of proportion. The music may mean something to some people. My ears are not attuned to it, and to me it means nothing. Much the same is true of Ursula Greville's 'The Cherry Tree': it is a largely unaccompanied declamation; there is no sign of plan or organization (except a casual reference or two to the four notes with which the song begins), and the whole thing seems 'without form and void.' Strangely different from this is Bliss's 'The Fallow Deer.' The composer uses every device he wants to get his effects, and he gets them. But the music is so plainly under firm control that it never gives the impression of being far-fetched, affected, or silly. It is a good song. Owen Mase's setting of 'The Unchanging,' also by de la Mare, has a quiet sincerity that commands respect, and gives quality to music that does not attain to the clear intensity of the poem. A clever and amusing song is Ernest Bryson's 'The Angler,' very likeable for the vivid way in which it catches the fisherman's sly delight in stolen pleasure. Curwen's, who publish all the songs dealt with in this paragraph, also send a song-cycle, by Gerald Finzi, to poems by Hardy. 'By Footpath and Stile,' for baritone and string quartet, contains six songs, and is a highly interesting work. It is true that the music is vitally influenced by Vaughan Williams, but the composer uses the idiom with imagination and sensitiveness, has got right inside the poems he has chosen to set, and writes stuff with poetry and feeling in it. One notices good string writing, too, and a very thoughtful way of dealing with the poems. These qualities, present in all the numbers, are felt most strongly perhaps in 'The Oxen,' a beautiful and moving song. It is to be hoped, however, that the composer will not allow his admiration for a great man to hinder the development of his own personality, for it looks as if he has something to say.

Elkin's send three songs by M. van Someren Godfery, of which the best is certainly 'Men who danced their shoes into holes': it is a tuneful thing, with a well-planned pianoforte part of interesting rhythm and light texture. 'Cradle Song' has charm in its simplicity, but the accompaniment is too reminiscent of Dunhill's 'The Cloths of Heaven.' One does not suspect plagiarism, but the resemblance is too close at some moments to pass unnoticed. 'Little Lady of my Dreams' has not much strength or distinction, and the rhythm of the accompaniment becomes tiring. The Dowson words, in any case, are pale, watery stuff, and it is small surprise to find that they have failed to inspire. 'Sea Shell,' by Felix White (Oliver Ditson Co.; Winthrop Rogers), is one of the most attractive of this month's arrivals. Simple, and easy in every way, it may seem tinged with the commonplace, but it has the real charm of unaffectedness and musicianship. This quality—difficult to define but easy to recognise—shows itself in small but unmistakable ways: in this song in skilful management of a rhythm which might have become monotonous, but is delightfully saved from this. The same publishers send Elizabeth Poston's 'The Lake Isle of Innisfree,' which shows qualities similar to those that were noticed in the March number in this composer's songs. It has real sensitiveness and originality, and strong sense of atmosphere: but the material is not welded into a complete whole, with consistent growth and interest, so that the song, despite its moments of charm, is less successful than some of the other examples.

'Journey's end,' a new Frank Bridge work, comes from Augener's, who also publish Muriel Herbert's 'Have you seen but a white lily grow?' This last is a simple and thoughtful setting of Jonson's words, effectively laid out for the voice. One or two harmonic experiments seem rather to break the smooth flow, but they do not destroy the general effect of sincerity. There are some impressive moments in Frank Bridge's song, but one feels that it would have been even more impressive if it had been even more restrained. There is no forte, appas. in Humbert Wolfe's poem; the mood is one of resigned, kindly hopelessness. The emotional climax seems to call for a hush rather than a burst of sound. One remembers the finely effective force of a similar moment in Butterworth's 'Is my team ploughing?' This is not to say, however, that Bridge's is not a sincere, effective, and technically fine piece of work.

There was a time when Eric Fogg was out-pacing Stravinsky himself. His style seems to have suffered or achieved a change since then, for 'To Morning,' the first of two songs published together by Elkin, is akin to the style of Karg-Elert. It is fluent and well-written, but the sprightlier and less pretentious 'Laughing Song' proves more attractive on account of its rhythm and lighter texture. Two good numbers by Clive Carey come from Winthrop Rogers. 'April Children' is a popular song of the very best type. It has ready effectiveness, quick appeal, well-written voice and pianoforte parts, and a good B flat at the end. But it is the work of a musician, and will need musicians to perform it, if it is to secure its full effect. It should gain immediate popularity with average musical audiences. 'Since thou, O fondest and truest' is quieter; it has long, generous phrases, and a ripe, slightly self-indulgent air, like some Brahms songs. But it is thoroughly musicianly, even if it does not reproduce Bridge's wonderful blend of calmness with intensity. Somewhat 'ripe,' also, is Eric Thiman's setting of 'The Silver Swan' (Novello). It is effectively written for both voice and pianoforte, but the accompaniment seems a little heavy for the song, and the music has not the fine quality of irony which gives the poem its character. It needed a rather more acid flavour instead of its rather easy sweetness. Easthope Martin's light-handedness and tunefulness are shown once more in 'Songs of the Hedgerow' (Enoch). He is distinctly happier in the heartier moods, however. 'Hedging and ditching,' with its good, straightforward tune, and 'Hedgerow Carnival,' with attractive mazurka rhythm, are more convincing than 'Harvest Moon' which toys with rather cheap harmonic effects, and is slightly commonplace.

Larway's send settings of some Tennyson poems by Frederick Nichols, and two songs by Ernest Austin, 'The Dream-Maker' and 'Sea-Dogs,' the second being a good straight tune, modal in character, to the usual words about Devon. The first of the two is slenderer in character, but here too the composer's tuneful style is pleasantly shown. Allah is less baneful than usual in his influence in the case of John Foulds's song of that name. Allah generally produces sham melodrama and superficial atmospherics, whenever he appears in song. This number, however, is restrained and genuine. The vocal line is strong and singable, and the whole effect good, though not highly individual. The same is true of the cheerful 'Spring Joy.' Rhythm and texture give it a welcome feeling of lightness, and effective lay-out should make it popular. The same publishers send Holbrooke's setting of Gerald Cumberland's sonnet 'Homeland'; and from Chester's come four songs by Timothy Mather Spelman: clever as they are, one gets little pleasure out of them in return for considerable demands on pianist, singer, and listener. Some foreign publications, including 'Songs of Lesbos' and 'Sapphic Lyrics,' two volumes of songs by Albert Mallinson, and three songs by Inga Liebich, call for discussion in a future article. T. A.

EASY PIANOFORTE MUSIC

Felix Swinstead's 'Six Distinctive Studies' (Enoch) are apparently a re-issue in album form of works produced a few years back. The first three, which are moderately easy, are 'Mélodie' (a study in syncopation and cantabile playing), 'En Chasse' (study in fluency), 'Chanson Ancienne' (study for left hand). More difficult are the last three—'Novelette' (arpeggio study), 'Pizzicato' (staccato double notes), 'En Courant' (a brilliant little study for finger staccato in both hands). The studies are also issued separately. From the same publishers comes a 'First Adult Album' consisting of easy and moderately easy pieces collected, phrased, and edited with analytical notes by Gertrude Azulay. In a brief 'Foreword,' containing some suggestive remarks on methods of practising, we are told that this collection of pieces has been compiled > . . . primarily for the non-advanced adult whose specific need (minimum of execution with maximum of rendering) has not hitherto received the attention given to other grades of learners.

Each piece is prefaced by helpful comments on the music itself, kind of touch required, &c., and, in addition, little technical exercises are given as preparatory studies for particular difficulties which occur in the piece. The composers drawn upon are Schumann, Heller, Pergolese, Moszkowski, Tchaikovsky, and Chaminade. The book should prove extremely useful to teachers.

'A Little Suite,' by Gerrard Williams (Elkin), is brightly written, and provides a pleasant means of developing the young player's technique. It comprises an Allemande (continuous semiquaver movement in right hand, staccato quavers in left), Sarabande, Gavotte (two-part writing, staccato), Minuet, Gigue. More difficult are Ed. Poldini's 'Petits morceaux pittoresques' (Bosworth). These six numbers are capital examples of this well-known composer's work. A nimble, light finger is required in No. 3, and in No. 4 cantabile work is passed from hand to hand. 'The little church on the hill,' by Hubert Hales (Joseph Williams), is No. 1 of the 'Churches in Norfolk' series. It is pleasantly flowing music which, with its simple bell effects, will be easily appreciated by the young player.

A book that should prove of use to teachers of beginners is Angela Diller's 'In Days of Old' (Hawkes). This is a collection of ten folk-tunes. The words appear over each tune, and the page opposite contains suggestions for study. The arrangements of the tunes are excellent, and the printing is exceptionally clear. Suitable material for sight-reading will be found in Ernest Newton's 'Pianoforte Sight-reading Tests' (Joseph Williams). There are three books, graded respectively Primary and Elementary Divisions, Lower Division, and Higher Division.

Teachers of beginners will find much sound advice and abundance of excellent material for practice in J. A. O'Neill's modern instructor for the pianoforte issued in two books under the title 'Progressive Steps' (Rowlands). Each book is divided into six steps, and some idea of the style and scope of the work may best be gained by quoting a few of these. Book 1, Step 1—Names of notes on keyboard, hand gymnastics, finger control apart from the instrument; Step 2—The Great Stave. Notation learned on an A B C method, and applied by degrees to rhythmical little exercises. Fingering and advice on five-finger exercises. Step 3—Simple time-values. Exercises and little pieces. Rests, Dots. Exercises on Intervals. Book 2, Step 1—Advice on silent practice and memory playing. Hints on ear-training. Folk-tunes, with preliminary exercises. Step 2—Easy duets. Exercises on passing over and under the thumb. The modal scales. These quotations show that the book has nothing in common with the old-fashioned 'Tutor.' The exercises as a whole are judiciously planned, and contain plenty of variety. The preliminary remarks and exercises on scale and arpeggio playing are good, as are the exercises on the black keys in Book 1. The second book meets all the requirements of the 'School Examinations' as a Scale and Arpeggio Manual. G. G.

The Musician's Bookshelf

'Hubert Parry: His Life and Works.' By Charles L. Graves.

[Macmillan, two vols., 30*s*.]

This biography, though far too long for convenience or sustained interest where the ordinary reader is concerned, has the merit of leaving us with a vivid impression of an extraordinarily versatile and attractive personality. Perhaps this is a virtue of Mr. Graves's defect—an over-accommodating and too-expansive method. At a very early stage we feel that he lavishes far too much space on trivial details of the Eton days, and, later, on purely domestic happenings; apparently a mere sample of this kind of thing would have sufficed. Moreover, the Diary is drawn on for many entries that seem to be of no moment. The persevering (and often irritated) reader, however, sooner or later begins to feel that so inclusive a method, though fatal in most cases, is perhaps not unsuitable for the biography of one in whose life a multiplicity of cares and activities—often trivial and avoidable—played so constant and vital a part: for the doing of all manner of things, from running a great music school to picking and storing apples, was the breath of life to Parry. Thus, almost at random we meet this passage (only one of many such) concerning a Christmas holiday at Rustington:

> As domestic and local factotum he was continually employed. He supervised the building of a wall; gave spelling lessons to his daughter Gwen, 'a fearful business'; indulged in fierce bursts of digging; and helped in the making of mince-pies in the absence of a cook. He also assisted a lecturer with his magic lantern in the school-room, and read the Trial Scene from 'Pickwick' at a Penny Reading, 'to the apparent satisfaction of the audience'; besides singing and playing. Presents had to be bought, 'men in difficulties' relieved, and carol singers endured.

Again: 'Apples and pears had to be gathered and stored, mildewed jam had to be reboiled.' Certainly; but why by Parry? What was cook doing?

Yet at the time referred to in the first quotation he was working at a Symphony and a String Quartet, writing articles for the Pall Mall and Saturday Review, and paying flying visits to London to Dannreuther's concerts! What chance was there of concentration on the creative side of his work? Indeed, at no time in his life does composition seem to have been more than a hobby, to be indulged when the crowd of daily affairs (many of them merely fussy, or of a kind that should have been delegated) had been attended to. A few minutes while waiting for a meal, or between other engagements, or a quiet spell late at night when so busy a man (especially one with a weak heart) had better have gone bedward—to such fag-ends of time was composition too often left. Small wonder that some flats are badly joined; that development frequently leads to the mechanical; and that many a sequence goes on for that fatal bar or so too many! The marvel is rather that Parry managed to achieve so much that is vital, especially when the somewhat limited scope of his work is taken into account: for, after all, he was a vocal composer, and, without the stimulus of a text, he was apt to be left high and dry. Even the very successful organ Choral Preludes have the idea, and sometimes the actual words, of a familiar hymn as their bases. Yet to what splendid purpose he used his text when at his best! It is already the fashion to decry Parry the composer, yet one would risk little in wagering that the pick of his choral works, small and large, and a substantial handful of his songs, will be giving pleasure to hosts when a great mass of vocal music now being produced—over-chromatic, angular, 'precious,' ungrateful to the voice, far-fetched and laboured in its accompaniment—will be almost as dead as the ballads of 'Claribel,' though for widely different reasons: for say what you will of Parry's defects, his music is invariably practicable and 'comes off,' even though it may sometimes leave the hearer tepid. One cannot say that the music's failure is due to its effects being merely on paper, as is the case with so many formidable and cerebral outpourings of to-day. As to whether Parry would have done better had he devoted himself entirely, or almost entirely, to composition is a question. It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that had his creative gift been of the first rank it would have taken charge of him, and headed him off from a hundred and one petty jobs that could have been done at least as well by others. But then we should have had a different Parry, and the further question arises as to whether a few masterpieces would not have been dearly bought at the expense of a great and various human character whose benign influence on an untold number of folk—not confined to musicians—it would be difficult to over-estimate. There is already more fine music than we can hear often enough, even in a long life, whereas a personality such as Parry's, that touched life at so many points and almost always to fine issues, is sufficiently rare to justify our making much of it. Perhaps Mr. Graves has made too much of it, but as was said above, he can hardly have done his work other than well, seeing that the reader is left with a portrait at once vivid and minute.

Mr. Graves's treatment of the musical side of his task is less satisfactory—in fact, he has shirked it. Instead of a reasoned, first-hand critical discussion of Parry's works, he gives us a collection of views of others, drawn largely from periodical sources. The result is patchy, and unsatisfactory in other ways. A multitude of counsellors may as easily lead to confusion as to wisdom.

A point calling for comment is raised in this passage on p. 286, vol. 1 (the period is 1888):

> A curious light is thrown on the finance of his compositions by his recording that this year he was paid by Novello the sum of £15, the largest he had ever received from a music publisher. Some fifteen years later he told me that he had made, roughly, £25 from his compositions in about twenty years.

If this means that the £25 represented his net profits as a composer, after he had set against his receipts the very large sums he spent on the engraving of full scores, and in publishing on his own account, it may well be true. The average reader, however, will know nothing of this per contra account. He has often been told that publishers are sharks, and composers their easy victims, and he will merely regard the ambiguous paragraph quoted above as another piece of evidence. Mr. Graves, we think, should have made the matter clearer, or should not have referred to it. Parry's music, of course, is not of the 'best seller' kind, but we betray no secret in saying that it brought him a very considerable sum over a longish period. Without a doubt the statement he made to Mr. Graves was based on a balancing of his receipts against the heavy—and, of course, quite voluntary—expense referred to above. If he omitted to explain this when discussing the question it was no doubt because he regarded the point as being obvious. We may be sure that he little expected his casual remark to be repeated in his biography, without elucidation of any kind, and as a prelude to the solemn statement that > . . . composition was not a lucrative pursuit for Hubert Parry, and it was fortunate he had independent means, and was not exposed to the temptation, to which some serious musicians have been driven to succumb, of keeping the pot boiling by hack work or writing down to the level of the ballad-concert audience.

However, we do not wish this review to end on a controversial note, so we add that despite some 'small beer' chronicling, Mr. Graves's volumes are rich in interest. Probably no other biography of a composer contains so much extra-musical matter of importance. An adequate review in a specialist journal is impossible. Parry at games (constantly being 'crocked'), as motorist (to his own and the public danger), yachtsman (risking his own and his passengers' lives), squire and magistrate, author, amateur scientist, teacher, administrator, composer, organist and pianist, inveterate and critical play-goer, diarist, domestic Pooh-bah—a dozen periodicals devoted to different interests could find ample matter for discussion of him from their varying points of view. What chance had the composer against so many other individuals?

He once motored down a steep and winding road at such a pace that 'when they reached the bottom the chauffeur got out and was sick'! This is only one of many such hair-raising exploits on land and water. It suggests that his sports and hobbies absorbed not only much of his time and energy, but almost all his daring; and he had little use for the 'safety first' principle save in the one department where such a motto is better forgotten—composition.

'J. S. Bach: Cantata Texts, Sacred and Secular. With a Reconstruction of the Leipzig Liturgy of His Period.' By Charles Sanford Terry.

[Constable, £3 3s.]

This devoted piece of scholarship leaves the reviewer little to do beyond saluting the author and trying to avoid superlatives. Dr. Terry's labours in the Bach field (especially in regard to the choral works) have been long and arduous, and have already given us several valuable works. This magnificent volume of over six hundred large pages is the sum and crown of his task, and gives every available detail concerning one of the largest branches, and certainly the least familiar, of Bach's output. The book contains English versions of the whole of the libretti of the surviving cantatas, sacred and secular, and the three oratorios—two hundred and thirty-two works; it reconstructs the liturgy in which the cantatas had their place; and it indicates as far as possible the present whereabouts of such of the cantata autographs as survive.

Only about a quarter of the cantatas have so far been issued in English editions; Dr. Terry's book makes the remainder available to all who care to take the trouble to copy into German editions the translations here given. It is not an insuperable task, for Dr. Whittaker and the Newcastle Bach Choir have by this means performed many cantatas hitherto unheard in this country. Dr. Terry so spaces his translations of the recitatives that the task of copying them into the score is easy.

In making his English versions he has worked on principles he lays down as follows:

> The translator who attempts to fit English words to Bach's music must obey two instructions. In the first place, he must faithfully interpret Bach's often naïve coloratura, though to fulfil this obligation frequently places an unmanageable word at an awkward point in the metre. In the second place, Bach's declamation must be held inviolable. Even if it be permissible to adjust it delicately to words sanctified by authority and association, as, for instance, are those of the English Bible, to do so is slovenly desecration in any other circumstances. For myself, the practical end I have in view binds me to subject my sentences to Bach's declamation wherever it and considerations of literary form or convenience are in conflict. The difficulty presents itself especially in the recitatives. There are occasions, too, when Bach's phrasing adversely controls the English text, since it imposes a word which could be legitimately avoided if the work were being prepared for an English score. Take, for example, the opening of Cantata 104:

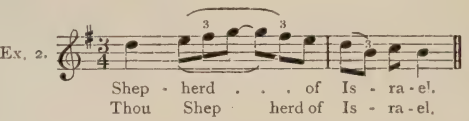
Ex. 1.

> 'Thou Shepherd of Israel' satisfactorily fits the music; but its adoption involves an alteration of Bach's phrasing, and is therefore vetoed by the conditions of my task.

With diffidence we suggest that Dr. Terry is disposed to consider the letter at the expense of the spirit. In view of the vital importance of good, singable English texts, it seems to us that the faithful interpretation of Bach's (or anybody else's) coloratura is dearly bought if it involves 'an unmanageable word at an awkward point in the metre.' At the risk of being accused of vandalism, we hold that the provision of a good English text justifies slight modifications in the actual notes of a recitative, and even changes (which need never be more than trifling) in the phrasing and note-grouping of coloratura.

As an instance, take Dr. Terry's example from 'Du Hirte Israel.' 'Thou Shepherd of Israel,' as he says, 'satisfactorily fits the music'; but he vetoes it because its use involves a slight alteration in the musical phrasing. Turning to the translation of this cantata on p. 240, we find the opening rendered 'Shepherd of Israel.' This leaves Bach's note-grouping intact, but makes too much of the weak syllable of 'Shepherd':

Ex. 2.



Can there be any question as to which of these two versions is to be preferred, on account of naturalness and singableness—and even from the point of view of faithfulness to the original text? We cite this point, because, though apparently small, it is important in principle. The whole question of translation and adaptation of libretti is very much in the air to-day. No solution is possible that is not based on a compromise between the claims of the music and text, with a slight bias in favour of the text, unless an important melodic figure would suffer by such bias.

The magnitude and difficulty of Dr. Terry's work in Englishing these libretti (especially as in many cases the literary value of the originals is small) makes fault-finding seem ungracious. But we must express regret that he has hampered himself by too consistent a use of rhyme in the arias. We believe a better result would be attained by a dropping of the rhyming scheme the moment it involves the tortuous or clumsy.

For example, almost at random we take a couplet that suffers in this way:

> The blustering Dragon, the fearsome old Serpent,
> 'Gainst heaven raging madly, his legions to war sent.

And, on the same page (454):

> Yea, though hell fright us with its bellows,
> Our soul may ever rest secure,
> Through Michael and his fellows.

Only the exigencies of rhyme could have led to the use of so equivocal a word in this connection as 'bellows'!

The reconstruction of the Liturgy must have cost Dr. Terry immense labour. It is a valuable aid to the understanding of the Cantatas, for, as is pointed out in the Preface, 'they are fully intelligible only when their texts are viewed in relation to the liturgy which they served.' Dr. Terry sets out the whole of the order for every day on which a Cantata survives, putting his translation of the work in its proper place in the scheme. One is struck by the homogeneity of the services. If only the hymns and other incidental music in Church services to-day were as aptly chosen ——! One gets a delightful glimpse into the past in the opening sentence of each day's scheme:

> The form of Public Worship at the Principal Service for Easter-day.
> St. Thomas's three bells are sung at 4 a.m. and 6 a.m. Candles are set out at 7. Order of service as on Christmas Day. The Archdeacon celebrates and the Deacon administers the Cup.

Then follow the details of the service, opening with the hymn, 'Heut triumphiret Gottes Sohn.' Copious notes accompany the whole of these expositions, and the cantata texts contain details of the orchestration of the various movements, and a wealth of other information. In addition to the ordinary indices, there is a list of the cantatas in the numerical order of their publication by the Bachgesellschaft. A lengthy Introduction gives the history of the development of the cantata, and its significance in the Lutherian Liturgy. There are beautifully-produced illustrations of the organ-loft of the Thomaskirche, 1710; the interior of the Thomaskirche, looking east, 1710; ditto, looking west, 1925; ditto, looking east, before the renovation in 1885; a facsimile of Bach's note of the Order of the Service on Advent Sunday, 1722; and another of the autograph title-page of Cantata No. 71.

This monumental work represents a labour of love on the author's part. For him and his publishers there can be little reward beyond that which virtue is said to provide: only five hundred copies have been printed for sale, and the type has been distributed. It is significant, and a matter for pride, that this fine piece of scholarly research is produced, not in Bach's own country, but in England—or, to be exact, Scotland and England.

BOOKS RECEIVED

[Mention in this list neither implies nor precludes review in a future issue.]

'Beethoven's Op. 18 Quartets.' By W. H. Hadow. ('Musical Pilgrim series.) Pp. 64. Oxford University Press, 1*s.* 6*d.*

'Studies and Caprices.' By Alexander Brent-Smith. Pp. 186. Methuen, 5*s.*

'Brahms.' By Jeffrey Pulver. ('Masters of Music' series.) Pp. 376. Kegan Paul, 7*s.* 6*d.*

'Music through the Ages.' By Maud V. Stell. Pp. 198. J. M. Dent, 3*s.* 6*d.*

'The Profession of Music, and How to Prepare for It.' By Annie W. Patterson. Pp. 235. Wells, Gardner, & Darton, 5*s.*

'Early Recollections of St. Paul's Cathedral.' By W. A. Frost. Preface by the Very Rev. W. R. Inge. Pp. 96. Simpkin, Marshall, 3*s.* 6*d.*

'The Enchanted Past.' By Mrs. Godfrey Pearse. Pp. 262. Chapman & Hall, 18*s.*

Player-Piano Notes

ÆOLIAN

Duo-Art.—An outstanding roll in this month's list is Moszkowski's 'Caprice Espagnole,' played by Josef Hofmann (6953). Like the best of this composer's work it is a brilliant example of salon music. What a knack he had in turning out this kind of thing! Many a composer of greater originality would have profited by some of his unfailing instinct for keyboard effect. Hofmann plays the 'Caprice' with a crisp articulation of rapidly-repeated notes and chords that will rouse envy—and, perhaps, despair—even among listeners who are good players. Such a stimulating roll is a standing cure for the blues.

Chopin's Barcarolle is not one of his highest flights, and it is a pity that Arthur Rubinstein makes it even less satisfactory by a reading that, in places, suggests a bad Channel crossing. After all there is (or ought to be) a good deal in a name, and in this example there is little of the Barcarolle apart from the label (6542).

The Schumann-Liszt 'Dedication,' played by Backhaus (6958), and Granados's 'Danza Espagnola,' Op. 37, No. 1, played by the composer (6133), strike me as being on the dull side, especially the latter, owing to its monotonous chunks of notes in the bass.

Schubert's 'Ave Maria' has suffered almost every possible kind of transcription. (The word 'suffered' is used advisedly.) It remains, however, a song, and only the voice or a bowed instrument can deliver its melody aright. Robert Armbruster does his best with it as a pianoforte solo, but with only moderate success (0722).

Stojowski's 'Valse,' Op. 12, No. 2, played by Lois Maer (0723), and Friml's 'Valse Coquette,' Op. 77, No. 3, played by Constance Mering, are of no great moment, but make pleasant hearing. Of the same type is a roll of Henri Bergmann playing Cadman's 'My Desire' (0724).

Hand-Played.—Jerkiness of rhythm is a blemish in Gabrilowitsch's performance of Schubert's 'Moment Musical' in F minor. Why are so many of our great pianists afraid of the note-values set down by the composer? Nobody wants cast-iron tempo, but there are occasions when a faithful adherence to the copy is obviously the right course. Here the hiccuping treatment of the opening phrase seems quite out of character with the mood of the piece (889E).

A touch of the same fault is noticeable in an otherwise good performance by Ethel Leginska of Rubinstein's well-known E flat 'Valse Caprice' (A895F).

Easily the pick of the hand-played batch is Moszkowski's Barcarolle, played by Egon Putz (A893D). This is capital, both on musical and technical grounds. Not nearly so good, qua music, but well-played by Felix Arndt, is Victor Herbert's 'Punchinello' (A887D).

Ordinary.—Bach's Prelude and Fugue in G, from Book 1 of the 'Forty-eight,' will provide the player-pianist with enjoyable practice in obtaining the subtly-graded nuances and the very slight variations of pace that increase the interest of such music without destroying its unity and flow. Let him first play the work with no variety of any kind, and he will see that the music is so vital as to be practically independent of his aid. Having realised this, he will probably feel that in music of this rattling, straightforward, and percussive type, it is better to do too little than too much—a point that is rarely grasped by some pianistic celebrities (T24683B). (And I fancy he will agree that the roll-editor has been just a little too violent in his changes of pace.) There is plenty of opening for variety in Tchaikovsky's 'May,' from 'The Seasons' (T24696A)—an effective and well-edited roll.

Among the fox-trots, the best are a pair by Gershwin on one roll (L24774A)—'Fascinating Rhythm' and 'Oh lady, be good.' It cannot be said that there is much rhythmic originality or variety in either, but they are jolly to hear because of their slick assurance. One has only to play such things a few times, however, in order to perceive that the fox-trot vein is pretty well exhausted. Sooner or later the Gershwinites must discover more melodic and harmonic resources, or they must dry up.

The best of the song rolls appears to be 'The Dancing Lesson,' by Herbert Oliver, from 'The Passing Show,' played by Charles Blackmore (26644). There is close competition for the bottom place; on the whole I think it goes to 'My Little Grey Home in the West'—a song which has long since 'gone West,' surely, and might be allowed to stay there (26647). D. H.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS

By Arthur T. Froggatt

The number of works having some connection with music is a considerably larger proportion of the whole in the present exhibition than in any other of recent years, being very nearly one in fifty. Last year the proportion was one in eighty-eight; in 1924 it was one in sixty-five; and in 1923 it was only one in a hundred and two. So far, good.

'Orpheus' (18), by Sydney Lee, painted in the artist's well-known manner, shows that the musician, who carries a cithar, has not only bowed the mountains, but has even compelled them (or at least very large fragments of them) to fall at the sound of his melodious strains.

The portrait of Sir Ernest Palmer (44), by Sir John Lavery, will naturally be of interest to all musicians; of more interest, probably, than 'The Youth of Pan' (79), by Algernon Talmage, inasmuch as the tiny figure in the middle distance, holding something in his mouth (presumably the pipes), can hardly be supposed, at such an early age, to have attained any remarkable degree of proficiency upon his favourite instrument. But in 'The Wilderness' (130), by Sydney Lee, we find Pan, arrived at middle age, located (needless to say) in an extremely stony wilderness. I am confirmed in the belief that Arabia Petræa is the land of his sojourn, partly because it must be the country most congenial to Mr. Lee's style, and partly because Pan is now possessed of no less than eighteen reeds — the precise number of intervals into which the Arabian scale is divided.

From a purely musical point of view, by far the most interesting picture in the Academy is 'Chamber Music' (324), by Frank Salisbury—a small work, charming in design and colour. It portrays a rather unusual sextet—pianoforte, two violins, two violas, and violoncello. But why do artists so frequently go woefully astray when depicting musical subjects? The most obvious absurdity in this really beautiful picture is that the second violin and the 'cello are playing from the same book. Again, assuming that the lid of the pianoforte would be open to its widest extent (which is doubtful), what self-respecting pianist would hang a tablecloth over the lid? (Pictorial effect, of course.) Thirdly, it is sadly evident that there is a difference of opinion among the players as to which side of the tail-piece the chin should be placed. I might go further in criticism, but I leave it at that.

'The Artist's Family' (341), by James Durden, is a very pleasing group of three figures, the son, seated on a table, holding the violin. 'The Dance' (346), by W. Hatherell, shows a girl dancing to the accompaniment of a harp, in a public garden, the darkness relieved by Chinese lanterns. I scarcely know whether or no to include Mr. Walter Sickert's 'Death and the Maiden' (349) as having any connection with the divine art. All I can say is this: if the reference is to Schubert's wonderful song, the artist's estimate of the composer must be diametrically opposite to that of Liszt, who called him le musicien le plus poète que jamais. There is certainly no trace of poetry in Mr. Sickert's picture.

Mrs. L. Knight has a portrait of Miss Ethel Bartlett (388), and a large picture of 'The Saxophone Player' (416). I do not remember seeing this instrument in an oil painting on any previous occasion.

'Jazz Band' (542), by H. S. Power, is a small picture worthy of the subject, for the painting is also very jazzy. But for people who like this sort of thing, this is probably the sort of thing they would like. 'The Death of Sappho' (553), by W. G. de Glehn, does not suggest tragedy; but for the fact that the poet-musician is clothed, she might be merely going to bathe. Her lyre, just discarded, shows one or two broken strings. Strangely enough, I had to go no further than 'The Breakdown' (600), by J. B. Souter, before encountering a second saxophone. I will not further describe the work, which struck me as being peculiarly offensive in choice of subject.* In 'Primrose Time' (624), by N. L. Nisbet, we come once more upon the pipes of Pan; there is also a most unattractive-looking female (probably a suffragette). The primroses are by far the best things in the picture. 'Héloïse and Abélard' (626), by Harry Morley, in pre-Raphaelite style, shows a four-stringed lute.

Among two hundred and seventeen water-colours, I have discovered only a single musical subject, 'Orpheus and Eurydice' (757), by F. Appleyard. Orpheus is holding something which, as well as I can make out in the dim light of the scene, is his lyre. I venture to suggest that this well-worn theme (well-worn, that is to say, so far as the walls of the Academy are concerned) may now be given a year or two's rest.

Among the miniatures will be found a delightful portrait of Auber (897), by Miss Maria Eaton.

There are three musical subjects among the etchings. 'The Fiddler' (1066), by E. H. Whydale, is a lazy vagabond leaning against a tree, with a couple of females pausing to listen. 'An Old Melody' (1069), by A. R. M. Todd, quite a small work, is a half-length of a much more interesting person, an old man with the face of a true musician, playing a violin. 'The Plague Piper' (1078), by R. Spence, is also a small work, the man with the bag-pipes being in the plague cart—a grim subject well executed.

In the Architectural Room I found three suggestions of music. The saloon in 'Goldings, Loughton, Essex' (1121), by Messrs. Richardson & Gill, is furnished with a grand pianoforte and harp—an indication, I hope, of the use to which the saloon is destined. 'Liverpool Cathedral: Interior View of Choir' (1205), by Sir G. G. Scott, gives a good idea of the fine appearance of the organ-cases. A 'Design for Stained Glass for Holy Trinity Church, Southport' (1218), by A. A. Orr, includes among the four principal figures one of David, with sceptre in the left hand, and in the right a four-stringed harp much the shape of that popularly (but quite wrongly) assigned to the Irish King Brian Boru.

Lastly, we come to the sculpture. 'John B. McEwen' (1275), a bronze bust, by Mrs. O. Wallace,

(Continued on page 533.)

* This picture has been removed from the walls of the Academy at the request of the Colonial Office.

Into Thy gracious hands

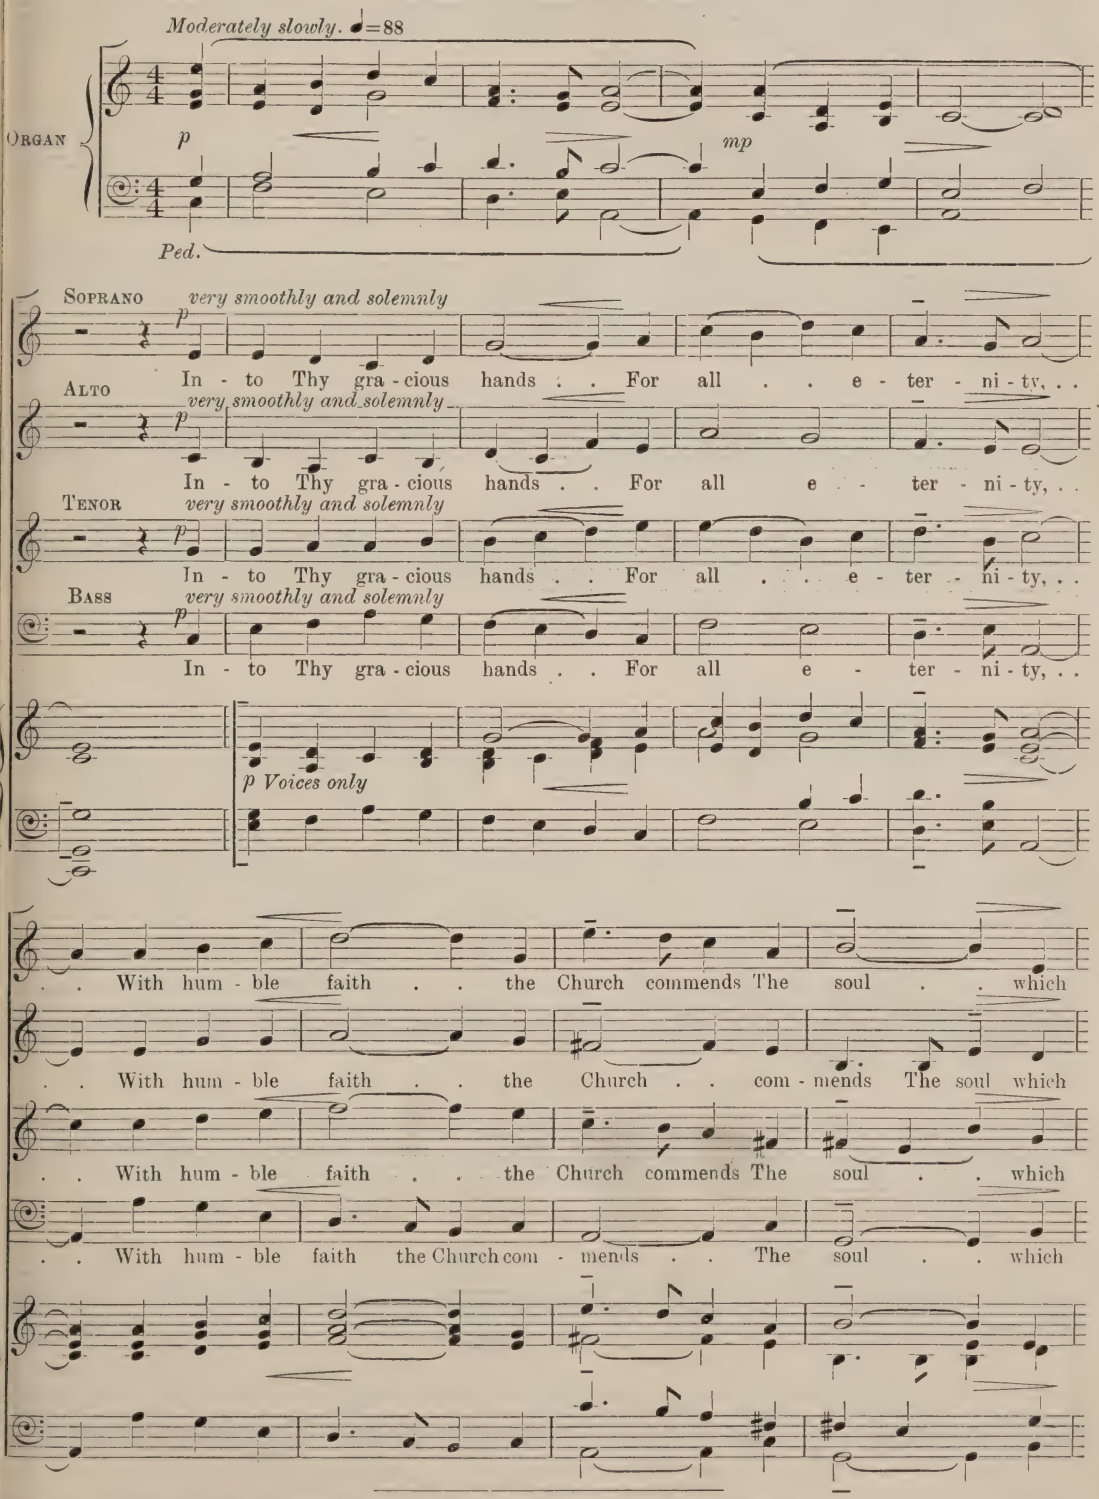
(IN MANUS TUAS)

SHORT ANTHEM FOR ALL SOULS' DAY, MEMORIAL OR BURIAL SERVICE

Words by H. R. Gamble

Music by Ernest Bullock

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited; New York: THE H. W. GRAY CO., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



Moderately slowly. ♩=88
Organ
p mp
Ped.
Soprano
very smoothly and solemnly
In - to Thy gra - cious hands . . For all . . e - ter - ni - ty, . .
Alto
very smoothly and solemnly
In - to Thy gra - cious hands . . For all e - ter - ni - ty, . .
Tenor
very smoothly and solemnly
In - to Thy gra - cious hands . . For all . . e - ter - ni - ty, . .
Bass
very smoothly and solemnly
In - to Thy gra - cious hands . . For all e - ter - ni - ty, . .
p Voices only
. . With hum - ble faith . . the Church commends The soul . . which
. . With hum - ble faith . . the Church . . com - mends The soul which
. . With hum - ble faith . . the Church commends The soul . . which
. . With hum - ble faith the Church com - mends . . The soul . . which

 Copyright, 1926, by Novello and Company, Limited

D

with expression
p came from Thee. In the dear blood . . . out - poured . . Our came from Thee. . . . .
with expression
p came from Thee. In the dear blood . . out - poured, with expression
p came from Thee. . . . . In the dear pp Org.
p
Ped.
sin - - ful souls . . . to gain, ...
with expression
p
In the dear blood . . out - poured Our sin - ful souls to in the dear blood . . . out - poured Our sin - ful souls . . . to blood . . . out - poured, Our sin - ful souls . . . to Voices alone

cres.
p
Wash it, wash it, we pray Thee, lov - ing Lord, From gain, Wash it, we pray Thee, lov - ing Lord, From gain, Wash it, we pray Thee, lov - ing Lord, From gain, Wash it, we pray Thee, lov - ing Lord, From Org
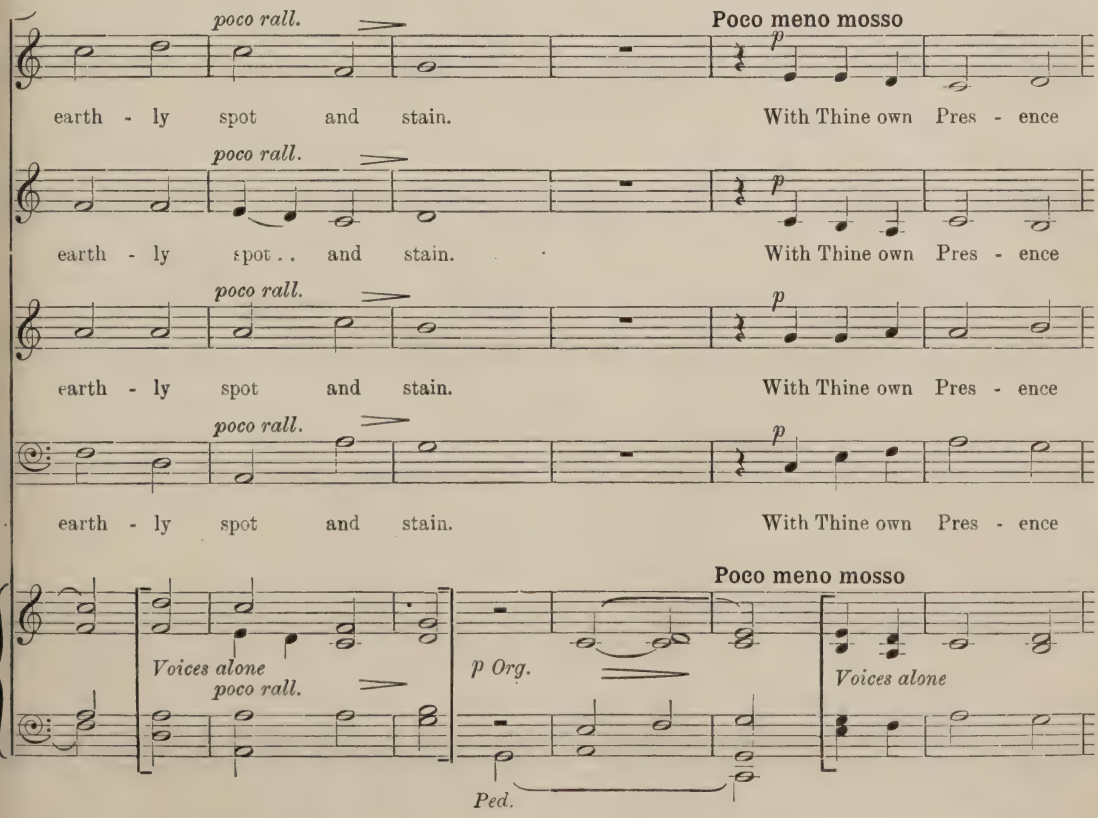
p
Ped.
Voices alone
Org.
senza Ped.



poco rall.
Poco meno mosso
earth - ly spot and stain. With Thine own Pres - ence earth - ly spot . . and stain. With Thine own Pres - ence earth - ly spot and stain. With Thine own Pres - ence earth - ly spot and stain. With Thine own Pres - ence Voices alone
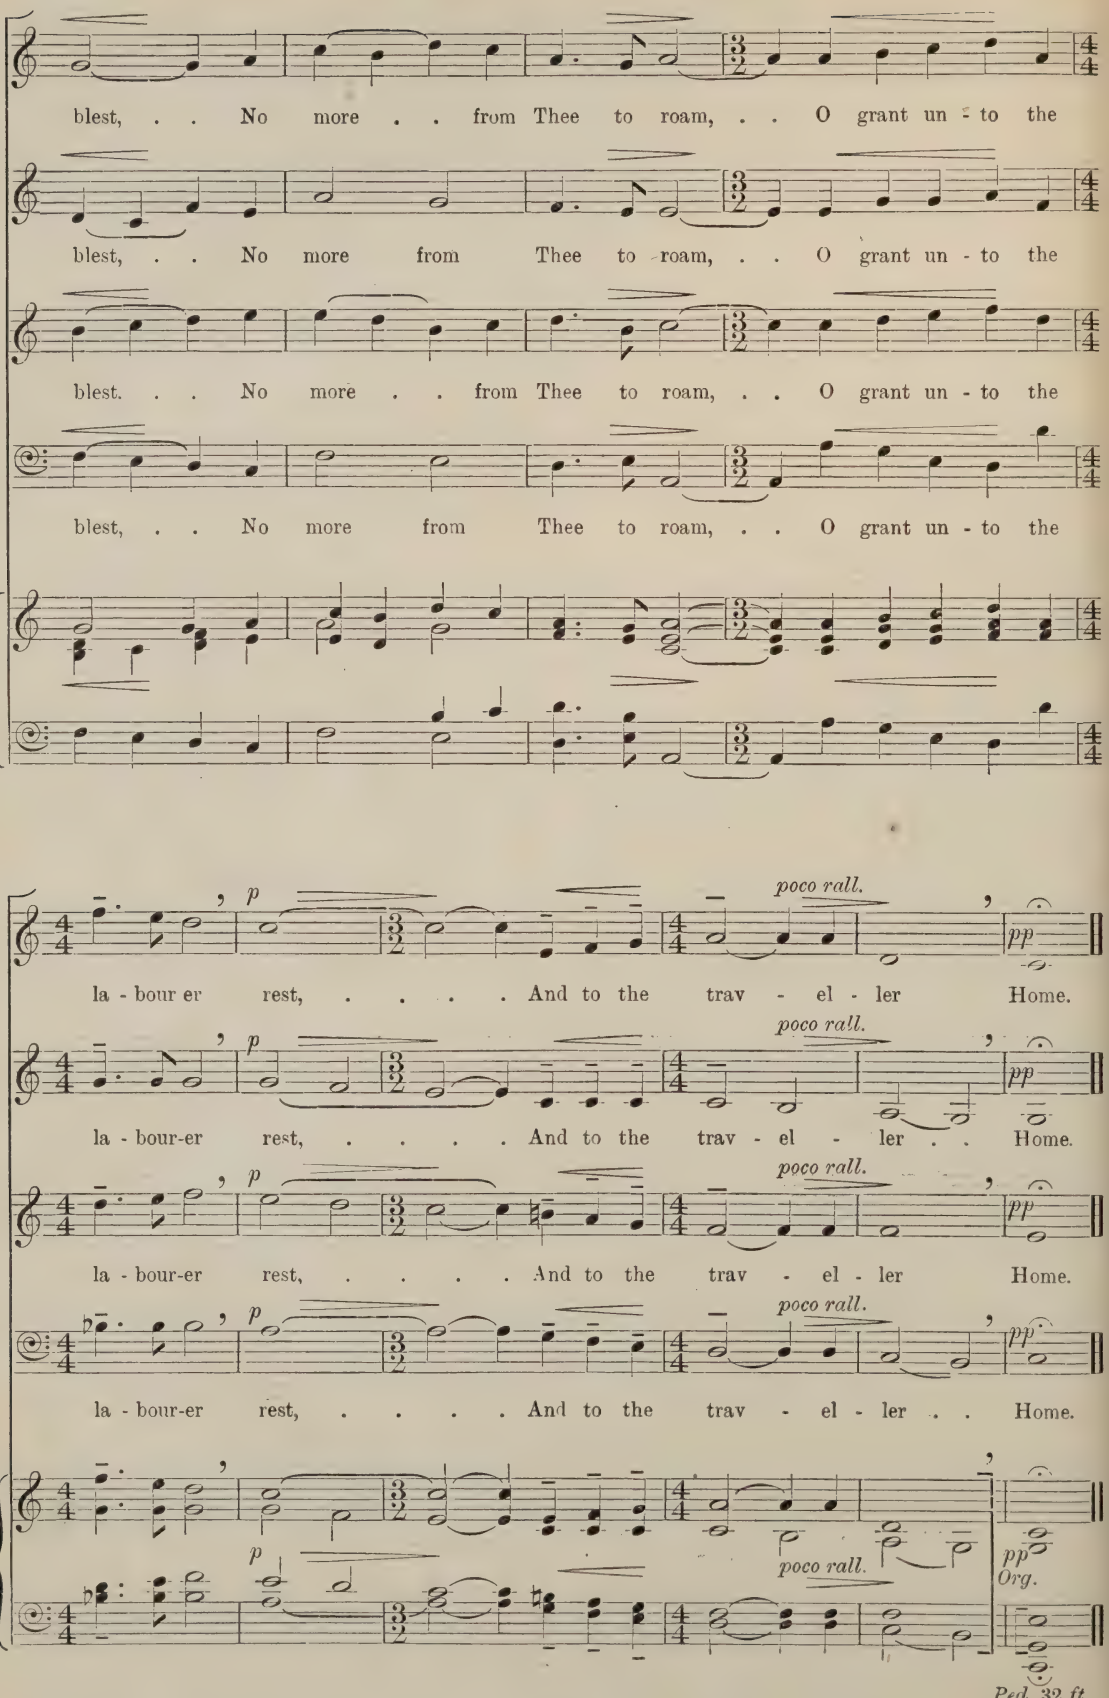
poco rall.
p Org.
Voices alone
Ped.



blest, . . No more . . from Thee to roam, . . O grant un - to the blest, . . No more from Thee to roam, . . O grant un - to the blest. . . No more . . from Thee to roam, . . O grant un - to the blest, . . No more from Thee to roam, . . O grant un - to the p
poco rall.
pp
la - bour er rest, ... And to the trav - el - ler Home.
la - bour-er rest, ... And to the trav - el - ler . . Home.
la - bour-er rest, ... And to the trav - el - ler Home.
la - bour-er rest, ... And to the trav - el - ler . . Home.
Org.
Ped. 32 ft.

(Continued from page 528.)

I found quite unrecognisable. I had seen from the catalogue that the bust was in the Lecture Room, but had passed it without recognition. Failing to find anything resembling the Principal of the R.A.M., I referred to the catalogue for the number, when to my astonishment I found I had already seen it. In 'Primavera,' ivory (1305), by R. Garbe, a very beautiful work, there are two small figures, each standing on a column; and one of these carries a theorbo. 'Beethoven' (1312), a bronze statuette by Charles Pibworth, is to my mind a work of genius; and if covetousness be a deadly sin, as theologians assure us, I certainly came perilously near it when I beheld this perfect embodiment of the greatest of all little men. 'A Piper from the Land of Dreams' (1353), bronze statuette by A. B. Pegram, with flûte à bec, is very good. 'A Youthful Faun,' marble statuette (1378), by A. G. Walker, shows the number of Pan's pipes to be eight; while a 'Garden Decoration in Portland Stone' (1413), by W. McMillan, reduces the number to seven. I am decidedly of opinion that if this year's exhibition has a fault, it is that the Syrinx has been worked too hard. Let Pan keep company with Orpheus and Eurydice for a season.

Gramophone Notes

By 'DISCUS'

COLUMBIA

Everybody's old friend, 'The Merry Wives of Windsor' Overture, played by the Queen's Hall Orchestra, under Sir Henry Wood, has been capitally recorded, the only defect being some want of definition in the string bass. The orchestral colouring, especially that of the wood-wind, is first-rate (L1723).

Georg Schnéevoigt, being a Finn, is naturally expected to be an ideal interpreter of Grieg—a point that is emphasised in the Columbia Bulletin. With due respect, however, I feel that he gives us only a portion of the life and colour that make the four Norwegian Dances some of the best things that Grieg ever wrote. No. 3, the Alla marcia in G, suffers badly from stodginess. I have heard many a mere English pianist give it with far more effect. No. 1 needs more definite treatment of the bass when that part carries the theme. So delightful is the music throughout, that these records, despite shortcomings, can hardly fail to give pleasure. But the playing gives a blow to the theory of racial affinities, so far as musical interpretation is concerned. Or can it be that we English have misunderstood them? On the whole, I don't think (L1733-4).

Mr. Tertis's transferences of violin works to the viola have not always been justified, but there can be little doubt as to the complete success of his latest experiment—Dohnányi's C sharp minor Sonata. I have not heard it in its original form, but the violin can hardly make more of it than does the viola at Mr. Tertis's hands, with William Murdoch as a splendid colleague. After an overdose of string solos that are musically of slender importance, this Sonata is a genuine 'find.' It has life, feeling, and colour in abundance, and the playing and recording give all these qualities with a fullness that enables the gramophone to present us with as near an approach to a first-hand performance as any I can recall. One is specially grateful when the beaten track is left on behalf of an admirable work that would otherwise remain unknown to all but a few (L1731-2).

The latest Léner Quartet records are of Haydn's Op. 76, No. 2, in D minor (L1740-2). This is not a 'new-process,' and to ears that have recently been standing up to the latest orchestral records, it sounds rather attenuated. It is, however, beautifully clear. The music is good Haydn, except (I feel) in the Minuet. This is very uncharacteristic, being grumpy in mood, lumpy in style, and mechanical in the canonic writing. Haydn could do a scientific thing of this sort as fluently and happily as anyone when he chose. Was he here trying to achieve the 'new minuet' that he said he wished somebody would invent? As if any 'new' minuet could please us more than an 'old' one by Haydn at his best! Anyway, repeated hearings cannot make this D minor movement sound other than a 'reach-me-down' canon, with little of the dance feeling, and nothing of Haydn, save in the little Trio section. The Quartet fills five sides, the sixth being given to the Poco lento of Franck's Quartet—a very inartistic proceeding. Surely something complete might have been found, instead of what is after all only the introductory section of a first movement. If the Lénerites wished to give us a bit of the Quartet, why not the Scherzo, or the Larghetto?

Always the 'Song of the Volga Boatmen'! Here it is, sung (in Russian) by the Don Cossack Choir. On the other side is a Russian folk-song, 'Monotonously rings the little bell.' The notable feature of the recording is the emergence of the boatmen from silence, and their return thereto—easily the most astonishing management of nuance I have so far heard via the gramophone. It is a pity that, having come into ear-shot, the boat makes such rapid headway as to suggest a method of propulsion far more efficient than labouring oars. However, we must not overlook the exigencies of the disc—even a 12-in. record doesn't give much scope for the 'band passes' effect (9085).

Schubert's 'Erl-King' calls for a man's voice. Without being too exacting in the matter of realism, one feels that a woman's voice is ill-fitted for a song in which three of the four characterisations have to be male. Muriel Brunskill is one of our best contraltos, and achieves some dramatic moments without persuading us that she was wise in her choice of song. On the other side is Hatton's 'Enchantress'—another doubtful choice, for a different reason. The style and music of this kind of scena have little appeal for us to-day, even when the words are clear, which is not the case with this record (9088).

We are told by the Bulletin that Seamus O'Doherty has a remarkable voice. One hesitates to dogmatise concerning a singer whom one has not heard at first-hand; queer 'sea changes' are suffered in the recording-room at times. But this record makes him out to be a tenor with a voice of the type for which there is only one word—snivelling. (A touch of the same quality in McCormack always prevents my enjoyment of that famous singer, so perhaps it may be a characteristic of Irish tenors.) Mr. O'Doherty sings 'Kitty of Coleraine' and Glover's 'The Rose of Tralee.' The record, both as to voice and orchestra, is too loud. If we must snivel disthressfully, let us do it quietly (3923).

Rex Palmer has an agreeable voice, as countless wireless listeners know, but I don't feel that he is best suited by 'Annie Laurie' and 'Ye Banks and Braes.'

The singing is a bit heavy-handed for such simple songs (3924).

A good light orchestra record is that of Jean Lensen and his colleagues playing the everlasting 'Chanson Hindou' and Toselli's second Serenade (3919).

The excellent impression made by the 'cellist Antoni Sala with his first recording a few months ago is well maintained by his second—Forino's Tarantelle and Popper's Spanish Dance. Mr. Sala adds to due agility plenty of variety in power, being specially strong on the delicate side, so to speak (3922).

H.M.V.

The new recording goes on from strength to strength in more than mere power. I fancy the high-water mark up to the present is reached in the records of 'Siegfried's Journey to the Rhine' (D1080). (I am told that the 'Magic Fire' record issued recently is as good, but it has not come my way.) In the 'Journey' the reproduction of orchestral colour shows a marked advance, the brass being particularly good. A tremendous climax is worked up. At this rate of progress the gramophone need fear nothing from the competition of wireless, so far as orchestral music is concerned. I add that the conductor is Albert Coates.

The 'Merry Wives' Overture shows a falling off from this high standard. It is too consistently loud and keen, and suggests a fair-ground rather than the glades of Windsor Forest. The advantage in colour and variety is with the Columbia record of the same work, reviewed above (C1260)

Wilhelm Backhaus is brilliant in the hackneyed 'Liebestraume' of Liszt and Délibes's 'Naïla' Waltz (arranged by Dohnányi), but at times the welter of tone in the latter is too great for clearness. I have heard far better recording of pianoforte tone (DB926).

Two well-worn pieces are played by Casals—Saint-Saëns's 'Swan' and Schubert's 'Moment Musical,' in F minor. True Casals playing, well reproduced; but it is a pity the Schubert piece is repeated in order to fill out the ten inches; why not another short piece? (DA776).

Marjorie Hayward is unequal in Poldini's 'Poupée Valsante' and Robinson's arrangement of 'The Snowy Breasted Pearl,' charmingly delicate passages being alternated with some that are decidedly hard in tone. The arrangement of the folk-song is far too sophisticated, and the over-busy pianoforte part is played in an aggressive way that makes it sound even worse than it is (B2289).

Another organ record has been received—Wolstenholme's 'Question' and 'Answer,' played by Reginald Goss Custard (E415). This is quite good of its kind. May I suggest to the Company the dropping of 'Grand' in speaking of the organ? The word has no real meaning in this country, where it is understood that an organ is not a harmonium. In America the instrument is called a 'pipe organ,' in order to make the distinction clear; and in France it means the 'great organ' or 'full organ,' or simply organ itself as opposed to harmonium. The word has certain associations in England (as 'Grand Opera,' 'Grand Hotel,' &c.) that are quite different, and to describe this record of two quiet, light pieces as a 'Grand Organ Record' is absurd. I suggest, too, that the labelling of Mr. Goss Custard as 'the greatest of English organists' is fair neither to that player nor to such a group of men as Cunningham, Ley, Darke, W. H. Harris, Preston, Alcock, Bairstow, and about half-a-dozen others who are all in the very first grade. For goodness' sake let us keep the organ clear of the atmosphere that surrounds 'Queens of Song,' 'Kings of 'Cellists,' 'Monarchs of Syncopation,' and the like. (By the by, the labels on my record are transposed. If the same thing has happened to the whole batch, it would be interesting to know how many hearers unfamiliar with the pieces will be perturbed at hearing the Question described as the Answer. So much does programme music depend on the label!)

The latest record of the English Singers is, I think, by far the best. Their singing of Vaughan Williams's 'Dark-eyed Sailor' is as near perfection as can be asked for, and it is wonderfully reproduced. Weelkes's 'Sing we at pleasure' is hardly less successful, the only fault being a trifle too much power in the loud passages. (By the way, the final chord of the latter gives—on my machine at least—a remarkably prominent tonic seventh as a harmonic, an effect I have so far heard only in unusually resonant buildings.) Why cannot our vocal soloists—especially the women—sing with the steady, pure tone that makes the little solo bits by the soprano and contralto of the English Singers a delight? (E422).

It is just the kind of tone we want, for example, in Somervell's 'Shepherd's Cradle Song' and German's 'Charming Chloe,' instead of the too-frequently cutting and unsteady kind produced by Elsie Suddaby in her record of these songs (E421). And why 'Sleep, Beeby, sleep'? What's the matter with Baby, anyway?

Something of the same complaint may be made in regard to Maartje Offers's singing of a couple of extracts from 'Samson and Delilah.' If any solo calls for tonal charm and seductiveness, surely it is 'My heart opens at thy voice'; but it must be a tough-hided Samson who would be won by such an astringent-voiced Delilah as this. In 'Love, lend me thine aid,' the defect matters less. The best part of this record is the orchestral accompaniment, conducted by Malcolm Sargent (DB912).

The diction is unusually good in Edna Thornton's singing of Purcell's 'Mad Bess' and Hope Temple's faded 'Old Garden.' The variety and effect of the Purcell would be even greater but for a certain stiffness of movement in the melodic passages (D1086).

Robert Radford is capital in 'Father O'Flynn' and 'Glorious Devon' (E420); and Peter Dawson does well in Lambert's 'She is far from the land' and Capel's 'Love, could I only tell thee' (B2238).

VOCALION

Ravelites will be glad to have the remainder of his Suite, 'Le Tombeau de Couperin,' the third and fourth movements of which were issued some months ago. Here we have the Prelude and 'Forlane,' played by the Æolian Orchestra, conducted by Stanley Chapple (K05225). The playing and recording are very successful in giving us the clarity and precision which Ravel calls for. The Prelude is easily the more attractive movement; the wilful and jagged harmonization of the 'Forlane' calls for some familiarity.

The Tchaikovsky B flat minor Pianoforte Concerto is played by Sapellnikov and the Æolian Orchestra, with Stanley Chapple conducting, in a manner that misses much of its essential rhetoric. Good, sound, conscientious playing, but do we want a sound, conscientious Tchaikovsky? The pianoforte tone is generally good (Ao259-62).

Adila Fachiri is at her best in the first movement from Vivaldi's A minor Concerto and Hubay's 'Scènes de la Czarda,' Op. 33, No. 5, with Ethel Hobday, admirable as usual, at the pianoforte (Ko5226).

Only two vocal records have been received—Luella Paikin in 'Ah! lo so' and 'Voi che sapete' (Ao263); and Clara Serena in 'O don fatale,' from 'Don Carlos,' and 'Voce di donna o d'Angelo,' from 'La Gioconda' (Ko5227). The latter strikes me as being by far the better, and its orchestral part is notably good.

NATIONAL GRAMOPHONIC SOCIETY

The Society's latest issue, on five 12-in., of Elgar's Pianoforte Quintet is, I feel, the best thing it has done. The work is one that is too rarely heard, yet (or because) it is Elgar at his best. For sheer beauty of sound and feeling there are few modern works to approach it. It is a commonplace to remark on the composer's affinity to Franck, yet one cannot but mention it in discussing the Quintet, so often are we reminded of the Belgian, partly by little harmonic touches, but even more in the brooding and intensely personal quality of the music. A composer who can carry on this strain for so long a flight as Elgar does here is one of the elect. The scrappy, tongue-in-the-cheek, superficialities of clever young bloods on both sides of the Channel are put in their place by chamber music of such quality. Which of the young bloods wouldn't give something to be able to write it! As they can't, they turn out the kind of thing they can, and imagine they are more 'advanced' than Elgar. The playing by the Spencer Dyke Quartet and Ethel Hobday is thoroughly worthy of the occasion, and the recording leaves little to be desired.

Occasional Notes

The centenary of the death of Weber (June 4, 1826) seems likely to pass without any special note in the way of performances—at all events, so far as London is concerned. It seems a pity the opportunity could not have been seized of giving one of his operas. Weber is a striking example of the composer who paves the way for greater men, and is promptly obscured by them. And, to add to the injustice, the early and immature works of the successor are performed when the mature and often far better examples of the forerunner are neglected. Weber's influence on composers so wide apart as Mendelssohn and Wagner can hardly be over-estimated, yet apart from a batch of operatic Overtures, he left little of permanent value. The recent recitals of his pianoforte music in the B.B.C. programmes showed why his work in that department is rarely heard. However, it will be many a long day before concert audiences will cease to enjoy the 'Freischütz,' 'Euryanthe,' and 'Oberon' Overtures, so the thread by which his fame hangs is strong, though slender.

One of the most curious valuations of Weber is that in a little-known book called 'A Ramble Among the Musicians of Germany . . . by a Musical Professor,' published two years after Weber's death. The 'Musical Professor' was Edward Holmes, whose life of Mozart is still highly and deservedly esteemed. Holmes brings Weber in casually when talking of his (Holmes's) visit to Prague:

> C. M. von Weber was formerly director of the opera at Prague, but quitted the place on his marriage, to reside at Dresden. At the time of his employment here he had composed no work of importance, merely cantatas and songs, with full accompaniments; and the good fortune of this musician is worthy of observation, as a circumstance, I believe, altogether unprecedented in the history of the art. That a man should live on to within a few years of forty in obscurity, not distinguished in Germany from a host of the same stamp; that he should be as little endowed by nature as any composer that ever lived with a store of melody such as the populace might troll about to gladden themselves; yet by one work just suited to the cast of his genius, to leap at once into the most extraordinary favour throughout Europe, not only gaining credit for that he had done, but a certain passport for that he might do; to be invited to foreign countries, wreathed with laurels in concert-rooms, deafened with applause, and made a show of everywhere, is a wonderful concatenation of events in the life of a middle-aged gentleman.

This overlooks Weber's influence (which was of course not yet fully evident), and it seems a trifle unkind; but as a critical judgment delivered before the post mortem pæans on the composer had died away, it was pretty shrewd, and certainly courageous.

Another centenary falling due this month is of one who will long be remembered gratefully in connection with church and organ music—Charles Steggall, born June 3, 1826. His importance, however, extended far beyond the organ-loft, as will be seen when a few facts of his career are recalled. Entering the Royal Academy of Music in 1847, he became a pupil of Sterndale Bennett, and laid the foundations of a close and lifelong friendship with that composer. For half a century he was chief organ professor at the Academy, and the claim made in his later years that he had trained more organists than any other teacher in the country is probably still valid. Among his best-known pupils were E. H. Lemare, F. A. W. Docker, G. J. Bennett, and Barnby. Steggall was elected a member of the Committee of Management in 1870, and joined the Board of Directors in 1884. With Sainton and Walter Macfarren he acted as Principal during the six months' interval between the reign of G. A. Macfarren and Mackenzie. His association with the Academy lasted for the very long period of fifty-six years. As hon. secretary to the Bach Society throughout its existence (1849 to 1870), he played no small part in starting the Bach crusade in this country, both as editor of some of the choral works, and as Sterndale Bennett's right-hand man in the first English performance of the 'St. Matthew' Passion (Hanover Square Rooms, April 6, 1854). It is worth recalling that one of the trebles was a youngster named John Stainer, and a budding tenor, William H. Cummings, sang in the chorus. Writing many years later in the Musical Times, Stainer gave a glance back at the efforts of the early Bachites:

> I was only nine years old when the Bach Society was founded. I was among the very first of those who regularly attended rehearsals, to which I was escorted by an elder sister. The rehearsals were held at the Store Street Rooms, and sometimes at the Royal Academy of Music, in Tenterden Street. But I have a most vivid recollection of a series of rehearsals held in Gray & Davison's organ factory. At these Dr. Steggall accompanied us splendidly on the organ. I admired his playing very much, and I remember being for the first time introduced to him at one of those early rehearsals. . . . The Misses Johnston attended regularly (there were, I think, two sisters), and the 'Passions Musik' was in process of translation by them, fresh sheets of lithographed music being produced at each rehearsal.

In connection with Steggall's work as a Church musician it should be recalled that he was one of the founders of the Royal College of Organists and a member of its first Council. He gave the inaugural lecture at Freemasons' Tavern on October 18, 1864, and, with E. J. Hopkins and John Hullah, conducted the first examination—at which, by the way, there were seven candidates, two of whom passed. Of Steggall's compositions the best known to-day are the two fine anthems, 'God came from Teman' and 'Remember now thy Creator,' and some carol- and hymn-tunes, especially 'Christ Church' (named after the famous Church at Lancaster Gate, of which he was the first organist). He succeeded Monk as Editor of 'Hymns A. & M.' One who knew him intimately tells us that to regard Steggall as 'old-fashioned' is wide of the mark:

His views on plainsong were those of the experts of to-day, and his intense love of the early school of English writers, from Byrd onwards, would have made him, had he been still living, a prominent figure in the present Elizabethan revival.

It is worth while occasionally to review the work of such men as Steggall, if only to correct the uncritical attitude of mind that lumps a large number of musicians together, labels them as 'Victorian,' and (estimating the value of the whole group by that of its weakest members) condemns them out of hand. As player, teacher, composer, and all-round worker in the cause of his art, Charles Steggall deserves better treatment, and we hope that organists and choirmasters will see that his name appears in their choir-lists and programmes during the present month.

The Jubilee Festival of the Bach Choir, postponed owing to the Strike, will be held on the evenings of June 7, 8, 9, and 11, at Central Hall, Westminster. The four programmes will be identical with those originally arranged for May 10, 11, 13, and 14 respectively. The following are the principal works: June 7, cantatas, 'Now shall the Grace,' 'Lord, my soul doth thirst for Thee,' and 'A Stronghold sure' (Nos. 50, 150, and 80). June 8, unaccompanied Motets for double chorus; chamber works. June 9, 'Sancta Civitas,' by R. Vaughan Williams (first performance in London), Brahms's Alto Rhapsody, and Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens.' June 11, Jubilee performance (in England) of the B minor Mass. All tickets issued for the old dates are available for the corresponding new dates.

The London Opera Syndicate opened its season at Covent Garden on May 10, regardless of national troubles. The operas given in the first week were 'Figaro's Hochzeit,' 'Rheingold,' 'Tristan,' 'Die Meistersinger,' and 'Die Walküre.' In the absence of facilities for witnessing the performances, we are unable to give further description.

It sometimes happens that an apparently insoluble problem is tackled, and perhaps solved (at least partially) by comparatively unknown folk while those in the lime-light are still volubly discussing it. We are therefore glad to draw attention to the Croydon Operatic Society. Founded in 1906 by enthusiasts who wished to get off the Gilbert-Sullivan track, the Society is one of the few amateur organizations regularly and successfully presenting grand opera. Its repertory includes a couple of dozen of the best-known works—'Carmen,' 'The Barber of Seville,' 'The Huguenots,' 'Der Freischütz,' 'Tannhäuser,' 'Lohengrin,' five Mozart operas, &c. The Society appears to be the only organization that gives 'Faust' with the Walpurgis scene; and it has to its credit the only performance of 'Der Freischütz' given in this country since 1892. The C.O.S. is contemplating further additions to its repertory, and opera enthusiasts in the London area who are beginning to despair of the fruition of more widely advertised and ambitious projects might do worse than lend a hand to this Croydon body, which, with twenty years of successful activity to its credit, may claim to have made a solid contribution towards the settlement of some of the questions concerning grand opera. The hon. treasurer is Mr. F. R. Ayrton, 46, Lansdown Road, Croydon.

The Council of the Royal College of Organists cordially invites all interested to the presentation of diplomas and the conversazione on July 24, at 3.15 p.m. The organ recitalist will be Mr. G. Thalben Ball, and the performance will be broadcast.

The League of Arts announces a series of entertainments to take place in Hyde Park on the Saturdays in June and on July 3, with two performances on each occasion, at 3 and 7 p.m. Here is the scheme in brief, in order of date: A Pageant of Dancing, by the Mayfair School of Dancing; Sea Songs and Shanties, by the League of Arts Choir, conducted by Geoffrey Shaw, and Mimes, by the League's Dancers, arranged by Penelope Spencer; a Country Folk-Dance Party, by the English Folk-Dance Society; a Variety Performance, by the Students of the Polytechnic School of Speech-Training and Dramatic Art, directed by Louie Bagley; and Scenes from Maeterlinck's 'The Blue Bird,' produced by Mildred Hodges. The entertainments are given in the natural amphitheatre by the boathouses, on the north side of the Serpentine. (No performance if the weather is wet.) Information from the Secretary, League of Arts, 12, Berwick Street, S.W.1.

The sixth annual Congress of the British Music Society will be held in London on June 10-12. An attractive series of gatherings has been arranged, including a demonstration by the English Folk-Dance Society, at the Parry Theatre, Royal College of Music, on the 10th (8.15 p.m.); a lecture-demonstration on the use of children's bands, by Miss L. de Rusette, at the Parry Theatre, on the 11th (11 a.m.); a Contemporary Music Centre Concert at Seaford House, on the same day, at 8.30 p.m., with a fine list of artists; and a discussion on children's concerts, by Dr. Malcolm Sargent, Mr. Alexander Brent-Smith, &c., with Dr. J. B. McEwen in the chair. Tickets and full particulars from the Secretary, British Music Society, 117, Great Portland Street, W.1.

It is often claimed that the 'best-seller' type of song and dance music must possess some special virtue lacking in classical and good music generally, or it could not command such wide and frantic popularity as frequently it does. We have never believed in this theory, holding that its vogue is due rather to its being imposed on the community by intensive

No. 504. HOW CALMLY THE EVENING.—Edward Elgar. Price (4*d.*).

NOVELLO'S OCTAVO EDITION OF TRIOS, QUARTETS, &c. FOR FEMALE VOICES.

FOR S.S.A. UNLESS OTHERWISE STATED.

266. About the sweet bag of a bee (4 v.) Marie J. A. Wurm 3d.
406. Ah, tender flower ... F. Hiller 2d.
236. Albion ... ... Marie Wurm 3d.
456.* And how should I your true love know (arr. by) H. B. Gardiner 2d.
411.* Annie Laurie (arr.) C. Macpherson 4d.
47.* Approach of May, The Walmisley 4d.
226. April ... ... King Hall 4d.
114.* April showers ... ...J. L. Hatton 4d.
351.§ Arab's song, An... H. M. Higgs 4d.
152. As in the field ... ... C. Reinecke 3d.
113. At midnight ... Franz Lachner 4d.
172. At the spinning wheel ...Carl Hering 3d.
138. Ave Maria ... ... Franz Abt 3d.
30. Ave Maria ... ... Marchetti 4d.
23.*§Ave Maria ("Loreley") Mendelssohn 3d.
148. Awaking of morn, The C. Reinecke 3d.
379.* Ballad of Sir Humphrey Gilbert, The W. Wolstenholme 8d.
335.* Barcarolle (4 v.) ... J. Brahms 2d.
437.* Beauteous Morn ... E. German 4d.
330. Bells are ringing, The N. von Wilm 4d.
37.* Bells in May ... ... F. Hiller 4d.
78.* Be strong to hope Edward Hecht 4d.
6.* Bird at sea, The... Henry Smart 6d.
49.* Blanche of Provence ... Cherubini 3d.
398. Bleacher's night song, The (4 v.) Schumann 2d.
195.* Blessed are the pure ... G.E. Lake 4d.
Ditto (without accomp.) G. E. Lake 1½d.
425. Blind Boy, The... ... W. G. Ross 4d.
424. Blow, ye gentle breezes (4 v.) J. C. Marks 4d.
343.* Bride, The (From the Island of Rügen) (4 v.) J. Brahms 4d.
334.* Bridegroom, The (4 v.) J. Brahms 4d.
205.§ Bride hath paced, The J. F. Barnett 6d.
202.§ Bright is the day (4 v.) E. Prout 6d.
206.§ But tell me, speak again (2 v.) J. F. Barnett 6d.
347.*§But thou, O Hope F. H. Cowen 3d.
41. Call to the mountains ... F. Hiller 4d.
503.* Campbells are comin', The Scottish Folk-Song (arr.) 4d.
220.* Cast thy bread W. S. Bennett 4d.
389.* Chapel, The (4 v.) ... Schumann 2d.
234.*§Charity (La Carita) ... G. Rossini 4d.
68. Charming little valley ... G. Roberti 4d.
134. Christmas Carol, A (2 v.) C. Reinecke 3d.
119. Christmas Eve ... H. Marschner 6d.
100. Clieveden Woods ... F. Corder 4d.
507. Come again! sweet love (4 v.) J. Dowland 3d.
181.* Come away, Death ... J. Brahms 3d.
428.* Come away, Death ... J. Harrison 3d.
215.* Come, rosy morn ... Oliver King 4d.
85.*§Come, sisters, come A. C. Mackenzie 6d.
490. Come unto Him ... ... H. Farjeon 3d.
386. Convent Maiden, The (4 v.) Schumann 2d.
1.* Corall'd caves of ocean, The H. Smart 4d.
466.* Corinna ... ... Ethel Boyce 4d.
13.* Coronach ... ... Schubert 4d.
315.* Coronation Song ... E. Faning 4d.
354.* Cradle Song, A H. Walford Davies 4d.
455.* Daffodils .. ... H. Ellingford 4d.
224.* Daffodils, The ... ... King Hall 4d.
373.*§Dametus... ... ... W. Bendall 3d.
327.* Dartside ... ... A. Hollins 6d.
441. Dawn of Day, The ... S. Reay 4d.
71. Day is at last departing J. Raff 4d.
404. Day, in twilight grace, is dying Hiller 4d.
183. Death of Trenar, The ... J. Brahms 4d.
79.* Departure ... ... L. Samson 4d.
297.* Dickory, Dickory dock (humorous) H. W. Schartau 4d.
84.* Distant bells ... A. C. Mackenzie 4d.
435.* Dream, baby, dream P. E. Fletcher 4d.
144.* Dreaming lake, The ... C. Reinecke 3d.
460.* Dream-Pedlary... ...Colin Taylor 4d.
378.* Duncan Gray (humorous) A. M. Richardson 4d.
249. Early Morning (2 v.) ... J. Kinross 4d.
414. Earth and Man, The A. C. Mackenzie 4d.
130. Eat the fruit (2 v.) ... C. Reinecke 3d.
213. Ebb and Flow ... ... Oliver King 4d.
470. Echoes ... ... B. Johnson 4d.
439.§ Echoes ... ... J. Pointer 4d.
184.* Eglantine (4 v.) ... Adolf Jensen 4d.
161. Eglantine, The ... ... R. Würst 4d.
319. Eidola ... ... F. C. Woods 4d.
80. Elf, The ... ... L. Samson 4d.
153. Elves, The ... ... C. Reinecke 3d.
230. Elves' Duet The (2 v.) Karel Bendl 6d.
382.* Encinctured with a twine of leaves S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.
309.* England ... ... J. L. Hatton 3d.
9.* Evening ... ... Henry Smart 3d.
59. Evening rest ... Oscar Wermann 6d.
171.* Evening rest ... ... Carl Hering 3d.
112.* Evening Star, The Franz Lachner 3d.
151. Evening Wind, The ... C. Reinecke 3d.
434.* Exiles, The ... Laurent de Rillé 4d.
321.* Fair Daffodils ... A. H. Behrend 4d.
395. Fair Elma ... ... F. Hiller 4d.
214. Fair Luna ... ... Oliver King 4d.
318. Fairest of lands A. Goring Thomas 6d.
377.* Fairies' Song (4 v.) ... H. Brian 4d.
187.* Fairies' Song, The (4 v.) Bishop 6d.
484. Fairies were tripping, The E. D. Tayler 4d.
232. Faith ... ... G. Rossini 3d.
290. Falcon, The ... Felix Woyrsch 3d.
124. Fancy ... ... A. H. Behrend 4d.
65. Fare thee well! ... ... G. Roberti 4d.
429. Father Eternal (4 v.) ... Brahms 2d.
53. Father's watchful eye, The Franz Abt 4d.
8.* Fays' song, The... Henry Smart 6d.
174. Festival, The ... ... Carl Hering 3d.
33.* Fisherwife's song, The J. L. Hatton 4d.
394. Flaming sun is dying, The F. Hiller 2d.
106. Flora ... ... M. Hauptmann 3d.
194.* Flow down, cold rivulet B. Luard-Selby 4d.
252. Flow'rets fair (2 v.) ... J. Kinross 4d.
55.* Fly forth, my song ... Franz Abt 4d.
239. Fly not, summer hours Marie Wurm 3d.
307.*§Fly, singing bird ... E. Elgar 8d.
385.* Forest fay, The (4 v.)... Schumann 2d.
393. Forsaken maiden, The (4 v.) Schumann 2d.
255. Four Angels ... C. A. Macirone 4d.
500. Frog, The (humorous) E. Newton 4d.
345.*§From the green heart of the Waters S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.
86. From Venice ... ... C. Reinecke 4d.
311. Frost-bound ... H. W. Wareing 4d.
182.* Gardener, The ... ... J. Brahms 4d.
245. Garden of peace, The (2 v.) King Hall 4d.
356.* Gentle spring ... Joseph Holbrooke 6d.
122.* Gipsy life ... ... Schumann 4d.
46. Glorious stand the mountains C. Reinthaler 3d.
17. Glory to the Lord ... Schubert 4d.
15.* God in Nature (4 voices) Schubert 6d.
44.* Good-night (3 v.) Henry Leslie 4d.
413. Good-night ... M. F. Phillips 4d.
269.* Good-night (4 v.) Marie J. A. Wurm 4d.
129. Good-night (2 voices) C. Reinecke 3d
423.* Good-night, beloved (arr.) Pinsuti 2d.
488.* Goslings, The (humorous) J. F. Bridge 4d.
442. Green are the leaves A. Brent Smith 4d.
324. Greenfinch, The (4 v.) L. Sinigaglia 4d.
284.* Hail! Star of Eve ...R. Spofforth 3d.
22.*§Hail to thee ... Henry Smart 3d.
133.* Happiness ever (2 v.) C. Reinecke 3d.
391. Happy hunter, The (4 v.) Schumann 2d.
358.* Hark! how the ripples G. C. Young 4d.
158.* Hark! the Lark (S.S.A.A.) Cooke 4d.
98.* Hark! the village bells James Shaw 4d.
317. Hasten, Oh! Sisters ... F. Tozer 4d.
375. Haste thee, Nymph T. S. Holland 3d.
125. Haymakers ... A. H. Behrend 4d.
56.* Hear, O hear my prayer (Veni, Domine) Mendelssohn 4d.
27.*§Hearts feel that love Thee ,, 3d.
2.* Heaven ... ... Henry Smart 6d.
426.* Here a pretty baby lies H. A. Smith 2d.
465.* Here a solemn feast Ethel Boyce 3d.
247. Here, in cool grot ... Mornington 3d.
316.* His Majesty the King F. H. Cowen 4d.
270.* Hohenlinden ... F. A. Marshall 3d.
285.* Honey-bees love heath'ry heights Chas. H. Lloyd 4d.
233. Hope ... ... G. Rossini 4d.
237. Hope ... ... Marie Wurm 3d.
3.* Hope and Memory Henry Smart 6d.
39. Hours of rest ... ... F. Hiller 4d.
504.* How calmly the evening E. Elgar 4d.
499. How far is it to Bethlehem ? Geoffrey Shaw 3d.
88. How quickly sorrow ... C. Reinecke 3d.
250. Hunter's Song (2 v.) ... J. Kinross 4d.
102. Hurley Mill ... ... F. Corder 4d.
310.* Hurrah for merry England Pierson 3d.
173. Hussar's departure, The Carl Hering 4d.
296. Hymn to Nature ...L. Streabbog 4d.
279.* If hope were but a fairy (2 v.) Foster 3d.
342.* If through the churchyard (4 v.) J. Brahms 2d.
459.*§If yet Pan's Orgies (S.S.A.A.) Geoffrey Shaw 4d.

*Pieces marked thus * may be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d. to 3d. each.*
§ Band Parts.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

MADE IN ENGLAND.

HOW CALMLY THE EVENING

WORDS BY T. T. LYNCH

MUSIC BY

EDWARD ELGAR

ARRANGED AS A TRIO FOR FEMALE VOICES BY THE COMPOSER

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

Copyright, 1925, by Novello and Company, Limited

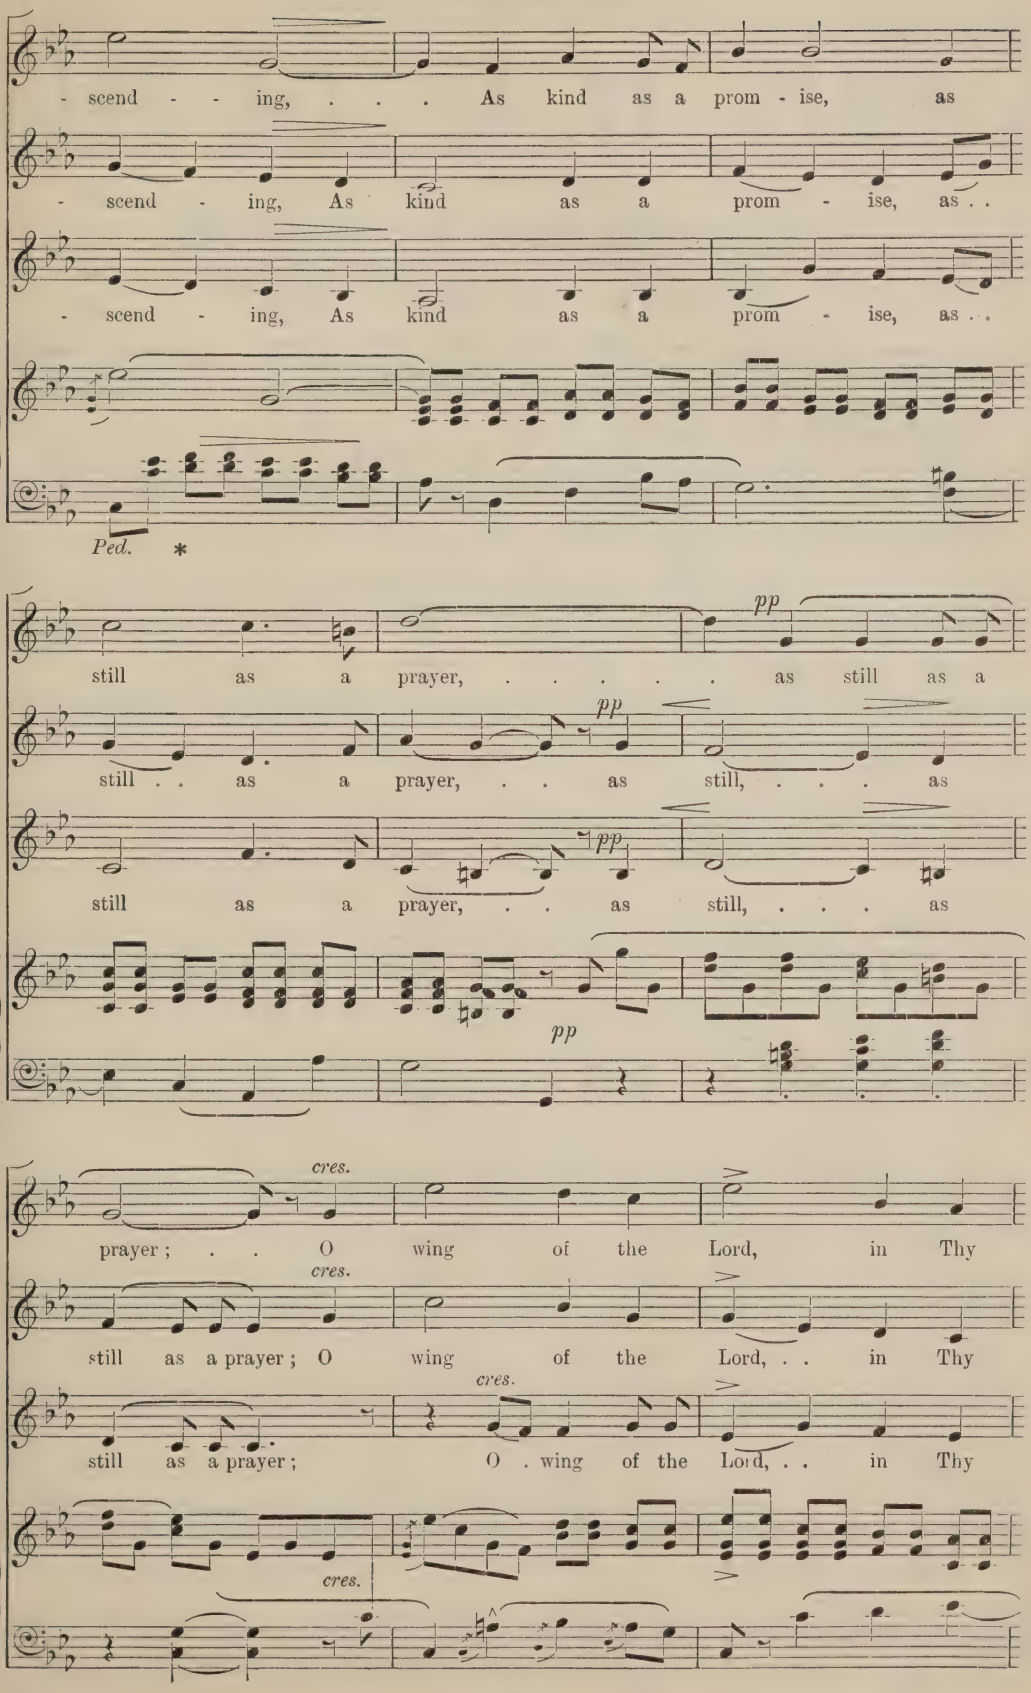
Original Edition for Mixed Voices in THE MUSICAL TIMES, No. 779; and NOVELLO'S TONIC SOL-FA SERIES, No. 1662.

HOW CALMLY THE EVENING



- scend - - ing, . . . As kind as a prom - ise, as
- scend - ing, As kind as a prom - ise, as . .
- scend - ing, As kind as a prom - ise, as . .
Ped. *
still as a prayer, ... as still as a still . . as a prayer, . . as still, . . . as still as a prayer, . . as still, . . . as pp
cres.
prayer; . . O wing of the Lord, in Thy still as a prayer; O wing of the Lord, . . in Thy still as a prayer; O . wing of the Lord, . . in Thy dim.

p shel - ter be - friend - - - - ing, . . . May dim.
p shel - - ter be - friend - - - - ing, . . . May dim.
p shel - - ter . . . . be - friend - - ing, . . . May dim.
pp
pp we and our house - - holds con - tin - ue to
pp we and our house - - holds con - tin - ue to
pp we and our house - - holds con - tin - ue to pp share.
cantabile
p share.
We share.
fp
Ped.
Ped.
*

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND

Singing Class Circular.

Published on the 1st of every Month.

No. 1. JUNE 1, 1844. Price 1½*d.*

THE MUSICAL TIMES is to be obtained by order of any Music Seller, Bookseller, or Newsvendor; or Subscribers can have it sent regularly by Post on the day of publication, by sending their address written in full, and enclosing a post office order or penny stamps. Annual Subscription, postage free, 2s. 6d.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications of the progress of Singing Class Teaching, addressed to the Editor of the Musical Times, 69, Dean Street, Soho, will be interesting.

THE AMATEURS OF LONDON.

It is satisfactory to those who desire and have laboured for the general diffusion of a taste for music amongst all classes of the community, to observe the sure results of what has been doing for the last few years.

Some twenty years since, the execution of concerted and choral music in private was almost unknown; indeed it then required more than ordinary industry to organise such a performance. The libraries of the few, who possessed classical works then only in MS. had to be visited, much diligence used in multiplying sufficiently the copies, and then the small number of performers who could be got together, although "willing," were far from "able to take a part." Some zealous individuals, about the time mentioned, formed themselves into a society called the "Classical Harmonists," and such was the existing scarcity of able amateurs, that for several years their limited number of some twenty members, "willing and able to take a part," remained incomplete.

This society was the parent of many other associations, having for their object the performance of somewhat similar music; and the influence of this constant private performance of the highest classical works, and the production of good printed copies, on the taste and practical ability of the amateurs of London, that we find in 1834 that there was designed and effectively carried into execution, the Amateur Festival—a meeting which was highly creditable to all engaged, and was very beneficial to the excellent charity to which the surplus funds were dedicated. The taste for this rational and delightful manner of passing the evening, has so much increased since 1834, that the many important societies existing in London are more in number than the individual members required for the formation of the parent society, besides the numerous friendly meetings where the young people of neighbouring families join for the execution of concerted music.

With this growing feeling, it is not surprising, that when a few years ago, Mr. Mainzer, Mr. Hullah, and others, proposed to teach the rudiments of singing to large classes at a small individual cost, that great numbers should have been found willing to avail themselves of their assistance, and that their schools should have been crowded. It is to be regretted that the foes, and still more injudicious friends, should have done some damage to these systems, which pretended to teach no more than the rudiments, by ascribing results to them which they never proposed to achieve. The retirement from the classes of these self-deceived persons has given an appearance of falling off in the interest of these schools not warranted by fact. There is this comfort for the doubters, and answer to the sneerers, who are dissatisfied with the slow advance, that the aggregate of all the efforts made in the last twenty years, has created a body of amateurs in London capable of doing much themselves, and giving them a high appreciation of exalted talent in professors, and affording abundant promise of great future advancement for the cause of good music.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A VERY important contribution to the cause of good music has been made by the publication of several numbers of a series of "Cheap Classics." They are printed in vocal score with a separate accompaniment for the organ or pianoforte; great pains having been taken with the engraving and printing, so that they are emphatically "cheap" both in quantity and quality. For instance, Spohr's great oratorio of "The Last Judgment," is complete for 7*s.* 6*d.*; Mozart's Masses at 2*s.* 6*d.* and 3*s.* 6*d.* each; and Haydn's Masses from 4*s.* to 6*s.*

It is probable that this experiment to give the public music at a cheaper rate than usual, will be attended with better success than has hitherto been the case; because former reprints have usually consisted of non-copyright works already to be found in a great variety of shapes. But the present series consists of standard and much-sought-after works, only previously to be obtained at a high price.

The last month has also produced the concluding numbers of Boyce's collection of Cathedral Music printed in separate Vocal Parts. Choral Societies can now perform some of the services produced by the great English Cathedral writers, which previously to the present publication were sealed books. It will doubtless be one means of that great improvement so much to be desired, in the Cathedral and Church Service, as a very extensive choir can be supplied with sufficient copies at a trifling cost.

It is intended, that the valuable collection of cathedral music made by Dr. Arnold, be immediately published in the same manner in separate vocal parts.

It would surely be found, that in many parishes, a sufficient number of persons having voices, might be found, who, with proper instruction from their organist, and regular preliminary practice, might relieve the parochial service from the horrid infliction of the charity children's present mode of singing. At all events, one of the difficulties to the effective performance of the church service has been removed by these publications in separate vocal parts.

FELIX MENDELLSSOHN BARTHOLDY.

THE greatest event of this almost unprecedentedly brilliant season is, undoubtedly, the arrival of Dr. Mendelssohn. At the last Philharmonic Concert the effect of his presence manifested itself in two ways. The densely crowded state of the room, and the admirable manner in which the orchestra performed its important part in the concert, were alike attributable to Dr. Mendelssohn. If the directors for 1844 had effected nothing else than the engagement of that great musician, they would still be entitled to the gratitude of the subscribers, for having done the wisest thing that has ever been done since the society came into existence.—Musical World.

BRIEF CHRONICLE OF THE LAST MONTH.

MADAME ANNA THILLON made a highly successful debut before an English audience at the Princess's theatre, on the 2nd, in Auber's opera "Les Diamans de la Couronne."

THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF FEMALE MUSICIANS gave their annual concert at the Hanover-square Rooms on the 3rd. The first part consisted of selections from the Creation, and Beethoven's Mass in C, with an effective chorus of one hundred voices. The object of this institution is to make a fund for the relief of its indigent members. Several first-rate professors lent their aid, most of the female portion of whom are members of this excellent society.

ABBEY GLEE CLUB.—A prize of ten guineas, offered by William Dixon, Esq., for the best madrigal, was awarded to Mr. James Coward. There were two other candidates, whose productions were greatly admired.

THE MESSIAH.—This great work of the immortal Handel was written in twenty-one days; it was commenced on the 22nd of August, 1741; its three parts being the work respectively of six, nine, and six days; and the last page of the original score intimates that it was finished on the 12th of September. The original was presented by Handel to the Foundling Hospital, where it has since remained, and where it is highly valued.—Dramatic and Musical Review.

ENCORES.—The York Choral Society gave a concert to a very numerous audience. The first part was Handel's Acis and Galatea; it passed off well and gave great satisfaction. The second part was a miscellaneous collection, which was not all performed, from the following circumstance:—the second song was Handel's "Sweet Bird," which elicited such immense applause, that the performers could not proceed with the next piece, and it being a standing rule with the committee to allow no encores, the concert broke up.—From a Correspondent of the Musical Examiner.

MADAME HASSELT BARTH (a German singer of some celebrity), has recently erected at her own expense a monument over the too long neglected grave of MOZART. It is a tablet of gray marble, surmounted by a medallion head of the great composer. It bears an inscription briefly characteristic of the talent of Mozart. "Jung, gross, spat erkannt, nie erreicht." ("Young, great, late acknowledged, never equalled.") —Foreign Quarterly Review.

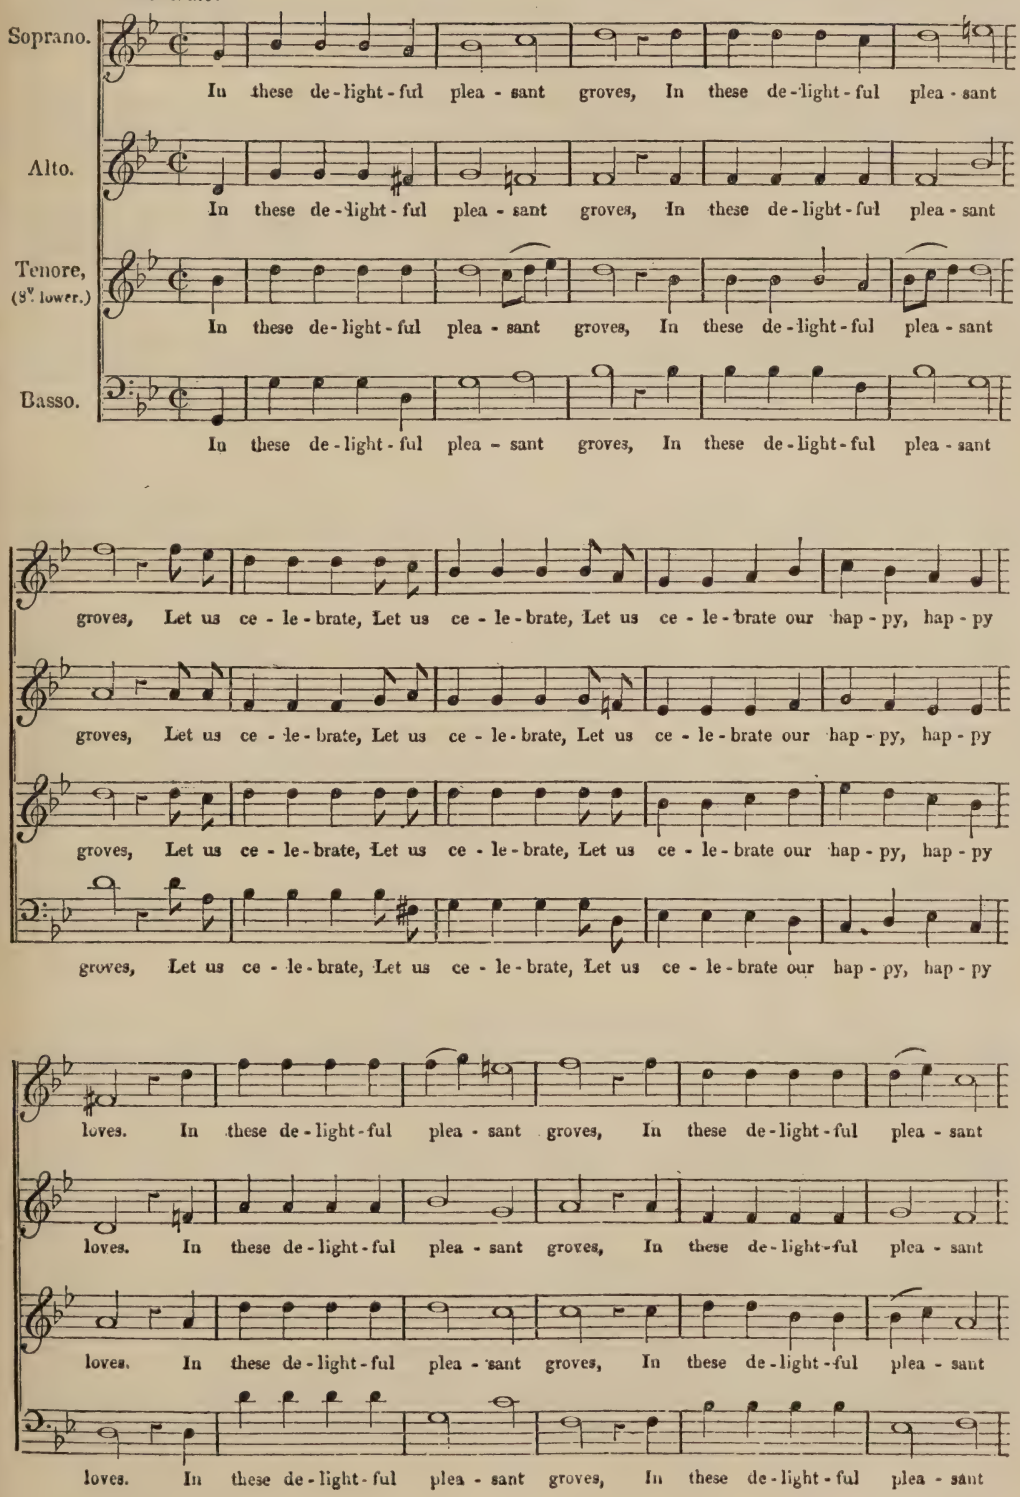
WESTERN MADRIGAL SOCIETY.—This society met to award the prize of ten guineas given by — Evans, Esq., for the best madrigal in imitation of the ancient masters. It will be recollected that this prize was wrested from the hands of Professor Taylor, of Gresham College, it having been discovered that his madrigal to which the prize had been awarded, contained something more than the "imitation of the ancient masters," and that in fact, several bars had been "begged, borrowed, or stolen," from Lucca Marenzio. The composition No. 11, "Wither away thou truant swain," was almost unanimously declared to be the best entitled to the prize; it was found to be the composition of Mr. Nethercliff.—Maestro.

MR. JOHN HULLAH is continuing his system of instruction in singing on the Wilhelm method, at the Apollonicon Rooms, with undiminished success.

In these delightful pleasant Groves.

PURCELL.

Moderato.



Soprano.
Alto.
Tenore, (8va lower.)
Basso.
In these de-light-ful plea-sant groves, In these de-light-ful plea-sant groves, Let us ce-le-brate, Let us ce-le-brate, Let us ce-le-brate our hap-py, hap-py loves. In these de-light-ful plea-sant groves, In these de-light-ful plea-sant

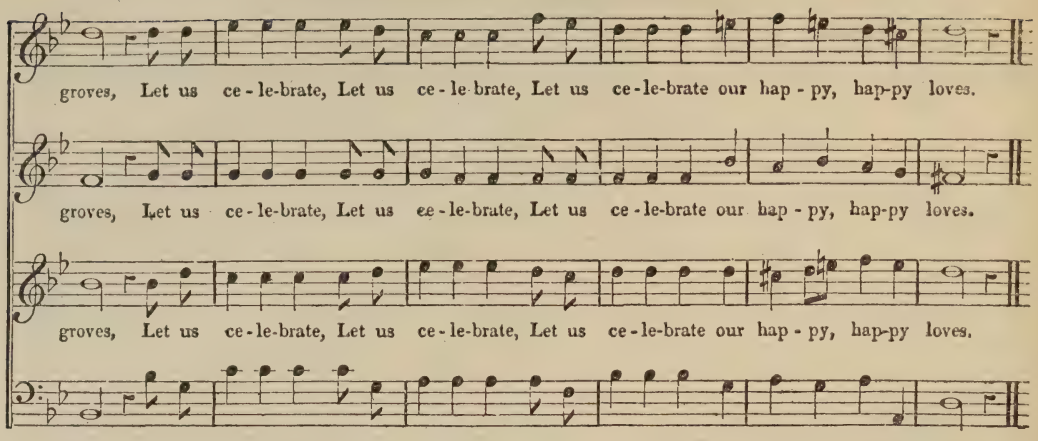
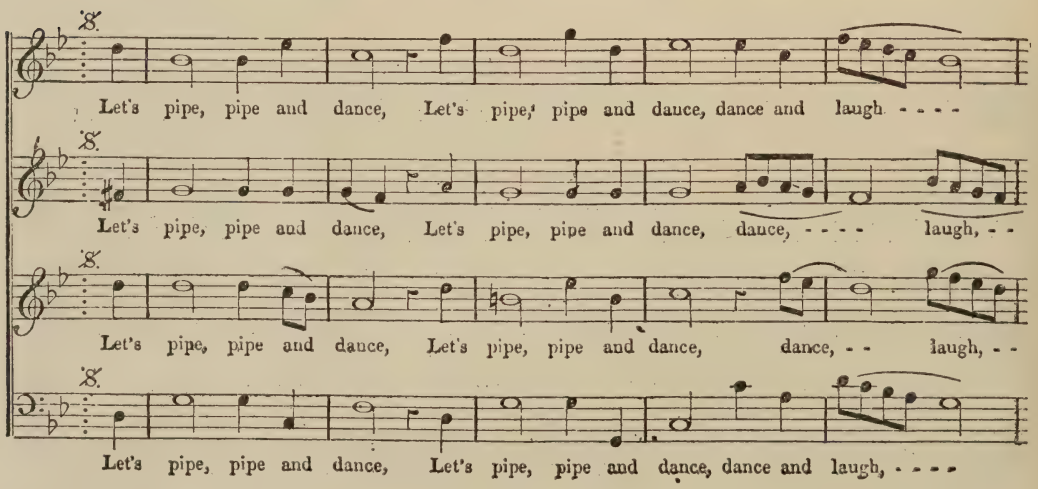
IN THESE DELIGHTFUL PLEASANT GROVES.—Purcell.



groves, Let us ce-le-brate, Let us ce-le-brate, Let us ce-le-brate our hap-py, hap-py loves.
groves, Let us ce-le-brate, Let us ce-le-brate, Let us ce-le-brate our hap-py, hap-py loves.
groves, Let us ce-le-brate, Let us ce-le-brate, Let us ce-le-brate our hap-py, hap-py loves.
groves, Let us ce-le-brate, Let us ce-le-brate, Let us ce-le-brate our hap-py, hap-py loves.



Let's pipe, pipe and dance, Let's pipe, pipe and dance, dance and laugh - - - -
Let's pipe, pipe and dance, Let's pipe, pipe and dance, dance, - - - - laugh, - -
Let's pipe, pipe and dance, Let's pipe, pipe and dance, dance, - - laugh, - -
Let's pipe, pipe and dance, Let's pipe, pipe and dance, dance and laugh, - - - - laugh, - - - - laugh, - laugh and sing;

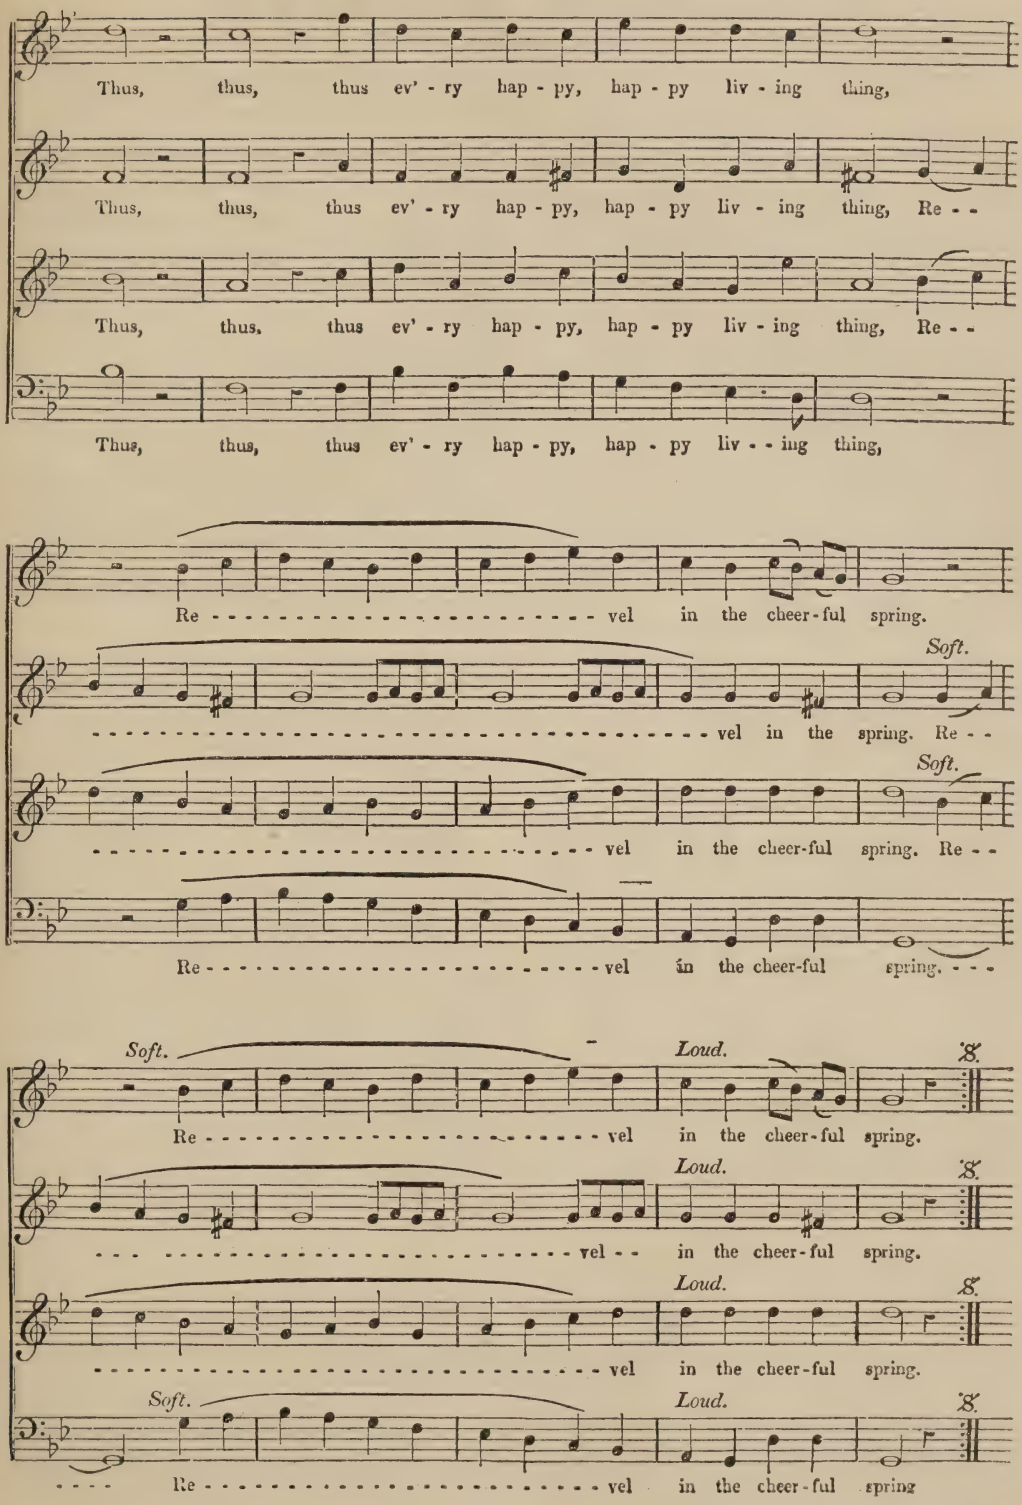
- - - laugh, - - - - - laugh, - - - - and laugh, and laugh - - - and sing;
- - - laugh, - - - - - laugh, - - - - and laugh, laugh - - - - and sing;
laugh, - - - - laugh, - laugh and sing;



Thus, thus, thus ev' - ry hap - py, hap - py liv - ing thing,
Thus, thus, thus ev' - ry hap - py, hap - py liv - ing thing, Re - -
Thus, thus, thus ev' - ry hap - py, hap - py liv - ing thing, Re - -
Thus, thus, thus ev' - ry hap - py, hap - py liv - - ing thing,
Re - vel in the cheer - ful spring.
Soft.
- vel in the spring. Re - -
Soft.
- vel in the cheer-ful spring. Re - -
Re - vel in the cheer-ful spring. - - -
Soft.
Loud.
Re - vel in the cheer - ful spring.
Loud.
- vel - - in the cheer - ful spring.
Loud.
- vel in the cheer - ful spring.
Soft.
Loud.
- - - - Re - vel in the cheer - ful spring

J. ALFRED NOVELLO,

69, DEAN STREET, SOHO,

Is now the agent for the sale of the under-mentioned Valuable Works,
To be had also at Messrs. SIMPKIN & MARSHALL'S.

SINGING FOR THE MILLION. Part I, 88th thousand. A Practical Course of Musical Instruction. 1s. 6d.

SINGING FOR THE MILLION. Part II.—Containing numerous Exercises in Imitations, Fugues, and Canons. 2s. 6d.

MUSICAL GRAMMAR.—Cloth, 4s.; calf, 5s.

The above, in Two Parts, stitched, at 1s. 6d. each.

FIFTY MELODIES FOR CHILDREN. 6d.; stiff covers, 9d.

PSALM AND HYMN TUNE BOOK, for Use in Congregations and Classes, arranged for Three Voices. 4d.

A SELECTION OF PSALMS AND HYMNS, arranged for one or two Treble Voices, and additional Bass Voice, by the Chevalier Sigismund Neukomm. 6d.

BIBLIOTHEQUE ELEMENTAIRE DE CHANT: Two Volumes of Songs for Children, with Accompaniment for the Pianoforte, and ornamented with Engravings.

Vol. I. contains Songs for Two Voices. Vol. II. contains Songs for Three Voices. Price each, 5s.

MAINZER'S GUIDE FOR BEGINNERS IN PIANOFORTE PLAYING, 5s.

SONATAS for the Pianoforte, by Beethoven, with the Fingering, 1s.

SONATAS, by Mozart, 2s.

ELEMENTARY STUDIES, or First Exercises, by Bartini, dedicated to his Daughter, Part I. 1s. 6d.

STUDIES, by Bertini, dedicated to the Royal Academy of Paris, Part I. 1s. 6d

MAINZER'S CHORUSES, 1d. each.

PART. I.—1. Praise.—2. Psalm CVII.—3. The Cuckoo.—4. The Village Chimes.—5. Independence.—6. I've travelled among unknown Men.—7. God is every where.—8. Temperance.—9. Invitation to a Redbreast.—10. The Call to Prayer.—11. Stanzas to my Child.—12. Infant's Prayer.

PART II.—13. Blowing Bubbles.—14. Super Flumina Babylonis.—15. Prayer.—16. Shepherd Boy.—17. The Sea.—18. Contentment.—19. Fraternity.—20. Night Song.—21. Consolation.—22. Hymn.—23. The World we have not seen.—24. Psalm XV.

PART III.—25. The Mountaineer.—26. Man.—27. The Linnet.—28. Pull all together.—29. The Orphan's Prayer.—30. Peace, Hope, and Rest.—31. Psalm XIX.—32. Heaven.—33. Come, Soul of Song.—34. Sea Song.—35. Barcarole.—36. The Farewell.

The above Parts, 1s. each or the whole in cloth, 4s.

The following at 1d. each.

"Farewell, Scotia;" "My Own Green Isle;" "How beautiful upon the Mountains;" Tyrolese Mountain Song, and Canon for Three Voices; "Freedom; "Gipsy Chorus," by C. M. von Weber; "Music;" "Thanksgiving;" "Rule Britannia;" Luther's Chorale and "Song is the Voice of Feeling;" "The Charm of Life," by Beethoven; "Forest Song," by Von Weber; "Sunrise," by P. Von Winter.

MAINZER'S MUSICAL TIMES. Old Series. 320 pages of Letter-press and 9 valuable Musical Compositions, wrappers, 3s. 6d.

Ditto, with the Second Series, 13 numbers, containing 16 additional Compositions, 4s. 6d.

THE PILGRIMS AT THE HOLY SEPULCHRE, of Metastasio, a religious Cantata for Five Solos and Chorus, with Accompaniment for the Harp or the Pianoforte, composed by Naumann. Price 5s.

Chorus parts of the above, for Three Voices. 4d.

Ditto, for Four Voices. 6d.

PRAYER OF THE ISRAELITES, from Rossini's Opera, Mosè in Egitto. 6d.

ROLAND'S MARCH OF THE PYRENEAN MOUNTAIN SINGERS, arranged for Four Voices and Pianoforte Accompaniment, by Jacob Mainzer. 6d.

ADDRESS on Singing, as a powerful auxiliary in the moral and religious education of the people. 3d.

ESSAY ON MUSIC. An Address to Mainzer on inviting him to Leven, with account of Demonstrations at Loch Lomond and Burns' Monument. 4d.

A SKETCH of the Life and Labours of Joseph Mainzer, translated from the French. 6d.

NOVELLO'S CHORAL HAND-BOOK. Sacred Series. Book I. contains the whole of the Chorus Parts in Handel's Oratorio of the Messiah, each Part, 2s. 6d.

Any part or chorus may be had singly at 1½d. per page.

Book II. contains a selection of pieces from various authors.

I will arise	Creyghton
Sanctus	Child
O pray for the peace of Jerusalem	Child
Praise the Lord, O my soul	Child
Lord, for thy tender mercies	Farrant
Hide not thou thy face	Farrant

(To be continued.)

Price—Canto, 6d.; Alto, 6d.; Tenor, 6d.; Bass, 6d.

BOOK III. BAXTER'S HARMONIA SACRA.

Part I.—Collection of introductory sentences, chants, responses, sanctuses, &c. with Jubilate, Gloria in Excelsis, and Nunc Dimittis; selected by the Rev. J. Baxter, M.A.

Part II.—Containing 208 Psalm and Hymn Tunes (adapted to a selection of Psalms and Hymns compiled by the Rev. E. Davies and the Rev. J. A. Baxter, M.A.)

The whole carefully revised by V. Novello.

Price—Canto, 5s.; Alto, 5s.; Bass, 5s.

MENDELSSOHN'S CHORALS, from "ST. PAUL."

"Sleepers, awake, a voice is calling," (4 voices)

"To God on High be thanks" (4 voices).

"To Thee, O Lord, I yield my spirit" (4 voices).

Each Pianoforte score, 1s., 4 vocal parts, 3d.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

EOLIAN PITCH PIPES.

The Proprietors have the pleasure of announcing that they have succeeded in applying the Electro-plating Process to these much approved instruments, and are prepared to supply them plated with Pure Silver and Pure Gold; also, in superior German Silver, as usual. Any note in the octave may be had; also, Diatonic Sets of Eight Pipes, and Chromatic Sets of Thirteen Pipes. The tongues being made of a peculiar compound metal, which is highly elastic, and not liable to rust, are warranted to maintain their pitch. Sold by J. ALFRED NOVELLO.

BRIEF CHRONICLE,

Continued from page 2.

The Grand Musical Festival of the Lower Rhine will be this year held at Cologne, on the first and second days of Pentecost. The orchestra of more than 2,000 performers, under Henri Don, first chapel-master of the Cathedral.

The Sacred Harmonic Society produced an oratorio, "The Death of Abel," by Mr. Perry, the leader of their society, on the 17th. The work was well received, but the room was far from full.

Mr. Mainzer is still in Edinburg and is about to proceed to the Highlands for the formation of classes. The good folk of Scotland are in hopes to determine Mr. Mainzer to remain amongst them even should he not be a successful candidate for the Edinburg professorship of music.

There is a new oratorio, "The Deliverance of Israel from Babylon," which is being published in monthly parts. The music is by an Englishman, Mr. William Jackson, of Masham. This is a bold undertaking for a young musician, but judging from the works which he has formerly published, one which he will creditably complete.

At the Ancient Concerts during the last month, the following choral works have been produced.

Under the Direction of Earl Howe.

Chorus, "Gloria in Excelsis"..... Hummel.
Chorale, "O magnify the Lord," (1597)... Eccard.
Chorus, "Hark! the Angels' voice" ..... Himmel.
" "The dead shall live"..... Handel.
" "Gird on thy sword" (Saul)..... Handel.

Under the Direction of Prince Albert.

Chorale, (1544)..... I. S. Bach.
Quartett and Chorus, "Qui fredda sta"... Graun.
Chorus, "He rebuked the Red Sea"..... Handel.
Motett, "Ave Verum" ..... Mozart.
Selection from Twelfth Mass "Kyrie and Gloria"..... Mozart.

Under the Direction of Lord Cawdor.

Aria and Coro, "Qui presso al mio Gesu" I. S. Bach.
"Magnificat"..... Mozart.
Chorus, "Ye sons of Israel," (Joshua)..... Handel.
Coro, "Non sdegnare"..... Gluck.
Churus, "How excellent," (Saul)..... Handel.

Under the Direction of the Duke of Cambridge.

Coronation anthem, "The King shall"... Handel.
Selection from Mass in C..... Cherubini.
Chorus, "Immortal Lord"..... Handel.
Chorus, "The many rend the skies"..... Handel.
Chorus, "O, sing praises"..... I. S. Bach.

The Habits of Professed Musicians.—Most men who have been remarkable for longevity have been fond of music. Professed musicians, with all their eccentricities and their constant residence in great cities, free living and late hours, will be found to have the advantage over persons of every other profession. It is an exhilarating recreation, that always furnishes company in solitude, relieves weariness, and dispels gloomy thoughts. Instances of suicide amongst musicians are comparatively very rare: although some have met with sad reverses, yet scarcely can an instance be found of cruelty remaining in the breast of a real musician—his soul is all harmony. I could never bring myself to encourage a father to chide his son for losing his time at a musical instrument. I like the simplicity of Lavater's maxim—"Keep at least three paces from him who hates bread, music, and the voice of a child."—Musical World.

Mr. George Cooper, organist of St. Sepulchre's, has been appointed "organist and singing master" at Christ's Hospital.

Choral Fund.—The annual concert of this institution took place on the 24th. We understand that fourteen widows, independently of orphans, are now receiving support from its funds; pensions are also granted to many of its infirm and afflicted members.

Rome.—They are about to erect a monument in that city to Palestrina, the regenerator of the religious music of the sixteenth century.

Haydn and Sheridan.—During the peace of Amiens, Sheridan and Haydn were rival aspirants to the honour of a seat in the National Institute of France. Haydn being the successful candidate, Sheridan publicly expressed his indignation at the choice the Institute had made. Haydn, when he heard how ill the orator bore his disappointment, sent him a letter of consolation, in which he begged him to consider that it was no wonder a German composer should have made a more acceptable overture than a British senator.—Maestro.

Oxford Festival.—Great exertions are being made to render the approaching musical festival at Oxford, a most imposing and brilliant one. Sir H. R. Bishop has engaged many of the most eminent vocal and instrumental performers now in England. Handel's Messiah will, we believe, be the only complete sacred composition performed.

Thalberg has announced a morning concert, for Tuesday, May 28th, at the Hanover Square Rooms.

Sabilla Novello gives an operatic performance and concert at the Princess's Theatre, on the 30th of May, in which she will be assisted by Sivori and a host of talent.

Sacred Harmonic Society.—The Creation was performed on the 31st instant; principal vocalists, Madame Caradori Allan, Hobbs, and Staudigl.

Royal Society of Musicians.—Handel's Messiah will be performed for the benefit of this highly useful Society on Wednesday, June 5, by the eminent talent engaged at the Ancient Concerts.

Dr. Calcott's Celebrated Trio.—Dr Callcott's well known trio to the beautiful words "Forgive, blest shade, the tributary tear," is said to have been composed while on a visit to the Isle of Wight. Certain it is that the words were taken from an epitaph on the tomb of Mrs. Berry, in Brading, in the same island, not far distant from St. John's, and may be seen in the churchyard to this day. The poet's name is entirely unknown. Dr. Callcott's music is admirably adapted to the words. He seems to have been sensibly alive to the pathos so happily expressed therein; and it is not too much to say, he hath conferred an immortality on the poet's verse by enshrining it in one of the emanations of his refined and creative genius.—Vide "Brettells' Hand-book to the Isle of Wight."

CONCERTS FOR THE CURRENT MONTH.

May 30. Miss Sabilla Novello, Evening, Princess' Theatre
M. Mühlenfeldts, Evening, Princess' Concert Room
Mrs. Anderson, Morning, Opera Concert Room
31. Creation, Evening, Exeter Hall
Miss Byfield, Evening, Marylebone Institution
June 1. Moscheles and Ernst, Morning, Hanover-square
3. Messiah, Morning, Hanover-square
Fifth Societa Armonica, Evening, Hanover-sq.
4. Blagrove's 2nd, Evening, 18, Mortimer-st.
5. Messiah, Evening, Hanover-square
6. Alexander's Feast, Hanover-square
7. John Parry, Evening, Hanover-square
Macfarren and Davison's 3rd, Evening, Princess' Concert Room
10. Mme. Dulcken, Morning, Opera Concert Room
Sixth Philharmonic, Evening, Hanover-square
11. Marras, Morning, Hanover-square
Miss Burfield, Evening, Hanover-square
12. Case and Blagrove, Evening, Hanover-square.
13. Cipriani Potter, Morning, Hanover-square
14. Benedict's, Morning, Opera House
18. Blagrove's 3rd, Evening, 18, Mortimer-street.
21. Sixth Societa Armonica, Evening, Hanover-sq.
24. Mr. and Mrs. Seguin, Morning, Hanover sq.
Seventh Philharmonic, Evening, Hanover-sq.
25. Sterndale Bennett, Evening
27. François Cramer, Morning, Hanover-square

NOW IN THE COURSE OF PUBLICATION,

NOVELLO'S CHEAP MUSICAL CLASSICS.

THE series will contain a variety of established Classical Works, engraved in the best style, in longway music quarto size, with a separate Accompaniment for the Organ or Pianoforte. The Alto and Tenor parts will be put into the G cleff, for the greater facility of the general reader, and each Volume will contain one work complete in itself. No curtailment has been made from the original Folio Editions, but of each Volume has been fixed on the anticipated sale of a very large number of copies, and it is hoped that the price, together with the beauty of the work, will ensure for it general patronage.

The extremely Low Price

Volumes 1 to 16 contain HAYDN'S MASSES, with the Accompaniment, by VINCENT NOVELLO.—No. 1, 6s.; 2, 5s; 3, 4s. 6d.; 4, 5s.; 5, 6s; 6, 5s. 6d.; 7, 3s. 6d.; 8, 2s.; 9, 5s. 6d.; 11, 2s 6d.; 12, 4s. 6d.; 13, 4s.

Volumes 17 to 34 contain MOZART'S MASSES, with the Accompaniment, by VINCENT NOVELLO.—No. 1, 3s. 6d.; 2, 3s. 6d.; 3, 3s. 6d.; 4, 3s.; 5, 3s.; 6, 3s. 6d.; 7, 3s. 6d.; 8, 2s. 12, 8s. 6d.

Volume 35, SPOHR'S "LAST JUDGMENT," an Oratorio, the Accompaniment by VINCENT NOVELLO, price 7s. 6d.

Volume 36, WEBBE'S ANTIPHONS AND MOTETTS, (first published in 1792), with separate Accompaniment, by VINCENT NOVELLO, price 7s.

TO BE CONTINUED.

NOVELLO'S EDITION OF THE WORKS OF

FELIX MENDELSSOHN BARTHOLDY.

A HYMN OF PRAISE.—(Lobgesang) First Symphonia Cantata for Voices and Instruments, arranged with an Accompaniment for the Pianoforte, by the Author, 21s.—The separate Vocal Parts, 8s.; Orchestral Parts, 70s.; The full Score, ; Arranged as a Duet for Pianoforte, .

N.B. The Solos and Duets may be had detached.

"AS THE HART PANTS."—The 42nd Psalm for Soprano, Solo, and Chorus, arranged with an Accompaniment for the Pianoforte by the Author, Op. 42, 10s. The separate Vocal Parts, 5s.; Instrumental Parts, 15s.; the full Score, 18s.

"WHEN ISRAEL OUT OF EGYPT CAME."—The 114th Psalm, for Chorus, eight Voices and Instruments, arranged with an Accompaniment for the Piano by the Author, Op. 10s. The separate Vocal Parts, 8s.; Orchestral Parts, 10s.; the full score, 15s.

ST. PAUL, an Oratorio; the words selected from the Holy Scriptures, with an Accompaniment for the Pianoforte, arranged by the Author, Op. 36, 32s. The separate Vocal Parts, 20s. the separate Orchestral Parts, 70s.; the full Score, 80s.; the Choruses arranged as Duets for the Pianoforte, 18s.; in three Books, each, 6s.

The following Pieces may all be had singly.

1.	The Overture, as a Duet, arranged by the Author	4	0
3. 4.	{ To God on high be thanks And the many that believed }	1	6
6.	Men, brethren, and fathers (Stephen's Song)	2	0
7.	Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets	1	6
8.	Stone him to death (Chorus)	2	0
11.	Happy and blest are they	2	0
12.	Consume them all	2	0
13.	But the Lord is mindful of His own	1	6
16.	Sleepers, wake, a voice is calling (Chorale)	1	0
18.	O God, have mercy	2	0
20.	I praise thee, O Lord (Air and Chorus)	2	6
25.	Now we are ambassadors (Duettino)	1	0
26.	How lovely are the messengers (Chorus)	2	0
27.	I will sing of thy great mercies	1	6
29.	O thou the true and only light (Chorale)	1	0
30. 31.	{ But Paul and Barnabas For so hath the Lord (Duet) }	2	0
35.	Oh! be gracious, ye immortals (Chorus)	2	0
36.	Know ye not that ye are His temple	2	0
40.	Be thou faithful unto death (with Violoncello Obligato)	1	6
43.	See what love hath the Father	1	6

THREE MOTETS for Treble Voices, Op. 39, THREE ANTHEMS for Treble Voices, composed for the Convent of Trinita da Monte, at Rome, with an Accompaniment for the Organ or Pianoforte:

1	Veni, Domine (G minor) three voices	2	0
	The separate Vocal Parts of ditto	1	0
2	Laudate Pueri (E flat) three voices and Chorus, trebles	3	0
	The separate Vocal Parts of ditto	1	0
3	Surrexit pastor (G major) Duet and Quartet	3	0
	The separate Vocal Parts of Ditto	2	0

Adapted to the Psalms for the use of English Cathedral Service, by T. A. Walmisley.

1	Hear my prayer—Ps. 102, v. 1, 2	2	0
2	O praise the Lord—Ps. 103, v. 21; Ps. 113, v. 2	3	0
3	O Lord, thou hast searched—Ps. 139, v. 1, 6, 7, 8, 13	3	6

AVE MARIA, Op. 23, for eight voices, with Accompaniments for two Clarinets, two Bassoons, Double Bass, and Organ, full score, 5s.; the separate Parts of the same, 3s. 6d.

DA PACEM DOMINE, GRANT US THY PEACE, for four voices and Orchestra.—Pianoforte Score, 2s.; Separate Vocal and Orchestral parts, 3s. 6d.

London:—Printed by THOMAS RICHARDS, 100, St. Martin's lane, in the Parish of St. Martin, Middlesex; and Published by J. ALFRED NOVELLO, at 69, Dean street, Soho, County of Middlesex.

pp
We come to be soothed with Thy espress.
come to be soothed . . with Thy mer - - ci - ful
pp
Soothed . . . with Thy
cres.
heal - - ing; The dews of the night . . cure the dim.
cres.
heal - - ing; . . . The dews of the night . . cure . . the cres.
cres.
mer - ci - ful heal - ing; The dews of the night cure the cres.
Ped. *
f wounds of the day; . . We come, our life's
f wounds of the day; . . We come, . . our life's
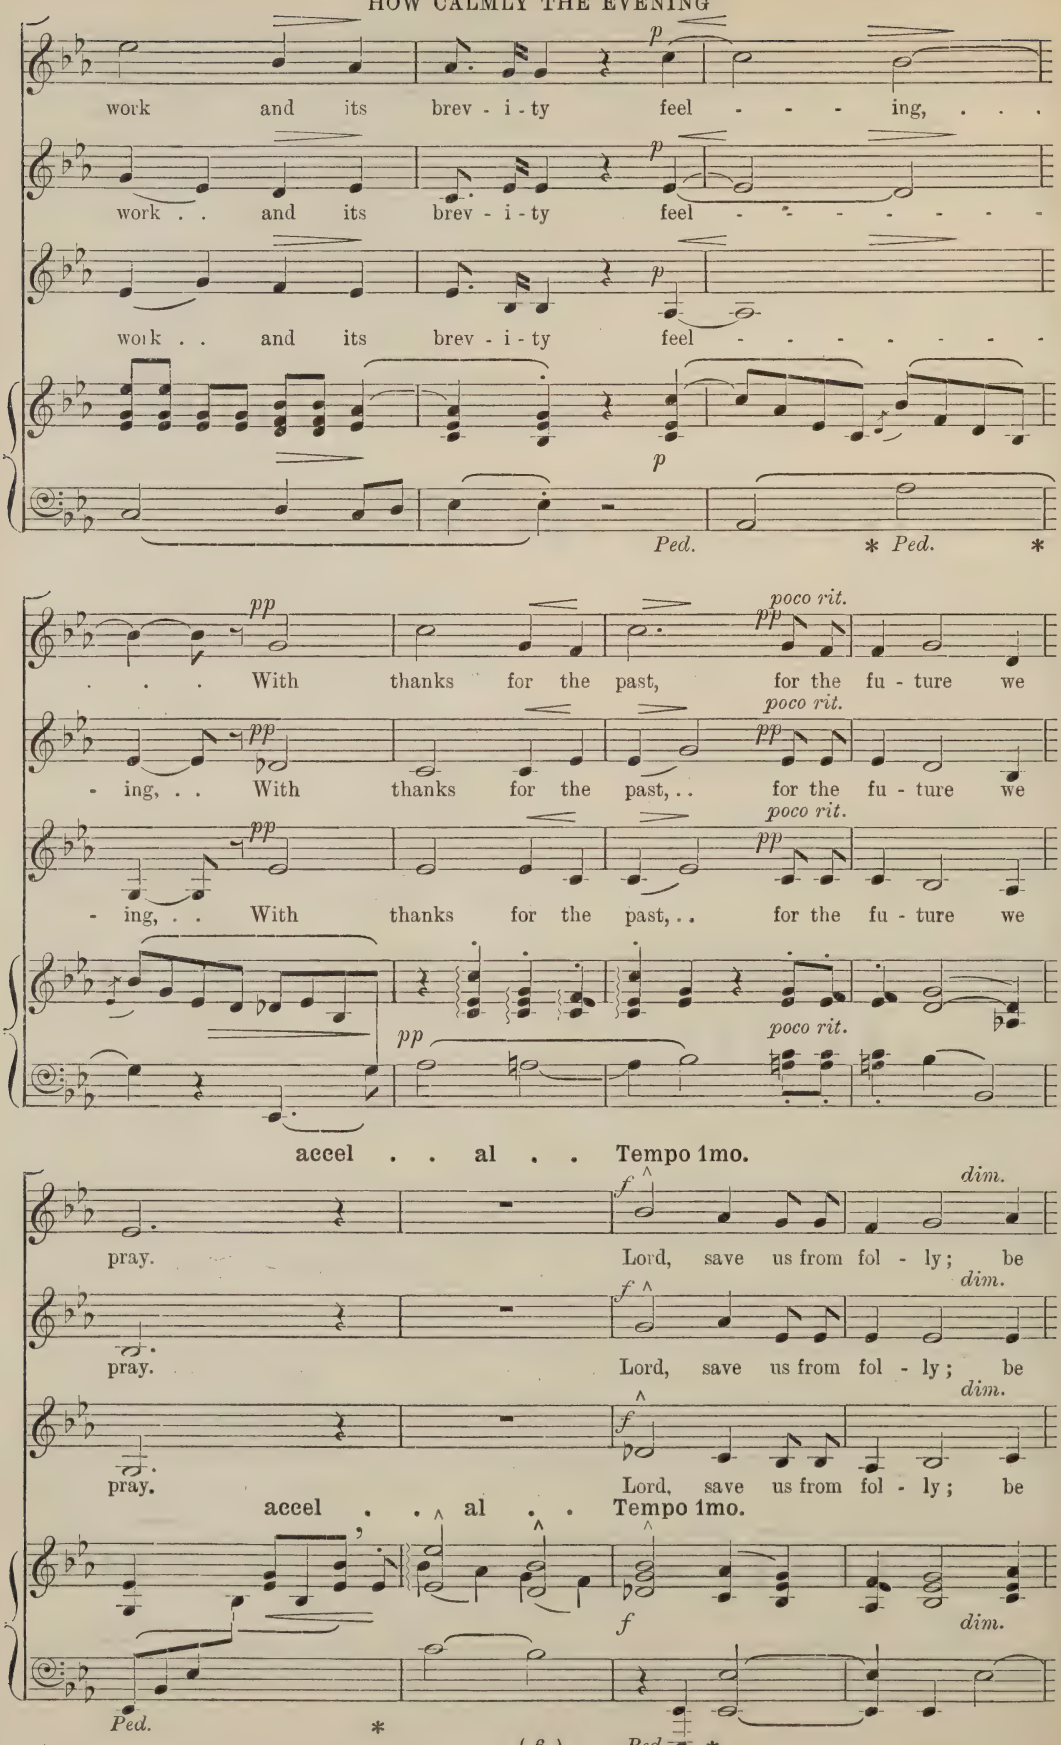
f wounds of the day; . . We come, our life's . .
f
Ped. *



work and its brev - i - ty feel - - - ing, . . .
work . . and its brev - i - ty feel - - - - - - - -
work . . and its brev - i - ty feel - - - - - - - -
p
Ped. * Ped. *
. . . With thanks for the past, for the fu - ture we
- ing, . . With thanks for the past, . . for the fu - ture we
- ing, . . With thanks for the past, . . for the fu - ture we pp
poco rit.
accel . . al . . Tempo 1mo.
pray. Lord, save us from fol - ly; be pray. Lord, save us from fol - ly; be pray. Lord, save us from fol - ly; be f
dim.
Ped. * Ped. *

p with us in sor - - row; . . . Sus - tain us in
p
with us in sor - - - - row; . .
p
with us in sor - - - - row; . . . Sus - tain, sus -
p
Ped. *
cres.
f work till the time of our rest; When cres.
f
Sus - tain us . . till the time of our rest; . . . When cres.
f
- tain us till . . . the time . . of our rest; . . When cres.
f dim. molto
p earth's day is o - ver, may hea - ven's to - mor - - row . .
dim. molto
p earth's day is o - ver, may hea - ven's to - mor - - - - -
dim. molto
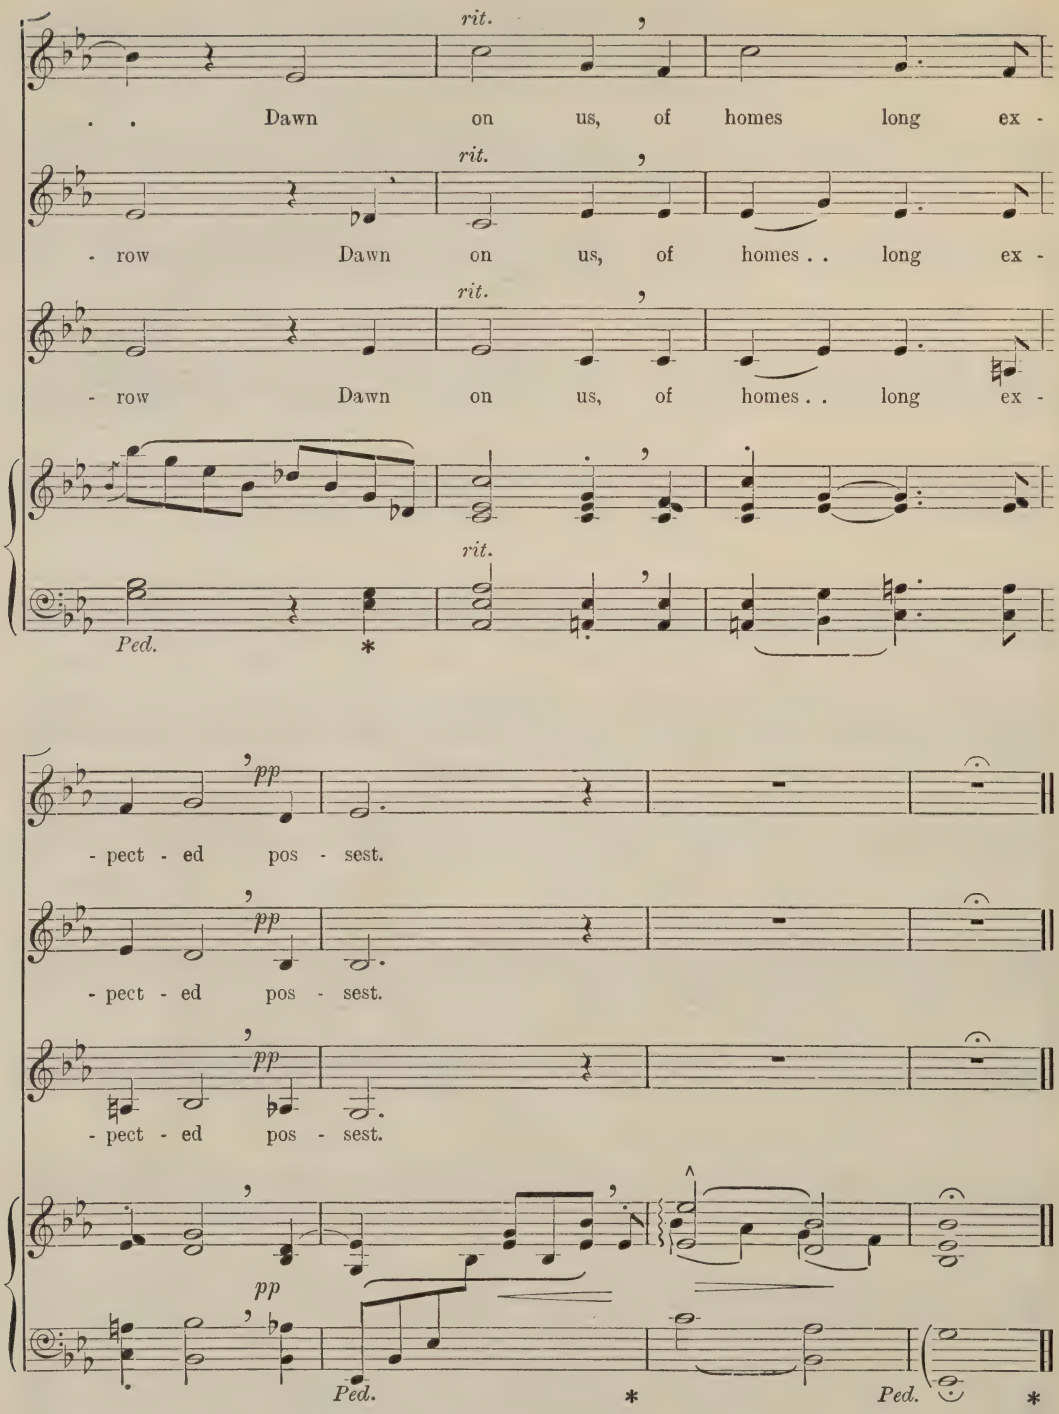
p earth's day is o - ver, may hea - ven's to - mor - - - - -
dim. molto
p
Ped. *
Ped. *



Also published in Novello's Tonic Sol-fa Series, No. 2495.

advertisement, after which it spreads through the country, viâ the imitative instinct, like a catchword. How this intensive advertising is managed is not generally known, so we pass on the following information from an article entitled 'Creating a Song Hit in Three Weeks,' which appeared in a recent issue of the Advertiser's Weekly:

> The story of how 'Brown Eyes, why are you Blue?' rose so rapidly to its present proud position of 'best-seller' is both interesting and instructive, inasmuch as it throws light on a branch of publicity about which, apparently, little is known, and proves also that a concentrated publicity plug—which is rarely attempted with one song only—really does bring results.

'Concentrated publicity plug' is good. Let us see how it is worked:

> Firstly, it may be explained that every big music-publishing house has, as a sort of publicity back-bone, two important departments—the professional and orchestral. When the 'plug song' has been selected it is the duty of these departments to see that the song reaches the public ear viâ two mediums—firstly, through the various music-hall and revue artists, and, secondly, through the bands and orchestras.

The article goes on to explain that formerly a publisher made the mistake of hawking too many wares at once. The motto now is: 'One song at a time, and plug it hard.' Thus, in the case of 'Brown eyes, why are you blue?':

> The professional and orchestral staff got busy according to custom, and in addition to this personal touch, some four thousand free copies of the song were mailed to professional artists, and more than five thousand sets of band parts distributed to dance, café, restaurant, and cinema orchestras throughout the country. Twelve full-page advertisements also appeared in the professional journals.

Five thousand sets of band parts distributed free among restaurant and cinema bands! This accounts for much that we suffer at their hands. No wonder customers go out into the night humming a wretched tune, and helping it to become a 'winner'—not because they like it, but because the plug has driven it well and truly home. But even this is not all:

> Simultaneously, the publicity matter was on its way to the trade. More than two thousand copies of a special circular letter were posted to dealers, and these were followed up by the firm's House Magazine, which gave details of artists and bands who were using the number, and thus creating a demand. Leaflets, bearing a few bars of the song, were issued to the number of a hundred thousand to dealers, for distribution among their customers.

The result of this vast expenditure of effort and money was that 'Brown Eyes' became popular in three weeks. What the Advertiser's Weekly does not mention is the length of time it retained its popularity.

The main point, however, is that, when discussing the relative popularity of such things as 'song hits' and real music, the public should realise that (1) the 'hit' is almost invariably due to gigantic propaganda; (2) it remains a hit for a very short time; and (3) of the large number of songs and dances boosted in this way only a very small proportion make a substantial return. Everybody is aware of the one that succeeds, but they know nothing of the many failures. (We saw recently in an American journal an estimate of the proportion of successes and failures. We forget the figures, but we remember they made a surprising and heartening show.) Compare the costly and fitful 'hit' with the piece of classical music that, unaided by 'plugs,' makes and retains a place in the affections of hundreds of thousands of folk, and is even able to keep that place through successive generations. Thus, are there any products of the 'concentrated publicity plug' that, in regard to popularity and sales, can hold a candle to a good stack of pieces by Handel, Bach, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, and modern composers such as Raff, Dvorák, German, Elgar, Rachmaninov, Saint-Saëns, and many others? No; the jazz and 'song hit' cut a poor figure, despite the fact of about one per cent. putting a fortune into the pocket of thin composers. Popularity in the real sense of the word—lasting and widespread—goes to good music; the other sort rarely receives more than a feverish vogue, produced by a frantic and costly boost that has never been necessary in work of good quality.

THE HEATHER FESTIVAL AT OXFORD

By Frank Howes

Who was William Heather that he should be honoured with a week's Festival? Neighbour of Byrd, associate of Gibbons, contemporary of Dowland, yet himself only a humble singing-man of Westminster, he was one of the benefactors of music in England, and more particularly at Oxford, where, during the first week of May, members of Portrait by [J. S. Sargent.

SIR HUGH ALLEN

The present Heather Professor

the University, citizens, and distinguished musicians from all over the country met to celebrate his name in the most appropriate manner possible—with music. Music and the Church have both had many faithful servants who have failed to win Heather's measure of immortality, which he owes to the combination of three factors. Though a person of no worldly consequence, he won the affections of the eminent Camden, headmaster of Westminster School and a famous antiquary, the regard of the no less eminent Savile, mathematician and provost of Eton, and the esteem of Thomas Tompkins, organist of Worcester and last of the great madrigalists, who dedicated to him the twenty-fourth of his 'Songs of 3, 4, 5, and 6 parts.' His association with Camden was very close—he nursed him in illness*; he took him into his house in a later illness†; he also boarded some of the Westminster boys in his house; he accompanied Camden on his visits to Savile at Eton; he became one of Camden's heirs, and was sole executor of his will; in the year before Camden's death, i.e., in 1622, he acted as his ambassador to the University. It is this last episode in Heather's career which laid the foundations of his fame.

Sir Henry Savile had just (October, 1621) founded the Chairs of Geometry and Astronomy, and Camden was anxious to do the same for the study of Ancient History. Being unable through ill-health, which we have already seen dogging him, to come in person, he sent Heather, who on May 17, 1622, stood as the representative of the foremost scholar of the time, who was also Clarence King of Arms, and for him handed over his benefaction to the University. The University, to mark its appreciation of the gift, of its own accord made Heather a Doctor of Music honoris causa. The Vice-Chancellor of the time wrote to Camden in these terms:

> 'WORTHY SIR,—The University returns her humble thanks to you with this letter. We pray for your health and long life that you may live to see the fruits of your bounty. We have made Mr. Heather a Doctor of Music, so that he is now no more Master but Doctor Heather. The like honour for your sake we have conferred on Mr. O. Gibbons, and made him a Doctor too to accompany Dr. Heather. We have paid Mr. Doctor Heather's charges of his journey, and likewise given him the Oxford courtesy—a pair of gloves for himself and another for his wife. Your honour is far above such things. And so, desiring the continuance of your loving favour to the University and to me your servant, I take my leave.'

This was probably the first honorary doctorate of music conferred by the University, and it is interesting to observe that in conferring it, the University added to its generosity by accepting in lieu of the statutory exercise—Heather was no composer—Orlando Gibbons's Motet, 'O clap your hands'—or perhaps the one composition was allowed to do double duty for the two doctors. Anyhow, 'O clap your hands' is described as Heather's 'Commencement Song.'

Moved with emulation of his friends Savile and Camden, and with gratitude to the University for an honour which certainly added to the esteem in which he was held, Heather himself, on May 5, 1626, proposed to Convocation the foundation of a Chair in Music. He prescribed as the duties of the occupant a terminal lecture, and a weekly practice of singing and playing, which showed, as Sir Hugh Allen pointed out in his oration, that Heather realised that the best way to learn music is by doing it, and that a little theory to a lot of practice is the right proportion. These duties have not always been faithfully carried out during the last three hundred years, and while Crotch, the first Principal of the R.A.M., was Heather Professor, he came to Oxford only once a year, to play the organ at the Encaenia. Sir Hugh Allen claims, however, that the

Photo by] [Oxford Gazette Illustrated.

FOLK-DANCING IN NEW COLLEGE GARDENS

* Camden's Diary, 1601. 'Febricitavi sed convalui curante Heathero.'

† Ibid., 1609. 'Morbo gravissimo corruptus . . . et peste in proximis aedibus quassante translatus ad aedes Heatheri curante doctore Gifford convalui.'

weekly practices of the Bach Choir and the Orchestral Society are now fulfilling Heather's intentions to the letter.

The Bach Choir practices are indeed nowadays an important feature of University life, as the Public Orator had testified at an earlier stage in the celebrations, when presenting three distinguished musicians for honorary degrees. Of Sir Hugh Allen, the present Heather Professor, and of the Bach Choir, which he conducts, the Public Orator said in sonorous Latin:

'Quantum Hugoni Allen nostra iuventus, quantum nos seniores debeamus, ipse pater testari gaudeo; testentur alii qui virgam eius reverentur, vocem metuunt. Ad Museum Scientiae Naturalis die Lunae advesperascente proficiscamur. Quid videmus, quid audimus? Qui concursus Academicorum civiumque, omnis aetatis, utriusque sexus, libellos sonorum notis signatos in manibus gestantium . . . in ore nescio quid praeclarum ex Iohannis Sebastiani choralibus. Saepe vidi cives Parcorum palis se applicare, si forte ex longinquo caelestes sonos exciperent.'*

The degree ceremony, at which Sir Henry Wood, Dr. Charles Wood (Professor of Music at Cambridge), and Mr. J. B. McEwen (Principal of the R.A.M.), received honorary doctorates, and the Heather Oration which followed, formed the central celebration of this Commemoration. It had been hoped that Mr. Frederick Delius would also receive the honorary degree, but he was not well enough to come to Oxford to take it. Immediately after the oration the Oxford Elizabethan Singers sang 'O clap your hands,' and various anthems and madrigals, including two by Richard Nicolson, the first Professor, and a contributor to 'The Triumphs of Oriana.' Dr. H. C. Stewart, the University Choragus, then dramatised one of these ancient 'weekly practices.' True to Heather's instructions, he had brought one or two singing boys with him, who were joined by three men, and Nicolson's anthem was rehearsed. The boys were told that theirs was a strepitus nefandus, and they were bidden suavius cantare, and one qui pulsat terram pedibus was told he must keep time without resorting to such a device. Latin as the language of instruction in music, however, seems not to have persisted very long, for we find Antony Wood, the Oxford antiquary of the 17th century, writing very caustically of the large audiences which deserted philosophy and divinity to hear a lecture on music in English, with illustrations.*

As, owing to the national Strike, the concerts could not be noticed in the daily press, it may perhaps be desirable to give them here a fuller criticism than would otherwise be necessary.

The Festival opened on Sunday afternoon, May 2, with an organ recital in the Cathedral by Dr. H. G. Ley, who played works by four Oxford men—Stainer, Parry, Basil Harwood, and W. H. Harris. In the evening, also in the Cathedral, a cappella music was sung by the combined choirs

Photo by] [Oxford Gazette Illustrated.

THE SWORD DANCE

* Translated: How much our young people and how much we seniors owe to Sir Hugh Allen, I who am a parent am only too glad to testify: let others testify also who have a healthy respect for his baton and a dread of his voice. Let us repair to the Museum on a Monday evening. What do we see and hear? What a gathering of citizens and members of the University, of all ages and both sexes, with music copies in their hands, and upon their lips some great work of John Sebastian! I have often seen citizens pressing up against the Park railings to catch, if possible, some of the heavenly sounds from afar.

* For the facts of Heather's life, and the history of music at Oxford, I am indebted to Sir Hugh Allen, who kindly lent me the MS. of his oration.

of New College, Magdalen, and Christ Church, conducted in turn by their respective organists, Drs. W. H. Harris, H. C. Stewart, and H. G. Ley, who also contributed each an organ solo. This was Dr. Ley's last appearance as organist of Christ Church, which, like Dr. Lloyd before him, he has left in order to take up the precentorship of Eton. His successor, Mr. Noel Ponsonby, also played an organ solo—a movement from an Organ Sonata of Basil Harwood, another ex-organist of Christ Church. The music, except for a little Bach, was all by academic composers. Cambridge was saluted with Motets by Stanford and Charles Wood, and then followed anthems and motets by Ouseley (1825-99), Croft (1677-1727), Crotch (1775-1847), Lloyd (1849-1919), and the three conductors.

S. S. Wesley, the fiftieth anniversary of whose death fell a fortnight earlier, was represented by his Introduction and Fugue in C sharp minor, played on the organ by Dr. Harris. All this music was dignified and good of its kind, and though it was not all equally interesting as music, it was worth including in a Festival which aimed at setting forth the development through three centuries of music at Oxford. Dr. Harris's new Motet, 'Faire is the Heaven,' however, was something more than this; though its idiom is harmonic and quite unlike that of the Elizabethans, it caught, as they did, the 'felicitie' and the splendour of those days, as embodied in Spenser's burning words.

The next performance, which took the form of an orchestral concert, given by the City of Birmingham Orchestra and conducted by Mr. Adrian C. Boult, himself a Christ Church man, was also devoted to the works of Oxford composers. But the musical environment of Oxford, it seems, may produce surprisingly diverse fruits. Six out of seven works were modern, yet were in as many different styles and idioms, in which the elder men showed themselves to be the radicals and the younger the conservatives. Neo-academicism has gone to school in France, apparently, for here was R. O. Morris, a professor of counterpoint, giving us a Toccata and Fugue in the style of 'Les Six,' only with greater dryness, more rigid logic, and without their redeeming touch of impudence. Two songs for soprano and orchestra (sung by Miss Dorothy Silk) showed that Dr. Ernest Walker has not been uninfluenced by post-Brahmsian composers—Debussy and the 'juxtaposition' school. Dobell's 'Sleep Song' is a poem meant to be read, not recited, still less sung, and though in this, as in 'Summer Rain,' an atmosphere is created which Dr. Walker caught, the general effect was somewhat finicking and indeterminate; there was the old freshness which characterises all that he writes, but not the old certainty of touch. Butterworth's beautiful idyll, 'The Banks of Green Willow,' in the neo-modal idiom, was the most completely satisfying piece of modern music in the programme, though Balfour Gardiner's 'Overture to a Comedy' is jolly enough in a boisterous style. Variations on an Original Theme, by Guy Warrack, though not very robust music, had something simple to say, and said it with a sure handling of the orchestra. The Finale of a Symphony by H. M. Strickland-Constable, in the idiom of Elgar, had a certain spaciousness of effect that was lacking in the rest of the music, which was cast in the smaller forms. The only exception to this was the 'Oxford' Symphony of Haydn; it was also played in the Sheldonian Theatre on July 7, 1791, when the composer came to Oxford and received an honorary doctorate. The Symphony was played on this occasion with an admirable crispness that only comes from regular training and uniform discipline.

The first of the two choral concerts given by the Bach Choir was held in the Sheldonian Theatre on the Tuesday afternoon, Sir Hugh Allen conducting, and the programme consisting exclusively of Bach. Two Motets and the Latin Magnificat revealed differences in Bach's musical character that are apt to be overlooked in the uniformity of his style. No one can pretend that 'The Spirit also helpeth us,' which Bach wrote for the funeral of Rector Ernesti, whose death he cannot have mourned, is an inspired work. The singers might perhaps have made a greater difference of vocal colour when they came to the chorale section, but nothing would make it more than a 'fine official document.' It was accompanied, as in Bach's own time, by strings doubling the voices of the first choir and reed instruments the second, and was conducted by Mr. W. K. Stanton, the accompanist of the Bach Choir. 'Sing ye to the Lord' ought to have been thrilling, for it was sung with no lack of virtuosity, but as in other choral works of huge scale (e.g., Beethoven's Mass in D) the mind is apt to topple over after scaling some of the heights. On this occasion what upset the choir, as well as the listener, was the fact that a quartet of soloists was asked at short notice to sing the part of the first choir in the middle section, and, not knowing the music, gave a feeling of uncertainty to the whole and corrupted the intonation of the choir, which, however, showed considerable recuperative powers. One point of detail was perfectly done: the opening subject was given out by the first choir and hammered in with the sharp strokes of the second, without breaking its shape or interrupting its flow. In the Magnificat Bach's imagination is vividly kindled, but not in a way that makes performance a chronic hazard. 'Sing ye to the Lord' has been described as 'a song of thanksgiving almost too colossal for the shouts of mankind, more fitting to be sung by choirs immortal'; in the Gloria of the Magnificat the voices of mankind are adequate to raise their new-made sung of praise, and the choir performed its part with no uncertain sound. Variety was provided in this programme by Miss Silk's songs and the second Orchestral Overture in D.

Wednesday's concert was again orchestral, and was provided by the Oxford Orchestral Society, under its own conductor, Mr. Maurice Besly. The programme included Franck's Symphony, and other works in the ordinary repertory. It was well performed, with something like brilliance, but if it is not ungracious to say so, a rougher performance would have been more welcome, if there had been less professional stiffening. The critic grows a little weary of hearing the same orchestra in every town in England; gaps, of course, must be filled and anæmic performance avoided at all costs, but the 'safety first' principle can be carried too far by amateur orchestras, which would do better to take as their motto 'a poor thing but mine own.'

By no means a poor thing was Mr. Besly's own scena, 'Phaedra,' for soprano (Miss Joan Elwes) and orchestra. Prof. Murray's translation is more luscious than the original Euripides, and Mr. Besly's music is not much more Greek in feeling than is Strauss's in 'Elektra,' but the luscious parts of the music were not overdone, though the scoring was too thick for the voice. It is not strongly original, yet it avoids pretentiousness and is effective in performance. Another gratifying piece of home-made music in this concert was the performance of the solo part in Dohnányi's Concertstück in D, for violoncello and orchestra, by Mrs. Dorothy Stewart, wife of the Choragus, herself an Oxford Mus.Bac. and an able violoncellist.

On the Thursday afternoon came the Commemoration ceremonies, and in the evening at the Playhouse the first of three performances of a triple bill of opera and ballet was given. 'The Shepherds of the Delectable Mountains,' being a comparatively recent work by Vaughan Williams, made a fitting introduction to his new work, which we were to hear on the following day. Bach's 'Coffee and Cupid' again justified itself as an opera, though the performance was not so good as that of the B.N.O.C. 'The Gentleman Dancing Master' is a mime-ballet based on the play of Wycherley, fitted to music of Purcell. It was performed at the last Oxford Festival in 1922, by members of the University. This time, except for the principal male parts, which were taken by undergraduates, it was danced by students of the Royal College of Music, and conducted by Mr. Guy Warrack. The three together made a good and varied entertainment.

The most important musical event of the Festival was the first performance of Vaughan Williams's new oratorio 'Sancta Civitas,' at the second Bach Choir concert on Friday. This is a work which, though not very long, is set out on a big scale for tenor and baritone soloists, chorus, semi-chorus, distant chorus, and large orchestra. Recent developments of the composer's peculiar idiom are here carried out with extreme boldness, which in the first section of the work justifies itself, even at a first hearing.

The music has the sweep of the 'Sea' Symphony, combined with a brilliance begotten of its discordancy. The choral writing is mostly homophonic, and moves continually in solid blocks of parallel intervals—unisons, six-fours, and fifths. The second section, a lament over Babylon, is rather more contrapuntal, but the general impression of the work is that the chorus must be regarded as a canto fermo against which the orchestra puts two main streams of grinding counterpoints. As in 'The Shepherds of the Delectable Mountains,' the consecutives and discords on voices are beautiful, but on instruments they become more than one can bear without some oases where the mind can pause for a moment in its search for resolutions. For, after all, we cannot even yet accept chords of the four-three or four-two as self-evident perfect concords, especially when they grind against a chromatic semitone in the bass. On the other hand, those who have practised the work, both singers and players, do almost achieve that frame of mind, and there was quite enough evidence to show that once those axioms have been grasped the propositions that follow have lucidity and cogency. The beginning and the ending certainly reflect the splendour of the text, which is taken in the main from the Apocalypse, and affirm the faith of a sceptic in accordance with the quotation from Plato which is prefixed to the score. The lack of counterpoint in the old sense, in which melodies reinforced one another at various points, and so produced a sense of forward motion, gives to 'Sancta Civitas' the static feeling of an oil painting; its energy is unrhythmical, and its unceasing discordancy makes it one long suspension. The composer will probably convert us to all his harmonic mannerisms, but a weakness that is likely to remain—this criticism is frankly tentative—is the lack of an organic rhythm, which is always the danger in making flexible settings of prose. The work, in spite of its great difficulty, was well known and well sung, though it must be confessed that a composer is asking a great deal who makes sopranos enter pianissimo on high G's on an explosive sound like Bab-(ylon). True intonation was maintained, too, through all the serried series of consecutive triads. Parry's 'L'Allegro ed Il Pensieroso' followed. It is full of all that composer's faults and virtues, sequences and repetitions, uninspired passages, and a difficulty in marrying music to immortal verse that insists on moving very rapidly while all the time throwing out provocative images that demand leisurely musical development. On the other side there were tunes—capital tunes, some bluff, some sweet, some with the freshness of English folk-song, and all warm-hearted—and a fine dissolving climax. Mr. Arthur Cranmer's singing of the solo part was rather dry for this rich poetry and gracious music, while, on the other hand, Miss Joan Elwes's fresh voice and good diction suited the part for soprano solo. Between the two choral works Bach's fifth 'Brandenburg' Concerto was played, with undergraduates in two of the solo parts.

A display of folk-dancing in New College gardens on the Saturday afternoon completed the programme of the Festival so far as Oxford was concerned. The final ceremony will be the unveiling of a tablet to Heather in Westminster Abbey, where he lies buried near his friend, Camden.

It is a sobering—and perhaps salutary—thought that the 'higher' activities of humanity, like music, cannot be carried on without the goodwill of those who wrestle at closer quarters with Nature for the bare subsistence of us all. It is, however, satisfactory to record that with the exception of the postponement of the ceremony at Westminster and the substitution of two violins for two flutes in the accompaniment of one Bach aria, the programme of the Festival was carried through in its entirety according to plan, in spite of the inconveniences due to the general Strike.

Conducting the combined choirs of the London Diocesan Church of England Temperance Society for the twenty-first consecutive year, at Queen's Hall, on April 19, Mr. Charles A. Puncker received a presentation at the hands of the Bishop of London.

Church and Organ Music

ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

The annual general meeting will be held on Saturday, July 24, at 2.30 p.m.

DISTRIBUTION OF DIPLOMAS

Members and friends are cordially invited to attend the distribution of diplomas to successful candidates at the Fellowship, Associateship, and Choir-Training Examinations, on Saturday, July 24, at 3 p.m. There will be an address by the President, Dr. H. W. Richards, and an organ recital by Mr. G. Thalben Ball, of pieces selected for the January, 1927, Examination. No tickets required.

There will be an informal Conversazione immediately after the organ recital, to which members and friends are invited. Tea and coffee.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

MR. MAUGHAN BARNETT

Mr. Maughan Barnett, at his Westminster Central Hall recital on April 21, gave ample proof of sound musicianship, brilliant technique, a thoroughly artistic temperament, and an evident desire to please more than one element in his considerable audience. Such adaptability, because rather rare, was welcome. Generally, organists play either too much music of the 'classical' order or too much of the other sort. Mr. Barnett's personality, too, established quite early that intangible link between performer and listener which is half the secret of a successful recital. As a rule, the anticipation of hearing an organist from overseas is interesting; the realisation occasionally intense boredom—or worse. In the last few years I have heard several 'guest' players, and I would never dream of hinting that their playing was other than first-rate: somehow, an urgent appointment has usually forced me to leave at about the third item. Anyway, after hearing Mr. Barnett one wanted, so to speak, to take a leaf out of Oliver Twist's book. Here is his programme:

Toccata	Boëllmann
Adagio (Symphony No. 6)	Widor
Minuet	Handel—Martucci
Prelude and Fugue in D	Bach
'Spinning Song'	Mendelssohn
Fantasy on National Airs	Barnett
Berceuse	Barnett
Carillon	Vierne

A not too common reticence in the use of the heavier pedal stops gave welcome clarity to Bach and Boëllmann, but particularly to the 'Carillon,' the pedal part of which is often ruined by a growling 32-ft. (This work, by the by, was rather too deliberately played: certainly slower than Vierne himself takes it.) To Bach, Mr. Barnett imparted brilliance and an infectious energy without a trace of fussiness; for once in a way a concert organist kept within the speed limit, despite a rapid tempo—maintained to the very last note. Nothing short of a miracle, probably, could reconvert us to Mendelssohn's pianoforte Lieder; yet the player nearly achieved the miraculous, the piece being encored and re-played, which is the encore proper. Distinctly on the light side, but none the worse for that, was Mr. Barnett's 'Berceuse'; and his 'Fantasy' (written for the opening of the organ in the Town Hall, Wellington, N.Z.) nearly brought down the house. It would have done so quite had the 'stunt' variations on 'The Men of Harlech,' in four parts for pedals only, come at the end instead of half-way through the piece.

STANLEY LUCAS.

BACH CANTATA CLUB

The three Cantatas given by the Bach Cantata Club in St. Margaret's, Westminster, were No. 161 for contralto and tenor, 'Komm, du süsse Todesstunde,' No. 54 for contralto, 'Widerstehe doch,' and No. 189 for tenor, 'Meine Seele rühmt und preist.' The artists were Miss Margaret Balfour and Mr. Percy Manchester, and Mr. C. Kennedy Scott conducted.

The thirty-third Festival of the Nonconformist Choral Union will take place at the Crystal Palace on June 26, when solo and choral competitions (judged by Mr. Dan Price and Mr. Harvey Grace) will be followed, at 6 o'clock, by a concert given by the choir of four thousand and the full orchestra of the Union, conducted by Mr. Frank Idle, with Mr. J. A. Meale at the organ. Mr. Robert Radford will be the soloist. The programme will include Stanford's Benedictus in B flat, Parry's 'Welcome! Yule,' John E. West's 'All people that on earth,' choruses by Handel, Mendelssohn, &c.

At the two hundred and seventy-second Festival of the Sons of the Clergy, at St. Paul's Cathedral, on May 5, the service was sung to Stanford in A, and the anthem, specially composed for the occasion, was 'Praise the Lord, O my soul,' by Adam Carse. Beethoven's 'Hallelujah' ('Mount of Olives') was announced to follow the sermon, but, in view of the impending strike, the hymn, 'O God, our help,' was substituted, and the service closed with the National Anthem.

Music by S. S. Wesley was a special feature at a service at St. James's, Muswell Hill, on April 17. 'The Wilderness' and other anthems were sung, and organ solos by Wesley were played. It is worth recording that three generations of the Wesley family were present—a nephew of Samuel Sebastian; a great-nephew (who is a bass singer in the choir); and the latter's son, who is the youngest treble.

The choirs of the Congregational Churches of Romsey, Southampton (Avenue), and Winchester have during the past few years combined in an annual Festival. This year the meeting was held at Romsey, on April 27, when 'Judas Maccabæus' was sung. Mr. Herbert Smith, of Winchester Cathedral, conducted, and Mr. P. Withers, of Southampton, was at the organ. The performance was announced to be repeated at Winchester and Southampton.

On the occasion of the Patronal Festival of St. Anselm's, Davies Street, Marylebone, Rossini's 'Stabat Mater' and extracts from 'The Messiah' were performed by the Central London Choral and Orchestral Society, two hundred strong. The soloists were Miss Bessie Jones, Miss Irene Evans, Mr. Mackenzie, and Mr. Watcyn Watcyns. Mr. Percy G. Hart assisted at the organ, and Mr. David J. Thomas conducted.

The 'Unfinished' Symphony, German's Nocturne, a couple of eight-part anthems—Mendelssohn's 'Judge me, O God' and Tchaikovsky's 'Come, O Blessed Lord'—and the Epilogue from 'The Golden Legend,' made up the programme of a successful musical service at St. Bartholomew's, Sydenham, on April 25. Mr. Burnell conducted, and Dr. F. G. Shinn was at the organ.

A new organ (Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper) has been erected in the Parish Church of Skipton, Yorks—a three-manual of twenty-seven speaking stops, and twenty-three pistons and composition pedals. Mr. Charles Stott gave the opening recital, playing Elgar's Sonata, Bach's G minor Fantasia and Fugue, Bairstow's 'Legend,' Harwood's 'Pæan,' Grace's 'Resurgam,' &c.

Mr. G. D. Cunningham gave the opening recital at the dedication of the new organ (Messrs. Conacher) at the Wesleyan Church, Clayton, Yorks, on May 1, his programme including Bach's G minor Fantasia and Fugue, Lemare's 'Hanover' Variations, the 'Ride of the Valkyries,' Franck's A minor Choral, the Widor Toccata, &c.

Part 1 of 'St. Paul,' Gibbons's 'Hosanna to the Son of David,' and extracts from 'Samson' and Gounod's 'Redemption,' were sung by the City Temple Choral Society at Clarendon Road Congregational Church, Watford, on April 24, conducted by Mr. Allan Brown, with Miss Aileen Bransden at the organ.

'The Hymn of Praise' and Rossini's 'Stabat Mater' were sung by the Chesham (Bucks) Choral Society, numbering a hundred, at Broadway Baptist Church, on April 15. Mr. R. B. Green conducted, Mr. W. O. Lacey led the orchestra, and Mr. W. E. Ball played the organ.

A crowded congregation attended a performance of 'Elijah' at St. Austell Parish Church on April 29, by the St. Austell Philharmonic Society, under the direction of Mr. W. Brennand Smith, which was ccompanied by strings, pianoforte, and organ.

Mr. Martin Shaw conducted a successful Hymn Festival at St. Andrew's, Norwich, on April 27. The choir was drawn from four local Churches, and the Tudor Singers also assisted. There was a large attendance.

The Swindon Parish Church Choral Society sang Mendelssohn's 'Lauda Sion' and a miscellaneous programme, on April 13, conducted by Mr. H. J. Edmonds, with Miss D. Higgins accompanying on the pianoforte.

'St. Paul' was sung at Holy Trinity Church, Hove, on May 6 and 9, by the choir, augmented, conducted by Mr. A. A. Yeomanson, and accompanied by Mr. Guy Michell (organ) and Miss Winifred Fry (pianoforte).

A Bach recital by choir and organist took place at St. Andrew's Parish Church, Buckland-in-Dover, on April 28, the choir singing the Cantata 'God's time is the best,' and Mr. T. H. Hill playing organ solos.

'The Creation' was sung by the choir (augmented) of St. Mary's Wesleyan Church, Truro, on April 16, under the direction of Mr. Bertram Lightbown, the choirmaster and organist.

A three-manual organ (Messrs. Conacher) has been erected at Trinity Church, Swansea. Mr. Gatty Sellars gave the opening recital.

At All Saints' Church, Northmoor, Oldham, a new organ was dedicated on April 13, Mr. W. E. Cottrill giving the opening recital.

RECITALS

Mr. B. D. Hylton Stewart, All Saints', Hertford—Voluntary, Stanley; Prelude, 'O world, must I now leave thee?' Brahms; Andante with Variations, Noble; Prélude Elégiaque, Jongen; Toccata in D minor, Bach.

Mr. W. A. Roberts, College Street Baptist Church, Northampton—Overture, Handel-Elgar; Theme and Variations, Faulkes; Fugue in D, Bach; Toccata, Barié.

Mr. Henry Riding, St. Mary Abchurch, E.C.—Fantasia on a Tune by Parry, Stanford; Nocturne, Faulkes; Toccata, Driffill; Postlude on 'Martyrs,' Grace; Religious March, Perelli.

Mr. Vernon Read, St. Mary's, Nottingham—Overture, 'Oberon,' Weber; Bridal March, Parry; Sonata No. 1, Harwood; Fantasy, C. E. Ford.

Mr. John Pullein, St. John the Evangelist, Edinburgh—Toccata, Rheinberger; Pastorale, Franck; Thème Varié, Ropartz; Tuba Tune, Norman Cocker.

Mr. J. M. Preston, Gateshead Parish Church—Fantasia in F minor, Mozart; Lament, Grace; Finale from Sonata, Reubke; Rhapsodie on Catalonian Airs, Gigout; Epilogue, Healey Willan.

Mr. Ambrose P. Porter, Lichfield Cathedral—Fantasia and Fugue on B A C H, Liszt; Prelude, Alan Gray; Fantasia on 'St. Magnus,' Porter; Overture, 'The Fall of Babylon,' Spohr; Benedictus, Reger; Fantasia on 'Heinlein,' Wallace; Choral No. 3, Franck; Elegiac Romance, John Ireland.

Mr. Frederick J. Nott, St. Peter's, Melbourne—Prelude and Fugue in E minor, Bach; 'Die Geburt Christi,' Malling; Last movement, Symphony No. 3, Vierne; Rhapsody No. 2, Howells.

Mr. E. A. Moore, St. Luke's, Manningham—Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; Allegro con grazia ('Pathetic' Symphony), Tchaikovsky; 'The Sea,' H. A. Smith.

Mr. Ernest Mitchell, Grace Church, New York—Symphony No. 7, Widor; Byzantine Sketches, Mulet; Marche Héroïque, Bossi; 'Saluto Angelico,' Karg-Elert; 'Let there be light!' Albert-Doyen; 'Les Heures Bourguignonnes,' Georges Jacob; Rhapsody No. 1, Howells.

Mr. P. J. Mansfield, Pollokshields Parish Church—Chromatic Fantasia in A minor, Thiélé; Toccata on the 'Old Hundredth,' C. Charlton Palmer; Introduction and Allegro risoluto (Symphony No. 2), Guilmant; Two Fantastic Sketches, Stoughton; Variations on the 'Harmonious Blacksmith,' E. T. Chipp.

Mr. A. E. Howell, St. Peter's, Devizes—Prelude, Fugue, and Variation, Franck; Two movements from Trio-Sonatas, Bach; Fantasia on 'Heinlein,' Wallace; Rhapsody No. 3, Howells.

Mr. K. Pearce Hosken, Acton Hill Wesleyan Church—Bridal March, Parry; Rhapsodie No. 1, Saint-Saëns; Introduction and Passacaglia (Sonata No. 8), Rheinberger; Prelude in D minor, Stanford; Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Bach.

Rev. G. S. Holmes, St. John the Evangelist, Upper Norwood—Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Marche Funèbre, Tchaikovsky; Dirge, Attwood.

Mr. Bertram Hollins, Beckenham Congregational Church, Crescent Road—Prelude, 'Come now, Saviour of the Gentiles,' Bach; Evening Song, Bairstow; Agitato (Sonata No. 11), Rheinberger; Prelude and Fugue in E flat, Bach; Scherzo and Passacaglia (Sonata No. 8), Rheinberger.

Mr. J. E. Gomersall, Congregational Church, Reigate—Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Bach; Concerto No. 1, Handel; Grand Chœur in C, Hollins; Coronation March, Tchaikovsky.

Mr. Herbert F. Ellingford, St. George's Hall, Liverpool—Offertoire on 'Filii et Filiæ,' Guilmant; Finale (Sonata Eroica), Stanford; Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; Overture in D, Smart; Sonata No. 6, Merkel; March for a Church Festival, Best; Finale Jubilante, Arthur W. Pollitt; and a programme of Mendelssohn's Sonatas, Nos. 5, 2, 4, 6, and 1.

Mr. C. E. Blyton Dobson, Derby Road Baptist Church, Nottingham—Allegretto, Wolstenholme; Fugue in G, Rheinberger; Sonata No. 3, Mendelssohn; Le Cygne, Saint-Saëns; Introduction and Passacaglia (Sonata No. 8), Merkel.

Mr. E. T. Cook, St. John's Wood Presbyterian Church—Fantasia and Fugue in C minor, Bach; Fantasia Pastorale, Déodat de Séverac; Prelude, 'St. Mary's,' Charles Wood; Rhapsody, Grace; Prelude and Fugue on B A C H, Liszt.

Dr. M. P. Conway, St. Mary Redcliffe, Bristol—Christmas Pastorale, Maleingreau; Bridal March, Parry; Finale (Sonata in D), Stanford.

Mr. Norman Cocker, Liberal Jewish Synagogue, St. John's Wood Road—Overture to 'Otho,' Handel; Fantasia in F minor, Mozart; Gavotte, Arne; Finale (Symphony No. 3), Vierne.

Mr. A. N. Bulmer, All Saints', Hertford—Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Invocation, Guilmant; Overture to 'St. Paul.'

Mr. Allan Brown, City Temple—Toccata-Prelude on 'Pange Lingua,' Bairstow; Two Easter Chorale Preludes, Bach; Romance in D flat, Lemare; Marche Pontificale, Widor.

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. L. W. T. Arkell, choirmaster and organist, Twickenham Parish Church.

Dr. William Bradley, choirmaster and organist, St. Aidan's Parish Church, Leeds.

Mr. E. J. Duckett, organist, Clewer St. Andrew's Parish Church, Windsor.

Mr. Cecil S. Richards, choirmaster and organist, Hexham Abbey.

In our May number we notified the appointment of Mr. Ernest F. Mather to Holy Trinity, Stroud Green. Mr. Mather informs us that he will go instead to St. Mary Magdalene's, Munster Square, N.W.

Letters to the Editor

CONCERNING BOUGHTON ON BAINES

SIR,—To an amateur musical student of the old school, who has little inclination and less opportunity for becoming acquainted at first hand with alleged music in the so-called 'modern' mode of incoherence and discord, a great deal of the expository comment expended upon it—of which it seems to stand in much need—is more or less incomprehensible.

In the Musical Times of exactly twenty-six years ago—March, 1900—will be found two references to a performance of 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast' directed by the writer, and since that time he has continued to maintain close touch with the best musical effort in his environment, and has also been a fairly constant reader of your journal. During the last two winter seasons he has conducted a small private orchestra of twenty-four members who have met fortnightly in a gentleman's drawing-room for the study of the best orchestral works. Among the works which have been given reasonably adequate readings are: the Symphonies Nos. 4 and 8 of Beethoven, Mozart's G minor, Haydn's 'Surprise,' and Tchaikovsky's No. 6; Suites by Rübner, Massenet, Bantock, and Tchaikovsky; ten or twelve standard Overtures from 'William Tell,' up or down accordingly as Rossini's work may be estimated, and other selections. These things are mentioned to indicate the point of outlook from which this communication emanates.

To such an one, then, the working of the ultra-modern musical mind as exemplified in an article in your March issue by Rutland Boughton, entitled 'A Musical Impressionist,' is astounding, not to say terrifying.

The subject of this article seems to have been a sort of modern musical Arthur Hallam, but, unlike Tennyson who entombed his hero under a veritable mountain of encomium, Mr. Boughton, in his 'In Memoriam,' applies the eulogy with one hand and scrapes it off—not always gently, by any means—with the other.

As a commentary on music, the article seems to be a quite profound disquisition on impressionism in painting. The general conclusion to be deduced from it is that Mr. Baines was a young man of considerable natural talent, who, for some unstated reason, was denied access to the ordinary—and now universal—sources of musical education, or that he voluntarily ignored these, and permitted himself to develop as an aboriginal.

Mr. Boughton remarks that his solid grounding in the works of Haydn and Mozart—mention of Bach is omitted—was 'equal even to the vibration of Beethoven's fires ['vibration of fires' itself is something unusual—modern perhaps, is it not?], but it is permissible to remind ourselves that the young Englishman found a very unsteady foundation on which to build.'

The query at once suggests itself, 'What had happened to Haydn and Mozart?' Were these not available to the 'young Englishman,' or, having been sufficient to support the compass of Beethoven's genius, is it to be inferred that they were unequal to the content of this young talent?

To be sure Mr. Boughton does not 'wish to hinder the appreciation of Baines by comparing him with Beethoven'—which is really handsome of him so far as the latter is concerned—and our double conundrum will have to answer itself.

As to the 'Aboriginal' theory: for a musical talent in over-civilized England to reject the unlimited means of study ready to hand in every direction, is to put itself on the plane of the 'five-year-old' who hides among the shrubbery in the back-yard, in pretence of being the 'Wild man of Borneo.' If the student wishes to make an experiment of value in this direction, let him discard all trappings of civilisation and hie him to the middle of Patagonia, there to evolve as may be.

Mr. Boughton's philosophy of house-planning, moreover, would not be subscribed to by any self-respecting architect. To describe as 'reactionary' an objection to the obliteration of the attractiveness of an otherwise pretty cottage by a 'corrugated iron car-shed' placed beside it, and to say that 'we get used to it [the car-shed] in time, and finally forget its ugliness,' is to proclaim the ascendency of the commonplace and the doom of high endeavour. 'Terrifying' is surely not too strong a word for such a gospel.

Mr. Baines is described as 'unconsciously aware of those formal connections with life' whereby his music has survived the 'tortures of feeling and style' incident to his 'Ugly Period.'

I do not know England directly, most of my life having been spent at a distance of a quarter of the globe's surface from it, but I will venture that there are to-day in that land of culture several thousand young musicians of natural talent equal to that of Mr. Baines, all keenly and consciously enough 'aware of' their 'formal connections with life,' who have steeped themselves in the learning of the Masters, and who have found in that consciousness plus that acquired knowledge, the means of developing themselves towards a sane and none the less vital and interesting musical product.

Would not each and every one of these thousands be better worthy four or five columns of magazine space?

But perhaps Mr. Boughton indulges in satire.—Yours, &c.,

A. E. WHITE.

Vancouver, B.C.

SLOW PIANOFORTE PRACTICE

SIR,—I was much interested in the sensible article in the May Musical Times on 'Pianoforte Playing,' by M. Philipp, but there is one point to which I should like to draw attention.

Great stress is laid on the need for slow practice, but the writer omits to say that slow practice with the same kind of touch as is used for the final playing is worse than useless. I think all teachers will agree that slow practice is imperative, but it must be done with the same kind of touch as will be used when the piece is played at ultimate speed. Let me give an instance: a demisemiquaver passage to be played ultimately at ♩ = 120 will be staccato; this same passage played at, say, ♩ = 60 must still be played staccato in order to obtain the necessary agility when played up to speed.

I trust I have made this point sufficiently clear.—Yours, &c.,

STEPHEN C. CHANTLER.

Oliver House,
Cranleigh, Surrey.

WESLEY AND HORN EDITIONS OF BACH

SIR,—Miss Constance Richardson may be congratulated upon her possession of the original Wesley and Horn edition of Bach's '48.' It is to be regretted that it is undated. Samuel Wesley's daughter Eliza—whom it was my privilege to know well—once told me that her father's attention was first directed to Bach's music about the year 1800 or 1801. His first acquaintance with it was due to the appearance of a few of the '48' in publications by A. F. C. Köllmann (1799) and Dittenhofer (1801-03). Another old friend of mine, the late Dr. Higgs, was of opinion that Wesley and Horn began their edition of the '48' in 1810, and ended it some two or three years later. I see that A. F. C. Köllmann quotes twice from the '48,' viz., on pp. 8 and 17 of the musical illustrations to his 'Essay on Harmony,' dedicated to Dr. Burney, and published by J. Dale, of 19, Cornhill, and 132, Oxford Street, in 1799. William Shield prints the whole of the D minor Prelude (vol. 1, No. 6) on pp. 114-5 of his 'Introduction to Harmony,' published in 1800, by G. G. & J. Robinson, of Paternoster Row.

I, too, should much like to know the date of another Wesley and Horn publication, of which I possess a copy given me a few years ago by one of my pupils, G. M. Moore. This is an edition of the six Bach Trio-Sonatas for organ, arranged by the two editors for performance

> '. . . on the Piano Forte for three Hands. Whoever plays the highest Part is to read the Notes one Octave higher than they are placed on the Staff.'

On the fly-leaf of this interesting old book the first (?) possessor has inscribed her name, 'Miss Scott, May 5, 1809,' and—oddly enough—on the inside of the cover appears another signature, which is very familiar to me—that of 'Eliza Wesley.'

At the time of its publication (by subscription) S. Wesley was residing at 27, Arlington Street, Camden Town, and C. F. Horn at 25, Queen Square. In 1824, Horn became organist of St. George's Chapel, Windsor. He died at Windsor, in 1830.—Yours, &c.,

C. W. PEARCE.

46, Henleaze Avenue, Bristol.

 It may be interesting to add that Miss Wesley had in her possession Bach's autograph MS. of the whole of the second volume of the '48,' written by the composer in 1744. More than once it was my great privilege to be asked to play some of the Preludes and Fugues upon the same pianoforte which had been used by her father for their performance. Early in the 'eighties of the last century this precious Bach MS. was exhibited by my old friend and R.C.O. predecessor, Mr. Matthias E. Wesley, at the close of a course of College lectures on the '48,' given by Sir George Macfarren. Sir George remarked, as he passed his fingers lovingly over the pages Bach himself had written, that he had never more keenly regretted his blindness than at that moment.

RUSKIN AND MUSIC

SIR,—Your contributor in the May issue, writing on the above subject, has omitted to mention what is surely the funniest of all the foolish things that great man said about music at one time and another. It appears that he once heard 'Die Meistersinger,' and afterwards wrote of it as 'the most soulless, sapless, scrannel-pipiest, tongs-and-boniest, topsy-turviest thing ever heard.'

I think this would take a little beating!—Yours, &c.,

28, Hilldrop Crescent, N.7. FELIX WHITE.

BACH & CO., LTD.

SIR,—Your correspondent, Mr. J. W. Sowan, in the May Musical Times, suggests Mozart as the third person in the trinity of the world's greatest composers.

Surely 'the world's three greatest composers' are generally recognised to be Bach, Beethoven, and Wagner, each of whom marked an epoch in music? I venture to think the Musical Times reviewer, referred to by Mr. Sowan, had these in mind. [He had.—EDITOR.]

My list of the twelve greatest composers would agree, mutatis mutandis, with that of Mr. Sowan, but I should want a place for Schumann, which would probably be at the expense of Chopin.

Further, if living composers were admitted, I would go so far as to make a quatuor of the trinity by including Elgar. Certainly those four are my favourites, with Bach an easy first.—Yours, &c.,

L. A. SILK.

6*a*, Allington Road,
Queen's Park, W.10.

[We are unable to insert numerous letters received on this subject; nor can we continue the discussion.—EDITOR.]

MISSIONS v. ORGANS

SIR,—In a clerical paper (the Church of Ireland Gazette) dated March 12, 1926, I noticed the following paragraph, which I think should be challenged by all those interested in Church music:

> 'The World Call is making men and women think. The Dioceses are taking up the Call, and when we read that the Bishop of Salisbury asks for a self-denying ordinance that no organs be installed for five years in order that help may be given for missions, we see how keen he is. He adds: "An American organ will do well enough."'

I wrote the following letter to the Editor of the Gazette:

> 'SIR,—In your issue of March 12, 1926, I notice that the Bishop of Salisbury is credited with much enthusiasm for missions because he asks that no more organs be erected in churches for five years. I do not dispute the Bishop's interest in missions, but his request regarding the erection of organs in churches seems to me merely to show that he sets at nought anything artistic or dignified in our church services, especially when he adds: "An American organ will do well enough." Pursuing this argument to its logical conclusion, one might say that a barn will do well enough for public worship instead of our cathedrals and churches, of which we are so proud. If this is a sample of the methods being employed to make our services more attractive, and to revive the waning interest in the Church, I don't wonder that people prefer the golf links on Sundays. It seems to me, living as I do within a mile of one of the largest C.M.S. centres in India, where I have a chance of seeing the work done, that far too much money is sent abroad at the expense of our own needs. As one keenly interested in Church music, I heartily protest against any idea of further curtailing this already neglected portion of our Church service to provide funds for an enterprise which most laymen, particularly those of us stationed abroad, view with doubt.'—

Yours, &c., J. GODFREY BIRD.

Quetta, India.

AN ARPEGGIO POINT

SIR,—I shall certainly not raise any objection as to the name of the chord I have advocated for pianoforte arpeggio practice. Indeed, I welcome Dr. Wigham Parker's letter as a valuable support.

In choosing to call the chord the dominant major ninth, although one of the dominant elevenths in the minor mode has precisely similar intervals, I was constrained to do so by the necessities of my argument when exhibiting the reasons why this chord should be used at all; why it possessed similar finger shapes to those of the dominant seventh in the other hand.

I quite agree that dominant major ninths are very infrequent in music, compared with the metameric eleventh, and, further, that the common use of the latter chord and that of the diminished seventh, in the major mode, affords some justification for regarding them as chords of the major mode. Personally, I prefer to describe them, when so used, as borrowed discords, and for this reason: we still employ certain scales to present the essential material of the modes, and have not yet adopted (for student use) scales which owe their modification to a blending of the modes. It seemed to me, therefore, additionally desirable to name the chord as I did in order to maintain its relation with a scale from which it could be derived, and at the same time preserve analogy with its already familiar brother chord, the dominant minor ninth.

So far as harmonic explanation goes, my experience, too, is that students negotiate the problems of ninths more easily than they do those of elevenths, and since the whole matter is not one of harmony, but of pianoforte technique, I felt that the simpler the element of harmony was kept, the better it would be. But, as I have already indicated, this is a point for discussion and not for controversy, and I thank Dr. Wigham Parker for raising it.—Yours, &c.,

11, South Molton Street, W.1. PERCY RIDEOUT.

MODERN FRENCH MUSIC

SIR,—In your April issue, 'W. R. A.,' in his review of 'Modern French Music,' tells us he has met no English musician who can appreciate Fauré's music—can really 'enjoy it with gusto.' This is a somewhat obscure statement. Is it possible anywhere to find a person who can enjoy either the whole or indeed the greater part of any composer's output? Even Homer nods, and certainly Bach, Beethoven, &c., are in the same category. If Fauré were an exception it would be a miracle.

Personally the only work by Fauré which I can unreservedly admire is his beautiful A major Sonata for pianoforte and violin, although I would not claim a place for it beside the 'Kreutzer' or Franck's masterpiece.

Talking of the 'Kreutzer' to Cortôt and Thibaud after a recent performance at Bradford, I asked why they had never given us the Fauré Sonata. They replied that they were not sure it would be appreciated, but that they would be only too delighted to play it, as it was one of their favourite sonatas.

At their last visit, therefore, these artists included the work in their programme, but it failed to make any special impression, the general verdict being that the music, while very charming, lacked greatness. The Sonata had been played more than once at my own concerts, so it was not previously an unknown quantity at Bradford. It might be helpful if 'W. R. A.' would furnish us with a list of Fauré's best works.

One great difficulty in the way of appreciation of much modern French music is its erratic formal tendency, and the difficulty of mastering and making clear to listeners the technical, rhythmical problems so prominent in much of Ravel's pianoforte music, to mention one prominent composer of real merit.

To those of your readers who are interested in French chamber music, I would recommend Pierné's fine Sonata for pianoforte and violin, Op. 36, and Debussy's elusive but beautiful Sonata in G for the same instruments.—

Yours, &c., S. MIDGLEY.

12, Oak Avenue,
Bradford.

A NORWEGIAN COMPOSER

SIR,—'B. V.' in a review of new violin music in the May Musical Times, while calling Inga Lærum Liebich a true-born Norwegian, rightly queries whether Liebich is a Norse name. Before she married my brother-in-law Inga Lærum studied pianoforte and composition at the Royal Academy of Music. Later she continued her studies with Norse teachers. Her 'Romance' for pianoforte and violin ought not to have been sent for review. It is not a fair specimen of her work. It was her first attempt at writing a solo piece for the violin, and is one of the least good of her compositions. Edvard Grieg, in past years, had often given her advice and encouragement. He thought very highly of her powers as a musician and composer, and told her publisher that he ranked her best work with that of Agathe Bäcker-Gröndahl, and that much of it showed great originality and charm, and was full of the true Norwegian spirit and idiom. These characteristics at the time Grieg thus expressed himself, shortly before his death, were, he said, as yet rare among Norwegian composers. The statue of Norway's patron saint, St. Olav, erected over the entrance to the Norwegian Legation in Cockspur Street, is the work of Madame Lærum Liebich's brother, Gustav Lærum, one of Norway's finest sculptors. Her married name and mine is Czech.—

Yours, &c., LOUISE SHIRLEY LIEBICH.

15, West Cromwell Road, S.W.

PECCAVI!

SIR,—I thank your reviewer for pointing out the misprints in my Choral Preludes.

The B on p. 16, bar 5, and on p. 17, bar 5, is flat as printed. As to the other slips I cry Peccavi! and find a melancholy satisfaction in indicating a more serious omission which has escaped notice—i.e., in p. 18, line 3, bar 2, L.-H. treble clef omitted.—Yours, &c.,

46*e*, Leinster Square, J. STUART ARCHER.
Bayswater, W.2.

A Bach Festival took place at Sheffield Cathedral on April 27, arranged by the local Music Club. The performers were the Cathedral Oratorio Choir, conducted by Mr. T. W. Hanworth, backed up by excellent soloists. The programme consisted of a couple of cantatas, 'The Sages of Sheba' and 'How brightly shines the morning star,' a portion of the 'St. Matthew' Passion, a Suite for flute, violin, and clavier, a Clavier Concerto, and some organ music.

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Pianist and 'cellist wanted for weekly trio practice, also for practice of violin sonatas.—H. P., c/o Musical Times.

Lady (amateur violinist) wishes to meet pianist for mutual practice. Birmingham district.—MUSIC, c/o Musical Times.

'Cellist (learner) wishes to meet accompanist (good reader) for regular, mutual practice. Also other string players to form trio or quartet. Croydon or district preferred.—CHARLES P. COCKS, 158, Morland Road, Croydon.

Baritone wishes to meet good pianist for practice of classical works. Could also accompany in pianoforte duets.—REGINALD PENDRED, 42, Walford Road, Stoke Newington, N.16.

Violinist (gentleman) wishes to join amateur trio or quartet. Fridays only. West End London.—G. D., c/o Musical Times.

Tenor wishes to meet good accompanist for mutual practice.—P. PARSONS, 2, Felday Road, Lewisham, S.E.13.

The Society of Women Musicians, Chamber Music section, offers special opportunities to good string players during May, June, and July, for the practice of string quartets. Full particulars from Organizing Secretary, 74, Grosvenor Street, W.1.

Sixty Years Ago

From the Musical Times of June, 1866:

SCHUBERT SOCIETY.—The first soirée musicale of this recently formed Society took place on Thursday evening, April 25, under the direction of Herr E. Schubert, at Beethoven Rooms, Harley Street. With a view of spreading still wider a taste for the works of the renowned Franz Schubert, and of cultivating German vocal music, Mr. E. Schubert has set on foot the above Society. He is, we believe, a relative of Franz Schubert. The executants on this occasion were with few exceptions amateurs, forming a choir of about twenty voices, who performed a part-song of the director's, the words by Tennyson; 'The Heath Rose,' by Schumann; 'Ave Maria,' by Henry Smart; Mendelssohn's 'Open Air'; and Mozart's 'Ave Verum.' The result as a first appearance of Herr Schubert's choir was satisfactory, and the audience appeared pleased.

ROMSEY.—On May 10, the members of Mr. Perren's Choral Class repeated the concert of the previous week at the Town Hall. The principal work performed was Prof. Bennett's 'May Queen.' . . . The Overture to 'Don Giovanni' was given, in place of the Overture written for the work itself; but the Pageant music was performed in all its integrity.—We have abridged the above notice from a local paper; but cannot pass without comment anything so glaringly inconsistent as the performance of the Overture to 'Don Giovanni' before a Pastoral Cantata, especially when an Overture to the work is supplied by its composer. In the paper from which we have made the extract we are told that the 'May Queen' opens with a 'beautiful but very difficult Overture, and perhaps somewhat too long for a general audience.' We can scarcely conceive that an Overture, not found too long for a London audience, should prove fatiguing to an audience at Romsey; and as to its being 'very difficult,' there can be little doubt that an orchestra capable of performing the Overture to 'Don Giovanni,' must be fully capable of executing that to the 'May Queen.'

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

The Midsummer term began on May 3, when there was a large influx of new students, the numbers now amounting to considerably over a thousand.

It is satisfactory to record that during the strike only five per cent. of the students were unable to reach the Academy, in spite of the difficulties of transit. Many cheerfully walked long distances, and there was a delightfully competitive keenness evinced in 'carrying on,' by both students and professors.

The half-yearly orchestral concert will be given at Queen's Hall on June 15, under the conductorship of Sir Henry Wood, and practice rehearsals are in full swing. For two reasons alone, these functions may now, without exaggeration, be said to be public affairs. The standard of orchestral playing has of late advanced to almost a professional status, and the concert-going public is recognising this incontrovertible fact.

The success of the opera week at the Scala Theatre last year was so great that arrangements have been made for another week of opera to take place in July, again at the Scala Theatre. Verdi's 'Falstaff,' the outstanding feature of last year's season, will be repeated, the one performance being by special request, and the same cast will be available. Among the other operas to be given will be Humperdinck's 'Hansel and Gretel,' 'Venus and Adonis,' by Dr. John Bull, 'Dross' (a melodrame), by Paul Corder, and, for the first time in England, Wolf-Ferrari's 'L'Amore Medico.' Mr. Julius Harrison will conduct.

It is confidently hoped that the new hall and class-rooms will be formally opened in September, the building operations being well advanced. During the Heather Centenary celebrations at Oxford last month (see p. 537), the honorary degree of Doctor of Music was conferred on the Principal, Dr. J. B. McEwen, and Sir Henry Wood.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The College term opened on May 3, so it is not surprising that the Director's terminal address to the pupils was given in circumstances of great anxiety, tempered with that hopefulness or optimism which seems to be the birthright of every Englishman who finds himself being squeezed into a tight corner. The first few weeks of the term were, naturally, occupied firstly in making arrangements to deal with the troublesome conditions of transport and the inevitable absence of pupils, large numbers of whom were serving in various capacities; and secondly in the readjustment, after the strike, of disorganized lessons and classes. Happily the College is again working as usual, proud to remember that the number of pupils and teachers who stayed away for reasons other than volunteer services was very small, and that no classes were cancelled.

The Heather Commemoration Festival at Oxford (Tercentenary of the Founding of the Oxford Chair of Music) (see p. 537) concerned the College personally, so to speak, Sir Hugh Allen, the Director, being the present Professor of Music, and College pupils, past and present, appearing at several of the concerts and opera and ballet performances. Some distinguished musicians were honoured by the University on this occasion, and we take this opportunity of congratulating Sir Henry Wood, Dr. Charles Wood, and Dr. J. B. McEwen upon their Honorary Degrees of Doctor of Music.

The College has to mourn the loss of two valued and devoted friends, both members of the Council: Mr. R. Finnie McEwen was a great music-lover and a generous supporter of many young Scottish musicians; Lord Stuart of Wortley, the distinguished Parliamentarian, was a keen musical enthusiast and a well-known member of the Magpie (Elizabethan) Madrigal Society.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

It is gratifying to report that the College work both from a teaching and examining point of view was not materially interfered with by the strike. Where necessary, examiners travelled by motor car, and the veteran Dr. Creser went all the way to Aberbeen to conduct the examinations there and at other Scotch centres.

Successful distributions were held at Chester, Wrexham, Luton, and London, where Prof. J. C. Bridge represented the College.

The College Orchestra provided the musical programme at the London University Graduation Ceremony at the Albert Hall, on May 12.

Dr. Horner, Director of Examinations, has left for Newfoundland to conduct the examinations there.

The College Library has received a welcome addition of musical books, &c., from the estate of the late S. S. Martyn.

Mr. H. Llewelyn Howell, who recently joined the College Board, has kindly presented a sum of ten guineas to be awarded as an Orchestral Prize.

The College has received its quota of the Alfred Gibson Memorial Fund. The interest on the amount will provide an annual prize for violin and viola playing.

The Queen's Hall orchestral concert will take place on Saturday, June 26, and the Operatic Class performances of 'The Princess of Trebizonde' at the Scala Theatre on July 8 and 9 (evening) and 10 (matinée).

A memorial to the late Chairman of the Board, Sir Frederick Bridge, has recently been unveiled in Glass Parish Church, Aberdeenshire. It takes the form of a handsome mural tablet in carved English oak, 5-ft. 3-in. high by 3-ft. 6-in. broad, and bears the following inscription :

> 'To the glory of God, in affectionate remembrance of Sir John Frederick Bridge, C.V.O., M.A., Mus. Doc., of Westminster Abbey and Cairnbarrow Lodge, who gave the Organ to this Church and for many years enriched its worship with his music, and who, having lived a full, generous, and happy life, entered into his rest, 18th March, 1924, and was buried at Wallakirk in this parish. This memorial was erected by his neighbours and friends.
>
> "Thy statutes have been my songs
> In the house of my pilgrimage."'

Trinity College of Music (London centre) annual prize distribution took place at Central Hall, Westminster, on May 13. Lady Margaret Boscawen presented the prizes and certificates. Dr. Warriner presided. The Secretary (Mr. T. Lester Jones), in his report, stated that the entries for local examinations in 1925 were larger than ever, despite trade conditions and financial stress. London, he continued, had done remarkably well in winning nine out of twenty-nine Exhibitions presented by the College for practical and theoretical subjects for candidates in the British Isles. He urged students not to neglect their general education for music, but to apply all they learnt to its study. It would enable them the better to understand and interpret the message music is designed to convey.

Dr. Warriner referred to the many advocates of examinations and competitions, some preferring one to the other; but, in his opinion, both were equally good. Those with the fighting instinct elected to compete with—and beat—others; the studious were content to improve themselves and ascertain their position by examinations. Teachers were directly benefited either way, as, without these incentives, slackness was often apparent, and there was real danger of falling into a groove.

Prof. Joseph Bridge, Chairman of the Board and Director of Studies, in a spirited address exhorted young and old to encourage the practice of stringed instruments. The pianoforte was excellent, said Prof. Bridge, and every one should learn to play it; but he deplored the falling off in ensemble playing, and the disappearance of the old village orchestras which helped the cause of music a century or two ago.

A vote of thanks to Lady Boscawen was proposed by Mr. C. N. H. Rodwell. In responding, her Ladyship referred appreciatively to the excellent work being done by the teachers.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD: AWARD OF MEDALS

The following candidates gained the gold and silver medals offered by the Board for the highest and second highest honours marks, respectively, in the final, advanced, and intermediate grades of the Local Centre Examinations in March-April last, the competition being open to all candidates in the British Isles:

Final Grade Gold Medal, Douglas L. Hawkridge, Derby centre (pianoforte); Final Grade Silver Medal, Kathleen F. Fookes, Plymouth centre (pianoforte); Advanced Grade Gold Medal, Betsy Lupton, Middlesbrough centre (violin), and Phyllis M. Hooper, London centre (pianoforte) (these two candidates gained an equal number of marks); Advanced Grade Silver Medal, Edna Jamieson, Manchester centre (pianoforte); Intermediate Grade Gold Medal, Bozena T. Stanek, Folkestone centre (violin), and Ethel J. Newman, Great Malvern centre (pianoforte) (these two candidates gained an equal number of marks); Intermediate Grade Silver Medal, Gladys E. R. Godfrey, Exeter centre (singing).

MUSIC IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The following is a summary of musical activity at Public Schools during the Easter term, 1926 :

At CATERHAM SCHOOL Vaughan Williams's ballad-opera, 'Hugh the Drover,' was produced with excellent results. Dialogue was substituted here and there for music, without impairing the artistic effect of the work as a whole. The composer was present at one of the performances, and expressed his delight at the singing, staging, and acting.

At CHARTERHOUSE the annual symphony concert by the Guildford Symphony Orchestra (augmented by Queen's Hall wind) included Beethoven's Symphony No. 5; Mozart's Horn Concerto in E flat; 'Till Eulenspiegel'; 'Die Meistersinger' Overture; and the 'Casse-Noisette' Suite.——At the school concert on March 29, the orchestra performed Minuets by Mozart, and 'La Boutique Fantasque' Suite by Rossini-Respighi. The choir sang Woodman's 'Falmouth' (eight parts) and Purcell's 'Sound the trumpet' (tenors and basses). Miscellaneous solo items, and the singing of songs and rounds by the school completed the programme. Other events included a song recital by Mr. Steuart Wilson, three chamber concerts, and an informal sing-song.

The CLIFTON COLLEGE orchestral concert programme contained Beethoven's seventh Symphony, the 'Hebrides' Overture, and smaller items. There were preliminary lectures to prepare the school for this programme. At the school concert the choir sang Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens' and a chorus from the 'Christmas' Oratorio. Bach's Concerto for pianoforte and strings, in D major, was also performed.

At ETON COLLEGE, on March 14 and 27, concerts were given by a contingent of the London Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Basil Johnson. The more important works performed were: Symphonies: 'Unfinished' (first movement), Haydn's No. 1 (first movement), Tchaikovsky's 'Pathetic' (second and third movements), Beethoven's No. 5 (first and second movements), Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E (soloist, Mr. Albert Sammons), and Bruch's Violin Concerto in G (soloist, Miss May Harrison); Overtures: 'Ruy Blas,' 'Tannhäuser,' and 'Figaro.'——At the Musical Society's concert, on April 5, the programme consisted of a Bach Chorale, 'Awake, thou wintry earth,' Schumann's Pianoforte Concerto (first movement), the 'Figaro' Overture, a solo and chorus ('Populous Cities') from Handel's 'L'Allegro,' the Choral Fantasia from 'Tannhäuser' (arranged by Percy Fletcher), and other items.

In GIGGLESWICK Chapel, on Good Friday, a performance of 'Parsifal,' Act 1 (Transformation and Grail Music), was given under the direction of Mr. Davies. At the end of term concert the choir sang German's 'Merrie England.'

Hurstpierpoint College Choir gave an excellent recital of sacred music on mid-Lent Sunday in St. Martin's Church, Brighton. The preparations had been carried out by Mr. H. A. Hawkins. In addition to plainsong psalms and hymns, the following music was performed: Kyrie from Mass in C sharp minor (for two choirs), Widor; 'My heart ever faithful,' Bach; Tantum Ergo (Motet for two choirs), Widor; unaccompanied quartet, 'King Jesus hath a garden' (words and melody from the Dutch, harmonized by Charles Wood); two-part treble song, 'Doubt not Thy Father's care,' Elgar; and 'The Night is come,' Maurice Besly. The Church was packed to full seating capacity.

At the Leys School, on February 2, a song and pianoforte recital was given by Miss Joan Elwes and Mr. Harold Rutland.

At Malvern College, on February 28, Miss Margaret Deneke gave a recital, with comments, of Schumann's 'Carnaval.' A programme of part-songs and pianoforte music was performed by members of the school on March 13; and at the end of term a concert performance of 'The Mikado,' directed by Mr. F. H. Shera, took place. A short summary of the story was given before each Act.

Marlborough College Music Competitions took place on March 23, and were judged by Mr. J. F. Shepherdson (Leys School). Events—which occupied most of the day—were various, and included pianoforte solos, house glees, solo-singing, duets for two pianofortes, pianoforte sight-reading, stringed, wood-wind, and brass instrumental solos, organ-playing, chamber music contests, and instrumental composition.

At Oundle a recital was given by Miss Carrie Tubb and Mr. Harold Samuel, on January 25. The programme of the orchestral concert by the City of Birmingham Orchestra included Beethoven's Symphony, No. 7, the 'Peer Gynt' Suite, the 'Siegfried Idyll,' and Rimsky-Korsakov's 'Scheherazade.' The conducting was shared by Mr. C. M. Spurling and Mr. Adrian C. Boult.

The Wellington College Music Competitions took place on March 6, and were judged by Dr. T. Wood (formerly Director of Music at Tonbridge School). The events included solo competitions (singing, pianoforte, strings, and wind), and dormitory programmes of three items each.——The Choral Society gave a performance of Brahms's 'Requiem,' in the Chapel, on March 29, conducted by Mr. Stanton (soprano solo, Miss Bertha Steventon; baritone solo, Mr. Keith Falkner). Organ and timpani were used for the accompaniment. The programme of a concert by members of the school, on March 7, included Schubert's fifth Symphony, Bach's Concerto in D minor, for two violins, Andante from Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E minor.——In addition to the above a violin recital was given by Miss Margaret Fairless on March 14; a characteristic programme of madrigals, motets, folk-songs, &c., by the English Singers on February 28; and a concert of chamber music on February 7.

The Union of Directors of Music in Secondary Schools is now known as the Music Masters' Association. Membership is open to all teachers of music in secondary and preparatory schools for boys. Further particulars can be obtained from the secretary, Dr. R. S. Thatcher, Charterhouse, Godalming. R. S. T.

Under the joint auspices of the Federation of British Music Industries, the British Music Society, and the Federation of Music Competition Festivals, a summer course of music-teaching will take place at Cambridge from July 30 to August 13. The lecturers include Dr. George Dyson, Mr. Geoffrey Shaw, Mr. Sydney Grew, Dr. Stanley Marchant, Mr. Adrian Boult, and Dr. C. B. Rootham. Sir Henry Hadow will give the opening address. Intending students should make early application to the offices of the Federation of British Music Industries, 117-123, Great Portland Street, W.1.

THE INFLUENCE OF MUSIC FROM ARABIC SOURCES

The last meeting of the Musical Association was held at Central Hall, Westminster, on April 27, when a paper on 'The Influence of Music from Arabic Sources' was read by Mr. Henry G. Farmer. The lecturer began by saying that the doctrine of the Ethos, so highly-prized in the art of antiquity, had an abiding interest, and had its origin, according to M. Combarieu, in magic, from which came cosmical music. That in its turn gave rise to the harmony of the spheres and the Ethos on the one hand, and on the other to the theory of numbers and musical therapeutics. What the Arabs did not adopt from the writings of the ancient Greeks on the question of the influence of music, was borrowed directly from the Sabæans, Syrians, or Byzantines. The Arabs recognised two forms of the influence of music—the subjective and the objective; but as it was not possible to deal with both phases in a single lecture, Mr. Farmer confined himself to the latter, and made but a very brief allusion to the former. In the so-called 'Days of Idolatry,' prior to Islam, the Arabs were firm believers in the intimate connection between music and magic, and in lunar and stellar prognostics, and it was not until the days of Islam that they indulged in any systematic practice. In ancient Babylonia-Assyria, astrologers and soothsayers attributed all mundane changes to the influence of celestial bodies. The result was that the planetary system, the deities, the seasons, the months, the days, the elements, the geographical spheres, the colours, and so on, were all linked up in a curiously learned system. Astrological computations involved numbers, and these, too, were given cosmical influences, whilst the connection between number and sound would appear to have brought music into the scheme, with the result that particular notes were allotted certain elemental influences. To the Arabs, everything in the shape of 'influences' was grist to the mill, with the result that we had the æsthetic doctrine of the Ethos and scientific principles on the theory of sound existing side by side with the cruder cosmical-musical dogmas and the notion of the harmony of the spheres.

One of the earliest works on this question that would appear to have attracted the attention of the Arabs was a pseudo-Aristotelian production known as the 'Kitab, al-siyasa' (Book of Government). It was said to have been written by Aristotle for Alexander the Great, but no copy of it existed in Greek, and it was probably of Sabæan or Syriac origin. Its teaching was Pythagorean, pure and simple. 'Everything was number,' said the Pythagoreans, and by this means alone could cosmic order be explained. Among the ectypes of numerical proportion was mundane music, and, in the harmonious order of things, this was related to the elements, the virtues, and so on. The theory of numbers fascinated the Arabs, because, unlike geometry, which depended on visual appreciation, it was purely a mental science, and as such it was thought to be nearer the essence of things. The medico-musical point of view similarly appealed to their imagination because it savoured of magic, and music and magic had long been linked together by the Semitic peoples. Al-Kindi, who was the greatest scientist and philosopher in Islam prior to Al-Farabi, treated of music not only as an art for the delectation of listeners, and a science for the cunning of mathematicians, but as a prescription for physicians to administer to the diseased mind or body.

The ramifications of his system embraced almost everything within the entire macrocosm. Each note on a string of the lute had its relation to a mode, rhythm, and sentiment. These in turn were connected with spatial spheres, geographical spheres, planets, constellations, horizon and meridian, winds, seasons, months, days, hours, elements, humours, periods of life, the faculties of the soul and body, actions, colours, perfumes, &c. Al-Kindi divided all compositions into three kinds—the sad, the cheerful, and the medium. Rhythm played as important a part as melody in the doctrine of the Ethos, as it did in the cosmical-musical dogma, and displayed the same three characteristics. An interesting feature was the custom of allotting certain modes to particular times of the day.

In the 10th century the Pythagorean philosophy had its greatest exponents in the Ikhwan al-Safa, a Society of ultra-Shi-ite philosophers, who particularly stressed the harmony of the spheres. They held that the 'celestial harmony' was the cause of music in this world. As movements of the latter resemble movements in the former, it follows that the notes of the latter resemble the notes of the former. The Greeks explained the celestial harmony with reference to numbers; the Ikhwan (Brethren) did likewise, though their numbers differed from those given by the former. The Ikhwan also vouch for the fact that a musico-therapeutic system was practised by the physicians of their period, lightening the pain of disease and sickness, counteracting their malignancy, and healing considerably sickness and illness. How all these things were accomplished was not explained musically. We were simply told that 'the temperaments of the body are of many varieties, and the animal natures of many kinds. And to every temperament and every nature is a note resembling it and a melody befitting it.' Like Plato, who was so often quoted in musical matters by the Arabs, the Brethren believed that music could be used for moral purposes, and they quote the saying: 'Verily, the musician, if he be clever in his art, moves the soul to the virtues, and purifies it from baseness.'

When Al-Farabi (d. 950) came on the scene, Pythagoras was repudiated for a time, and Aristotle reigned in his stead. The notion of the harmony of the spheres fell into disrepute, and the doctrine of the Ethos and the more rational attributes to the influence of music, gradually came into general acceptance, owing to the wide adoption of the theories of the ancient Greek writers. After the fall of Bagdad, in 1258, the old cosmical-musical dogmas found fresh sanctions. The cruder elements of the belief in the 'influence' of music came once more into prominence, whilst the more elegant and refined doctrine of the Ethos, as the Greeks understood it, fell into neglect. The influence of the Jews, which in Al-Andalus was considerable, played no small part in this question. Both astrology and the 'secret doctrine' were recognised in the Talmud. Among the Western Arabs, i.e., those of Al-Andalus and North Africa, we could see the old elemental implications. Even to-day, both the Eastern and Western Arabs maintained strong views on these questions. Not everywhere, however, did the Arabs implicitly accept the mediæval doctrines. Mikna'il Musharqa (d. 1888) says:

> 'We may mention what the musicians of old have taught concerning the melodies which were remedies against disease. . . . What I think about this subject is that man is affected by hearing a melody to which his nature inclines. And this is not from temperament, but from force of habit.'

This 19th-century view of things was by no means new. Six hundred years earlier the famous Muslim philosopher, Al-Din al-Razi (d. 1209), said:

> 'In the animal world, sounds come into existence according to grief, pain, or joy. These sounds, according to these circumstances, are different, and are either high or low. And so, by the law of association, these sounds become bound up naturally with the different mental states which prompt them. Thus, when these sounds are renewed, they inevitably call up the related mental states, which may be grief, pain, or joy.'

Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch announces a second Festival of chamber music of the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries, to be held at Haslemere Hall, Haslemere, Surrey, on August 24-31. Eight concerts will be given, devoted to Bach (two), various German composers (one), French music (one), Italian (one), and English (three). Two of the English programmes will consist entirely of concerted music for viols. For tickets and particulars apply to Messrs. Charman, High Street, Haslemere.

Byrd's five-part Mass and Bax's 'This Worlde's Joie' were sung by the Newcastle Bach Choir at Newcastle Cathedral, on May 2, Dr. Whittaker conducting. Mr. C. S. Richards played organ solos by Bach and Vaughan Williams.

THE UNION OF GRADUATES IN MUSIC (INCORPORATED)

The thirty-third annual general meeting of the Union of Graduates in Music was held at Connaught Rooms, Kingsway, W.C., on Tuesday, April 27. The members present unanimously re-elected the new King Edward Professor of Music in the University of London (Dr. Percy C. Buck) as President for the ensuing year. To fill the seven vacancies on the Council the following were chosen: Mr. J. Percy Baker, Mr. A. P. Howe, Mr. W. Lovelock, Dr. G. Oldroyd, Dr. R. S. Thatcher, Dr. C. F. Waters, and Mr. A. R. Wood. At the opening of the meeting, the President announced that the Council had appointed Mr. Charles Long as hon. secretary in succession to Dr. W. J. Phillips, who had resigned owing to pressure of other work. In recognition of Dr. Phillips's services, the meeting elected him a vice-president. It was decided that the usual summer meeting should be held, and it is expected that many members will avail themselves of the opportunity of uniting in social intercourse and enjoyment as in previous years. After the meeting the annual dinner took place, and was a most enjoyable gathering. Interesting and amusing speeches were made during the evening, and among those who spoke were the President (Dr. P. C. Buck), Prof. J. C. Bridge, Dr. C. B. Rootham, Mr. Clifford Edgar, Mr. Walter Sitchell, Alderman Keatley Moore, Lieut. H. E. Adkins, and Dr. W. J. Phillips. Members are asked to note the address of the new hon. secretary. It is 5, Clifton Villas, Maida Vale, W.9.

London Concerts

'OMAR KHAYYÁM'

Misfortune dogged the London Choral Society's performance of Granville Bantock's 'Omar Khayyám' at Queen's Hall, and there is no use mincing matters—it turned out to be a mere makeshift, and perhaps would have been better cancelled.

Mr. Arthur Fagge was taken ill, and quite late in the day Mr. W. H. Reed pluckily offered to take his place. It was pretty remarkable—and a fine tribute to Mr. Reed—that the Society scraped through. In the circumstances it was merely a matter of scraping through and no more.

This was the greater pity since 'Omar Khayyám' had not been given for long. A generation has grown up that hardly knows Bantock, and at the same time there was a certain curiosity in the older generation to test its impressions of some sixteen years ago. How would the music which then had seemed possessed of no small merits of picturesqueness and sensuous fancy face the new day? The performance brought no answer simply because it would be unfair to form an opinion on what was no more than a kind of rehearsal. The soloists were Miss Olga Haley, Mr. Frank Titterton, and Mr. Thorpe Bates. C.

PHILHARMONIC CHOIR

The Philharmonic Choir at Queen's Hall, on April 29, conducted by Mr. C. Kennedy Scott, gave a concert of choral and organ music. It was beautifully planned. The principal works were Vaughan Williams's unaccompanied Mass in G minor and Bach's 'Sing ye to the Lord.'

The Mass is strictly liturgical music, and nothing was introduced into the programme to detract from its impression of spirituality and grave devotion. It is now some years since the work was first sung at Queen's Hall. Though that first performance was far from perfect, the peculiar, bare loftiness of the music was not to be mistaken. Various choirs have taken it up since, and probably none with finer technical accomplishment than Mr. Scott's. There was, this time, an admirable fidelity to notes and pitch.

The conductor chose to dispense with the short organ preludes which the composer suggests in his score, and even so there were but one or two moments of noticeable defection. The quartet of soloists was likewise good. The tenor, Mr. Percy Manchester, appears to be an exceptionally musicianly young singer. The Mass is not concert music. So far from forcing his expression for the making of any effect, the composer is felt to be rigorously restraining himself with a single view to the cause he is serving. It is the rarest experience in our music to hear an utterance so concise and so strictly considered. Beaten down to such a consistency, it ought to wear well.

Shorter choral works of Balfour Gardiner and Holst were sung, and Dr. W. H. Harris, of Oxford, played the organ. He is, it is clear, a fine executant and remarkable artist. With such an ability he would, in any other branch of the art, be acclaimed. But organists, or at least English organists, appear to shun the noisy career of the virtuoso. C.

HERMANN ABENDROTH

The Cologne conductor, Hermann Abendroth, gave a concert of works of Brahms, including the C minor Symphony, with the London Symphony Orchestra, at Queen's Hall, on April 23. Throughout the evening the listener was unable to throw off the thought that one more rehearsal would have made all the difference. The visitor, unused to hasty London ways, had clearly not had time to get the Orchestra well into his grip, and the immense labour he put himself to in order to retrieve the disadvantage, made for some discomfort to the listener. Apart from this, he was felt to be a thoroughly competent and likeable conductor. He certainly knew his scores, and had plain views about them. His line was dramatic vigour rather than lyrical sweetness. His laborious but imposing effect in the Finale of the Symphony won him many friends. It must be said that he had a queer audience, by no means typical of Queen's Hall—an edifice which some of them had apparently entered for the first time that night. Otherwise, how can we explain those uncouth departures in the middle of the Symphony?

The soloist in the B flat Pianoforte Concerto was Franciszek Goldenberg, a very elegant and accomplished player. C.

AN ELGAR CONCERT

Sir Edward Elgar conducted the London Symphony Orchestra in a programme of his own works at Queen's Hall on April 26. It comprised the Overture, 'In the South,' the 'Sea Songs' (Miss Muriel Brunskill), the 'Enigma' Variations, and the first Symphony.

Such an evening as that will in years to come be matter for the 'anecdotage' talk of the fortunate hearers. It is indeed a privilege thus to have great music interpreted by its author when it so happens that he is incomparably its best interpreter. Sir Edward has a drastic way of hacking at his music. All sorts of things which other conductors carefully foster, he seems to leave to take their chance. He cuts a way through in a fashion both nervous and decisive. At the end we realise that detail and rhetorical niceties have been put in their right place, and that the essential tale has been vividly told. Credit is due to the Orchestra for its response to Sir Edward's uneasy, wilful beat.

Miss Brunskill's singing was rich. She is one of our best contraltos. Since that sort of voice cloys more than any other, she would do well to lighten her tone more often. C.

LEOS JANÁCEK'S CHAMBER MUSIC AT WIGMORE HALL

As long ago as December, 1919, the Musical Times published a full account of Janácek's opera, 'Jeji Pastorkyna' ('Her Foster-Daughter'),* which had created a sensation in the composer's native land, and awakened a sharp controversy because for the first time since the 'sixties the Smetana tradition had been broken by a new operatic ideal and a complete change of form and musical speech. Since then, the work, firmly established in favour in its own country, has penetrated far afield under the title adopted by its German translator, 'Jenufa'—the name of its heroine. Frankfort, Berlin, Vienna, New York, and Hamburg have heard and been interested in a fresh type of national opera. Altogether it has had some forty performances in Central Europe.

It was unfortunate that the composer's recent visit to London happened to coincide with the national strike. The concert of his chamber music, given at Wigmore Hall on Thursday afternoon, May 6, again showed the art of this essentially dramatic composer on a comparatively small scale; but the works chosen for performance were highly characteristic and admirably varied in form and instrumental colour. The dramatic String Quartet inspired by Tolstoy's novel 'The Kreutzer Sonata' makes no direct attempt to follow the course of this story of deception and crime. It is full of sudden emotional changes, and its short themes speak eloquently of furtive perturbation, of cruelty, yearning, and perhaps of a pitiful commentary. There is suggestion but no programme. The work was well-played, from the technical side, by the Woodhouse String Quartet. The emotional interpretation was too staid. Madame Adila Fachiri's warm and temperamental style exactly suited the Sonata for violin and pianoforte. She conveyed to her hearers all the beauty and all the strong, but simple, emotionalism contained in the work. In collaboration with Miss Fanny Davies, who plays the music of Bohemia con amore, the interpretation was memorable. Miss Davies, with Signor Mannucci, also took part in the Legend ('Pohadka') for 'cello and pianoforte. Janácek's style is so concentrated and laconic that he can be romantic without turgidity. 'Pohadka' has this charm, and may become popular here as in Czechoslovakia.

The climax of the concert was the Suite, 'Youth,' a sextet for wind instruments. The executants were the London Wind Quintet (Messrs. R. Murchie, L. Goossens, H. Draper, A. Brain, and M. P. Draper), supplemented by R. Newton. The players' wonderful virtuosity easily adapted itself to the difficulties and rhythmic surprises of this wholly delightful work. The freshness of the musical ideas, the suggestions of outdoor life, the sense of joy so rarely overshadowed by a pensive memory—these qualities may remind us of Dvorák; but the rhythmic complexities, the unique savour of the harmony, and the colour contrasts derived from the six instruments, are all peculiar to Janácek. This little work of pure inspiration, most appropriately named, will prove a permanent addition to the comparatively limited repertory of chamber music for wind instruments only. R. N.

SOME SINGERS OF THE MONTH

Despite her great reputation, her unquestioned technique, and her many neat interpretative touches, the recital of songs of Schumann, Brahms, and Wolf given by Madame Elisabeth Schumann at Wigmore Hall (April 28) was disappointing. For the effect of her graces—so attractively displayed, and so pleasing in passing—fades in retrospect.

The lightness of character of some of her songs probably tempted Madame Schumann to a certain casualness of utterance. So long as mere elegance of poise and tripping rhythm were wanted, all was well. But when, as it were, the gale blew, the singer did not adapt herself. She did not rally her resources to show us that she could command intensity. She was, that afternoon, a mere fair-weather singer. One does not expect a light voice to be positively thrilling, but there are light voices with a much wider expressive range than Madame Schumann was able to show us at this recital. True, she warmed up in the last group, so that her performance of Wolf's 'Der Gärtner' was comparatively ardent, and in the same composer's 'Ich hab in Penna,' she quite caught fire. No wonder it had to be repeated! Still, there were so many cold notes, and so much that lacked lustre in the main part of the programme, that the recital, on the whole, must be put down as a failure. Of course, where so celebrated a performer is concerned, one writes according to his stiffest standard. The simple case was that it was one of this very charming singer's 'off days.'

Mr. Herbert Heyner sang at Wigmore Hall with a jolly, frank manner, but his big voice was much too adventurously used. Frankly, some of his singing that night struck the ear disagreeably. His legato was too lax, and one felt it a pity that a singer with the taste to arrange such an artistic programme should not have given more attention to the clarifying and enriching of his tone. But while we regretted the lack of fine quality in his singing, we had to acknowledge that Mr. Heyner had a good grasp of his songs. He showed also that he could sing softly on occasion.

* 'A Slovak Music Drama,' by Rosa Newmarch.

H. J. K.

SOME PIANISTS OF THE MONTH

Mr. Egon Petri at Wigmore Hall, displayed powers of the vigorous order. Capable technically, his effects were spoilt by too sudden transition from soft to loud and vice versâ. This lack of tone-balance was very noticeable in the Mozart Sonata in A major—otherwise gracefully played—and in Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 90.

At his first concert at Wigmore Hall, Mr. Jan Smeterlin was in good form. His Brahms would surely have converted those who consider that composer to be dull. The Variations, Op. 10, were beautifully played—strong, vigorous, and with lively fancy. The twenty-four Chopin Preludes were sensitive yet virile in treatment—passionate and poetic. It is regrettable that at his second recital, Mr. Smeterlin did not make such a good impression. Perhaps the atmosphere of the strike and his small audience affected his temperament adversely; certainly his playing was more rough and mannered—for instance, playing the left hand before the right. He played Chopin's Funeral March Sonata and Schumann's 'Davidsbündler' with something of the power of a master, but with an apparent perfunctoriness.

Of Mr. Norman Frauenheim, at Wigmore Hall, one can only say that he succeeded in making well-known works by Bach, Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven uninteresting. Possessed of most essentials, the one great essential—that of living interest and vitality—was lacking.

Miss Hetty Bolton, at Æolian Hall, showed capacity, serious purpose, and considerable attainment. Her manner of playing is somewhat too strenuous and wasteful of energy in getting her effects. None the less she hewed out Beethoven's Sonata in C minor, Op. 111, into significant form. The Brahms Waltzes were more vigorous than lively, more hard and brilliant than truly expressive.

M. Pouishnov, having arranged a whole Chopin week of recitals at Wigmore Hall, bravely carried them through in spite of the strike. One may say triumphantly, for though his audiences inevitably became small, his spirit rose to the occasion, and he gave of his best. There was a very appropriate recognition of this in the presentation of a laurel wreath at the last concert. The manner of M. Pouishnov inspires confidence. Quiet, upright, undemonstrative, he obtains the most powerful effects without undue display of energy. His playing is refined yet robust, passionate but not sentimental, and finished in phrasing. How beautifully the notes of Chopin break into cascading, starry streams—streams not merely artificial, or ornamental, but developing consistently, and flowing from a genuine source. M. Pouishnov brought out the delicate texture of Prelude, Etude, Sonata, Ballade, and Dance, and one could pay him the compliment of liking his work and that of the composer he interpreted more and more as the week progressed.

D'A.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY

Soon after we had learnt at Queen's Hall that a smallish body of singers was right for the B minor Mass, we discovered at the Albert Hall that a largish body was, after all, not wrong. The Royal Choral Society, of course, knows the work thoroughly, and was able to respond to Dr. Bairstow's demands with a performance that was accurate, splendid in tone, and of good proportion. The solo artists were Miss Dorothy Silk, Miss Muriel Brunskill, Mr. Archibald Winter, and Mr. Herbert Heyner. The performance took place on April 24, and brought to an, end what was, musically, the Society's most successful season.

AMATEUR ORCHESTRAS

Three of these phenomenally capable bodies were heard in London within four days. On April 19 the Amateur Orchestra of London played at Queen's Hall under the direction of Mr. Wynn Reeves, the chief features being Glazounov's fourth Symphony, the Handel-Harty 'Water Music,' and a Mozart Pianoforte Concerto, played by Mr. Maurice Cole. The Royal Amateur Orchestra gave a 'Ladies' Night' concert at Queen's Hall on April 20. Mr. Arthur Payne conducted the 'Pathetic' Symphony and, with M. Bratza as soloist, the Max Bruch G minor Violin Concerto. Mr. Joseph Ivimey conducted the Strolling Players at Queen's Hall on April 22 in the 'Tristan' Prelude and Dvorák's fourth Symphony.

Competition Festival Record

LONDON MUSICAL FESTIVAL:

TWENTY-FIRST ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION DINNER

This commemorative event was held on May 1 at the Criterion Restaurant. A large company assembled, including Sir Richard and Lady Muriel Paget, Sir Anthony and Lady Bowlby, Mary Victoria, Countess of Rivas, and Prof. J. C. Bridge.

Mr. Ernest Read (chairman) related how the Festival had developed, and said that only British music was used during the War. He proposed the toast of the London Musical Festival, to which Mr. Lester Jones (hon. secretary from the first year) responded. Mr. Jones then read a message from the President, Princess Helena Victoria, requesting the secretary to convey to the London Musical Competition Festival her best congratulations on this twenty-first anniversary of its foundation, and wishing it every success in its future activities. Congratulations were added to all those who had won prizes, specially mentioning Miss Joan Bonner, Miss Muriel Crowther, and Miss Winifred Nowlan, who had gained Exhibitions, in Her Highness's name. The President assured the Society of her perpetual interest in the admirable work it carries on, and hoped its future would be along a path of development and prosperity.

Madrigals and folk-songs were sung by all present, and the Folk-Dance Society, under the direction of Mr. Douglas Kennedy, gave an excellent display of Old English Dances. Dr. Frederick Shinn proposed the toast of British Music, to which Dr. Henry Richards responded. The Visitors' toast, proposed by Mr. Percy Baker, was replied to by Sir Richard Paget. Dr. Abernethy proposed 'The Chairman,' to which Mr. Read suitably replied.

MIDLAND COMPETITION FESTIVAL

This year the Festival was inaugurated by a social evening, held in the Town Hall. Admittance was by invitation only. Mr. Adrian Boult received the guests, and Mr. Neville Chamberlain spoke on the work and aims of the Festival movement. A musical programme was provided by a group of local artists.

The Festival proper began on April 19, with the pianoforte and dance classes taking place in different halls. Mr. Frederick Dawson, who is an old friend of the Festival, was again the judge in the pianoforte section. His adjudications are always alive and interesting; they are also helpful to most competitors, though when a young student whose playing is only a little above average, is told that he or she is a genius, the effect can be devastating.

An interesting young player came to light in the class for pianists between the ages of twelve and fourteen. Raymond Bardell, of Harborne, Birmingham, played the E minor Intermezzo of Schumann with sense of rhythm and poise remarkable in so young an artist. He has a facile technique, and tackles his music in a sane, manly style.

The last day of the first week of the Festival was devoted to choir singing. Dr. Vaughan Thomas and Mr. Harvey Grace were the judges. The only new classes in this section were those for Women's Institutes. The singing was often musical and well prepared, but the test-pieces, chosen apparently for their easy melodic line, were nearly all second-rate music, and failed to bring out the best in the choirs. On the whole, however, the results were encouraging, and these classes should be continued.

Only two choirs entered a competition for choral societies, but as the test-piece was Brahms's 'Song of Destiny,' the competition was something of an event. The Rev. Robert Eaton's Choir beat the Walsall 'Gervase Elwes' Choir by many marks. The former society had a better grasp of the inner meaning of the work, and was superior in tonal quality and general interpretation.

The children's night brought a huge audience to the hall. A jolly evening culminated in a massed performance of Rathbone's setting of Browning's poem, 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin.'

Mr. Plunket Greene and Mr. Robert Radford shared the task of judging the solo singing classes. The singers were fortunate in their test-pieces, and very few poor songs appeared in the 'own choice' lists. Mr. Plunket Greene made some unpleasant remarks about singing teachers, and informed the competitors that the less breath they took the better they would sing. When not taken too literally, however, his remarks on the art of singing were interesting and helpful.

A class for choral conductors drew only three competitors. The competition was interesting, nevertheless, especially when one sat near enough to the platform to hear the candidates' directions to the choir during the ten minutes allowed for 'rehearsal.' Madame Gell, conductor of several ladies' choirs in the city, was the winner.

Mr. Robert Radford and Mr. Plunket Greene sat together in the judges' box when about a dozen singers competed for the rose-bowl given to 'the best singer of the Festival.' Some really beautiful singing was forthcoming, and it was felt that the hard work done by the organizers of the Festival in past years had not been in vain. G. W.

DOUGLAS, I.O.M.—The thirty-fifth Manx Festival was held on April 19-22 with an increased entry, and again drew excellent results from the island's musical faculties—which are largely the Festival's own creation. In the open class for choral societies, the tests were Parry's 'The Pied Piper' and Harrison's 'Shepherd, what 's love, I pray?' and both were sung—a complete performance being given of the cantata—at the final concert under Sir Ivor Atkins. The choirs which competed and combined were Douglas Festival Choir (Mr. Noah Moore), the winners in the competition, Douglas Philharmonic Choir (Mr. T. P. Fargher), and Castletown (Mr. A. P. Hunt). The male-voice choirs sang Leigh Henry's 'The Cry from the Twilight' and Tootell's 'The War Cry of Irthing,' Ramsey (Miss E. A. Collins) being first, and Douglas Male Choristers (Mr. Noah Moore) second. In the female-voice class, Rushen Choir (Mr. T. C. Corris) was first.

LYTHAM.—A number of the best-known choirs in Lancashire took part in the choral competitions on the fourth day of this Festival (April 28-May 1). The tests in the chief choral contest were Purcell's anthem, 'O Lord of Hosts,' César Cui's 'Two Roses,' and Mackenzie's 'My soul would drink those echoes'; and the two best choirs were Blackpool Orpheus (first) and Blackpool Glee and Madrigal Society (second). Colne Orpheus Glee Union was first in the male-voice class, and in the female-voice class Blackpool Lyric. The choral singing was of the highest standard.

NORWICH.—This Festival—now in its fourth year—carried on bravely, although its dates, May 12-15, fell in the period of the general strike. The results fully justified the decision of the committee, for very few competitors failed to appear, and audiences were good, St. Andrew's Hall being well filled for the closing concert. There was an increased entry, and a good all round standard was achieved. A splendid array of schools competed. The chief results were: Open choral societies—Princes Street Congregational Church (Mr. W. J. Gaze); Village choral societies—Buxton (Mr. Cyril Pearce); Open male-voice choirs—Lowestoft (Mr. A. E. Mallett); Village male-voice choirs—Upton (Mr. Cyril Pearce); Open Church Choirs, mixed voices—High Street Wesleyan, Lowestoft (Mr. A. E. Mallett).

PETERSFIELD.—This Festival came of age on April 19-22 with the proper jollifications of a twenty-first birthday, at which, unfortunately, some of its oldest friends, notably Sir Hugh Allen and Dr. Vaughan Williams were unable to be present. However, Mr. Steuart Wilson, Prof. D. F. Tovey, and Mr. Adrian C. Boult took an active part in the proceedings, and there was a birthday cake with twenty-one candles. As usual, concerts were the principal feature of the Festival. The first was given by children. The second was largely a vocal recital by Mr. John Coates. Combined choirs sang Somervell's 'The Forsaken Merman,' and the orchestra played the third 'Brandenburg' Concerto. At the third concert, Mr. Boult conducted Stanford's 'Phaudrig Crohoore,' Mr. Steuart Wilson sang the 'Wenlock Edge' song-cycle of Vaughan Williams, and Miss Sybil Eaton played his violin work, 'The lark ascending.' A full orchestra took part in the final concert, and a movement from the 'Sea' Symphony was given under Mr. Boult, the soloists being Miss Dorothy Silk and Mr. Malcolm Davidson. In the competition for which the 'Sea' Symphony was the test, the first place was taken by Sheet Choir (Miss Kathleen Merritt). Havant (Miss Grace Hoskyns) was first in sight-reading.

IRELAND

THE FEIS CEOIL.—The thirtieth annual Feis Ceoil, held at Dublin from May 5-8, reached high-water mark in the number of entries in the solo competitions, exceeding all previous records. The entries for choral singing, however, were regrettably small: there was but one mixed-voice choir, one male choir, one operatic choir, one male choir in Irish, four female-voice choirs, and four female choirs singing in Irish. The adjudicators were Dr. E. C. Bairstow, Prof. Granville Bantock, Prof. O'Dwyer, Messrs. W. H. Reed, C. Reddie, Robert Radford, and Arthur Darley. After hearing the forty-eight competing sopranos, Mr. Radford said that he 'had never heard so many beautiful, fresh young sopranos before.' Much interest centred in the new competition, the Wallis Cup, for singers playing their own accompaniment. It was awarded to Miss Sylvia Fannen out of twenty-eight competitors, only two of whom were men. The 'Independent' Choir won the competitions for male-voice choir and for male choir-singing in Irish. The Dublin press commented strongly on the absence of a suitable concert-hall, which is a reproach to the city.

BALLYMENA.—There were seventeen hundred competitors at the Ballymena Musical Festival on May 3-7. The adjudicators were Dr. Vaughan Thomas, Mr. Percy A. Scholes, and Miss Katie Thomas; Mrs. W. H. Downer being the official accompanist. Owing to the strike in England, Mr. Scholes was held up for a day at Carlisle, but he was present on the third day, May 5. All arrangements were excellently carried out by an efficient committee, with Mrs. W. Weir as hon. secretary. It is a pleasure to chronicle that choral singing of a good standard was much in evidence (as was admitted by Mr. Scholes), even among the Brownies and Junior Guides.

COLERAINE.—Worked by a zealous committee, the eighteenth Musical Festival at Coleraine, with Mr. William Knox as hon. secretary, during the week April 27-30, was a huge success. Miss Denne Parker was adjudicator. Though the entries were larger than previously, the classes for school children showed a falling off. The children's choirs, however, gave great promise, and it is the aim of the Association to develop musical taste among young people. Derry entrants distinguished themselves in numerous competitions. A prize-winners' concert—including a song recital by Miss Parker—concluded a most enjoyable Festival.

DUNGANNON.—The fifth Dungannon Musical Festival (May 4-6) was a great success. As Dr. Percy Hull (Hereford) was held up owing to the strike, his place as adjudicator was taken by Capt. C. J. Brennan (Belfast), while Miss Mathers judged the elocution. There was a record entry for the fifty-four classes. Dungannon Choir (the only entry) was awarded the prize for mixed-voice choirs, and also secured the prizes for female-voice and male-voice choirs.

LARNE.—The Larne Musical Festival (April 27-30) at Victoria Hall, with two hundred and seventy entries, was a successful function. Capt. C. J. Brennan and Miss Edith Mathews were the adjudicators. For a first attempt of the kind, everything passed off well, and the standard was commendably high, especially in choral singing.

SCOTLAND

ARBROATH (Forfarshire).—This first Festival ran for three days. The features were the singing of the school choirs, the excellence of the organization, and the extraordinary enthusiasm of both competitors and audiences. Adjudicators: Mr. Thomas F. Dunhill and Mr. Hugh S. Roberton. Principal winners: Townhead School, Montrose (school choirs); Arbroath Amateur Operatic Society (mixed and men's choirs); Erskine U.F. Church Choir, Arbroath (church choirs); Miss Grace M. Forbes, Perth (vocal solos); and Mr. Andrew Morrison, Arbroath (violin solos).

ARRAN (Buteshire).—This two-day Festival, now in its fourth year, appears to have established itself securely on the island. Entries were up, and the quality of the performances continued to show improvement, but the most interesting thing was the size and keenness of the audiences. The entire population of the island is about five thousand, much of it scattered in distant and inaccessible crofts and hamlets, yet at the final session at Lamlash, on the Saturday evening, the audience numbered over a thousand. Adjudicators: Mr. F. H. Bisset and Mr. D. T. Yacamini.

BUTE (Buteshire).—The second Bute and District Festival ran at Rothesay for three days and a half, and was as markedly successful as its predecessor. Enthusiasm ran high, the general level of performance was good, and full houses were the order of the day. Adjudicators: Mr. D. T. Yacamini (in place of Mr. F. H. Bisset) and Mr. A. M. Henderson.

GLASGOW.—For the sixteenth Glasgow Festival 1,735 entries, representing 14,532 competitors, were received, as against 1,628 entries, representing 13,471 competitors, in 1925. The Festival was scheduled to cover thirteen working days, comprising eighty-one three-hour sessions, as against sixty-six sessions in 1925. The Festival opened in an atmosphere of 'excursions and alarums.' On its second day the general strike was declared, and a lady adjudicator, arriving from London that morning, was not to be dissuaded from leaving again by the mid-day train! By great ill-luck the period of the strike and the period of the Festival practically coincided. But the Glasgow Executive, undaunted, resolved that a Festival which had carried on without a break throughout the entire period of the war, could hardly be expected to lower its flag to a mere national strike, and the eighty-one sessions were carried through according to schedule. Where adjudicators failed to get through to Glasgow, others were improvised. Audiences came and went. In the evenings they mostly went, owing to the lack of means of conveyance, but elderly and infirm enthusiasts did miracles of pedestrianism.

There were, of course, many withdrawals among competitors, particularly among industrial choirs, such as the police, tramway workers, &c. But in spite of the absence of trains, trams, and for a time even motor buses, competitors rolled up. A ladies' choir from Inverness travelled four hundred miles, and a men's choir of shipbuilding workers three hundred miles, both by road. Choirs hailing from towns and villages from fifteen to forty miles away, finding no other means of conveyance possible, came in relays by taxi-cab. A Lanarkshire Church choir, unable to get home after competing, was accommodated in the Festival halls, a supply of army mattresses and blankets materialising out of the void to meet the emergency. The men of the Kilsyth Co-operative Choir made the thirteen-mile journey on foot, won in their class, and tramped another thirteen miles home. The women of the choir were brought in in relays, walking and driving by turns, with the help of a small motor lorry. One competitor in the vocal classes walked home twenty-two miles after an evening session. Another—a woman competitor in the vocal solo classes—had the unnerving experience of having her taxicab overturned by an unruly mob on her way in from the country, but sang afterwards with apparently unshaken nerves.

There were several new features of special interest in the programme. A class for Lieder singing, singer and pianist being required to enter together as a pair, drew high praise from the judges, the number and quality of the entries being alike gratifying. A class of Musical Interpretation by Rhythmic Movement brought eight entries of high quality, the performances of several of the teams being of great beauty and expressiveness. Classes in choral conducting, one for day-school teachers (two-part, equal voices) and one open (four-part, mixed voices), proved in every way a valuable addition to the general scheme, though here, as the judges were careful to remark, the highest honours went not to the conductors but to the two choirs which gave their services, drawn from the Glasgow Orpheus Juniors and the Perth Madrigal Society respectively. The latter motored seventy miles, started singing at 10 a.m., and were kept hard at it in the hands of ten different conductors for nearly three hours.

The final stages in the principal vocal solo classes furnished some notably fine singing. The general level in the instrumental section was well maintained, but in the premier pianoforte solo class Mr. Frederick Dawson did not consider any of the performances up to diploma standard. The choral singing as a whole was quite up to the average of previous years, but the non-appearance of some of the best choirs, owing to transport difficulties, robbed the premier classes of a good deal of their zest and quality. The judges complained rightly of the insecurity of intonation shown in these classes, but perhaps allowance should be made for difficulties of rehearsal under strike conditions.

The adjudicators were: Mr. Geoffrey Shaw; Dr. Staton (in place of Sir Walford Davies); Dr. Vaughan Thomas; Dr. Tysoe (in place of Mr. Ernest Read); Mr. Arthur Collingwood; Mr. Frederick Dawson (pianoforte); Mr. Wilfrid Senior (strings, in place of Miss Knocker); Miss Jean Milligan (Scottish country dancing); and Mr. Frank Clewlow (elocution, in place of Miss Elsie Fogerty and Mrs. Matthay). At the close of the Festival, Mr. Geoffrey Shaw, whose first visit it was, said, in returning thanks for the adjudicators, that Glasgow was the only large Festival known to him which contrived in all its vastness and complexity to retain the 'homey' and friendly spirit and characteristic qualities of the smaller country festivals.

Principal winners.—Mixed choirs: St. George Co-operative Choir, Glasgow (Mr. William Wilson); Men's choirs: Greenock Male-Voice Choir (Mr. A. J. Gourlay); Women's choirs: Inverness Ladies' Choir (Miss Jimsie Gordon); Church choirs: Sherwood U.F. Church, Paisley (Mr. James D. Fleming); Junior choirs: Glasgow Orpheus Junior Choir (Miss Agnes W. Thomson); School choirs: St. John's Grammar School, Hamilton (Miss Jean Fleming); Action-Songs: Glasgow Orpheus Sangspiel (Miss Ella Voysey); Singing Games: Glasgow Orpheus Sangspiel (Miss Ella Voysey); Scots Folk-Dancing: Strathclyde School, Glasgow (Miss M. W. R. Campbell); Musical Interpretation by Rhythmic Movement: Glasgow Orpheus Sangspiel (Miss Ella Voysey); Lieder Singing: Miss Ella Scott and Miss Margaret Edwards, Glasgow; Vocal solos (General Diploma): Mr. William Cook, Harthill; Vocal solos (Scots Song Diploma): Miss Mary Smith, Glasgow; Vocal Solos (Honours Certificate): Mr. Hugh Ogilvie, Glasgow; Vocal Solos (Operatic): Miss Anna Kirkam, Glasgow; Violin Solos (Diploma): Mr. James Soutter, Kirkcaldy; Choral Conducting (General): Mr. Robert A. Reid, Clydebank; Choral Conducting (Schools): Miss Jean Fleming.

INVERNESS (Northern Counties of Scotland).—The fifth Northern Counties Festival ran for three days at Inverness, and attracted fifteen hundred competitors. Adjudicators: Mr. Thomas F. Dunhill, Mr. Harvey Grace, and Mr. J. Peebles Conn (strings). The principal winners were Inverness Ladies' Choir, Inverness Royal Academy (school choir), Ness Bank U.F. Church Choir (church choirs), Abriachan School (junior choirs), Inverness Royal Academy (folk-dancing), Mrs. L. A. Sutherland, Inverness (vocal solos), Miss Effie Masson, Inverness (Scots songs), and Miss Nettie Bury, Inverness (pianoforte).

MONKLANDS (Lanarkshire). — The second Monklands Festival, held this year at Airdrie, ran for about a week, but hardly showed the increase in entries and general interest that might have been looked for after the very successful first Festival held at Coatbridge last year. A good general standard was maintained, however, and some of the classes showed a decided improvement over the level of last year. Adjudicators: Mr. A. M. Henderson, Mr. Robert M'Leod, Mr. D. T. Yacamini, and (for dancing) Miss Jean Milligan.

MORAYSHIRE.—The fourth Morayshire Festival ran for five days, at Elgin. Competitors numbered 2,750. Mr. H. Plunket Greene, Mr. Arthur Collingwood, and Mr. Thomas F. Dunhill adjudicated. The interest of the public and the competitors showed no abatement. Principal winners: Forres Musical Association (mixed choirs); Buckie Ladies' Choir (women's choirs); Ness Bank U.F. Church, Inverness (church choirs); Hopeman School (day schools); Elgin Academy (country dances); Mr. Ivan Knox, Buckie (vocal solos); Mr. James D. Stuart, Forres (violin solos); and Mr. Alex. M. Halley (pianoforte solos).

MOTHERWELL AND WISHAW (Lanarkshire). — The sixth annual Festival ran for three days at Motherwell and Wishaw. Mr. Arthur Collingwood, Mr. F. O. Sheard, and Miss Jean Milligan (country dancing) adjudicated. Principal winners were Wishaw and District Choir (mixed choirs), Dalziel Works Choir, Motherwell (men's choirs), and Mr. John Snee, Wishaw (vocal solos).

WEST LOTHIAN (Linlithgowshire).—The seventh West Lothian Festival was held at Linlithgow, and occupied three days. More attention is given to combined singing than to the competitive side. There was this year a substantial increase in choir entries, both adult and junior. Mr. Geoffrey Shaw adjudicated, and directed the combined performances. Principal winners: Junior: Broxburn High School, Linlithgow Academy, Bathgate Public School, and Boness Academy; Senior—Bathgate E.U. Congregational Church, Linlithgow Choral Union, Torrance Ladies' Choir, Bathgate, and Stoneyburn Male-Voice Choir.

Music in the Provinces

ASHTEAD.—The Credo and Sanctus from Bach's B minor Mass, studied for Leith Hill Festival, were sung by the Choral Society, under Mr. H. G. Kimberley, at a concert on April 21.

BARNSTAPLE.—The Musical Festival Society gave afternoon and evening concerts at the Albert Hall on April 28. Mendelssohn's 'Hymn of Praise,' performed under Dr. Edwards, was coupled at the one with 'The Revenge,' and at the other with 'Hiawatha's Departure,' these works being conducted by the hon. secretary, Mr. Sydney Harper.

BATH. — A concert given by the Bath Organists' Association at St. Mary's Church House, was devoted to music by composers, mainly of the 18th century, who had had some connection with Bath. They included Thomas Chilcot (Bath Abbey, 1733-66), the Linleys, Field, Kendrick Pyne (Bath Abbey, 1839-93), Mazzinghi, Mozart, and Handel. Mozart came in as a friend of the younger Linley.——Parry's 'Job' was performed by the Choral and Orchestral Society, under Mr. H. T. Sims, on April 13.——Schumann's 'Rhenish' Symphony has been given under Mr. Jan Hurst at the Pump Room.

BOURNEMOUTH. — Mr. Gordon Bryan played the 'Fantastic Suite' for pianoforte and orchestra, by Ernst Schelling, at a Winter Gardens concert on April 22. A week later the programme included the Prelude to Act 5 of Reinecke's 'Manfred.'

EXETER.—The programme of a concert by the Chamber Music Club on April 21 included 'Eight New Nursery Rhymes,' Op. 23, by Walford Davies.——On the following evening the string orchestra, under Mr. A. J. James, played three movements from a Suite by W. H. Reed.—— The Oratorio Society gave 'A Tale of Old Japan' on the afternoon of April 27, and 'Elijah' in the evening. Mr. Allan Allen conducted.

FAVERSHAM.—Brahms's 'Song of Destiny' and Holst's Two Psalms were the principal works in a miscellaneous programme of the Faversham Institute Philharmonic Society on April 14, conducted by Mr. W. J. Keech.

HARTLEPOOL.—With the assistance of the Hartlepools Symphonic Orchestra, the Hartlepools Harmonic Society gave Brahms's 'Requiem' and Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens' on April 10, Mr. J. F. Chalmers Park conducting. The programme also included the first Organ Symphony of Guilmant, played by Mr. John Nicholson.

HAVANT.—The choirs of Havant and Horndean joined forces on April 13 for a concert at Havant Town Hall. A programme of unusual interest included the movement, 'A song for all seas, all ships,' from the 'Sea' Symphony, of Vaughan Williams, Debussy's 'The Blessed Damozel,' and Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens.' The conducting was done alternately by Miss Grace Hoskyns and Mr. Anthony Bernard.

LEEDS.—An Elgar programme was given by the Choral Union in April, under the direction of Dr. Coward. The principal work was 'The Kingdom,' which received a performance of unusual excellence. The principal solo singers were Miss Elsie Suddaby and Mr. Howard Fry.

LEICESTER.—A performance of 'Caractacus' by the Musical Society, on April 22, marked the jubilee of Mr. C. Hancock's work as conductor. About a hundred members of the Northampton Musical Society took part.

LIVERPOOL.—A Gustav Holst evening was given by the Sandon Studios Society on April 24, the works staged being 'At the Boar's Head,' 'Savitri,' and a ballet to the 'St. Paul's Suite.' Mr. Fred Wilkinson was the producer, and Dr. Malcolm Sargent conducted.

NORWICH.—Dr. Malcolm Sargent took Dr. Bates's place at the concert of the Philharmonic Society on April 29. He conducted Franck's Symphony, Brahms's 'Song of Destiny,' and Mozart's G major Violin Concerto, in which Mr. William Primrose was the soloist.

PORTSMOUTH.—The Philharmonic Society concluded its season with a performance of 'The Dream of Gerontius,' at which Lieut. O'Donnell made his first appearance as the Society's conductor.——The whole of Coleridge-Taylor's 'Hiawatha' was performed by North End Choral Society on April 28, under the direction of Mr. Ernest Birch.

READING.—The Philharmonic Society gave 'Caractacus' on April 21, under Mr. P. R. Scrivener.——Tchaikovsky's sixth Symphony and Quilter's 'Children's Overture' were played by the Berkshire Symphony Orchestra on April 28. Among the other items in the programme was Arcadelt's 'Ave Maria,' orchestrated by the conductor, Dr. E. O. Daughtry, from Liszt's pianoforte transcription.

REDHILL.—Mr. J. E. Gomersall conducted the Reigate Choral Society on April 23 in a programme that included Brahms's Motet, 'When a strong man,' Gerrard Williams's 'Richard of Taunton Dene,' Grainger's 'I'm seventeen come Sunday,' Mendelssohn's 'Hymn of Praise,' and a movement from the 'Unfinished' Symphony.

SHEET (HANTS).—At the annual concert of the Sheet Choral Society, held in the Village Hall recently, the programme included Part 1 of Vaughan Williams's 'Sea' Symphony, 'The Lord is a man of war,' from 'Israel,' Pilkington's madrigal, 'O softly singing lute,' Debussy's 'The Blessed Damozel,' and Purcell's 'Golden Sonata.' Miss Kathleen Merritt was the conductor.

SOUTHAMPTON.—Elgar's 'The Music-Makers' and Parry's 'The Pied Piper' were performed by the Philharmonic Society on April 14, under Mr. Walter Stanton's direction.

TONBRIDGE.—The Tonbridge Choral Society, a hundred voices, assisted by a capable orchestra of twenty-eight, performed 'King Olaf' at its forty-fourth concert on April 14. Mr. G. J. Kimmins was the conductor, and Mr. W. A. Sayer was at the organ.

TORQUAY.—The complete 'Hiawatha' trilogy was sung on April 16 by the Philharmonic Society under Dr. Harold Rhodes.——On April 29 a concert was given by the Winter Orchestra, under Mr. Ernest W. Goss, the programme including Percy Fletcher's Overture, 'Vanity Fair,' a Bach Suite, Cowen's Four Dances, and the 'Unfinished' Symphony.

WOLVERTON.—The three parts of 'Hiawatha' were sung on April 28 by the Wolverton Science and Art Institute and District Choral Society, of which Mr. C. Kenneth Garratt is hon. conductor.

BIRMINGHAM GRAND OPERA SOCIETY

Under the direction of Mr. St. Clare Barfield and Mr. Appleby Matthews, the new Amateur Opera Society gave its first public performance at the Prince of Wales's Theatre on April 26. The work chosen was Gounod's 'Faust,' and the opera was put on the stage in present-day costume.

The most striking feature of the performance was the singing of the chorus. Besides being pleasant to look at in their fresh summer dresses, tennis flannels, and 'plus-fours,' the members sang in a style that would have done credit to a professional company. They knew the music well, and there was rarely a false step, even on the first night.

Of the principals, the outstanding artist was Mr. Eric Cross, who sang the part of Faust. He is the possessor of a beautiful, lyrical tenor voice, with a singularly appealing quality in the middle register.

Mephistopheles, sung by Mr. Karl Melene, made his first appearance in evening clothes of the latest cut, with a red-lined opera cloak slung over his shoulder. He was returning from his midnight revels apparently, when he ran against Faust. Mr. Melene's voice was not hard and biting enough for the character, but he acted well, though a little restlessly.

As Marguerite, Miss Irene Collison was delightfully natural and charming; her voice was rather reedy, and she took liberties with the tempi, but on the whole it was a convincing performance.

The other parts were all capably sung, notably the Valentine and Martha.

The orchestra, led by Mr. Paul Beard, played with a good deal of zest, though the brass section was frequently out of tune with the strings. Mr. Appleby Matthews conducted with much skill, and kept his forces well in hand throughout the evening. G. W.

Music in Ireland

DUBLIN.—The inaugural concert of the new Civil Service Musical Society took place at La Scala Theatre on April 25, under the direction of Mr. Hubert Rooney. Its success is an earnest of even better things in the future.——On May 15, in the Metropolitan Hall, the Dublin Philharmonic Choral Society, under the direction of Mr. Turner Huggard, gave an enjoyable programme, the chief soloist being Mr. John Goss. This Society has for President the Governor-General of the Free State, and caters for lovers of popular music, as well as the classics. The choral items were by Palestrina, Morley, Bantock, Elgar, Grainger, and others.

A series of recitals by visiting organists has been given at Holy Trinity, Taunton. Admirable programmes have been played by Dr. Ernest Bullock, Mr. Hubert Hunt, Dr. M. P. Conway (two), and Mr. Reginald Ward. Attendances have been good, and collections and donations have covered the costs.

The Village Drama Society announces a competition for a one-Act play and a ballad-opera. Entries close on October 31. For full particulars write to the Secretary, Miss Mary Kelly, 15, Peckham Road, S.E.5.

Sharps and Flats

The amazing popularity of 'Valencia' is complete proof of the nullity of the great bulk of jazz music, and a proof also that the best (and I would go so far as to say the only) jazz music is dance music, and that to go to a concert to sit and listen to jazz music is as foolish as it would be to go to an exhibition of tarts and jellies made by a good chef set out as an exhibition of pictures in a picture gallery.—W. J. Turner.

I was in New York when I heard of the general strike. The first thing I did was to take a Turkish bath. It is the only place where all men, so long as they are alive, are equal. There are no class distinctions in a Turkish bath, except in the matter of waist measurements.—Feodor Chaliapin.

A jazz band visiting Glasgow was received with bagpipe selections. Terrorism must be met with terrorism.—Punch.

The honest rustic rhymes! Nobody sings them now (for sheep are shorn en masse by American machinery and the peasant is silent), except persons in evening clothes and pince-nez, who revive them to tickle the jaded ears of the intelligentsia in Chelsea.—Graphic.

'Made in England.' Ah, what wonderful words those three are. Good, old, strong, and honest England!—Feodor Chaliapin.

Now and then Mr. Walton's music was so like Stravinsky that it might have been written by Eric Fogg.—Ernest Newman.

Handy gardener wanted; willing musician preferred.—Local Paper.

Our last man might do. He was great on the saxifrage.—Punch.

We take the following skit from the New York Musical Digest, which in turn had 'conveyed' it from the New Yorker:

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE FOLK-SONG

The I'll-Be-With-You-When era of the American folk-song comprises the first few years of the present century. Songs like 'I'll Be With You When the Roses Bloom Again,' 'When the Sweet Potato Vine and the Chestnuts Intertwine,' and thousands of others of a similar tenor, prove conclusively that Americans of that primitive period had no hour-glasses, clocks, or other mechanical devices for telling time, but were absolutely dependent in making appointments on the growth of fruits, flowers, and vegetables. Indeed, even animals were sometimes used, as is illustrated by a song entitled, 'I'll Be With You When the Colt's a Little Horse,' which was recently unearthed.

The difficulties which confronted song writers of that era must have been enormous. The very fact that the word 'with,' the keystone of the title, was unrhymable for song purposes, would have discouraged any but American composers, but they were made of sterner stuff. It is not surprising that we find one of the most ingenious of them introducing a character who lisped, so that he could make rhymes with 'kiss' and 'miss,' both vital to the success of every folk-song. When his first composition appeared beginning,

'I'll be with you and I'll kith you,
For you know that I will mith you,' it was hailed as a distinct step forward in American music, and the composer was honoured by his contemporaries.

Whether it was the praises showered upon the composer or the financial success of his song which attracted so many followers is not known. At any rate an entire new school of I'll-Be-With-You-When songs was established. It reached its climax in songs like the following:

'I'll be with you when the odorouth narthithhuth
Thweetly tellth that Thpring ith onth more with uth;
Then whithper 'yeth' and with your bletthed
kithheth,
O promith me that you will be my mithhuth,' which were at first thought by scientists to be dialect songs of the early Indians.

In the period from January 16, 1900, to August 4, 1905, more than seventeen thousand I'll-Be-With-You-When songs had been written. Indeed, so popular did they become that wealthy industrial chieftains employed their own bards to celebrate big undertakings by putting them into song. A typical illustration is a song entitled 'I'll Be With You When the Fleece Is Off the Lamb,' which was found buried in an unused cistern near where the Sub-Treasury now stands.

In this era, as in all others, greedy commercialism, ever seeking to debauch art, again shows its ugly head. The composers did not hesitate to accept huge retainers from wealthy vested interests (as they were then called) for mentioning certain products in their songs. The composers of the song selected in 1901 as the most representative American composition of the year,

'When it's moon-time, when it's spoon-time,
I'll be with you when it's appetizing-prune-time,' was later found to have been paid fifty thousand dollars by the California Prune Growers' Association. So many prunes were consumed by lovers who met in the prune fields that year that there was not a sufficient quantity to go around, and the Government was forced to plant many thousands of acres to relieve the suffering in the large cities.

But the difficulties of song writers in the United States, great as they were, were mild compared with the obstacles confronting those living in America's possessions. In Alaska, for instance, there was a complete lack of vegetation, so that singing 'I'll Be With You When the Cotton's Nice and Fuzzy' would have been tantamount to an insult. Composers bravely met this situation, however, by making use of such natural resources as the country did have. This accounts for songs like,

'I'll be with you when the glacier
Moves a foot along its way,
That's where I long to face yer,
That's where we'll ever stray.'

An opposite situation prevailed in the Philippines. Here the vegetation was so luxuriant that an appointment made, for instance, when the walnuts bloomed again would scarcely be terminated before there would be a second crop of walnuts, and of course a second appointment. This led to a great deal of confusion until one of the composers conceived the idea of indicating the particular crop which was intended. The song, 'I'll Be With You When the Succotash Is Ripe'—

'When the succotash is garnered
On the thirty-second crop,
I will meet you, yes, I will, oh,
In the town of Iloillo
Near the Filippino Trust and Mortgage shop,'

well illustrates how composers overcame this difficulty.

A waning of interest in the I'll-Be-With-You-When type of song was bound to come with the introduction of Swiss timepieces into the United States. It was not long, however, before the interpretative genius of America was expressing in lyric form another typical phase of Americana. The thousands of pickaninnies dancing on the lower Mississippi levees while awaiting the arrival of the river steamers, the strumming of innumerable banjos, and the light-hearted gaiety of the mammies whiling the time away by balancing huge bales of cotton on their handkerchief-turbaned heads had their place in the culture of a great nation, and played their share in the nurture of many an inspiring composer. The promise of the I'll-Be-With-You-When gave way completely before the variety of emotions—joy, resignation, expectancy, and ecstasy—of the Waiting-on-the-Levee era. When, within two years of its appearance, Casey Jones, a well-known railroad and steamboat man of the period, piloted his ship into New Orleans he found the entire nation 'Waiting for the Robert E. Lee.'

PUCCINI'S 'TURANDOT'

By Alfred Kalisch

After a number of postponements probably unequalled even in the history of the Scala, Puccini's posthumous opera 'Turandot' was produced, at Milan, on Sunday, April 25.

To say that the greatest impression left by the performance was that made by the splendour and magnificence of the mise en scène, and the remarkable management of the stage crowds, may seem rather like placing the cart before the horse, or to use a more dignified metaphor, like summing up before hearing the evidence, but candour compels me to say that for one listener at least, it was so.

To proceed now in a more orderly manner: the libretto, by G. Adami and R. Simoni, has a somewhat long pedigree. The story in the Gesta Romanorum, apparently of Eastern origin, founded on a drama by the 18th-century Venetian, Carlo Gozzi, which was the direct source of the present play, has also inspired Schiller and Busoni. The principal motif is that of the Princess who proposes three riddles to intending suitors, who have to 'lose their proud heads' if they fail to guess. In some versions of the story the successful suitor, having won the prize, rejects it with contempt—which seems a reasonable thing to do. The Italian librettists have, however, elaborated the story and grafted on to it a new set of incidents which are not very satisfactory, even from the point of view of the stage, and which have the signal disadvantage of alienating from the principal characters the sympathy of all who are not constitutionally bloodthirsty. It is rather a surprise that Puccini, whose chief strength always lay in striking a note of tenderness, rather than in subtle musical psychology, did not realise this.

After guessing the riddles the unknown Prince, Calaf, says to the Princess: 'You made me guess three riddles, I will ask you only one—my name. If before dawn you can discover it, I will commit suicide.' The reasons he gives, that he does not want an unwilling bride, and that life without her would not be worth living, hardly seem satisfactory. Moreover, they involve a good deal of cruelty, which seems senseless. First of all the Princess threatens a wholesale massacre of the citizens of Pekin if they do not assist in the discovery. Secondly, there is a young slave (Liù) who knows the truth, and is secretly in love with Calaf. She is tortured, and kills herself rather than speak, because Calaf has commanded her to remain silent. This hardly presents him in an amiable light. The Prince's only reason for this callousness is that he has determined that he will himself reveal the truth to the Princess. Equally unsatisfactory is the Princess's reason for her cruelty; it is that she is the re-incarnation of an ancestress who suffered ruin and outrage at the hands of her conquerors. This is not made sufficiently plain in the text, and needs the aid of commentators to explain it. Finally the Princess tells her father that she knows the name of the Prince, and it is 'Love.' The theatricality of this is rather elementary. The last scene, in which Turandot makes her confession after a passionate love-duet, was—as is sufficiently known—left unfinished by Puccini, and the final pages were written by Franco Alfano on hints left by the composer. Probably no one would have succeeded perfectly, or even better than Alfano, in this almost impossible task; but Puccini himself, with his gift of ecstatic fervour, might perhaps have written a duet which would have softened the unpleasant impression left by the death of the young slave. It is, however, useless to speculate on what might have happened.

The first performance was remarkable for an incident probably unique in the history of opera. In accordance with the wish of Puccini, when the point was reached where the young slave dies, Toscanini, who conducted, addressed the audience, and said, 'Here the opera finishes; when he had written so far the composer died.' At subsequent performances Alfano's ending was included, as it had been at the final full rehearsal.

In choosing this text Puccini voluntarily imposed certain difficulties on himself, the principal one being that comparison with 'Madame Butterfly' is inevitable. He was fully conscious of this, but convinced himself that he had succeeded in avoiding them. I fear it must be said that in this respect he deceived himself. There is to Western ears an unmistakable family likeness between the themes from Japan and those from China, and there can be little doubt that the conscious effort to avoid resemblances to 'Butterfly' somewhat hampered his spontaneity.

The principal musical characteristics of the opera can be summed up briefly. As regards musical science the score of 'Turandot' is stronger than any of Puccini's previous works. The solidity and dramatic effectiveness of the choral writing are remarkable. It is characteristic that this merit has evoked greater admiration from German critics than from those of Puccini's own country. The opening choruses are particularly noticeable for the art with which the cold, barbaric atmosphere has been preserved. The almost grotesque passage where the executioner's assistants sharpen a huge sword is strangely striking. The processional and other choruses in the scene where the whole Court is assembled to witness the ordeal of the enigmas, have a remarkable brilliancy—which in places is occidental rather than oriental.

Puccini had already shown his skill in handling large masses in the ending of the first Act of 'Tosca' and the Embarkation scene in 'Manon,' but here it is even more remarkable. In 'Tosca' and 'Butterfly' Puccini shows the emotional and poetical effect which can be achieved by voices or choruses 'off,' and in the beginning of the third Act of 'Turandot' this is also strikingly evident.

A good many critics have spoken of the effect of the Russians, especially Moussorgsky, on the score, but perhaps it would be fairer to say that it is rather the inevitable result of orientalism in music than of any definite outside influence. Certainly the prevalent orchestral colour of the whole is Puccini's own, and increases our respect for him as a master of scoring.

It must be confessed that there are not many things in the score which are at all likely to attain the world-wide popularity of some of his most famous solos. There are only two which are at all in the running. One is the aria of Calaf, sung after he has guessed the riddles while he is waiting for the dawn, and the other is the appeal of the young slave, Liù, to the Princess, in which she tells her it is Love which has given her courage to endure torture. These are typically warm-hearted and luscious Puccini tunes. The reason why nothing in the part of Turandot herself has inspired Puccini with emotionally coloured music is really much to his honour. Melodies in the melting mood would have been totally at variance with the character of the icily cold and cruel Princess, and Puccini has consistently striven, with a large measure of success, to mirror this in his music.

The most taking number in the whole opera is the trio sung by the three comic Ministers, Ping, Pong, and Pang, who in spite of their Chinese names are really three typical characters of Italian comedy. They first try to dissuade the Prince from attempting to guess the riddles, and then strive to persuade him to reveal his secret, and so save the town from the horrors of wholesale massacre.

These are an essential part of the drama, but the first scene of the second Act is taken up by a long trio which is quite irrelevant to the action, although musically delightful, in spite of its length. It is in the vein of 'Gianni Schicchi,' reminiscent of Sullivan, and deliciously scored. It is interesting to compare the way in which Puccini has made use of musical contrasts here, with the carrying out of a similar idea in Strauss's 'Ariadne.'

Under Toscanini the performance was remarkably finished. A moral as to the danger of over-careful rehearsal may be drawn from the fact that at the first performance there was one hitch at a place which had gone perfectly smoothly at the dress rehearsal. The chorus singing was admirable, and of the three principal characters Rosa Raisa (Turandot) and Michele Fleta (Prince) overcame brilliantly the difficulties the librettists placed in the way of their winning the sympathies of the audience; and Maria Zamboni as Liù, the young slave, acted and sang with charm and tenderness. Of the rest of the cast special mention should be made of Francesco Rimini as the chief Minister.

The Vice-Chancellor of Oxford University has given his consent to the formation, on a year's probation, of an Oxford University Opera Club.

Musical Notes from Abroad

HOLLAND

The closing month of the season has not been an exciting one, though the first production in Holland, at Amsterdam, under Mengelberg, of de Falla's 'El Retablo de Maese Pedro' and the visit to Rotterdam and The Hague of the Ballet of the Paris Grand Opéra, have added distinction to it. Mengelberg has made a serious study of the work of de Falla, and had already conducted performances of 'El Retablo' in America, so that many of the disadvantages of a first performance were removed. The vocal parts were undertaken by Vera Janacopulos (Melisendra), Thomas Salignac (Pedro), and Hector Dufraisne (Don Quixote), and apart from the fact that the last-named seemed either to have a voice that was not sufficiently strong, or not to have gauged sufficiently the size of the theatre, they did wonderfully well. Even better was the orchestra of twenty members, with its hard scintillating tone but expressive rhythm, while the mounting and play of the marionettes were a triumph for Dutch staging. The high prices and the fact that it was so near the close of the season, militated against there being a large audience, but the reputation of the piece and the participants brought a fairly good number together, and the work was received with great enthusiasm. So also was de Falla's latest work, 'Psyché,' for voice and chamber orchestra, his seven 'Canciones Populares Espagnoles,' and Mozart's 'Marriage of Figaro.' The visit of the French Ballet was more successful at The Hague than at Rotterdam, where it did not attract the attention it deserved. Even granting that the French conductor was not able to get from the Dutch orchestra all that might have been got by a conductor with whose methods and personality the players were more familiar, the undertaking was well worth the effort and expense entailed. Stravinsky's 'Les Abeilles' was the least familiar work, and was very popular. Other works were Messager's 'Les Deux Pigeons,' Paul Dukas's 'La Péri,' Délibes's 'Sylvia,' the ballet from 'Faust,' and an arrangement of music by Chopin, 'La nuit ensorcelée.' As a change from the more solid methods of the Dutch ballets, of which there are a number, though none are of the highest standard, the stage performances were both delightful and instructive. Another French visit was that of Louis and Lucie Vuillemin, the former of whom gave lectures on 'Gabriel Fauré et son Œuvre,' with illustrations by Madame Vuillemin, and on 'La Musique en France au 17ème siècle,' illustrated by a local quintet which calls itself 'La Société hollandaise d'instruments anciens.' Both the music and the instruments themselves (lent by Dr. D. F. Scheurleer) were of more than ordinary interest. A movement of a new Symphony for a large orchestra and chorus, by Dina Appeldoorn, showed this young composer to be possessed of considerable power of expression, but the work failed largely through being too heavily scored for its purposes. With the lighter hand that should come with experience Mlle. Appeldoorn should do excellent work in the future. The movement was given by The Hague section of 'Toonkunst,' and was conducted by Dr. Joh. Wagenaar, whose 'Jupiter Amans' and a short number, 'Calme de Nuits,' to words by Camille Saint-Saëns, should teach his lady pupil much in the way of handling large forces. The Russian vocal Kedroff Quartet has been having considerable success here, and among other visitors Solomon, the English pianist, and Beatrice and Margaret Harrison have won many friends for themselves and for British music. From the public point of view it was unfortunate that the two Harrison sisters should have been booked at The Hague for the same night as that fixed for the opening of the French ballet. Notwithstanding this, however, the fine playing of the 'cellist aroused both surprise and delight among the critics and public who were able to attend and hear her, and she is sure of a very hearty welcome whenever she comes again, which all agree in hoping will be soon.

HERBERT ANTCLIFFE.

MONTE CARLO

AN ENGLISH BALLET

The Diaghilev Ballet troupe produced for the first time an English ballet here on May 4. The piece was 'Romeo and Juliet,' by Mr. Constant Lambert, a twenty-year-old student of the Royal College of Music, where he has worked under Dr. Vaughan Williams and Mr. R. O. Morris.

It had long been a matter for surprise that M. Diaghilev had not, in all the years during which the English public has been his most faithful and consistent supporters, thought fit to commission any English musician to write for him. Characteristically, this remarkable man, now that he has turned our way, has lighted upon an utterly unknown youth —and, be it added, a very clever one.

The new ballet is, like all the recent productions of the Diaghilev Company, 'only a little one.' Clearly the master-mind has decided that the day of the big, imposing spectacles such as first made the fame of the Russian Ballet is past. This 'Romeo and Juliet' is a mere trifle, but a very spirited, agreeable, and elegant trifle. The subject is hardly so much 'Romeo and Juliet' as the Ballet itself. It has occurred to some lively mind that the behaviour behind the scenes of the youthful flock of dancers was in itself matter for a spectacle. Hence this so-called 'rehearsal without scenery.'

Part 1 is simply a morning practice of the Russian Ballet with M. Slavinsky—that cheerful, breezy, athletic young man—as the dancing master. The only element of plot is supplied by the late arrival of the two principals—Madame Karsavina and M. Serge Lifar—who, it is hinted, are in love seriously and not merely ballet-wise. In Part 2 we see the troupe rehearsing a pantomime version of 'Romeo and Juliet,' and again everything is quite informal. It is indeed as though we were taking an unauthorised glimpse behind the scenes. Only the three or four principals (Karsavina and Lifar are, of course, the lovers) are in costume. The ballet in general wears its practice uniform, and sits about the stage in groups when it is not taking part. The Shakespearean scenes are very brief, and have something of the character of a charade. Only it is a charade played by young people for whom beauty and grace of gesture and movement are second nature. Lifar sketches with a turn of his head the love-lorn Romeo. And see Karsavina, pale as a moonbeam, abstracted and virginal—the Juliet of a dream! M. Tcherkas has a light dance to express Paris; and Madame Sokolova, in a huge, fantastic hat, plays the Nurse with solemn drollery. The Russian Ballet has not taken up 'Romeo and Juliet' very seriously, but, in this casual and lighthearted handling, there are some impressions of delicious grace. How is it all to end —since we are not asked to be much interested in Montagues and Capulets? It ends with an elopement from the ranks of the ballet of the two principals—a gay elopement, with a pantomime-charade of flight by motor-bicycle and aeroplane.

The fortunate youth, Mr. Lambert, who has such charming people to interpret this his first work, is worthy his fortune. He has written a very pretty, engaging, piquant little score. In form it is a suite of short, self-contained numbers. Mr. Lambert has not attempted to overbid the other young Diaghilev musicians on points of oddity and crazy surprises. In that remarkable galley he must, indeed, be esteemed a person of caution and respectful traditionalism. He has recognised that music was not born yesterday—that it has a past.

He has scored his dance suite for small orchestra. Everything is unclouded and agile. True to his generation, he edges away from sentimental expression. The taste of his music is dry (as opposed to sweet). Nothing clearly would annoy him so much as diffuseness, and all he has to say he tries to say pointedly in two minutes. His rhythms take some pretty little wilful turns, and his part-writing does not shun an occasional sharp clash, but there is nothing at all of the aggressive, spit-in-your-face manners of some of the young Frenchmen. In sum, Mr. Lambert is not above being pleasing, and one can see that that may in some quarters be a reproach to the new ballet, especially as all the action is happily innocent without an equivocal suggestion. To the art critics must be left the discussion of the curtains and other decorations by MM. Max Ernst and Joan Miro, who are, it appears, the leaders of the latest Paris art fashion, 'Super-realism.' Their work is certainly as odd as the seeker after novelty at the Diaghilev Ballet has a right to expect. M. Ernst's first curtain is a sunrise at sea—the sun depicted as by a child with a pair of compasses and coloured chalks. M. Miro's curtain, representing apparently, sub-aqueous life, and his moon in the 'Romeo' scene—a vast gramophone disc—will equally be discussed.

'LES BICHES' AND 'BARABAU'

Along with established pieces of the older repertory the Ballet has also performed 'Les Biches' (music by Poulenc) and 'Barabau' (Rieti). The former is a piece of tired, post-war frivolousness—deliberately empty, and a shade vulgar. It is a symptom of the uprooting of the Russian Ballet from a territorial home. The ballet has here lost touch with its old folk-element, and does its best with what the vacuous life of the big, expensive hotel has to offer. 'Les Biches' is, of course, more at home at Monte Carlo than anywhere. For my part, I positively dislike it—and yet must recognise that, for what it sets out to do, it is elegant and clever, and incomparably better than anything of the sort in which M. Diaghilev had not had a hand. The gaiety of Poulenc's music has a rasp—the gaiety of people who sit up too late and drink rather too much, and would be all the better for having to work for an honest living.

Londoners have seen 'Barabau,' which is a piece of Italian rusticity with some rather jolly jokes in the music and carefully stylified horse-play on the stage. Again—not one of Diaghilev's great things, but how much better than most other people's best!

C.

TORONTO

There are many political ways of cementing international friendship, as a glance at history will show. But it does not often fall to the lot of one of the arts to bring influence to bear upon the relations between one nation and another. Yet we are told by one of the leading Cincinnati critics, that the visit of the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir, under Dr. H. A. Fricker, and the tremendous success of the three concerts given in conjunction with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, under Mr. Fritz Reiner, were undoubtedly of great international significance. The writer hinted that, generally speaking, a country's national importance may be estimated by the quality of its art. Now that these concerts are over, there are thousands of people at Cincinnati who have an entirely new conception of Canada and its people.

Space does not permit of detailed comment, but it may be recorded that the a cappella work of the choir, under its own conductor, was a revelation to Americans, and the performance of the ninth Symphony, under Mr. Reiner, eclipsed, for masterful yet dignified brilliance, anything the Mendelssohn Choir has attempted under foreign direction.

There have been two magnificent, but (as usual) poorly-attended recitals, in Massey Hall this month. The first introduced to Toronto America's fine violinist, Albert Spalding, an artist who is as great a human personality as he is musician, and who possesses, in addition to faultless technique, a quality which is, so far as our knowledge goes, unique—that of producing a remarkable variety of tone-colour; so much so, that it is difficult to believe that only one instrument is speaking.

Then came the famous Fisk Jubilee Singers, a quintet of negro vocalists who have knowledge of voice-production and tonal beauty of a quality entirely foreign to this country. Their programme of 'spirituals' was a revelation of sheer melodic purity, such as any nation should be proud to call folk-song.

Local recitals have been given by Hubert S. Martindale (vocalist), the Barnaby-Nelson Studio Club, and pupils of Paul Wells and Viggo Kihl (pianoforte), of the Toronto Conservatory staff.

VIENNA

OPERATIC HAPPENINGS

The widespread belief that the custom of writing music 'to order' is a symptom only of our mercenary age is as erroneous as many other superstitions based on a roseate conception of the 'good old times.' To see Richard Strauss composing a Pianoforte Concerto—the much-discussed 'Parergon'—for a Viennese pianist in exchange for a fantastic fee is not so disagreeable as the fact that the artistic value of the Concerto is virtually nil. That Strauss composed it 'to order' certainly does not weigh heavily, and the Concerto shares its mediocrity with much of the 'occasional' music written by far greater masters.

The circumstances of its origin may also account for many of the weaknesses of Adolphe Adam's old opera, 'Si j'étais roi.' Adam composed this unassuming specimen of opéra-comique to aid the then ailing Théâtre Lyrique, of Paris. He penned it within a span of three weeks, which is a formidable record even for so prolific a composer, who was wont to turn out as many as three or four operas within a single season. With the precedent in mind, the management of the Volksoper resorted to Adam's piece to increase its waning receipts. The hope proved futile, and the outcome more than explained the fact that merely the Overture of this opera has survived. The plot is of disarming simplicity, and the music no less antiquated to our taste than the pieces of Auber, or Lortzing's 'bourgeois' operas. Mozart's comic operas, it seems, will survive in splendid isolation.

At the same Theatre, Julius Bittner's comic opera, 'Genéral d'amour,' merely succeeded in weakening the impression which this all too versatile composer had but recently created with his chef d'œuvre, the 'Great Mass.' The score is not devoid of the refinement and of the tasteful orchestration to be expected from a musician of Bittner's ideals; but such virtues were ill-applied in a disguised operetta (albeit a historical one, with the Emperor Napoleon as its unseen hero), and the result was a hybrid—neither fish nor flesh.

Emmerich Kalman is not open to such reproach. His new comic opera, 'The Circus Princess,' was produced by the Theater an der Wien with all the accompanying features of an international event. By virtue of the phenomenal success of 'Countess Mariza,' Kalman is to-day the acknowledged leader of Viennese operetta; and rightly so, for he knows the unfailing recipe for this species of entertainment. Unburdened by æsthetic scruples, by the grand-opera aspirations of Lehar or the Offenbachian inclinations of Oscar Straus, Kalman writes music with an admittedly strong popular note. His claim to success is backed by a fine sense of rhythm, brilliant orchestration, and the ever convincing innate Hungarian character of his music (blended with Viennese elements and, in his new piece, with Russian strains demanded by the plot).

At the Volksoper an exotic guest, Teiko Kiwa—somewhat blatantly announced as a 'world-famous' Japanese soprano—attracted unusual attention. The mistrust inspired by the proverbial enthusiasm of the crafty press-agent gave way to genuine admiration when this singer impersonated Puccini's 'Madame Butterfly.' Madame Kiwa displayed a big, ringing soprano voice capable of expressing the whole gamut of emotion. In her acting, which was the most remarkable quality of her performance, she weds Italian realism with primitive Oriental force and Western culture and restraint. Such commendable self-discipline, unfortunately, is absent from the 'strong' effects with which Maria Jeritza, back from America, is again serving her delighted, if diminishing, Viennese clientèle. Madame Jeritza's violent methods were in place in the wild-West romance of Puccini's melodramatic 'Fanciulla del West,' but marred the effect of her 'Jenufa' in Leos Janácek's opera of that name. Here, 'the play's the thing,' not the rôle. Robbed of all opportunities for the display of acrobatic facilities, Madame Jeritza coped unsuccessfully with a rôle which demands not cinema tricks but genuine and sincere humanity. On hearing this opera, the listener is again struck by the 'modernism' of the music, written twenty-six years ago, and is again surprised that this early work should have remained the supreme and unsurpassed artistic effort of its venerable composer.

VIENNESE MUSIC—MODERN AND 'MODERN'

Unlike Berlin, where Alban Berg's opera, 'Wozzeck,' has 'made history,' according to the opinion of the progressive critics, Vienna, his home city, has so far not heard his most important work. It remained for Heinrich Jalowetz, a young conductor from the Schönberg circle, to produce three fragments from the opera in concert form. Detached from its scenic environment, the music (in which Berg embodied the principles of expressionism so far back as 1914) conveys the erroneous idea of impressionistic mood-description. Yet the inherent dramatic strength did not miss its mark, even in this foreign environment.

It was distinctly encouraging to compare the vociferous success of such modernistic and supposedly 'unintelligible' music with the cool reception accorded, on the same occasion, to an academic composition such as the 'Fredegundis Variations,' by Franz Schmidt. Craftsmanship alone will not suffice in our progressive period to justify such perseverance in traditional style as Schmidt, avowed apostle of 'classicism,' delights in. It is particularly disturbing to observe a young and talented composer such as Erich Wolfgang Korngold among those most fiercely opposed to modern musical tendencies; but more annoying still to see him applying misunderstood modernism to an essentially conventional idiom, as in his new songs for contralto voice. These songs, which Rosette Anday sang with the composer at the pianoforte, pretend to a progressiveness which is merely external. Korngold trims his customary idiom—a composite of Strauss and Puccini—with arbitrarily interspersed 'false' notes, which are not the result of logically developed counteracting melodic lines, but another symptom of the insincerity which has ever marred the output of this gifted young man. Empty pathos, obvious sentimentalism, and the outworn Korngold mannerisms prevail in the new songs, which are announced as studies for Korngold's next opera, 'The Miracle of Heliane.'

COWELLISM

Modern to the extreme are the methods of Henry Cowell, a young composer-pianist from America. This modernism is not in his compositions, which rely on Stravinsky's example for grotesque effects, on MacDowell's (say) for 'sentiment,' and on Bach's for grandeur. Cowell is most original as a performer. To describe him as a pianist would be misleading. Rather he sees in the pianoforte a surrogate for the orchestral apparatus, and by alternate employment of his fingers, fists, and elbows, and by direct contact of his fingers and fists with the strings, Cowell strives for, and achieves, an astounding variety of tone-colour. His music is, apparently, conceived for an instrument of the future to combine the resources of a modern pianoforte with the facilities of a jazz-band. His performance is unusual, often alarming, but always interesting. Its coming is timely, perhaps, at this moment, when the 'virtuoso' school, built on the once epoch-making achievements of Chopin and Liszt, is beginning to outlive itself. Perhaps—who knows?—Cowell holds the key to new problems and possibilities of pianism.

PAUL BECHERT.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths:

ALFRED KING, at Brighton, on April 26, aged eighty-nine. He was born at Shelley, in Essex, and at a very early age showed marked musical ability. At eighteen, he acted as organist at Cuddesdon Theological College, and shortly afterwards became organist to Earl Somers, at Eastnor, Herefordshire, and organist and choirmaster to the Llandaff Choral Union. He went to Brighton in 1865, where he was organist at St. Michael's, subsequently holding a similar post at the Parish Church for ten years. He was chorus master for the Brighton Festivals, organized by Kuhe a half-century ago. In 1883 he founded, with the late Robert Taylor, the Brighton School of Music, of which he was still a director at the time of his death. He was the oldest Fellow of the R.C.O., President of the Brighton Musical Fraternity, Corporation Organist, and a prominent Freemason.

JOHN FRANK SHEPHERDSON, in a Cambridge Nursing Home, on April 25, aged thirty-eight. He graduated at Clare College in 1916, taking his Mus. Bac. and M.A. degrees a few years later. For some time he was assistant-organist at King's College, a past president of the Cambridge University Musical Club, hon. secretary of the C.U. Musical Society, and conductor of the Cambridge Philharmonic Society. He became music-master at the Leys School about ten years ago, and his term of office will long be remembered for the enthusiasm he roused for the finest music. Among the notable features in the school music were the annual Bach recitals, the boys themselves taking a prominent part in the performances of cantatas, &c.

MISCHA LÉON, suddenly, in the Ophthalmic Hospital, New York, on April 7, following an operation for abscess of the throat. His real name was Harry Haurowitz. Léon studied singing at Copenhagen, where he made his début in 'Fra Diavolo,' singing the title-rôle. He was well-known in various Continental cities, and in London, both as operatic artist and as recitalist. He married the Canadian singer, Pauline Donalda.

GEORGE SUTHERLAND, at Glasgow. Mr. Sutherland was an original member of the Glasgow Amateur Orchestral Society, which he led for some years. He was one of the promoters of the Scottish Orchestra, and sat for a period on the Committee of Management. Mr. Sutherland was the oldest living member of the Glasgow Palette Club, and was an ex-President. He acted for some years as musical critic to the Glasgow Evening Citizen.

Answers to Correspondents

A. D. A.—What are we to say to a sixteen-year-old correspondent who wants to become (not at once, of course!) a musical critic? First, if he will be warned by the pronouncements of musical critics themselves, he will choose some other walk in life; for one and all declare (sometimes even in print) that it is a dog's life. Yet they look well on it, and (between ourselves, A. D. A.) we don't believe many of them would willingly change their job. So if you are really keen about it, go ahead. Your 'strong points at school'—literature and composition—and your 'passionate fondness for theory, musical history,' &c., indicate not only a bent, but an ability to achieve it, if you continue to work hard. Remember always that the way to learn easy and natural writing (the kind that there is always room for) is to keep on writing on all sorts of subjects. Don't confine yourself to music. Few music critics can write shorthand, and only some of them can tap a typewriter with neatness and despatch, but sooner or later they all wish they could. So, while you are still in the 'teens, when everything is possible and most things easy, master both accomplishments. Read all the musical criticism and journalism you can lay your hand on; and note in our review columns such books as have a bearing on the formation of musical taste. When you leave school try to obtain a post in almost any writing capacity on a good provincial journal. At the back of it all, build up a sound knowledge of music, past and present. If means permit, enter the Royal College of Music, where there is a class for this subject. (We are glad to hear that, though so young, you are 'already as much attached to the Musical Times as any "Old Reader."')

KIM.—Probably your needs would be met by Dalcroze's 'Method of Eurhythmics' (Novello) and Abdy Williams's 'Rhythm of Modern Music' (Macmillan).

L. W.—Your questions (1) to (4) seem to show that you have got either a bad pianoforte or a pianoforte in a bad state. We have only once played on an instrument made by the firm you mention: it was very poor. (5.) We prefer the opening bars of Chopin's D flat Valse without the broken phrasing you suggest. The whirling effect is better got by treating the passage as one long phrase, practically without accent. In the only edition we have at hand (that of Debussy) this is the reading adopted.

E. P.—(1.) It is generally held that in strict counterpoint one harmony per bar is the rule. But there are exceptions, which should justify themselves by their effect. (2.) The third of the dominant should not always be regarded as a leading-note. Only in passages where it clearly has that feeling (e.g., cadences) is there any necessity to make it rise to the tonic. (3.) The rule is quite sound, and you needn't worry about the note of the resolution making a fourth with the second note.

G. W.—Your 'Dancing Master's Kit' violin was probably made by Messrs. Longman & Lukey, a firm of music publishers that began trading at about 1767 as J. Longman & Co., at the Harp and Crown, Cheapside. They made a great variety or musical instruments of the small and 'freak' sort. The firm underwent many changes, its final title apparently being Broderip & Wilkinson.

DOWLAND.—We do not care to discuss an adjudicator's pronouncement on the point you mention; a verbatim report of his remarks would probably justify his decision. Speaking without prejudice, however, we prefer your treatment of the opening bar to that laid down by the judge.

S. E.—Try Kitson's 'Harmony' (Oxford University Press), 'Musical Composition,' Stanford (Macmillan); 'Composition,' Stainer (Novello); and 'Outlines of Musical Form,' Albert Ham (Novello). We suggest the last-named as an aid on the composition side.

R. W. P.—A question of no general interest, even if we could settle it—which we can't.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS:—

	£ s. d.
Two Lines	0 3 0
Three Lines	0 3 4
For every additional Line	0 0 10
One inch (displayed)	0 10 0
Half a Column...	2 0 0
A Column	4 0 0
A Page	7 10 0

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.

A remittance should be sent with every Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To insure insertion in their proper positions, Advertisements for the next issue should reach the Office, 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1, not later than MONDAY, JUNE 21 (FIRST POST).

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Our Thousandth Number	497
Our First Number	502
The Charm of Limitations. By Alexander Brent-Smith	503
Joseph Mainzer	504
Personalities among Musical Critics.—V. Richard Capell. By Basil Maine	506
Ad Libitum. By 'Feste'	507
New Light on Late Tudor Composers.—XVII. William Blitheman. By W. H. Grattan Flood	511
Music in the Foreign Press. By M.-D. Calvocoressi	512
Charles Burney in the Light of his Letters. By E. van der Straeten	513
Music in Tolstoy's Life. By his son, Count Sergius Tolstoy	516
The Pianoforte Concerto Problem. By Robert H. Hull	518
Points from Lectures	519
The New Organ-Pianoforte. By Anthony Clyne	520
New Music	521
The Musician's Bookshelf	524
Player-Piano Notes. By William Delasaire	527
Royal Academy of Arts. By Arthur T. Froggatt	528
Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus'	533
Occasional Notes	535
The Heather Festival at Oxford. By Frank Howes (Illustrated)	537
Church and Organ Music	541
Royal College of Organists	541
Letters to the Editor	543
The Amateurs' Exchange	546
Sixty Years Ago	546
Royal Academy of Music	546
Royal College of Music	546
Trinity College of Music	547
The Associated Board: Award of Medals	547
Music in Public Schools	547
The Influence of Music from Arabic Sources: Musical Association Lecture	548
The Union of Graduates in Music (Incorporated)	549
London Concerts	549
Competition Festival Record	551
Music in the Provinces	554
Birmingham Grand Opera Society	555
Music in Ireland	555
Sharps and Flats	555
The Development of the Folk-Song	555
Puccini's 'Turandot.' By Alfred Kalisch	556
Musical Notes from Abroad	557
Obituary	559
Answers to Correspondents	559

MUSIC.

'Into Thy gracious hands' ('In Manus Tuas'). Short Anthem for All Souls' Day, Memorial or Burial Service. By ERNEST BULLOCK	529

TWO EXTRA SUPPLEMENTS are given with this number:

1. No. 1 of the 'Musical Times.'
2. 'How calmly the evening.' By Edward Elgar. Arranged as a Trio for Female Voices by the composer.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED.

AITKEN, G.—Communion Service in C. 2s.

BULLOCK, ERNEST.—"Into Thy gracious hands" (In Manus Tuas). Anthem for All Souls' Day, Memorial or Burial Service. (No. 1,000, The Musical Times.) 2d.

GLENDINNING, R. R.—Communion Service in F. 1s.

HAM, ALBERT.—Minuet and Trio for Organ. 2s.

HARWOOD, B.—Voluntary in D flat. (No. 18, Original Compositions for the Organ, by Basil Harwood.) 2s.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 408, contains the following music in both notations.—"This great world is a trouble." Unison Song. By Richard Leveridge (1670-1758). Excerpt from "The Magic Flute," arranged as Vocal Study. Minuet, for Pianoforte. "Lads and Lasses." Round. Mozart. 2d.

SCHOOL SONGS.—Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

		A.	B.
Book No. 277.	"The Beautiful Folk-Songs of France." Book I (Collected by AUSTIN DE CROZE, and harmonized by GUSTAVE FERRARI.)	2s.	—
No. 1443.	"Hopsa! Lisella," from the "Beautiful Folk-Songs of France." Book I	2d.	—

TONIC SOL-FA PUBLICATIONS:

No. 2508.	"Welcome, Yule!" Ancient Carol, 15th Century (S.A.T.B.). C. HUBERT H. PARRY	2d.
2514.	"Ring out, wild bells." Festival Carol (T.T.B.B.). PERCY E. FLETCHER	4d.

WHITE, E. S.—Preces and Responses. 4d.

WORTLEY, C. B. STUART.—Hymn-Tune, Double Chant and Quadruple Chant. 2d.

REDUCED PRICE

PURCELL, H.—"Dido and Æneas." An Opera. 2s. 6d.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK.

BALDWIN, R. L.—"Mother and Maid." A Northumbrian Ballad. Song for Middle Voice. 50 cents (2s.).

MATTHEWS, J. S.—"Liberty Bell." Song or Unison Chorus. 10 cents (4d.).

—— "Liberty Bell." Part-song for Mixed Voices. 12 cents (6d.).

VIBBARD, H. L.—"He that dwelleth in the secret place." Song for High Voice. 50 cents (2s.).

ORGANIST, ASSISTANT (voluntary), for occasional simple Services. Lady or gentleman. Fine three-manual. S.E. district. "E. N. C.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER required for St. Mary-le-Tower, Ipswich. Salary, £125. Duty to commence September 1. Further particulars from Secretary, 70, Grove Lane, Ipswich. Applications to be received not later than June 21.

OSWESTRY PARISH CHURCH.—ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER WANTED. Hill 3-manual. £100 from Church. Can be considerably augmented by pupils, &c. Appy, Vicar.

CHOIRMASTER AND ORGANIST WANTED for Brixton Hill Wesleyan Methodist Church. Applications, stating age, denomination, qualifications, experience, and salary required to J. T. Baker, 65, Holmewood Gdns., Streatham Hill, S.W.2.

JUST PUBLISHED.

TWELVE COUNTRY DANCE TUNES

COLLECTED BY

CECIL J. SHARP

ARRANGED FOR

BRASS OR MILITARY BAND

By GORDON JACOB.

IN THREE SETS.

PRICE ... ... 4*s.* 6*d.* EACH.

Separate Parts, 3*d.* each.

SET 1.

THE BUTTERFLY
GALOPEDE.
HASTE TO THE WEDDING.
NANCY'S FANCY.

SET 2.

GATHERING PEASCODS.
RUFTY, TUFTY.
HEY BOYS.
THE BLACK NAG.

SET 3.

IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
THE OLD MOLE.
SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MARY AND DOROTHY.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SIX SEA SONGS

ARRANGED FOR PIANOFORTE DUET

BY

GEOFFREY SHAW.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TWELVE SHORT PIECES

FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE

BY

C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

IN THREE SETS.
Price 4*s.* each.

FIRST SET.	SECOND SET.	THIRD SET.
1 Idyll.	1 Prelude.	1 Preamble.
2 Romance.	2 Romance.	2 Romance.
3 Capriccio.	3 Capriccio.	3 Capriccio.
4 Lullaby.	4 Envoi.	4 Envoi.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Music and Books

at Great Reductions.

Foyles hold a wide range of Second-hand Copies in good condition of Pianoforte and Organ Music, Oratorios, Operas, and Choral Works of every description, Standard Musical Text-books, Dramatic Literature and Plays, which they offer at tremendous reductions. Send for Catalogue 122 (free); mentioning definite requirements if possible.

New Books and Music supplied on best terms, and prompt delivery guaranteed.

Music and Books Purchased.

FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,

121-125, CHARING CROSS ROAD, LONDON, W.C.2.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER desires POST, London or district; large or small Nonconformist Church. Good references and recommendations. "E. S.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORCHESTRAL ORGANIST, F.R.C.O., requires position in Cinema Band. Expert vamp and extempore player. Apply, "F.R.C.O.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour St., W.1.

ELY CATHEDRAL.—There is a VACANCY for an ALTO LAY-CLERK. Stipend, £150 per annum. Applications to the Rev. The Precentor, Ely Cathedral.

FOR SALE.—BORD PIANOFORTE, fitted with Norman & Beard Pneumatic Pedals. Accept 25 gns., including Bench. Address, Allan Brown, 298, Balham High Road, S.W.17.

MUSIC COMPOSERS and LYRICISTS.—Songs, Lyrics, and Musical Compositions wanted for Publication. We set Lyrics to Music if desired. Send MSS. (words or music) to the Carlton Music Agency, 8, Lloyd Square, London, W.C.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE DESCANT HYMN-TUNE BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF WELL-KNOWN TUNES

ARRANGED BY

GEOFFREY SHAW

TUNES, AND APPROPRIATE HYMNS.

TUNE.	METRE.	HYMN.
Austria	8.7.8.7.D.	Glorious things of thee are spoken
		Praise the Lord ! ye heavens, adore Him
Bishopthorpe	C.M.	This is the day the Lord hath made
Darwall's 148th	6.6.6.6.4.4.4.4.	Ye holy Angels bright
Ein' feste Burg	8.7.8.7.6.6.6.7.	A safe stronghold our God is still
		Rejoice to-day with one accord
Eisenach	L.M.	Great God, Who, hid from mortal sight
		O Love, how deep ! how broad ! how high
Hanover	10.10.11.11.	Disposer Supreme, and Judge of the earth
		O worship the King, All-glorious above
Hyfrydol	8.7.8.7.D.	Alleluia ! sing to Jesus
Irish	C.M.	The Son of Man from Jordan rose
Lasst uns erfreuen	L.M. (with Alleluias)	Light's glittering morn bedecks the sky
		Ye watchers and ye holy ones
Leoni	6.6.8.4.D.	The God of Abraham praise
Luther	8.7.8.7.8.8.7.	Great God, what do I see and hear?
Melcombe	L.M.	New every morning is the love
Morning Hymn	L.M.	Awake, my soul, and with the sun
Nun danket	6.7.6.7.6.6.6.6.	Now thank we all our God
Old 100th (1st Version)	L.M.	All people that on earth do dwell
Old 100th (2nd Version)	L.M.	Before Jehovah's awful Throne
Old 104th	10.10.11.11.	Disposer Supreme, and judge of the earth
		O worship the King, All-glorious above
Richmond	C.M.	Praise to the Holiest in the height
Rockingham	L.M.	My God, and is Thy Table spread ?
		When I survey the wondrous Cross
St. Anne (1st Version)	C.M.	O God, our help in ages past
St. Anne (2nd Version)	C.M.	The Son of God goes forth to war
St. Theodulph	7.6.7.6.D.	All glory, laud, and honour
St. Thomas	S.M.	The Advent of our God
Surrey	8.8.8.8.8.	The Lord my pasture shall prepare
		We have not known Thee as we ought
Tallis' Canon	L.M.	Glory to Thee, my God, this night
Unser Herrscher	8.7.8.7.8.7.	Come ye faithful, raise the anthem
Victory	8.8.8.4.	The strife is o'er, the battle done
Wareham	L.M.	O Saviour, Lord, to Thee we pray
Warrington	L.M.	Now that the daylight fills the sky
Wiltshire	C.M.	Through all the changing scenes of life
Winchester New	L.M.	On Jordan's bank the Baptist's cry
Winchester Old (1st Version)	C.M.	When God of old came down from Heaven
Winchester Old (2nd Version)	C.M.	While shepherds watched their flocks by night

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.
Voice Parts only, 8*d*.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVALS.

HYMNS AND TUNES

PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED.

Price Three-Halfpence each.

		Words by	Music by
1.	COME, CHILDREN, ON AND FORWARD	F. Bevan	G. C. Martin
2.*	FOR THE FRESHNESS OF THE MORNING	W. St. Hill Bourne	Lady Euan-Smith
3.	I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY	Emily H. Miller	F. Clay
4.	COME, O COME, IN PIOUS LAYS	G. Wither	J. Stainer
5.	THINE FOR EVER! GOD OF LOVE	Mary F. Maude	W. C. Harvey
	NOW THE DAYLIGHT GOES AWAY	F. R. Havergal	J. Adcock
6.	JESU, WHOM THY CHILDREN LOVE	J. F. Wheeler	H. E. Button
7.*	SWEETLY O'ER THE MEADOWS FAIR	F. A. Challinor	F. A. Challinor
8.	WOULD YOU GAIN THE BEST IN LIFE	H. R. Palmer	C. J. May
9.	ON OUR WAY REJOICING	J. S. B. Monsell	W. B. Gilbert
10.	AGAIN THE MORN OF GLADNESS	J. Ellerton	J. Stainer
11.	THE ANGEL'S SONG	F. R. Havergal	A. Randegger
12.	FORWARD, CHRISTIAN CHILDREN	Helen W. Selby	A. Moffat
13.	THE GOLDEN SHORE	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
14.	SAVIOUR, BLESSED SAVIOUR	G. Thring	John E. West
15.	ENTER WITH THANKSGIVING	W. St. Hill Bourne	F. H. Cowen
16.	MAN SHALL NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE	W. H. Draper	J. V. Roberts
17.	STARS, THAT ON YOUR WONDROUS WAY	J. Bogue	J. Stainer
18.	THE DAY IS PAST AND OVER	J. M. Neale	A. Barnby
19.	WE MARCH, WE MARCH TO VICTORY	G. Moultrie	J. Barnby
20.	HARK! HARK! THE ORGAN LOUDLY PEALS	G. Thring	G. J. Bennett
21.	O WHAT CAN LITTLE HANDS DO	G. W. Hinsdale	H. E. Button
22.	THE ROSEATE HUES OF EARLY DAWN	C. F. Alexander	A. Sullivan
23.	LORD, THY CHILDREN GUIDE AND KEEP	W. W. How	A. S. Cooper
24.	THE BEAUTIFUL LAND	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
	JESU, TENDER SHEPHERD, HEAR ME	M. L. Duncan	H. Parker
25.	THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF ENGLAND	J. Compston	J. Stainer
26.	THE CITY OF LIGHT	F. Alder	E. J. Troup
27.	GOD IS IN HEAVEN! CAN HE HEAR	A. Gilbert	H. E. Button
	GENTLE JESUS, MEEK AND MILD	C. Wesley	J. Stainer
28.*	HE DWELLS AMONG THE LILIES	W. St. Hill Bourne	Lady Euan-Smith
29.	THE CROWN IS WAITING	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
30.	RAISE YOUR STANDARD, BROTHERS	G. Spiller	E. J. Troup
31.*	FLOWERS	F. R. Havergal	A. Randegger
32.	THE GOOD SHEPHERD	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
33.	ABOVE THE CLEAR BLUE SKY	M. Bourdillon	H. E. Crimp
34.	WHEN LOVE DRAWS NEAR	L. Whitehead	E. J. Troup
35.	COME, SING WITH HOLY GLADNESS	J. J. Daniell	G. W. Torrance
36.	WE WILL PRAISE THEE	E. Oxenford	J. Stainer
37.*	WHAT CAN I GIVE JESUS	A. C. Benson	A. M. Goodhart
38.	COME, PRAISE OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR	W. W. How	H. A. Chambers
39.	NOW THE DAY IS OVER	S. Baring-Gould	F. W. Blunt
40.*	WE THANK THEE, LORD, FOR THIS FAIR EARTH	G. E. L. Cotton	W. C. Harvey
41.	THE LESSON OF LOVE		J. Barnby
42.	COME, FRIENDS, THE WORLD WANTS MENDING		E. J. Troup
43.	CREATOR, GOD, AND LORD	Mary Bradford Whiting	J. H. Maunder
44.*	O GOD, WE COME BEFORE THEE	J. Gibson	Tune—"Ellacombe"
45.	WHAT IS THE GIFT THAT I CAN BRING	Mary Bradford Whiting	H. A. Chambers
	HOSANNA WE SING	G. S. Hodges	H. A. Chambers
46.	HEAVENLY FATHER, SEND THY BLESSING	Christopher Wordsworth	W. C. Harvey
47.	THE DAYS OF OLD	Ethel Boyce	Ethel Boyce
48.*	BLESSED JESU, WE CAN SEE THEE	Doris Rowley	Alec Rowley
	THE EARTH IS FAIR AND SWEET	Doris Rowley	Alec Rowley
49.*	WHILE OUR LORD WAS PASSING BY	Ethel Boyce	Ethel Boyce
50.*	PILGRIMS OF THE NIGHT	F. W. Faber	Oliver King
51.*	THE HOLY LIGHT	W. M. W. Call	C. H. Lloyd
52.*	NOW SINKS THE SUN THAT LIT OUR FESTAL MORN	Mary Bradford Whiting	C. J. May
53.	LIFE'S GLAD MORNING	Kate Hopkins	G. C. Martin
54.	JESUS, BLESSED SAVIOUR	F. R. Havergal	A. Herbert Brewer
55.	COME, CHRISTIAN YOUTHS AND MAIDENS	T. A. Stowell	Harvey Grace
56.*	THY WORD IS LIKE A GARDEN, LORD	E. Hodder	Eric H. Thiman
	WHEN THE LORD OF LOVE WAS HERE	Stopford A. Brooke	Eric H. Thiman
57.	GOD OF OUR FATHERS	Mary Rowles Jarvis	E. J. Hopkins
58.	CHILDREN OF GOD	F. G. Russell	F. G. Russell
	GOD OF MERCY, THRONED ON HIGH	H. Neele	Harvey Grace
59.	THE CHILDREN'S PRAYER	Robert McLeod	Robert McLeod
60.	THE LORD BE WITH US	J. Ellerton	C. J. May

* These Hymns are suitable for Flower Services.

The above are also published in Seven Sets, containing Ten Hymns and Tunes, price 6d. per Set.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVALS.

HYMNS AND TUNES.

PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED.

SET VII.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Price 6d. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

May also be had in separate numbers, Price 1½d. each.

CONTENTS.

1.	Life's glad morning	GEORGE C. MARTIN
2.	Jesus, blessèd Saviour	A. HERBERT BREWER
3.	Come, Christian youths and maidens	HARVEY GRACE
4.	Thy Word is like a garden	E. H. THIMAN
5.	God of mercy, throned on high	HARVEY GRACE
6.	God of our fathers	E. J. HOPKINS
7.	When the Lord of love	E. H. THIMAN
8.	Children of God	F. G. RUSSELL
9.	The Children's Prayer	R. MCLEOD
10.	The Lord be with us	C. J. MAY

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ANTHEMS, ETC.

Sacred Unison Songs for Soprano Voices (or Solos).

Children's Angel, The (both Notations)	CH. GOUNOD	2d.
Come, let us all this day (both Notations)	J. S. BACH	2d.
Lord, at all times I will bless Thee (both Notations)	MENDELSSOHN	3d.
Lord of our being (both Notations)	G. F. HANDEL	1½d.
O for the wings of a dove (both Notations)	MENDELSSOHN	2d.

Sacred Two-part Songs and Anthems for Soprano Voices.

Except the Lord build the House (both Notations)	M. J. MONK	3d.
Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard (both Notations)	MYLES B. FOSTER	4d.
Faint not, fear not, God is near thee (both Notations)	HENRY SMART	4d.
God sends the night (both Notations)	G. RATHBONE	4d.
Like as the hart (both Notations)	V. NOVELLO, arr. by H. ELLIOT BUTTON	2d.
Lord is my Shepherd, The (s. & c., both Notations)	HENRY SMART	3d.
O for the wings of a dove (Staff Notation only)	MENDELSSOHN, arr. by J. E. WEST	4d.
O how amiable are Thy dwellings (Staff Notation only)	J. H. MAUNDER	4d.
Songs of Praise the Angels sang (Staff Notation only)	ATTWOOD	2d.
Within the fold (both Notations)	ROLAND ROGERS	4d.

Hymn-Anthems for Children and Choir.

		O.N.	Tonic Sol-Fa.
Happy Day! Festal Day!	H. A. CHAMBERS	4d.	3d.
Hosanna be the children's song	E. M. BARBER	3d.	1½d.
Hosanna we sing	JOHN E. WEST	4d.	2d.
I love to hear the Story	MYLES B. FOSTER	4d.	2d.
Lord, Thy children	J. H. MAUNDER	4d.	2d.
Sweet is the work	R. WALKER ROBSON	2d.	1½d.
Sweet is Thy mercy	J. BARNBY	2d.	1½d.
Thine for ever	H. ELLIOT BUTTON	4d.	2d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS.
ORATORIOS, CANTATAS, ETC.

(S.A.T.B. EDITIONS ONLY.)

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE EACH.

ADAMS, T.—†Cross of Christ, The.
——†Golden Harvest, A.
——†Holy Child, The.
——†Nativity, The.
—— Rainbow of Peace, The.
ALCOCK, W. G.—And I heard a great voice.
ANDERTON, T.—Norman Baron, The.
——†Wreck of the Hesperus, The.
ASPA, E.—Gipsies, The.
ASTORGA.—Stabat Mater.
AUSTIN, F.—†Songs in a Farmhouse.
BACH.—†Bide with us.
——† Ditto. (Welsh Words).
—— Christ lay in death's dark prison.
—— Christians, grave ye this glad day.
——†Christmas Oratorio. Parts 1—2.
Ditto Ditto. Parts 3—4.
Ditto Ditto. Parts 5—6.
——†Come, Jesu, come (Motet).
—— Come, Redeemer of our race.
—— From depths of woe I call on Thee.
—— Give the hungry man thy bread.
—— God goeth up with shouting.
——†God so loved the world.
——†God's time is the best.
——† Ditto (Welsh Words).
——†How brightly shines yon star of morn.
—— If thou but sufferest God to guide thee.
——†Jesu, Priceless Treasure (Motet).
——† Ditto (Welsh Words).
—— Jesus, now will we praise Thee.
—— Jesus sleeps, what hope remaineth.
—— Let songs of rejoicing be raised.
—— Lord is a sun and shield, The.
——†Lord is my Shepherd, The.
—— Lord, rebuke me not.
——*†Magnificat in D.
——†My spirit was in heaviness.
—— O Christ, my all in living.
—— O Jesu Christ, Thou Prince of Peace.
——†O Light Everlasting.
—— O praise the Lord for all His mercies.
—— O teach me, Lord, my days to number.
—— Praise our God Who reigns in Heaven.
—— Praise thou the Lord, Jerusalem.
—— Rise, O Soul.
—— Sages of Sheba, The.
——†Sing ye to the Lord (Motet).
——†Sleepers, wake.
——†Spirit also helpeth us, The (Motet).
——†Stronghold Sure, A.
—— There is nought of soundness in all my body.
—— Thou Guide of Israel.
—— Wailing, crying, mourning, sighing.
—— Watch ye, pray ye.
—— When will God recall my spirit.
—— Whoso doth offer thanks.
BARNBY, J.—†Rebekah.
BARTON, M.—Mass in A.
BEETHOVEN.—†Choral Fantasia.
—— Engedi.
——†Mass in C (Latin).
——*Mass in C.
—— Mount of Olives.
BENNETT, G. J.—Easter Hymn (On the morn of Easter Day).
BENNETT, W. S.—Exhibition Ode.
——†May Queen, The.
——†Woman of Samaria, The.
BETJEMANN.—Song of the Western Men.
BLAIR, H.—†Harvest-tide.
BRAHMS, J.—Song of Destiny, A.
—— Songs of Love (Vocal Part only).
BREE, J. B. VAN.—†St. Cecilia's Day.
BREWER, A. H.—O praise the Lord.
—— Song of Eden, A.
BRIDGE, J. F.—Hymn to the Creator.
——†Inchcape Rock, The.
——†Lord's Prayer, The.
——*†Rock of Ages.
CARISSIMI.—*Jephthah.
CHERUBINI.—*Mass, Requiem, in C minor (No. 1).
—— Mass (Coronation) in A (No. 3).
—— Mass, in C (No. 4).
COBB, G. F.—My soul truly waiteth.
COSTA, M.—Dream, The.
COWEN, F. H.—†He giveth His beloved sleep.
DALE, B. J.—†Before the paling of the stars.
DAVIES, H. W.—†Hervé Riel.
—— Ode on Time.
DUNHILL, T. F.—†Tubal Cain.
ELGAR, E.—†For the Fallen.
——†Fourth of August, The.
—— Te Deum and Benedictus, in F.
ELLICOTT, R. F.—Elysium.
FRANZ, R.—Praise ye the Lord.
GADE, N. W.—†Christmas Eve.
——†Erl-King's Daughter, The.
—— Zion.
GARRETT, G. M.—†Harvest Cantata.
GAUL, A. R.—†Ruth (Choruses only).
GOETZ, H.—†By the Waters of Babylon.
——†Nœnia.
GOODHART, A. M.—Earl Haldan's Daughter.
GOUNOD, CH.—Daughters of Jerusalem.
—— De Profundis (Latin).
—— Ditto (English).
——†Faust (Selection for Concert Performance).
——*†Gallia.
—— Messe Solennelle, Ste. Cécile (Latin).
—— Out of Darkness.
—— Passion, The.
——†Redemption (Part 2).
—— Ditto (Part 3).
GRAUN.—Passion, The (Choruses only).
GRAY, A.—Legend of the Rock Buoy Bell
GRIMM, J. O.—Soul's Aspiration, The.
HANDEL.—†Acis and Galatea.
—— Chandos Te Deum.
—— Dettingen Te Deum.
—— Dixit Dominus.
——*Except the Lord build the house.
——†Israel in Egypt (Pocket Edition).
——†Judas Maccabæus (Ditto.)
——†Messiah (Ditto).
——*Nisi Dominus.
—— O come, let us sing unto the Lord.
——†O praise the Lord.
—— Ode on St. Cecilia's Day.
—— Passion of Christ, The (Abridged).
—— Utrecht Jubilate.
—— Ways of Zion, The.
HARRISON, J.—Christmas Cantata.
——†Harvest Cantata.
HARRISS, C. A. E.—Sands of Dee, The.
HARWOOD, BASIL.—Love Incarnate.
HAYDN.—†Creation, The (Pocket Edition).
——*Mass, in B flat (No. 1).
—— Mass, in B flat (No. 1) (Latin).
—— Mass, in C (No. 2) (Latin).
—— Mass, in D (No. 3) (Latin).
——*Mass, in D (No. 3).
——*Te Deum Laudamus, in C.
—— Seasons, The, From:
†Spring, Autumn.
Summer, Winter.
—— Seasons, The (Choruses only).
HECHT, E.—O may I join the choir invisible.
HIGGS, H. M.—Erl-King, The.
HILLER, F.—†Song of Victory, A.
HOLST, G.—Ode to Death.
—— Ode on a Grecian Urn.
HUMMEL.—Mass, in B flat (No. 1).
—— Mass, in E flat (No. 2).
—— Mass, in D (No. 3).
JENSEN, A.—†Feast of Adonis, The.
JORDAN, W.—Blow ye the trumpet in Zion.
LEMARE, E. H.—'Tis the spring of souls to-day.
LEO, L.—Dixit Dominus.
LLOYD, C. H.—O give thanks unto the Lord.
—— Song of Balder, The.
MACCUNN, H.—†Lord Ullin's Daughter.
——†Wreck of the Hesperus, The.
MACFARREN, G. A.—†May Day.
—— Outward Bound.
MACKENZIE, A. C.—†Bride, The.
MENDELSSOHN.—†As the hart pants.
——†Athalie.
——*Ave Maria (Saviour of Sinners).
——†Christus.
——†Come, let us sing.
——†Elijah (Pocket Edition).
—— Ditto (Choruses only).
MENDELSSOHN.—continued.
——†Festgesang (Hymns of Praise).
——†Hear my Prayer.
——†Hymn of Praise (Lobgesang).
——*†Lauda Sion.
——†Lord, how long.
——†Loreley.
—— Man is Mortal.
——*Not unto us.
——*St. Paul (Pocket Edition).
—— Ditto (Choruses only).
——†Walpurgis Night, The First.
——†When Israel out of Egypt came.
MEYERBEER.—91st Psalm (Latin).
—— 91st Psalm (English).
MOZART.—King Thamos.
——*Mass in C (No. 1).
—— Mass in B flat (No. 7) (Latin).
—— Mass in G (No. 12) (Latin).
—— Mass in G (No. 12) (English).
——*†Mass in G (No. 12).
—— Mass, Requiem, in D minor (No. 15) (Latin).
——*†Mass, Requiem, in D minor (No. 15).
NORTH, S.—†In the Morning.
PALESTRINA.—Surge Illuminare.
PARKER, H. W.—Kobolds, The.
PARRY, C. H. H.—†Blest Pair of Sirens.
——†Chivalry of the Sea, The (Naval Ode).
—— Glories of our Blood and State, The.
—— Te Deum Laudamus (Coronation).
PINSUTI, C.—Phantoms.
PROUT, E.—Freedom.
——†Hundredth Psalm, The.
PURCELL.—Te Deum and Jubilate, in D.
——†Te Deum, in D.
—— Te Deum, in D (Latin).
ROMBERG.—Harmony of the Spheres, The.
——†Lay of the Bell, The.
—— Te Deum Laudamus, in D.
——†Transient and the Eternal, The.
ROSSINI.—*†Stabat Mater.
SACHS, ED.—King Cups.
—— Water-Lilies.
SCHUBERT.—Mass, in A flat.
—— Mass, in B flat.
—— Mass, in C.
——†Mass, in F.
—— Mass, in G.
——†Song of Miriam.
SCHUMANN.—Advent Hymn, "In Lowly Guise."
—— King's Son, The.
—— Manfred.
—— Mignon's Requiem.
——†New Year's Song.
—— Pilgrimage of the Rose.
SCHUTZ, H.—Passion of our Lord, The.
SELBY, B. L.—Dying Swan, The.
SILAS, E.—Mass, in C.
SMITH, A. B.—In Glorious Freedom.
SMITH, A. M.—Ode to the North-East Wind.
SPOHR.—Christian's Prayer, The.
——†God, Thou art Great.
—— Hymn to St. Cecilia.
——†Last Judgment, The.
STEPHEN, D.—†Laird o' Cockpen, The.
STOCKER, S.—Song of the Fates.
STOJOWSKI, S.—Springtime.
SULLIVAN, A.—Exhibition Ode.
—— †Te Deum (Thanksgiving).
THOMAS, A. G.—†Sun Worshippers, The.
THORNE, E. H.—Be merciful unto me.
TOURS, B.—Festival Ode, A.
WAGNER.—Flying Dutchman (A Selection from Act II.).
WALKER, E.—Hymn to Dionysus, A.
—— Ode to a Nightingale.
WEBER, C. M.—Jubilee Cantata.
—— *Mass in E flat.
—— *Mass in G.
—— Preciosa.
—— Three Seasons.
WESLEY, S.—Dixit Dominus.
WESLEY, S. S.—O Lord, Thou art my God.
WEST, J. E.—Lord, I have loved the habitation of Thy House.
—— Song of Zion, A.
WOOD, C.—Ode to the West Wind.
WOODMAN, R. T.—Falmouth.

*The Works marked thus * have Latin and English words. Those marked thus † may be had in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.*
Cantatas, &c., for Female and Male Voices (see Novello's Catalogues).

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6, 1891.
"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC
BY
J. H. MAUNDER

	Staff Notation.	Tonic Sol-fa.
HARVEST ANTHEMS.
Sing to the Lord of Harvest	4d.	3d.
While the earth remaineth	4d.	3d.
Blessed be the Name of the Lord	4d.	3d.
SERVICES.
SERVICE IN G	2s.	1s. 4d.
Or, separately:—
Te Deum	4d.	3d.
Benedicite, omnia Opera	3d.	3d.
Benedictus	3d.	3d.
Jubilate	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion	10d.	8d.
Pater Noster from the above	3d.	3d.
Amen ditto	1½d.	1½d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis	4d.	3d.
SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1)	1s. 4d.	10d.
Or, separately:—
Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion	8d.	6d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis	4d.	3d.
Te Deum in B flat	4d.	3d
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison)	4d.	2d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D	4d.	3d.
ORGAN.
Voix Seraphique (for Recitals)	2s. 6d.	—
CHURCH CANTATA.
Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use)	2s.	1s. 4d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

SCHOOL MARCHES
FOR PIANOFORTE SOLO
BOOK III.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

CONTENTS.

Arrival of the Visitors ... H. Hofmann
Bright and Buxom Lasses, from "Martha" ... Flotow
Instrumental Band, The ... Percy E. Fletcher
Little March, A ... J. D. Davis
March from "Egmont" ... Beethoven
March from "St. Polycarp" ... F. A. G. Ouseley
March ... Th. Kullak
March from "Tannhäuser" ... Wagner
Marching off to Bed ... Myles B. Foster
March of Priests, from "The Magic Flute" Mozart
Soldiers' Chorus, from "Il Trovatore" ... Verdi
Toy Soldiers' March ... Tschaikowsky

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Produced at the Leeds Musical Festival, 1925

FIRST
CHORAL SYMPHONY
THE WORDS SELECTED FROM THE POEMS OF
JOHN KEATS
AND SET TO MUSIC FOR
SOPRANO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
BY GUSTAV HOLST.
(OP. 41.)

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.
FULL SCORE (in the Press), PRICE £3 3s.

Separately from the above:

Ode on a Grecian Urn
FOR CHORUS AND SMALL ORCHESTRA.
PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

Band Parts of the Complete Work and of the
SCHERZO
which may be played as an Orchestral Piece without Chorus may be had on hire.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

FOUR
TENNYSON LYRICS
SET TO MUSIC BY
PERCY E. FLETCHER.

1. A LULLABY.
2. THE CITY CHILD.
3. THE REIGN OF THE ROSES.
4. THE THROSTLE.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOCTURNE
FOR VIOLONCELLO (OR VIOLIN) AND PIANOFORTE.
BY
COLIN MACLEOD CAMPBELL.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

ARRANGEMENT FOR SMALL ORCHESTRA.

	s.	d.
Piano Conductor	1	6
String Parts	2	8
Wind Parts, &c.	4	0
Harmonium	0	8

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SMALL

	Full Orchestra.	Small Orchestra.	Full Score.	Piano Conductor.	Violin Conductor.	Piano Solo.	Violin and Piano.	Violin 1mo.	Violin 2do.	Viola.	'Cello and Basso.	'Cello.	Basso.	Piccolo.
AUSTIN, E., Sweet Night	...	2/-	...	...	...	...	2/3	4d.	...	...	8d.	...	...	...
BENDALL, Pas Seul	...	7/4	...	...	...	1/6	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
BENNETT, Eventide Melody	...	4/4	4/-	...	...	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
BLAIR, Serenata	...	5/4	...	...	8d.	2/3	...	8d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
BREWER, Auf Wiedersehen	...	4/4	...	...	8d.	3/-	3/-	8d.	...	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
CAMPBELL, Nocturne	...	7/4	...	1/6	...	...	2/-	8d.	8d.	4d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
CARSE, Barbara Allen Variations ...	...	6/-	...	2/3	...	...	...	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	...	...	...
„ Gavotte in G	...	5/4	...	...	...	2/3	2/3	8d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, Waltzes, Four ...	...	19/5	...	...	...	4/-	4/6	2/3	2/3	2/3	2/3	...	...	...
„ Hiawatha (Selection from Wedding-Feast)... ...	...	23/9	...	2/3	...	...	...	2/3	1/6	1/6	...	1/6	1/6	...
„ (Nero Music. Prelude, 2nd Entr'acte	...	17/-	...	...	3/-	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
„ Intermezzo	...	7/4	...	...	8d.	...	2/3	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
„ Finale, 1st Entr'acte	...	18/2	...	...	2/3	...	3/-	3/-	1/6	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	1/6A
„ Eastern Dance	...	11/8	...	...	1/6	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
„ Novelletten, Nos. 1, 2, & 3 ea.	...	3/8	4/-	...	...	...	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
„ „ No. 4	...	6/2	4/-	...	...	...	3/-	1/6	1/6	1/6	...	8d.	8d.	...
COWEN, English Dances, Four ...	...	22/2	...	...	...	4/-	4/6	2/3	2/3	2/3	2/3	...	...	...
„ February (Months, No. 2)...	...	6/4	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	4d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
„ May („ „ 5)...	4/-	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
„ June („ „ 6)...	4/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	...	4d.
„ September („ „ 9)...	10/-	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
„ November („ „ 11)...	11/10	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	1/6	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
„ December („ „ 12)...	7/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
„ Menuet d'Amour	5/8	...	5/6	...	...	2/3	3/-	8d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
DAVIES, Solemn Melody (str. & org.)...	...	2/4	3/-	...	...	2/3	2/3	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
DUNHILL, Chiddingfold Suite	...	9/9	7/6	...	...	...	...	2/3	2/3	2/3	...	1/6	1/6	...
ELGAR, Chanson de Matin	...	4/-	4/-	8d.	...	2/3	3/-	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
„ Chanson de Nuit	...	3/8	4/-	8d.	...	2/3	2/3	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
„ Pleading	...	3/4	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...
„ Serenade (Wand of Youth) ...	...	2/4	...	1/6A	...	2/3	3/-	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ Canto Popolare	...	6/4	4/6	...	...	3/-	3/-	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
FLETCHER, Bagatelles (strings only) ...	...	3/6	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	1/6	...	...	...
„ The Toy Soldiers' March...	...	8/-	...	...	8d.	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.A
„ Valse Lyrique	...	9/6	...	...	...	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
GOUNOD, There is a green hill ...	4/8	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...
HANDEL, Dance of Sailors	7/8	...	...	...	...	1/6	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
HAYNES, Westwood Gavotte	...	6/4	...	...	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
HOLBROOKE, Souvenir de Printemps ...	...	4/4	...	...	...	3/-	3/-	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
IRELAND, Bagatelle	...	7/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
JOHNSON, Elves (Faerie Suite, No. 1)...	...	8/-	...	1/6	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
„ Pavane in A	...	6/8	...	8d.	...	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
KREUZ, Conversation Amoureuse ...	...	6/10	...	1/6	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	1/6	...	...	...
LEMARE, Adantino	...	5/8	...	1/6	...	...	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ Chant sans Paroles	...	5/-	...	...	8d.	2/3	3/-	4d.	8d.	8d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
„ Menuet Nuptiale	...	4/4	...	8d.	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
MACKENZIE, Benedictus	4/8	...	7/6	...	...	...	3/-	8d.A	A	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
PURCELL, Gordian Knot Untied, 1st and 2nd Suites ... each	...	2/8	4/-	...	...	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ Suite	...	2/8	1/6	...	...	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ The Virtuous Wife (Incidental Music)	...	...	4/-	...	...	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
RAMEAU, Gavotte	6/-	...	...	...	...	2/3	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
RAWLINSON, Serenade	...	3/8	...	...	8d.	2/3	...	8d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ Aubade	6/-	...	...	...	8d.	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
REED, Serenade (Suite Venitienne) ...	4/8	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d	...	...	...
ROËCKEL, Graceful Dance	6/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
ROWLEY, Andante Religioso in $\frac{7}{4}$ time	...	2/8	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
WADDINGTON, Intermezzo	...	7/4	...	1/6	...	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
WAREING, Summergold Gavotte ...	7/4	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
WENDT, Air de Ballet	7/4	...	...	1/6	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
WEST, Intermezzo	...	5/-	...	8d.	...	...	2/3	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ Marjorie Gavotte	5/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ Maypole Dance...	14/-	...	...	2/3	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
WOLSTENHOLME, Allegretto in E♭ ...	6/-	...	...	...	...	2/3	2/3	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...

N.B.—Parts marked A, B, C, D, E, or F, are printed together.

ORCHESTRAS. SUITABLE FOR CINEMAS, &c.

Pianti.	Oboi.	Clarinetti.	Fagotti.	Corni 1 & 2.	Corni 3 & 4.	Trombe.	Cornetti.	Tromboni 1 and 2.	Trombone 3.	Euphonium.	Tuba.	Timpani.	Cassa.	Piatti.	Side Drum.	Triangle.	Tambourine.	Harp.	Solo-Cornet or Euphonium.	Organ or Harmonium.	Harp or Piano.	Bells.
4d.	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	4d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	4d.	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
1/6	1/6	2/3	1/6	1/6	...	1/6	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
2/3	1/6	2/3	2/3	2/3	...	1/6	...	...	8d.	...	...	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	1/6	...	...	...	...
1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d.A	A	A	A	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
A	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d.B	B	4d.	B	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
8d.	†8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	4d.	...	4d.	8d.A	8d.B	B	A	4d.C	...	8d.	...	...	...	C
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.A	A	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.A	A	...	...	...	...	...
3/-	1/6	3/-	1/6	1/6	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	8d.A	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
§8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...	...	4d.A	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	4d.	...	4d.
8d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...
4d.	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...
4d.	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...
8d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
A	8d.	8d.	8d.B	8d.	...	...	8d.	8d.	...	B	...	...	...	...	8d.C	C	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	1/6	...
4d.D	D	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.E	...	E	4d.F	F	...	...	F	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	4d.	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	4d.	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	4dA.	A	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	4d.	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...	...	8d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	4d.	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	8d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...
8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	4d.	...	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	8d.	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.A	...	...	...	A	8d	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...

† Oboe has the Melody. X Flute has the Melody. § May be had as a complete Suite.

Produced at the Gloucester Musical Festival.

JUST PUBLISHED.

A SPRIG OF SHAMROCK

FOUR OLD IRISH AIRS.

For Soprano or Tenor Voice, with String Quartet or Pianoforte Accompaniment.

POEMS BY

F. W. HARVEY.

MUSIC ADAPTED AND ARRANGED BY

A. HERBERT BREWER.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE

STRING PARTS, Price 8*s*.

An Edition for Contralto or Baritone is also published.

Price 3*s*. 6*d*.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Produced at the Gloucester Musical Festival.

JUST PUBLISHED.

LOVE INCARNATE

A SETTING OF LINES

BY ROBERT BROWNING.

With a Verse of the Hymn, "Jesu, dulcis memoria,"

BY

ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX.

Translated by the Rev. J. M. NEALE.

Composed for Chorus, Semi-Chorus, Orchestra, and Organ

BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

(Op. 37.)

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

HIAWATHA'S WEDDING-FEAST

AND

THE DEATH OF MINNEHAHA

COMPOSED BY

S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR.

ARRANGED FOR PIANOFORTE SOLO

BY

JOHN POINTER.

Price Five Shillings and Sixpence each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

The Lording's Daughter

BALLAD.

WORDS

ELIZABETHAN.

MUSIC BY

EDWARD GERMAN.

TWO KEYS.

Price Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

ON A NANKIN PLATE

SONG.

WORDS BY

AUSTIN DOBSON

MUSIC BY

HARVEY GRACE.

TWO KEYS.

Price Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS.

BOOK 273.

THIRTY SONGS

BY

FRANZ SCHUBERT.

BOTH NOTATIONS.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

OVERTURE IN D MINOR

COMPOSED BY

HANDEL.

ARRANGED FOR THE ORGAN

BY

H. F. ELLINGFORD.

FROM THE ORCHESTRAL TRANSCRIPTION

BY

EDWARD ELGAR.

Price Two Shillings and Threepence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE

ORGAN WORKS

OF

RHEINBERGER

BY

HARVEY GRACE.

Cloth Gilt, xii. + 130 pages.

WITH 127 MUSICAL ILLUSTRATIONS.

Price Five Shillings net.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

TWELVE

Short Introductory Voluntaries

FOR THE ORGAN

BY

W. G. ALCOCK.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 101.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

EAR-TRAINING

INCLUDING

MUSICAL APPRECIATION AND

RHYTHMIC MOVEMENTS

BY

MABEL CHAMBERLAIN.

COMPLETE, SIX SHILLINGS,
Paper Boards, 7s.
Or,
In Two Books: Letterpress and Illustrations, 4s.
Music only, 3s.

The Ear-Training Course outlined in this book is intended primarily for Class use, but if a judicious selection be made from the exercises, the course can be used with equal benefit by private teachers for individual pupils. Senior pupils and students who desire to Study music, and who have received little or no previous tuition, cannot do better than work rapidly through these progressive exercises and tests. A Prospectus will be sent on application.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

No. 63.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

BREATHING

FOR

VOICE-PRODUCTION

(Rewritten and brought up to date).

PART I.

OF

EURHYTHM: THOUGHT IN ACTION

BY

H. H. HULBERT.

Price ... Three Shillings.
Paper Boards, 4s.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 100.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

PRONUNCIATION

FOR

VOICE-PRODUCTION

FROM

EURHYTHM: THOUGHT IN ACTION.

BY

H. H. HULBERT.

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

ENGLISH LYRICS

SET TO MUSIC BY

C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

EACH SET, PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

FIRST SET.

1. *My true love hath my heart ...Sir Philip Sidney
2. Good-night ... ... Shelley
3. Where shall the lover rest ... ... Scott
4. Willow, Willow, Willow ... ... Shakespeare

SECOND SET.

1. O Mistress Mine ... ... Shakespeare
2. Take, O take those lips away ... Shakespeare
3. No longer mourn for me ... ... Shakespeare
4. Blow, blow, thou winter wind ... ... Shakespeare
5. When icicles hang by the wall ... Shakespeare

THIRD SET.

1. To Lucasta, on going to the wars ... ... Lovelace
2. If thou would'st ease thine heart ... ... Beddoes
3. *To Althea, from prison ... ... Lovelace
4. *Why so pale and wan ... ... Suckling
5. Through the ivory gate ... ... Julian Sturgis
6. Of all the torments ... ... William Walsh

FOURTH SET.

1. *Thine eyes still shined for me ... ... Emerson
2. *When lovers meet again Langdon Elwyn Mitchell
3. *When we two parted ... ... Byron
4. Weep you no more ... ... Anon.
5. There be none of beauty's daughters ... ...Byron
6. Bright star ... ...Keats

FIFTH SET.

1. *A stray nymph of Dian ... ... Julian Sturgis
2. *Proud Maisie... ... ... Scott
3. *Crabbed age and youth ... ... Shakespeare
4. Lay a garland on my hearse Beaumont & Fletcher
5. Love and laughter ... ... Arthur Butler
6. A girl to her glass ... ... Julian Sturgis
7. A Lullaby ... ... E. O. Jones

SIXTH SET.

1. *When comes my Gwen ... ... E. O. Jones
2. *And yet I love her till I die ... ... Anon.
3. *Love is a bable ... ... Anon.
4. *A lover's garland ... ... Alfred P. Graves
5. At the hour the long day ends ... Alfred P. Graves
6. Under the greenwood tree ... ... Shakespeare

SEVENTH SET.

1. On a time the amorous Silvy ... ... Anon.
2. Follow a shadow ... ... Ben Jonson
3. Ye little birds that sit and sing Thomas Heywood
4. O never say that I was false of heart Shakespeare
5. Julia ... ... Herrick
6. *Sleep ... ... Julian Sturgis

EIGHTH SET.

1. Whence ... ... Julian Sturgis
2. Nightfall in winter ... Langdon Elwyn Mitchell
3. Marian ... ... George Meredith
4. Dirge in woods ... ... George Meredith
5. Looking backward ... ... Julian Sturgis
6. Grapes ... ... Julian Sturgis

NINTH SET.

1. Three aspects ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
2. A fairy town (St. Andrew's) Mary E. Coleridge
3. The witches' wood ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
4. Whether I live ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
5. Armida's garden ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
6. *The maiden ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
7. There ... ... Mary E. Coleridge

TENTH SET.

1. My heart is like a singing bird Christina Rossetti
2. Gone were but the winter cold Allan Cunningham
3. A moment of farewell ... ... Julian Sturgis
4. The child and the twlight Langdon Elwyn Mitchell
5. From a city window Langdon Elwyn Mitchell
6. One silent night of late ... ... Herrick

ELEVENTH SET.

1. One golden thread ... ... Julia Chatterton
2. The spirit of the Spring ... Alfred Perceval Graves
3. What part of dread eternity ... Author unknown
4. The Blackbird ... ... Alfred Perceval Graves
5. The faithful lover ... ... Alfred Perceval Graves
6. If I might ride on puissant wing Julian Sturgis
7. Why art thou slow ... ... Massinger
8. She is my love beyond all thought Alfred P. Graves

TWELFTH SET.

1. When the dew is falling ... ... Julia Chatterton
2. To Blossoms ... ... Herrick
3. Rosaline ... ... Lodge
4. When the sun's great orb ... ... H. Warner
5. Dream pedlary ... ... Beddoes
6. O World, O Life, O Time ... ... Shelley
7. The sound of hidden music ... Julia Chatterton

* Published separately, price 1*s.* 6*d.*

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

ALBUMS FOR THE ORGAN

PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH. CLOTH, SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH.

No. 1.

No.			No.
1.	Interlude	Th. Dubois	7.	Grand Chœur No. 2	Alfred Hollins
2.	Chanson de Matin	Edward Elgar	8.	Andantino in D flat	Edwin H. Lemare
3.	Fantasia on the old melody "Urbs Beata"	W. Faulkes	9.	Chanson Triste	P. Tschaïkowsky
4.	There is a green hill far away	Ch. Gounod	10.	Prelude to "Lohengrin," Act I.	R. Wagner
5.	Marche Triomphale	Alexandre Guilmant	11.	Romanza	W. Wolstenholme
6.	Ave Maria	A. Henselt	12.	Allegretto in E flat	W. Wolstenholme

No. 2.

1.	Chanson de Nuit	Edward Elgar	7.	The Curfew	Edward J. Horsman
2.	Alla Marcia	Myles B. Foster	8.	Pastorale in E	Edwin H. Lemare
3.	Minuetto	Alexandre Guilmant	9.	Ave Maria d'Arcadelt	Franz Liszt
4.	Lied	H. Hofmann	10.	Cantique d'Amour	Theo. Wendt
5.	Barcarolle	H. Hofmann	11.	The Seraph's Strain	W. Wolstenholme
6.	Spring Song	Alfred Hollins	12.	Le Carillon	W. Wolstenholme

No. 3.

1.	Scherzo in A flat	Edward C. Bairstow	7.	Aubade	A. Strelezki
2.	Melody	S. Coleridge-Taylor	8	Nocturne in C sharp minor	P. Tschaïkowsky
3.	Serenade	H. Hofmann	9.	Procession to the Minster ("Lohengrin")	R. Wagner
4.	Bridal March	Alfred Hollins	10.	Passacaglia	John E. West
5.	Berceuse	Edwin H. Lemare	11.	Fantasia upon the Plain-song Melody "Ad cœnam Agni"	Healey Willan
6.	Melodie in E	S. Rachmaninoff	12.	Allegretto in A flat	W. Wolstenholme

No. 4.

1.	Arietta	S. Coleridge-Taylor	7.	Allegro alla Marcia	A. L. Peace
2	Souvenir de Printemps	Joseph Holbrooke	8.	Visione	J. Rheinberger
3.	Andante in D	Alfred Hollins	9.	Chant sans Paroles	P. Tschaïkowsky
4.	Pavane in A	Bernard Johnson	10.	Prelude to Act III. ("Die Meistersinger")	R. Wagner
5.	Harmonies du Soir	Sigfrid Karg-Elert	11.	Allegro Pomposo	John E. West
6.	An Eton Memorial March	C. H. Lloyd	12.	Canzona	W. Wolstenholme

No. 5.

1.	Jour de Noces	J. Stuart Archer	7.	Alla Marcia	John N. Ireland
2.	Festival Prelude on "Ein' feste Burg"	W. Faulkes	8.	Adagio Cantabile	Edwin H. Lemare
3.	Legend	Harvey Grace	9.	Fanfare	J. Lemmens
4.	Allegretto Pastorale	H. M. Higgs	10.	Intermezzo	B. Luard-Selby
5.	Benediction Nuptiale	Alfred Hollins	11.	Easter Morn	John E. West
6.	Sursum Corda	John N. Ireland	12.	Finale in B flat	W. Wolstenholme

No. 6.

1.	Nocturne	Thomas F. Dunhill	7.	Allegro in B flat	F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy
2	Postludium	William Faulkes	8.	Choral Prelude on "Rockingham"	C. Hubert H. Parry
3.	Andante Tranquillo	H. M. Higgs	9.	Præludium Pastorale	J. Stainer
4.	In Springtime	Alfred Hollins	10.	Romance in F minor	Tschaïkowsky
5.	Madrigal	Edwin H. Lemare	11.	Romance in A flat	H. Sandiford Turner
6.	Triumphal March	J. Lemmens	12.	Festal Commemoration	John E. West

No. 7 (Funeral Music).

1.	Funeral March (Pianoforte Sonata, Op. 26)	Beethoven	7.	Funeral March ("Lieder ohne Worte")	Mendelssohn
2	Blest are they that mourn (Requiem)	Brahms	8.	O rest in the Lord ("Elijah")	Mendelssohn
3.	Funeral March (Pianoforte Sonata, Op. 35)	Chopin	9.	Marche Solonnelle	Schubert
4.	Funeral March	William Faulkes	10.	Marche Funèbre	Tschaïkowsky
5.	Funeral March ("Saul")	Handel	11.	Finale from "Symphonie Pathétique"	Tschaïkowsky
6	I know that my Redeemer liveth ("Messiah")	Handel	12.	Lament	John E. West

No. 8 (Christmas Music).

1.	Chorale Prelude, "In dulci jubilo"	J. S Bach	7.	For unto us a Child is born ("Messiah")	Handel
2.	Pastoral Symphony ("Christmas Oratorio")	J. S. Bach	8.	Pastorale	Theodore Kullak
3.	Quem Vidistis, Pastores	W. T. Best	9.	Chorus of Shepherds	J. Lemmens
4.	Venite in Bethlehem	W. T. Best	10.	Christmas Pastorale	Gustav Merkel
5.	December—Christmas Morn	Frederic H. Cowen	11.	A Christmas Pastoral	B. Luard-Selby
6.	Fantasia on Old Christmas Carols	William Faulkes	12.	Fantasy on Two Christmas Carols ("The First Nowell" and "Good King Wenceslas.")	John E. West

No. 9 (Wedding Music).

1.	Wedding March	William Faulkes	8.	Wedding March	Mendelssohn
2.	Happy Pair ("Alexander's Feast")	Handel	9.	Bridal March and Finale ("The Birds" of Aristophanes)	C. Hubert H. Parry
3.	Love Song—Liebeslied	Henselt
4.	Benediction Nuptiale	Alfred Hollins	10.	Finale ("Blest Pair of Sirens")	C. Hubert H. Parry
5.	Bridal March	Alfred Hollins	11.	Serenade ("Schwanengesang")	Schubert
6	Minuet Nuptiale	Edwin H. Lemare	12.	Bridal Chorus ("Lohengrin")	Wagner
7.	Spring Song ("Lieder ohne Worte")	Mendelssohn

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S
POPULAR PIANOFORTE ALBUMS FOR YOUNG PERFORMERS.

HUBERT BATH
DOLL'S-HOUSE SUITE
Price Three Shillings.

FRANCESCO BERGER
EIGHTEEN LITTLE PIECES
Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

J. D. DAVIS.
FOUR LITTLE PIECES
Price Two Shillings and Threepence.

EDMONDSTOUNE DUNCAN
HAPPY THOUGHTS
Price Three Shillings.

ARNOLD KRUG
TEN LITTLE PIECES
Op. 109.
In two Books. Price Two Shillings and Threepence each.

ARNOLD KRUG
SCENES FROM FAIRY-LAND
In two Books. Price Three Shillings each.

TH. KULLAK
TWENTY-FOUR PIECES
Op. 62 AND 81.
In four Books. Price One Shilling and Sixpence each.

MAX MAYER
BAGATELLES
Price Four Shillings.

MENDELSSOHN
SIX CHRISTMAS PIECES
Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

ERNEST NEWTON
WOODLAND DANCES
Price Three Shillings.

ERNEST NEWTON
ROMANY LIFE
Price Three Shillings.

HUBERT G. OKE
THREE PIECES
Price Three Shillings.

SCHUMANN
PIECES FOR THE YOUNG
Part I., Price 1*s.* 6*d.*; Part II., Price 1*s.* 6*d.*

SCHUMANN
THREE PIANOFORTE SONATAS
(Part III. of Pieces for the Young).
Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

CLEMENT M. SPURLING
SIX SHORT AND EASY PIECES
Price Three Shillings.

CLEMENT M. SPURLING
OUR VILLAGE IN SUMMER
Price Two Shillings and Threepence.

E. A. SYDENHAM
SIX SHORT AND EASY PIECES
Price Three Shillings.

TSCHAIKOWSKY
CHRISTMAS ALBUM
In three Books. Price One Shilling and Sixpence each.

FRANCESCO BERGER
FIRST STEPS AT THE PIANOFORTE
PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

APRIL'S BULLETIN OF OXFORD MUSIC

Chorale from Cantata 147

("Herz und Mund und That und Leben"). By J. S. BACH. Arranged by LEONARD BORWICK for Pianoforte Solo. (The Borwick Edition.) 1926. 4to, pp. 4. 2*s*.

Oxford University Press, London.

The Oxford Solo Songs. 1926. 4to.

"Two Lyrics from the Chinese." Translated by HELEN WADDELL. Set to Music by W. G. WHITTAKER. For Low or Medium Voice and Pianoforte. Pp. 8. 2*s*. 6*d*.
("My lord is gone away to serve the King"; "Ah, let it drift.")

Oxford University Press, London.

The Oxford Pianoforte Series

Edited by A. FORBES MILNE. 1926. 4to.

No. P 2. Wayside Pictures. Set II. By ARTHUR BAYNON. Pp. 6. 2*s*.
(The Song of the Peasant; By the Lake; Birds in the Trees; The Fallen Oak; At the Forge.)

No. P 7. Traditional Scottish Tunes. By GERRARD WILLIAMS. Pp. 6. 2*s*.

No. P 18. Nocturne. By YORK BOWEN. Pp. 6. 2*s*.

No. P 19. White Hyacinth. By EDGAR L. BAINTON. Pp. 8. 2*s*.

No. P 21. Two-part Inventions. By FELIX SWINSTEAD. Pp. 8. 2*s*. 6*d*.
(1, Polonaise; 2, Air; 3, Gigue.)

No. P 27. Storyettes. By ERIC MAREO. Pp. 12. 3*s*.
(1, Slippery Dick; 2, Little Red Shoes; 3, Somebody Knocking; 4, The Black Sheep; 5, The Poor Old Fiddler)

No. P 28. Three Little Pieces. By GORDON SLATER. Pp. 4. 1*s*. 6*d*.
(1, Gavot; 2, Hushoon; 3, March.)

No. P 29. Bourrée in A. By GORDON SLATER. Pp. 4. 1*s*.

No. P 35. Suite of Five Pieces. By JANE M. JOSEPH. Pp. 8. 2*s*. 6*d*.
(1, Minuet; 2, Bourrée; 3, Sarabande; 4, Air; 5, Jig.)

Oxford University Press, London

Oxford Orchestral Series

Edited by W. G. WHITTAKER. 1926. 4to.

No. O 16. Suite for Chamber Orchestra. By ROBIN MILFORD. Pp. 30. 10*s*. 6*d*.
(Prelude; Air; Minuet and Trio; Quick Dance; Slow Dance; Jig.)

Parts sep.: 1st Violin, 2nd Violin, Violas, Oboe, Bassoons, C. Basso, Cornet, Clarinets, 'Cello, Flutes, Horn in F. Each 8d.

Oxford University Press, London.

Quatre Sonatines Françaises

Pour Piano à Quatre Mains par CHARLES KOECHLIN. 1926. 4to.

No. 1. 1, Canons; 2, Allegretto; 3, Intermezzo; 4, Dans les Vergers de Normandie. Pp. 20. 5*s*.

No. 2. 1, Pastorale; 2, L'Apothéose des Petits Pauvres; 3, Chant du Soir; 4, Menuet; 5, Final. Pp. 24. 5*s*.

No. 3. 1, Scherzando; 2, Chant du Soir; 3, Ronde de Vendanges. Pp. 16. 5*s*.

No. 4. 1, Romance; 2, Autre Romance; 3, Final. Pp. 16. 5*s*.

Oxford University Press, London.

Hungarian Folk-Music

By ZOLTÁN KODÁLY. 1926. Royal 4to.

I. Five Székely Ballads and Songs from Transylvania. Pp. 24. 3*s*. 6*d*.
Annie Miller; I Rove; Came a bird a-flying; Which one should I marry? From the tree an apple fell.

II. Five Székely Ballads and Songs from Transylvania. Pp. 26. 3*s*. 6*d*.
The three orphans; Cockricoo!; The heartless wife; The weeping-willow; Long-nose.

Oxford University Press, London.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

AMEN HOUSE, WARWICK SQUARE, E.C.4, AND 95, WIMPOLE STREET, LONDON, W.1.

(Sole Agents for the Cotta Edition and the Schubert Edition in Great Britain and Ireland and the British Dominions.)

NATIONAL SONGS

WITH DESCANTS

ARRANGED BY

GEOFFREY SHAW.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 271.

SET I.

THE BAY OF BISCAY (English)
A HUNTING WE WILL GO (English)
JOHN PEEL (English)
ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT (Welsh)
SCOTS, WHA HAE (Scottish)
THE OAK AND THE ASH (Scottish)

EARLY ONE MORNING (English)
OH, DEAR! WHAT CAN THE MATTER BE? (English)
THE BRITISH GRENADIERS (English)
THE ASH GROVE (Welsh)
GOOD KING WENCESLAS (Traditional)
THE FIRST NOWELL (Traditional)

JUST PUBLISHED.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 275.

SET II.

COME LASSES AND LADS (English)
WI' A HUNDRED PIPERS (Scottish)
DAVID OF THE WHITE ROCK (Welsh)

THE YOUNG MAY MOON (Irish)
THE GOLDEN VANITY (English)
THE FLIGHT OF THE EARLS (Irish)

JUST PUBLISHED.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 276.

SET III.

MEETING OF THE WATERS (Irish)
THERE 'S NAE LUCK (Scottish)
DRINK TO ME ONLY WITH THINE EYES (English)

LET ERIN REMEMBER (Irish)
THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON (English)
THE BELLS OF ABERDOVEY (Welsh)

PRICE EIGHTPENCE EACH SET.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

A Remarkable New Work on Singing

THE MELBA METHOD

DAME MELBA'S
Personal Advice on
The Art of Singing

PUBLISHED at the climax of a wonderful career, Dame Melba's description of her Method of Voice Production and Singing is of outstanding importance to every vocal teacher and student.

This historic work unfolds the principles which have made Melba's voice so flawless in its purity, such a miracle of flexibility, and so perfect in its preservation.

"The Melba Method" is so lucid and so practical that teachers and students can watch every step of Melba's Work, and understand how her wonderful voice has become what it is.

All the chit-chat of the average "celebrity" has been avoided in this book. Instead, Dame Melba takes the student into the very workshop of her art, and shows why and how each principle is applied; covering every essential point with the clarity which comes only from those who really understand the art of singing.

To possess this book is to own a memento of this great artist, and to gain the advice of a singer whose name will be conjured with for generations to come.

COMPLETE, PRICE SIX SHILLINGS NET.
(By Post, 6*s.* 6*d.*)

CHAPPELL & CO., LTD., 50, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.1.
NEW YORK AND SYDNEY.

ARTHUR HONEGGER

KING DAVID

SYMPHONIC PSALM IN THREE PARTS

After a Drama by RENÉ MORAX.

English Version by EDWARD AGATE.

VOCAL SCORE ... 8*s.* NET.
LIBRETTO, 1*s.* NET.
Orchestral Material and Chorus Parts on Hire. Terms on Application.

The drama of René Morax, "Le Roi David," with music by Arthur Honegger, was performed at the Théâtre du Jorat, at Mézières, near Lausanne, in June, 1921. It was at once acclaimed as the most remarkable production yet given at that unique Theatre, founded to foster the natural and traditional artistic instincts in the Swiss people. Honegger's score was completed in two months, and proved of the most astonishing spontaneity, vigour, and originality. The musical setting of the biblical theme in a style that is at once primitive and modern, traditional and daring, learned and free, can now be used with Mr. Edward Agate's excellent English version as a concert work, in which form it is sure to make a most vivid and profound impression.

A special descriptive prospectus of the work will be gladly sent, post free, on application.

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD., 11, Great Marlborough St., London, W.1.

London:—Printed by NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W.1.
Tuesday, June 1, 1926.

No. 1001

THE MUSICAL TIMES

Price 6d.

FOUNDED 1844

JULY 1, 1926

Sole Agents :
MURDOCH MURDOCH & Co.
461/463 OXFORD STREET LONDON W1

SPENCER PIANOS

More than 80,000 Sold!

The Spencer piano is to-day's finest Value. The most sensitive Touch is combined with pure, rich Tone, and great solidity of Construction. Special models are made for the Tropics, Schools and Ship use, and delivery is Free in Great Britain or C.I.F. quotations given for any port in the world.

Write for Illustrated Catalogue

ARCHIBALD RAMSDEN LTD.

Pianoforte Merchants.
Established 1864.

SCHIEDMAYER PIANOS

Sole IMPORTERS of the

BEULHOFF PIANOS

also the horizontal Grand Pianos, manufactured by

BORD

PARIS.

65, Wigmore Street, London. 12, Park Row, Leeds.

Branch Establishments at Scarborough, Doncaster, Darlington, and Middlesbrough.

M.C. JUL 17 1926 B.P.L

The Great English Piano.

ALLISON
PIANOS LIMITED

LEIGHTON ROAD, KENTISH TOWN, N.W.5.

Telephone: NORTH 1660.

— AND —

Telephone: LANGHAM 1418.

60, WIGMORE STREET, LONDON, W.1.

ESTEY ORGANS
ESTEY PIANOS

ONLY ONE GRADE OF EACH
THE HIGHEST POSSIBLE.

Largest Stock of Organs in the World.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE POST FREE. CORRESPONDENCE INVITED.

Telephone: Museum 1317. Telegrams: "ESTEY WESTCENT, LONDON."

Estey Organ Co.
- 12 -
RATHBONE PLACE,
OXFORD STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

METZLER'S
OPERATIC TWO-PART SONGS
SIMPLY ARRANGED FOR BOYS' OR GIRLS' VOICES.
(OLD NOTATION AND TONIC SOL-FA).

1. THE SPINNING CHORUS - - - Wagner
("The Flying Dutchman.")
2. GIPSY AIR (Carmen) - - - - - - Bizet
3. MARCH and TOREADOR SONG (Carmen) - Bizet
4. THE BOYS' CHORUS (Carmen) - - - Bizet

Price, 6d. each net.

SPECIMEN COPIES FREE.

METZLER & CO. (1920), Ltd., 142, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

(ESTABLISHED 1788.)

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 1,001—Vol. 67.
Registered at the General Post Office for Canadian Postage.

JULY 1 1926

Price 6*d.*; Postage, 2*d.*
Annual Subscription, post-free, 7*s.* 6*d.*

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.
General Conductor: MR. H. L. BALFOUR, MUS. BAC.

(Season, 1926—1927.)

There are now VACANCIES in the CHOIR for SOPRANOS, CONTRALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES. Applicants should have STRONG VOICES OF GOOD QUALITY, and must be prepared to pass an examination in SIGHT-READING. Address, The Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.7.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1.
Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.
Principal: JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., MUS. D., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES

BY

H.R.H. The Duke of Connaught, K.G.,

at QUEEN'S HALL (Sole Lessees: Chappell & Co.), on FRIDAY, JULY 23rd, at 3 p.m.

THE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS, which has now been entirely re-organized and associated with a definite examination and diploma, will be inaugurated Michaelmas Term, 1926.

THIRTEEN SCHOLARSHIPS for competition in September.

Last day of entry, Monday, July 26th.

L.R.A.M.

Entries for the September Period will be accepted up to July 12th on payment of a late fee of 5*s.*

VACATION COURSE FOR TEACHERS.

Lectures will be given each day from 14th to 17th Sept., inclusive, on the following:

PIANOFORTE - - - Ambrose Coviello, F.R.A.M.
AURAL TRAINING - Ernest Read, F.R.A.M.
CLASS SINGING - - Stanley Marchant, Mus.D., F.R.A.M.
INTERPRETATION AND APPRECIATION, Stewart Macpherson, F.R.A.M.

Complete Time-Table and List of Fees on application.

J. A. CREIGHTON,
Secretary.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS.

FOUNDED 1913.

PRESIDENT FOR 1926: HARVEY GRACE, F.R.C.O.

Organists, Assistant-Organists, and Choirmasters of all denominations are eligible. Register of vacant appointments.

Particulars and application to the Hon. Sec., DR. J. WARRINER, De Crespigny House, Denmark Hill, S.E.5.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7.

Patrons: { HIS MAJESTY THE KING
{ HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, C.V.O., M.A., MUS. DOC.
Honorary Secretary: GEORGE A. MACMILLAN, Esq., D. Litt.
Registrar: CLAUDE AVELING, Esq., M.A.
Bursar: E. J. N. POLKINHORNE, Hon. R.C.M.

The College offers a Complete Course of Musical Education to pupils of both sexes, both professional and amateur. Upwards of seventy Scholarships and Exhibitions are founded which provide free musical education.

Classes for Score Reading, Conducting, Training of Teachers, Musical Criticism, and Ballet, are held at the College.

The OPERA CLASS has the use of the fully-equipped College OPERA THEATRE, with SUNKEN ORCHESTRA.

EXAMINATIONS for Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.), in all subjects, held three times a year, in April, September, and December. Syllabus and all particulars may be obtained from the Registrar of the College.

The Royal College of Organists.

THE DISTRIBUTION OF DIPLOMAS by the President, Dr. H. W. RICHARDS, will take place on Saturday, July 24th, at 3 o'clock.

An Organ Recital by Mr. G. Thalben-Ball, Organist of the Temple Church, and a Conversazione, will follow the Distribution.

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING, 2.30 o'clock.

Examination Regulations, list of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

The College is open daily from 10 to 4: Saturdays, 10 to 1.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College. Associateship or Fellowship, 6*d.* each (post free).

N.B.—The College will be closed during August.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.
Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

Guildhall School of Music.

(Founded in 1880 by the Corporation of London, and managed by the Music Committee.)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4.

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE Lessons in any single Musical Subject, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera; Classes in Conducting.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £9 9*s.* and £12 12*s.* Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.
Telephone: Cent. 4459; and City 5566.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, SOUTHAMPTON.

FACULTY OF MUSIC.

An Open Exhibition giving free instruction for three years in the Music Department of the College will be awarded.

Candidates must have qualified for Matriculation of the Universities of London or Durham, and must be prepared to read for a Degree in Music.

Applications, on the prescribed forms, obtainable from the Registrar, should be submitted on or before July 15th.

GEORGE GRANT, Registrar.

96 & 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1.

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON CLASS by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

Mr. FREDERICK MOORE takes alternate Wednesdays.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS.
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council.)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, MRS. MARION COLE, Secretary.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.
Principal: DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY.
Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are required to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the training of Teachers, approved by Teachers' Registration Council.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

New Pianoforte Professor, Mr. CLAUD BIGGS.

New Professor of Singing, Miss MARGUERITE SWALE.

GLASGOW ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

SESSION 1926-27.

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 14 to December 5, December 7 to March 13, and March 15 to June 11.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes. Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

MANCHESTER SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

16, ALBERT SQUARE.

Principal and Founder (1892): J. A. CROSS
Late Principal (1897-1925): ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras, Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, &c. Single Subjects taught.

New Pianoforte Professor:

MR. ROBERT GREGORY.

Mr. Gregory was Professor of the Pianoforte in Vienna for many years, having studied there under the eminent Leschetitzky, teacher of PADEREWSKI.

Prospectus from the Secretary, 16, Albert Square.

LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING.

20a, Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square, W.1.

President: A. NETTLEFOLD.

Principal: DAVID GODELL.

Complete training in all subjects for the Vocalist, Professional and Amateur. Evening Lessons. TWO FREE SCHOLARSHIPS. All voices. Last day of Entry, May 8. Particulars from Secretary. Mayfair 3819.

THE REAL USE OF RELAXATION

as applied to pianoforte playing. Important discoveries giving more rapid and definite development of technique with DURABLE RESULTS and remarkable beauty and purity of TONE PRODUCTION. The stiffest hands quickly yield to this teaching.

D. Mus. Oxon., F.R.C.O., writes:

"I do think your 'School' is so excellent. The thoroughness and lucidity with which you treat every detail of pianoforte playing are amazing, and one can have no possible doubt that the principles you put forward are the correct and fundamental ones for which we have sought so painfully in years gone by."

ENTIRELY UNIQUE CORRESPONDENCE COURSE OF 12 PERSONAL and INDIVIDUAL LESSONS, designed for the PIANO ENTHUSIAST, and expounding fully and clearly the "MODERN TEACHING AND APPLICATION OF WEIGHT TOUCH," the only source of beautiful and finely graded tone.

No matter where you live, these lessons will help you tremendously. The course is remarkable for the amount of personal and individual attention given to each pupil. The lessons are supplemented by POSTAL CONSULTATIONS on all points which may arise during the course, bringing the pupil into direct touch with Mr. Gillett.

Full particulars will be sent to all bona fide inquirers. Write to-day, naming one or two pieces you play and your individual difficulties. If you prefer to call and discuss the lessons with Mr. Gillett, by all means do so.

PERSONAL LESSONS DAY and EVENING.

THE CHARLES A. GILLETT

Pianoforte School,

11, SOUTH MOLTON STREET, LONDON, W.1.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus.Doc., LL.D.
Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D.Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1925-1926.

The Season consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 22 to December 20); WINTER TERM (January 14 to April 11); SUMMER TERM (April 20 to July 4).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—
H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.
Paradise Street, Birmingham.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COMPETITIVE CHOIRS.

PRESIDENT:
JOHN E. TURNER, ESQ., HALIFAX MADRIGAL SOCIETY.

The objects are for the binding together for mutual help of all the Competitive Choirs in the Country, to deal with all matters affecting the interests of the choirs, and to be the channel of communication between the choirs and the various Musical Festival committees in the Country.

Further particulars from the Hon. Secretary,
H. STEVENSON, 6, Laneside Street, Todmorden.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS.

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."
"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

RECENT SUCCESSES,

including the only pupil sent up, January, 1925.

2s. 6d. per lesson and postage.

"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.
Principal: JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., Mus. Doc., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

THE OPERATIC CLASS

Will give performances of the undermentioned Operas at

THE NEW SCALA THEATRE

Proprietor - - - - - - - A. E. ABRAHAMS.
Licensee - - - - - - - - D. A. ABRAHAMS.

CHARLOTTE STREET, W., as follows:

HÄNSEL AND GRETEL - Humperdinck
On MONDAY, JULY 12th; WEDNESDAY, JULY 14th; and FRIDAY, JULY 16th.

VENUS AND ADONIS - - Dr. John Blow
GIANNI SCHICCHI - - - Puccini
AND DROSS - - - - - Paul Corder
On TUESDAY, JULY 13th, and THURSDAY, JULY 15th.

FALSTAFF - - - - - - Verdi
SATURDAY, JULY 17th.
Beginning at 8 each night.

Orchestra Stalls, 5*s.* 9*d.*; Stalls, 3*s.* 6*d.*; Dress Circle, 3*s.* 6*d.*; Circle, 2*s.* 4*d.*; Upper Circle, 1*s.* 2*d.* (including tax in all cases).

Tickets, which can be booked in advance to all parts of the House, can be obtained on application to the Box OFFICE, Scala Theatre.

LONDON SEMI-NATIONAL EISTEDDFOD,

CENTRAL HALL, WESTMINSTER.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, 1926.

MALE-VOICE CHOIRS ... ... PRIZE £75.
MIXED CHOIRS ... ... PRIZE £25.

SOLOS, ETC.

SYLLABUS (two penny stamps) of Hon. Secs.,
J. DAVIES, 107, Falmouth Road, London, S.E.1.
W. J. WILLIAMS, 37, Denmark Hill, London, S.E.1.

THE SCARBOROUGH MUSICAL FESTIVAL, which was unavoidably postponed owing to the Strike, will be held

THURSDAY, FRIDAY, and SATURDAY,
OCTOBER 28th, 29th, and 30th.

The Test-Pieces and Regulations will be the same.

Further entries will be received up to September 7th.

Syllabus and Entry forms on application to the Secretary,

Scarborough Townsmen's Association,
9, ABERDEEN WALK, SCARBOROUGH.

MR. HERBERT HODGE will give an Organ Recital at St. Stephen's Walbrook, on Thursday, July 8th, at 1.10 p.m.

NOTTINGHAM MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

OCTOBER 27, 28, 29, and 30, 1926.

75 CLASSES IN VOCAL AND INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC AND ELOCUTION.

ADJUDICATORS:
PROF. GRANVILLE BANTOCK. T. F. DUNHILL.
FREDK. DAWSON. E. STANLEY ROPER.
DR. JAMES LYON, ETC.

SYLLABUS (price 6*d.*), to be had from the Hon. Sec.,
W. F. BARTON, 28, Park Row, Nottingham.

WEST WALES FESTIVAL, CARMARTHEN.

SEPTEMBER 15, 16, 17, 19, 1926.
President ... THE LORD BISHOP OF ST. DAVID'S.
In St. Peter's Church.
"HYMN OF PRAISE." "FOR THE FALLEN" (Elgar).
"MESSIAH." "ELIJAH," ETC.
ORCHESTRAL CONCERT.
Conductor ... J. CHARLES WILLIAMS, A.R.C.M.
For Programmes, 1*s.*, Tickets, &c., apply, COLBY EVANS, Carmarthen.

The Master-Method of Memory-Playing which is totally different from any other system for memorising music, will enable you to play from memory with ease, certainty, and confidence.

An unreliable memory is one of the greatest handicaps to progress. Many a good musician has failed to achieve the success deserved through this very common failing.

If you can play with the music you can play without, and I guarantee to teach you to be note-perfect from memory in a remarkably short time.

REPETITION ELIMINATED.
SUCCESS GUARANTEED.

Take the first step to-day by sending for my descriptive Booklet, which is sent free and post free on request, stating whether you play the Piano, Violin, 'Cello, or Organ, and if a beginner, intermediate, or advanced player, to

MR. REGINALD C. FOORT, F.R.C.O.,
19, BEACON HOUSE, HEMSTAL ROAD,
LONDON, N.W.6.

THE LONDON COLLEGE FOR CHORISTERS.

6 and 7, BLOMFIELD CRESCENT, PADDINGTON, W.2.
Founder: Mr. JAMES BATES.

Solo Boys and Chorus Boys supplied at short notice for Church Services, &c. Telephone: Paddington 5990. Sec., ARTHUR G. BATES.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.
For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS,
Glennholme, The Common, Hessle, E. Yorks.

CORRESPONDENCE COACHING FOR EXAMINATIONS.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING
Mus. Doc. (Lond.).

THIS MONTH'S SPECIAL COURSES.

1.—L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M., Sept. and Christmas.

Full preparation in all Paper Work, Rudiments, Harmony, Form and Teaching, Questions on Touch, Pedalling, &c.

2.—Durham, 1st and Final Mus. B., Sept., 1926.

NUMEROUS SUCCESSES at L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and Mus. Bac., and Diplomas of T.C.L. and R.C.O.

Full preparation may now be commenced for A. and F.R.C.O. (January, 1927). Durham and London Mus. Bac., and Mus. Doc.

PRACTICAL WORK—PERSONAL LESSONS IN LONDON AND BRISTOL.

Candidates who are entering for the first time, and also those who have previously failed to pass any examination, should communicate with

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING,
46, CLARENDON ROAD,
REDLAND, BRISTOL.

Telephone: Bristol 3033.

"MASTERY OF THE KEYBOARD."
C. PALMER.

SIGHT-READING LESSONS.

COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS.

PRESS EXTRACTS.

The Times: "Deals with the subject systematically from the first stage."

Musical Times: "The idea is so simple and practical that we wonder it has not been dealt with systematically long ago."

Music: "Mr. Denham goes fully and thoroughly into his subject from every possible standpoint. Cannot fail to be of service.

Aberdeen Press and Journal: "The scarcity of good sight-readers, and even among capable pianists, is proof of the need for a more systematised form of training than obtains at present, and Mr. Denham's system has the double advantage of being both simple and practical."

Personal Lessons if desired.

GEORGE DENHAM, L.R.A.M., ETC.,
41, AVONDALE ROAD, S. CROYDON: AND 32, WIGMORE STREET, W.1.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR.

HOW TO SING
HOW TO TEACH SINGING

Ten-Lesson Intensive Courses for Professional and Amateur Vocalists, Choirmasters, Teachers of Voice-Production and Singing, and Advanced Students taking up a Teaching Career.

Tuition given personally; also BY CORRESPONDENCE. The most comprehensive, thorough, and graded practical Course—and by Correspondence the nearest approach to personal tuition possible.

Testimonials.—"Foremost among leading voice producers"; "Wonderful results"; "Voice improves day by day"; "What I have been struggling for years to know"; "Excellent investment."

Change of Address:

WILLIAM WOLLER,
37, CASTLETOWN ROAD, BARON'S COURT,
LONDON, W.14.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

PRINCIPAL:
ARTHUR McALISTER, B.A.

SUCCESSES achieved by Students of the M.C.C.

MATRIC. - - 135

1st Mus. Bac. March, 1926.
Entries 30. Successes 7. 23%

M.C.C. Students
ENTRIES - - - 5
SUCCESSES - - - 3
60%

A.R.C.O. A Candidate after failing 4 TIMES (under other tuition), joins the M.C.C., and PASSES at the 5th ATTEMPT.

F.R.C.O. A Candidate failed 7 TIMES (under other tuition). This Student joined the M.C.C. and PASSED, Jan., 1926.

A. Mus. T.C.L.
Art of Teaching - - - 88%
Counterpoint - - - 93%
Harmony - - - - 84%

L. Mus. T.C.L. Two Candidates passed July, 1925. Both were Students of the M.C.C.
95% Orchestration.

L.R.A.M. (Pianoforte) 66% and Failure (under other tuition).
81% and SUCCESS (M.C.C. tuition).

ALL OUR SUCCESSES ARE BY CORRESPONDENCE.

MODERN

20, SHERWIN ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

PIANO PLAYING KEPT UP WITHOUT KEYBOARD PRACTISING

NOT the least of the many benefits which the use of my System confers upon pianists is that of being able to keep "in practice" without keyboard practising.

Even when circumstances render keyboard work impossible for several months, definite progress is often made in touch, increased powers of execution, and in general command over the keyboard. This is one of the many reasons why pianists of all grades of proficiency take my Postal Course.

From Brain to Keyboard

Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing

20,000 Successful Pupils of all ages

No apparatus or special music is necessary—just an easily acquired method, with much quicker and better results. Musical News describes my system as "the most striking discovery of the present generation for practical musicians." Many eminent musicians, including the late Sir Frederick Bridge, have used and highly recommended my System—

THE ORIGINAL POSTAL SYSTEM.

My illustrated book, "LIGHT ON PIANOFORTE PLAYING,"

will gladly be sent to any pianist. It fully explains the principles and advantages of the methods used in the System. When applying please do not omit to state whether comparative beginner, average or advanced pianist. The book will be sent free of charge, and post free.

M. MACDONALD SMITH, 19, BLOOMSBURY SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.1.

TO CONCERT DIRECTORS.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF

(British).

The well-known Pianist is arranging a Recital Tour for the coming season.

Special terms can be quoted for a Recital or part programme if immediate application is made.

Managers of suitable Concert-Halls also please send terms for hiring.

Please address all communications to

ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

THE TECHNIQUER

Invented and Patented by R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac.

FOR FLEXING, STRENGTHENING, STRETCHING, and DEVELOPING THE HANDS.

Send for testimony of LAMOND, POUISHNOFF, FRYER, REDDIE, WALENN, and many other eminent musicians.

"The excellent 'Techniquer' of Mr. Pitcher has been used by the writer with advantage. It does a good many things."—The Music Teacher, April, 1926.

Treatise on "Hand Development," with Photos, 1*s.* 6*d.*

Full particulars from the Secretary—

MISS F. J. FITCH, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.,

21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

A.R.C.O. EXAMINATION AIDS.

A series of practical papers outlining courses of study and giving helpful hints with expert advice on the following Tests:

SOLO-PLAYING. SCORE-READING.
TRANSPOSITION. ACCOMPANIMENT (with list of 75 Solos).
ESSAY.

3*s.* each. 10*s.* 6*d.* the set.

At the request of many who have derived valuable help from the above, the writer has now prepared a similar AID to the

A.R.C.O. PAPER-WORK TESTS.

Price 5*s.*

"A.R.C.O. EXAMN. AIDS," 44, BLANTYRE RD., LIVERPOOL.

THE "SIMPLEXA" FINGER TRAINER.

(Registered No. 692810.)

FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS.

A SIMPLE AND VERY EFFECTIVE APPLIANCE FOR GIVING STRENGTH AND FLEXIBILITY TO THE FINGERS.

Extract from "Musical Times."—"We have given a trial to the 'Simplexa Pocket Finger Trainer,' and have no hesitation in recommending it to our readers as a means of stretching the fingers and keeping them generally in good playing condition. Instrumentalists who are travelling, or unable to obtain regular practice, will find the appliance a boon. It is well-named, being simplicity itself, and so portable that it can be carried in the waistcoat pocket."

IMPROVED MODEL, 2*s.* 6*d.*, POST FREE.

1, LONGFORD TERRACE, FOLKESTONE.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent

St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Owing to increased output, we have reduced the price of our Popular Model to 14 guineas cash. Deferred payments if desired.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions, and References to

THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,

NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.

London address: 11, Ashlake Road, Streatham, S.W.16.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone, and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

INVITATION LECTURE-RECITAL.

Subject: VOCAL METHODS.

A LECTURE-RECITAL will be given by Mr. F. C. FIELD HYDE and Pupils in LONDON, W., on WEDNESDAY, JULY 28th, at 8.15 p.m.

Particulars and Invitations may be had by sending stamped addressed envelope to the Secretary, 43, Upper George Street, Bryanston Square, W.1.

The above is preliminary to Mr. FIELD HYDE'S HOLIDAY COURSE, on which is acknowledged by all who have been through it to be the most complete exposition of sound voice-training method available and of the greatest help to all engaged in any form of vocal training.

THE ART OF VOICE TRAINING

MORNING and AFTERNOON LECTURES on

THE ART OF VOICE-TRAINING.

EVENING LECTURES on

THE TEACHING OF SONG INTERPRETATION with an illustrated Recital by Miss ELSIE DUNIAM-JONES, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.;

and on PROBLEMS OF THE SINGING-CLASS AND CHOIR.

Here is one spontaneous expression of opinion which is representative of hundreds received from Teachers, Singers, Cathedral and Church Organists, Principals and Professors of Musical Colleges:

"It is over ten years since I took your lessons and lectures, from which I derived the greatest benefit. I have read nearly all the books on the subject, and your course is worth all of them put together. I have to thank you very largely for my success as a teacher of singing. Anyone who likes teaching and digests your method, is bound to be a good teacher."

For details, address as above.

SERVICE AND ECONOMY

BY APPOINTMENT.

The "Discus" embodies these two factors which are very important points in an organ-blowing installation. Designed by engineers who have specialised in this class of work for over thirty years, and constructed of metal throughout, its reliability and efficiency are guaranteed. Quiet and smooth running, it is possible to instal the "Discus" for any type or size of organ: the motive power may be either electricity, gas or oil. Write for a copy of our booklet "Organ Blowing," sent post free on application, and let us submit estimates and suggestions free.

Some of the many DISCUS installations:

Westminster Abbey
York Minster
Southwark Cathedral
Bath Abbey
Westminster Chapel
City Temple
St. Martin-in-the-Fields
Malvern College
Wellington College
Eton
Harrow
Royal Albert Hall
Queen's Hall
Royal Academy of Music.

Also in Australia, India, South Africa, New Zealand, China.

THE "DISCUS" ORGAN BLOWER

REGD. TRADE MARK.

WATKINS & WATSON.

WHITE LION STREET, LONDON, N.1.

Telephone: North 2039.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS WINIFRED DENHAM (A.R.C.M.).
SOPRANO.
"A clear, well-produced voice—exceedingly well sung."—Musical Standard.
41, Avondale Road, South Croydon.

MISS LYDIA JOHN
(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.
Concerts, Oratorios, Organ Recitals, &c.
Recital-Lectures of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
Pupils received for Voice-Production and Singing.
Prepared for L.R.A.M., Associated Board, &c.
28, ALBION ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.
Tel.: Hampstead 5797.
Lessons given at West-End Studio or above address.

HAROLD KNOWLTON
TENOR.
St. Paul's Cathedral, E.C. 4.
1, Hatherley Gardens, Crouch End, N.8. Mountview 5289.

EDMUND LANG
TENOR
ORATORIO, CONCERTS, ETC.
47, Leigh Road, Highbury, N.5

MR. ERNEST A. FLAMBE
BASS.
Concerts, Oratorios, Receptions, &c.
"Judas Maccabæus," "Messiah," "Elijah," &c.
46, Rathcoole Avenue, Hornsey, N.8.

VERNON HARRISS,
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medallist. BASS.
Oratorio, Concerts. Vocal Coach and Adjudicator.
Senior Music Master, Downside School, near Bath.

FRANK POULTON (L.R.A.M.).
BASSO-CANTANTE.
Available for Oratorio, Choral Societies, &c.
33, Hounslow Avenue, Hounslow. 'Phone: Hounslow 1536.

VICTOR UTTING (L.R.A.M.).
BARITONE, ROCHESTER CATHEDRAL.
56, Boundary Road, Chatham, Kent.

GLADYS FREEMAN, A.R.M.C.M.
(TRAINED TEACHER.)
PIANOFORTE, EAR-TRAINING, RUDIMENTS.
TEACHES LONDON AND BECKENHAM.
For terms, apply:
16, Ilchester Mansions, Abingdon Road, Kensington, W.8.

MAUD GRUNDY (HARPIST).
Can accept single engagements for Choral Societies, &c., in the North, prior to and after Scottish Orchestra season.
17, Narcissus Road, London, N.W.6.

R. ARNOLD GREIR
F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.
Organist to the Royal Choral Society, London.
RECITALIST AND ACCOMPANIST.
2, Highview Road, West Ealing, W.13. Ealing 201.

MISS MARY LINDSAY
L.R.A.M. (Teacher's Diploma).
Gives lessons in Voice Production and Singing.
Moderate Terms.
17, Cromwell Road, South Kensington. Tel.: Western 3595.

ELIZABETH LEVY
L.R.A.M., GOLD MEDALLIST.
TOBIAS MATTHAY'S PIANOFORTE METHOD taught by her at pupils' houses or her studio. SPECIAL COACHING for Scholarships, Medals, and all Examinations. 52, Fairhazel Gardens, Hampstead, N.W.6.

H. FORSTER RICHARDSON
R.C.M. (Leipzig), A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M.
(Pupil of Tobias Matthay, Plunket Greene, Gregory Hast), gives lessons in Pianoforte Playing, Voice-Production and Singing.
Tuition on the most modern technical principles.
Coaching for Concert Work and Examinations.
Wigmore Hall Studios, Wigmore Street, W.1, and
2, Connaught Avenue, East Sheen, S.W.14.

MISS MARY WILSON, F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London,
Gives SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS to Candidates entering for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Singing Teachers' Diplomas.
Particulars on application.
Address: 10, Harley Street, London, W.1.

MADAME ALBA.—Dramatic Soprano, Professor of Singing (Italian Bel Canto). Training in four languages. Art of Breathing, Breath Control, Voice-Production and Culture, Effective Speaking, Clear Enunciation, Stage Deportment, Coach, Pianoforte Playing and Technique. Audition by appointment.
139, New Bond Street, W.1.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who OBTAINED DEGREES OF MUS.B. and Mus.D. at Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, London, and Durham Universities, Diplomas of L.L.C.M. (April & Dec.), L.R.A.M., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. L.C.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medals, Silver Medals, Scholarships, Prizes, Certificates, and valuable professional appointments. Dr. Allison is willing to teach those who neither require nor desire to pass examinations. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Analysis of Compositions by Post, to correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, and Piano. 24, Park Range, Victoria Park. Manchester.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.
Dr. Horton Allison, 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight-Reading Courses, Study Aids, 9d. Studies in Modulation, 3s.
Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.
HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B. Dunelm., F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Square, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—
(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
(3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.
L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-26 ... 296 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-26 ... 78 " " "
MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus.Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
(2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
(3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work.
(4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint.
(Address as above.)

MR. BIBBY also gives PERSONAL Lessons in Manchester. Complete Preparation (Practical and Paper Work) for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., &c. Address as above.

MR. ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Organist and Musical Director, The City Temple). 298, Balham High Road, S.W.17. Telephone: Battersea 0916.
Special preparation for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Also L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. ORGAN EXAMINATIONS.
SINGLE LESSONS and PRACTICE on facsimile R.C.O. instrument. Pieces registered.
RECENT SUCCESSES IN ORGAN WORK:

1	L.R.A.M., Dec., 1919.	3	A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.
1	A.R.C.M., April, 1920.	1	A.R.C.O., July, 1921.
1	L.R.A.M., April, 1924.	3	A.R.C.O., July, 1922.
1	F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.	1	A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.
1	F.R.C.O., July, 1922.	4	A.R.C.O., July, 1923.
3	F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.	1	A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.
3	F.R.C.O., July, 1923.	3	A.R.C.O., July, 1924.
2	F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925.	3	A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925.
3	F.R.C.O., July, 1925.	5	A.R.C.O., July, 1925.
1	F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926.	3	A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926.

"Hints for R.C.O. Candidates" to be obtained from the Publishers, Reid Bros., 26, Eastcastle Street, Oxford Circus, W.1.

MR. RONALD BRIDGER, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c. (Registered Teacher), prepares pupils for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. examinations in singing, either personally or by correspondence. Lessons also given in Voice Production and Singing. Highest references. Full particulars from 54, Pembridge Villas, W.11.

J. C. BRYDSON, Mus. B. (Dunelm.). Postal Tuition for Mus. B., R.A.M., R.C.M., R.C.O., and T.C.L. Paper Work (Ordinary and Guarantee Courses). Apply, enclosing stamped, addressed envelope for particulars of Free Scholarships. "Balcary," Kegworth, Derby.

L. R.A.M., A.R.C.M. SPECIAL COACHING by ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Pianist. Paper-Work Postal. Address, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

SELF-PREPARATION.
(THEORETICAL AND PRACTICAL.)
Many Music Students are at times perplexed, where but a little guidance will help them towards their goal.
Single Lesson, or Course by arrangement.
A. GRAVES, F.R.C.O., 30, Salop Road, Oswestry.

FREDERICK GREEN, L.R.A.M., ETC. Voice Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Preparation for R.A.M. c/o Rushworth & Dreaper, 11, Islington, Liverpool.

MR. J. D. HANDS, Mus. Bac. (Dublin), L.R.A.M., gives lessons in Harmony by post. Music composed to Lyrics. Pianoforte Accompaniments written to Airs. Moderate terms. 114. Wellesley Road, Clacton-on-Sea.

SEPTEMBER EXAMS., L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M., Vocal and Pianoforte, Special preparation courses during July and August, under Mr. Frederick C. Haggis, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., L.T.C.L., at the Wigmore Hall Studios, W., and at Streatham, S.W. Address, The Ward End, Wallington, Surrey. 'Phone, Wallington 1293.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O., SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 410 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., and A.R.C.O., &c. 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. HARRIS REVISES and PREPARES MSS. FOR PUBLICATION. • Accompaniments to Songs written.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply, Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D. Mus. Oxon., 1922, L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates, personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, Queen Victoria Street, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London, at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey. Many recent F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. successes.
5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

A. EAGLEFIELD HULL, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O. For Lectures, address E. L. Robinson Direction, 199, Piccadilly, London, W.1; for personal and correspondence lessons, address Dr. Eaglefield Hull, 19, Berners Street, W.1. For Organ Recitals, address Secretary, 48, New North Rd., Huddersfield.

DR. REGINALD H. HUNT, D. Mus., Lond., F.R.C.O. Individual Coaching by Correspondence. 7, Woodgrange Avenue, North Finchley, N.12.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING. Latest Successes: Durham, Sept., 1925, 7 Final Mus. Bac. passes. Also 1st Mus. Bac. pass. Mus. Doc. and Mus. Bac. Exs., after prelim. course in composition, also in 1925. Both Mus. Doc. passes in 1924. 170 Successes at Durham alone, besides R.C.O. Diplomas. The Durdans, Reigate.

DR. F. J. KARN (Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Mus. Doc. Toronto) continues to give lessons in Harmony and other Theoretical subjects, and prepares for all Musical Examinations. Compositions revised and Analyses written. Candidates prepared by Dr. Karn have gained the Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. degrees at the Universities and diplomas from the Musical Colleges.
Address: 106, Haverstock Hill, London, N.W.3.

DR. KNOWLES (Manchester 1919, Durham 1920) specialises in preparing candidates by post for the Paper-work of all examinations in music. Solutions, with methods of working. Address, "Cramond," Oakhurst Avenue, East Barnet, London, N.

MR. C. E. de M. LEATHES, M.A., MUS. BAC., F.R.C.O. Tuition in Piano, Harmony, Composition, &c. Pupils successfully prepared for all examinations. Cramer's Studios, 139, Bond Street, W.1, and 128, Kensington High St., W.8.

DR. ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, MUS. DOC., University of Toronto; Mus. Doc., Trinity University, Toronto; F.R.C.O.: F.A.G.O., &c., Sirsa House, Cheltenham. Correspondence Lessons. Revision of MSS. Scoring, editing, and arranging. Examination pieces analysed and annotated.

PREPARATION L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all Associated Board Exams. 1925 Successes include 5 L.R.A.M. (Pianoforte). Courses of study, or single lessons, arranged at home or West End. Alan May, 31, Bonham Road, S.W.2.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning," prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.
10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Twenty-five years' experience in Private Tuition and Coaching for Degrees. More than 800 of Dr. Middleton's Pupils have obtained Degrees at the Universities, R.A.M., R.C.M., and R.C.O. Address, 60, Berners Street, W.1.

L. R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Exams. Correspondence lessons in Harmony, Form, Teaching, &c. 23 pupils' successes. Moderate terms. Arthur W. Morrison, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., 39, Clarendon Road, Fulwood, Sheffield.

L. R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. (Paper work), and Durham Matric. Revision Correspondence Courses for next Exams. by University man. Mod. Fees. "Oxon," 17, Bath Road, Buxton.

CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS.

Graded Lessons especially prepared to suit individual needs—every student assured of personal care and attention. Rudiments, Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, &c. Preparation for Diplomas and other examinations. Interesting courses also for those not wishing to enter examinations.
ALFRED MORRIS, L.Mus., T.C.L., 9, West Lorne Street, Chester.

PIANO TEACHING EXAMS., A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M., ETC.
(a) Outline of Course of Instruction, 5*s*.
(b) Studies for Special Purposes (first bars given), 5*s*.
(c) Four Special Test-Papers for A.R.C.M., £1 (including corrections).
"J. H.," Mus Bac., L.R.A.M., &c., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.
Prof. Singing, G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Musical Appreciation to L.C.C.
"Recit. and its Rendering." 1*s*. 6*d*. "Vade Mecum for Singers." 6*d*.
Preparation for all Exams. by Post and Personal Lessons.
Special Courses of Papers: Singing, Piano, Touch, Musical Appreciation, &c.
Nearly 1,000 Successes for Degrees and Diplomas.
Send for Prospectus,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., prepares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes. 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4. Chiswick 3267.

DR. TAYLOR'S POSTAL PUPILS HAVE passed Mus. Bac. 1st and final. A.R.C.O.; L.R.A.M.; A.T.C.L. Pupil gained the Stillie Bursary at Glasgow for Counterpoint. Latest success, A.R.C.O. for 1924. Portland Place, Lancaster.

UNIVERSAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE.
COURSES OF LESSONS are given by CORRESPONDENCE in Theory of Music, Harmony, &c., by qualified Professors, and Students can be coached for any Degree, Diploma, or other Examination. Analyses of Form of Pianoforte Compositions prepared.
For details and fees, write:
ALFRED W. HOLMES, "Ranworth," Worcester Road, Sutton, Surrey.

W. G. WEBBER, F.R.C.O. Recitalist, &c. Preparation for Exams. Organ lessons given on new four-manual Willis. Address, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E.1.

HENRY M. BYRON, Managing Director, Concerts and Recitals. Established 1890. Address: 75, Church Road, Leyton, London, E.10.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) A.R.C.M. (Theory of Music).
(4) A. Mus. T.C.L. and L. Mus. T.C.L.

Several recent successes in all these examinations.

R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."

SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.

279 A.R.C.O. Successes since 1909.
174 F.R.C.O. " " "

RECENT SUCCESSES IN PAPER WORK:

4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.
5 F.R.C.O., July, 1915.	9 A.R.C.O., July, 1915.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1916.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1916.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1917.	4 A.R.C.O., July, 1917.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918.
1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.	10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920.	6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.	7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.
6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921.	8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921.
5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922.
8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.	9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1924.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1924.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925.	8 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925.
7 F.R.C.O., July, 1925.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1925.
5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926.

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

MISS MARGARET YOUNG, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Pianoforte); A.T.C.L. (Vocal and Pianoforte), Registered Teacher, T.R.C. Postal Tuition for Theoretical, above Diplomas; also General Musical Knowledge and Advice. Bawburgh, Norwich.

DURHAM CATHEDRAL.
CHORISTERSHIPS.
Board, lodging, education, and medical attendance free. Candidates must have a good voice and correct ear, and should be between eight and eleven years of age. Education for the Public Schools. Apply to the Rev. The Precentor, The College, Durham.

NEW COLLEGE, OXFORD.
ELECTION OF CHORISTERS.
A TRIAL OF VOICES will be held on JULY 7, at 2 p.m., to fill vacancies. Choristers are boarded at the School House, and are granted Scholarships from the date of election up to the age of 17½. Forms of application and further information can be obtained from The Head-master, New College Choir School, Oxford.

BASS, TENOR, ALTO WANTED.—All Saints', Devonshire Road, South Lambeth, in return for Lessons in Singing, Pianoforte, or Organ. "W. A.," 21, Thurlestone Road, S.E.27.

BASS WANTED for Christ Church, Down Street, W.1. £15 12s. per annum. Write, "Oxon.," 13, Church Crescent, E.9.

SOLO BASS, £24, and CHORUS TENOR, £18-£20, REQUIRED for Holy Trinity, Paddington. Experienced. Sight-readers essential. Letters only, S. W. Chuckerbutty, 3, Maida Hill West, W.2.

TENOR and BASS SOLOISTS will accept engagements for ORATORIOS, &c., to assist small Church Choirs. Small nominal fee to cover expenses. "E.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

BASS (late Southwark Cathedral), open to deputise, July-September, City, West End, S.E. Culley, 38, Sherwood Road, Croydon.

TEACHER OF SINGING.
The Committee of the Cork Municipal School of Music invite applications for post of Teacher of Singing at a remuneration of 6s. per hour of actual teaching. The person appointed will be required to subscribe to the form of declaration required by Section 71 of the Local Government Act, 1925 (Free State).
Applications, containing statement of qualifications, teaching experience, and candidate's age, accompanied by copies of three recent testimonials, will be received by the undersigned, at his office, Sharman Crawford Street, Cork, not later than Wednesday, July 14th. Canvassing is prohibited.
July 1st, 1926. F. B. GILTINAN, Secretary.

VACANCY OPEN for Articled Pupil in Singing, to take over old-established teaching connection, or train for public singing. "A. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

AN Old-established Male-Voice Choir, meeting in South-West London on Thursday evenings, will require the services of a Conductor for the ensuing Season, and invites applications from professional gentlemen. Apply, "G. H.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SINGING and ELOCUTION TEACHING CONNECTION (or nucleus), desired near London, by well-known lady teacher, or would exchange for good one in flourishing town, Yorkshire. Address, "Bel Canto," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

RIPON CATHEDRAL.—To old Choristers and Pupils of the late Dr. E. J. Crow. It is proposed to erect a Memorial in the Cathedral to the memory of Dr. Crow. Donations may be sent to Dr. C. H. Moody, C.B.E., Woodbridge, Ripon.

ST. GEORGE'S CATHEDRAL, JERUSALEM.
The position of ORGANIST is VACANT. Applicants must be unmarried and not more than thirty years of age. Annual salary, £150, with furnished rooms. Cost of board about £7 a month. Journey paid both ways on three years' agreement. The salary will be raised to £200 if the Organist is prepared and able to do part-time teaching (other than music) in St. George's Boys' School. Applications, with testimonials, and full details of qualifications, together with three references, to be sent to The Rev. E. M. Bickersteth, 12, Warwick Square, London, S.W.1, not later than July 7th. Female applicants are not excluded. The chosen candidate will be expected to undertake the work in September.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER WANTED, for First Presbyterian Church, Ballymena, North Ireland.
Apply, by letter only, stating experience, qualifications, &c., to
D. C. HOOK, Secretary,
Waveney Road, Ballymena.

WANTED.—ORGANIST. for Sway Church, Hants. Appointment vacant through death. Previously held by L.R.A.M. and Mus. Bac. New two-manual organ recently erected by Rushworth & Dreaper, Liverpool, in perfect order and up-to-date in all particulars. Applications for temporary duty would be considered, but permanent Organist required. Apply by letter, or suggest an interview, in London, to W. H. Evans, Sway Lodge, near Lymington. Remuneration about £50 per annum; possible increase to one of good qualifications.

LADY ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER for beautiful village Church, close to Welwyn Garden City. £50. Sung Eucharist. Experience in choir-training essential. Some private means. Send full particulars, references, copies of testimonials, Rector, Digswell, Welwyn, Herts.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for small Country Church (English), in Vale of Clwyd. Good modern organ. Small, but well-trained choir. Suitable for elderly man, fond of a quiet country life. Small house with modern conveniences; good garden; free. Salary, £100. Not much scope for pupils. Apply, "J. C. G.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

CHOIRMASTER WANTED, owing to removal. Nonconformist. Good choir. Fine Two-Manual Organ. Ilford district. Box 24, c/o Mather & Crowther, Ltd., 10, New Bridge Street, E.C.4.

ST. MARY CHURCH, SOUTH DEVON
(Parish Church, Four-Manual Organ.)
ORGANISTS visiting the neighbourhood during August and September, willing to contribute to the series of Sunday Evening Recitals, communicate with J. Percy Lawson, Dartmoor Lodge, St. Mary Church.

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF MUSIC (Lady), A.R.C.O., desires ENGAGEMENT London Church offering wider scope than present post. Recommendations, R.C.O. and R.A.M. professors, and clergy. Experienced and professional choir-trainer; disciplinarian; keen; methodical. Good organ essential. "C. E.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour St., W.1.

LONDON Organist, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., desires move to post N.W. or N. district, to reduce travelling. Anglican or Gregorian. "Box No. 5," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PUBLIC SCHOOL ORGANIST and MUSIC-MASTER, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., trained R.A.M., desires similar post, or Church appointment with teaching connection, preferably on or near coast. Apply, "M. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

A.R.C.O.—Disengaged, SEEKS APPOINTMENT. Willing to deputise during the month of August. "H. A. T.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PLAINCHANT.—Lessons in its Theory, Practice, and Accompaniment, combined with practical experience, at St. Michael's, Shoreditch, E.C.2. Write Organist.

AUGUST DEPUTY.—ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER (experienced F.R.C.O.), would deputise, month of August. Home or Abroad. Apply, "X. Y. Z.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

EXPERIENCED ORGANIST open to deputise during August, or beginning September. Full Service or Plain (Anglican). South or East Coast, or Isle of Wight preferred. State terms and particulars to "H. L.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER desires APPOINTMENT in Country Town. Would purchase with small teaching connection. "G. F. A.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

HOLIDAY DEPUTY.—Experienced ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER (F.R.C.O.), available July 11 till end of August. Edinburgh, Glasgow, and district. Apply, "J. D. S.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd. 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PUPIL-ASSISTANT REQUIRED for Nonconformist Church, North London. "E. M. P.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—1*s.* 4*d.* an hour, or 6*s.* a week. Hydraulic-blown, two manuals and pedals (R.C.O. scale). Reduced fee for combined lessons and practice. Single practices (pupils only), 9*d.* an hour. The Fulham School of Music, 2, Edgarley Terrace, Fulham Palace Rd., S.W.6. Tel.: Putney 4208.

MISS LILIAN TROTT, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M., will give a RECITAL (1,913th), at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, on Tuesday, July 6th, at 1 p.m.

PIANOFORTE OR SINGING TEACHING CONNECTION. L.R.A.M. wishes to purchase. "Madame," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SOPRANOS, ALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES. There are a few vacancies in mixed-voice choir now in course of formation. Applicants must be good readers. Write, "Conductor," 72, Castle Street, Battersea, S.W.11.

LADY PIANIST DESIRES PRACTICE with Violinist for mutual benefit. W. Idle, 12, Berber Road, S.W.11.

PIANIST (gentleman) wishes to meet another Pianist with a view to practising Pianoforte Duets, and Two-Pianoforte Music (advanced). Reply, "F. H. P.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

CHURCH ORGANS STANDARDISED.—Two Manuals, Pneumatic Pedals, various sizes: specially built. Five to fifteen stops. Introduced to meet the requirements of the times at minimum cost. W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Manchester, S.W.

MODERN Two-manual pedal Pipe Organ (second-hand), WANTED. Five octaves. Length 5-ft. 4-in. Rev. J. W. C. Smyth, Vicarage, Porton, near Salisbury.

SEVERAL ORGANS, suitable for small Churches, for SALE. From £300. Erection according to distance. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

ORGAN.—Walnut case, by Karn. 2 Knee-Swells, 2 Couplers, 17 Stops, in perfect tune and condition. Hardly used. Very powerful. First offer, not too unreasonable, secures. "S.," 3, Rosedale Terrace, W.6.

APOLLO ORGAN and Small Musical Library of Music—Organ, Pianoforte, Studies, Vocal, &c. Most new. Stamp. 37, Richmond Terrace, Darwen.

NORMAN & BEARD Pneumatic Piano Pedal Attachment, with adjustable Stool. For SALE. R.C.O. specification. Perfect condition. Cost £32, new, recently. Best offer secures. 22, Mabel Grove, West Bridgford, Notts.

BROADWOOD (Rosewood) GRAND PIANO. Excellent condition. Brass Frame, Check Action. Apply, "B. F.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PIANO.—Erard Boudoir Grand, overstrung, perfect condition. £100, or near offer. Write, "Box 571," Leathwait & Simmons, 34, Throgmorton Street, E.C.2.

WANTED.—GRAND PIANO. German make preferred. Guy, Aspin Lodge, Harrow.

FOR SALE.—Full Scores, folio, cloth, Beethoven's Trios, Quartets, Quintets, and Symphonies; and Mozart's "Don Juan," paper. Breitkopf's edition. Good condition. What offers? "X.," 28, John Street, Ryde, Isle of Wight.

FOR SALE.—VOLS. 1 to 14 of The Organist's Quarterly Journal, bound and in good condition. £5 5*s.*; or a reasonable offer. Miss Latouche, Wistanstow Rectory, Craven Arms, Shropshire.

ORGAN AND PIANOFORTE MUSIC FOR SALE.—Miniature Scores. Send stamp for List. 107, Oxford Street, Church Gresley, Burton.

VIOLIN (Gagliano) for SALE.—£80. Absolutely authentic. Very interesting instrument. Velvety tone. Appy, Mr. Wiltberger, notaire à Phalsbourg, Moselle, France.

GENUINE NICOLAS VIOLIN.—In excellent condition. £10. Can be seen by appointment in London. "H. E. S.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSIC COMPOSERS and LYRICISTS.—Songs, Lyrics, and Musical Compositions Wanted for Publication. We set Lyrics to Music if desired. Send MSS. (words or music) to the Carlton Music Agency, 8, Lloyd Square, London, W.C.1.

COMMUNION SERVICE in F, complete, with 9-fold Kyrie. Specimen 1*s.*, from R. R. Glendinning, 13, Langton Terrace, Falmouth.

DUO-ART REPRODUCING ROLLS, and ordinary 88-note Pianola Rolls WANTED. Send particulars and lowest prices to H. S. Lewin, 22, Caterham Rd., London, S.E.13.

LYRIST wishes to hear from COMPOSER willing to co-operate for publication. Good prospects. Write, "F. W. K.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ADVERTISER wishes to DISPOSE of Virgil Clavier. Nominal price. Useful to pianist living in flat. Apply, 19, St. Luke's Road, W.11.

WANTED.—QUOTATIONS for PIPE ORGAN and assembling. Seating capacity of Church, 300. Write, T. H. Scoffin, 84, Marshall New Road, Crewe.

A TREATISE ON CONDUCTING.
12,000 WORDS. 1*s.* 9*d.* Illustrated Method!
Post 2*d.* 700 Copies sold.
Invaluable to Leaders and Members of any Orchestra, Band, or Choir.
M. T. Cooper, M.D., 23, Beech Avenue, Blackpool.

MUSIC COPIED, neat work, Transposition and Duplicating. E. W. Cartwright, 25, Irving Rd., Bournemouth.

FOR SALE: 3-MANUAL ORGAN,
by MESSRS. J. STRINGER & Co., Hanley, Staffs.

GREAT ORGAN.		SWELL ORGAN.
Open Diapason	8-ft.	Bourdon	16-ft.
Stop'd Diapason ...	8-ft.	Open Diapason	8-ft.
Clarabella	8-ft.	Salcional	8-ft.
Keraulophon	8-ft.	Lieblich Gedact	8-ft.
Principal	4-ft.	Vox Angelica	8-ft.
Wald Flute	4-ft.	Gemshorn	4-ft.
Fifteenth	2-ft.	Harmonic Piccolo ...	2-ft.
Mixture	...3 ranks.	Mixture	...2 ranks.
Trumpet	8-ft.	Cornopean	8-ft.
Wind Stop.		Orchestral Oboe ...	8-ft.
		Tremulant.

CHOIR ORGAN.		COUPLERS.
Dulciana	8-ft.	Swell to Great.
Hohl Flute	8-ft.	Swell Octave.
Gamba	8-ft.	Swell to Choir.
Harmonic Flute... ...	4-ft.	Choir to Great.
Clarionet	8-ft.	Swell to Pedals.
		Great to Pedals.
PEDAL ORGAN.		Choir to Pedals.
Violoncello	8-ft.	7 Composition Pedals.
Grand Bourdon... ...	16-ft.	Concave and Radiating Pedals.
Grand Diapason ...	16-ft.

Also a FULL GRAND PIANO by Kirkman, London.

Apply to MR. PYM, Secretary, Public Hall Co., Belper, Derbyshire.

DARLINGTON'S HANDBOOKS.
"Nothing better could be wished for."—British Weekly.

FRENCH AND ITALIAN RIVIERA. 60 Illustrations, Maps and Plans, 6/-.
WEST SWITZERLAND. 100 Illustrations, Maps and Plans, 4/-.
2/- Paris, Lyons, and Rhone Valley.
2/- Chamonix and Environs.
2/- Lake Geneva, Rhone Valley, and Zermatt.
2/- The French Riviera.
2/- The Italian Riviera.
2/- Bernese Oberland and Lucerne.
NORTH WALES. 60 Illustrations, Maps and Plans, 7/6.
DEVON & CORNWALL. 100 Illustrations, Maps and Plans, 7/6.
NORTH DEVON AND NORTH CORNWALL. 50 Illustrations, 6 Maps, 4/-
SOUTH DEVON AND SOUTH CORNWALL. 50 Illustrations, 6 Maps, 4/-.
THE HOTELS OF THE WORLD. A Handbook to the Leading Hotels throughout the World, 2/6.

List of DARLINGTON'S HANDBOOKS post free.
Llangollen: DARLINGTON & Co. London: SIMPKINS. Railway Bookstalls and all Booksellers.
Paris and New York: BRENTANO'S.

JUST PUBLISHED.

FINAL BOOK
OF THE BREARE VOCAL SERIES
No. 5,
"VOCAL ANALYSES:
SENSITISING BREATH—
EMOTIONAL EVOLUTION."
Price 5*s.*, by Post, 5*s.* 4½*d.*

Previous Books of the Series—No. 1, "Vocalism: Its Structure and Culture, from an English Standpoint." No. 2, "Elocution: Its First Principles." No. 3, "Vocal Faults and their Remedies." No. 4, "Vocal Technique: How it Feels to Sing."

Books No. 1 to No. 4, price 3*s.* 6*d.* each, till pre-war editions exhausted.

By W. H. BREARE, J.P., M.I.J., Vocal Adviser.
Address: HERALD BUILDINGS, HARROGATE, ENGLAND.
Publishers
London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & Co.
Harrogate: R. ACKRILL, Ltd.

JAMES LYON, MUS. DOC.

ELEMENTS OF HARMONY
3*s.* 6*d.*

Answers to Questions and Exercises on the Elements of Harmony.
2*s.* 6*d.*

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

BACH'S
CANTATA TEXTS

SACRED AND SECULAR

With a Reconstruction of the Leipzig Liturgy of his Period.

BY
C. SANFORD TERRY,
Litt.D.; Hon. Mus.D., LL.D., &c.

63*s.* net.

The Times:—"Professor Sanford Terry increases the debt which Bach lovers owe to his scholarship. . . . He has translated all the Cantatas into English which can be sung to the music without the alteration of a single note. His texts are here published. That in itself is an epoch-making achievement. . . . . A book for which scholars and practical musicians alike have cause to be grateful."

Prospectus on application.

10, ORANGE STREET,
LONDON, W.C.2.

CONSTABLE

THE SUPERB

BECHSTEIN
PIANOS

You can examine a magnificent selection of Bechstein Pianos—new and second-hand—at 126, NEW BOND ST., W.1.

Can be purchased by instalments, no deposit required.

Old Pianos taken in exchange, highest value allowed.

Call or write for Catalogue.

The Autoplayer Co., Ltd.,
BECHSTEIN PIANO SPECIALISTS.
Mayfair 2653.

STEINWAY STUDIOS

COMFORTABLY FURNISHED
ELECTRIC LIGHT
CENTRAL HEATING
TELEPHONE LIFT
NEW STEINWAY PIANOS

Full particulars from
STEINWAY & SONS
THE NEW STEINWAY HALL,
1 & 2, GEORGE ST., CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.1.
'PHONE: MAYFAIR 6641-5.

PIANOS

BECHSTEIN, BORD,
SCHIEDMAYER, ROGERS

NEW AND SECOND-HAND
CASH OR HIRE PURCHASE

Pianos taken in exchange.

Apply for lists:
CHAS. STILES & CO.
74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.
'Phone: MUSEUM 0439.

CRAMER STUDIOS

from

3 GNS.

per term

RECENTLY RENOVATED

NEW CRAMER PIANOS

139 NEW BOND STREET

LONDON W1

RELIEVES COLDS

PREVENTS "FLU"

VAPEX

(REG TRADE MARK)

INHALANT

SUMMER COLDS

A COLD in the summer time is intensely disagreeable, and the prevalence of dust renders a cure difficult—unless "Vapex" is used. "Vapex" soothes, cleanses, and protects the inflamed mucous membrane of nose and throat. Put a drop on your handkerchief and inhale from it occasionally.

All Chemists, 2s. and 3s.

SOLE MAKERS:

THOMAS KERFOOT & CO., LTD.,

BARDSLEY VALE, LANCS.

"Ten Poetic Fancies," for Piano.

HORACE F. WATLING, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.,

Professor at the Royal Normal College for the Blind.

BOOK I.—An Evening Landscape—The Firefly—A Lament—Rustic Revel—Harlequinade.

BOOK II.—Danse Caracteristique—Nursery Tales—A Castle in Ruins—An Interrupted Romance—Danse Humoresque.

A Set of Romantic Studies in modern Pianoforte Playing, from "moderate" to "fairly difficult."

Each Book, 3*s.* net.

"Moods of a Mind," for Piano.

H. V. SPANNER, Mus.Bac., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.

BOOK I.—Repose—Merriment.

BOOK II.—Sadness—Gladness.

Four brilliantly-written Studies, founded upon a single theme, elucidating four widely-contrasted styles of Pianoforte treatment. (Mod. Diff.).

Each Book, 2*s.* net.

PUBLISHED IN THE

NATIONAL INSTITUTE EDITION

OF THE WORKS OF

BRITISH BLIND COMPOSERS.

BY

RYALLS & JONES, LTD.,

107, GRANGE ROAD, BIRKENHEAD.

Can be ordered through any Music Seller.

JUST PUBLISHED.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS.

BOOK 274.

FOLK-SONGS

FOR SCHOOLS.

COLLECTED AND ARRANGED BY

CECIL J. SHARP.

SET IX.

No.
1407	BLACKBIRDS AND THRUSHES
1408	DABBLING IN THE DEW
1409	THE BONNY LIGHTER-BOY
1410	THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON
1411	THE TREE IN THE WOOD
1412	THE BOLD FISHERMAN
1413	MY BOY WILLIE
1414	SCARBOROUGH FAIR
1415	SEARCHING FOR LAMBS

Price Twopence each number.

Price One Shilling.

Voice Parts only, 4*d.*

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

JUST PUBLISHED.

AN ABRIDGED CONCERT EDITION OF

SEMELE

A SECULAR ORATORIO

FOR FOUR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

BY

G. F. HANDEL

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE

The time of performance of this edition is about two hours, and the orchestral parts have been so cued that it may be performed with accompaniment of: (1) Strings only; (2) Strings and Pianoforte; (3) Strings, or Strings and Pianoforte, with the addition of any Wind up to the complete Score of 2 Oboes, 2 Bassoons, 2 Horns, 2 Trumpets, Drums.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

IN THE PRESS.

AN ABRIDGED

CONCERT EDITION

OF

CARMEN

AN OPERA

NEW TRANSLATION BY

LUCIA YOUNG.

MUSIC BY

GEORGES BIZET.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

IN THE PRESS.

AN ABRIDGED

CONCERT EDITION

OF

KING ARTHUR

AN OPERA

LIBRETTO BY JOHN DRYDEN.

MUSIC BY

HENRY PURCELL.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOW READY.

THE ENGLISH PSALTER

CONTAINING

THE PSALMS OF DAVID

TOGETHER WITH

THE CANTICLES

AND

PROPER PSALMS FOR CERTAIN DAYS

EDITED AND POINTED FOR CHANTING

UPON THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURAL SPEECH-RHYTHM

BY

CHARLES MACPHERSON, Mus. Doc.
(ORGANIST OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL).

EDWARD C. BAIRSTOW, Mus. Doc.
(ORGANIST OF YORK MINSTER).

PERCY C. BUCK, M.A., Mus. Doc.
(DIRECTOR OF MUSIC IN HARROW SCHOOL).

PRICES:

Demy 8vo size ... Four Shillings net.
Imperial 32mo ... One Shilling and Sixpence net.

THE CANTICLES ONLY

Demy 8vo size ... ... Sixpence net.

LONDON NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1.

President:
THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O., C.B.E.
Chairman of Board and Director of Studies:
Professor J. C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus. D., F.S.A.
Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus. D.

July 3rd. Last day of entry for the next Open Competition for Scholarships to be awarded for all orchestral instruments, Pianoforte Playing, and Singing. Also for a Competition for Musical Degree Candidates, open to British subjects only, men and women, who have passed or have been registered as exempted from the Matriculation Examination of the Universities of London and Durham.

July 8th and 9th, at 7.45 p.m. / July 10th, at 3 p.m. — Performances by the College Operatic Class at the New Scala Theatre, W., of Offenbach's "The Princess of Trebizonde."

July 15th, at 3 p.m. Chamber Music and Choir Concert at the Æolian Hall, New Bond Street, W.1.

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Dramatic and Operatic Elocution. The Lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student; pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

The ORCHESTRAL, CHORAL, the OPERATIC, and CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES are open to sufficiently competent persons who are not College Students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

There are between Forty and Fifty Scholarships tenable at the College and open to all British subjects up to certain age limits, and the Bambridge Pianoforte Scholarship, value £100 per annum; also Eighteen Scholarships which provide complete preparation for the Degree of Bachelor of Music.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned. C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

ELKIN & CO.'S

CHORAL SERIES

(General Editor: DR. JOHN BORLAND).

LATEST ISSUES

INCLUDE NEW

PART-SONGS and UNISON SONGS

BY

EDWARD ELGAR, CYRIL SCOTT,
EDWARD MACDOWELL,
GRANVILLE BANTOCK, ROGER QUILTER,
ETC., ETC.

Specimen copies will gladly be sent on approval.

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,
20, KINGLY STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.

BACH
ORGAN WORKS
(HOMEYER—ECKARDT.)

STEINGRABER EDITIONS, 64, 65, 66.

Vol. 1.	Containing	3/0
Vol. 2.	Complete	3/0
Vol. 3.	Preludes and Fugues	3/0

STEINGRABER EDITIONS, 2172, 2173.

Vol. 4.	Containing Selections	2/6
Vol. 5.	of Choral Preludes	2/6

MENDELSSOHN
ORGAN WORKS
(HOMEYER.)
Containing Three Preludes and Fugues, and Six Sonatas.
STEINGRABER EDITION, 77. Price 2/6.

SCHUMANN
SIX FUGUES
ON THE NAME
B. A. C. H.
(Op. 60)
(HOMEYER).
STEINGRABER EDITION, 78. Price 1/6.

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.,
8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 102.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

THE INSTRUMENTS OF THE ORCHESTRA.

BY

JOHN E. BORLAND

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

JULY 1 1926

(FOR LIST OF CONTENTS SEE PAGE 655.)

SOME REFLECTIONS ON THE WORK OF SCRIABIN

BY ALEXANDER BRENT-SMITH

It is sometimes disconcerting to discover that truth is stranger than fiction. We feel sorry for the deaf old lady, to whom her grandson introduced his friend Spiffkins, and who, after three attempts to catch the name, gave it up, saying, 'It's no good, my dear; it sounds to me just like Spiffkins.' In fiction such experiences are only amusing incidents, but in real life they are tragic blunders. If, for instance, in reference to a philosopher's work, someone said, 'What a crazy fellow he is; he'll try to prove next that the moon is made of cheese,' it would be undeniably disconcerting to discover after the philosopher's death, a heap of papers in his study proving with muddle-headed clearness that not only was the moon made of cheese but of cheap Gorgonzola cheese—the mountains in the moon being explained as the green markings which characterize that detestable form of sustenance. This discovery would rather shake, if not destroy, our faith in the philosopher's sanity.

Many musicians had such an experience in connection with the music of Scriabin. When his 'Prometheus,' with its colour programme, got noised abroad, many waggish spirits facetiously proposed an extension of the colour-and-music idea into a colour-and-odour-and-music scheme. Details of the method by which various suitable odours were to be blown into the audience were discussed with apparent seriousness. Strident themes were to be accompanied by gusts of pepper; soft themes by Parma violets; passages, analogous to those marked by Scriabin 'Avec une douce ivresse' were to be accompanied by powerful breezes, heavy with the fumes of cigars and gin. The inconvenient possibility of the strident odour (Peprica rubra) acting as a lachrymatory gas during the music marked 'Dolce alla Parma' was ignored. Such inconvenient details only hamper the progress of true art.

Then this disconcerting piece of news was made public, that what had been suggested as an inconceivable piece of folly had actually been considered seriously by Scriabin. And it is this information which leads us to the conclusion that Scriabin's mind had latterly become, musically-speaking, unhinged, and that what is called by his admirers 'his beautiful logic' is really a symptom of mental confusion.

This so-called beautiful logic springs not from clear, but from clouded, reasoning. The well-balanced mind is frequently illogical, that is, it does not carry half-truths to their logical conclusions. For instance, a man with a well-balanced mind, in a fit of humility, in church describes himself as a worm and no man, but he goes home straightway and eats a very good dinner of roast beef and Yorkshire pudding. The man with an ill-balanced mind, also in a fit of humility, in church describes himself likewise as a worm and no man; then, letting the figure of speech grow into a statement of fact, he goes home and eats the dust, to his complete undoing and to the mortification of his friends.

It was owing to this illogical application of half-truths that Scriabin's muddled reasoning ran to its own destruction. Half-truths are always a danger to ill-balanced minds just because they are half-truths. The well-balanced mind sees exactly where the dividing line between truth and falsity lies. It is not difficult to distinguish the true and the false in the statement that a man was bronzed by the sun, copper-coloured by the moon, and freckled by the stars. Nor is it difficult to disentangle the true and false reasoning of an old lady (probably an old gentleman), who, seeing an aeroplane writing advertisements in the sky, exclaimed: 'Look, there's one of them wireless messages caught fire.' This muddle-headed reasoning is very good fun in farce, but it is rather dangerous when offered seriously. And it is because Scriabin offered muddle-headed reasoning seriously that the value of his later work is being suspected.

Metaphorically, we speak of colour in music. We say, perhaps, that D flat major is dark-brown, but our reason for saying so is that such music as the march from 'Rheingold' and the slow movement from Beethoven's Sonata in F minor (Op. 57) have formed in our minds a connection between D flat major and darkness. If the same music were played in C major it would sound just as dark. Similarly we think of G major as being light green because various fresh and spontaneous tunes we know are in that key. They would seem to be exactly the same colour if transposed into A flat major or G flat major. It is primarily a question of association. A few people aver that they see colours when certain common chords are played. Thus they see red when B flat is played, but if 'God Save the King' were played in B major would not a few people still see red?

Now Scriabin, accepting a half-truth as a whole truth, built his 'Prometheus' on the assumption that music has definite colours, as though a novelist, to prove he had a sense of architecture, should write his chapters in the form of Norman arches, just as the mouse in 'Alice-in-Wonderland' told its history in the pictorial appearance of a tail.

That Scriabin's reasoning was illogical was, in the question of colour, but of little moment, because it affected only one work, the 'Prometheus,' but it was of grave importance when he applied himself to the question of harmony and its possible expansion, because it reduced all his later works to meaningless ravings, which we might describe as Cacœthes Scriabindi.

It is true that the language of music, like all other languages, is from time to time enriched by the addition of new sounds, but these new sounds, when they do occur, are born naturally, not of deliberation. When a language is enriched it is because men have new thoughts to express. When mechanical flying became possible it gave rise to a number of new words such as 'aeroplane' and 'aviation,' and overworked the word 'stunt.' Motoring has given us the ugly word 'speedometer.' All games have brought with them a vocabulary of their own, single words which express thoughts which otherwise could be expressed only in a lengthy sentence. Modern cricket has given us 'googly'; golf has given us 'stymie'; moving pictures have given us 'cinema,' 'movie,' 'picture-drome,' and many others. But in every instance the thought requiring expression was clamouring for verbal existence long before it passed into common currency.

Deliberately to invent words is not the same as enriching the language. Sounds, apart from the idea they convey to the listener, are meaningless. Berlioz invented a language for the Infernal Spirits in the last scene of 'Faust' full of strange and uncouth sounds; but I doubt if even the timidest old lady would feel anything but amusement if a cabdriver, quoting this music, said, 'Has! has! Irimiru karabrão,' whereas I think it possible that the stoutest heart might feel a thrill of horror if the cabman let loose a torrent of obscene and horrible words. In parenthesis I should add that it is permissible deliberately to invent new words provided that their meaning is obvious. Thus Edward Lear, wishing to state exactly the degree of irritability in a friend's character, speaks of him as 'the Borascible person of Bangor.' Again, he tells us of an old gentleman of Ware who rode on the back of a bear. His friends naturally asked, 'Does it trot?' to which he gave a very satisfactory answer: 'It does not; it's a Moppsikon Floppsikon bear.' Not being a naturalist, I cannot say exactly what a Moppsikon Floppsikon bear is, but I can quite understand that it is a flabby, spiritless beast, not given to trotting.

In music, though we cannot always definitely state what were the emotions which demanded adequate harmonic expression, yet we can see that music has been enriched from time to time by fresh harmonic arrangements as the occasion demanded. Wagner's additions to the resources of harmony were accidental, not deliberate; that is, he found that the existing powers of harmony had to be increased and extended to express certain situations arising in his dramas. To express the idea of the Grail, the existing harmony was sufficient; to express the height of intense personal love of Tristan and Isolda, the existing harmony was insufficient, so his musical sensibilities twisted and wrenched the harmony until it expressed this emotion, an emotion hitherto excluded from, or, at least, not admitted into, the music of his predecessors.

Claude Debussy, having vague and shadowy thoughts to utter, found for them the correct harmonic expression. Then, unfortunately, he preferred to limit himself to his vocabulary of vagueness to the exclusion of everything else, and to the enervation of his own delicate talent.

So Richard Strauss, finding no harmony adequate to the expression of the frenzied culmination of Salome's erotic career, combined two opposing cadences which do suggest the agony of mind when reason breaks down under the strain of an all-mastering passion. But in every instance from Bach to Strauss, composers who have indulged their fancy for increasing the language of music have added their new inventions to the already existing vocabulary. Ben Jonson, in his 'Discoveries' has some wise words upon the dependence of the New upon the Old:

> The true artificer will not run away from nature as though he were afraid of her; or depart from life and the likeness of truth; but speak to the capacity of his hearers. And though his language differ from the vulgar somewhat, it shall not fly from all humanity, with the Tamerlanes and Tamerchans of the late age, which had nothing in them but the scenical stutterings and furious vociferation to warrant them to the ignorant gapers.

But Scriabin reasoned illogically that as composers have increased the language of music, he could do the same by an act of will, so he deliberately fixed upon a certain series of notes, which he treated as a foundation chord. And having fixed upon his foundation chord, he discarded all previous harmony—with the result that his music becomes at its worst a monotonous and meaningless noise, as senseless and unreal as those silly effusions of French poets, who tried to limit their utterances to one vowel sound:

> Les paons nonchalants, les paons blancs ont fui, les paons blancs ont fui l'ennui du réveil; je vois les paons blancs . . . . attendre indolents l'étang sans soleil.

Rightly to appreciate the falsity of Scriabin's harmonic theory, it is perhaps necessary to show by analogy how sense depends upon variety of harmony.

In the infancy of a child, the only words he uses are nouns, his conversation being limited to simple names—mamma, gee-gee, accompanied by explanatory and indicative gestures. So in the infancy of music, composers used common chords and common chords only. As the child grows he begins to use verbs to connect and to give active existence to his isolated nouns. So also composers began to use discords to give motion and life to their heavy sequence of common chords. As the child grows to maturity his speech becomes more involved; verbs are used as nouns. He finds it possible to frame such a sentence as 'To sing is pleasant.' (Have we not here Monteverde using an unprepared discord?) Later he expands this verbal noun, and frames such a sentence as 'To sing divinely and to the great delight of many is profitable.' So also music grew in complexity and elasticity, until composers felt free to use any discord without preparation or explanation—but still the truly wise have never forgotten that discords are discords and not common chords.

A study of the growth of civilisation shows us that in the infancy of every nation nouns and only nouns existed. Adam Smith suggests that adjectives were originally nouns; that is, in the words of Carlyle:

> Some very green thing, chiefly notable for its greenness, got the appellative name green, and then the next thing remarkable for that quality—a tree, for instance—was named a green tree.

Do we not even now coin adjectives from our admiration of individuals? Thus, at tennis, if our partner does an occasional brilliant shot, we describe it as a Tilden-shot. But however complicated language becomes, the fundamental structure of language remains unchanged.

Now, Scriabin's highly-involved harmonic foundations are, on this analogy, complicated Meredithian figures of speech, highly commendable as figures of speech, but, without the complete language and grammar of simple chords and discords, practically motionless and meaningless. Works constructed upon one such chord convey no intelligible message to the listener, because each harmony is the same as his neighbour, slightly disarranged, as though a poet wrote a complete poem upon the word Transcendental (a very good word in its way) by repeating it in every possible disarrangement of syllable and letter.

His admirers seem to consider that he showed some remarkable originality in thus discarding common chords for his own self-chosen uncommon chords; but others not so short-sighted are not so enthusiastic, knowing well that to attract attention is easier than to deserve admiration. To discard common chords because they are common is as senseless and suicidal as to refuse to eat bread because it is the common staff of life. In his illogical mind, Scriabin apparently thought that common chords were merely a conventional collection of notes, associated by man as a concord or point of repose, and that any man of his originality might equally well choose another series of notes to serve instead of those now antiquated common chords. But he ignored the fact that a common chord has a natural, not a human origin, and that nothing will take its place. It is a fundamental law of nature, just as it is a fundamental law of nature that every man should have a mother. And because this woman and not that woman is our mother, so by another inexorable law of nature her sister, and not that woman's sister, must be our aunt, whether we like it or not. We may call our aunt by some other name (many of us do, much to the aunt's annoyance), but nothing can alter that relationship. So a composer may hate and despise common chords, but they will always be there. One cannot escape them. They burst from the beak of every blackbird; they lie hidden in the stalks of every dandelion; they emerge from the bell of a trumpet or a horn, at the bidding of every novice. We may be sure that when the Israelitish trumpeters were practising their tattoos in some secluded valley outside the camp, they must have blown thousands of common chords, though they knew them not as such.

Common chords, then, are eternally present in music, though even so there is no reason why a composer should not prefer to use other chords if they express his ideas better—only, it is inevitable that if he confine himself to the more remote of the natural harmonic series, his speech will be more turgid and ponderous. In many of Scriabin's later pieces, written upon one or perhaps two foundation chords, he attains a monotony beyond the capacity of the most untalented mediocrity. The untalented mediocrities do at least say something, trite perhaps, but at least intelligible, but Scriabin repeats some unintelligible half-sentence (cf. 'Flammes Sombres') such as 'Death to Major Brown,' until we mentally substitute another name for the bewildered hero of the 'Club of Queer Trades.' Again, with a limited vocabulary it is impossible to say anything that is really heart-felt, because to utter a deep and significant musical phrase it is necessary that the composer should be able to dream in his musical language. We do nothing well until we do it unconsciously. The motorist who has to think what to do is not the man to trust as your driver. The tennis player who has to think how his feet should be placed when he makes his forehand drives, is not the man to choose as partner for Wimbledon or Forest Hill. If a poet were to invent a new language at ten o'clock in the morning, he would not write much that was worth reading at eleven o'clock. If he were to invent a new language at the age of twenty, he would still find it difficult to express himself in that language at the age of thirty, and I very much expect that he would have to think in his native tongue and translate his thoughts into the language of his adoption. For this reason Scriabin was deliberately destroying his natural mode of expression. Doubtless he did write some splendid phrases in his new harmonic languages, such as the opening theme of 'Prometheus,' and the first theme (only two bars, it is true) of the tenth Sonata, but these are merely the accidents of circumstance which show that in spite of his harmonic limitations his musical sensibilities were craving for natural expression. Both these themes, from 'Prometheus' and the tenth Sonata, have a spontaneity which Scriabin could not destroy even when he had half strangled them with his mystic chords.

Another result of a predetermined harmonic scheme is that the music is deprived of the joy of motion. It is true that Scriabin generally ends his later sonatas and symphonies with what is called by an admiring biographer 'a characteristic Scriabinic dance of cosmic atoms,' but atoms, in spite of their incessant gyrations, are I believe, practically motionless. So is a great deal of Scriabin's music.

(To be continued).

C NATURAL AND B SHARP

By Harry Farjeon

Among the problems of which few musicians can off-hand give the solution is the following: Which is the higher, C, or B sharp?

After a moment's thought, many will commit themselves one way or the other, but probably without definite reason; they will own to a feeling in the matter, but be unable to give it scientific backing. And this is perfectly natural, and only to be expected; for the answer to the conundrum is 'Neither,' or, if you prefer it, 'Both.' A meaningless sort of result to arrive at; but then, so is the problem itself, as stated, meaningless. C is not C, or B sharp B sharp absolutely: of themselves: off their own bat. Each is only itself (or the other) relatively to something else; and that something else demands definition before we can tackle the problem from any sensible standpoint. A vocalist in a vacuum (by which I mean, unsupported by musical surroundings having a tonality) may be able to sing middle C. That middle C will, equally rightly, be middle B sharp; there is no room in the vacuum for the difference between these two things unless there is also room for a third thing to measure them by.

We will start by selecting a sound and by calling it C. Remember, it is not C until we choose so to call it. What it is, is a certain rate of vibration; and we, arbitrarily, choose that that rate shall be called C. Now then, in relation to that sound, which is the higher, the C an octave above, or the B sharp about an octave above? This becomes a problem possible to tackle, and yet one the solution of which has still to be presented in those terms which we have already found so unsatisfactory: 'Neither,' or, if you prefer it, 'Both.'

What is B sharp in relation to C? We know what is the relationship of C, an octave above: it is twice the number of vibrations. But what is B sharp? How do we arrive at it? Are its vibrations more or less than those of that octave C? The difficulty of direct reply lies in this: that there are several B sharps. You can get one or another in various ways—can raise yourself to it on stilts or crutches, whereas for the one and only octave C you just stretch the uplifted hand.

Let me make this plain. In acoustics, for the purposes of calculation, the octave is divided into particles called 'cents.' There are 1,200 cents to an octave, which are grouped as 100 cents (hence the name) to each pianoforte semitone.

It must be remembered that the pianoforte tuning is not true, and then it will be seen that we can measure the difference between a true interval (i.e., one according to the harmonic series) and a pianoforte interval by means of this centage system, which thus will clearly show how far the equal temperament pianoforte is actually out of tune. A pianoforte major third, for instance, comprises four semitones, which are 400 cents; while the major third produced by harmonics is considerably flatter, containing only 386 cents.

This major third forms the stepping-stone to our first B sharp. Take three in succession: C to E, E to G sharp, G sharp to B sharp. Harmonic C to E is flatter than pianoforte C to E; the same principle applies to the remaining thirds, and consequently when we reach B sharp we have not reached C. B sharp, arrived at by major thirds, is flatter than octave C. Each such third has 386 cents, and $386 \times 3 = 1{,}158$, instead of the 1,200 required for a full octave. It may be as well here to impress the fact that the pianoforte octave is the same as the harmonic octave; being, indeed, the only pianoforte interval that is in tune. It contains 1,200 cents in both systems.

So much for the crutches; now for the stilts. We will go up by perfect fifths, and of these we will need twelve before we reach B sharp. C to G, to D, to A, E, B, F sharp, C sharp, G sharp, D sharp, A sharp, E sharp, and so to B sharp. This B sharp is of course not one octave above the starting point: it is seven octaves above. Therefore, to get the B sharp we require, we must divide by seven the number of cents attained by the high note. Each perfect fifth (harmonic) contains 702 cents. $702 \times 12 = 8{,}424$, and $8{,}424 \div 7 = 1203$ and three-sevenths. Thus, the B sharp obtained by perfect fifths is three and three-sevenths cents higher than octave C, instead of forty-two cents lower, as was the B sharp obtained by major thirds. That is why, in pianoforte tuning, each fifth is slightly flattened (from 702 to 700 cents), thus ensuring that twelve fifths will make seven octaves, instead of slightly more, as they aspire to do.

These two instances suffice to show that there are two B sharps, one lower and one higher than C. They are by far the best examples of the many that are possible, as they are based on the most prominent intervals of the harmonic series; the perfect fifth and major third being, after the octave, the first to arise. But it may be of interest to extend the catalogue and to include in it more exotic blooms: B sharps weird and fantastic, such as we might be unmercifully expected to appreciate were our music reared, as it is not, on inflexible principles of accurate pitch.

By augmented fourths: C to F sharp, F sharp to B sharp. This interval has 590 cents. $590 \times 2 = 1{,}180$. Twenty cents flat.

Down by minor thirds (316 cents): C to A, F sharp, D sharp, B sharp. $316 \times 4 = 1264$.

Down by diminished fifths (610 cents): C to F sharp, F sharp to B sharp. $610 \times 2 = 1220$.

Down by twelve perfect fourths (498 cents), reaching a B sharp five octaves below the starting point. (This result must therefore be divided by five.) $498 \times 12 = 5{,}976 \div 5 = 1{,}195$ and one-fifth.

This bewildering variety arises, let me repeat, because our letter system of notation, being framed for convenience, does not take account of all the possibilities. These different notes, all to be lumped together as B sharp, can only be adequately described by their vibration numbers. The principle of giving twelve semitones seven names is not scientifically sound, and thus it fails to fit in with such scientific subtleties as those here described. We have 'extracted' from the note C not only its perfect octave of 1,200 cents, but its almost octaves of 1,158, 1,203 and three-sevenths, 1,180, 1,264, 1,220, and 1,195 and one-fifth cents; all of which have to be called by the same letter-name. A notation system which took account of these divergencies would be too cumbrous. Yet the divergencies do actually exist, and are not a matter of theory merely. After so many dry figures, let me supply an instance of actual fact.

In a recent rehearsal of one of my own compositions the string orchestra found it almost impossible to play in tune a simple chord of A major. This triad appeared unexpectedly as the result of an unusual modulation from G sharp minor, and for the violas it was exceedingly difficult to give their C sharp its due relation to the rest of the chord. The subtle fluctuations of pitch which strings and good vocalists will make when the context is understood were not immediately, in this unrealized passage, at their command, and it 'did not do' simply to play C sharp as one would on the pianoforte. Artists in pitch don't work like that.

But the pianoforte, that universal leveller, the socialist among instruments, need not be too far blamed. It is just as well, perhaps, that these six B sharps are not allowed each its advantage or its disadvantage over the other. Admitted that we are beginning to need them—the post-socialist age is at hand and individuality waxes rampant. Yet the day of classification, with all its rough and ready conveniences, is not quite over, and till it be, let us consent to take these six B sharps and to call them C. It certainly will save a lot of trouble.

PERSONALITIES AMONG MUSICAL CRITICS

VI.—ROBIN LEGGE

By Basil Maine

There are some who imagine that musical criticism is the easiest thing in the world, especially when it is anonymous; and not only easy, they think, but glorious fun. How thrilling to go to a concert and be moved to tears (of joy or anguish), and then take a 'bus-ride to Fleet Street, and in a snug quiet little office to write and write and write with a pen that moves over the cream-laid paper as smoothly and swiftly as a quoit hurled upon a frozen lake, until your feelings are vented quite! On a time I was under the spell of this illusion, and its influence led me to seek the sanctuary of Mr. Robin Legge. I was filled with awe at the thought of meeting this man of renown, for all that I had an appointment and an introduction. I remember my first impression distinctly. His office was not an Æolian Hall studio in those days, but a small projection at the back of a building in Piccadilly, with a sloping glass roof which leaked whenever opportunity served. As I entered, Mr. Legge was answering a telephone-call. I don't know what freak of memory enables me to recall his very words, save that my mind at that moment was dangerously susceptible to fearful impression. He answered in this wise:

> 'What do you want? Yes, talking. Oh, breaking up fast. Who wants to see me? Oh, that pip-squeak. Send him round one morning; not Friday, that's the day I make up my music page. No, no! I didn't say 'fuming rage'—music page! One of the sacred institutions of the country, my boy, and don't forget it. Good-bye.'

Then, turning to me, he added:

> 'I get calls like that all day long. People must think that this office is a kind of Vatican. It isn't. I tell you they get more curses than blessings from me.'

I prepared to apologise for my intrusion, when an unaccountable thing happened. Either from apprehension, or mental incoherency, I began to stammer. Never in my life before or since have I been thus confounded. I was still struggling with my temporary impediment, when the telephone bell rang again, and checked my confusion.

Since that morning in the autumn of 1921, my fond illusion as to the delights of musical criticism has been gradually dispelled. I find it increasingly difficult to be moved to tears at a concert; there is no snug, quiet little office, but instead a messenger-office with clanging bells, and noisy boys with raucous voices; the pens are like pins, and the paper is inlaid with horse-hair. As for 'giving vent,' that habit is rapidly cured by that omnipotent and unassailable being, called Sub-Editor, who has an uncanny gift for singling out your most cherished sentence; since this never fails to offend him, he relentlessly plucks it out, making the rest of the criticism void and of no effect. But after a while, disappointment grew stale through custom, and I was content to bow the knee in the house of Rimmon, in the realization that Journalism is as necessary to Music as Music is to Journalism.

Nobody represents this fact more clearly than Robin Legge. He stands at that point where criticism and journalism merge, and is in the unique position of being able to direct both elements. He is one of the few people who can hand on unbroken the tradition of the elders; yet in so far as contemporary events and tendencies are concerned he is as alert and knowing as the youngest of us. He belongs to a generation which was in direct contact with those who made journalistic musical criticism possible. Joseph Bennett was his immediate predecessor on the Daily Telegraph, and in his youth he was closely associated with Fuller-Maitland and J. W. Davison. That is to say, that his early work was carried on at a time when journalism was seeking to acquire a dignity through the proper recognition and appreciation of the arts as being factors of the greatest importance in daily life, and his natural aptitude for the gathering of news and his sure instinct for being in the right place at the right and psychological moment brought him quickly before the editorial eye. And not only these things, but his prodigious memory too helped him to a place on the sunny side of Fleet Street. What a memory! Is there anything that he has ever forgotten? I have heard some of his more lengthy stories many times over, but never have I found the slightest variation at any point. It is a gift greatly to be envied.

The reason is that he is careful always to give an exact and literal account of things as they really were Vividly he re-creates every detail of Sir (then Mr.) John Le Sage's voice and expression at his first interview with that wise editor, or again, the clothes and very attitude of Leonard Borwick when he went for his morning bicycle ride, or again, his strange and dramatic adventure when General Sir Arthur Ellis died at a Covent Garden gala night.

There is no unruly attempt to adorn these incidents with imaginative arabesques. 'Thus and thus it was'; and so it always is.

It is possible without exaggeration to liken Robin Legge's office to the hub of the musical world. He is visited there by all sorts and conditions—performers, composers, critics, agents, teachers, people with new ideas, and people with old grievances. They all realise that an hour in his courts is better than a thousand—that more things are wrought by tactful address to him than the outside world dreams of. It is not merely that these people realise that Robin Legge is in a position from which he can review all the intricacy of musical organization at a glance, and can foretell—and sometimes create—the opportune moment for a proposed venture; nor do they come merely because of that vague quality called 'influence,' with which certain people are mysteriously endowed. Of course, we assume too much of the guileless fool in the professional musician if we say that his motive for seeking an interview with 'Father Robin' is entirely self-less and philanthropic. But the frequency of these interviews (so frequent that I would suggest 'ODTAA' for a superscription on his office-door), also argues that by common consent a certain power has been vested in him. That power is not altogether to be accounted for by the seal of office which he holds. It is there chiefly by reason of the goodwill, trust, and affection which musicians cherish for a man who, during many years, has striven for an amicable relationship between journalism and musical activity. Of this relationship we younger men are reaping the benefits day by day, and for my part I readily and thankfully pay tribute here and now.

MY RECOLLECTIONS OF BRAHMS

By Mrs. Carl Derenburg
(Ilona Eibenschütz)

When I was thirteen years old, I came from Vienna—my home—to Frankfurt to study with Clara Schumann. A few months after my arrival I met Brahms for the first time, in Frau Schumann's house. He was staying with her, and played in the Museum Kammermusik Abend his C minor Trio, Op. 101 (first performance), with Hugo Heermann and Hugo Becker. My enthusiasm was great, and when Frau Schumann introduced me to Brahms with a few warm words, I thought that nobody in the world could be happier than I. Never can I forget this performance, and the Trio remains my favourite for life.

Frau Schumann gave a small party at that time, and played with Brahms, à quatre mains, his Variations on a theme by Schumann, Op. 23. Brahms came every year to Frankfurt, and played some new works of his for the first time at the Museum. The D minor Violin Sonata made a tremendous impression upon me; no wonder I became an ardent Brahmsian when I was fifteen years old! I knew all his pianoforte compositions, of course, and was familiar also with his symphonies, songs, and the 'Requiem.' His music was clear to me; I was (so to speak) brought up with it.

In 1891 I started my career at Vienna with two recitals. A few months before, Frau Schumann gave a musical party at her house, with the following programme:

Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 111	...	Ilona Eibenschütz
Song		Julius Stockhausen
Schumann's Carnival		Clara Schumann

Brahms was the president of the Vienna Tonkünstlerverein; nearly all the members were professional musicians. Every month they arranged a musical evening, and a great many foreign artists who came to Vienna played there. After my recitals, I was asked to play one evening, as was also the famous 'cellist from Dresden, Grützmacher. It was not an easy matter playing to an audience that consisted of all the best musicians of Vienna, and—Brahms.

I had already played the Etudes Symphoniques by Schumann, and a few smaller pieces by Brahms and Scarlatti, when Prof. Anton Door, the vice-president of the Tonkünstlerverein, came with a letter to tell the audience that Herr Grützmacher had sent word at the last minute that he was unable to play. Brahms came up to me, and said: 'Na, da spielen Sie doch mal die Op. 111 von Beethoven.' (Now, you get up and play the Op. 111 of Beethoven.)

I did so, and I believe that henceforward Brahms was my friend. At supper, after the concert, I had to sit next to him. He wished to know all my plans, and what Frau Schumann wanted me to do. I told him she had arranged with Mr. Arthur Chappell to engage me for two Monday Popular Concerts in London, and that I was just going to London for the first time.

In June, after my return from England, I was with my family at Ischl. We were there every summer for about three months. I loved Ischl. It is a most enchanting place. At that time it was very quiet, the real season beginning only in July, when the Emperor Franz Joseph was there. Brahms came to Ischl already in May. He preferred it to Switzerland or the Tyrol; in fact, nowhere else was he so happy. I had been at Ischl a few days, when one afternoon Brahms paid me a visit. It was a great moment for me, and I felt very happy. I had to tell him all about London; everything interested him.

On March 2, 1891, his G major String Quintet was performed for the first time by Joachim, Piatti, Ries, Strauss, and Gibson, at a Monday 'Pop.' At the same concert I played the B flat Trio, Op. 97, by Beethoven, with Joachim and Piatti, and I therefore heard the two last rehearsals of the Quintet. When I told Brahms how carefully Joachim rehearsed the Quintet, and what a splendid reception it met with, he was very pleased.

A few days later Brahms came to dinner with us (Mittagessen, one o'clock), and he soon made it his habit to come to us once nearly every week to dinner. He liked being with us because we made no fuss whatever with him, and never asked anybody to 'meet Brahms.' Even the Mittagessen was very simple. In the beginning he always came alone, but later he asked me if he could bring Prof. Gustav Wendt, an old friend of his from Karlsruhe, who came every summer to Ischl for some time to be with Brahms. There came also Prof. Kössler, from Budapest, whom he liked very much. He often brought other friends in the afternoons, amongst them Fritz Steinbach with his wife, Adolf Menzel, Stockhausen, &c.

Quite close to us Johann Strauss had a beautiful large villa, and we were often invited there. Brahms greatly admired Johann Strauss, who had a delightful personality. During a dinner party at Frau Strauss's, his step-daughter, Alice, asked Brahms for his autograph. He wrote a few bars of the famous 'Blue Danube' Waltz, by Johann Strauss, and under it:

'Leider nicht von Joh. Brahms.' ('Unfortunately not by Joh. Brahms.')

We had a tremendous lot of music at Ischl, though we 'travelling musicians' were supposed to be there for a rest. The Kneisel Quartet from America came to Ischl for the holidays (they were all Austrians), to be with their old teacher, Prof. Grün. There came also Arthur Nikisch with his family, Leschetitzky, Ed. Schütt, Gustav Mahler, and a great many musicians from all over the world.

When Alice Strauss became engaged, Frau Johann Strauss gave a party, and the Kneisel Quartet and I played Brahms's G minor Quartet. Nikisch turned over for me. We played in high spirits, with Brahms as listener, in a comfortable arm-chair with a big cigar.

Soon after this, Kneisel came to me one morning, to play the three Violin Sonatas by Brahms. We had fixed the day, and asked only Nikisch, Kössler, Wendt, and Prof. Grün, to come and listen. But I told Brahms he might come if he liked, and, to our great pleasure, he came. After the Sonatas I played his B minor Ballade, and Frau Nikisch sang, accompanied by her husband. Brahms loved music en petit comité, and often said to me: 'Why do you play in concerts and travel about from one town to another?' forgetting that I had to do so.

Mühlfeld (clarinettist) came to Ischl for one day to visit Brahms, and played Brahms's Clarinet Quintet with the Kneisel Quartet. This was the most wonderful performance I ever heard. It took place at Kneisel's house, the audience consisting of Brahms, Herr and Frau Steinbach, Herr and Frau Nikisch, and myself. Mühlfeld played marvellously on his clarinet, and when they finished playing this heavenly work, we were all so moved that nobody found a word to say. But Nikisch fell on his knee before Brahms, and that exactly expressed our feelings.

I was travelling a great deal, but had the good fortune to be at Vienna to hear Brahms play his two Clarinet Sonatas with Mühlfeld, at a small party, at Frau Anna Franz's (née Wittgenstein).

But there was still a greater unforgettable pleasure for me, when in the summer of 1892, one day after dinner, Brahms said: 'Oh! I want to play you—well, a few exercises—which I have just composed.' (Only Prof. Wendt and my sisters were present, but he would not allow them to enter the music-room, and they had to listen outside on the stairs.) He just tried the pianoforte, and then began to play—the G minor Ballade, Intermezzo Rhapsodie in E flat; in fact all the Clavierstücke, Op. 118 and 119! He played as if he were just improvising, with heart and soul, sometimes humming to himself, forgetting everything around him. His playing was altogether grand and noble, like his compositions. It was, of course, the most wonderful thing for me to hear these pieces, as nobody yet knew anything about them. I was the first to whom he played them.

When he finished playing I was very excited, and hardly knew what to say. I murmured only that 'I must write to Frau Schumann about them at once.' He looked at me, and said, 'But you did not like them.' 'How can you possibly say such a thing to me?' I asked; and he answered with a twinkle in his eye, 'You did not ask da capo for a single piece!' I had the presence of mind to say, 'I want them all da capo, but not to-day.' He laughed, and two days later played them all again to me.

A few months after, at a Monday Popular Concert, in London, I gave them their first public performance. Of course, I wrote to Frau Schumann about the Clavierstücke at once.

In a letter dated September 27, 1892, she wrote to Brahms, after a very sad misunderstanding:

So lass uns denn lieber Johannes freundlichere Töne wieder anstimmen, wozu Deine neuen schonen Clavierstücke von denen Ilona mir schrieb die beste Gelegenheit bieten wenn Du wolltest, Sei in alter herzlicher Weise gegrusst von Deiner Clara. (Litzmann, Band 3, Biography of Clara Schumann, page 560.)

[So let us, dear Johann, resume our friendship, for which your new Clavierstücke (about which Ilona has written to me) afford the best opportunity if you are willing. Receive greetings in the old affectionate way from your Clara.]

In June, 1896, Herr and Frau Max Kalbeck came from Attersee to Ischl, for a day, to pay Brahms a visit. They asked Brahms and me to dine with them at one o'clock at the Hotel Post. Brahms was in a very good humour, and made fun about Kalbeck's ordering rather a rich dinner, with asparagus, &c. But he would not partake of it with us, and took only his simple meal. When Kalbeck asked for the bill, Brahms had already paid it, and was delighted with his joke, and at Kalbeck's surprise.* After dinner Brahms and I accompanied them one station in the Salzburger Bahn, and walked back to Ischl. None of us dreamt that this was the last happy time we should be together. A few weeks later Brahms's tragic illness began. He looked very ill, but he would not give in. At last he was persuaded to see his doctor, who put him on a strict diet. The same day he was dining with us, and when he entered he said: 'My doctor has forbidden me to go out to dinner, but I told him I will imagine I went to you to-morrow so that I still can eat Gulyas at the Eibenschütz' to-day, which was expressly made for me.'

Gradually we had the terrible experience of seeing him getting worse and worse. He knew how ill he was, but refused to show that he was aware of it. He kept up the pretence right to the end.

* This little story is given more elaborately in the Brahms Biography, by Kalbeck, vol. 4, II., page 439.

Ad Libitum

By 'FESTE'

Some day, when I have lots of time and unlimited space, I am going to base one of these monthly meditations on the subject, 'Overdoing Things.' After some hesitation as to which of the many overdone things would serve best as a starting-point, I shall probably take the Sea Shanty, because that particular obsession has surely the slenderest of all musical bases. Let me hasten to say that I am as ready as anybody to enjoy the best of these songs. There are a few really good tunes among them, and it is well that they should be not only preserved but put in circulation. But it is high time somebody protested against two features of the shanty craze: (1) the perpetuation of some that would never be tolerated but for the magic label 'Shanty'; and (2) the over-sophistication of shanties in general. Sung unaccompanied by a robust man—what is known in America as a 'He-man,' in fact—with a lusty chorus of He-men, the pick of these racy songs are capital, both as a type of folk-music and as a fascinating survival of an era and a set of marine conditions that can never recur. On the other hand, there are few more absurd or afflicting musical experiences than the delivery of a shanty, ore rotundo, by a conventional concert singer, with a pianoforte accompaniment thick with luscious chords. The summit of absurdity was reached the other day when a famous contralto fatly boomed out 'Shenandoah.'

Having thus, greatly daring, started an anti-shanty crusade, I should go on to protest further against using such things (especially those with a text in Nigger broken English) as school songs. The only one that justifies itself for this purpose is 'Billy Boy'—first, because it has a delightful tune, and also because it is clearly a variant of a well-known folk-song, and has a text that a children's choir may enter into. But the school-singing practice and the school choir class at competitive festivals can be employed to far better advantage than in the delivery of such things as 'What shall we do with a drunken sailor?' or others in which the youngsters are called on to sing about 'a big black nigger wid de sea-boots on,' and so forth. When I write my article containing the above protest I shall of course be assailed as a highbrow, and as one lacking a sense of humour; but my withers will be unwrung.

Then I shall proceed to lodge a similar protest in regard to negro 'spirituals.' Again, let me assure the reader that I am not deaf to their beauty. On the contrary, a favourite volume in my pianoforte library is the set of 'Twenty-four Negro Melodies,' arranged by Coleridge-Taylor (one of his best works), which I bought and used constantly a good many years ago—long before the present 'spiritual' craze began. It is precisely because some of these songs are so naively beautiful and touching that I want to get up and throw things when they are sung in a concert-room (with an entirely inappropriate pianoforte accompaniment) to an audience largely composed of tittering he- and she-asses who think the songs are funny. Funny? Good heavens! Should we laugh if we heard them sung, as they were originally sung, by some simple old Uncle Tom or Aunt Dinah at a prayer meeting? We should be more likely to pipe our eye, though there might be just a suspicion of a smile as well—a smile of sympathy, not of superior amusement. But the songs are entirely out of place in a public hall. And, if we must have them harmonized, let the job be done by a real musician who understands the treatment of simple diatonic melody. Nine out of ten of the arrangements by Burleigh and others are sickeningly weak. The most cloying efforts of the despised Victorian hymn composer are almost rugged compared with a 'spiritual' by the time an American 'composer' of the baser type has done his worst with it. (But I should probably refrain from saying this in my article, out of consideration for the feelings of the American composer.)

No doubt (I should proceed to suggest) the shanty and 'spiritual' craze is an outcome of the folk-song cult. Both craze and cult alike lack discrimination. A series of notes so banal that no one would take them seriously if put forward as a new composition pass muster easily—even with honours—if they be taken down from some oldest inhabitant champing his toothless gums. I have long been as keen as most musicians on folk-song, but I have suffered so much in recent years from some overworked, dull specimens that my loyalty becomes strained at times. All honour to such collectors as Sharp; we want as complete a corpus as possible of these songs. But the selection for public use (especially as test-pieces in Competition Festivals) calls for a taste and judgment that are too often absent. Is it a folk-song from Somerset or the Hebrides? Very well; ipso facto, it must be a fine thing, so down it goes in the syllabus. (However, I shall probably not dare to say this. The mere word 'Hebrides' in this connection exerts a kind of spell over folk, and I have yet to meet a critic bold enough to say that quite a good proportion of the Hebridean songs are poor, and many of the most beautiful are spoilt by the pretentious and amateurish pianoforte accompaniments. Shall I be the first to say it? I hope I know my place better.)

My next step would probably be a recantation. A few years ago I was a convinced believer in the theory that a national school of music could be built up on folk-song. To-day finds me as sceptical on this point as Ernest Newman. This unhappy state of mind has been brought about by the apparent inability of our composers to evolve any thematic material off their own bat, so to speak. There is less open adoption of folk-tunes as thematic bases than there was a few years ago, but the 'original' themes that have taken their place are often little more than tags and clichés from the folk-tunes themselves, so that we are worse off rather than better. Is this building up a national school of composition? If so, it is surely the first that has been so built. It is true that Haydn and Beethoven (especially the former) made use of folk-tunes occasionally in their instrumental music, but can it be said that in their work as a whole there is more than an occasional hint of the idiom of folk-song? Where is the folk-idiom in Bach or Wagner, save here and there for purposes of local colour? This is not to deny the searching beauty of such things as Butterworth's 'Banks of Green Willow,' or the 'Shropshire Lad' Rhapsody; or of such models of choral writing as the Vaughan Williams and Holst arrangements of folk-songs. Nor can there be any question as to the existence of a national style in music. The point is whether we are to have a national style that grows slowly, naturally, and unconsciously, like folk-songs themselves, out of temperament, climate, scenery, and all the other forces, natural and artificial, that differentiate race from race; or whether it is to be a self-conscious affair, of a few years' growth, in which all the processes of manufacture can be seen—in fact, a national style 'while you wait.' The more I hear of contemporary English music, the surer I am that the bulk of the clever 'Let's be English,' or 'Elizabethan,' or, in fact, anything but our genuine selves, leads to work that will in a few years' time sound merely parochial beside that of the great composers of the past. The deliberate adoption of an antique idiom or a bucolic phraseology in literature would at once be recognised as an affectation. Is it anything else in music? And has any good ever come out of affectation? All this I shall, greatly daring, say in my article on 'Overdoing Things.'

Then (space and courage still holding out) I shall go on to complain of the Elizabethan fetish. No praise can be too high for the finest music of that glorious period, but there was dross mixed with the gold, dull music with the inspired, and your true blue Elizabethan enthusiast is still in the stage of being unable or unwilling to separate the one from the other. Now, even the best music of this kind is more interesting to sing than to hear—as is natural, seeing that, more perhaps than any other music, it was written almost solely with an eye to the performer. In fact, there were at that period no audiences, in the modern sense of the term. If this be so with the finest madrigals, how poor a show must the dull ones make with the average hearer of to-day! Moreover, the text, often obscure and artificial, makes little appeal to him. What's he to Oriana, or Oriana to him? I honestly believe that the decline in the number of choral entries in competition festivals (especially small ones, or those in remote areas) is largely due to an over-dose of madrigals (including some dull ones) as test-pieces. Too many choirs are being called on to study the technique of madrigal-singing before they have got very far with the elementary principles of choralism. Asked to run before they can walk, they naturally stumble, and are disheartened. I have heard during the past few years appalling hashes of Byrd and Weelkes made by village and small town choirs that would have put up a decent show, and given themselves and their hearers a lot of pleasure, with Stanford and Parry, or any other of the large body of modern English part-song writers. This branch of music is one in which England is peculiarly rich. Even some Victorians who were feeble as Church composers somehow managed to put their best foot foremost when writing part-songs. I should like to see a year or two given up to the study of the great mass of tuneful, well-written, and extremely vocal part-music that began roughly with Walmisley and Pearsall, and ended about twenty-five years ago. At present it is squeezed out by the Elizabethans on one side and the more fashionable of present-day composers on the other. Let a few struggling competitive festivals try the experiment, and leave madrigal-singing till their choral entries are once more at high-water mark, and their choirs' technique much further advanced than it is to-day. The present over-insistence on the Elizabethans is making more opponents than converts.

There is a similar danger of creating a reaction against Bach and Mozart. Happily, Bach's vast output contains a very large proportion of music attractive to the hearer, and negotiable by the average performer. The risk is therefore less than it is with Mozart, whose best work is in his chamber-music, operas, and a handful of orchestral works. The solo player of all kinds is richly catered for by Bach, but there is little of Mozart that he can get his teeth into. What pianist can pump up interest in more than a stray movement or two of those tinkling sonatas? No wonder he rubs his eyes when the out-and-out enthusiast tells him that Mozart never wrote a dull bar or a redundant note! So with Bach: in the cantatas we have a mine that must be explored, and that has already yielded up rich treasure. But there are cantatas that are perfunctory, either wholly or in part, as was inevitable in the circumstances that brought them into being; and already we see signs of the usual risk of an undiscriminating enthusiasm.

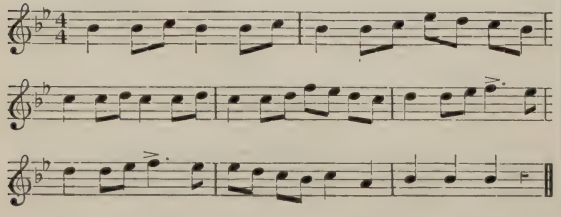
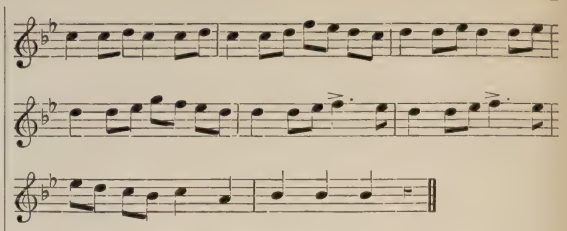
All the above, and even more, I shall want to say when I write that article. But I doubt if I shall screw up courage, for in regard to certain points, especially those where folk-song is concerned, the few friends I have managed to retain will call me renegade. So after all I may lie low, and wait for somebody else to give a lead in saying the unpalatable and unpopular.

My dips into the old Musical World have proved very much to the liking of readers, if I may judge from numerous letters received. Before long I may overhaul the volumes again. Meanwhile, I have to thank several correspondents for information concerning 'The Downfall of Paris,' the piece played outside public-houses on a tobacco-pipe by a wandering minstrel.

Dr. Grattan Flood writes to say that the piece is an English version of the French Revolutionary air, 'Ça ira,' of 1790. He adds that Dickens refers to it in 'Sketches by Boz,' where we read that Miss Terese Malderton performed one of the various popular pianoforte versions of it to the admiration of Mr. Horatio Sparkins. The identification of the 'Fall of Paris' with 'Ça ira' is borne out by the 'Grove' article on the latter.

Sir Alexander Mackenzie, however, in the course of an interesting letter, says that when he was a boy, studying in Germany, he was once set to practise Moscheles's four-handed variations on the 'Alexander March,' which was always known familiarly as 'The Downfall of Paris.' Concerning its origin he is doubtful, but he suggests that the tune may have been played on the occasion of the entry into Paris, on March 30, 1814, of the Emperor Alexander I., with the King of Prussia. Sir Alexander has dotted down the air, thus:





This differs materially from 'Ça ira' as given in Grove, practically the only similarity being in the opening figure of bar one.

The above will serve as an answer to Mr. A. H. Spencer, of Acton, who writes for information concerning the tune. He says it is mentioned in Robert Moir's 'Mansie Wauch' as the air played by 'twa blind fiddlers, the bonniest ye ever heer'd,' on the occasion of Mansie's first visit to a play. I take this opportunity of thanking Mr. Spencer for his kindly remarks concerning 'Ad Libitum' and the Musical Times generally.

NEW LIGHT ON LATE TUDOR COMPOSERS

By W. H. Grattan Flood

XVIII.—Giles Farnaby

Of the outstanding merits of Giles Farnaby, whether as a madrigalist or as a virginal composer, we have ample evidence. In fact, he contributed more than fifty pieces to the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book, some of which are excellent of their kind, including a 'Duet for Two Virginals.' Dr. van den Borren, in his 'Sources of Keyboard Music in England' (Novello, 1915), writes thus:

> Giles Farnaby forms a complete contrast to Bull. He is one of the most graceful musicians possible. He is also one of the most spontaneous, even in his audacities; and of these he has as many as Bull, whether in the realm of harmony or in that of melody, of an abundant and easy fancy like Schubert, whose qualities and defects he shares. He is so great a lover of melody, that when he adorns it with figurations it is often to create new melodies more delightful and more characteristic than the one that formed his starting-point. He is fanciful even to singularity. He is simple, sportive, popular, witty, mocking, even 'clownish.' He loves piquant detail, and at times carries it even to preciosity. He is the most original of all the virginalists, and at the same time the one who best represents the spirit of 'Merry England.' Like Byrd, he is profoundly English; but while the elder master embodies the dreamy side of the British character, Farnaby expresses rather the humorous side of it.

Of biographical data not many details are forthcoming, but it is almost certain that Farnaby was a Cornish Celt, and was probably born at Truro, as Wood states. His music has all the characteristics of a Celtic writer, and it seems as if he were brought up in Celtic surroundings. The date of his birth may tentatively be given as 1560, and he began to study music seriously in 1580. The next we hear of him is his living in London in 1586, and there is a record of his marriage at St. Helen's Church, Bishopsgate, to Katherine Roan on May 28, 1587.

Farnaby graduated Mus. Bac. at Oxford on July 7, 1592, 'having studied music for twelve years.' He contributed nine settings to Este's 'Psalter' of 1592, commencing with Psalm cxix. In the four-part settings of this Psalter, Este secured the services of ten composers:

> . . . being such [as he writes in his Preface] as I know to be expert in the Art and sufficient to answer such curious carping musicians, whose skill hath not been employed to the furthering of this work.

Briefly, sixteen of the settings are by John Farmer; twelve by George Kirby; ten by Richard Alison; nine by Giles Farnaby; seven by Edward Blancks; six by John Dowland; five by William Cobbold; four by Edmund Hooper; three by Edward Johnson; and one by Michael Cavendish. Four new tunes were included, viz., 'Glastonbury,' 'Kentish' (afterwards 'Rochester'), 'Cheshire,' and 'Winchester.' This volume was beautifully printed in octavo, and the voice parts—though separate—were all on one page. A second edition of it appeared in 1594, and a third in 1604.

A remarkable MS. work by Farnaby, unnoticed by Fétis or Eitner,* may be dated as from 1595, viz., a setting of the Psalms of David in four parts for voices and viols, of which the title-page is as follows:

> The Psalmes of David, to fower parts, for Viols and Voyce, the first booke Doricke Mottoes, the second, Divine Canzonets, Composed by Giles Farnaby, Bachelor of Musicke, with a Prelude, before the Psalmes, Cromaticke.

The British Museum has four of Farnaby's four-part compositions, and 'O my sonne Absolom,' for five voices, as well as the MS. setting for four voices of Psalm cxix.

We get a pleasing biographical glimpse of Farnaby in 1598, as in that year a son of his was baptised at the Church of St. Mary-le-Bow. In the same year was published a Madrigal collection (seventeen compositions) by Farnaby, entitled: 'Canzonets to Foure Voyces with a Song of eight parts,' with eulogistic verses prefixed by Antony Holborne, John Dowland, Richard Alison, and Hubert Holland. Of these printed compositions, 'Construe my meaning' is generally regarded as the finest and most original; in recent years it has been admirably edited by Mr. W. Barclay Squire. It may be well to note that this Madrigal collection was dedicated to 'Maister Ferdinando Heyburn, groom of her Majesties private chamber.' Other pieces of merit are: 'Some time she would, and some time not' (in which there is good tone-painting at the word 'Vulcan'), 'Phillida bewailed,' and 'Ay me! poor heart,' the last mentioned being subsequently transcribed for the virginal, and included in the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book.

As mentioned previously, however, it is as a composer for the virginals that Farnaby deserves inclusion in the present series. He introduces the chord of the dominant thirteenth in his delightful 'Rosasolis' Variations. His 'Meridian Almain' has frequently been quoted, but Dr. Ernest Walker considers that the little pieces called his 'Dreame,' his 'Rest,' and his 'Humour,' display

> . . . a quaint romanticism of style that is now and then curiously modern in outlook, and which sound like a forecast, in lace ruffles, of the 'Kinderscenen' of Schumann (the way in which the Ut, re, mi formula creeps into the third is quite in the style of the later composer's jests).

* This unique MS. was acquired by Francis Hopkinson, about the year 1760, and is now in the Philadelphia (U.S.A.) Library.

Of the four men who loom most largely in the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book, viz., Bull, Byrd, Gibbons, and Farnaby, the last-mentioned is the most romantic—anticipating another great Celt, John Field, of Dublin, the inventor of the Nocturne. Yet, as Dr. Ernest Walker remarks:

> . . . there is an enormous gap in distinctiveness of material and maturity of handling between them and the great choral work of the same period. . . . The interest of the one is in the main artistic, of the other in the main historical.

Some writers, relying on the fact that a tune by Farnaby is to be found in Barley's 'Whole Booke of Psalmes,' in 1608, imagine that the composer was alive at that date. Dr. Fellowes writes:

> . . . the absence of Farnaby's name from the contributors to the 'Triumphs of Oriana,' coupled with the fact that no second set of madrigals was published by him, suggests with great probability that his death had occurred before 1601.

It may be added that the inclusion of so many of Farnaby's compositions in the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book suggests an acquaintance between him and the compiler, Francis Tregian, of that remarkable MS., dating from c. 1613, both of them being Cornishmen.

MUSIC IN TOLSTOY'S LIFE

By his son, Count Sergius Tolstoy

Translated by Aylmer Maude

(Continued from June Number, page 518.)

From 1881 to 1901, Tolstoy spent almost every winter at Moscow. The crisis in his soul that reversed his whole previous outlook on life had already occurred. In 1897 he produced his book, 'What is Art?' answering questions which, as he himself wrote, had occupied him for fifteen years. In that work he considered art in general, and music in particular, from a religious point of view. In those years, despite the fact that his whole spiritual and mental activity was directed to religious questions, music continued to act directly on him as strongly as before. Only, perhaps, its action was somewhat modified. Music came to agitate and even to irritate him, rather than to rouse his tender emotions. In 'The Kreutzer Sonata,' Pozdnyshev says of music:

> In general, music is a dreadful thing. . . . They say music exalts the soul. Nonsense, it is not true! . . . It has neither an exalting nor a debasing effect, but it produces agitation.

And further on:

> Take that 'Kreutzer' Sonata. . . . To hear that first Presto played, to clap a little, and then to eat ices and talk of the latest scandal. Such things should only be played on certain important, significant occasions, and when certain actions answering to such music are wanted; play it, and then do what the music has moved you to. Otherwise an awakening of energy and feeling unsuited both to the time and the place, and to which no outlet is given, cannot but act harmfully.

I remember how, while he was writing 'The Kreutzer Sonata,' my father tried to elucidate to himself what feelings the first Presto of that Sonata expressed. He said that the introduction to the first part warns us of the importance of what is to follow; then the indefinite agitation expressed by the first theme, and the restrainedly tranquillising feeling expressed by the second theme, both lead to the powerful, clear, and even coarse melody of the concluding part, which simply expresses sensuality. Afterwards, however, my father rejected the idea that that melody expressed sensuality; for in his opinion music cannot express this or that emotion; it merely expresses emotion in general, but it is impossible to define what emotion in particular.

I do not know when my father first heard the 'Kreutzer' Sonata, but not long before he wrote the story, he had heard it imperfectly performed by myself with the violinist Lyasotta.

. . . . . .

In summer, non-professional music flourished at Yasnaya Polyana. My father's relation to such music was not merely tolerant; he sometimes even preferred amateur music to professional. In this regard he occasionally went to an extreme. I remember his once saying that he particularly liked to listen to those who sang or played the pianoforte, guitar, or balalayka, without having learnt their notes, because such people's hearing and memory was unquestionably well-developed, and because they certainly knew well, and loved, what they played or sang.

. . . . . .

However, I must add that our amateur music at Yasnaya Polyana was far from always affording him pleasure, especially as he could not resist listening to the sound of music even when it reached him through three closed doors. And this hindered his working, thinking, and writing. One remembers how in 'The Fruits of Enlightenment' he ridiculed rich and idle people who occupy themselves with music 'for the destruction of time':

> The young lady used to sit down to the pianoforte as soon as she opened her eyes, and off she'd go! [says the cook in that play]. And that other one who lives here, the teacher, stands and waits. 'When will the pianoforte be free?' When one has finished, off rattles the other, and sometimes they'd put two pianofortes near one another, and four of them would burst out at once.

In the last years of his life (1901-10) my father settled down definitely at Yasnaya Polyana. Music, as formerly, agitated and touched him, but irritated and tormented him less than in the years when 'The Kreutzer Sonata' was written. During this last period many musicians visited him at Yasnaya Polyana. Among others came the Czech Quartet, Sibor, Shor with his Trio, Vanda Landovska, Olenina d'Alheim, V. Filosofova, S. I. Tanéïèv, Arensky, and others; and every summer Prof. A. B. Goldenweizer, of the Moscow Conservatory, lived near Yasnaya Polyana, and frequently played for my father.

. . . . . .

The following are some conclusions I have arrived at as a result of my personal observation of the opinions my father expressed in his writing and conversation. First of all, he loved simple, clear melody, and was not afraid of hackneyed melodies. Harmony and elaboration he felt only in so far as they coloured the melodic canvas of the piece. He was rather indifferent to orchestral colouring, and even said that pianoforte pieces were often better than orchestral pieces, just as drawings are frequently better than oil-paintings. Stringed instruments played with a bow and the pianoforte stirred him most; this, however, did not prevent him from listening with pleasure even to a balalayka or a guitar. Vocal music, especially songs, he loved not less than instrumental music. The opera, in his opinion a false kind of art uniting the ununitable—music and drama—he did not like. To him it did not convey an illusion, and he could not help seeing on the stage 'a fat singer in tights.' It is well-known how sarcastically he dealt with 'Siegfried,' especially with the subject of that opera. In general he did not like Wagner. On one occasion, having listened to two Acts of 'Lohengrin,' he left the theatre dissatisfied. I only remember that I once played the 'Wedding March' from 'Tannhäuser,' and that that March pleased him, but, he remarked, 'It is music reminiscent of Weber.' He made exception in favour of very few operas. Besides 'Don Juan,' 'The Magic Flute,' and 'Der Freischütz,' I know only that he saw 'Orfeò' and 'Le Barbier de Seville' with pleasure.

. . . . . .

My father's relation to Beethoven was somewhat complex. The composer—apart from his last period—produced a very strong impression on him. In 'Boyhood' he describes the effect produced by the 'Pathetic' Sonata on his hero; in 'Family Happiness' he refers lovingly to the 'Moonlight' Sonata; 'The Kreutzer Sonata' borrows its title from Beethoven's work; the 'Appassionata' always excited him; and finally, he himself often played Beethoven's Sonatas and orchestral pieces (four-handed). But demanding, in this instance as in other cases, a critical attitude towards accepted idols, he always protested against the exceptional cult of Beethoven, considering his predecessors Haydn and Mozart to be equal if not superior to him. He considered Beethoven not as the culminator of the period of music's greatest development, but as the forefather of a decline which continues till now. I remember his saying in the 'seventies, that an artist of genius gives us in his works not merely a new content, but a new form; Haydn created the forms of the sonata and the symphony, Mozart of the opera, but that Beethoven created in previously existing forms—those of Haydn and to some extent of Mozart; therefore, he asked himself whether he ought to consider Beethoven a genius. It seems to me that my father was mistaken in this judgment of Beethoven. His symphonic forms are so distinct from those of his predecessors that they may be considered as new forms. Beethoven's construction is broader and freer; it presents something quite new (e.g., his Scherzo), so that if it is true that genius creates in new forms, this is fully applicable to Beethoven. Further, my father considered that Beethoven is comprehensible to a comparatively small number of people, and that the listener has somewhat to pamper himself in music and spoil his taste in order to understand Beethoven, as there is much that is artificial in him.

For Wagner, Liszt (with the exception of some of his arrangements), Berlioz, Brahms, Richard Strauss, and others of the more modern composers, my father had no great liking.* He accepted only a few of Grieg's pieces. It is true that he was not well-acquainted with the newer composers, but there is a large measure of truth in what he said about innovators in music:

* The well-known critic Strakhov explained my father's attitude towards Wagner by the fact that he felt melody acutely, but was not so susceptible to harmony. Whether that was so I will not undertake to judge. Wagner may have repelled my father by his fondness for grandiose effects, as well as by the subjects he selected and by his way of using the orchestra instead of the singers, for the presentation of the theme.

> When you listen to the new music [he said], it frequently seems that something good and melodious is just beginning, but before that good matter has had time to start it is already finished and sunk in unintelligent and unnecessary dissonances. The composer torments and torments his hearers with these dissonances until again there is a flash of something intelligible, which again becomes submerged. One is left with an unsatisfied and disconnected impression.

. . . . . .

My father was very fond of Chopin. For instance, of the D minor Prelude, he said: 'Das ist Musik! And what a simple and novel way of finishing the piece—those three D's in the bass.'

Of one of Chopin's Valses he once said:

> Chopin, like all composers, has some banal passages, but he has few of them, and is good even in those places; he is banal, but somehow banal in his own way.

Once when I remarked to him that Chopin is not understood by people little acquainted with music, for instance, by the peasants, he agreed with this, and said that unfortunately he had to admit that a certain musical preparation is necessary for an understanding of Chopin. 'But I love him,' he added, 'probably because my taste is already spoilt.'

In addition to what has been said above about Beethoven, I remember my father said of the Sonata in G major (Op. 14, No. 2), that in the first part one hears, as it were, the conversation of a husband and wife, and in general that it is a toy sonata. In the Sonata in E flat major (Op. 7) he considered the Trio from the Scherzo (in E flat minor) its best part; the Sonata in C major (Op. 53), he considered artificial and brain-spun. Of the last Sonatas he liked only the Adagio with variations (E major) in Sonata Op. 109.

We may say that his favourite duet was 'La ci darem,' from Mozart's 'Don Juan.' In a letter to his daughter (March 11, 1894), he wrote:

> Yesterday, at Berg's, after an absurd [!] Quartet of Tchaikovsky's, I started talking with a violinist who is a student at the Conservatoire. Just then they began singing. Not to disturb them we went into another room, and I demonstrated warmly that music had taken a wrong road. Suddenly something interrupts my thought, seizes it, draws it to itself—and demands surrender. They had just then begun to sing the duet from 'Don Juan,' 'La ci darem.' I ceased speaking and listened, and then felt glad and smiled at something. What is that terrible power?

My father's attitude towards Tchaikovsky's music was cold. It has been mentioned in a previous chapter that on one occasion Tchaikovsky's Andante moved him to tears. I think that was the strongest impression he ever received from that composer's music. I remember that he listened with pleasure to only a few of Tchaikovsky's songs and to one or two other things of his (e.g., to his first Symphony). He did not rank him high in comparison with other composers.

In general he was not enthusiastic about Russian composers. One day, when I was playing the Overture from Glinka's 'Russlan,' he remarked, 'It is good, but not first-class; for instance, the Overture of "Der Freischütz" is better.'

Of Anton Rubinstein, he said:

> Rubinstein knows too much of other people's music; that prevents his standing on his own feet. He has only a few sincere, though rather banal pieces (e.g., his songs for the pianoforte, E major and F major, 'Valse caprice,' and some others).

. . . . . .

(To be continued.)

VERDI AND 'FALSTAFF'

By John W. Klein

'Though I greatly admire Verdi, I believe him to be incapable of writing a comic opera.' Such was the pontifical utterance of Rossini—an utterance which Verdi deeply resented. The composer of 'Il Trovatore,' indeed, emphatically declared that he had longed to write an opera of a lighter nature ever since the failure of his first attempt, 'Un Giorno di Regno,' but that he had never been given another chance. Even the publisher his successes had enriched, who was continually urging him to save art and the theatre by writing another opera, stood aghast at the prospect of a comic work—and perhaps his fears were not entirely unjustifiable. There is, indeed, barely a trace of a sense of humour in the maestro's early operas. The first Act of 'La Traviata' and the part of the Duke of Mantua certainly show a somewhat lighter vein, and Verdi achieved a master-stroke by his dramatic humour in the compellingly ironic finale of the third Act of 'The Masked Ball,' but there is, nevertheless, barely a hint of the glories of 'Falstaff.'

Verdi was obviously influenced by the scepticism of his friends, for—shortly after the completion of the Manzoni Requiem—he somewhat ruefully exclaims: 'I was thinking of writing a comic opera. A comic opera of mine would be entertaining enough, at least before it was produced.' It has been erroneously supposed that Wagner's 'Meistersinger' suggested the idea. In fact, the great maestro was weary of melodrama and tragedy, but only in his extreme old age could he afford the luxury of writing a comic opera. Almost immediately after the production of 'Otello,' wishing to experience for once at least 'la goia bella' so beloved of Mozart, he writes: 'After having relentlessly massacred so many heroes and heroines, I have at last the right to laugh a little.' He could, however, think of no fitting comedy to set to music. The Italian Molière, Goldoni (whom he greatly admired), was too lacking in profundity, too innately cautious in dealing with delicate situations, to suit the requirements of the maestro who craved for something more frank and outspoken, more full-blooded and temperamental. He had, moreover, sought in vain a libretto in Molière and the French plays of the day, and had even—mirabile dictu!—thought for an instant of setting to music Labiche's grotesque farce 'Le Voyage de M. Perrichon.' It was 'Don Quijote,' however, which appealed most to him. But eventually even Cervantes's masterpiece did not strike him as being 'something thoroughly, completely, and in all respects suitable.'

One day, however, he discussed the matter with Boïto, and expressed a desire to compose a musical comedy that would rank with Cimarosa's 'Il Matrimonio Segreto' (technically a masterpiece, if little else), or even Mozart's 'Don Giovanni' (which he is not supposed to have studied until the age of seventy, but the influence of which permeates a great deal of the music of the last Act of 'Falstaff'). Boïto listened in silence, and showed no signs of any particular interest. But in secret he forthwith set to work on Shakespeare's 'The Merry Wives of Windsor.' Falstaff's character had always greatly fascinated him and—strange to say—he considered him spiritually akin to Iago and Mephistopheles. Shakespeare's Italian source, Giovanni Fiorentina's entertaining novelette 'Peccorone,' served him as an inspiration no less than the British dramatist's brilliant comedy. It seems singular that he did not—though at the time there were contradictory rumours—venture to inform Verdi of his project, fearing, no doubt, the latter's disapproval or indifference.

In July, 1889 (more than two years after the production of 'Otello'), he nevertheless presented Verdi with the libretto. At first the aged maestro recoiled from the task with a cry of dismay: 'Have you ever considered the enormous number of my years?' Subsequently, however, he set to work with immense gusto. Long after his death, Boïto was wont to speak with tears in his eyes of Verdi's delight and enthusiasm. 'Verdi enjoyed himself,' he exclaimed. 'How he enjoyed himself!'

On December 3, 1890, Verdi wrote to an intimate friend:

> For forty years I have longed to write a musical comedy, for more than fifty I have known 'The Merry Wives.' [The first idea of a 'Falstaff' occurred to him in 1867; Ghislanzoni, the librettist of 'Aïda,' was to write the words.] Now Boïto has written for me a lyrical comedy that can be compared to no other, and it causes me an immense degree of pleasure to set it to music. 'Falstaff' [Verdi continues with mischievous glee] does all sorts of naughty tricks [Boïto had carefully ignored the more sinister features of the fat-paunched hero, and Verdi handled him still more gently], but in a humorous way. And he is a type! Types are so rare! The opera is absolutely and entirely comic.

Not quite so comic as he had supposed. There is a rich vein of melancholy in much of Falstaff's later music, and Ford's despairing soliloquy—a worthy pendant to Iago's 'Credo'—is quite wrongly termed 'humorously dramatic.'

A few days later Verdi, indeed, declared:

> I am not writing a comic opera, I am depicting a type. My Falstaff is not merely the hero of 'The Merry Wives of Windsor,' who is simply a buffoon, and allows himself to be tricked by the women, but also the Falstaff of the two parts of 'Henry IV.' Boïto has written the libretto in accordance.

In Verdi's mind there was not a moment of hesitation, not a hint of the doubt that gnawed at the heart of Nicolai, driving him to exclaim, 'Only a Mozart would be worthy to set Shakespeare's "Merry Wives" to music.' The composer of 'Otello' had too high an opinion of the artistic value of his music, or perhaps he had a premonition that his opera was destined to become (as Strauss has asserted) 'one of the greatest masterpieces of all time,' and a work of greater importance and more imaginative insight and power than Shakespeare's brilliant—if somewhat superficial—pièce d'occasion.

Moreover, though less revelatory of Boïto's amazing knack of condensation than the libretto of 'Otello,' the book of 'Falstaff' is a model of lucidity and conciseness. Boïto has taken to heart Shakespeare's dictum: 'Brevity is the soul of wit.' On scanning his libretto, Verdi realised that here was an opportunity of writing a lyrical comedy of the most refined kind. Boïto's work—compared with the libretto placed at Nicolai's disposal, a veritable masterpiece—is certainly well-planned, though the balance of dramatic action is not always as good as it might be. Descending to details (in spite of Boïto's stringent system of compression, and the fact that 'Falstaff' is generally considered a manifesto against the stoppage, even for an instant, of action on the stage), the first fooling of the fat-paunched hero is somewhat too slow in arriving, and the crowning exposure scarcely brings a sense of culmination, but is, indeed, a direct anti-climax, the background of the picture unexpectedly becoming the foreground. Moreover, the character-drawing—particularly in the case of Ford, who is infinitely more credible in the Shakespearean comedy—is often somewhat poor. Even Falstaff himself—during the course of the last Act—gradually sinks into insignificance.

Boïto's 'Falstaff' is, moreover, full of thoughts culled from other sources. Several of these are real additions to the effectiveness of the work; but a few others are not always in the best of taste, and we may justifiably ask ourselves whether the 'honour' speech—dragged in by hook and by crook from 'Henry IV.'—really lends itself to a musical setting. There are people who are capable of considering it a masterpiece of comic verve; but it strikes me as being one of the least imaginative parts of the opera, and the slightly philosophical touch of the speech is absolutely antagonistic to Verdi's downright temperament.

The work as a whole—which was completed with amazing ease and never-failing inspiration—is, however (apart from the final fugue, which reveals an element of unexpected pedantry), certainly the nimblest and wittiest of all operas. No less an authority, however, than Grieg declares that in his comic opera Verdi's fancy no longer takes flight as formerly, and that there is something short-breathed about it; and Hanslick, who greatly preferred Nicolai's pretty opera, adds that the aged composer's masterpiece is more a work of talent than of genius (he had asserted precisely the same of Bizet's 'Carmen'!), more 'causerie' than powerful musical creation. However much we may deprecate such statements, we may quite frankly admit that they are not entirely devoid of truth, and that in 'Falstaff' Verdi brought, to quote Mr. Shaw, 'thought and knowledge and seriousness to the rescue of failing vitality.' Moreover, Verdi's delightful work is not merely lacking in elemental power, but also in deeper human interest, and—precisely on that account—in true greatness, and cannot therefore be considered on the same plane of achievement as its only serious rival in comic opera, 'Die Meistersinger.'

Nevertheless, how inexpressibly delicate is Verdi's touch in this work! He who was in the habit of making coarse daubs with his brush now paints with the daintiest of camel-hairs. How curiously wistful, sweet, and penetrating are the short love passages of Fenton and Anne! How exquisite the transition from the chattering quartet of women! And there is an ethereal remoteness about the fairy music of the last Act, a delicacy and spirituality hitherto undreamt of by Verdi, though we may perhaps catch a glimpse of it in the final duet of 'Aïda.' Music so thoroughly imbued with the very essence of the true romantic spirit had not, indeed, been penned since the days of Weber.

Strange to say, Verdi is less of a masterly character-drawer in 'Falstaff' than in the much more unequal 'Otello.' Nevertheless, the hero himself is undeniably Verdi's most admirable character-study, far surpassing, indeed, anything he had achieved before. Falstaff's sublime self-conceit is revealed, with almost incredible skill, in every bar of a music that for tantalising wit and boisterous fun in vain seeks its equal, a music so tingling and mercurial that it would have delighted even the sour Nietzsche himself and driven him to exclaim : 'Here is a morning song, so sunny, so light, so fledged and so divinely serene that it will not scare the tantrums, but rather invite them to take part in the singing and dancing.' Falstaff, indeed, seldom provokes coarse laughter ; he more often awakens in us that gentle and thoughtful mirth which Meredith called 'intellectual merriment.'

The remaining characters are, however, mere thumb-nail sketches. With regard to Ford, we are often at a loss to understand whether or no Verdi expects us to take him seriously. The Ford of Nicholai is a purely comic character ; the Ford of Verdi is, however, a fatuous fool with—strange to say—moments of astonishing power and eloquence scarcely in harmony with his real nature. Witness his monologue, on which Verdi has concentrated his heaviest artillery : truly a wonderfully expressive piece of declamation, wrongly termed 'humorously dramatic,' a song more replete with the agony of jealousy than many of Otello's more pretentious outbursts. In short, Ford is neither dramatically nor musically consistent. As for the other characters, they are almost entirely devoid of interest. Even the quartet of women—in which there is a touch of the older style—is lacking in fine differentiation of character.

However, 'Falstaff' as a whole is perhaps the most delightfully sane and irresistibly humorous comic opera in existence, far surpassing Cimarosa's 'Il Matrimonio Segreto'—the model on which Verdi is supposed to have worked—and even Rossini's 'Il Barbiere di Seviglia,' and revealing a mastery of nuance not inferior to that of Mozart himself. The delightful work literally overflows with vivacity, genial ardour, and high spirits. We may well repeat Boïto's dictum : 'What an inestimable boon to art when all will be able to understand it,' and, we may add, prefer it to the vocal gymnastics of 'Il Trovatore' and even the Salvation Army rhythms of 'Aïda.'

HANDEL'S USE OF UNCOMMON INSTRUMENTS AND COMBINATIONS

By E. Van der Straeten

The majority of people think of Handel chiefly as a vocal composer, while his merits as a writer for the orchestra are rarely fully recognised. Again, most people are wont to look upon his orchestration as of a primitive nature, yet he was in reality a great pioneer. Before his time the instruments of the orchestra had been chiefly used in contrasting groups of wind instruments, brass, and strings. Effects of tone-colour from the use of individual instruments were practically unknown, except for a few solitary examples in the late 17th century operas. The orchestra at that time was composed of the concertino, consisting generally of two violins and a violoncello, and the concerto grosso or full string orchestra,* recorders, oboes, and a harpsichord or organ, sometimes also a lute or a theorbo. To these were added on rare occasions two trumpets, and, perhaps, one or two trombones and timpani. The oboe and bassoon were comparatively new instruments, which were first used in opera in Cambon's 'Pomona,' in 1659.

The oboe, which had been evolved from the shawm (chalumeau) in France about the middle of the 17th century, was one of Handel's favourite instruments from early boyhood. The double-bass had been added to the opera orchestra by Pignolet de Monteclair only some twenty years before Handel's birth, the violone having until then taken the place of the fundamental bass. This was the lowest bass of the viols, which had been superseded by their cousins, the violins, except for the viol da gamba, which lived on in semi-retirement in the hands of a small number of its admirers, chiefly in France and England.

Both Purcell and Corelli championed the cause of the violin, which in Italy was in fact almost exclusively used from the early 17th century. Handel followed their example, and already in his first operas, violins formed the basis of his orchestra. His musical conceptions, which were always true to his own nature, were stated in a direct, simple manner with comparatively simple means, but the almost superhuman surety of his musical feeling led him to find with unerring judgment the right medium in the right place to express exactly and effectively what he wanted. He realised that the voice in conjunction with a well-contrasted accompaniment could rise to heights which neither could attain by itself, and that through the different qualities of tone in different instruments it is possible by judicious selection always to find one which is suitable to express a certain mood, character, or situation. This possibility he used to the fullest extent, and never hesitated to adopt any instrument, whether new, old, or even obsolete, that would give him the exact tone-colour that he had in mind. To substitute another instrument for one chosen by him with great care and deliberation for a particular purpose, must therefore necessarily destroy the effect that he had intended. The performance of such music in its original form will naturally offer great difficulties, as it is not easy to procure the necessary instruments nor the people who can play them ; but Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch has taught us that the task is by no means impossible, and that it fully repays the trouble. Below is printed a full list of the instruments used by Handel, mentioning the titles of the works, and the instances in which they were employed.

Handel's orchestra at the opera, in the later period, consisted normally of eight first and seven second violins, four violas, three violoncellos, three contrabasses, two to five oboes, two to five bassoons, two flutes, two horns, two trumpets, harp (occasionally), and timpani : thirty-seven to forty-three in all. For his oratorios the orchestra varied between twenty-five and thirty-five instrumentalists, and an equal number of singers for the chorus.

Handel used what was in his time the quite novel device of dividing his violins into three different parts, of which instances occur in most of his operas and some of his oratorios—e.g., in the Overture to 'Saul,' and in the Overture to 'Athalie' he has even four violin parts. The first who followed him in this was probably Weber, in the Overture to 'Euryanthe,' and by modern masters the device has been used more frequently. In his opera 'Radamisto' (1720), in Tiridate's aria, 'Alzo al vole,' Handel introduced for the first time two horns in Italian opera in London, and probably this was the first instance of their use in any opera, Hasse adopting them for the first time only in the following year.

* A survival of this combination is still to be found in the Adagio of Haydn's Symphony in D, No. 43.

In the opera 'Orlando,' Orlando's aria, 'Gia l'ebro' is accompanied by two violette marine obbligati (with violoncelli pizzicato), which were played by the brothers Pietro and Prospero Castrucci. The violetta marina, invented by Pietro Castrucci, was, according to Burney, a kind of viol d'amour, but unfortunately no specimen of the instrument has survived, nor have we any detailed description of it. Chrysander thought that the name pointed to some connection between Castrucci's instrument and the tromba marina (trumpet marine), and that its tone had something of the trumpet-like character of the former. In support of his theory he quotes from an advertisement in the Daily Courant of March 17, 1725:

> . . . an Entertainment of Musick, for the Benefit of Mr. Castrucci . . . in which Mr. Castrucci will make you hear two Trumpets on the violin.

The violetta marina had the compass of the ordinary viola, and must therefore have been of at least the same size.

One might feel inclined to think that Handel repeatedly made use of these instruments, as we find violette used in combination with violins, oboes, and basses, for the accompaniment of Zoroaster's aria, 'Sorge in Fausta,' in the same opera, while in all the other numbers violas are distinctly specified. Likewise, in 'Ezio,' 'Rinaldo,' and other works, we find violette indicated in some numbers, and viole in others. The fact that 'Rinaldo' was performed in 1712, and the brothers Castrucci came to London only in 1715; that, moreover, in Orlando's aria the instruments are particularly specified as 'due violette marine per le Sig^ri^ Castrucci,' solo duet (accompanied by basses only), appears sufficient proof that he did not mean the latter instruments where he uses the word 'violetta' or 'violette' (plur.). Mattheson, Speer, and Eysel tell us that the word 'viola' and 'violetta' were used indiscriminately for one and the same instrument, but why should Handel use the word 'violetta' for the alto part for one or two numbers, and 'viole' for all the rest, unless he really meant different instruments? There were two instruments which went by the name of 'English violet'; one was identical with the viol d'amour, the other was a violin tuned e, a, e^1^, a^1^, which does not appear to have been largely used—but that would not have deterred Handel should he have found it suitable. No definite information is available so far, although it would be of great interest.

The viola da gamba he employed in only two of his works. The first is 'La Resurrezione' ('The Resurrection'), where he uses it in conjunction with other soft-toned instruments to accompany music for the Saints, while Lucifer is characterized by trumpets, oboes, and the quartet of the violin family. The former arias are remarkable for the picturesqueness of their orchestration: Maddalena's first aria, 'Se impassabile immortale' (concertino: two oboes, violin solo, gamba; concerto grosso, the usual strings); her second aria, 'Per me gia di morire' (concertino: violin solo, viola da gamba, recorders, and muted oboe; concerto grosso, full strings with contra-basses, and harpsichord); her third aria, 'Ferma l'ali,' is accompanied by two recorders, two muted violins, gamba, and basses. One recitative is accompanied by two recorders and gamba only—a very ethereal effect. The first aria of St. John, 'Così la tortorella' ('As the dove'), traverse flute, gamba, and theorbo, with all the violins and basses 'all ottava'; his second aria, 'Quando e parto,' is accompanied only by a gamba and violoncello, and Cleofe's aria, 'Piangete si piangete,' by violas and gamba in unison, and basses. Only those acquainted with the sounds of the various instruments can imagine the wonderful effect of these combinations. The second and last of Handel's works in which we encounter the gamba is 'Julius Cæsar,' where Cleopatra's beautiful aria, 'V'adoro, pupille,' is accompanied by a concertino of oboe with 1st violin, 2nd violin with viola in unison, gamba obblig., harp and theorbo, bassoons and violoncellos, concerto grosso of the usual string orchestra. This aria, which is one of the finest numbers of the opera, has an important introductory symphony, of which Handel wrote two different versions.

The violone, a six-stringed contrabass viol tuned D G C E A d, was used by Handel in the overture to 'Saul,' in which the instruments for the second movement, Larghetto, are: two oboes, bassoon, three violins, viola, violoncelli, violoni, organ, harpsichord, and theorbo. It appears also in Seleuce's aria, 'Dite che fà,' in Act 2 of 'Tolomeo,' which is accompanied by three violins and viola (col. violino 3°), con sordini, violoncello, and violone pizz. (without continuo). The division of the violins into three distinct parts, which is to be found in most operas as well as in some of his oratorios, is seen also in several numbers of this work.

Another now obsolete string instrument of which Handel made frequent use is the tenor violin, or 'taille,' under which latter name it appears in his scores. It had a total length of about 2½-ft., with c. 18⅝-in. length of body, which makes it rather unwieldy to hold, like a viola, and many fine old masterpieces have been cut down to the size of the smaller viola, to suit the convenience of the player, although the beautiful rich and sonorous tone of the real tenor violin was thereby completely destroyed. Had they played the instrument violoncello fashion, as was done at the Haslemere Festival, last August, that sacrifice would not have been necessary. The same applies to Ritter's viola alta, and Stelzner's violotta, which are true tenor violins. The tuning of the tenor violin is generally said to be identical with that of the viola, but that given by D. Hizler ('Neue Musica,' 1628), F, c, g, d^1^, is more in conformity with its size as well as some of the parts written for it by various composers. The instrument went out of use about the middle of the 18th century. Handel employed it apparently only in his earlier works, notably in the second Allegro of the overture to 'Tesèo' (1712), which is orchestrated as follows: two oboes, bassoon, violin, haute-contre, taille, basso-continuo (without string basses).

The flageolet, a small flute with a straight ivory or bone mouthpiece and the compass g^1^ to a^1111^, was used only twice by Handel, viz., 'Hush, ye pretty warbling choir,' from 'Acis and Galatea' and 'Augelletti che cantate,' from 'Rinaldo,' where it is used in combination with two recorders. In Handel's conducting score the flageolet has been changed to 'piccolo.'

Of flutes, he employed both recorders and traverse flutes, the latter apparently only where they are specially indicated, while the former appear simply as flutes. In 'La Resurrezione' (1708) both are used, as mentioned above, in speaking about the gamba. The recorders appear more frequently than the traverse flute, fine examples being the 'Ferma l'ali,' from 'La Resurrezione' (see above); Josabeth's aria, 'Through the land so lovely,' from 'Athalia,' which is accompanied by two recorders, two violins, and basses only; and Apollo's airs from 'Terpsichore,' the first, 'Tuoi passi,' for recorders, with two muted violins, viola, and soft organ (positif?), theorbo, and violoncelli pizzicato; the second, 'Hai tando,' has an introduction for two recorders and violins in unison, and continuo, and is followed by a 'Ballo,' for two recorders and violins, pianissimo, only. In Arsace's aria, 'Partenope,' Act 1, 'Dimmi piètoso ciel,' there is a fine recorder obbligato with very effective figures alternately between recorder and violin and recorder and voice; and in Act 3, Scene 6, is Arsace's lovely slumber song, 'Mai quai note,' with two recorders, two violins, viola with theorbo, and pizzicato basses without continuo.

The traverse flute is to be found mostly in his later operas, where several obbligati occur, always accompanied by violins, violas, and basses, viz.: 'Poro,' Act 1, Scena 10, and Act 3, Scena 10; 'Ezio,' Act 1, 'Onoria,' 'Quanto mai felice,' two traverse flutes obbl., two violins, two violette, and basses; 'Faramondo,' Act 2, Scena 14; 'Alexander Balus,' two traverse flutes obbl. in Cleopatra's aria, 'Hark, hark, he strikes the golden lyre,' about which we shall speak later; and in 'Tamerlane' and 'Rodelinda,' as in the 'Resurrezione' (see above), he uses recorders as well as traverse flutes. There are many other instances of the use of both the recorder and the traverse flute; only those of particular interest are here mentioned.

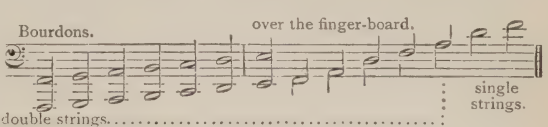
The bass recorder, compass f—f^{11} occurs only once in 'Giustino,' Act 1, Scene 4, where the aria 'Può ben nascer' is accompanied by oboe solo, flauti (recorders), 1^{e} violino, 1^{o} piano, flauti 2^{e}, violini 2, violino 3, e viola e basso di flauti (bass recorder). The effect must have been very delicate and beautiful.

The bass traverse flute, in f, was likewise used once by Handel, in the arioso in Act 3 of the opera 'Ricardo' (1727). In the same Act, the aria 'Quando uno vede' is accompanied by two chalumeaux, three violins, viola, and bass. This is the only instance in which Handel has made use of the chalumeau, or 'shawm,' as it was called in England. There existed two kinds of instruments bearing that name: one had a double-reed, and this was the precursor of the oboe. The other was a single-reed instrument, which was improved, c. 1690, by Denner, of Nuremberg, and became the clarinet. It was no doubt the latter instrument that Handel used, recognising its possibilities, while its shortcomings deterred him, like his contemporaries, from employing it more frequently, and it was not till Mozart's time that it had been sufficiently improved to become a useful and even important member of the orchestra.

The cornetto—a wood-wind instrument with a slightly bent tube pierced with holes—which, in the 16th and 17th centuries, was largely used in combination with trombones, but was rapidly falling into disuse in Handel's time, was resorted to by him only in a single instance, namely, in 'Tamerlane' (1724), where two obbligato cornetti are used in conjunction with the usual string orchestra for the accompaniment of Irene's aria, 'Parche mi nasca in seno.' The cornetto was last used in Gluck's 'Orfeo' (1764). It was the alto instrument of a family, the other members of which had already become obsolete, except the contrabass cornetto, which on account of the snakelike winding of the tube was called the 'serpent.' The latter had a rough and roaring tone, with a compass from B to c^{1}, and was chiefly used in France. The story is told that when Handel was first shown and heard the instrument, and was informed of its name, he said, 'You call it a serpent—ha! but it is not ze serpent vot seduced Eve.' Nevertheless, he used it in 'Samson,' in 'Solomon,' and in the 'Fireworks' music, and it was employed by both Mendelssohn and Wagner.

After introducing two horns in the score of 'Radamisto,' he used them frequently, generally in combination with oboes, but not with trumpets, which he also combined with oboes. In Act 3 of 'Ricardo' there is a fine obbligato for two horns, and in 'Julius Cæsar' (final chorus) he uses for the first and only time four horns, two in G, and two in D, a device followed by later composers, but which originated in all probability with Handel.

The theorbo, a bass-lute, tuned at the beginning of the 18th century:



was a favourite bass instrument during the 17th and early 18th centuries of which Handel has made very effective use in some notable instances. I have already mentioned its use in St. John's aria 'Così la tortorella,' from 'La Resurrezione,' Arbace's lovely song, 'Mà quai note,' from 'Partenope,' and the aria 'Tuoi passi,' from 'Terpsichore.' In 'Saul' he employs it in the second movement, Larghetto, of the overture, described above (see violone), then again to accompany David's exorcism, and also in conjunction with the harp, violins in unison, and viola in octaves with the bass, in Saul's aria 'Fly, fly, malicious spirit.' The first instance of his use of the harp is to be found in 'Esther,' where he wrote a harp accompaniment to the song 'Tune your harps in cheerful strains,' for his protégé, the younger Powell, for whom he also wrote the harp concerto played by Powell in 'Alexander's Feast,' and which was afterwards embodied in the sixth Organ Concerto. We find the harps used again in Cleopatra's aria, 'Hark, hark, hark, he strikes the golden lyre,' from 'Alexander Balus,' which offers probably the first of the extremly rare instances of the use of the mandolin in an important serious work, the only other one which I can call to mind being the Serenade in Mozart's 'Don Juan.' The harp and mandolin parts in Cleopatra's aria are written together on the same stave, the other instruments being two traverse flutes, two violins, viola, two violoncellos, bassoons, and contra-basses. Last, not least, we find even an instance of the use of the carillon in the sinfonia and chorus from 'Saul,' 'Welcome, welcome, mighty King,' with violins and organ tasto solo, and also in 'David his ten thousand slew,' accompanied by a very full orchestra.

Although of frequent occurrence in modern orchestras the powerful group of brass instruments, consisting of two trumpets and three trombones, in the opening chorus of 'Saul,' used in conjunction with kettledrums, oboes, strings, and continuo, was no doubt a startling novelty, in spite of the fact that the individual instruments were by no means uncommon.

The above is perhaps the first full and connected account of the various instruments which are now obsolete, and of the still existing ones which Handel introduced for the first time or used in novel combinations. To give all the examples of interesting and effective instrumentation from his works is beyond the scope of this article, but it may come as a surprise to those who are not familiar with the full scores, as showing the wonderful resourcefulness of Handel and his acquaintance with the character and possibilities of all the musical instruments of his time. It may also serve as a list for reference by music students.

CONSECUTIVE FIFTHS

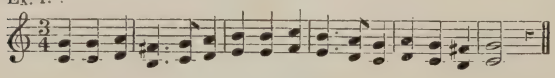
By Arthur T. Froggatt

Dr. Shirlaw's interesting articles on 'The Nature of Harmony,' together with a discussion on 'Modern Harmony' in the recently published 'Proceedings of the Musical Association,' have suggested the subject of the following observations. It is a subject upon which the final word has apparently not yet been uttered; and although I cannot flatter myself with the thought that it is now about to be spoken, yet I may perhaps venture to hope that my humble effort may have the result of accelerating its advent.

Why are consecutive fifths unpleasant? That is a question which, so far as I know, has never been answered, although many attempts have been made to do so. The latest of these attempts which has come under my notice occurred in the discussion above mentioned: the speaker stated that they are 'the result of a succession of chords with no note in common.' But assuming for the moment the truth of this very inaccurate expression, it may be pointed out that it applies equally to a succession of chords of the sixth. Why, then, should the result be bad in one case and good in the other?

The best known reason for the prohibition of consecutive fifths—viz., that they suggest a succession of different keys, is also rebutted by the above argument, for chords do not change their key by inversion. The only way in which fifths could suggest two keys would be this:

Ex. 1.

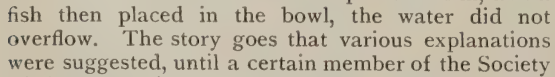


where we have 'God save the King' in the keys of C and G simultaneously.

The joke which Charles II. played upon the then recently founded Royal Society is probably well known. The King asked the Society why it was that if a bowl were filled with water up to the brim, and a fish then placed in the bowl, the water did not overflow. The story goes that various explanations were suggested, until a certain member of the Society tried the experiment, when it was discovered that the water did overflow. In the same way, in answer to the question, 'Why are consecutive fifths always objectionable?' I am of opinion that most composers have proved by experiment that they are not always so.

Of course, consecutive fifths, whether perfect or imperfect, may be extremely unpleasant. Take 'God save the King' again:

Ex. 2.



If this is played as written, the melody is in the lower part. If played with one sharp at the signature, the melody is in the upper part. It is a choice of evils.

Now add a third to each chord:

Ex. 3.

This is still very bad; but not quite so bad as before. Why? Because the fifths, though painfully prominent, are not quite so prominent: the major and minor thirds supply the jam taken with the powder.

One step further. Add the octave—strengthen the melody:

Ex. 4.

Surely we are on the road to improvement. The quantity of powder remains the same, but there is more jam. The bad effect of the fifths is by no means obliterated, but it is considerably reduced.

Consecutive fourths are quite as objectionable as consecutive fifths: many musicians would say more so. But add thirds below, and they are all right:

Ex. 5.

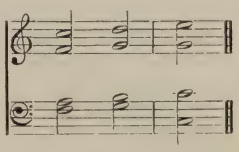
Why then are these chords of the sixth not equally good with the fifth above the root?

Ex. 6.

The only reason I can discover is that the harmony being necessarily more open, the fifths stand out more prominently than the fourths in Ex. 5. Play the fourths an octave higher, with the bass as written, and the former become unpleasantly prominent also. In close harmony, with the doubling of parts, I can find nothing offensive in such a progression as that in bars 13 and 14 of the Minuet in the 'Jupiter' Symphony, where the first violin and first oboe move in fifths high up the scale.

I have never been able to understand the objection of 'strict' contrapuntists to the sequence of subdominant and dominant thirds in two-part counterpoint. Neither can I see (or rather, hear) any objection to Ex. 7, beyond the fact that it is not in pure four-part harmony. Ex. 8, of course, is an immense improvement, and to my ear quite without flaw:

Ex. 7.



Ex. 8.

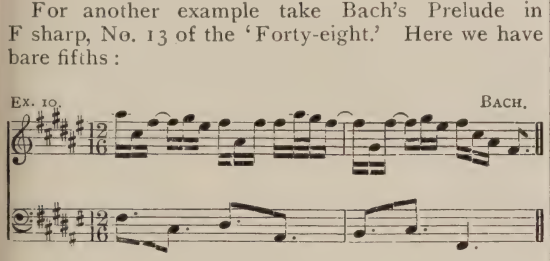
The following is from the Adagio of Schubert's String Quartet in E flat, Op. 125, No. 1, six bars from the end :

Ex. 9.

The fifths between viola and violoncello, from sub-dominant to dominant harmony, may be forgiven, but can never be forgotten.

For another example take Bach's Prelude in F sharp, No. 13 of the 'Forty-eight.' Here we have bare fifths :

Ex. 10.



It is true that there is a morsel of syncopation by way of apology; but no self-respecting 'strict' contrapuntist would accept it.

As regards the crossing of parts in very full vocal harmony, an improvement in the melody of the parts may thereby be effected; but it is absurd to pretend that bad consecutives can be made good by such childish means.

Someone may say : Granted that consecutive fifths are sometimes unobjectionable, you have not told us why this is not always so. It is because I do not know. I do not know why a major third is a more satisfactory interval than a perfect fifth; with the result that two thirds in succession are pleasanter than two fifths. I have already quoted two unsatisfactory reasons which others have given : here is a third. It has been said that it is a question of the partial tones—that the cultivated ear desires a happy medium between too much unity and too much variety. The major and minor thirds, with their inversions, the minor and major sixths, are said to provide the happy medium. For instance, in the fifth there is too much balance on the side of unity, while in the major second there is too much balance on the side of variety. But if this were the true explanation, it would follow that the octave would be a less pleasant interval than the fifth or fourth, because the co-incidence of partial tones is greater in the octave. But this is not the case. No sane person would prefer a scale in fifths or fourths to one in octaves. That thirds are the most beautiful intervals in music is an undoubted fact. And if anyone can tell me why this is so, I shall be very grateful.

Dr. Shirlaw, in the article mentioned above, quotes a succession of last inversions of dominant sevenths (from Strauss's 'Electra') written upon a descending chromatic scale. They ought to sound horrible, but they are, as Dr. Shirlaw very truly says, 'sweet and even cloying in effect.' In the same composer's melodrama, 'Enoch Arden' (pp. 4, 5) will be found two or three dominant sevenths in their original position, also written upon a fragment of the chromatic scale, which to me are not unpleasing. But in the quotation from 'Electra,' Strauss has added a perfect fifth below each seventh—as a matter of fact, the minor third of the chord ! It is generally not very safe to prophesy; but I am inclined to think that in this passage the ugliness of consecutive fifths has reached bottom.

The Musician's Bookshelf

'Studies in Modern Music' (First Series); 'Studies in Modern Music' (Second Series). By Sir W. H. Hadow.

[Seeley, Service & Co., 5*s.* each vol.]

'Beethoven's Op. 18 Quartets.' By Sir W. H. Hadow.

[Oxford University Press, 1*s.* 6*d.*]

'A Comparison of Poetry and Music : The Henry Sidgwick Lecture, 1925.' By Sir W. H. Hadow.

[Cambridge University Press, 2*s.*]

The two volumes of Studies, being now in their eleventh edition, are long past the review stage. One can only say that they retain their place as examples of the finest critical writing produced in this country. True, the lapse of some forty years since their first appearance has altered the standing of certain of the composers discussed, and it is hardly likely that Sir Henry would care to be pinned down to every one of his early opinions. Again, the conditions affecting the contact of the general public with music have undergone such profound changes, especially during the past twenty years, that such a passage as this reads curiously to-day :

> A generation ago Englishmen who played the pianoforte were almost non-existent, and Englishwomen ended their education with the 'Battle of Prague.' Even now the amateur level in this country is not very high, and we have as yet little chance of familiarising ourselves with Beethoven and Schubert, of bringing them to our firesides, and admitting them to our friendship. This is, of course, the principal reason why good Art is ever neglected. To appreciate the best music we must hear it often : to hear it often we must live with it : to live with it we must be in the company of those by whom it can be played and sung.

Thanks to the player-piano, the gramophone, and wireless, we can now live with the best music to a degree that Sir Henry never dreamt of when he wrote the above passage. 'Those by whom it can be played and sung' meant to him soloists, or at most a chamber music party belonging to the domestic circle. To-day we may be in the company of the pick of these, and of the finest orchestras and choirs as well. Such deficiencies in reproduction and transmission as exist (and they are steadily being overcome) are more than compensated by the fact that we are able to obtain an unlimited amount of repetition of fine works, and (in the case of the player-piano and gramophone) even of any particular passage.

The essay on 'Music and Musical Criticism' contains some denunciations that apply less now than they probably did forty years ago. There is no lack of musical criticism written to-day of a quality that compares very favourably with the best of that in other branches of art. No higher praise is needed, for literary criticism has long been a brilliant department of English letters. We may claim that the best of contemporary musical criticism is almost certain to be as well worth reading by posterity as the literary criticism of the past is to-day. These books of Hadow's are examples of the abiding value of such work, when all allowances have been made for changing values of nearly half-a-century. For the benefit of readers who do not know the volumes, it may be well to give the contents of the two series: (1.) Music and Musical Criticism: A discourse on Method; Hector Berlioz and the French Romantic Movement; Robert Schumann and the Romantic Movement in Germany; Richard Wagner and the Reform of the Opera. (2.) Outlines of Musical Form; Frederick Chopin; Antonin Dvorák; Johannes Brahms.

The little book on Beethoven's Op. 18 Quartets is a model of its kind, being informative without dryness, and picturesque without far-fetchedness. The reader who takes a miniature score of these Quartets, and goes through them with Sir Henry as guide, will end by knowing a good deal more about Beethoven and his methods (not only in Op. 18, but elsewhere) than can be obtained from many a fat volume.

We may be sure that nobody was more aware than the lecturer himself that a comparison between music and poetry demands more than a solitary lecture, and, stimulating as Sir Henry's discourse is, it inevitably leaves the reader to do much of the rounding-off for himself. But there is not a sentence that is not worth pondering, and it abounds in the neat setting-forth of difficult points that in most hands lead to no more than cloudy verbiage. One is surprised, however, to find no mention made of Browning, though there is a brief quotation from 'Abt Vogler.' Speaking of the scant justice done to music by English poets after Milton, Sir Henry says:

> So through the 18th and early 19th centuries the estrangement continued. Music fades away from the works of our English poets—Wordsworth, Coleridge, Southey, are outside its influence; Shelley 'pants for the music which is divine,' but shows no comprehension of it; Byron has little to show except the songs he wrote for Braham; Keats has virtually nothing.

But surely Browning (though his actual knowledge of the art was a good deal less profound than he thought it to be) deserves honourable mention, not only for writing poems dealing directly with music, but for showing an insight into its mysterious power that has not been surpassed by any other English poet. Milton's description of a fugue in 'Paradise Lost' may be, as Sir Henry claims for it, 'the best in all literature'; but the best English poem on music (and one of the best in all literature) is 'Abt Vogler.'

Sir Henry, as might be expected, is against the ultra-modern composer, and gives good reasons. In a passage concerning 'Pierrot Lunaire,' he lays his finger on the weak point of the over-elaborate polyphony of Schönberg and his disciples, comparing an abstruse passage therein with an over-involved and pedantically wordy sentence from Lycophron:

> There is a passage in Schönberg's 'Pierrot Lunaire' which seems exactly to match this. Piccolo and clarinet are playing in close canon at the distance of a quarter of a bar; violin and 'cello are playing a canon cancrizans on a new theme: the pianoforte is playing a three-part fugue on the theme of the first canon in augmentation: and the voice is narrating that when Pierrot walks in the cool of the evening the moon makes a white spot on his back. If all this display of counterpoint was successful it would overlay the tiny subject on which it is imposed; as a matter of fact it is so involved that the ear cannot follow it, and it makes no compensation in beauty of sound. But, indeed, much of our counterpoint is become so elaborate that it no longer harmonizes: 'the dissonances,' we are told, are inherent in the progression of parts and therefore inevitable.' It never seems to occur to the composer that he might conciliate the parts.

Exactly; but such conciliation involves labour. It is far less trouble to force the parts together, willy-nilly, and call the result 'advanced.'

H. G.

'Studies and Caprices.' By Alexander Brent-Smith. (Methuen, 5s.)

Mr. Brent-Smith needs no introduction to Musical Times readers, nor need much be said concerning this little book of essays, seeing that some of them saw the light in this journal, the remainder appearing in Music and Letters. Practically all, however, have been re-written and enlarged. The 'Studies' are of Bach, Cherubini, Beethoven, Meyerbeer, Chopin, Mendelssohn, Parry, and Reger; the 'Caprices' play round 'Creed and Custom,' 'On Going Behind the Scenes,' 'The Negative in Music,' 'Slender Reputations,' 'The Unexpected in Music,' 'On Knowing Things,' 'The Place of Music in the Works of Thomas Hardy,' 'Painted Music,' 'The Fascination of the Opus Number,' and 'Accidental Strokes of Genius.'

Re-reading some of these pleasantly-discursive papers, one feels that, after all, books of this sort are far better aids to 'music appreciation' (one hates the term, but it has to be used here) than many of the fussy volumes put forth for the guidance of the amateur; for Mr. Brent-Smith has the rare and valuable combination of musicianship, humour, and a sense of literary style. With some of his musical judgments, of course, many will feel at liberty to fall out. The present writer, for example, though no blind Beethoven-worshipper, cannot agree with the estimate of that composer. Beethoven, as Mr. Brent-Smith says, 'has his undeniably dull moments'; but the fault is usually due to causes other than those set forth. Are his 'initial inspirations magnificent'? No; surely one of the characteristics of Beethoven is his genius for making much out of some germ that is seminal rather than magnificent. And many of these, in their first form, are often the sheerest platitudes. Again:

> His texture is rarely without some tangles and knots. His seams and joints are too evident. We can frequently count the stitches, and, on some occasions, can see the glint of a hasty safety-pin.

This is true enough of the immature Beethoven, but surely not of Beethoven at his best. If we do not find mastery of construction and texture in his finest music, where are we to look for it? Yet one more point: Among his failings are set down 'trite or interminable codas.' Well, 'many men,' &c. I had always thought that the coda was one of Beethoven's glories. It is only fair to add that these brief quotations are more or less set off by glowing praise later. 'Caprices and Studies' makes reading at once pleasant, stimulating, and informative, and its style is so attractive that its virtue will not be exhausted by a first perusal. H. G.

'Brahms,' by Jeffrey Pulver.
'Bizet,' by D. C. Parker.

[Kegan Paul, 7*s.* 6*d.* each.]

These are the fourth and fifth volumes of the 'Masters of Music,' edited by Sir Landon Ronald, the first of which was the surprising and bitter 'Wagner' of Mr. William Wallace. None of the other contributors have followed Mr. Wallace's lead away from the beaten tracks of biography, and of them all, none is so disinclined to a critical attitude as the author of the new 'Brahms.'

What does one most want in a short book about a famous composer? It depends on the composer. Now and then a composer has had an interestingly eventful life. Wagner's life makes a remarkable story, worth telling—a fact which has often been observed, so that most books on Wagner are so full of the life and of the plots of the operas that the music gets left out. Then a few of the composers have been in themselves picturesque and interesting men. A book on Berlioz himself must not leave Berlioz himself out, for personally he was even more interesting than his music.

But, after all, with the majority of composers the music is the thing, and it strikes us that a good working rule for musical biography would be to write with a constant view to illustrating the music, cutting the rest short. The probability is that the result of the vicarage cricket match in 1868 does not essentially help the case; we have lately seen an example in which the music was snowed under by the cricket results. Brahms did not play cricket. He had no Wagnerian adventures. Whatever the inner man was like, he managed—apart from such revelation as is afforded by the music—to present an impassive front to the world, and the latest biographer, in any case, prefers to put aside what material there is for critical psychology.

His procedure may be illustrated by an example taken ('honest Injun!') at haphazard. Brahms in 1865 was not very enthusiastic over his father's proposal to marry again, and was unable to attend the wedding, but nevertheless wrote an affectionate letter. Mr. Pulver gives a page to this matter:

> His dutiful son, sacred as he held the memory of his mother, understood sufficiently what a lonely life meant, and could only approve his father's action though he feared the consequences of another great disparity in the ages of the engaged couple. . . . Johannes could only hope for the best. . . . Writing on October 10, he said he was staying another eight days at Lichtenthal, and asked that letters should be addressed to him, care of Levi, at Carlsruhe. He hoped to come to Hamburg in December. His one desire was to see his father pass the rest of his days in comfort and happiness, and in the hope that the forthcoming marriage would achieve this object he left the matter in Johann Jakob's hands (pp. 158, 159).

Try again:

> Most of the late spring and the summer were spent at Tutzing, on the Starnberg Lake, in Bavaria, a beautiful spot, but not without its social distractions. Before settling here he had tried Gratwein in Styria and the Semmering, but without finding the place he required. From Tutzing he would run over to Munich to see Levi, and make use of this asylum when visitors to Tutzing annoyed him (p. 211).

Brahms's holidays are indeed chronicled as though every move had a strategical importance—but we miss the connection with the music.

The procedure is one of accumulation of detailed, amical fact. Mr. Pulver's attitude seems to be that since the music is available to all and sundry it may be left to speak for itself. This is reasonable enough.

The music of Brahms tells us of brains and sensibility. It exemplifies a most beautiful balance between rather depressed feelings and their logical expression. It tells us that Brahms was never a very happy man. There is not one moment of exhilaration from one end of him to the other. But he cannot have been very unhappy, for he was too well able to express his lifelong melancholy sentiment.

Some of Mr. Pulver's readers would have been glad of a selection of facts with a more strictly musical bearing. Others will be relieved that in these days of iconoclasm and what has been called de-whitewashing he has treated his admired subject with such reticence and formality. As for his admiration, not the straitest Brahmsian of them all will complain that it stops half-way:

> Brahms is, in fact, intellectually the most important figure in the whole history of music; in his work we are given the culmination of the technical development that had gone on from the 16th century to his own times (pp. viii., ix.).

And later:

> As a writer of absolute music Brahms stands, of course, as the greatest musician of all time (p. 348).

'Of course' is good! On the same page it is argued that Brahms's chamber-music is an improvement on Beethoven's, and on the last page we bid him farewell, 'clothed in the mantle of Johann Sebastian Bach.'

Bizet's life was no more eventful than Brahms's, and was much shorter. He was no more interesting a person, and he was a lesser musician. Mr. Parker has seen that a Bizet book must be essentially a book about a single opera, 'Carmen.' He has quarried industriously, and here gives us a full story—who sang, what the papers said next day, why after a first season's run of thirty-seven performances (which to English ears seems a pretty good career for a new opera) it was shelved, and so on.

He has made as much as was to be made of the matter, and he is to be thanked for not asking us to applaud overmuch the other operas of Bizet. In fact, he faces the interesting questions:

> Was not, perhaps, this brilliant 'Carmen' a sort of happy accident? Is there not the possibility, seeing what Bizet's character and record were, that if he had lived nothing especially good might have come after 'Carmen,' as nothing especially good had gone before?

Mr. Parker sometimes uses strained language, as in phrases like 'the sweets of blinding triumph,' which make one's head go round. But he has written at some length about a minor composer without making strained claims, and that is something of a feat. C.

'Orpheus; or, The Music of the Future.' By W. J. Turner.

[Kegan Paul, 2*s.* 6*d.*]

The author strikes one as being clever, but immature. He is all too ready to sneer at his elders, and betters—Anglican bishops (p. 90), Darwin, Elgar, Sullivan (p. 33), and religious bodies of nearly all denominations (p. 79). One so ready with his stones should build his own house of the thick glass of the aquarium tanks.

But here we are already getting a little annoyed—which is playing the author's game. 'I use the tenor or C clef,' he says on p. 64, 'partly because it is more obscure and will annoy those who are only accustomed to the treble and bass clefs.' He does it only to annoy, because he knows it teases!

What is much more obscure than 'the tenor or C clef' is the galimatia which the music-type illustrates. Our author confesses to a weakness for the interval of the 17th—'the most satisfying to my ear.' He prefers it to the 12th. (The illustrations in the tenor clef are of a major 17th and perfect 12th.) As who should say, 'I prefer the phrase, "Turn to the right," to "Third to the left"!' As though the likeableness of a melodic interval did not entirely depend on the context!

No. The intervals of the scale are to be thought of in terms of human relationships (p. 65). The octave, father and daughter; the fifth, brother and sister. But the twelfth, male and female cousins, 'in which a new element, that of sexual affinity, is introduced, bringing with it a deeper reverberation, although the blood relationship is more distant.' Oh, dear; this is very hard to follow! Because all the time a 12th is nothing but a 5th, is it? So my father may be my female cousin? Happily, 'in another five generations . . . . there may be no matrimony' (p. 91), and, we may venture to hope then, no more generations. Not all the book is such nonsense as this talk about favourite 17ths.

The motive power of music, so the author begins, is, like that of the elements of chemistry and everything else, love. This is very respectable scholastic doctrine. See 'Purgatorio,' xvii. But it would have scandalised Mr. Turner's chemistry and music teachers, he thinks (pp. 15, 16). He himself is not, however, we gather, very much of a Dantean. He persists in misquoting. Reading on p. 1 his version of 'L'amor che move il sole e l'altre stelle,' we took it to be a conscious adaptation by a modern poet, but on p. 19 it is given again as Dante's own. Let us then point out that the mondo was not a stella in Dante's system.

Does it appear that the young author has all too successfully teased the temper of a middle-aged reviewer? True it is that, reading by the rushy banks of Thames, one was tempted to cast the booklet into the flood. But now for the good things. Mr. Turner has not lingered long over the idle task of foretelling the future. He indicates only that poverty will be abolished and that surnames will be optional. This is mild, when he might credibly have depressed us by a collapse of civilisation in another war or a new glacial age.

The heart of the book is a declaration that Beethoven's is the music of the future. Beethoven's contains all other music. We are still only on the fringe of appreciating it. In the pessimistic world of to-day, littered with the ruins of theological and sociological hopes, the star of Beethoven's spirit shines on. All of a sudden our author grows sympathetic. He has really felt all this, and he expresses it all far better than I have done. This praise of Beethoven springs from a fine poetic idea, and for its sake one is inclined to excuse a good many of the author's hateful denigrations. He ends the chapter (p. 88):

> And if anyone should say that the question, 'Why do I live?' has not been answered, I reply that Beethoven has rendered it ridiculous.

C.

'Fifty Years of Army Music.' By Lieut.-Col. J. Mackenzie-Rogan.

[Methuen, 15*s.*]

The author gives a detailed account of a successful career, every phase of which he has clearly enjoyed.

The future bandmaster of the Coldstream Guards was born in 1855, and enlisted as a band-boy in the 11th (North Devon) Regiment of Foot in 1867. He was almost at once shipped off to South Africa. Later in life he had two spells in India. He was flautist, clarinettist, 'cellist, and cricketer ('a fairly good bowler, having a small break both ways'). What was even more, he took to regimental ways as a duck to water. Only once in his life did he appear on parade improperly dressed. For all the horrors of the story, see p. 162.

When he joined the Army about two-thirds of the bands were conducted by German civilians. Sometimes these were mere minstrels from street 'German bands,' taken up and dressed decently by certain well-known people interested in exploiting military bands, and foisted on ignorant C.O.'s. The title 'Herr' had great prestige with those simple soldiers.

How simple they were comes out in the story of the colonel who ordered the trombones all to play with the slides in the same position for the sake of smartness. Another preferred the playing of scales in unison to other music. Another colonel could not tell 'Rule, Britannia' from 'God save the Queen.'

At one time a battalion of the North Devons had two bandmasters, an Englishman and a German, 'a foreign-looking, sallow gentleman with very long hair,' who employed an interpreter. The foreigner took charge of full rehearsals, mess performances, and public engagements, and the military bandmaster took charge of all parades. This ridiculous state of things was abolished in 1873.

In 1874 the author, still a youngster, was put in charge of the battalion drums and fifes. It was obvious already that he had the zeal and organizing power to take him a long way. He came home from India to study at Kneller Hall. His remarks on that institution will no doubt be noted in the proper quarters. He is in favour of a civilian Director of Music there, and thinks that the wind players turned out by Kneller Hall up to 1881, and for some years after, were more skilful than they have been since the introduction of 'double-handed playing.' If the Guards bands have excelled in the past sixty years, it is because the men did not attempt to play stringed instruments as well as wind.

After Kneller Hall the author was appointed bandmaster of the 1st battalion of The Queen's, and held the post for fourteen years. In 1896 he left it for the Coldstream Guards. The later chapters are full of accounts of the State functions and the flower-shows and similar entertainments, where we expect a band of guardsmen to figure. The band, furthermore, went on a wartime concerttour on the western front, and got shelled at Poperinghe. Col. Mackenzie-Rogan has also been three times to Canada. In 1899 he went to Berlin. He was favourably struck by the training of German bandmasters in a civilian school of music—'a better arrangement than our own. . . This was the only point in the German system of military music and training which I thought would be advantageous to us. In all other things the best British bands undoubtedly led the way.' C.

'Chopin.' By Wakeling Dry.

[The Bodley Head, 3*s.* 6*d.*]

This little book is an annotated list of Chopin's compositions, the remarks being of the quality to which we are accustomed in the average recital programme. It lacks an index, which is a serious drawback in such a work. Thus we may wish to read Mr. Dry on the great F minor Fantasy, Op. 49. It is not in the chapter on Sonatas, nor yet among the 'Scherzi, &c.,' not yet among 'Miscellaneous Pieces.' We have the impression that it is left out, but we do not say so for certain.

As criticism, it is all very unpretentious. Perhaps the best thing is to quote a couple of examples, and to leave the Chopin-lover after that to go to the book itself if he is interested.

Of the first movement of the B flat minor Sonata the following analysis is given :

> It opens with a short prelude, passing to a moving figure in the bass. Then comes the entry of the principal subject. A climax is reached, and we have a soft second theme. The working-out is charming in its detail, and the second theme is resumed, this time in B flat major. The ending is brilliantly animated, with a short coda.

The G minor Ballade is thus considered :

> In it are found both pathos and dramatic feeling. Opening with a brief prelude, the main theme is followed by an animated interlude and a second theme of great beauty. These two main themes are afterwards repeated; and the work ends with a coda—a presto with strong chords and scale-passages.

C.

'Early Recollections of St. Paul's Cathedral.' By W. A. Frost.

[Simpkin, Marshall, 3*s.* 6*d.*]

Mr. W. A. Frost, in his 'Early Recollections of St. Paul's Cathedral,' proves himself to be a typical Gentleman of a great cathedral choir, for, amongst other important resemblances to the type, he prefers Anglican chants and service settings to Plainsong, which he calls 'crude stuff composed in days when the art of music was in its infancy.'

His diary is evidently a well-kept one, and contains records which should be of interest to all who follow the progress of Church music in England. We wish that he had been more communicative, however. What might he not have told us, for example, of the boyhood of Charles Macpherson, Walter Delamare, Norman Wilkinson, Geoffrey Shaw, and other distinguished ex-choristers whom he must have seen frequently through those little peep-holes in the choir stalls! Such a subject might well be substituted for the Appendix, if a second edition of the book is demanded. C. W.

Messrs. Chester have added to their excellent 'Miniature Essay' series numbers on Arthur Honegger, Gustav Holst, Francesco Santoliquido, and Gabriel Grovlez. Like the rest of the series, each essay appears in English and French, and contains a portrait of the composer.

BOOKS RECEIVED

[Mention in this list neither implies nor precludes review in a future issue.]

'Nets and Cages.' By J. Morgan de Groot. Pp. 291. Alston Rivers, 7*s.* 6*d.*

'The Gipsy in Music.' By Franz Liszt. Englished by Edwin Evans. Preceded by an Essay on Liszt and his work. 2 vols. William Reeves, 15*s.*

'Church Music.' By Sir W. H. Hadow. Pp. 43. Longmans Green, 2*s.* 6*d.*

'Kurzgefasstes Tonkünstlerlexikon.' Founded by Paul Frank, re-edited by Prof. Dr. Wilhelm Altmann. Pp. 482. Twelfth edition, enlarged. Carl Merseburger, Leipsic.

'Bulletin de la Société "Union Musicologique."' Sixth year, first volume. Pp. 126. Martinus Nighoff, The Hague.

'An Introduction to Music.' By H. E. Piggott. Pp. 164. Dent, 6*s.*

'The Borderland of Music and Psychology.' By Frank Howes. Pp. 244. Kegan Paul; Curwen; 6*s.*

'The Church and School Hymnal.' Pp. 480. Seeley Service, 3*s.* 6*d.*

New Music

ORGAN MUSIC

Organ technique has made such astonishing advances during recent years that one has to be wary in the use of the term 'unplayable.' Yet I think it may be safely applied to Kaikhosru Sorabji's Symphony, just published by Curwen. The work is on an immense scale—a hundred and seven closely packed large oblong pages. As a rule, four staves are used: often the top stave is to be played an octave higher than written, indicated by the Roman numeral I. This saves leger lines, but often presents a confusing effect to the eye. Frequently the parts on the top stave appear to be crossing those of the lower stave, whereas, owing to the aforesaid numeral (easily lost to sight in the maze) they are really above. As the right hand is often playing three intricate parts from these two staves, the player has to do plenty of hard thinking, without the added burden of transposing his top stave. There are three movements, Preludio e Passacaglia, Introductio-Fuga-Coda, and a Finale without title. A prefatory note says that the work is to be played with pauses of not more than five or ten minutes between each movement; also, by reason of its great dimensions, it is intended to be the sole work of any programme.

At least four manuals are necessary, so village organists are warned off. 'Accidentals have no value except for the notes in front of which they stand, with the exception of tied notes and figures obviously of a repetitive nature.' This sounds convenient as theory, but in practice the player is constantly in doubt. Is this or that unusually hideous discord to be placed to the account of the composer or the engraver? We hear much to-day of the tyranny of the bar-line, but when composers dispense with them, or use them very sparingly, all sorts of inconveniences arise. If the music is chromatic, the player has to wrestle with the double handicap of profuse accidentals and doubtful points.

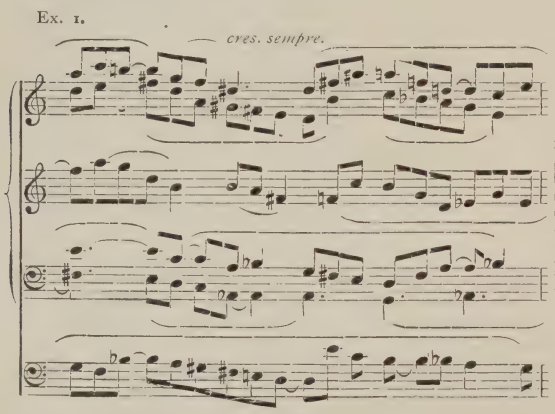
As to the music, I must confess that, as the result of some dour struggles at my pedal pianoforte, I am not persuaded that Mr. Sorabji's astounding ingenuity and industry have been well spent. Complex six-part polyphony, used as it is here for page after page, simply defeats its own ends. Few can play it, and still fewer can take it in.

Here is a sample bar from the Fugue—not the most forbidding that could be found, but one that lends itself fairly well to quotation :

Ex. 1.

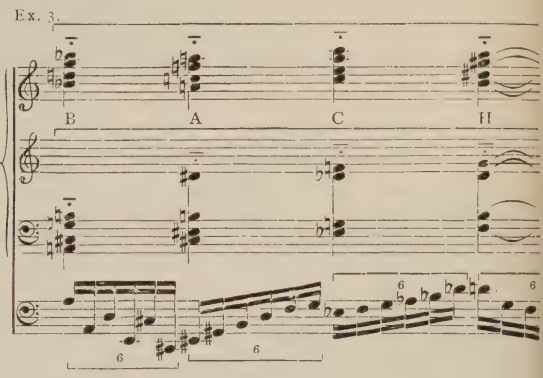


If Master Hugue's counterpoint 'glared like a gorgon,' what does Sorabji's do? Now, imagine pages of the same density, and you will admit that an estimate of the Symphony's possible players as 'few' is optimistic. On page 102 is a passage in eight real moving parts, three for each hand, and two for the feet. Barely negotiable (if at all) are some of the prodigious stretches. For example, the player is confronted with such problems as these tremolando chords :

Ex. 2.

It is not enough to possess a fist capable of dealing with the chords separately and experimentally. The point is, can a player take both handsful (and the pedal part) in his stride? Soon the elbows and forearm will be called on! The style of the Symphony suggests both Schönberg and Reger, the former chiefly in regard to harmony, the latter in a variety of ways. In fact, during my struggles with the work, I found myself murmuring more than once, 'Reger with knobs on.' It is, for example, a very Regerish procedure to begin the fugue pppp; Regerish, too, are the not very interesting imitative hares started from time to time, and the Pelion-upon-Ossa chords; and we are reminded of both Reger and Karg-Elert by the sevenfold delivery of B A C H in thunderous chords, the first few normal, the remainder—however, let the final delivery speak for itself :

Ex. 3.



This quotation is a good example of a constant feature throughout the Symphony—two handsful of notes, each handful satisfactory in itself, but bearing little or no relation to the other. Personally, I find this trick not only exasperating, but, after a little while, as monotonous and conventional as any of the time-honoured progressions for which 'advanced' composers have no use.

The fugue is a tremendous six-voiced specimen, a type of double fugue, worked out remorselessly, with inversions and augmentations, and some stretti so close that the mere sight of them almost induces giddiness. Here is a taste of the closest :

Ex. 4.

I have dealt at some length with the Symphony because, having so often pleaded the cause of the organ as a medium of serious works by contemporary composers, I cannot in fairness take the easy line of ignoring or pooh-pooh-ing this extraordinary effort merely because of its extreme dissonance and its difficulty. I have a fancy that some day Mr. Sorabji will write more simply. If so, let us trust he will not forget the organ. A composer with his unusual mental gifts and contrapuntal skill should find a good outlet in the instrument. But I hope he will be content to write for ordinary players, not for supermen. After all, the average good player can tackle anything of Bach, and he is naturally inclined to point out that if such a giant as John Sebastian can express himself in reasonably negotiable terms, smaller men should not make immensely larger technical demands unless the result is at least equally worth while. This is a reasonable attitude, and much of the failure of modern music is due to its asking too much from both performer and hearer, and giving so little in return.

This complaint cannot be brought against Alec Rowley's 'The Four Winds,' a set of four pieces published separately (Stainer & Bell). Mr. Rowley writes with a facility that is not without its dangers, but he usually gives the player rather more than full value in effect for the modest amount of trouble involved. 'The North Wind' is a toccata-like affair, calling for agile fingers, but the music lies well for the hands. 'The South Wind' is a pleasant little piece that might be called by a dozen other titles—'Song without words,' 'Album Leaf,' or what not. 'The East Wind' is by way of being a Scherzo, with none of the bleakness of that perishing draught. 'The West Wind' is light in style, made up mainly of staccato chords, and evidently intended to suggest the Spring, in accordance with a reference to April and daffodils in the Masefield quotation at the head. Inevitably, perhaps, Mr. Rowley makes use of somewhat conventional formulæ in dealing with the two more violent winds; and he is a little too fond of processions of dominant sevenths, and of harmony based on the whole-tone scale—both types of material already beginning to 'date.' But these pieces, especially the 'East' and 'South' winds, are very attractive, and should be much enjoyed as recital items.

Three pieces by Karg-Elert, 'Sunset,' 'Starlight,' and 'Elegiac Poem,' issued separately (Arthur P. Schmidt & Co.) show the composer still over-working the luscious vein. Such titles as 'Sunset' and 'Starlight' are irresistible temptations to a musician so given to harmonic richness as Karg Elert. The 'Elegiac Poem' opens well, and has some fine moments, but towards the end the successions of ninths and sevenths are cloying. It is to be hoped that we have not yet seen the best of this gifted composer. At present he seems to have got into a groove. Perhaps the discipline involved in the writing of a set of fugues would get him out of it. Certainly the few essays he has given us in that form would justify expectations of a fine result.

J. Stuart Archer's 'Six Short and Easy Pieces' vary in quality, one or two apparently having been written when Mr. Archer was a less good composer than he is to-day. On the other hand there is originality and a capital 'punch' about the 'Sortie.' The set would be useful as teaching material and as voluntaries. Mr. Archer has arranged effectively a pleasant Aria in G, by Tartini. These pieces are published by Paxton's, who send also an Intermezzo in D flat, by H. Crackel—one of the too large progeny of the Andantino in D flat and other early works of Lemare. H. G.

SOME BORWICK TRANSCRIPTIONS

Leonard Borwick was so successful in transcribing L'Après-midi d'un Faune' and other modern works that a set of arrangements from older sources must needs attract attention. Following time-honoured and distinguished precedent he has gone to Bach's organ works for some of his examples. Despite the popular success of such things as the Tausig and Liszt versions of certain of the bigger of Bach's organ works, it may be argued that the music loses much and gains little. The result of the pianist's frantic efforts to achieve by two hands what is designed for two hands and two feet rarely satisfies those who are accustomed to the clarity and continuity obtained on an organ by a good player. After all, nothing can take the place of the organ pedals, and the pianist's frequent repercussion of a long bass note, and his endeavour to obtain a sostenuto by means of the damper pedal, usually lead to a confused welter of sound that would be tolerated in no other circumstances. Borwick's choice of the E flat Prelude was not a good one, because much of this great movement calls for a weight and breadth that only the organ can give. Those who are familiar with its original form have to be constantly supplying deficiencies, and those to whom it is new will gain from a transcription little idea of its majestic scale. The chief justification of such an arrangement is the enjoyment and technical advantage gained by the pianist. The 'short' G minor Fugue comes off better, for obvious reasons. (By the way, there are one or two engraver's errors that should be corrected, for the benefit of pianists who don't know the work. On page 2, bar 8, the E in the right hand should be C sharp; a tie is missing in the right hand of bar 9, page 3; on page 5, bar 1, the ninth semiquaver in the right hand should be F, not D; and in bar 10 of the same page, the seventh semiquaver in the middle voice should be F, not A.) No. 1 of these arrangements is a poor sample of Bach—the early Fugue in G major. While regretting the transcriber's choice, however, one must admit that it is a clever bit of arranging. The brilliant Chorale Prelude on 'Nun freut euch' is also very successful, thanks chiefly to the transcription being rather simpler than the well-known version of Busoni. It makes a capital finger study, and a very lively piece of pianoforte music. The series contains also the 'Wachet auf' Prelude, but a copy was not in the review parcel. Two other transcriptions in the set are a concert arrangement of 'The Harmonious Blacksmith' Variations, and a solo version of the Andante and Variations from Mozart's Duet Sonata in D. The former is, of course, very showy, but many of us will prefer the simple original. The Mozart duet has been very skilfully soloised. All the above come from Augener.

The Oxford Press also sends a Borwick transcription—the Chorale, 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring.' This beautiful movement, now happily familiar in this country since its first inclusion in the Bach Choir's programmes a few years ago, makes its effect chiefly through the flowing 9-8 melody given to the strings, and the entry of the choir from time to time with a strain of the choral. The substitution of the drier tone of the pianoforte, and the absence of the antiphony and contrast, make the transcription fall a long way short of the original. Still, it remains a lovely piece of music. But surely the constantly recurring of the inner part ought to be regarded as , in order to synchronise with the triplets in the melody? There is, of course, no hard and fast rule in the matter. We know that Bach and Handel generally wrote for , but the instances in which the two rhythms are clearly intended to be contrasted are (though few) sufficiently numerous to make dogmatism unsafe. We have to judge by the style of the piece and the effect, and there can be little doubt that in this particular movement the triplet is right. The alternative gives a constant little kick that is quite out of keeping. Why don't editors make up their minds on such points, and courageously alter Bach's notation? There is far too much worship of the letter at the expense of the spirit.

One finishes a survey of these arrangements with a doubt as to whether, after all, such things are worth while. There are stacks of fine pianoforte works waiting to be popularised, and it seems that the chief and only justification for pianoforte transcriptions is either (1) the rescue from oblivion, and making available by means of the most popular of solo instruments, of some neglected works written for other media; or (2) the provision of an arrangement which shall be at least as effective as the original. Judged by this test not many pianoforte transcriptions of Bach would survive, because with few exceptions they miss the grandeur of the original, and show up the deficiencies of the pianoforte. Audiences suffer this gladly, it is true, but mainly because they are dazzled by the technical display and doped by the fame of the virtuoso. H. G.

CHURCH MUSIC

Three of Byrd's Church compositions, with Latin text, have been ably edited by H. B. Collins (Chester). 'Confirma hoc Deus' is an offertory for Whitsunday or for use at Confirmation. It is for S.S.A.T.B., is quite short, and only moderately difficult. An expressive motet, 'Civitas sancti tui,' is suitable for Lent or Passiontide, or for general use. It is for five voices (two tenors, or tenor and baritone). Another Motet, in honour of the Blessed Sacrament, 'O quam suavis,' is a setting for four voices of the antiphon to the Magnificat at First Vespers of Corpus Christi. The writing in this is rather more intricate than in either of the above. All are fine examples of Byrd's work.

Two other works with Latin words are a setting of 'Tantum ergo,' by George Henschel (Augener), and Robert Swaby's Mass in D (Novello; or the composer, Sligo). The former is an effectively-written work for chorus and organ, which shou'd easily find favour. The first verse is set for A.T.T.B.B., the alto and first tenor singing in unison. The second verse is broadly set for four voices—mainly in unison—with massive organ accompaniment. In his setting of the Mass for four voices and organ (ad lib.) Mr. Swaby has been content to write music of a simple, tuneful, and unpretentious character, obviously intended to meet the needs of those whose first demand is for simplicity and directness. In places it suffers from a too obvious squareness of rhythm, and in aiming at simplicity the composer has not always succeeded in avoiding triteness.

Six Hymn Tunes, with Faux-bourdons by Herbert Brewer, are published by Novello. The tunes treated are 'Dominus regit me' (Dykes), 'Alleluia, dulce carmen,' 'Regent Square' (Henry Smart), 'Aurelia' (S. S. Wesley), 'Abridge' (Isaac Smith, 1770), and 'St. Flavian' (from Day's Psalter, 1563). These admirable arrangements are published under one cover.

From Joseph Williams comes Adam Carse's anthem, 'Praise the Lord, O my soul,' composed for the 272nd Festival of the Sons of the Clergy. It is a fairly elaborate setting for four voices and organ, running to eighteen pages. The opening and final choruses contain some flowing imitative writing, as well as some massive chordal work. The middle section is set for semi-chorus, and a semi-chorus is also employed over the chorus in the last movement. The composer writes very effectively for the voices, and the organ part is well laid out. The orchestral score and band parts can be had on hire.

An excellent tune to 'Fight the good fight,' by H. C. Ley, comes from the Year-Book Press. The setting provides for verses in unison and in harmony.

G. G.

CHORAL MUSIC: UNISON

The Oxford University Press sends two songs, of which the better is Harold Rhodes's setting of Herrick's 'To Violets,' that releases a breath of their fragrance, but not the full bouquet. Percy Judd's music to Padraic Colum's 'An Old Woman of the Roads' is rather wandering. This composer does not grip an idea and hold it firmly. He ought to practise concentration—and making his pianoforte parts move more deftly. Both songs need a graceful style.

The cheery philosophy of Leveridge's 'This great world is a trouble' (Novello) will suit youngsters. Its octave jumps provide good practice. The end of the tune is different from, and not so good as, the one I am familiar with, whose last eight notes are:

{:s |l.s :f.m |r :-.d |d :— |— : ‖

Three vocal studies from Mozart make up a good two-pennyworth.

Paterson's issue 'The Bach Song Book' (staff and sol-fa together, 6*d.*; pianoforte edition, 2*s.*). Here are eleven songs, most of them lively, and in unison. One or two have a second part, and three parts can be used in No. 4 (or it may be taken in unison). Some of the tunes lie a trifle low, but none is really growly. The degree of difficulty varies from quite easy to fairly awkward, though the difficulties are never excessive. A most useful little collection.

PART-SONGS FOR CHILDREN'S AND FEMALE VOICES

Van Dieren's two-part songs, 'Good-day, Sire Cristemas' and 'With Margerain gentle,' are interesting and agreeably free from eccentricity. He makes his parts move together too regularly, but his crossings introduce variety. The key-scheme needs to be noted carefully. 'Margerain' is a little more difficult than the Christmas song, though the latter has changing rhythms. The pieces are unaccompanied. From the Oxford University Press, which issues these, come also two three-part songs (S.S.A.). Farjeon's 'Lament' has notes that are easy to sing. Its difficulty lies in the evocation of atmosphere, without the use of words. (It is vocalised on ah.) Harold Rhodes has set the familiar 'Golden slumbers' lines of Dekker, under the title of 'Content.' This is neat work, that gives a good measure of the spirit of the verses. Choirs, especially young ones, will like it none the less because it gives good effect without very much difficulty.

Two Hungarian folk-songs have been arranged by Kodály for S.S.A.A. (Oxford University Press). Both are in dance-mood, with the 'snap' effect we hear, nearer home, in Scots songs, and (in 'See the Gipsy') crush-notes that jump a third. The second sopranos divide for a few bars near the end of 'The Straw Guy.' The part-writing is straightforward. Lively-minded singers can make these songs go with a swing.

MALE-VOICE

Robin Milford's 'Parson Hogg' and 'Rutterkin' are brisk songs for T.B.BAR (or B). They are fairly effective, though the treatment is a little angular, and the first piece is not very well varied. (Oxford University Press.) Bantock's arrangement of 'Lock the door, Lariston,' will please (T.T.B.B.). I sometimes feel that in such pieces the fine old tunes are being—I will not say butchered, because it is all done so slickly and neatly, but paraded in a show, to make a male choir's holiday. A Scot feels a shrinking from such an introduction, for instance, as Bantock throws in here. It is like the crack of the ring-master's whip; indeed, it is perilously near the clown's 'Here we are again.' Perhaps one may be over-tender; but I do like to hear the old tunes in as nearly native simplicity as we cultured folk can abide. Those who like them set off with a whoop will enjoy this arrangement heartily (Paterson). From the same firm comes Hugh Roberton's gentle, hymn-like celebration of the beauty of 'The Old Woman,' dedicated 'to many Margarets.' His 'Miller's Daughter' (for T.T.BAR.B.), to Tennyson's words, is equally simply and squarely harmonized.

MIXED-VOICE

(For S.A.T.B. unless otherwise noted.) Harold Rhodes does not quite make his music to C. Rossetti's 'Come to me in the silence of the night' flow with perfect assurance. There are small felicities, however, that help to atone for a certain stiffness. Most composers who attempt impressive words are stiff, rhythmically. A good deal could be made of this, by a choir able to sing with really velvety tone, rich and cool and fresh. Even the freedom of rhythm in Gerrard Williams's arrangement of the Somerset folk-song, 'As I went out one May morning,' may not suffice to prevent some singers getting square-edged. If they can really make the song flow, its technical difficulty in other respects will not detain them long. Stretches of the writing are in two parts only, but there is good employment for all in turn.

Arthur Benjamin has imagination, but his chords do not always proceed sweetly. One likes a tang in music, but some of his work is not quite convincing because the logic of his progressions does not appear; in other words, they do not always march towards beauty. 'I see His blood upon the rose' has a good deal of attractive power; and one takes the moments of roughness with the smoother pleasures. It is for S.S.A.T.B., with portions for S. and T. soloists. These are short. The above are Oxford songs. From Paterson's we have Bach's 121st Psalm—an extract from the 71st Cantata, 'The Lord will not suffer thy foot to be moved.' A choir of well-controlled voices will find this by no means difficult. A good point is the indication of the orchestration in the accompaniment. The chorus 'Spring comes laughing,' from the same firm's edition of the 'Peasant' Cantata, is issued separately (both staff only). This is a bright little bit of part-writing that any choir will enjoy.

W. R. A.

PIANOFORTE

Some interesting foreign publications come up for notice this month. J. H. Zimmermann (Leipsic-Riga-Berlin) sends Nos. 2 and 3 of Medtner's 'Three Tales.' Sound workmanship, both of thought and of pianoforte lay-out, is the first thing that strikes a listener; and if there is no great strength of imagination and feeling, there are real charm and interest of a quieter kind. The first of the two is a sort of Barcarolle, based on a modal tune, and depending largely on charm of performance. Light, clear technique, is required, and the piece would serve well as an encore number. No. 3 is of larger design, and contains a lot of material which is pretty fully developed, with plenty of interest. There is a regrettable touch of over-facility here and there, noticeable strongly on page 7; but the pieces are well worth attention.

A volume of twenty-four concert Etudes is a large undertaking, and particularly so when manner and matter boldly challenge comparison with established things. Viggo Broderson's 'Konzert-Etuden' (Steingraber) deal so frequently with Chopin's technical points, and the turn of phrase and harmony is so often reminiscent, as to emphasise the fact that this particular want has already been well supplied. The studies are effectively written. No pianist could work on them without benefit to his technique, and the exhilaration of speed and brilliance would make some of them seem more vital than they really are. But so close a repetition of what has been said before inevitably lacks fire. The same indebtedness spoils this composer's 'Tarantelle,' in which similar facility of writing is seen. It is much to be regretted, for a beautiful song of Broderson's, reviewed here some weeks ago, was free from this defect, even if not startlingly original.

Some very good teaching music is being issued by the Oxford University Press, and Colin Taylor's 'Powder and Patches' is a particularly attractive example, showing this style of music at its best level. The Dances, three in number, achieve their charm at a very reasonable outlay in technique; yet they provide enough of difficulty to give interest, and there is ample reward for whatever effort is demanded. Highly interesting, too, are the three numbers of Percy Turnbull's Pianoforte Suite, which show real grip, a terse style, and command of form. Prelude is perhaps the most representative; Pastoral Dance is less true to the composer's individuality, and 'Passepied,' despite the charming neatness of its Coda, and its effective climax, is too frankly an essay in the style of Bach. One notices in 'Pastoral Dance' a tendency to move the bass in octaves with the treble, which is later noticeable in a piece by Frederic Bontoft. This effect, legitimate and perhaps attractive when carried on long enough to seem intentional and gain its end, is sadly weak when it occurs for a single beat and in a manner that looks accidental. There is, however, no denying the quality of Turnbull's work, and these three pieces leave one anxious to see the remaining numbers of the Suite. Good stuff, too, are Markham Lee's 'Three Fancies' (Winthrop Rogers). The music is not, perhaps, highly individual, but it never strains after the sort of originality it does not possess, and the general effect is one of sincere and imaginative musicianship. The three numbers are 'Bell Tower,' 'Gaudeamus,' and 'Here sleeps Titania'; all are of moderate difficulty. Far more pretentious is Tobias Matthay's Ballade in A minor (Oxford University Press), in which rather undistinguished material is very fully worked up. Needless to say, it is well written for the instrument; but the music never rises to any real inensity of imagination, and the plentifully-sprinkled marks of expression and interpretation do not compensate for this lack of vitality. Much below its composer's real level, too, is Granville Bantock's 'La Ballerina,' from Bosworth's. The music is essentially and suitably light, but is altogether without the distinction that one expects from such a source. The same publishers send a pianoforte arrangement of John Foulds's incidental music to 'Henry VIII.,' which shows again how real is the composer's talent for stage music—for writing music, that is to say, that both draws from and also contributes to the feeling of a theatrical situation. The weaknesses of music of this sort generally become apparent as soon as it is seen away from the glamour of its real home, with the full light of attention focussed on it: at the same time, it was never written for close scrutiny, and this is hardly a fair test. The music has moments of beauty, such as occur in 'Queen Katherine's Vision,' and the composer has obviously studied the form and style of the music of the period: there are a good many echoes, sometimes fairly frank imitation, and always, more or less, just what was wanted.

Alec Rowley's two pieces, which come from Edwin Ashdown, are both of them attempts at atmosphere painting, and call for a competent technique. 'The Phantom Ship' is somewhat more ambitious than 'Moonlight at sea,' and perhaps more successful, inasmuch as the music is worked up to a strong climax. But the material itself is not very distinguished or individual in either case, and the composer draws freely upon a kind of harmonic effect that has now become so commonplace as to undermine the strength of any composition that depends on it. The pieces will probably be found effective, however, perhaps as a kind of 'classical' teaching music. More self-critical, and again advanced teaching music, are B. Burrows's 'Studies in Style and Expression' (Augener). Scholarly is hardly too harsh a word for these pieces, with their cleverness, their studious avoidance of all that is banal or vulgar, and their lack of anything vital to say. It is frankly rather difficult to see what purpose they will serve, since those whose technique has reached this point will surely be getting their studies in style and expression in the works of those who have written more largely for the purpose of saying something. The same publishers send three Concert Studies by Sydney Rosenbloom, brilliantly laid out for the instrument, and depending very largely for their effect on qualities of touch and technique. Nos. 1 and 3 are musically the more interesting—the first almost a study on the black keys, the last an example of the quintuplet. The greater rhythmical vitality of the first probably gains it the first place. No. 2, in C, is somewhat below the level of the other two numbers. The shadow of Wagner is heavy upon 'A Cecile des beaux yeux,' by I. L. Pavia, also from Augener's, and the heavy atmosphere, tolerable at first, soon becomes wearisome. Unfortunately, too, the breath of air which one gets in the middle of the piece is far from fresh: it has, in fact, been used up long ago, so that one arrives almost stifled at an ending that is all too redolent of 'Tristan.' In 'Contradanse Styrienne' the texture is again thick; but a somewhat more energetic rhythm partly counteracts the effect, although the heavy lay-out makes it difficult for the pianist to make the most of this relief. Both of the pieces are difficult. Lighter both in style and in texture is Archy Rosenthal's 'Minuet-Idyl,' from the same house. The piece has no pretensions, and its graceful and lyrical tunefulness give it a certain charm.

W. H. Speer's Caprice, published by Ascherberg, Hopwood, & Crewe, in their 'Répertoire' series, is a sound, neatly-written piece of music, with a middle section that is well below the general level. It is perhaps somewhat conventional and facile in style, but it is unaffected; and if a man has not his own manner of speech, he may as well have one that is fifty years, as one that is five or five hundred years, out of date. The modal manner is now more or less a current way of speech in England, and cannot still be regarded as a personal style of those who have popularised it: all the same, it is bound to seem a little affected when it appears in so concentrated a form as it does in Robin Milford's 'My lady's pleasure' (Forsyth). The three dances have many weaknesses, yet all have a sort of freshness that appeals, and here and there, as in the Coda of No. 3, there are moments of real poetry which seem to give the listener a glimpse of the composer's true self. These moments make one regret all the more the gaucheries that detract from the value of the pieces as a whole. Frederick Bontoft's 'Lament,' from the same publishers, is much firmer in handling and style, and the clear outlines of its form are welcome. It gives the impression of having been written for strings, and some passages look as if they would sound better in that medium: but the pianoforte writing is effective, if a little heavy, and the 'Lament' a thoroughly sincere piece of work.

Easthope Martin is not seen at his best in 'Souvenirs,' a set of four pieces published by Enoch, and one cannot help wondering whether compositions of his are now being issued which he himself would not have wished to publish. 'Tema Ostinato' starts well, but the theme is not treated with great variety or imagination, and its rather cheap rhythm becomes wearisome; the harmonic developments, moreover, are not strong enough to support one's flagging interest, once the theme has begun to irritate. 'An Old-time Tune,' with its simplicity and naturalness, is better stuff, and probably the most successful number in the set—for 'Valse Cortège' and 'Petite Afrique,' which are more ambitious, are little distinguished. The same publisher sends Chaminade's Op. 165, a Nocturne which has the superficial charm that this composer generally achieves, but little that is of more lasting value.

George Tootell's 'Manx Scenes' (Paxton) seem to be a sort of poor relation first of Edward MacDowell ('Crag and Sea,' 'At the Trysting-place'), and later of Edward German ('At a Manx Wedding'). In neither case has the derivative the distinction of the original; but the music shows considerable skill an effectiveness when it is not pretentious, as it is in 'Crag and Sea.' Paxton's also publish R. H. Walthew's 'Danse Polonaise.'

It is difficult for the outsider to see why Arnold Capleton's 'Three Meditations for Spiritualists' are so entitled; and it is probable that the music would have had a better chance if it had been left to speak for itself, for the expression of definite philosophical or intellectual ideas in music is a notoriously difficult matter. Extreme seriousmindedness and even intensity appear, and the composer works up good climaxes; but there is not the consistent growth which alone makes a successful whole of a piece of music. No. 2, which has more unity than the other meditations, is probably the most successful, though No. 3 contains the best material. The composer makes his music difficult, and writes for pianists with an unusually large stretch of hand. The compositions may be obtained from him at Palacky Street 31, Prague XVI., Czechoslovakia.

T. A.

EASY PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

Teachers will find much excellent material in the Oxford Pianoforte Series (Oxford University Press), edited by A. Forbes Milne. The music is well got up, and all the pieces are graded. Some recent additions, ranging from elementary to advanced grade, are briefly noticed. Percival Driver's 'Three Pieces' (elementary) are capital essays in two-part writing, and are excellent for phrasing and part-playing. Five attractive little pieces by Arthur Baynon, under the title 'Wayside Pictures'—Set 1 (elementary-lower) are well varied. No. 2 is a quick two-part study in finger staccato. Cantabile touch (No. 4) and pedalling—including half-pedalling—are also called for (Nos. 3 and 5). Similarly graded are 'Five Lyrics,' by H. Clark. They are well written, and include a neat 'Two-Part Invention.' A 'Miniature Suite' (lower to higher), by Ralph Greaves, consists of a Prelude, Allegretto vivace, Minuet, and Allegro scherzando. The left hand has plenty to do throughout, and skilful fingering is frequently required where two or more parts come under the same hand. Gordon Slater's Bourrée in A (higher) makes an admirable study in two-part playing. The composer has devised an effective little canon for the middle section. A Bourrée and Gigue (higher to intermediate), by Percy Turnbull, are from a pianoforte suite, and are now issued separately. There is some awkward work for the left hand in the Bourrée, and spirited playing is called for in the Gigue. Both pieces are cleverly and effectively written, and should appeal to competent players. Two numbers from this series of outstanding merit are 'Traditional Scottish Tunes' (higher to intermediate) and 'Four Traditional Tunes' (intermediate), by Gerrard Williams. The Scottish tunes treated are 'Green grow the rushes, oh,' 'My faithful fond one,' and 'Kate Dalrymple.' The four traditional tunes are 'Fairest Jenny,' 'The Bath Medley' (quick, continuous running movement, with both hands in the upper part of the keyboard throughout), 'The sheep under the snow,' and 'The fit comes on me now' (a lively vivace in $\frac{6}{8}$ time). The composer has shown much skill and resource in his treatment of these tunes, and both sets should prove decidedly attractive and useful. Norman F. Demuth's 'Rigaudon' (intermediate) is a short, brightly-written work, requiring skill in handling double notes at a quick pace. The same composer's 'Rêverie' (advanced) presents some rhythmic problems, and calls for imagination on the part of the player. The last of this series is a showy 'Capriccietto' (advanced), by Colin Taylor. It needs to be touched off with fluency and neatness.

'Twenty Little Preludes,' by A. Longo (Augener), may be recommended. They are intended to prepare the young player for the Two-part Inventions of Bach, and are admirably devised for this purpose. Elsie Horne's 'Three Sketches' (Murdoch) provide pleasant recreation for pupils of about 'lower division' standard. They comprise a brightly-written Gavotte, a Rêverie, and a graceful Valsette. Nine little pieces under the title 'Once upon a Time,' by Madeleine Evans (Joseph Williams), are well written, and would suit pupils of elementary grade. Of about the same standard are Thomas F. Dunhill's graceful little Minuet from 'A Tiny Suite,' now issued separately, and Herbert Dennison's miniature Suite, 'Sea Fancies.' The same publishers also send Graham Clarke's six miniature sketches—suitable for beginners—entitled, 'Here, There, and Everywhere.' G. G.

CHAMBER MUSIC

Augener's have added Mozart's Quartet in D minor (K. 421) to their next collection of string quartets. The fingering has been supplied by 'F.' David—possibly Ferdinand, whose authority is beyond question. What may be questioned is the excessive zeal which causes editors to finger also that which is pretty obvious. The new publication should be popular, for the Quartet is one most amateurs, and not a few professionals, cherish above all others.

B. V.

VIOLIN

The new music for violin published in the last few weeks includes one arrangement and one or two original compositions of unusual interest. The arrangement is Chopin's Valse in E minor, by Ysaye, published by Ant. Ysaye, of Brussels. If the celebrated violinist means this to be the first of a series we shall be grateful to him, for, especially in the old music of Rode or Nardini, his readings have never been surpassed. And, perhaps, students and amateurs would have an even warmer welcome for those old concerti. Chopin, when all is said that can be said, must remain the speciality of the pianist. It is not that he is musically uninteresting to the string player; yet his compositions, however well they may sound on the violin or in an orchestral arrangements, will sound even better on the pianoforte. A violinist of Ysaye's genius may almost convince us to the contrary. But men like Casals, Ysaye, and Kreisler, are the exception. To them everything is possible. The rank and file (and also N.C.O.'s of the profession) will always prefer music which is more in the genius of their instrument. The Chopin-Ysaye arrangement is good, but hardly tempting to a performer who has not reached the highest pinnacle.

Two candenzas for the concertos of Viotti (No. 22, A minor) and Paganini, by Julius Winkler (Döblinger, Vienna), are not likely to arouse much enthusiasm. In the first place the day of the cadenza has gone. The merit of the modern cadenza is in inverse ratio to its length. The longer it is the less we like it. Winkler would seem to have forgotten that the public of to-day has little patience to spare for the display of mere virtuosity. A staccato scale of five octaves will prove the violinist's special gifts in the staccato line, but it may also prove him a bore. Moreover, Winkler's review of the themes is somewhat formal and uninspired. The themes of the Concerto of Paganini have little to commend them; they gain nothing by repetition. And perhaps the sad truth is that the cadenza, like other forms of musical composition, has a real value only when it is an expression of individuality. The cadenza in Elgar's Concerto is not only justified but admirable, since it presents the themes in a new light. Mere glare of fireworks tires the eye, and does not hide the fact that we are re-introduced to the same old, drab friends we met before.

Under the title, 'The Frankland Violin Tutor,' John Mertens, of the Brussels and Paris Conservatoires (Frankland, London), issues in readable forms instructions aud exercises for beginners. The object of this new method is to awaken the interest of the student and keep it alive, and we should think that the object has been largely attained by the judicious mixture of tunes and exercises, medicine and toffee. We should like, however, to suggest the advisability of giving the student as few 'points to remember' as possible. Having said, for instance, that violin, bow, and case must be kept clean, is it necessary to explain that the finger-board must be kept free from resin? 'Always try to get tone, not noise,' suggests the existence of a class of players whose object is to get noise, not tone. Of course there is no harm in saying a good thing twice; but the greater the number of 'points' the greater will be the difficulty experienced in remembering them all. At the end of the book 'God save the King' is given in an arrangement for four fiddles, which includes the drum roll and drum crash. Is it worth while introducing the student to onomatopœia so early? The drum crash comes under the category of noises —certainly not of 'tone.'

Five compositions for violin and pianoforte accompaniment, by Ottorino Respighi (Schmidl, Trieste), deserve the praise due to music which achieves a certain amount of distinction without falling into extravagance. Slight as these pieces necessarily are, they show quite clearly the deft hand of a composer of taste and individual outlook determined to strike a middle course between conservatism and futurism. Even technically they provide just enough stimulus to interest, but nothing to alarm even violinists of but fair abilities. The same publisher issues six pieces by P. A. Tirindelli, for beginners, all being limited to the first position. Their musical interest is neither more nor less than can be expected, in view of the limitations the composer has set himself. If beginners must have their little pieces, there will always be composers ready to 'oblige.' I confess, however, that I do not see the expediency of making the first steps too pleasant. He who undertakes to learn the violin ought to be prepared for a certain amount of drudgery, and face it like a man. B. V.

'CELLO MUSIC

'Drei kleine Fantasiestücke' on Hungarian melodies, by Franz Schmidt (Döblinger), are pleasant enough music which has nothing in common with the Hungarian idioms of Bartók. And this may be the most natural thing in the world, for the work may have been written in 1892. This is the date the publishers append to the composer's name. We are not told, however, whether it represents the year of composition or of birth or of death. Only fairly advanced players could do justice to these Fantasiestücke. Well played, however, they should be effective with a popular audience. B. V.

FOLK-DANCES FOR BRASS BAND

In view of the increasing number of occasions on which brass or military band arrangements of folk-dances are required, the issue of some Country Dance Tunes from the Cecil Sharp collection, arranged by Gordon Jacob (Novello), is opportune. The Dances are in three sets of four—'The Butterfly,' 'Galopede,' 'Haste to the Wedding,' and 'Nancy's Fancy'; 'Gathering Peascods,' 'Rufty, Tufty,' 'Hey Boys,' and 'The Black Nag'; and 'If all the World were Paper,' 'The Old Mole,' 'Sellenger's Round,' and 'The Mary and Dorothy.' The arrangements are straightforward presentments, and so are suitable for accompanying the dances, or for playing as a suite. A park or seaside crowd that would not delight in these jolly tunes must be past praying for.

SCORES

The Oxford University Press has added several numbers to the series of Bach Cantata Sinfonias edited by Dr. Whittaker—those attached to 'Weinen, Klagen, Sorgen, Zagen,' 'Ich hatte viel Bekümmernis, 'Ich steh' mit einem Fuss im Grabe' (these three are issued under one cover), 'Die Himmel erzahlen die ehre Gottes,' and the Prelude to the secular Cantata 'Non sa che sia dolore.' The Sinfonia to 'Die Himmel erzahlen die ehre Gottes' is already familiar to organists in Bach's own arrangement thereof as the first movement of the E minor Trio-Sonata.

A miniature score of Egon Kornauth's String Quintet, Op. 30, appears in the Philharmonic series, embellished by a portrait of the composer, and a most elaborate analysis in English, French, and German.

Dollinger, Leipsic, send miniature scores of the some composer's 'Kleine Abendmusik' for string quartet, Op. 14, and his 'Kammermusik' for flute, oboe, clarinet, horn, and string quartet, Op. 31.

A vocal score of Vaughan Williams's Pastoral Episode, 'The Shepherds of the Delectable Mountains,' comes from the Oxford University Press. This shows the Vaughan Williams of the 'Mystical Songs' —a piece of work so intimate and delicate that one almost fears it might be spoilt by stage performance. It seems, however, to have come well through the ordeal a few weeks ago. A pianoforte reduction does less justice than usual to a slender score that clearly depends much on instrumental colour. A German version of the text is added. H. G.

SOME IMPRESSIONS OF MUSIC IN THE DOMINIONS

By E. T. Sweeting

An examining tour for the Associated Board through some of the British Dominions and Colonies, during the past year, has enabled me to gain some knowledge of the general musical conditions that prevail, their present standard of development, and their promise for the future.

Beyond my official work, of which I shall naturally say nothing, I had a variety of musical experiences, and the Editor of the Musical Times has invited me to give an account of them.

I must confine myself almost entirely to Canada and Australia, and even then can be only very scrappy and inadequate, for their size is so vast and bewildering. Though I crossed both Continents from east to west, I saw merely a fraction of them, and that mostly in the bigger cities and towns.

But spending, as I did, five months in Australia, I got at all events a more just impression of the country than the passengers, mostly Americans, of the luxurious touring Cunarder, the 'Corinthia.' They saw Sydney in a day, and allotted only nine for their whole visit to Australia. A helter-skelter rush!

I should like to make passing mention of Malta, a place rich in prehistoric and historic associations. When I was working at Valetta in February the opera season was in progress, and performances were well patronised by both British and Maltese. Tuesday night was always gay with naval and military uniforms; on Thursday the bulk of the audience consisted of Maltese family parties.

The standard of performance varied considerably. In a modern work, such as 'La Tosca,' the company was alive and convincing, but the square-cut tunes of an old stock opera, such as 'I Puritani,' reduced the principals to extreme conventionality, and the chorus to puppet-like movement and stodgy singing. As a humorous entertainment, however, it had points. Except that it was occasionally too strenuous, the orchestral playing was efficient, and the general level of the singing was commendable; sometimes it was very good. At Sliema I was invited to hear a ladies' choir, conducted by a keen amateur, Captain John Salomoné; the girls had beautiful, fresh, and full voices, and a buoyant and emotional style of singing.

From Malta I returned to England, and shortly after set out for Jamaica. On the voyage we scratched up enough talent to give a passable concert, and I regretted then, and on succeeding voyages, that I had not brought with me a number of books for community singing. Much is done for the entertainment of passengers on shipboard, but there is room for an occasional sing-song, and I feel that it would be appreciated. I commend the idea to any enterprising music publisher, or to enlightened directors of a shipping company. A weird music library is often to be found in the neighbourhood of the pianoforte, and the addition of a number of books for community singing would not cost more than a few pounds.

I must hurriedly pass on to Canada, where I stayed some time in three of the big cities, Montreal, Calgary, and Vancouver, and also visited sundry smaller towns on the prairies and west of the Rockies.

To give an idea of the high level of choral singing in certain parts of Canada, I should place very prominently a concert I heard in Knox Presbyterian Church at Calgary. All the performers were prize-winners at the Lethbridge competition, which had just been held. I have forgotten the name of the conductor, but I remember that he came from Blackpool, where he had very evidently learned a good deal about choral technique. The quality of the voices, control, and balance were alike excellent, the only noticeable fault being an occasional lack of flexibility, most pronounced in the singing of an English madrigal. The ladies of the choir gave a particularly refined and tasteful performance of Schubert's setting of 'The Lord is my Shepherd.' In addition to the choir of adults, one of school-children, boys and girls, sang a two-part song, under the conductorship of their teacher, Miss Ramsay, an admirable trainer. Having heard, on previous occasions, hard, ugly tone from Canadian boy singers, I was quite unprepared for the dainty and delicate singing of these youngsters, and as the part-song happened to be one of my own, the pleasant surprise was all the more gratifying.

Solo prize-winners, generally young pianists, also had a show at the concert. The standard was always commendable, and here I first noticed a practice that obtains also in Australia: the encore is inevitable, and if the performer is a girl, no matter how youthful, a bouquet is as inevitably presented. The custom has become a harmless convention, merely indicating that friends of the performer are present. It is like the Caucus race in 'Alice in Wonderland'—'all have won, and all receive prizes.' The public quotation, by the chairman, of laudatory remarks of the festival judges, omitting any possible criticisms, was, with the junior performers, not so harmless; heads seemed to grow larger, and the small pianists more self-conscious.

I heard a number of organs and church choirs. Usually the upper parts are taken by women, sometimes—as at Montreal Cathedral, and a church at Vancouver at which Mr. Chubb is organist—with noticeably good effect, anthems especially being well sung. At Calgary Cathedral I found an adequate choir with boys, the only one, I believe, in Alberta and Saskatchewan. I went one evening to hear Mr. Hughes, the organist, take a boys' practice. Canadian boys are lively and independent, very unlike the tepid chorister of romance; but, properly handled, they are keen and loyal, and the Calgary choirboys were proud of their unique position.

Organ-playing varied considerably. It is never grateful to find fault, and criticism is sometimes resented, but if some Canadian organists care to take a hint from one who has played the organ all his life, they will leave extemporisation alone, or do it much better, and give more frequent holidays to an over-worked tremulant. At one church I visited, after the concluding hymn, 'O God, our help in ages past,' had been heartily sung, as most hymns were, the organist improved the occasion by continuing with the tune 'St. Ann's,' at a much slower pace, on soft flue stops, with tremulant added, for an out voluntary!

But if taste is sometimes weak, there is much keenness to learn an instrument. Teachers often visit two or three of the smaller prairie towns, and, with an infrequent and often inconvenient train service, lessons are given at what appear to be impossible hours. Walking through one of the towns with a violin teacher, he greeted a strapping farmer, just stepping out of his Ford car, and told me, as we passed on, that the farmer drove in twelve miles, winter and summer, from an outlying farm, for weekly violin lessons, which could be given only at 10.30 p.m. He was immediately preceded by a boy of ten, who rode in nine miles on his pony, also to get lessons. Both were striking instances of grit and enthusiasm, and I heard of several others. Wireless and the gramophone seem to have stimulated, rather than checked, a feeling for self-expression.

Leaving Calgary, there was the impressive journey through the Rockies, which abler pens than mine have often described. After a fortnight at Vancouver, the Pacific voyage gave a much-appreciated rest from examinations, Honolulu and Suva conveniently breaking the monotony of a long sea passage.

At Honolulu, as we came alongside the wharf, early on a divine summer morning, a band greeted us with the sentimental strains of the Hawaiian Love-Song; and leaving Suva, a band of native Fijians, picturesque with masses of frizzy hair—almost as big as a Guard's busby—gave us a rousing send off; the familiar and inevitable tune of 'Auld lang syne' coming more and more faintly across the water. At both Honolulu and Suva cameras were very busy.

At Sydney, I visited the Conservatorium, and had a chat with Mr. Orchard, the director. Skill has been shown in adapting the building to its present requirements; it has a fair number of teaching and lecture rooms, and a good concert hall. No chance came of hearing a students' concert, as I was soon scheduled to proceed to Perth, a five days' train journey across Australia, much more varied and attractive than I expected to find it, although it included the dreary stretch across the Nullarbor

Plain: in one section the track runs dead straight for 330 miles.

But much of the country was kindly in appearance; Melbourne and Adelaide lay on the route, and I got a glimpse of the mines at Kalgoorlie, and the dead township of Coolgardie. Perth, a busy, and rapidly growing city, possesses a noble park overlooking the river, much of it left as natural bush. Unfamiliar, and sometimes quaint, wild flowers, such as the kangaroo paw, grow freely, and a curving avenue of young oaks in the park, each tree identified with a fallen soldier, is a striking and beautiful war memorial, and one that could not possibly be criticised adversely.

There is much musical activity at Perth, and a Music Teachers' Association, under the presidency of Mr. A. J. Leckie, an excellent musician, helps to develop high ideals, and raise the standard of work. I had the privilege of addressing the Association on one evening, and on another was present at a reception given by the Association to two American singers, Messrs. Althouse and Middleton, when a programme of home-made music was presented. Among other items, I was glad to hear a capital male-voice quartet, and especially glad to find Beale's 'Come, let us join the roundelay' included in the répertoire, and to hear it sung with appropriate freedom and exuberance. Mr. Althouse was sitting by me during its performance, and remarked at the end, referring to the alto, 'That man was singing on his false cords the whole time': the falsetto voice was, I suppose, a complete novelty to him. Orchestral music at Perth is in its infancy, nor is chamber music possible, for there is no adequate resident 'cellist. Such a player would be welcomed; but, at first, pupils for his own special instrument would be limited, and it would be absolutely necessary for him to be capable of other musical work.

After a stay of six weeks, I left Perth with regret, and returned to Melbourne, which shares with Sydney the honour of being the most important of Australian cities.

The Cathedral choir and its able and sympathetic director, Dr. Floyd, deserve more than passing mention. The singing was most satisfying, bright in tone, well-balanced, and noticeably clean and prompt in attack. Careful, finished singing was not confined to service setting or anthem; all was worth doing well. At a week-day service I heard a model performance of Byrd's anthem, 'Sing joyfully,' and I was shown a first-rate programme of unaccompanied choral music given at the Cathedral in November, 1923, to mark the Tercentenary of Byrd and Weelkes. Dr. Floyd gives regular and much-appreciated organ recitals, and draws many items of his programmes from the works of modern organ composers, and orchestral arrangements, such as the slow movements from the Symphonies of Haydn, find a place. Dr. Floyd knows his audiences better than I do, but I think they would, in the end, be grateful for more Bach.

British music is not overlooked at Melbourne. A centre of the British Music Society was founded some years ago by Mrs. James Dyer, who contributes generously to its support; a library of British music is available to members, and periodic concerts are given. I was present at one chamber concert, and wish I could speak more enthusiastically of the playing of the string quartet, but, truth to tell, it did not justify the subsidy, and the programme generally struck me as being advanced for an audience that was to be wooed and won.

As in other Australian cities, community singing flourishes, but it was only at Melbourne that I got a chance of hearing it. I found a packed and enthusiastic house, and a conductor who handled his forces well, and kept them alert and in good temper. The selection of songs was not of the happiest; possibly I did not happen to hit off a typical meeting. But our splendid collection of National- and Folk-Songs gives the committee a wide choice, and the singing would have been equally popular and more effective with something stronger and more sturdy than songs such as 'Home, sweet home' and 'Annie Laurie,' and a singularly weak hymn-tune. For variety and relief, the chorus singing was interspersed with solos, both vocal and instrumental.

A very pleasant reminiscence of Melbourne life is the domestic music heard at the house of Mr. E. H. Prockter—refined and and cultured playing of pianoforte trios by Mrs. Prockter and her two clever daughters. Other memories are of walks in the luxuriant Botanical Gardens, and of a day at an inter-state cricket match, when I realised the heights to which Australian barracking can rise!

My itinerary included a visit to Tasmania, a place of great natural and varied beauty; temperate in climate, and with physical features often suggesting bits of Britain. Apple bloom of Devonshire, patches of gorse like a Surrey common, Sussex hangers, Cornish coast scenery, hawthorn hedges, rolling country, or rugged mountainous districts, would all be passed in a day's train or car journey, and, as I was seeing the spring for the eighth time in the course of the year, the fresh green of many introduced English trees was pleasing to the eye, after the perpetual grey-green of the gums.

At Launceston I had the pleasure of meeting Mr. George Hopkins, son of old J. L. Hopkins of Rochester, and organist of one of the Launceston churches, for which he is building, single-handed and gratuitously, a large organ. Metal pipes are imported, and possibly some of the smaller-scale wooden pipes but all the action and large wooden pipes have been made by Mr. Hopkins himself, in a workshop in the basement of his house, with the assistance only of a joiner. The organ is, as yet, far from complete; as money is subscribed a few more stops are added. The action is highly finished and reliable, and the tonal scheme, so far as it goes, commendable. I tried the organ. At present it is rigged up with a temporary console (it has done duty for eight years), and the labelling of some of the stops is disconcerting, as the original names have been retained, regardless of the present use of the stop. Mr. Hopkins knows his way amongst them, but a stranger, who pulls out a stop labelled, say, Swell to Great, and discovers that it is really a pedal reed, is apt to get confused. The boldness of conception and steadiness of application necessary to carry through such a one-man job seemed to me very exceptional, and I wished Mr. Hopkins all success.

Leaving Melbourne a second time, and working towards Adelaide, I was for a fortnight in country districts, and at Mount Gambier found myself in the middle of a competition festival, musical and elocutionary. The net was spread very wide: there were competitions of the usual type for choirs and vocal quartets, and for soloists, both instrumental and vocal. In addition, one found unexpected items; provision being made for brass bands, drum and fife bands, quartets and solos for brass instruments,

(Continued on page 629.)

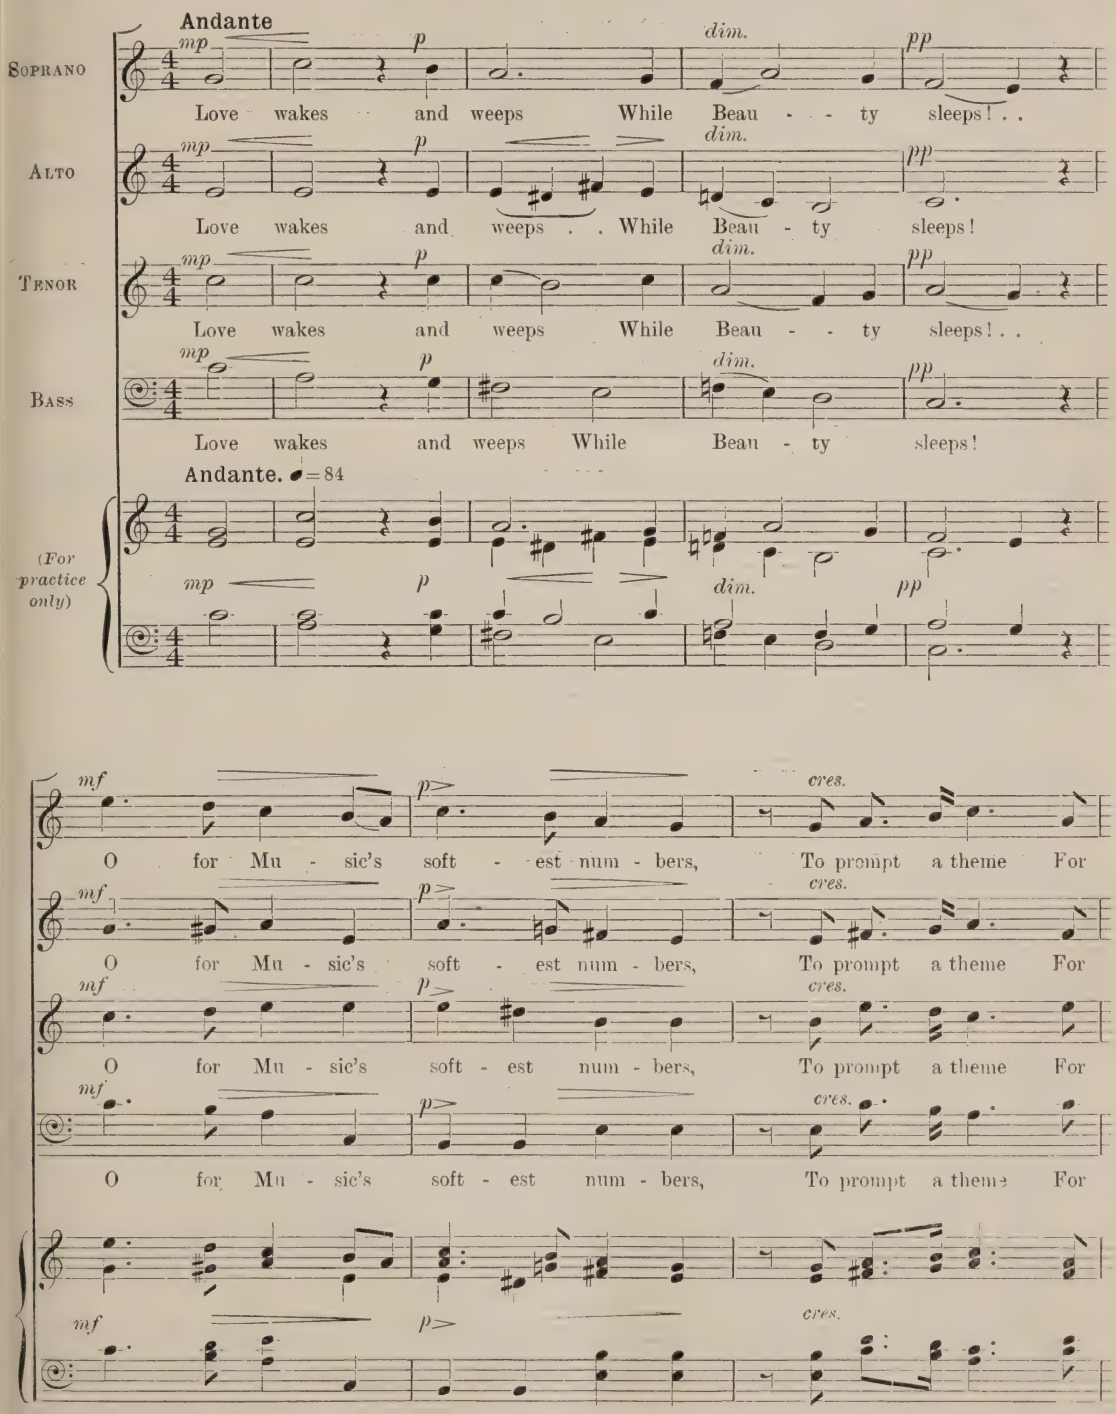
Love Wakes

FOUR-PART SONG

Words by Sir Walter Scott

Music by C. H. H. Parry

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited; New York: THE H. W. GRAY CO., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



Andante
Soprano
Alto
Tenor
Bass
Love wakes and weeps While Beau - - ty sleeps! . .
Love wakes and weeps . . While Beau - ty sleeps!
Andante. ♩ = 84
(For practice only)
O for Mu - sic's soft - est num - bers, To prompt a theme For

Copyright, 1926, by Novello and Company, Limited

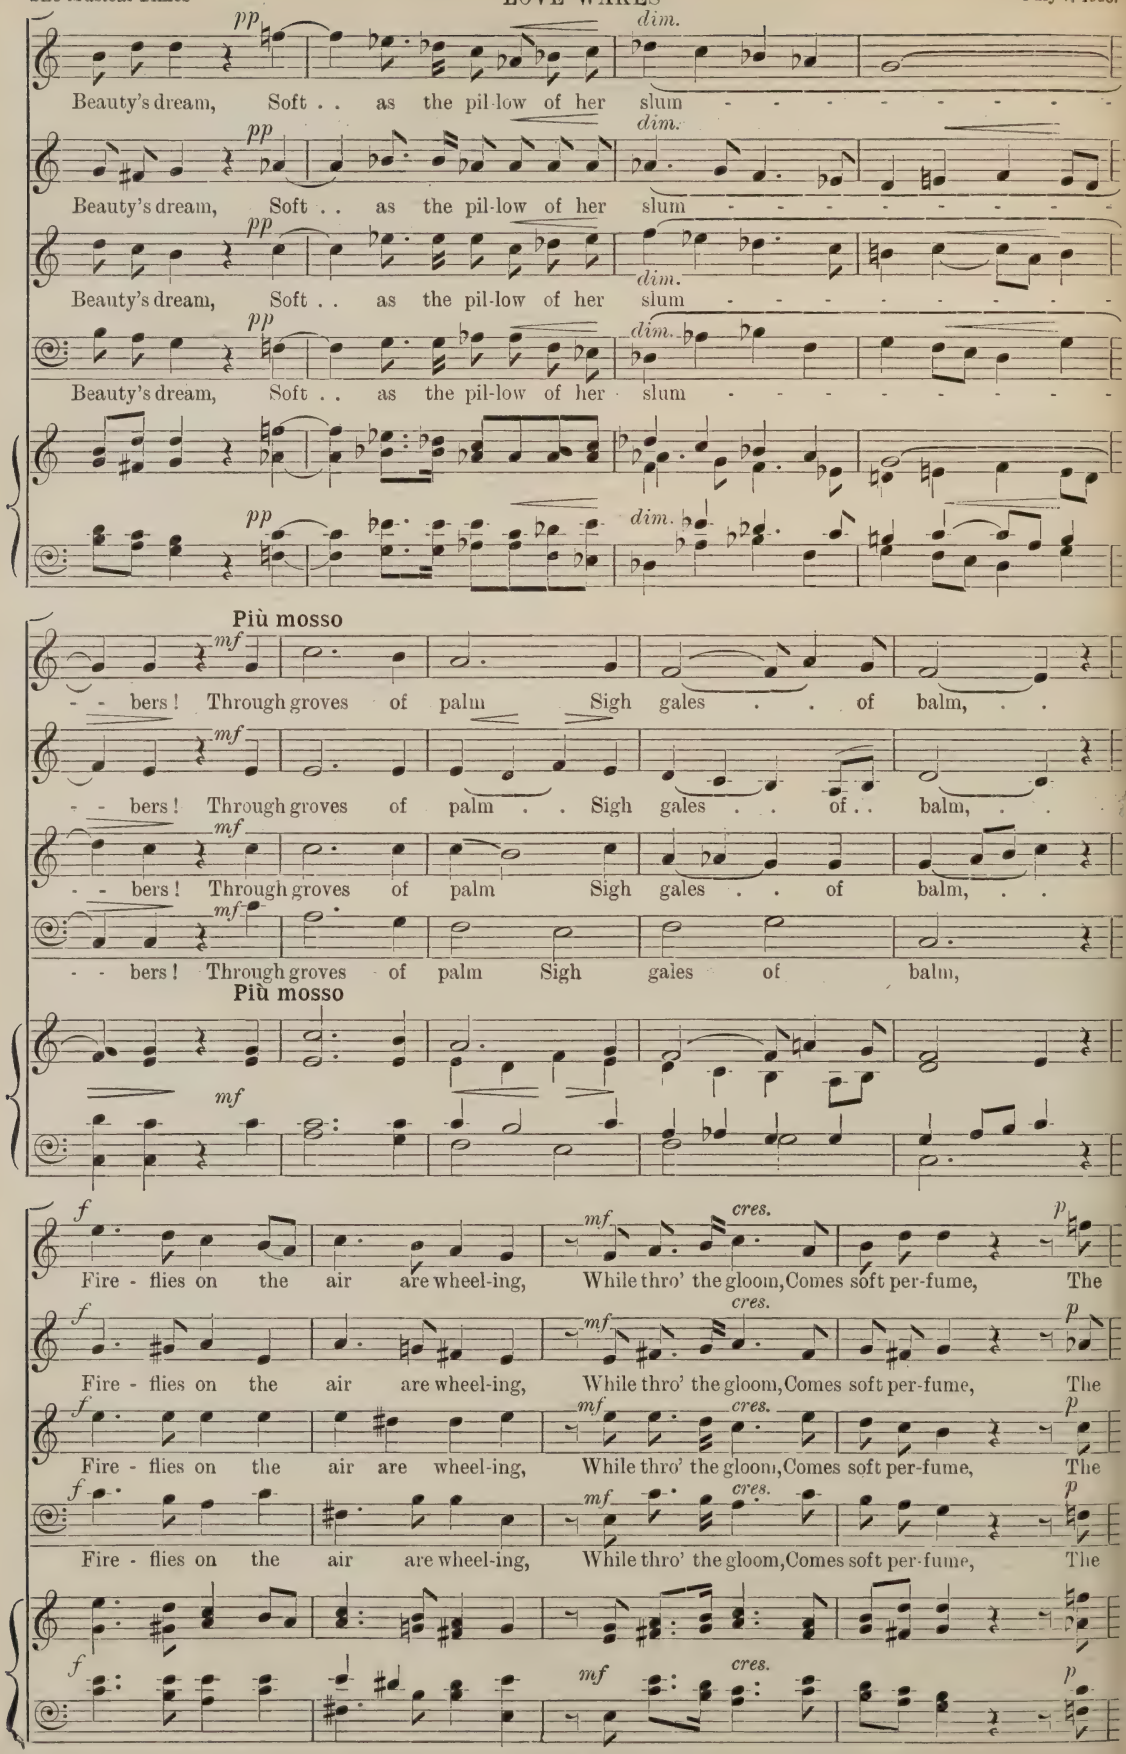
Originally published for Men's Voices (A.T.B.B.) in The Orpheus, No. 484



pp
dim.
Beauty's dream, Soft . . as the pil-low of her slum - - - - - - - - -
Beauty's dream, Soft . . as the pil-low of her slum - - - - - - - - -
Beauty's dream, Soft . . as the pil-low of her slum - - - - - - - - -
Più mosso
mf
- - bers! Through groves of palm Sigh gales . . of balm, . .
- - bers! Through groves of palm . . Sigh gales . . of . . balm, . .
- - bers! Through groves of palm Sigh gales . . of balm, . .
- - bers! Through groves of palm Sigh gales of balm, Più mosso
f mf
cres.
p
Fire - flies on the air are wheel-ing, While thro' the gloom, Comes soft per-fume, The Fire - flies on the air are wheel-ing, While thro' the gloom, Comes soft per-fume, The Fire - flies on the air are wheel-ing, While thro' the gloom, Comes soft per-fume, The Fire - flies on the air are wheel-ing, While thro' the gloom, Comes soft per-fume, The dim.

Più mosso
f dis - tant beds of flow'rs re - veal - - - - - - - - - ing. O wake and dis - tant beds of flow'rs re - veal - - - - - - - - - ing. O wake and dis - tant beds of flow'rs re - veal - - - - - - - - - ing. O wake and dis - tant beds of flow'rs re - veal - - - - - - - - - ing. O wake and Più mosso
dim.
f live! No dream can give . . A shad - owed bliss, the real ex - cel - ling; live! . . No dream . . can give . . . A shad - owed bliss, the real ex - cel - ling;
live! . . No dream can give . . A shad - owed bliss, the real ex - cel - ling; live! No dream can give A shad - owed bliss, the real ex - cel - ling;

mf cres.
p
Meno mosso
No long - er sleep, From lat - tice peep, And list the tale that Love is mf cres.
p
No long - er sleep, From lat - tice peep, And list the tale that Love is mf cres.
p
No long - er sleep, From lat - tice peep, And list the tale that Love is mf cres.
p
No long - er sleep, From lat - tice peep, And list the tale that Love is Meno mosso
mf cres.
p
pp ten.
pp
tell - ing, list . . the tale that Love . . is tell - - ing!
p
ten.
pp
tell - ing, list . . the tale that Love . . is . . tell - - ing!
pp
ten.
pp
tell - ing, list . . the tale that Love . . is tell - - ing!
pp
ten.
pp
tell - ing, list . . the tale that Love is tell - - ing!
pp
ten.
p
pp
ten.
pp

(Continued from page 624.)

bagpipe solos, and humorous songs. Budding dancers could enter for a sword dance, Highland fling, Irish jig, or sailor's hornpipe. Naturally a high degree of efficiency, or the inclusion of really difficult test-pieces, could not be expected, but I heard some creditable vocal solos, too often very poorly accompanied, and performances by a choir and male-voice quartet that were more than creditable. Brass instruments I sampled in the competition for euphonium solo, hearing some agile gambolling. I was sorry to miss the choir of school children, but heard from the adjudicator that they had done well. We all got much enjoyment and entertainment from a five minutes' impromptu speech, given by a young bachelor, who was instructed on his appearance on the platform to discourse on babies. One could hardly expect him to be eloquent or convincing, and, being gravelled for lack of matter, he conveniently slid off at a tangent to child welfare and education, and convulsed a house, already rocking with laughter, by the statement that the doctors were continually trying to improve the death rate among babies. He was still trying to find the right word when the five minutes came to an end.

When I arrived at Adelaide the hot weather was beginning, and concerts were coming to an end. Towards Christmas there were several performances of 'The Messiah' by different choral societies, but I missed them all, leaving Adelaide before that given by the Elder Conservatorium choir, under the conductorship of Dr. Harold Davies. But I heard one striking Conservatorium performance—the first Act of 'The Magic Flute' and Purcell's 'Dido and Æneas,' produced by Mr. Clive Carey. For the highly successful result, credit is due to Mr. Carey alone; he started from zero, taught the students stage deportment and gesture, trained the chorus and principals, and conducted the two performances of the opera himself, having a double cast for most of the characters. Considering that all were new to their work, it would be difficult to praise the production too highly; the young actors, as a rule, moved easily and gracefully, and the chorus sang freshly and intelligently. Of the principals, I was most impressed by Papageno in the one opera, and a sympathetic Dido and a manly young woman as Æneas in the other. A feeling of youth and enthusiasm pervaded the whole performance, and even beyond it, for, making my way on to the stage at the end, I found Mr. Carey surrounded by Dido and her Court, who were singing 'For he's a jolly good fellow'!

There is a good deal of musical enterprise at Adelaide. At Unley, one of the suburbs, I heard a newly-formed and promising orchestral society, conducted by Mr. Sellick; at present the violins are much the best feature of the orchestra. I heard, too, at Adelaide Town Hall, a concert given by a male-voice choir, which calls itself the Adelaide Glee Club. Here the voices were good—better than the choral technique. In unaccompanied singing, major thirds were often not taken sharp enough, and the pitch invariably dropped, and that common fault of male-voice choirs, stodginess, made an occasional appearance, and damaged some of the efforts. Individual members of the Choir appeared as soloists, and the expected encores were always forthcoming.

My examining work came to an end at Adelaide, I returned to Sydney, but too late to hear the performance of Holst's 'Planets,' under the conductorship of Mr. Orchard (the first performance in the Southern hemisphere), or other music. The weather round about Christmas is more suitable for surfing, or camping out, or any form of outdoor life.

These random notes are of little use as a guide to any musician who may be thinking of emigration. They are merely notes by the way of experiences that happened to come along, apart from my special work, and generalisation from them would be entirely unsafe. I had no opportunity for anything even remotely approaching an exhaustive study of the musical life of either Australia or Canada. Many phases were quite untouched; for instance, with the exception of my Calgary experience, I heard no school class-singing in either Dominion, and on the efficiency of that much depends. But I am quite sure that in both States there is a good opening for sound, capable teachers; in the small towns and country districts, where pioneer work has still to be done, good, all-round musicians would be most useful; in the cities, one should be a specialist in some branch of music, in addition to possessing general efficiency.

It is not desirable to make any comparison between the two Dominions. In both I was generally received with much kindness and friendliness, not only by teachers whose pupils I had to examine, or friends that I made in the cities where I stayed for some time, but by folk met casually in trains or in country hotels. Social life is less conventional than at home, and anyone emigrating must know how to mix easily in varied company: anything approaching condescension, or a superior manner, had best be left behind—it would not be appreciated.

Gramophone Notes

BY 'DISCUS'

COLUMBIA

The 'Parsifal' Prelude has been recorded on three sides, with the Transformation music from Act 1, played by the Philharmonic Orchestra under Bruno Walter (L1774-5). I have heard several recordings of the Prelude, but all have struck me as being on the dull side, and this latest is no exception. Perhaps there is something in the dragging progress of the music that makes it ineffective unless heard at first-hand, when even the quietest passages take on a vitality that almost makes us forget the static quality of much of it. I envy the great majority, who fall into a rapturous trance while the orchestra, having slowly built up a common chord, as slowly proceeds to build another. A work consisting so largely of this device may have its point in evoking an atmosphere before the rising of the curtain, but it is of little moment elsewhere. However, this is merely the opinion of a member of the heretical minority, and is expressed because such things have a right to be expressed. The 'Transformation' music is by far the better of these two records.

Mackenzie's 'Little Minister' Overture is cheerful stuff, with a strong reminder of the composer's 'Britannia' in its method. The playing of the Queen's Hall Light Orchestra is recorded with fair clearness. A lighter touch would have improved it, apparently. The composer conducts (L1743).

The records of the Léner Quartet's playing of Mozart's Quartet in G are, I think, the first in which these performers have had the benefit of the new process. The result is a marked advance in every way, especially, of course, in regard to range and variety of power. The work is not Mozart at his best, perhaps, but the playing and reproduction make the records highly enjoyable.

Those who still care for operatic selections, even when the selections be drawn from 'Il Trovatore' and 'Rigoletto,' are catered for in 3925 and 3980, the players being the Grenadier Guards Band, conducted by Lieut. George Miller.

The B.B.C. Wireless Symphony Orchestra is wasted on Drigo's 'Les Millions d'Arlequin': on the other side is Boccherini's inevitable Minuet, rather heftily played, especially in regard to the bass. The recording is but so-so.

An excellent specimen of the light, popular type of record is that of the J. H. Squire Celéste Octet in the Intermezzo and Opening Chorus of 'Cavalleria Rusticana' (3943). Much the same may be said of 3942—Jean Lensen and his orchestra in Drigo's 'Les Trésors de Columbine' and Tchaikovsky's 'None but the weary heart.'

There should be a welcome for the pianoforte duet viâ the gramophone, but the material and performance should be better than that of 3944—Mendelssohn's so-called 'Bee's Wedding,' and Chopin's Valse in D flat, Op. 64, No. 1, played by Dorothy Folkard and Muriel Warne. A surprised reader asks, What is the matter with such material? The answer is: Nothing, as the composers left it. But both have been spoiled by no less a musician than Frederic Corder, who has interpolated a bit of the 'Spring Song' into the first, and overlaid the second with a good deal of extraneous matter. The result is that both pieces lose the character of swiftness and grace that constitute their chief charm. A heavy German professor might be expected to do this sort of thing, but a musician with so keen a sense of humour as Frederic Corder—No! I fancy there must be a mistake in the label. The disarranger is probably another man with the same name—say, Friedrich Korder. The two ladies who aid and abet Friedrich do not justify their share in the blunder by playing well. On the contrary, the ensemble leaves much to be desired.

Norman Allin breaks an astonishing lot of phrases in Vaughan Williams's 'Silent Noon.' The exaggerated sibilants are probably due to a freak in recording. His voice is better suited in Loewe's 'The Clock' (L1760).

H.M.V.

The new recording goes from strength to strength. Soon we shall be at a loss for superlatives. Of the 'Siegfried's Funeral March' record, one can give no higher praise than to say that it is worthy of this tremendous, heart-searching threnody — the finest funeral march ever written, surely (D1092).

The Prelude to the 'Rheingold,' far more, even, than the 'Parsifal' Prelude, belongs to the theatre. Its elaborations of the common chord mean little unless they make a picture of the Rhine, and are followed at once by the raising of the curtain. Hence the record, good as it is, leaves the hearer—at all events, this one—unsatisfied. The other side more than makes amends with a terrific reproduction of the 'Ride of the Valkyries.' It must be heard to be believed. To those who may object to it on the score of its power, I would point out that just as an adequate concert performance should be (and is) stunning in its effect, so should be the gramophone performance in the drawing-room. The gramophone is only now justifying itself fully by bringing into our homes the shattering climax of the first-hand performance—the gorgeous canvas instead of the pale sketch. I need hardly add that the conductor in all these recent H.M.V. Wagner recordings is Albert Coates, who, judging by the playing, is having the time of his life during the process (D1088).

The Coronation Scene from 'Boris Godounov,' with Chaliapin and a chorus singing in Russian, and Coates conducting, makes a highly effective and picturesque record (DB900). But it should be turned on before, not after, the Wagner records. The fact is, Wagner, with his size and sweep, makes even the best of the Russians seem mere dabblers.

Kreisler usually gives gramophonists trifles, so it is good to hear him in a Beethoven Gavotte and a Bach Minuet. True, both are transcriptions, and so in the Kreisler groove; but they are splendidly played, despite some rather heavy handling of the little Bach piece (DA777).

Cedric Sharp is recorded in Palmgren's 'Rococo' and the folk-tune 'The Gentle Maiden,' both arranged by himself. Two pleasant, well-played items, but I am still wondering why the Palmgren piece is called 'Rococo' (B2294).

Reginald Goss Custard is heard in an organ work of Bach, the Prelude and Fugue in G minor, called on the label 'Small.' The Fugue is that with the subject opening G A B G E E E E A. Playing is excellent, recording much less so. The pedal part is often vague, and the texture generally far from clear. As was said above, the label calls the work 'Small.' Unfortunately, the record makes it smaller still by cutting a goodish chunk out of the exposition. A fugue can rarely be shortened without serious loss. If Bach is to be confined to 10-in. records, it ought not to be difficult to find some of the numerous chorale preludes suitable in style and size. But Bachites should protest against the cutting of such a perfect work as this G minor—one of the finest of all the shorter fugues (E424).

Excellent pianoforte tone and first-rate playing are found in the record of Irene Scharrer's performance of Chopin's Fantaisie Impromptu and Impromptu in A flat. There is, however, a tendency to rush some passages in the latter (D1087).

A record of the Gresham Singers shows a poor choice of music—Dermot MacMorrough's 'The Shepherdess' and a feebly-harmonized arrangement of 'The Meeting of the Waters.' The former has a pianoforte accompaniment—another weak feature, for the instrument is effective with a vocal ensemble only when it has something individual to say. The second piece opens with a lead by a male alto—a type of voice that is invaluable in certain kinds of a cappella work, but which I, for my part, can never hear solus without unseemly mirth (B2294).

The vocal solo department includes records of Sydney Coltham (balladry by Haydn Wood and Easthope Martin: tone rather pinched and lachrymose), B2292; Peter Dawson (Vaughan Williams's 'The Vagabond' and Drummond's 'The Gay Highway': capital, manly, live singing, with clear words), B2297; Derek Oldham (two Quilter songs: a pleasant tenor voice, and most of the words come through), E426; Edna Thornton ('On the Banks of Allan Water' and Hawley's 'The sweetest flower that blows': too heavy in the first, and better in the second than so poor a song deserves), E423; and Tito Schipa, who sings an arrangement of Liszt's hackneyed 'Liebestraüme' and a poor 'Ave Maria' of his own perpetration (DB873).

VOCALION

Very appropriately, in view of the Weber centenary, comes a capital record of the Overture to 'Euryanthe,' played by the Æolian Orchestra, conducted by Stanley Chapple. The recording is not of the 'new' type, so there is no great power; but the reproduction of tone-colour is remarkably good, the horns and drums coming off particularly well (Ko5233).

Sullivan's 'Ouverture di Ballo,' played with due brightness by the Life Guards Band, under Lieut. H. Eldridge, makes an excellent band record (Ko5234).

Even Jelly d'Aranyi's playing of Salmon's arrangement of Pianelli's 'Villanelle' cannot make it more than mildly interesting; on the other hand her rhythmically-free treatment of the Brahms-Joachim Hungarian Dance No. 5 is a good lesson to over-stolid English players of these pieces (Ko5231).

Jaques van Lier's playing should be employed on less feeble music than a couple of pieces from a Suite by Florembassi (Ko5232).

Among the vocal records, the best appears to be that of Malcolm McEachern, in Elsie April's 'I'm a lone man,' and Hedgcock's 'On the Road to Mandalay' (Ko5230). John Buckley (with chorus) does a set of Sea Shanties, which will please those who do not object to the over-artificial treatment of such things (X9786-7).

A capital new (to me) singer of the Ranalow type is Howett Worster, who is recorded in four songs from the 'Beggar's Opera.' He has a telling and musical voice, and good diction. Kitty Reidy, his colleague, suffers by comparison, both in regard to tone and words (X9781).

A pronounced wobble is a feature of Selma d'Arco's singing of Tipton's 'A Spring Flower,' and Délibes's 'Les Filles de Cadiz.' And her words are not clear (Ao264).

NATIONAL GRAMOPHONIC SOCIETY

Just as these notes are being closed comes the N.G.S. latest issue—Brahms's Clarinet Quintet, played by the Spencer Dyke Quartet and Mr. Frederick Thurston. A first hearing shows scarcely a weakness in playing or reproduction, and the set is certainly one of the Society's best achievements. The choice of work is excellent too. Nine sides are occupied by the Quintet, the tenth being given to the second movement (Allegro) from Glière's String Quartet in A.

Player-Piano Notes

ÆOLIAN

Duo-Art.—The outstanding roll this month is of Chopin's Polonaise in F sharp minor, Op. 44, brilliantly played by Arthur Rubinstein. Perhaps the interest aroused by the thrilling opening is not maintained, but that is less the fault of the player than of the composer (6505).

The actual interest of Schumann's Novelette in D, Op. 21, No. 2, is rather thinly spread, and Harold Bauer's playing of it seems just a bit ordinary. Hence a merely good roll, instead of the first-rate one we expect of him (6921).

Beethoven's eight Variations on the Theme, 'Tandeln und Scherzen,' are not often heard, and there is no apparent reason why they should be—in their complete form, at all events. Ethel Leginska's playing is, like the work itself, unequal. Her repeated-chord accompaniment is far to heavy. On the other hand, her crisp playing of the delightful fughetta is first-rate. This Variation is a reminder of the fact that although Beethoven wrote very few good fugues, he was a capital hand when a neat and lively fughetta was required (6957).

A fairly attractive specimen of its kind is 'Always,' a waltz by Irving Berlin. Phil Ohman does not succeed in relieving its somewhat monotonous character by his playing—there is too little variety in the tone (9731).

Rube Bloom gives us much more contrast in 'Then I'll be happy,' by C. Friend (0735).

Of several dance rolls the pick is 'Barcelona' (T. Evans), labelled as a 'nutty $\frac{6}{8}$ one-step.' This is played in duet form by Norman and Swift, and quite a jolly noise they make of it (0314). A striking thing about most of the players of dance music is their absolute slickness, scale-passages above all being played with a clarity too often lacking in performances at more distinguished hands.

It is a pity that Robert Armbruster should waste his obvious abilities on such poor material as 'Your eyes have told me so,' by W. Blaufuss (0730).

Hand-Played. — Sinding's 'Grotesque March,' Op. 32, No. 1, well-played by Yolanda Mérö (A903D), is not without a touch of humour. The elephantine gambols in the bass are genuinely funny, and there are some good chop-stick effects.

An example of Moszkowski at his best is the Polonaise, Op. 11, No. 1. Harold Bauer's playing of this roll makes the most of the brilliant and showy qualities of the work (A905E).

The same artist is heard in Boccherini's ubiquitous Minuet (A899E). There is no metronome mark indicated here, but the roll is labelled moderato. Crotchet = 75 seems to suit it best.

Robert Armbruster gives us Friml's Concert Waltz, Op. 12 (A897D). This is certainly a better example than his Duo-Art roll mentioned above. True, the music is of the over-sweet, feeble type, but it is very well played. Those of us who have no palate for this sort of thing hope to hear Armbruster play something worth while.

Metrostyle.—Toujours 'By the Waters of Minnetonka'! It is poor enough as a song; as a fox-trot it is no better. It is perhaps even worse, for its conversion into a dance seems to accentuate its dulness and monotony (L24778A). The best of the dance rolls is 'Barcelona' (L24777A). By the way, the roll editor seems to take a fiendish delight in waving the metrostyle line. Surely in music of this type so many variations in tempo are entirely unnecessary.

In the roll of Ketèlbey's Intermezzo-Romance 'Gallantry' (T30259B), it would be useful to have the solo changes from bass to treble and vice versâ indicated. It is a little disconcerting to prepare for a treble solo and find oneself emphasising the accompanying chords of a bass solo.

The song rolls for the most part are of the usual order. Noel Johnson's 'If thou wert blind' (26609) is not well played (there is no indication on this roll), and seems more difficult to sing to than it need be.

'Danny Boy' (26661) is the 'Londonderry Air,' with its beauty damaged by feeble harmonization.

The Æolian Company sends copies of a couple of pamphlets that should be of use to those who have to do with the player-piano for educational purposes. In 'The "Pianola" and "Duo-Art" in the School,' the advantages of the instrument for school use are briefly summarised, and short lists of rolls dealing with 'appreciation' and history lessons are given. More exhaustive is '"Pianola" and "Duo-Art" Music for Use in School,' a classified list of rolls selected by Mabel Chamberlain. The lists are of rolls suitable for recreation, dancing, ear-training, marching, interpretative and advanced dancing; rolls dealing with composers' expression of moods, ideas; rolls illustrating nationality in music, for use in connection with literature, &c. The pamphlets may be had free on application to the Company's Education Department, 131, New Bond Street, W.1.

Wireless Notes

BY 'ARIEL'

An apology is due for a long break in these notes. Infrequent opportunities for listening, due to a good deal of absence from home, is the reason. Protesting correspondents may be assured that in future the notes will appear more regularly. There is much in one writer's contention that, as almost everybody hears wireless music, some discussion of the programmes and performances is as essential as any other department of criticism. I hope to include in future some comments on forthcoming items of interest in the programmes. To listeners in remote parts this is perhaps more useful than a discussion of past events.

When I wrote last, some months ago, I touched on the possibilities of wireless as a disseminator of news. Little did I think that within a short time the B.B.C. would be called upon to take the place of the daily press. Opinions as to the way in which the Company met the recent national emergency vary, being inevitably coloured somewhat by one's political and other views. But there can be no question as to the far-reaching and instructive nature of the episode. It set one speculating as to the immense value wireless would have been during the war. Flying and lying rumour would have been brought to earth at the first stirring of her wings.

A new era may be opened up by the recent transmission of a St. Martin-in-the-Fields special service to the Parish Church at Desborough. A very large receiving set was installed, and the congregation (we read) was easily able to join in the whole service. This wireless service did not supersede the customary evensong, and the church was full on both occasions. Although the broadcast service was of a special type, being that at which the Archbishop of Canterbury preached on the general strike, it is easy to see that the time may be at hand when small and remote village churches, with little or no opportunity of providing a satisfactory musical service, will make arrangements to receive their Sunday evening service by wireless, lifting up their voices in concert with the choir at the B.B.C. Studio, or at some London church. Discussion of the pros and cons must be reserved for the present. All that need be done now is to express a hope that the Studio choir and its repertory may be made far more virile than it is at present. There is too much feeble sentimental music, with long-drawn 'Ah . . mens,' and a lot of wobbling tone. The supersession of the female voices by a dozen really good boys would at once bring about a great improvement in style.

OPERA BY WIRELESS

The B.B.C. has been attacked in some quarters for the performance of 'Kitesh.' But surely the Company can do no more valuable service to music than by giving us a chance of hearing a work that in the ordinary way would never be heard in this country. To object (as some do) that, being an opera, it lost much in the process, is to say that no bread is better than half a loaf. I question, however, if opera loses so much in transmission as is sometimes contended. At least three types of opera seem to be so suitable for wireless purposes that I hope the Company will go ahead in this department. The three are: (1) operas that are thoroughly familiar to most people, both in regard to story and music, and so can be visualised with ease, e.g., Gounod's 'Faust,' 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' 'Pagliacci,' 'Lohengrin,' 'Tannhäuser,' &c.; (2) operas in which the musical interest is so great that many listeners will welcome an opportunity of hearing them free from the distractions and absurd conventions that surround stage performances; and (3) operas of the 'Kitesh' brand, that are never likely to be performed on the English stage, or those that are rarely performed, such as 'Fidelio,' Verdi's 'Falstaff,' or Stanford's 'Shamus O'Brien.'

Another point in this connection is worth noting. It is a truism that many fine singers cannot act, and vice versâ, and that some splendid voices belong to folk who have not the physical qualifications for stage performances—they are too short, too tall, too fat, too ugly, or any other reason why. Operas by wireless can, musically, be made a fine thing, because the sole requirements would be vocal and interpretative. Again, some operas are specially difficult because of the heavy demands made by combined acting and singing. Such works could be given with brilliant success by wireless, always provided the ground were as well prepared by preliminary notes and talks as it was for 'Kitesh.' It is even easy to see great possibilities in the shape of short operas designed expressly for wireless purposes. We have had successful examples of plays and revues specially written for transmission: why not opera?

OPERAS THAT ARE BETTER HEARD THAN SEEN

I said above that some operas present special difficulties to the singer when staged in the ordinary way. Holst's 'At the Boar's Head' is an example. It demanded something like a new technique, and it clearly found the performers unable to do all that was wanted in the way of diction. Yet it is chock-full of musical interest and delight—too full, in fact, for complete enjoyment at the opera-house, because the audience cannot take in all the ingenuities and allusiveness of the score. Here, surely, is the very work for the wireless audience. The performers can give full attention to their singing and conductor; the hearer has nothing to distract his attention from the wonderful mosaic of folk-tunes and the richly humorous dialogue. There are many of us, not fond of opera in a general way, who would welcome a chance of hearing any one of the very few examples in which both music and dialogue are first-rate.

Immortal, invisible

BY

ERIC H. THIMAN.

917. Abide with me .. Ivor Atkins 4d.
424. Ditto ... ... R. Dunstan 4d.
805. Adeste Fideles ... H. Hofmann 6d.
927. All go unto one place ... Wesley 4d.
247. All nations whom B. Luard-Selby 6d.
113. All they that trust ...F. Hiller 1s.
1033. All Thy works ... T. Adams 4d.
475. Ditto ... ... J. Barnby 6d.
503. Ditto ... ... G. H. Ely 6d.
30. Ditto ... ... E. H. Thorne 4d.
719. All ye who seek ... H. M. Higgs 4d.
9. All ye who weep ... C. Gounod 4d.
592. Alleluia! now is Christ T. Adams 4d.
729. Alleluia! the Lord liveth C. Harris 4d.
548. Almighty Father ... B. Steane 4d.
937. Almighty God, give us ... Wesley 4d.
261. And all the people saw J. Stainer 8d.
699. And God shall wipe away all tears F. R. Greenish 4d.
1055. And in that day F. R. Rickman 4d.
229. And it was the third hour Elvey 6d.
485. And Jacob was left alone J. Stainer 8d.
658. And Jesus entered H. W. Davies 6d.
732. And suddenly there came H. J. Wood 4d.
1089. And the earth was reaped E. S. Craston 6d.
675. And the Lord said T. W. Stephenson 4d.
357. And the wall of the city O. A. King 4d.
778. And there shall be signs Naylor 6d.
1130. And we beheld His Glory G. Rathbone 4d.
402. And when the day ... C. W. Smith 4d.
684. Angel said, The (S.&B.) A. H. Brown 3d.
861. Angel Spirits P. Tchaikovsky 3d.
642. Angel voices, ever singing E. V. Hall 4d.
611. Angels from the realms Cowen 4d.
749. Ditto ... P. E. Fletcher 4d.
751. Ditto ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
1017. Arise, shine ... T. Adams 4d.
1093. Ditto ... H. A. Chambers 4d.
1112. Ditto ... ... Ed. Bunnett 4d.
923. Ditto ... ... G. F. Cobb 6d.
723. Arm of the Lord, The ... Haydn 6d.
228. Art thou weary ... C. H. Lloyd 8d.
948 As Christ was raised Wareing 4d.
311. As I live, saith the Lord E. T. Chipp 4d
333. As it began to dawn Ch. Vincent 4d.
498. As Moses lifted up F. Gostelow 4d.
643. As the earth bringeth A. H. Brewer 6d.
24. As the hart pants (S.S.T.B.) Gounod 4d.
147. Ascribe unto the Lord Travers 8d.
109. Ditto ... ... S. S. Wesley 6d.
399. At the Lamb's High E. V. Hall 4d.
456. At the Sepulchre H. W. Wareing 6d.
957. Author of Life Divine Button 3d.
1091. Ditto H. A. Chambers 4d.
660. Awake, awake ... John E. West 4d.
700. Awake, awake, put on thy strength F. R. Greenish 6d.
56. Ditto ... ... J. Stainer 8d.
759. Ditto ... T. W. Stephenson 6d.
149. Ditto ... ... M. Wise 6d.
955. Awake! O Zion ... C. Forrester 4d.
199. Awake, thou that sleepest Stainer 8d.
150. Awake up, my glory M. Wise 4d.

744. Be glad and rejoice M. B. Foster 4d.
578. Ditto ... ... B. Steane 4d.
212. Be glad, O ye righteous H. Smart 6d.
989. Be glad then, ye ... A. Hollins 4d.
143. Be merciful... ... H. Purcell 8d.
257. Ditto ... E. A. Sydenham 4d.
597. Be peace on earth... W. Crotch 4d.
567. Be Thou exalted ... C. Bayley 4d.
583. Be ye all of one mind A. E. Godfrey 4d.
471. Be ye therefore ... A. S. Baker 4d.
440. Before the heavens H. W. Parker 4d.
551. Behold, all the earth G. F. Huntley 6d.
598. Behold, God is great E. W. Naylor 6d.
865. Behold, God is my John E. West 4d.
536. Ditto ... ... F. C. Woods 6d.

1035. Behold, how good J. Battishill 4d.
349. Ditto (Male) ... Caldicott 4d.
349.* Ditto (S.A.T.B.) Caldicott 4d.
419. Ditto ... ... H. Clarke 6d.
89. Behold, I bring you J. Barnby 4d.
348. Ditto ... ... J. M. Crament 6d.
1113. Ditto ... ... Ed. Bunnett 3d.
296. Ditto ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
810. Behold, I come quickly Ivor Atkins 3d.
713. Behold, I have given you C. Harris 4d.
554. Behold, I send ... J. V. Roberts 6d.
587. Behold My servant J. F. Bridge 4d.
65. Behold now, praise J. B. Calkin 4d.
631. Ditto ... ... F. Iliffe 4d.
912. Ditto ... ... John E. West 4d.
315. Behold, O God ... F. W. Hird 6d.
524. Behold, the days come Woodward 6d.
1045. Behold the Heaven A. R. Gaul 4d.
652. Behold the Name... ... P. Pitt 6d.
501. Behold, two blind men J. Stainer 4d.
938. Bethlehem ... ... Ch. Gounod 2d.
378. Bless the Lord ... M. Kingston 6d.
796. Bless the Lord, O my soul Hailing 4d.
855. Bless the Lord thy God Roberts 4d.
450. Bless thou the Lord C. Bayley 6d.
374. Ditto ... ... O. A. King 4d.
693. Blessed are the dead B. L. Selby 3d.
667. Blessed are the pure A. D. Arnott 4d.
390. Blessed are they ... A. W. Batson 4d.
616. Ditto ... ... H. Blair 4d.
77. Ditto ... ... W. H. Monk 4d.
112. Ditto ... ... A. Page 4d.
15. Blessed be the God S. S. Wesley 3d.
756. Blessed be the Lord J. Barnby 4d.
570. Ditto ... ... J. F. Bridge 8d.
895. Ditto ... ... O. Gibbons 3d.
876. Ditto ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
183. Ditto ... ... C. S. Heap 8d.
770. Ditto ... ... M. Lee 4d.
331. Ditto ... C. Lee Williams 6d.
1006. Blessed be the Name Macfarren 4d.
724. Blessed be Thou E. C. Bairstow 6d.
1120. Ditto ... ... Ed. Bunnett 4d.
838. Ditto ... ... J. Kent 6d.
400. Blessed City ... A. C. Fisher 6d.
284. Blessed is He F. E. Gladstone 3d.
262. Ditto ... ... C. H. Lloyd 1s.
292. Ditto ... A. C. Mackenzie 6d.
206. Blessed is the man Clarke-Whitfeld 4d.
64. Ditto ... ... John Goss 6d.
769. Ditto ... H. W. Wareing 4d.
1004. Blessed is the soul (S.B.) Macfarren 4d.
286. Blessed Jesu, Fount of mercy A. Dvorák 8d.
943. Blessed Lord ... S. S. Wesley 3d.
5. Blessing, glory, wisdom B. Tours 6d.
950. Ditto ... ... A. H. Brewer 4d.
472. Blessing of the Lord, The J. F. Bridge 3d.
194. Ditto A. C. Mackenzie 4d.
652. Blow up the trumpet F. Iliffe 4d.
97. Blow ye the trumpet H. Leslie 4d.
961. Born to-day... J. P. Sweelinck 4d.
118. Bow Thine ear ... ... W. Bird 4d.
939 Bread of Heaven ... E. German 4d.
1082. Bread of the world H. A. Chambers 4d.
1024. Break forth into joy W. G. Alcock 4d.
774. Ditto ... ... H. E. Button 4d.
415. Ditto ... S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.
798. Ditto ... H. A. Matthews 4d.
92. Ditto ... ... R. Prentice 8d.
491. Ditto ... ... B. Steane 4d.
323. Brightest and best... E. V. Hall 6d.
340. Bring unto the Lord Gladstone 4d.
98. Brother, thou art gone J. Goss 6d.
279. By Babylon's wave C. Gounod 3d.
197. By the rivers of Babylon L. Samson 6d.
121. By the waters of Babylon Boyce 6d.
644. Ditto ... S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.
511. Ditto ... ... H. Clarke 6d.
853. Ditto ... ... H. M. Higgs 4d.
1074. Ditto ... ... Palestrina 4d.
1076. Ditto ... ... H. Goetz 4d.
742. By Thy glorious death A. Dvorák 6d.

116. Call to remembrance J. Battishill 8d.
952. Ditto ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
680. Calm on the list'ning ear Parker 4d.
841. Cast me not away C. Lee Williams 3d.
975. Ditto ... ... S. S. Wesley 4d.
953. Charge to keep I have, A H. J. King 4d.
497. Christ both died ... E. W. Naylor 4d.
454. Christ is risen ... G. B. J. Aitken 4d.
368. Ditto ... ... J. M. Crament 4d.
666. Ditto ... ... W. Jordan 6d.
533. Ditto ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
814. Ditto ... E. A. Sydenham 4d.
307. Christ our Passover E. V. Hall 4d.
783. Christ the Lord is risen again E. V. Hall 6d.
370. Christ the Lord is risen to-day ,, 4d.
488. Christians, awake... ...J. Barnby 4d.
648. Ditto ... H. M. Higgs 6d.
983. Christmas Day ... ... G. Holst 6d.
445. Cleanse me, Lord G. F. Wrigley 4d.
989. Come and let us ... A. Hollins 4d.
52. Come, and let us return J. Goss 4d.
95. Ditto ... ... W. Jackson 4d.
1106. Come, come, help, O God W. Byrd 4d.
805. Come hither, ye faithful Hofmann 6d.
283. Come, Holy Ghost G. Elvey 6d.
201. Ditto ... ... J. L. Hatton 6d.
829. Ditto ... ... Palestrina 3d.
717. Ditto ... C. Lee Williams 3d.
881. Come, let us join our E. V. Hall 4d.
293. Come, my soul ... G. C. Martin 6d.
314. Come now, and let us H. W. Wareing 6d.
1. Come unto Him ... C. Gounod 3d.
946. Ditto ... ... H. Leslie 4d.
256. Come unto Me H. R. Couldrey 4d.
635. Ditto ... ... G. J. Elvey 4d
103. Ditto (Bach) J. Stainer 4d
922. Come with high and holy H. Blair 4d
1005. Come ye, and let us Macfarren 4d
748. Come, ye children and J. Booth 4d.
924. Ditto ... ... H. J. King 4d.
334. Come, ye faithful... E. V. Hall 4d.
921. Come, ye faithful, raise the strain E. V. Hall 4d.
1019. Come, ye Saints ... H. E. Button 4d.
951. Come, ye sin-defiled J. Stainer 3d.
931. Come, ye thankful ...B. Steane 4d.
914. Comes at times H. H. Woodward 4d.
1008. Ditto ... ... H. Oakeley 3d.
994. Coronation Offertorium E. Elgar 3d
622. Create in me a clean heart P. J. Fry 4d.
688. Crown Him the B. Luard-Selby 3d.
884. Crown of grace for man, A Brahms 6d

356. Daughters of Jerusalem H. J. King 4d.
449. Dawns the day ... R. H. Legge 4d.
1131. Day draws on with golden light, The ... ...Geoffrey Shaw 4d.
421. Day is past, The ... J. C. Marks 4d.
461. Day of Resurrection, The E. V. Hall 4d.
213. Day of Anger (Requiem) Mozart 8d.
682. Day of wrath ... J. Stainer 3d.
552. Day Thou gavest, The Woodward 4d.
252. Death and life ... W. Parratt 4d.
968. Death is swallowed up in victory A. Hollins 4d.
849. Deliver us, O Lord ...Gibbons 4d.
90. Distracted with care ... Haydn 6d.
887. Do not I fill heaven ... H. Blair 4d.
737. Doth not wisdom cry D. S. Smith 4d.
703. Drop down, ye heavens J. Stainer 6d.

239. Earth is the Lord's, The T. T. Trimnell 6d
1100. Ditto ... ... A. Lowe 4d.
687. Ditto ... ... J. Hopkins 6d.
277. Enter not into Judgment Clarke 3d.
996. Eternal God, The John E. West 4d.
362. Eternal source ... F. Brandeis 3d.
1008. Evening and Morning Oakeley 3d.
1127. Evening Hymn H. B. Gardiner 4d.
854. Exalt ye the Lord H. Elliot Button 4d.
1135. Exaltabo Te, Domine Palestrina 4d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

MADE IN ENGLAND

NOVELLO'S
OCTAVO EDITION OF ANTHEMS.

764. Except the Lord build Edwards 4d.
771. Ditto ... ... E. Faning 6d.
628. Ditto ... ... H. Gadsby 6d.
470. Eye hath not seen (S.A.) M. B. Foster 4d.
584. Ditto (S.A.T.B.) M. B. Foster 4d.
482. Eyes of all, The ... T. Adams 4d.
547. Ditto ... G. J. Elvey 4d.
573. Ditto ... M. B. Foster 4d.
289. Ditto ... Gibbons 6d.
878. Eyes of the Lord are, The West 3d.

689. Face of death, The W. Parratt 3d.
625. Far be sorrow ... E. V. Hall 4d.
672. Far from the world H. W. Parker 4d.
329. Far from their home Woodward 4d.
364. Father, hear the prayer F. Brandeis 3d.
763. Father, now Thy grace W. Coenen 4d.
46. Father of Heaven Walmisley 4d.
384. Father of Life ... S. J. Gilbert 4d.
768. Father of mercies E. V. Hall 4d.
1065. Ditto ... S. P. Waddington 4d.
671. Ditto ... ... John E. West 4d.
1050. Fear not, O land ... E. Elgar 4d.
28. Ditto ... ... John Goss 4d.
916. Ditto ... ... W. Jordan 4d.
872. Fear Thou not, for I am with thee J. Booth 2d.
478. Few more years shall roll, A H. Blair 4d.
448. First Christmas, The J. Barnby 4d.
534. First day of the week, The B. Steane 4d.
446. Flee from evil ... W. J. Clarke 4d.
214. Fool hath said, The W. Bennett 6d.
271. Fool within his heart, The J. Rheinberger 4d.
553. For a small moment J. Stainer 3d.
254. For ever blessed (Male) Mendelssohn 4d.
198. For the mountains L. Samson 4d.
901. For this mortal ... S. S. Wesley 4d.
728. Forsake me not ... ... J. Goss 6d.
413. Fost'ring earth, The J. L. Hopkins 4d.
273. From the deep I called ... Spohr 8d.

227. Give ear, O Lord T. M. Pattison 3d.
433. Give ear, O Shepherd A. Whiting 4d.
88. Give ear, O ye heavens P. Armes 4d.
956. Ditto ... ... W. G. Alcock 4d.
604. Give thanks, O Israel Ouseley 6d.
741. Give the King thy W. G. Alcock 8d.
990. Ditto ... ... A. H. Brewer 4d.
309. Give the Lord ... C. H. Lloyd 1s.
383. Give unto the Lord H. W. Parker 6d.
933. Glorious and powerful God Gibbons 4d.
1039. Glorious in Heaven Vittoria 4d.
2. Glory be to God ... S. S. Wesley 3d.
746. Glory of Lebanon, The Wareing 4d.
593. Glory of the God, The T. Adams 4d.
177. Glory of the Lord, The J. Goss 8d.
779. Glory to God in the E. M. Lee 4d.
341. God be merciful ... A. H. Mann 6d.
49. Ditto ... S. S. Wesley 4d.
236. God be merciful unto us C. F. Lloyd 8d.
105. God came from Teman Steggall 6d.
967. God is a Spirit ... W. S. Bennett 2d.
128. God is gone up ... ... Croft 6d.
892. Ditto ... ... O. Gibbons 4d.
864. Ditto ... ... W. B. Gilbert 3d.
605. God is my salvation C. F. Bowes 4d.
1062. God is our hope ... A. H. Brewer 4d.
131. Ditto ... ... Greene 8d.
332. God is our refuge ... A. Foote 6d.
101. Ditto ... ... H. Hiles 8d.
245. God of Jeshurun, The ... J. Goss 8d.
75. God said, Behold G. Macfarren 6d.
969. God so loved the world H. Moore 4d.
1012. Ditto ... ... E. G. Monk 6d.
473. Ditto ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
342. God, that madest earth A. C. Fisher 3d.
1056. God the All-fatherly A. Hollins 4d.
344. God, Who at sundry times J. H. Mee 6d.
715. God's peace is peace eternal Grieg 4d.
1116. Good Shepherd has, The Bunnett 4d.

1096. Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost H. Blair 4d.
1070. Grant us Thy peace G. Bullivant 4d.
550. Grant, we beseech Thee M. Elvey 3d.
388. Ditto ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
517. Great and marvellous J. F. Bridge 6d.
187. Ditto ... ... E. G. Monk 4d.
848. Ditto ... ... T. Tomkins 4d.
223. Great is Jehovah (Male) Schubert 6d.
987. Ditto ... ...Schubert 6d.
602. Great is our Lord M. B. Foster 6d.
136. Great is the Lord ... Hayes 6d.
708. Ditto ... A. W. Marchant 4d.
237. Ditto ... ... F. Ouseley 8d.
481. Ditto ... ... B. Steane 4d.
813. Ditto ... E. A. Sydenham 4d.
220. Grieve not the Holy Spirit Stainer 4d.
609. Guide me, O Thou Great Redeemer ... ... H. Blair 4d.

427. Hail! gladdening Light J. T. Field 3d.
545. Ditto ... ... G. C. Martin 6d.
326. Hail, thou that art A. Carnall 6d.
560. Hail to the Christ J. Barnby 4d.
945. Hail, true Body ... H. Willan 3d.
499. Hallelujah, Christ is risen Steane 4d.
382. Hallelujah! the Light O. A. King 4d.
754 Hallowed day, The B. Luard-Selby 4d.
1137. Happy Day, Festal Day H. A. Chambers 4d.
173. Happy is the man ... E. Prout 1s.
1077. Hark! hark my soul P. E. Fletcher 4d.
681. Hark, the glad sound M. B. Foster 4d.
909. Ditto ... ... A. R. Gaul 4d.
487. Ditto ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
345. Hark, the herald angels E. V. Hall 4d.
444. Hark! what news O. A. King 4d.
404. Harvest Hymn ... ... F. Tozer 3d.
820. Haste Thee, O God John Shepherd 4d.
784. Have mercy upon me J. Barnby 3d.
500. Ditto ... ... J. Barnby 4d.
818. Ditto ... ... G. Allegri 6d.
665. Ditto ... arr. V. Novello 3d.
811 Ditto ... ... Palestrina 6d.
518. Ditto ... ... E. Pettman 2d.
464. Ditto ... ... J. Stainer 4d.
535. Ditto ... ... J. Goss 6d.
1013. Ditto ... ... E. Minshall 4d.
377. Ditto ... ... K. J. Pye 4d.
401. Ditto ... ... J. Shaw 4d.
1133. He is a Father of the fatherless C. L. Williams 4d.
794. He sendeth the springs Wareing 6d.
701. He shall swallow up Death F. R. Greenish 4d.
707. He that dwelleth... ... J. Booth 6d.
837. He that shall endure Mendelssohn 3d.
898. He that spared not His Gladstone 4d.
1102. He wants not friends that hath Thy love ... Geoffrey Shaw 4d.
900. He will swallow up death Wesley 2d.
389. Hear me when I call (Male) Distin 3d.
339. Hear my prayer Mendelssohn 6d.
1001. Ditto ... ... H. Purcell 3d.
146. Ditto ... ... C. Stroud 6d.
442. Hear my words C. H. H. Parry 1s.
310. Hear, O God ... A. Friedländer 8d.
138. Hear, O heavens P. Humphreys 4d.
94. Hear, O Lord ... John Goss 3d.
139. Ditto ... ... C. King 3d.
162. Ditto ... ... F. Ouseley 3d.
831. Hear, O My people J. Holbrooke 4d.
203. Hear, O Thou Shepherd Clarke 6d.
522. Ditto ... T. A. Walmisley 6d.
776. Hear the voice and prayer Tallis 3d.
773. Hearken unto Me W. H. Bell 4d.
804. Heavens declare, The Macpherson 6d.
376. Hide not Thy face K. J. Pye 3d.
299. Hills stand about, The G. Gardner 6d.
366. Ho! every one ... J. M. Crament 6d.
246. Ditto ... ... G. C. Martin 6d.
330. Holy Ghost, to earth A. Dvorák 6d.
111. Holy, holy, holy ... ... Crotch 4d.
842. Holy, Lord God ... T. Bateson 6d.
412. Honour the Lord... J. Stainer 6d.

129. Hosanna (in C) ... O. Gibbons 4d.
1015. Ditto (in E flat) O. Gibbons 4d.
43. Ditto ... G. A. Macfarren 4d.
657. Hosanna to the Lord W. Jordan 6d.
646. Ditto ... ... Luard-Selby 4d.
1021. Hosanna we sing John E. West 4d.
260. How beautiful are the feet Handel 4d.
691. How blest are they Tschaikowsky 6d.
321. How excellent is Thy loving kindness ... F. H. Cowen 8d.
615. How great is the loving J. E. West 4d.
373. How long wilt Thou O. A. King 3d.
867. Ditto ... ... J. Clarke 4d.
647. How lovely are ... C. Salaman 4d.
104. Ditto ... ... Spohr 1s.
988. Ditto ... ... J. Brahms 3d.
755. Hymn of the angels, The J. E. West 6d.

766. I am Alpha ... Ch. Gounod 4d.
539. Ditto ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
623. I am He that liveth T. Adams 6d.
664. I am the Resurrection ... Croft 4d.
662. Ditto ... ... R. Rogers 6d.
268. I am well pleased J. Rheinberger 4d.
120. I beheld, and lo ... ... Blow 8d.
280. Ditto ... ... G. J. Elvey 8d.
496. I came not to call... C. Vincent 4d.
207. I cried unto the Lord C. S. Heap 6d.
537. I declare to you Cruickshank 6d.
168. I desired wisdom J. Stainer 8d.
230. I did call upon the Lord Pattison 6d.
515. I do not ask, O Lord ... Roberts 4d.
117. I have set God ... ... E. Blake 8d.
420. Ditto ... ... H. Clarke 6d.
130. Ditto ... ... J. Goldwin 4d.
122. I have surely built ... Boyce 6d.
219 Ditto T. T. Trimnell 6d
590 I heard a great voice G. F. Cobb 4d
396. I heard a voice ... John Goss 3d
1107. I laid me down to rest W. Byrd 4d
903. I looked, and behold H. Willan 4d.
1029. I love to hear ... M. B. Foster 4d.
1022. I saw the Lord ... C. Harris 4d.
171. Ditto ... ... J. Stainer 8d.
114. I was glad ... ... T. Attwood 6d.
993. Ditto ... ... A. H. Brewer 4d.
1123. Ditto ... ... Ed. Bunnett 4d.
1080. Ditto ... ...H. R. Couldrey 4d.
32. Ditto ... ... G. J. Elvey 4d.
79. Ditto ... ... C. E. Horsley 8d.
743. Ditto ... ...C. H. H. Parry 6d.
379. Ditto ... ... T. T. Trimnell 6d.
119. I was in the spirit ... Blow 8d.
205. I will alway give thanks Clarke 4d.
1034. I will cause the shower Naylor 4d.
874. I will cry unto God H. J. King 4d.
73. Ditto ... ... C. Steggall 4d.
502. I will extol Thee ... C. M. Hudson 6d.
1068. Ditto ... John E. West 4d.
29. I will give thanks J. Barnby 6d.
156. Ditto ... ... E. J. Hopkins 8d.
568. Ditto ... ... Mozart 3d
915. I will give unto him ... H. Blair 3d.
674. I will give you rain H. W. Wareing 6d.
225. I will go unto ... Gauntlett 3d.
591. I will go unto the altar C. Harris 4d.
437. I will greatly rejoice Cruickshank 6d.
1037. Ditto ... ... E. C. Bairstow 4d.
495. I will lay me down in peace A. C. Edwards 4d.
195. Ditto ... ... H. Gadsby 2d.
209. Ditto ... ... H. Hiles 4d.
958. I will lift up mine eyes J. V. Roberts 4d.
739. Ditto ... ... D. S. Smith 4d.
126. I will love Thee ... ... J. Clark 6d.
1058. Ditto ... ... O. A. King 4d.
394. Ditto ... ... M. Kingston 6d.
760. I will magnify Thee W. H. Bell 6d.
1119. Ditto ... ... Ed. Bunnett 4d.
78. Ditto ... ... J. B. Calkin 6d.
27. Ditto ... ... John Goss 4d.
633. Ditto ... ... F. Iliffe 4d.
405. Ditto ... ... O. A. King 6d.
780. Ditto ... ... E. M. Lee 4d.
1010. Ditto ... ... C. H. Lloyd 4d.

IMMORTAL, INVISIBLE, GOD ONLY WISE

ANTHEM

WORDS BY W. C. SMITH *

MUSIC ADAPTED FROM A WELSH MELODY BY

ERIC H. THIMAN

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

Allegro con spirito
SOPRANO
ALTO
TENOR
BASS
ORGAN
f
Im - mor - tal, in - vis - i - ble,
Allegro con spirito. ♩. = about 50
Ped.
senza Ped.
God on - ly wise, In light in - ac - cess - i - ble hid from our eyes, Most

Copyright, 1926, by Novello and Company, Limited

* From "The Poetical Works of Walter C. Smith," by permission of Andrew Melrose, Ltd., Publishers bless - ed, most glo - rious, the An - cient of Days, Al - might - y, vic - tor - ious, Thy bless - ed, most glo - rious, the An - cient of Days, Al - might - y, vic - tor - ious, Thy bless - ed, most glo - rious, the An - cient of Days, Al - might - y, vic - tor - ious, Thy bless - ed, most glo - rious, the An - cient of Days, Al - might - y, vic - tor - ious, Thy

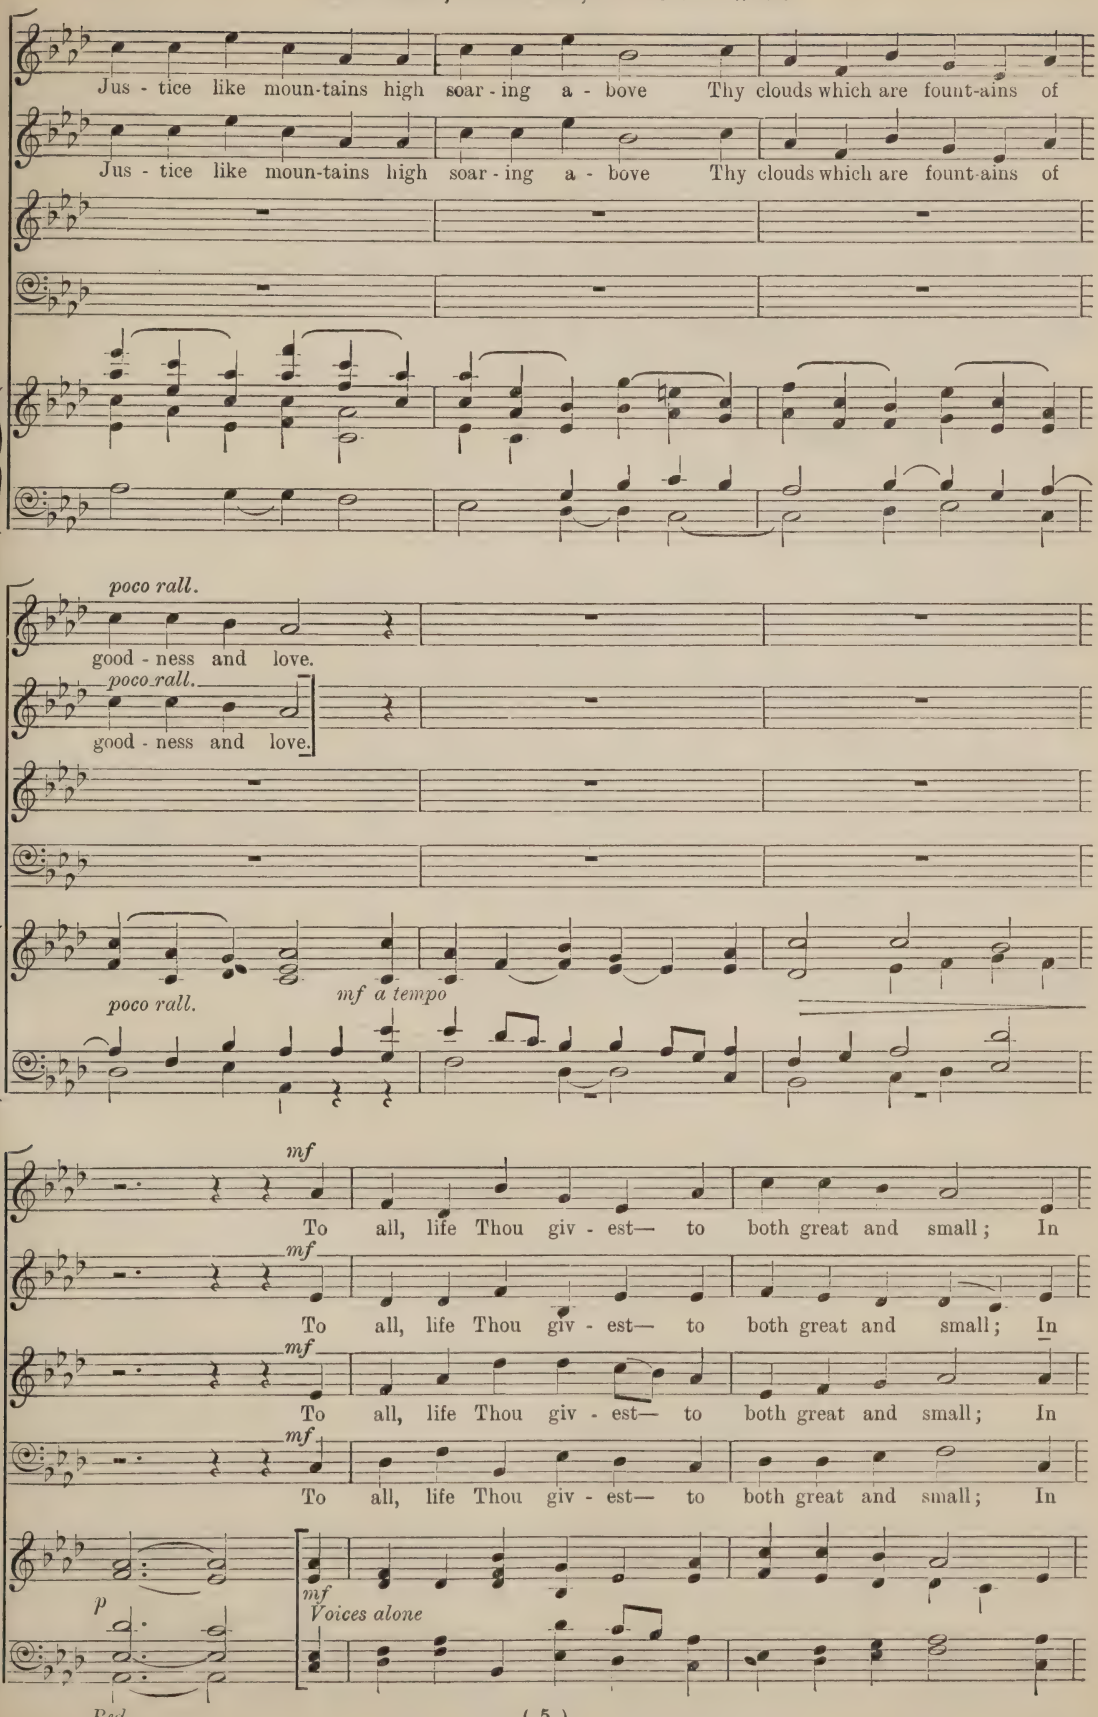
Ped.
great name we praise.
great name we praise.
great name we praise.
Un - rest - ing, un - hast - ing, and
great name we praise.
Un - rest - ing, un - hast - ing, and
mf
f
Thy
Thy
si - lent as light, Nor want - ing, nor wast - ing, Thou rul - est in might;
si - lent as light, Nor want - ing, nor wast - ing, Thou rul - est in might;
(mf Sw.)
L.H.
(mf Gt.)
(Sw.)
(Sw. to Ped.)

* For Contraltos only



Jus - tice like moun-tains high soar - ing a - bove Thy clouds which are fount-ains of Jus - tice like moun-tains high soar - ing a - bove Thy clouds which are fount-ains of
poco rall.
good - ness and love.
poco rall.
good - ness and love.
poco rall.
mf a tempo
mf
To all, life Thou giv - est— to both great and small; In
mf
To all, life Thou giv - est— to both great and small; In
mf
To all, life Thou giv - est— to both great and small; In
mf
To all, life Thou giv - est— to both great and small; In p
mf
Voices alone
Ped.

all life Thou liv - est, the true life of all; We blos - som and flour - ish as all life Thou liv - est, the true life of all; . . We blos - som and flour - ish as all life Thou liv - est, the true life of all; We blos - som and flour - ish as all life Thou liv - est, the true life of all; . . We blos - som and flour - ish as leaves on the tree, And with - er and per - ish— but nought chang - eth
leaves on the tree, And with - er and per - ish— but nought chang - eth leaves on the tree, . . And with - er and per - ish— but nought chang - eth leaves on the tree, And with - er and per - ish— but naught chang - eth
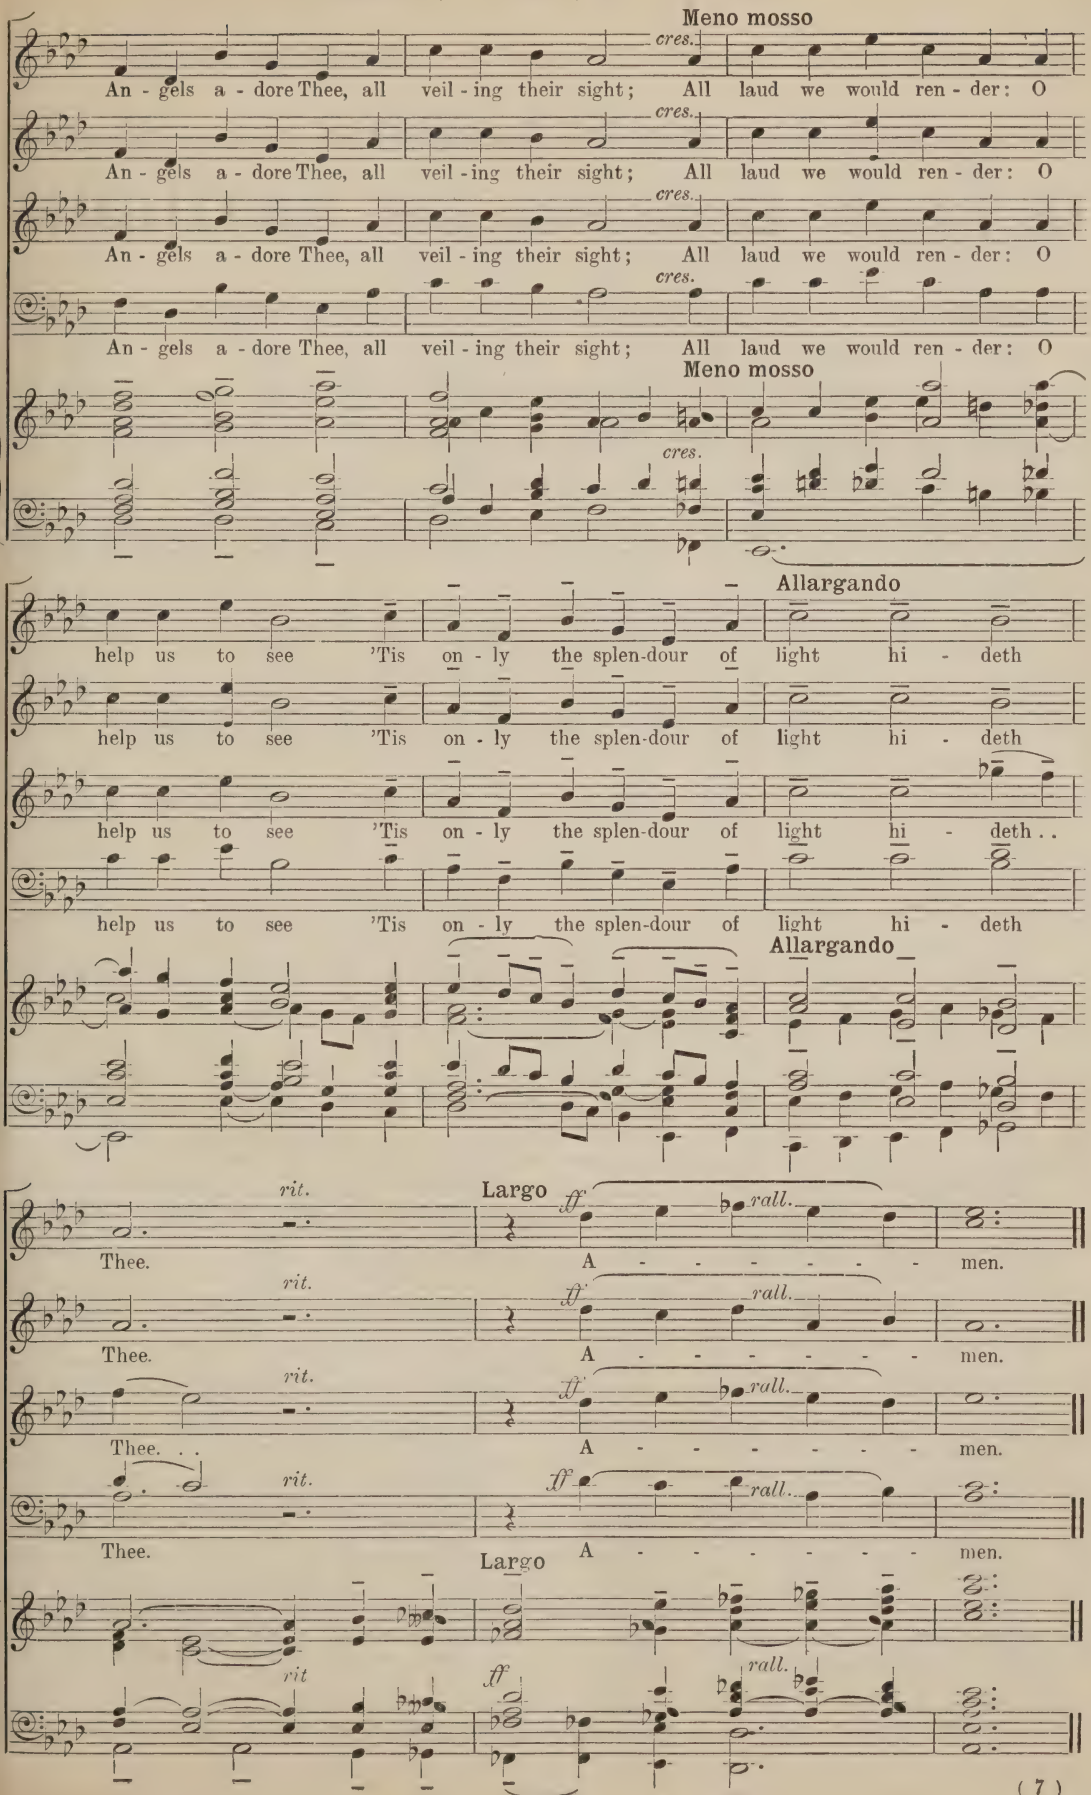
Thee. . . . Great Fa - ther of Glo - ry, pure Fa - ther of Light, Thine
Thee. . . . Great Fa - ther of Glo - ry, pure Fa - ther of Light, Thine
Thee. . . . Great Fa - ther of Glo - ry, pure Fa - ther of Light, Thine
Thee. . . . Great Fa - ther of Glo - ry, pure Fa - ther of Light, Thine
Org. f (Gt.)
Ped.



Meno mosso
cres.
An - gels a - dore Thee, all veil - ing their sight; All laud we would ren - der: O
Meno mosso
Allargando
help us to see 'Tis on - ly the splen-dour of light hi - deth Allargando
rit.
Largo
ff rall.
Thee.
A - - - - - - - men.
Largo

NOVELLO'S

OCTAVO EDITION OF ANTHEMS.

929. I will magnify Thee A. W. Marchant 4d.
886. Ditto ... ... Palestrina 4d.
1085. Ditto ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
153. Ditto ... ... J. Shaw 4d.
154. I will mention ... A. Sullivan 8d.
790. I will not leave you W. Byrd 4d.
575. Ditto ... ... B. Steane 3d.
519. I will open rivers E. Pettman 4d.
371. I will set His dominion H. W. Parker 6d.
100. I will sing a new song P. Armes 1s.
608. I will sing of the mercies J. Booth 4d.
134. I will sing of Thy power Greene 6d.
192. I will sing unto the Lord Wareing 4d.
1086. Ditto ... J. V. Roberts 8d.
6. I will wash my hands Hopkins 4d.
710. If any man hath not H. W. Davies 6d.
819. If Christ be not raised Macpherson 6d.
979. If the Lord had not E. C. Bairstow 4d.
825. If the Lord Himself W. Child 4d.
758. Ditto ... ... Walmisley 8d.
53. If we believe that Jesus died Goss 2d.
1117. Ditto ... ...Ed. Bunnett 6d.
1078. Ditto ... M. Vinden 4d.
544. If ye love Me ... B. Steane 3d.
453. Ditto ... ...H. W. Wareing 4d.
1118. Ditto ... ... Ed. Bunnett 4d.
732. Ditto ... H. J. Wood 4d.
789. If ye then be risen Ivor Atkins 6d.
469. Ditto (S.A.) M. B. Foster 4d.
58. Ditto ... ...J. Naylor 4d.
1140. Immortal, invisible God only wise ... ... E. H. Thiman 4d.
61. In Christ dwelleth John Goss 4d.
913. In divers tongues Palestrina 3d.
619. In every place incense John E. West 4d.
655. In heavenly love ... H. Parker 4d.
403. In my Father's house Crament 4d.
777. Ditto ... H. Elliot Button 4d.
102. In sweet consent E. H. Thorne 4d.
802. In that day (Christmas) J. F. Bridge 4d.
278. Ditto ... ...G. Elvey 6d.
1114. In the beginning ... Ed. Bunnett 4d.
720. Ditto ... C. Macpherson 6d.
582. Ditto ... ... F. Tozer 6d.
890. In the day shalt ...H. W. Wareing 4d.
338. In the fear of the Lord J. V. Roberts 4d.
980. In the hour of my H. W. Davies 6d
659. In the Lord ... C. Macpherson 6d.
282. Ditto ... ... R. Stewart 8d.
385. In Thee, O Lord... S. C.-Taylor 4d.
33. Ditto ... ...B. Tours 4d.
148. Ditto ... ... J. Weldon 4d.
725. Is it not wheat-harvest T. Adams 4d.
467. Is it nothing (S.A.) M. B. Foster 4d.
571. Ditto (4 voices) M. B. Foster 4d.
91. It came even to pass Ouseley 6d.
180. It is a good thing J. Barnby 8d.
231. Ditto ... ... T. M. Pattison 6d.
215. It shall come to pass G. M. Garrett 8d.

908. Jesu, Lord of life and glory E. Elgar 4d.
397. Jesu, lover of my soul (Male) F. Iliffe 3d.
907. Jesu, meek and lowly ... E. Elgar 4d.
1031. Jesu, our Lord ... Ch. Gounod 3d.
654. Jesu, Thou joy ... E. H. Davies 4d.
844. Jesu, Thou sweetness H. J. King 4d.
904. Jesu, word of God incarnate Elgar 3d.
455. Jesus Christ is risen O. A. King 6d.
788. Jesus Christ is risen to-day Gaul 6d.
1104. Ditto ... C. V. Stanford 4d.
971. Jesus lives! no longer now Foster 4d.
618. Jesus of Nazareth ... G. Byrd 6d.
548. Joy in harvest ... B. Steane 4d.
7. Judge me, O God Mendelssohn 2d.
677. Just Judge of Heaven Garrett 8d.
614. Justorum animæ ... Byrd 4d.

179. King all glorious J. Barnby 8d.
997. Ditto (4 voices) J. Barnby 6d.
733. King shall rejoice, The E. V. Hall 6d.
734. Ditto C. Harris 6d.
313. Ditto R. P. Stewart 8d.
981. Ditto C. Lee Williams 3d.
581. Kings shall be thy G. C. Martin 3d.
894. Kings shall see and arise J. F. Bridge 8d.

425. Lead, kindly Light R. Dunstan 4d.
528. Ditto ... ... C. L. Naylor 6d.
589. Ditto ... D. Pughe-Evans 4d
1067. Ditto ... ... B. Smith 4d.
37. Ditto ... ... J. Stainer 6d.
1115. Lead me in Thy truth Ed Bunnett 4d.
706. Let all the world ... W. Jordan 6d.
132. Let God arise ... ... Greene 8d.
375. Ditto ... T. T. Trimnell 6d.
857. Let my complaint come before Thee A. Batten 3d.
346. Ditto (Male) E. H. Thorne 4d.
509. Let not thine hand J. Stainer 4d.
807. Let not your heart E. Faning 4d.
438. Ditto ... ... M. B. Foster 4d
438.* Ditto (8 v.) M. B. Foster 4d.
795. Let the heavens be glad M. Higgs 6d.
226. Let the peace of God J. Stainer 6d.
565. Let the righteous... R. F. Lloyd 4d.
328. Let the words of my A. D. Culley 4d.
1097. Let Thy hand ... John Blow 3d.
494. Let Thy merciful ears W. B. Bell 4d.
1066. Let us now fear A. M. Goodhart 4d.
308. Let us now praise (Male) Thorne 4d.
962. Ditto ... ... A. J. Silver 4d.
96. Lift up thine eyes John Goss 8d.
897. Lift up your heads O. Gibbons 4d.
1098. Ditto ... ... John Blow 6d.
18. Ditto ... ... J. L. Hopkins 2d.
409. Ditto S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.
847. Ditto ... ... W. Turner 3d.
343. Lift up your hearts J. Barnby 6d.
972. Light in darkness D. C. Jenkins 4d.
595. Light of the world ... E. Elgar 4d.
408. Lighten our darkness G. R. Vicars 3d.
1027. Light's glittering morn J. E. West 6d.
393. Like as the hart ... T. Adams 4d.
799. Ditto H. Clarke 4d.
1063. Ditto ... W. S. Hoyte 4d.
530. Lo, God, our God B. Haynes 4d.
1105. Lo! He comes ...C. V. Stanford 4d.
335. Lo, summer comes again J. Stainer 8d.
504. Lo! the winter B. Farebrother 4d.
883. Look down, Holy Dove Selby 4d.
711. Look on the fields C. Macpherson 4d.
859. Look upon mine adversity Blow 3d.
639. Look upon the rainbow T. Adams 4d.
843. Look, ye saints ... M. B. Foster 4d.
906. Lord came from Sinai, The West 4d.
193. Lord gave, The A. C. Mackenzie 3d.
270. Lord give ear, The J. Rheinberger 4d.
801. Lord God of Abraham A. H. Brewer 3d.
312. Lord hath been, The E. T. Chipp 4d.
477. Ditto S. S. Wesley 4d.
526. Lord hath commanded, The (Male) Mendelssohn 6d.
163. Lord hath done great things, The H. Smart 6d.
839. Ditto John E. West 6d.
1125. Lord hath prepared, The Bunnett 4d.
224. Lord hear thee, The J. Barkworth 3d.
823. Ditto John Blow 3d.
165. Lord, how are they H. Clarke 8d.
391. Lord, I have loved ... F. Iliffe 4d.
122. Ditto G. W. Torrance 4d.
893. Lord is full of compassion, The F. E. Gladstone 4d.
44. Lord is great, The W. T. Best 4d.
248. Lord is in His holy temple, The G. Saunders 6d.
704. Ditto J. Stainer 6d.
83. Lord is King, The Henry Gadsby 8d.
367. Ditto H. J. King 6d.
869. Ditto ... W. King 3d.
41 Ditto T. T. Trimnell 6d.
483 Lord is loving, The A. W. Batson 4d.
39. Ditto G. M. Garrett 4d.
50. Lord is my light, The ... H. Hiles 4d.
407. Ditto W. Jordan 4d.
815. Ditto E. A. Sydenham 4d.
1126. Lord is my Shepherd, The Ed. Bunnett 4d.
613. Ditto H. M. Higgs 6d.
1054. Ditto Ouseley 4d.

67. Lord is my Shepherd, The (S.S.A.A.) Schubert 6d.
594. Ditto (S.A.T.B.) Schubert 6d.
152. Ditto J. Shaw 4d.
793. Ditto H. Smart 4d.
738. Ditto D. S. Smith 4d.
395. Ditto C. V. Stanford 8d.
862. Lord is my strength, The Booth 4d.
398. Ditto S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.
243. Ditto J. Goss 8d.
947. Ditto Bruce Steane 4d.
422. Lord is risen, The G. M. Garrett 6d.
1020. Ditto B. Luard-Selby 4d.
1101. Lord is terrible and very great, The ... A. M. Goodhart 4d.
1028. Lord is very great, The Beckwith 6d.
54. Lord, let me know mine end Goss 4d.
696. Lord liveth, The A. W. Marchant 4d.
351. Lord of all power (Male) J. Barnby 3d.
1025. Ditto E. T. Chipp 4d.
566. Lord of life A. C. Mackenzie 4d.
459. Lord of our life ... J. T. Field 4d.
411. Lord of the Harvest J. Barnby 6d.
1051. Ditto R. Redhead 4d.
404. Lord of the rich and golden F. Tozer 3d.
1049. Lord of the worlds John E. West 4d.
731. Lord Omnipotent, The T. Adams 4d.
873. Lord our Righteousness, The H. Blair 4d.
304. Lord preserveth, The P. Armes 8d.
474. Lord shall be, The J. V. Roberts 6d.
84. Lord that made, The J. Turle 3d.
318. Lord, Thou art God J. Stainer 1s.
803. Lord, Thou art good H. Coward 4d.
1128. Lord, Thou hast been our refuge H. Blair 4d.
434. Lord, Thou hast searched me A. Whiting 4d.
1023. Lord, Thy children J. H. Maunder 4d.
830. Lord, we leave Thy ... Brahms 6d.
1032. Lord, what is man W. Boyce 4d.
274. Lord, what love have I... Steggall 8d.
267. Lord, who shall dwell ... Roberts 6d.
112. Lord will comfort, The H. Hiles 8d.
835. Love divine, all love E. V. Hall 4d.

350. Magnify His Name G. C. Martin 6d
290. Make a joyful noise A.C. Mackenzie 8d.
108. Make me a clean heart J. Barnby 4d.
431. Ditto A. W. Batson 4d.
899. Make me, O Lord God J. Brahms 4d.
436. Man goeth forth ... A. Carnall 4d.
694. Man that is born... S. S. Wesley 3d.
1047. May my heart ... A. Dvorák 4d.
222. Me ye have bereaved C. Morales 4d.
527. Mercy and truth are met J. Stainer 4d.
211. Mine eyes look unto Thee H. Baker 4d.
818. Miserere mei, Deus G. Allegri 6d.
500. Ditto J. Barnby 4d.
665. Ditto (arr.) Novello 3d.
811. Ditto G. P. da Palestrina 6d.
518. Ditto E. Pettman 2d.
464 Ditto J. Stainer 4d.
86. Morning stars, The ... J. Stainer 8d.
767. Ditto G. A. A. West 6d.
765. Morn's roseate hues G. W. Chadwick 4d.
726. Most blessed Jesus A. H. Brewer 4d.
1059. My Beloved is mine R. W. Robson 4d.
512. My beloved spake H. Purcell 8d.
428 My God, I love Thee G. J. Bennett 4d.
617. My God, I thank Thee E. H. Lemare 4d.
288. My God, look upon J. L. Hopkins 4d.
10. My God, my God Mendelssohn 8d.
353. My heart is fixed W. Cruickshank 6d.
564. My heart is inditing M. B. Foster 6d.
460. My heart was glad A. Carnall 6d.
199. My hope is in the J. Stainer 8d.
406. My mouth shall speak John E. West 6d.
190. My soul is weary J. C. Beckwith 6d.
911. My soul, O praise the Lord Bach 4d.
485. My soul truly waiteth ... Attwood 4d.
1041. Ditto G. F. Cobb 4d.
586. Ditto ...B. Steane 3d.
205 My soul, wait thou still F. J. Read 6d.

Occasional Notes

Our thousandth issue has brought us a large number of appreciative letters from all quarters, as well as many generous references in the press. To all the writers we tender our sincere thanks.

Mr. Jack Hylton has recently delivered himself of an article in the Clarion, entitled 'Socialism in Modern Music: The Truth about Symphonic Syncopation,' and another in the Radio Times, covering the same ground (often in almost identical terms), headed 'The Triumph of Syncopation.' After the usual jibes at those of us whose brows are so high that we prefer Bach to Irving Berlin, and the Queen's Hall and London Symphony Orchestras to Mr. Hylton's Dance Band, both articles dilate on the fact that 'Much of the popular music of to-day is based upon some of the loveliest themes of the great masters.' But if these classical composers were 'great,' why should we be derided for preferring them to such men as Berlin, Gershwin, and Mr. Hylton himself, who are decidedly of the 'small' breed?

Mr. Hylton's main point is that by distorting themes from the great masters he and his like are increasing the public for classical music. Apparently, all the world and his wife will now become Handelians because, as Mr. Hylton says, 'the famous "Yes, we have no bananas"' is actually made up of a motive taken from the 'Halleujah Chorus,' eked out with scraps from 'The Bohemian Girl,' 'An Old-fashioned Garden,' and 'My bonny lies over the ocean.' What Mr. Hylton overlooks is the fact that the 'famous' banana absurdity is now so dead that no dance-band dare play it, or comedian sing it, while the 'Hallelujah Chorus' a few weeks ago thrilled an audience of many thousands at the Handel Festival.

Similarly, he tells us that a famous waltz 'hit,' 'The Song of Love,' was obviously inspired by the chief melody in Schubert's 'Unfinished' Symphony, and 'I'm always chasing rainbows' is almost a literal transcription of Chopin's 'Fantaisie-Impromptu.' But both 'hits' are already dead or dying, whereas the works from which their main themes were stolen by unprincipled 'composers' who were unable to invent tunes for themselves will be played and enjoyed by millions long after the present generation of syncopaters have emitted their last saxophone wail, trombone glissando, and rhythmic hiccup. Yet Mr. Hylton contends that, by stealing a tune from a classic, and then debasing it by association with feeble or ridiculous words, the jazz-mongers are doing something for the musical good of the community:

> There is hardly a page of modern music [a calm appropriation this, of the word 'modern'!] which cannot be shown to be some of the so-called classical music dressed up in a form suitable for our modern appreciation. As I write, the principal comedy 'hit' in London is obviously based on the 'Siegfried Idyll.' What is 'Crooning' but a variation of Liszt's 'Liebesträume'? 'My baby's arms' follows the 'Cavatina' of Raff very closely, whilst 'Sweetheart' calls upon Wagner's 'Evening Star' for its inspiration. [Inspiration!]

As a result of this, Mr. Hylton contends, 'the great majority of the public is getting good music—sugar-coated, if you like. And so modern symphonic syncopation is not half so bad as it seemed.' It strikes us as being very much worse. There is a good deal to be said in favour of an attempt to exploit and develop the possibilities of modern dance rhythms as Gershwin has done in his 'Rhapsody in Blue.' But even the plea of 'Socialism' cannot justify the theft and alteration for the worse of other men's inventions.

Of all the queer arguments in support of this dishonest procedure the queerest is that brought forward by Mr. Hylton in the following passage from the Clarion article:

> Because Shakespeare lived several hundred years ago, is there any sound reason why we should not present his wonderful works in our modern language, which we all understand, instead of reserving the pleasure of reading his immortal lines to the few scholars who can interpret the archaic language in which they were written?

A more disastrous and fantastic plea could not be imagined. We cannot but wonder whether Mr. Hylton has either read those 'wonderful works,' or seen them acted. If he can tell us of any Shakespearean performance in which the poet's 'archaic language' has been modernised, we shall be interested to hear of it. True, there have lately been performances in modern costume, but the object (and effect) was merely to enable the 'immortal lines' to make an even deeper impression than is possible when the audience's attention is largely distracted by over-realistic production. The quotation throws a vivid light on the mentality of that artistic underworld in which the dance-band supplies both tittilant and dope. We hasten to take up Mr. Hylton's 'analogy': Mr. Hylton and his colleagues are doing to Handel, Chopin, Liszt, &c., pretty much what would be done to Shakespeare by a producer who translated the poet's English into the argot of the Bowery. And if the producer defended his action by saying that he was making fine poetry accessible to the masses, he would merely be adding the sheerest humbug to his crime. As we said recently, in discussing this matter, the business of a dance composer is to compose dance music. If his inventive powers are unequal to the strain of providing suitable themes, he should give up the job, instead of stealing the fruit of other men's brains, and vulgarising themes which, in their original form, have become endeared to millions.

We have not space to expose the other fallacies with which Mr. Hylton's articles bristle. Perhaps on a future occasion we may discuss his astonishing final paragraphs in the Radio Times:

> Everywhere a strong sense of what is true in music is springing up. People are less and less patient with cant. Before the coming of radio, the whole of Great Britain was music-starved. Only in the large towns could our people hear any kind of music, and then it was seldom of the cheerful, simple, strong, rhythmical kind that people want.
>
> Radio is doing more than is generally realised to defeat the highbrow critics. In three short years of broadcasting, the musical taste of our country has been developed more than it could have been in half a century without radio. Three years from now—what further advance shall we see?

Perhaps the best and briefest reply to this is to be found is some statistics supplied by the B.B.C. in an Observer interview of December 13 last, and quoted in the 'Wireless Notes' in the Musical Times of January. We quote only one extract: After discussing the eight thousand letters received weekly, and giving particulars of complaints, the B.B.C. adds:

> Eighteen months ago classical music was definitely unpopular. To-day there are more enemies of dance music in our correspondence than of classical.

A copy of that issue, as well as of the present number, will be sent to Mr. Hylton in order to show him that 'Radio is doing more than is generally realised to defeat' not the highbrows, but those who glory in the simian type of forehead.

Perhaps the hardest things lately said about opera are in a Saturday Review article headed 'On overlooking Covent Garden,' by Mr. J. B. Priestley. Opera, he tells us, was once almost the chief of his delights. He goes on:

> There are people, here and there, who retain a taste for this form of entertainment all their lives; others again, who have always been and always will be indifferent to it; but there is a third class of persons who once had a passion for it, as they had, perhaps, for Whitman or walking tours or chess or Swinburne, and have now lost all interest in the mongrel art. To this class I most certainly belong.

Opera, he adds, was 'one of the grand passionate affairs' of his nonage. Hours in a rained-on queue were not too great a price to pay for 'a glimpse of "Tannhäuser" or "Lohengrin."' If there were an opera within miles, the youthful Priestley had to go to it, 'or the evening was in ruins.' He once heard eleven operas in a fortnight, a debauch which left him 'bankrupt and half idiotic for a month.'

> And now, what a change! Last night, I believe, Tristan and Isolda were once more quaffing their philtre in this city, to the accompaniment of soulful blasts on the Teutonic trombone, but I did not give a fig for them and their nonsense. Not only was I not sorry that I was absent, I was quite glad. I never want to set eyes on the fat pawing pair again.

'Fat pawing pair' is good!

So complete a renegade is the mature Priestley, that 'even for glorious "Figaro"' he will not put himself to any great inconvenience. And he sums up the question with a description of opera that is surely not unreasonably severe:

> In theory, opera combines in itself some half-dozen arts, but in actual practice it merely loses touch with all that is fine and moving in these arts, and contrives to assemble all the cheapest tricks. Even where it is not cheap—and Wagner is hardly that—it remains crushingly, colossally boring.

Operatic enthusiasts who point in reply to the crowded attendances at the recent Covent Garden season should also answer frankly the question as to how much of the box-office success was due to the artistic value of the works performed, and how much to the combined factors of social display and the attraction of such 'stars' as Chaliapin and Jeritza. Everybody knew, for example, that certain operas were produced, not on their merits, but merely as a setting for one or other of the 'stars.' In no form of art is this principle carried to such extremes as in opera, and that fact alone is sufficient reason for placing it in a lowly position compared with music and the drama proper.

We hear sometimes of American cities holding a 'Music Week.' Johannesburg has recently gone one better with a 'Music Fortnight,' in which were given orchestral concerts, daily organ recitals, military band performances, community 'sing-songs,' musical demonstrations, and performances galore of other kinds. The support accorded to this feverish bout was wonderful. The Town Hall was packed for the orchestral concerts; the children's concerts had an average audience of three thousand; and for the military band and community music in the Zoological Gardens, the attendances ranged between twelve thousand and fifteen thousand. One of the big stores organized a choir for the occasion, and at this and other large business establishments, performances of various types were on tap during the two weeks. The press rose to the occasion, and there were window displays in connection with the historical and other sides of music in all the chief streets. Among the works given at the Town Hall concerts were the ninth Symphony, and Brahms's 'Requiem.'

The programmes of the Young People's Concerts were well chosen, and the bill of fare (which was also the admission ticket) contained notes on the composer, particulars as to gramophone records and player-piano rolls of the works performed, and illustrations of the instruments of the orchestra, with brief descriptions; also a picture of a full orchestra in situ, the various departments being numbered for reference in connection with pictures of individual instruments. (For this valuable feature the promoters thanked Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper, of Liverpool.) On the whole, we have seen nothing better in the way of children's programmes than this well-planned single sheet.

The prime mover was Mr. John Connell, the Town Organist, who conducted the orchestral concerts, and gave the daily organ recital. Our informant tells us that 'for a fortnight a period of intense musical intoxication was observed in our city life.' Excellent! We hope the city will not relapse into sobriety. Apparently there is little fear of this, for we hear that the Johannesburghers 'are moving now to secure an even more exciting time next year with a Beethoven Festival.' Here is an example of organized energy that many a city at home might copy.

Readers who are interested in the articles on 'Music in Tolstoy's Life' will probably be glad to know of the projected celebration of Tolstoy's centenary, in 1928, by the Tolstoy Society. The Society is formed with the object of carrying out the centenary celebration, and will probably exist for that year only. It will arrange lectures, play-performances, and meetings, and will aim at furthering the publication of a Centenary Edition of Tolstoy's works. Some volumes are already available in the World's Classics, issued by the Oxford University Press, and others are nearly ready for publication. The scheme has the support of a large and powerful body of English authors and artists. Musicians should be interested, if only because of Tolstoy's pronouncements on Art in general. (Of his 'What is Art?' Mr. Bernard Shaw says: 'Whoever is really conversant with art, recognises in it the voice of the master.') Membership of the Society costs a guinea, and pledges the subscriber to nothing further. The hon. secretary, Mr. Aylmer Maude, Great Baddow, Chelmsford, will gladly furnish full information.

Some inquiries have reached us as to a couple of cryptic expressions in recent issues of this journal. Last month, on page 537, appeared a reference to 'one per cent. of the jazz and song hits putting a fortune in the pockets of thin composers.' For 'thin,' read 'their,' an eleventh hour alteration on the proof. And on page 425 of the May issue a review article of Medtner's Sonata-Vocalise was headed 'Part of a Sonata for Voice and Pianoforte.' Why 'part of?' asks a reader. The explanation is a last-moment and illegible direction to 'push up' the paragraph. Such slips are humiliating reminders that, as even a leisurely-issued book needs to go into several editions in order to be free from error, a journal can only feebly struggle towards that end, and ask for readers' indulgence as rarely as possible.

Americans seem interesting in The for Itself; here, with the re-arrangements consequent upon sheerly commercial policies and business routines, almost everyone with anything individual to say struggles through a mass of obstruction, and very generally a conspiracy of silence which causes his or her every utterance of moment to be carefully shovelled out of sight the moment it appears in print, while the vapid platitudes of this or that commercialist pushed into musical journalism through interior policies extraneous to music proper is boomed and given columns for pompously self-conscious attempts to establish his or her 'critical' prestige by the time-worn 'gag' of bewailing that 'things are not what they were'—oblivious of the delightful supplementary remark once made thereto, 'They never were,' or else by that insidious method excellently characterised by George Samson in a letter to a contemporary recently—of 'flattering the public by approving its stupidity as honesty.'

In the main we heartily agree with the above epigram, from a recent article by Mr. Leigh Henry in the Musical Standard, though we feel that it is easy to overrate the importance of interesting in The for Itself.

We have been favoured with a verbatim report of Sir Hamilton Harty's speech at the annual meeting of the Hallé Society on June 22—too late for quotation or discussion in the present number. In view of its importance and general interest, we propose to print as much of it as possible, with comment, in our next issue.

Alliteration's artful aid has probably never been worse employed than as a title to a recent article on Thomas Britten, the musical small-coal man: 'An Anthracite Æsthete.'

THE HANDEL FESTIVAL

Preparations involving many thousands of pounds' expenditure (increasing sums nowadays) are so risky, that the post-war Handel Festivals have been entered upon doubtfully. The performances justify the decision of the Crystal Palace Festivals to continue them. Never was this so clearly the case as last month. As one who has attended them for about forty years, the writer came away feeling that 1926 is not likely to be the last triennial. Such a fine balance of choral forces inspired hope that the customary male neglect of mixed choirs is passing away. The singers, however, were too much of a background to the widely spread and deep array of the orchestra, through which their tone had to pierce. Consequently the choir seemed to be deficient in tonal quality for its size, and was at a disadvantage in following the distant conductor. His plea, at the general rehearsal, for more rhythm, accent, clearness of words, and absence of dragging was addressed to the singers; but, as the later performances proved, the huge orchestra, largely amateur, did not show up so well as the choir. It was noticed that the 'solo band' had the best work to do. The London Symphony Orchestra was a model by which the amateurs could gauge how far instrumental performance has proceeded, even in three years.

Times have changed since Charles Lyall's cartoon appeared, showing Joseph Bennett white-washing the Handel 'moniments' and Ebenezer Prout, the policeman, ordering him off. The Prout and Bridge spirit has been responsible for many a dull and insipid performance. Was Handel himself so scrupulous? Folk-songs, which never had an accompaniment, had been scored, incorporated, 'borrowed,' and harried almost out of recognition. Why should the old 'robber' be piously followed? Mozart's, Franz's, and other additional accompaniments may have served their day, but Handel deserves a better fate than to restrict thousands of performers to the small scale for which he wrote. Sir Henry Wood has set the pace, and put Handel on a higher 'moniment.' This triennial will be known as the Henry Wood year, or, better, as his first year. He has touched up instrumentation and interpretation with freshness at every point. What days and midnight lamps he must have spent!

The general rehearsal, lasting four hours—excluding an hour's interval—gave a small audience an idea of the works to be heard on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday of the following week. A real rehearsal is not the press day it once was. No pressman would venture to state the naked truth at a performance as Sir Henry Wood does at a rehearsal. Thus are singers stung to action and towards perfection. One chorus was taken four times. Many of the remarks were of permanent value. Relief was afforded by recits. and arias which were not heard again at subsequent performances, and Mesdames Florence Austral and Edith Furmedge, Messrs. Ben Davies and Norman Allin, did nothing better later on.

Most conveniently for business people, singers and audience alike, the week-day performances took place after business hours. First place was given to selections from eleven operas, the choral numbers newly and richly re-scored by Sir Henry Wood. Bright, easy, and charming they were, but only two gave promise of further popularity—the chorus, 'Now cometh May' ('Rinaldo'), and the jolly 'The foolish lover' ('Deidamia'), greatly enhanced by the new scoring. Mesdames Margaret Balfour and Carrie Tubb, Messrs. Walter Widdop and Robert Radford, were the principals. Quite a fuss was made of M. Marcel Dupré, who redeemed the rather tame Concerto No. 10 for organ and orchestra (No. 4 of Set 2) from somnolence by a wonderful and arresting cadenza. This concert concluded with 'Zadok the Priest.'

Regularly and inevitably 'Israel in Egypt' is one of the triennial feasts. Nowhere else has this work a chance of grand display and proper balance of choir and orchestra. The programme let us into the secret of the second-hand use of materials of Handel, A. Stradella, and J. C. Kerl, but, as the book says, it is a 'gigantic conception,' and one which even some musical people admit they have not heard, through lack of large double-choruses in their neighbourhoods. The soloists have little to do, but Dr. Ben Davies, on whom time graciously smiles, had a great reception after 'The enemy said.' Not a quibble is heard now when all the basses sing 'The Lord is a Man of War.' Such antiphonal music, sung by soloists, always made for undesirable comparisons between artists. Profoundly impressive was the choral-singing, and many new points of reading were noticeable. Much pains had been taken with the 'Hailstone Chorus,' but the immediate attacca stopped the gathering demonstration of the audience, which was larger than on previous days. The orchestra had tit-bits in the second part: the Concerto Grosso No. 12, in B minor, and 'The Water Music' Suite.

'The Messiah' performance I did not attend. I understand there was an immense audience. Nobody needs a report on 'Messiah' concerts. J. G.

PLAYFORD: SOME HITHERTO UNNOTICED CATALOGUES OF EARLY MUSIC

By William C. Smith
(Of the British Museum)

The main features of the work of John Playford, the 17th-century music publisher, are well known to musical antiquaries, and it is not intended to review them in detail here. Admirable articles exist by Mr. Frank Kidson, Miss Middleton, and others, dealing with the life and publications of the enterprising parish clerk who gave a new impetus to English music from about 1650.

It was Playford's custom regularly to advertise his publications on successive works, and the particulars for a fairly complete bibliography are therefore available. Investigators, however, do not appear to have been familiar with the unique series of publishers' and auction sale catalogues, issued by John and Henry Playford, which are to be described here. They exist in the Bagford Collection of title-pages, &c., in the British Museum (Harl. 5936, Nos. 421; 419, 420; 147; 422-428), and were issued in 1653, 1690, 1691, 1697. Not only as Playford records are they of interest, but also because they include amongst their items many important early English musical works, including a number otherwise unrecorded.

The earliest of the four catalogues (Harl. 5936, No. 421, 1653) is a single sheet folio (see illustration). It was issued when Playford was soundly established as a music seller, and well over his first efforts as a publisher.

It is well known that John Playford was Clerk to the Temple Church from 1653, and that his shop was 'near the Church door,' where, it is assumed, he lived from 1653-59. He is supposed to have married in or before 1653, and from 1665 or earlier he resided at Islington, where his wife kept a boarding-school until her death in 1679. After that his home was in 'Arundel Street, near the Thames side.' It may be as well to contradict the repeatedly made statement that the school was advertised by Playford in the 1659 edition of 'Select Ayres and Dialogues.' There is an advertisement of the kind in the 1679 edition of 'Choice Ayres,' which may have given rise to the mistake. Where the Playfords resided from 1659-65 is not definitely known. From the imprint on the catalogue under review, it is clear that Playford was living in 'Three Leg Alley, Fetter Lane,' in 1653, and a reasonable assumption is that he moved to the Temple either on his marriage or when he received his appointment as Clerk. Three Leg Alley was a turning on the west side of Fetter Lane, about midway between Fleet Street and Holborn.

In the first and longer section of the catalogue, under abbreviated and in some cases strange titles, are listed practically all the works of the famous English composers prior to Playford's time, with the exception of liturgical works and the popular Sternhold and Hopkins editions of the Psalms. Even in the light of present-day interest in early English music, it would be difficult to find anywhere else a better short catalogue which embraces so much of importance, or gives at a glance so comprehensive a view of the Elizabethan period.

Although this 1653 catalogue is the earliest of the kind available, it was not the first issued. Rimbault ('Bibliotheca Madrigaliana,' p. 14) refers to a catalogue of 'Musick bookes printed in England' published by Thomas Este, 1609, and afterwards included with additions in Robert Clavell's 'General Catalogue of Books printed in England,' 1675. Subsequent editions of the Clavell catalogue were issued in 1680 and 1696, and copies of the three editions exist in the British Museum. An examination of these three catalogues clearly indicates that the music sections of them were all based on the Playford catalogue of 1653. Exactly the same heading and contents of the first part of the Playford catalogue are repeated in the Clavell catalogue, 1675, but with a different list of works in the second part under the heading 'Musick Books lately Printed,' from that in Playford.

The majority of the items in the first section of the 1653 catalogue fall between 1575 and 1620, and the works in the second section date from 1638 to 1653, thus illustrating the fact that after the Elizabethan period music publishing suffered an eclipse of some twenty years. It is a curious speculation as to why Playford divided the catalogue as he did. Was it because he considered that the items in the first section were already out of date, and therefore comparatively of little interest artistically and financially, and that the works in the second section were particularly attractive as the 'new music' of the day? Most likely he drew the line between those works in which he had only a bookseller's interest and those in which he was personally concerned as publisher or agent, as it seems clear that he did not actually publish before 1650. He may have copied the form of arrangement adopted by Este in 1609.

Some of the items in the first section, not easily recognised under their abbreviated titles, and others referring to works extremely rare to-day, will be briefly noted, and the whereabouts of some existing unique copies indicated.

'Dowlands Introduction' evidently refers to 'Andreas Ornithoparcus his Micrologus, or Introduction: Containing the Art of Singing . . . Digested into Foure Bookes . . . By John Douland,' 1609. 'Dowlands fourth Booke' is the famous 'Lachrimæ' [1604] (B.M. K. 2. i. 16.).* 'Dowlands fift Booke' is 'A Pilgrimes Solace,' 1612 (B.M. K. 2. i. 10).

Only one copy of each of the following works is known: 'Cavendish his Ayres,' 1598 (B.M. K. 2. i. 20); 'Jones ultimum vale,' 1608 (R.C.M.)*; 'Jones Muses Garden,' 1610 (New York); 'Rosseters Consort' ('Lessons for Consort'), 1609 (Cittern part, R.C.M.).

The list of Byrd's works as given is particularly interesting. 'Birds Kirries' are of course the Masses for three, four, and five voices. It will be noticed that certain items by Byrd are additionally indicated by reference to a particular number out of the work in question: 'Birds 5 parts wherein is Lullaby' (Psalmes, Sonets & Songs, 1588); 'Birds 5 parts Latine, Ne Irascaris. 1. set' (Liber primus

* B.M. = British Museum; R.C.M. = Royal College of Music.

A CATALOGUE OF ALL THE
MUSICK-BOOKES
That have been Printed in England, either for Voyce or Instruments.

Musick Bookes in folio.

ALfonso his Ayres.
Alphonso his Lyra Lessons.
Allisons Psalms, of 4 parts, according to the Church Tunes.
Bartlers Ayres.
Coperario's first Booke.
Coperario's second Booke.
Corkins Ayres, first Booke.
Corkins Ayres second Booke.
Cavendish his Ayres.
Campions first and second Books.
Campions third and fourth Books.
Dowlands Introduction.
Dowlands first Booke.
Dowlands second Booke.
Dowlands third Booke.
Dowlands fourth Booke.
Dowlands fift Booke.
R. Dowlands Lute Lessons.
R. Dowlands Ayres.
Daniels Ayres.
Fords Ayres.
Filmers Ayres.
Greaves Ayres.
Humes first Booke.
Humes second Booke.
Jones first Booke.
Jones second Booke.
Jones ultimum vale.
Jones Musicall Dreame.
Jones Muses Garden.
Leightons select Songs of 4 and 5 parts.
Morley's Introduction.
Morley's Ayres.
Morley's Consort.
Maynards Ayres.
Masons Ayres.
Pilkingtons Ayres.
Rosseters Ayres.
Rosseters Consort.
Robinsons Schoole of Musick.
Book of Virginall Lessons by Mr. Bird, Dr. Bull, and Orlando Gibbons.

Musick Books in quarto.

ALlisons 5 parts.
Adsons Courts Masking Ayres. 5 and 6 parts.
Amners set to 3, 4, 5, 6 parts.
Bathes Introduction.
Butlers principles of Musick.
Birds Kirries 3 parts.
Birds Kirries 4 parts.
Birds kirries 5 parts.
Birds 5. parts wherein is Lullaby.
Birds 3, 4, 5, 6 parts, English.
Birds 5 parts Latine, Ne Irascaris. 1. set.
Birds 5, 6 parts Latine, Infælix ego, 2. set.
Birds 1. set of Gradualia. 5, 4, 3 parts.
Birds 2. set of Gradualia. 4, 5, 6, parts.
Birds 2. set English.
Batesons 3, 4, 5, 6 parts, 1. set.
Batesons 3, 4, 5, 6 parts, 2. set.
Benners Madrigals, 4 parts.
Bevens Canons upon divers plain songs.
Cosins Psalms, 5, 6 parts.
Carltons 5 parts.
Croces 6 parts.
D. Campions Book of Counterpoint.
Damons Psalms 4 parts 1. set.
Damons Psalms 4 parts, 2. set.
Easts first set, 3, 4, 5 parts.
Easts second set, 3, 4, 5 parts.
Easts third set, 5, 6 parts.
Easts fourth set, 4, 5, 6 parts.
Easts fifth set, 4, 5, and 6 parts.
Easts sixth set, 5 and 6 parts.
Easts 7. set of fantasies, 2, 3, & 4 parts.
Easts three parts.
Farmers two parts in one.
Farmers Madrigals 4 parts.
Gibbons Madrigals, 5 parts.
Gibbons 3 part fantasies, graven upon Copper.
Holbornes Cittern Booke.
Holbornes Pavin, 5 partr.
Hiltons 3 parts Fa la's.
Jones 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 parts.

Musick Books in quarto.

Kirbies 3, 4, 5, 6 parts.
Lichfields 3, 4, 5 parts.
Lessons for the Lute, Orph. & Bando.
Morley's 2 parts English.
Morley's 2 parts Italian.
Morley's Canzonets, 3 parts.
Morley's Madrigals 4 parts.
Morleys 4 parts selected.
Morley's 5 parts selected.
Morley's fa la's English, 5 parts.
Morley's fa la's Italian, 5 parts.
Morley's Ayres 5 parts.
Mundayes 3, 4, 5 parts.
Orlando's d'Lasso's 2 parts, Latine.
Oriana's 5 and 6 parts.
Pilkingtons 3, 4, 5 parts.
Path-way to Musick.
Persons 5 and 6 parts.
Persons Ayres and Dialogues, 4 and 5 parts.
Robinsons Citharen Booke.
Ravenscrofts Book of Catches.
Ravenscrofts Psalms of 4 parts.
Tallis and Birds Latine, 5 and 6 parts.
Taylors Psalms of five parts.
Vautors set of 5 and 6 parts.
Wilbies first set, 3, 4, 5, 6 parts.
Wilbies second set 3, 4, 5, 6 parts.
Warsons 4, 5, 6 parts, collected.
Withornes two parts.
Withornes 4, 5 parts.
Wilkes 3, 4, 5, 6 parts.
Wilkes fa la's, 5, 6 parts.
Wilkes third set, 5, 6 parts.
Wilkes Fantasticks, 3 parts.
Wards set to 3, 4, 5, 6 parts.
Yongs first set, 4, 5, 6 parts.
Yongs second set, 5, 6 parts.
Youles Canzonets, 3 parts.
Pamelia, a Book of Catches of 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 9, & 10 parts.
Deutranela Book of Catches and Freemans songs of 2 and 3 parts.

Musick Bookes lately Printed.

MR. Porters set of Ayres for 2, 3, 4, and 5 Voyces, with a through Basse after the Italian way.
Mr. Henry and Mr. William Lawes set of Psalms, to Mr. Sands Translation, for 3 Voyces, with a through Basse.
Mr. Henry Lawes Musick for 2 Voyces to Mr. Sands Translation of the Psalmes, fol. and oct.
Mr. William Childs set of Psalms for 3 Voyces, after the Italian way, with a through Basse, cut in Copper.
A Booke of select Ayres and Dialogues for 1, 2, and 3 Voyces to sing to the Theorbo, or Basse Violl, composed by Dr. Wilson, Dr. Colman, Mr. Henry, and Mr. William Lawes, and other excellent Masters in Musick.
A Book of Ayres and Dialogues for 1, 2, and 3 Voyces, by Mr. Henry Lawes.
A Book of Catches, Rounds, and Canons, collected and published by John Hilton.
Musicks Recreation, or choice Lessons for the Lyra Violl to severall new tunings, composed by severall Excellent Masters.
A New Booke of Lessons and Instructions for the Cithern, and Gittern.
A New Book, Entituled, the Dancing Master, or plain and easie Rules for the Dancing of Countrey Dances, with the Tunes to each Dance, to be playd on the Treble Violin.
Renatus Des Cartes his Compendium of Musick in English.

LONDON, Printed, and are to be sold by John Playford, at his shop in the Inner Temple neare the Church doore, or at his house in three Leg Alley, in Fetter lane, next doore to the red Lyon.

Sacrarum Cantionum, 1589); 'Birds 5, 6 parts Latine, Infœlix ego, 2. set' (Liber secundus Sacrarum Cantionum, 1591). These specially mentioned numbers must have been popular in Playford's time. The Lullaby has been frequently reprinted.

'Easts fifth set, 4, 5, and 6 parts' and 'Easts three parts' require explanation. A set is known of which the title-page reads, 'The Fift Set of Bookes, wherein are Songs full of Spirit and delight, So composed in 3. Parts, that they are as apt for Vyols as Voyces. Newly published by Michaell East,' 1618. The only two copies available consist of Cantus, Bassus, and Quintus parts. Dr. Fellowes points out that > . . . it is difficult to conjecture how this fifth book was intended to be used for singers, because it is one of those Sets in which no more than the opening words are given in any of the part-books, and the lyrics have completely perished with the exception of these few which were used elsewhere by East or other madrigalists.

It will be noted that Playford lists the 'Fift Set' as of '4, 5 and 6 parts,' and that after the seven known sets occurs 'Easts three parts.' These details are also repeated in each of the Clavell catalogues. No set of 'three parts' is known other than the Cantus, Bassus, and Quintus parts belonging to the two copies of the 'Fift Set' already mentioned, and the title-pages of these parts do not agree with Playford's title, 'Easts fifth set, 4, 5 and 6 parts.' Is a possible explanation of the apparent confusion to be found in the suggestion that an extract of three parts for instrumental use was made from the 'Fifth Set' which was for four, five, and six parts, of which no complete copy has come down to us?

'Farmers two parts in one' refers to the very rare work by John Farmer, 'Divers and sundry waies of two parts in one, to the number of fortie upon one playn Song,' 1591. Only one copy is known (Bodleian).

'Holbornes Cittern Booke' is Antony Holborne's 'The Cittharn Schoole,' 1597 (R.C.M., unique copy).

'Kirbies 3, 4, 5, 6 parts' probably refers to George Kirbye's 'The first set of English Madrigalls to 4, 5, & 6 voyces,' 1597 (B.M. K. 1. e. 6). No set for three parts is known, although the Clavell catalogues mention '3, 4, 5, 6 parts.'

'Lichfields 3, 4, 5 parts' most likely refers to Henry Lichfild's 'The First Set of Madrigals of 5. Parts,' 1613 (B.M. K. 8. f. 5). No set for '3, 4, 5 parts' is recorded, although that description appears in the Clavell catalogues.

'Morley's 2 parts Italian.' This work cannot be identified, although it is also listed in the Clavell catalogues. It may refer to the Instrumental 'Fantasies,' with Italian names, which occur in the 'First Booke of Canzonets to Two Voyces.'

'Warson's 4, 5, 6 parts, collected' refers to Thomas Watson's 'The first sett of Italian Madrigalls Englished,' 1590. The name is given correctly in the Clavell catalogues of 1680 and 1696.

'Ravenscrofts Book of Catches' is doubtless 'Melismata,' 1611, as 'Pammelia' and 'Deuteromelia,' his other two catch books, are listed later on.

The second section of the catalogue, 'Musick Bookes lately Printed,' includes several works not published by Playford, and one or two of which the advertisement refers to editions later than the first. Earlier issues of the catalogue may have been made by Playford, as he had been in business three years or so when the 1653 one appeared.

'Mr. Porters set of Ayres' raises an old query. The work is presumed to be that advertised on 'Select Ayres and Dialogues,' 1659, and elsewhere, as 'Mr. Walter Porter's first set of Ayres and Madrigals for 2, 3, 4 and 5 Voyces, with a Through Bass; for the Organ or Theorbo Lute, the Italian way: Printed 1639.' No copy is available, and some authorities have assumed that it was a second edition of 'Madrigales and Ayres. Of two three foure and fiue Voyces, with the continued Base, with Toccatos, Sinfonias and Rittornellos to them. After the manner of Consort Musique,' 1632 (B.M. K. 8. f. 20; unique). In support of this theory, it will be noticed that only one work of Porter's appears in the Playford catalogue.

'Mr. William Childs set of Psalms for 3 Voyces.' A very rare edition of this work was issued in 1639, 'The First Set of Psalmes of III. Voyces' (Glasgow; B.M. K. 2. a. 11, two pages only of a single part). Eitner, Kidson, Chappell, mention an edition of 1650, stated by Davey ('History of English Music') to have been reprinted by Playford, who used the original title and plates. This may have been the issue advertised in the 1653 catalogue.

'A Book of Catches, Rounds, and Canons.' This is the well-known work of John Hilton, 'Catch that Catch can,' dated 1652, but assigned to 1651 by Playford in 'Select Ayres,' 1659. A smaller edition of this work was one of the four sections forming the 'Musicall Banquet,' 1651 (Bodleian; unique). In the preface to 'Court Ayres,' 1655 (B.M. K. 4. a. 4), the publisher gives the following account of the origin and subsequent subdivision of the 'Musicall Banquet':

> About three years since I published a Booke called the Musicall Banquet, there being in it a small taste of Musick in four severall Tracts. The first was some Rules for Song and Violl. The second had in it about 30 Lessons for Lyra Violl. The Third contained about 27 Lessons of Two Parts, Basse and Treble. And the fourth consisted of about 20 Rounds and Catches.
>
> That little Booke finding such acceptance among all Lovers and Practitioners in Musick (and the Impression now totally sold off) I resolved to inlarge each of these Tracts, and to Print them in severall Books, which I have now (through Gods permission) accomplish'd. The first Book I call, A brief Introduction to the skill of Song and Violl. The second, Musicks Recreation, wherein is 117 Lessons for the Lyra Violl. The third is intituled Court-Ayres of two parts Treble and Basse, containing 246 Lessons. The fourth is called Catch that Catch can, or Catches, Rounds and Cannons, for 3 or foure Voyces, containing at least 150. Whereby you have a much larger Banquet than you had before.

The first separate issues of the four works forming the 'Musicall Banquet' were published in 1654, 1652, 1655, and 1652 respectively, and they each went through a number of editions, 'Court Ayres' becoming 'Courtly Masquing Ayres' (1662), and 'Catch that Catch can' changing to 'The Musical Companion,' and subsequently 'The Pleasant Musical Companion.'

'A New Booke of Lessons and Instructions, for the Cithern and Gittern.' According to Frank Kidson, a unique copy of this work, issued in 1652, is at Glasgow. Another edition was advertised by Playford in 1659. 'Musick's Delight on the Cithren,' 1666 (B.M. K. 1. a. 3), and 'Musick's Solace on the Cithren and Gittern,' advertised 1664, &c. (no copy available), probably refer to other editions of the same work. Each form of the title is used in the advertisements from 1653 onwards, but up to the present, the only case traced in which two forms are used together in the same list is in the 1696 Clavell catalogue.

'A New Book entitled the Dancing Master.' It is hardly necessary to mention that this refers to the second edition, 1652, of the famous series so widely drawn upon by modern editors. The first edition, dated 1651, entered at Stationers' Hall, 1650, was published under the title 'The English Dancing Master' (B.M. K. 1. a. 8* (7)).

'Renatus Des Cartes his Compendium of Musick in English.' This is the English edition, 1653, of 'Renati Des-Cartes Musicæ Compendium.' 1650. Readers of Pepys will recall the entry of the diarist, December, 1668-69:

> Christmas Day. To dinner alone with my wife, who, poor wretch! sat undressed all day till ten at night altering and lacing of a noble petticoat; while I by her making the boy read to me the Life of Julius Cæsar, and Des Cartes book of Musick.

The Second Catalogue of the series (Harl. 5936/419, 420) was issued apparently in 1690. It consists of four quarto pages, containing a hundred and thirty items, and the title-page reads as follows:

> A Curious Collection of Musick-Books, Both Vocal and Instrumental, (and several Rare Copies in Three and Four Parts, Fairly Prick'd) by the Best Masters. Formerly designed to have been sold by way of Auction: But the Reason of its being put off, was, That several Gentlemen, Lovers of Musick, living remote from London, having a Desire for some of this Collection, and could not be there, they are here set down in Order, with the Rates, being lower than could be afforded otherwise. The Collection is to be sold by Henry Playford at his House at the Lower End of Arundel-Street, in the Strand; where the Collection may be viewed four Days after the Publication in the Gazette. All Gentlemen and Ladies that Desire any of these Collections, sending in time the Number and the Price, may have them delivered, they being designed to be sold off in a Fortnight. Catalogues may be had Gratis, of Mr. Knight Bookseller in the New Exchange in the Strand; Mr. Carr at his shop at the Middle Temple-Gate in Fleetstreet; Mr. Salter Instrument-Seller on the North-side of St. Paul's Church; Mr. Hindmarsh Bookseller against the Royal Exchange in Cornhil; at Mr. Henry Playford's shop near the Temple-Church; and of Mr. Dolliff Bookbinder in Oxford.

The earliest known catalogue of an auction sale of music and music books appears to be the third of the series under review (Harl. 5936/147). From the title-page of the Second catalogue (Harl. 5936/419, 420) it seems as if Playford had some difficulty in persuading the public into the auction room.

A number of selected items showing the prices are transcribed here, including some lots of ten, twenty, fifty or a hundred copies of works at special rates. To glance down the list, with present-day prices in mind, may not be a pleasant experience for the modern collector. Apparently, little interest was taken in collecting music during the 17th and 18th centuries:

Several Lessons for 2 Lyra Viols by Mr. Jenkins, Mr. Lawes and others, Fol. 5*s.* 0*d.*
Mr. Gamble's Airs and Dialogues in 2 Books, in Folio Quires. 4*s.* 0*d.*
Mr. Douland's Introduction for singing, in Folio. 2*s.* 0*d.*
Parthenia Lessons for the Virginals or Harpsichord, Engraven in Folio. 2*s.* 6*d.*
The first Book of Airs by Thomas Campion, in Folio printed. 2*s.* 6*d.*
Mr. Purcel's Sonata's in 4 parts, Engraven in quarto, Marble Pap. Gilt leaves. 10*s.* 0*d.*
Mr. Lock's Opera, and Dr. Wilson's Songs, prick'd in Folio. 5*s.* 0*d.*
Three old Catch-Books Palmelia. 2*s.* 6*d.*
Holbourn's Citharen Book. 1*s.* 6*d.*
A Ruled Book, 6 Lines, 8 Staves in Folio. 1*s.* 0*d.*
Another large Ruled Book of the largest and best Demy Paper, neatly bound in Calves Leather, Gilt, 5 Lines, 12 Staves, Folio. 8*s* 0*d.*

Musick-Books in Quires at half the price as formerly sold.
Ten of the 4 and 5 Books of choice Airs, the 4 at 2*s.* the 5 at 1*s.* apiece. both 3*s.*
Twenty of each of the Banquets of Musick, 1 and 2 Books, both 2*s.*
Fifty of Mr. Farmers first Consort of Musick in 4 parts, at 2*s.* a set.
One hundred, 50 of a sort of the two sets of Mr. Deerings, at 4*s.* both sets.

Some selected items from this catalogue require special mention. 'Songs for 3 voices by Thomas Pierce, fairly prick'd in quarto.' No copy of this work is available, and the composer cannot be definitely identified. Thomas Pierce contributed to Hilton's 'Catch that Catch can.' Eitner refers to various forms of the name under Pearce, and Lafontaine in 'The King's Musick' gives references to Pee, Peers, Peirce junior, Peirce senior, from 1603 to 1663, any one of which may refer to the composer of the work in question.

'Mr. Lawes Songs, and Mr. Jacksons Hymns on K. Charles I. in 4 parts, prick'd.' This work, or it may be two works, bound together, cannot be identified. There was a John Jackson, 'Instructor in Musick' at Ely Cathedral, 1669, and organist of Wells in 1674, and compositions under the same name occur in Playford's 'Theater of Music,' Fourth Book, 1687, and elsewhere. William Jackson was Gentleman of the Chapel Royal, 1663 (Lafontaine), but there appears to be no evidence to connect the work under review with one or other of the composers mentioned.

'Tunes of several Psalms set to the Organ by Dr. Gibbons, fairly prick'd.' Not identified.

'A Book of Lessons for the Virginal and Organ, fairly prick'd in folio.' 'The Second Part of the Virginal Book' is advertised at the end of the catalogue amongst 'Books lately printed.' No copies have been traced under these titles. They probably refer to Playford's 'Musicks Hand-maide . . . Lessons for the Virginals or Harpsycon,' of which there were various editions of the first part from 1663 onwards, and of the second part from 1689. Playford advertised on 'Select Ayres and Dialogues,' 1659:

> Musick Books shortly to come forth . . . A Book for the Virginals containing variety of new and choice Lessons, also Toys and Jigs, Fitted for the practice of young Learners.

Copies of the early editions of either part of 'Musicks Hand-maide' are extremely rare (B.M. K.1. c.1; K. 4. b. 10).

(To be continued.)

The 'Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Prize,' of a thousand dollars, has been awarded to a Sonata for violin and pianoforte, by Albert Huyvrechts, of Brussels. A hundred and eight works were submitted for competition. The jury consisted of Olga Samaroff, Albert Spalding, Frank Bridge, Howard Hanson, and Carl Engel.

The Musical Initiative Prize at the Tobias Matthay School for the playing of a Mozart Sonata has been awarded to Anthea Bowring, Denis Van Thal and Marie Milner being commended. Mr. Cuthbert Whitemore adjudicated.

ORCHESTRAL NOTATION

By Tom S. Wotton

There are three ways of noting the separate parts that together make up the orchestral score. They may be written :

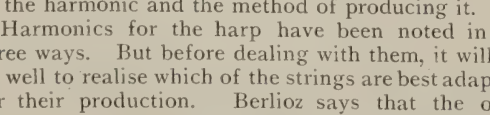
1. To oblige the player.
2. To oblige the reader.
3. To oblige both reader and player.

And to these we are tempted to add a fourth, which obliges neither one nor the other, for it is difficult to imagine anybody taking keen enjoyment in the sight of notes for the tuba or double-bassoon crawling about in the 16-ft. octave at absolute pitch.

Wagner's aim seems to have been to carry out as much as possible the second method of notation, and he endeavoured to achieve this, not only by his writing of the separate parts, but by their arrangement in the score. For a random illustration of the latter, turn to 'Siegfried' (p. 86),* where the first 'cellos with the melody have the top stave, then the divided violas with the fourth horn part beneath them, followed by the voice part, the second 'cellos, and the double-basses. Or notice the varying position of the cor anglais in the Prelude to 'Parsifal.' When it is treated as a fourth oboe it has its normal position immediately below the three oboes ; but when it is melodically or harmonically connected with either the clarinets or bassoons, it is placed between them. In the miniature score of 'Tristan' this fluid arrangement of Wagner's is disregarded, and throughout the opera the instruments retain the same relative position, which, by the way, is not the normal one, since the bass clarinet is always placed below the bassoons. There is something to be said in favour of a stereotyped arrangement, for the eye almost unconsciously seeks a particular instrument in a particular place. Nevertheless, anything that throws some light on the mental processes of a composer is worthy of preservation. Whether, for instance, he includes the horns with the wood-wind, or connects them with the trumpets and trombones, is not always a question of convention.

As regards the notation of harmonics for the strings, Wagner consulted only the convenience of the reader, as he merely marked the real sounds, leaving the player to produce them as best he could. It is true that the Master's somewhat disdainful contempt for the details of instrumental technique may have had something to do with this scanty notation. But the fact remains—he did only oblige the reader. On the other hand, when Verdi, in the Prelude to 'Un Ballo in Maschera,' wrote for the first fiddles :

Ex. 1



he was thinking solely of his performers. Undoubtedly, the best plan is to mark both the effect of the harmonic and the method of producing it.

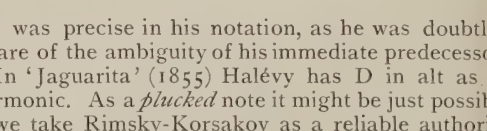
Harmonics for the harp have been noted in all three ways. But before dealing with them, it will be as well to realise which of the strings are best adapted for their production. Berlioz says that the only suitable ones are those from  to
* Here and elsewhere the paging refers to the miniature edition of the full score, except in the case of 'Dinorah' and the Goldmark Overture, when the original folio edition is intended.

(F to f^1), the real sounds being an octave above. Gevaert gives the upward limit as a sixth higher (from B flat to d^{111}), and Forsyth has the same. On the other hand, Widor suggests a possible range of three octaves, from G to g^{11}, the best notes lying between G and g^1—practically the compass of Berlioz. In his treatise, Rimsky-Korsakov does not specify how many of the strings are suitable for harmonics, but in a foot-note added by Maximilian Steinberg, his editor and pupil, we are told that they may be taken from the second to the fifth octave of the harp's compass—that is, from tenor C to C in alt. The latter is found in Stravinsky's 'L'Oiseau de Feu' Suite (original orchestration), and both Rimsky-Korsakov ('Le Coq d'Or' Suite) and Ravel ('Valses nobles') mark the B immediately below it.

The lower limit of the harp's harmonics is apparently determined at the point where the plain gut strings commence, and the covered ones end, the latter being (according to Widor) unavailable for their production. But the number of these obviously varies, for while the French writer says that the first eleven strings are covered, Hipkins, in 'Grove's Dictionary' (2nd edition), declares that it is only the first eight. The question is of some importance, for Widor, in giving an arpeggio from Verdi's 'Falstaff' (p. 376), ending on  points out that this note cannot be employed for an harmonic, because it is on a covered string. If Mr. Hipkins is to be trusted, it is a gut one.*

Of noting harp harmonics in the third way I know but one example. In the first movement of 'Roma' (1860-61), Bizet marks them thus :

Ex. 2.



He was precise in his notation, as he was doubtless aware of the ambiguity of his immediate predecessors.

In 'Jaguarita' (1855) Halévy has D in alt as an harmonic. As a plucked note it might be just possible, if we take Rimsky-Korsakov as a reliable authority. But it is highly improbable that anyone in the middle of the last century would have ventured to write it as such, when both the standard treatises (of Kastner and Berlioz) limited the upward range of the plucked notes to f^1, a thirteenth below the D. We may be fairly certain that the composer intended the real sounds, the harpist plucking the notes an octave below. On the other hand, in 'Lelio,' published in the same year (1855), Berlioz without much doubt marked the plucked notes. The number in which the harmonics occur (No. 4, 'Chant de Bonheur') was composed at Rome, in 1831†, and in the Berlioz Edition we are told that in the autograph the notes were written an octave higher. As, for various reasons, we may dismiss any idea of Berlioz wishing the effect to be an octave lower, we may take it that he at first wrote the real sounds, and afterwards decided to mark the plucked notes.

* On p. 379 of 'Falstaff' the D, B, and F♯ below the E are marked as harmonics! It is curious that Widor, at any rate in the first edition of his treatise, makes no mention of these. Possibly he dismissed them as faults of the engraver. The E♭, by the way, is used for an harmonic in Puccini's 'Madama Butterfly' (p. 378).

† The theme of the 'Chant' is taken from the cantata, 'La Mort d'Orphée,' one of Berlioz's unsuccessful attempts to secure the Prix de Rome, in 1827. The score of the work was lost for many years, but M. Masson, in his admirable little book on 'Berlioz' (1923), says that M. Adolphe Boschot, the well-known biographer of the Master, has recently rediscovered it. It is to be hoped that somebody will be sufficiently enterprising as to publish what should be an interesting score, and one of value in tracing Berlioz's development.

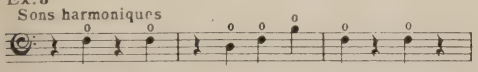
The first to employ harp harmonics in the orchestra was Boieldieu in 'La Dame Blanche' (1825), and he noted them in present-day fashion, marking the plucked notes with a small 'o' above:

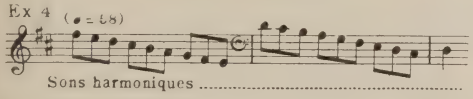
Ex. 3
Sons harmoniques



In modern scores the 'Sons harmoniques' is usually omitted, although Italian composers often add the Italian equivalent, armonici, and occasionally have merely the indication without the small 'o' above the notes. The editors of the Berlioz Edition have introduced a variant that appears to have little to commend it. They have abolished both the indication and the small 'o's,' and mark the plucked notes by open diamond-headed ones, which, as we have seen, have been already employed by Bizet to represent the real sounds.

In his 'Eight Scenes from Faust' (1828), Berlioz makes good use of the harmonics. Here is one of the passages as it stands in the rare original French edition, which was called in and destroyed, when feasible, by the dissatisfied composer:

Ex. 4 (♩ = 58)



In the Berlioz Edition the indication is omitted, and the notes are engraved as open diamonds. The editors looked upon the scale as representing the plucked strings. The question is, did Berlioz intend this? Obviously we cannot apply the advice as to the range of the harmonics given in his treatise fifteen years later, if for no other reason than that the good or bad effect of them in the 'Eight Scenes' was probably instrumental in determining that advice. Another reason is, that while his suggestion as to the most suitable strings refers to the double-action harp, the instrument he intended in 1828 was a single-action one. Kastner observes in his treatise (1837) that at that date the old single-action harp was still in use in most French orchestras, and that it was safer to write for it. Ten years earlier the careful Berlioz would certainly have done so. Now, there do not appear to have been any covered strings on the ancient instrument,* and therefore there was no reason why the four last notes of Ex. 4 should not have been plucked in the lower octave. Something must be placed to Berlioz's inexperience in the use of these novel sounds. But setting that aside, he would be more likely to employ the bass notes, since the longer the strings the easier the production of harmonics. The harpists of the 1820's were not very skilful! The young composer may well have intended his harmonics in the 'Eight Scenes' to represent the real sounds, as he did three years later in the 'Chant de Bonheur.'

In 'The Damnation of Faust' the plucked notes are marked, and the same may be true for the 'Harold in Italy' Symphony. But in 'Romeo and Juliet' there is no doubt that the real sounds are given. We have Berlioz's own authority for it!

The second example in his treatise is an extract from the Scherzo of the last-named work, and we find therein the two harp parts (in unison) noted clumsily as in Ex. 5 (a). In the section on the harp the effect of these 'sons harmoniques' is given as in Ex. 5 (b). In the score of the Symphony the harmonics are marked as in Ex. 5 (c):

Ex. 5. (a)
Sons harmoniques

Ex. 5 (b)

Ex. 5. (c)
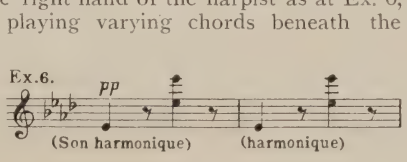
Harmoniques

Since Ex. 5 (b) gives the effect that Berlioz wanted, it is evident that the notes of the extract in the treatise are the plucked notes, and the notes in the published score (open diamonds in the Berlioz Edition) are the real sounds. Further proof of this is that the highest note in the Scherzo is  ($f^{\sharp\text{II}}$), while the highest suitable plucked note advised in the treatise is f^{I}. Making every allowance for the eccentricities of the artistic temperament, such a practical orchestrator as Berlioz would be hardly likely to stultify himself to the extent of declaring in 1844 (date of the treatise) that  was the highest note to be plucked for an harmonic, and then in 1848 (date of publication of the Symphony) calmly issue a score having a note an octave higher as a plucked one.

Whatever doubt there may be as regards some other of his works, there is none in respect to the harp harmonics in the 'Romeo and Juliet' Symphony. The engraved notes represent the real sounds, and the harpists must finger an octave below.*

To turn to another of Berlioz's contemporaries, we find on p. 317 of 'Dinorah' (1859), twelve bars for the right hand of the harpist as at Ex. 6, the left hand playing varying chords beneath the octave E♭'s:

Ex. 6.



The first note of each bar is doubled by the second flute, the octave by the first flute and piccolo. As there is a jump of two octaves between the notes for the flutes, it is not unreasonable to suppose that there is the same interval between the harp notes, and that the low E♭ represents the real sound, and would be written in a modern score as
On the other hand, Meyerbeer may have sought a bell-like effect by making the harmonic an octave above

* The single-action harp, instead of descending to the C♭ of the modern instrument, had the F above as the lowest string.

* As one of the editors of the Berlioz Edition was preparing an edition of Berlioz's treatise, their ignoring the composer's own explanation of the harp harmonics in the Symphony seems almost wilful. That their blindness is shared by the vast majority of conductors hardly excuses them, since editors are presumed to have devoted more study to their author than the average musician can afford.

the second flute. In any case there is sufficient uncertainty attached to the notation to warrant Bizet's precise directions in 'Roma.'*

There is no difficulty in knowing the pitch of harp harmonics in modern scores, but there are other instruments, with which it is often impossible to tell the octave of the real sounds without referring back to the head of the work or number, and not always even then. In many cases the player can discover the composer's method or intention only by collating one page with another, and in extracts from larger works — ballets, marches, &c. — he is entirely deprived of such information as the composer may have deigned to give at the head of the complete score. The principal offending parts are those of the bass clarinet, the double-bassoon, the horn (if the bass clef be marked), and a voice part with the G clef in the signature.

Possibly the most exasperating of these is the employment of the G clef for the tenor voice. Curiously enough, the custom commenced to be general at about the time when the practice of writing the upper register of the violoncello in the treble clef—an octave above the real sounds—was falling into disuse.†

Yet the tenor clef is more appropriate to the tenor voice than to any other voice or instrument. As a half-way house between the F and the G clefs, or as a continuation of the former (in order to avoid leger lines), the alto clef (C on the middle line) is certainly more convenient than the tenor one, and has been so used by many composers for the tenor trombone.

When the G clef is marked for a voice part, even a reference to the head of the number is not always of assistance in determining its pitch. 'Siebel,' 'Oscar,' and 'Urbain' are masculine names, but their impersonators do not invariably possess male voices. Particulars are of course given as a rule at the commencement of the score, but if they be written in Russian or some other strange script, or couched in Czecho-Slovakian or Balkanese, many will not find them illuminating. But however that may be, there should be no doubt as to the pitch of a voice on any particular page of a score. If it be really imperative to oblige the possibly gifted, but certainly lazy, possessors of tenor voices, by employing the G clef, then it ought to be distinguished by some difference—the combination of the treble and tenor clefs found in the publications of Messrs. Ricordi, or the doubled G clef met with in some of the works issued by Messrs. Novello, or by an arrow attached to the clef, pointing downwards, as in the scores in the so-called 'modern notation,' edited by Giordano.

(To be continued.)

* In view of the ambiguity connected with the early examples of harp harmonics, one wonders whether it is correct to assume that Boieldieu intended the plucked notes, and not the real sounds. It is true that both Prout and Hofmann follow Gevaert in taking it for granted that the former are meant, but, as has been shown, there was no reason why the three notes should not have been taken in the lower octave on a single-action harp, and harmonics are easier on the longer strings. The idea of the small 'o's' above the notes is evidently derived from the notation of harmonics on the bowed instruments, and with them, in spite of my Ex. 1, a note surmounted by an 'o' usually implies the real sound.

† Strictly speaking, the treble clef was supposed to be employed only in connection with the 'thumb position,' and then, for some reason best known to players, it was believed to make the part easier to read, if written an octave higher. Whether composers always adhered to this rule, and whether they were sufficiently acquainted with the technique of the instrument to realise when the use of the thumb was advisable, are other questions. Probably Goldmark was the last composer of any standing to employ the G clef for the 'cello with its classical significance.

Church and Organ Music

ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

The annual general meeting will be held on Saturday, July 24, at 2.30 p.m.

DISTRIBUTION OF DIPLOMAS

Members and friends are cordially invited to attend the distribution of diplomas to successful candidates at the Fellowship, Associateship, and Choir-Training Examinations, on Saturday, July 24, at 3 p.m. There will be an address by the President, Dr. H. W. Richards, and Mr. G. Thalben-Ball, F.R.C.O., organist of the Temple Church, London, will perform the following pieces selected for the January, 1927, Examination :

FELLOWSHIP

Trio in C minor ... ... J. S. Bach
(Novello, Book 12, p. 108; Augener, p. 1173; Peters, Vol. 9, No. 7.)

Fantasy Prelude ... ... Charles Macpherson
No. 21 of Recital Series. (Edited by E. H. Lemare.) (Novello.)

Andante from a Pianoforte Duet ... ...Mozart
Arrangements for the Organ by J. Stainer, No. 2. (Novello.)

ASSOCIATESHIP

Prelude (without Fugue) in A major ... J. S. Bach
(Novello, Book 3, p. 64; Augener, p. 187; Peters, Vol. 2, No. 3.)

No. 5, in G, of 'Six Short Preludes and Postludes,' 1st Set, Op. 101 ... ... Charles V. Stanford
(Organ Library, Stainer & Bell.)

After the organ recital there will be an informal conversazione, to which members and friends are invited. Tea and coffee. No tickets required.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

'THE CINEMA ORGANIST'

Under this title, a lecture was given at the Royal College of Organists on May 22, by Mr. Quentin Maclean, organist of the Pavilion, Shepherd's Bush.

Mr. Maclean began by discussing the predominance of tradition in Church work as contrasted with the absence of tradition in playing for the cinema. He showed that there was no essential association of organ music and worship, and that the organ was connected with public entertainment from its very origin. Many instances of the fierce opposition to its use in public worship were given. He laid down the maxim that the sole function of the musical accompaniment of a film was to enhance the emotional effect of the drama depicted. Music of an intellectual or contrapuntal character, therefore, would be very rarely required. The pieces selected needed, however, to be treated sympathetically. Strongly condemning extemporisation as a general basis of film accompaniment, the lecturer spoke of the necessity for a suitable library, and went on to draw attention in this connection to the series of albums issued by the B. F. Wood Music Co., Messrs. Lafleur, Hawkes, Bosworth, and others. On the question of specially-written works, he said that although these did not claim to be judged as absolute music, the incidental pieces written for films were of inestimable value to the theatre musician, and were practically indispensable. The gradual increase in the instrumental equipment of theatres commensurate with their increase in seating capacity was noted, as was also the distinction between 'orchestral' and 'solo' ('relief') work. A kind of 'apprenticeship' experience of orchestral playing was recommended as being the nearest approach to a systematic training available at the present day, and also for its value in affording a first-hand knowledge of suitable music. Mr. Maclean then demonstrated the setting of a film to music, and played a dozen representative types of 'incidentals' on the College organ, in which instrument he expressed his delight not only for its mechanical facilities, but also for its beautiful voicing. In conclusion, he emphasised the fact that no one could claim to speak with authority on cinema music, as the whole question was still in an experimental stage.

CHURCH MUSIC AT QUETTA

We always welcome news of good musical work being done in remote centres and under adverse conditions. Thus we hear with interest from an Indian correspondent of the musical arrangements at St. Mary's Church, Quetta. St. Mary's is one of the largest churches in India, and of excellent acoustic properties. It is also the only centre of musical activity in Baluchistan. The choir is formed of officers and men of the various units stationed at Quetta, with their wives, and a few civilians. The organist and choirmaster is an officer of the Indian Medical Service. The organ is a two-manual. Unaccompanied singing is a feature, the responses always being so sung, and also such anthems as are suitable. Recent music lists contain, among the anthems, 'Brahms's 'All flesh doth perish' and 'Ye who now sorrow,' Wesley's 'Lead me, Lord' and 'The Wilderness,' a string of choruses from 'The Messiah' and 'Elijah,' Dvorák's 'By Thy glorious Death and Passion,' Beethoven's 'Hallelujah,' &c., and some service settings by Stanford, Harwood, and Ley. The little organ has given forth such voluntaries as Mendelssohn's first Sonata, Franck's Pastorale, the Overture to 'Samson,' &c. All this capital work is done voluntarily, and our informant tells us that the standard of performance compares very favourably with that of a good average English parish church. We congratulate these Quetta workers, and wish them a continuance of the enthusiasm that has already produced such good results.

THE FOUNDLING HOSPITAL: FINAL SERVICE

On June 13 the final service in the chapel of the Foundling Hospital took place prior to the removal of the institution to the country. The chapel was packed, and a large crowd of people gathered in the grounds outside. The music used on this memorable occasion should be recorded: a Chorale Prelude by Bach; Wesley's 'Lead me, Lord,' Psalms 95, 148, 150 (the last sung to a broad festal setting by Dr. Davan Wetton); Stainer's Te Deum and Benedictus in B flat; and Martin's 'Whoso dwelleth.' After the sermon, 'O God, our help' was sung, followed by stirring performances of 'Let the bright Seraphim' (with trumpet and drums) and the 'Hallelujah' chorus. Dr. Davan Wetton was in his customary place as organist and director. So ends a London association with Handel, his most famous work, and the organ on which he played.

The choirs of sixteen churches in the Archdeaconry of Ely, numbering nearly two hundred and fifty voices, combined forces in King's College Chapel, Cambridge, on May 25, the occasion being the triennial Choirs Festival. The Magnificat was sung to a setting by C. W. Lavington, and the anthems were Arcadelt's 'Give ear unto my prayer,' and Farrant's 'Lord, for Thy tender mercies' sake,' sung unaccompanied. Mr. H. S. Middleton (who recently succeeded Mr. Noel Ponsonby as organist of Ely Cathedral) conducted. Dr. A. H. Mann played the voluntary.

The Peterborough Choral Union and the Peterborough Orchestral Society closed their season with two concerts in Peterborough Cathedral on May 11, when they performed Bach's 'A Stronghold sure,' Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens,' Mendelssohn's 'Hymn of Praise,' Sullivan's Overture in C, and two movements from Tchaikovsky's sixth Symphony. The soloists were Miss Lucy Goodwin, Miss Berridge, Mr. Fred Booth, and Mr. Stanley Hill. The conductors were Mr. A. E. Armstrong and Dr. Coleman. Mr. A. E. Brice was at the organ.

The 127th anthem and organ recital by Brighton Parish Church choir and Dr. Chastey Hector, on June 8, was devoted to the works of Samuel Sebastian Wesley. The programme comprised the Introduction and Fugue in C sharp minor, the Larghetto and Variations in F sharp minor, the Choral Song and Fugue, the Andante Cantabile in G, the National Anthem Variations and Fugue, and four anthems, 'The Wilderness,' 'Blessed is the man,' 'Wash me throughly,' and 'And Thou wilt keep him.'

The fourth of a series of motet recitals was given in Ripon Cathedral on May 23, the programme including Byrd's 'I will not leave you comfortless,' Croft's 'God is gone up,' Amner's 'O come, Thou Spirit,' Cornelius's 'Saviour, Who in Thine own image,' Mendelssohn's 'Why rage fiercely,' Palestrina's 'In divers tongues,' and Ponsonby's 'Arise and gird thee.' Dr. Moody conducted, and delivered an introductory address.

The twenty-first annual Festival of the Harlow Church Choir Association was held at Hatfield Broad Oak Church on June 9, choirs from ten parishes, numbering two hundred voices, taking part. The music included Goss's 'Stand up and bless the Lord,' and Smart's Te Deum in F. Mr. J. A. Sowerbutts, of Holy Trinity, Guildford, was at the organ.

The organ in the Parish Church at Roehampton—a four-manual built by the late Robert Hope-Jones—is about to be reconstructed by Messrs. Henry Willis. Among the new work is to be a console with adjustable pistons. The general character of the original pipe work, however, will be altered as little as possible.

Brahms's 'Requiem' and J. C. Bach's 'I wrestle and pray' were performed at Louth Parish Church on May 20, by a choir and orchestra of a hundred and thirty. Mr. Owen M. Price conducted, Mr. W. A. Achurch led the orchestra, and Dr. G. J. Bennett played the organ.

A choir festival took place at Eye Parish Church on May 18, when choirs from seven churches combined. The anthem was Tallis's 'All people that on earth do dwell,' sung unaccompanied. Mr. H. A. Adams conducted, and Mr. W. C. F. Brundell was at the organ.

RECITALS.

Mr. Frederick W. Belchamber, St. Gabriel's, Cricklewood—Sonata No. 6, Mendelssohn; Larghetto (Symphony in D), Beethoven; Fugue in G minor, Bach; Imperial March, Elgar.

Mr. H. E. Knott, St. Anne's, Park Hill, Moseley—Psalm-Prelude No. 2, Herbert Howells; Prelude on 'Lovely,' Vaughan Williams; Idyll No. 6, Alan Gray; Epilogue, Healey Willan.

Dr. J. H. Reginald Dixon, St. Mary's, Friargate, Preston—Paschal Sonata, Lemmens; 'St. Francis preaching to the birds,' Liszt; Scherzo in F, Bossi; Choral No. 3, Franck.

Mr. Arthur Meale, Wesleyan Central Hall, Westminster—Choral Song and Fugue in C; Holsworthy Church Bells; Larghetto in F sharp minor; and Introduction and Fugue in C sharp minor, S. S. Wesley; Finale in B flat, Bernard Johnson; Cradle Song and Scherzo, Grace.

Mr. Stanley Blizard, St. Lawrence Jewry—Toccata, Adagio, and Fugue in C, Bach; Prelude, Fugue, and Variation, Franck; Intermezzo, Widor; 'Song of Triumph,' West.

Mr. Sinclair Logan, St. Lawrence Jewry—Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Bach; Minuet and Trio in B flat, Wolstenholme; Choral No. 3, Franck; Marche Triomphale, Karg-Elert.

Mr. Fred Gostelow, Parish Church, Luton—'Dorian' Toccata, Bach; Pastoral Sonata, Rheinberger; Scherzetto, Vierne; Toccata, Widor.

Mr. Herbert Sanders, St. Lawrence Jewry—Sonata No. 6, Mendelssohn: Canzona in the Dorian mode, Boëllmann; Monologues, Rheinberger; Sketch in C minor, John E. West.

Mr. Stanley Lucas, South Croydon Congregational Church—Sonata No. 2, Mendelssohn; Fugue in E flat and Trio in D minor, Bach; Rêverie on 'University,' Grace; Intermezzo, Stuart Archer.

Mr. Albert Orton, St. Anne's, Soho—One of five Bach programmes: Fantasia in C minor (five parts); Fugue in G minor; Prelude in 9-8 time and Fugue in C; Sonata No. 3; Prelude and Fugue in E minor; Prelude and Fugue in E flat; and two Chorale Preludes.

Mr. F. C. J. Swanton, St. Philip and St. James's, Booterstown—Prelude in C minor, Bach; Concerto No. 5, Handel; Scherzetto, Vierne; Finale (Sonata No. 5), Stanford; 'Epinikion,' Rootham.

Mr. W. A. Alder, Chiswick Parish Church.—Adagio, Frank Bridge; Evening Song, Bairstow; Visione, Rheinberger; Postlude in G minor, Stanford.

Mr. Henry Riding, St. Mary-the-Virgin, Aldermanbury.—Passacaglia, John E. West; 'Cuckoo and Nightingale Concerto,' Handel; Festal Scherzo, Hugh Blair.

Mr. N. S. Wallbank, Hexham Abbey.—Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; Cradle Song and Toccata on 'King's Lynn,' Harvey Grace; Fantasia in F minor, Mozart.

APPOINTMENTS.

Mr. H. M. Bouchier, choirmaster and organist, Congregational Church, Bowling, Bradford.

Mr. Harry Briggs, choirmaster and organist, St. Paul's Church, Denholme, Bradford.

Mr. E. J. Duckett, organist, St. Mary's, Slough.

Mr. J. C. Jameson, choirmaster and organist, St. John the Evangelist, Drury Lane, W.C.

Mr. Frederick Lacy, choirmaster and organist, St. Alban's, Windlesham, Surrey.

Letters to the Editor

MAINZER'S MUSICAL TIMES

SIR,—Whilst offering you best congratulations upon your 'thousandth number,' may I be allowed a brief space for one or two questions and remarks upon early issues of the Musical Times.

I see that Mainzer describes the number for July 15, 1842, as 'vol. i., No. 1, New Series.' Was there, then, an older series; and, if so, when did it begin and end?

Was there no break in the continuity of the Musical Times between Mainzer's last and Novello's first issue?

Mainzer began his 'New Series' in July, 1842, as a fortnightly paper, published on the 1st and 15th of every month; although in January, 1843, the two issues are respectively dated January 2 and 14. I wonder why these two dates were changed, and when the Musical Times became a monthly paper?

I observe, too, that under the Novello regime 'double numbers' were now and then issued; for example, Nos. 14 and 15 of Novello's vol. i. came out together, and had to serve for both July 1 and August 1, in 1845.

The quotations from Mainzer's Musical Times you give in your current number are interesting; but his vol. i. is by no means exclusively devoted to a record of his own doings. There are biographical sketches of Rinck, Malibran, Rubini, Stradella, Allegri, Steffani, Purcell, Baillot, Samuel Wesley, and others, all worth reading. And the articles on congregational singing (signed M. A. B.), on Church Music in Russia (by Kohl), on the Miserere in the Sistine Chapel (by Chatelain), on Scottish Psalmody, and the account of the opening of Holdich's fine organ at Calne Church, Wiltshire, in August, 1842, are interesting.

The musical supplements for 1842 include a facsimile of the original sketch made by Mozart for his Sonata in D for four hands; a 'Wanderer's Night song,' by Schnyder von Wartensee; a duet from Stradella's 'St. John the Baptist,' and an 'Evening Song' for two voices, by Rinck. Over the last-named is scribbled approvingly, 'A little gem,' in the handwriting of John Bishop, of Cheltenham, from whose library I acquired these early Musical Times volumes shortly after that well-known musician's death in 1890. Perhaps, with a septuagenarian's grateful recollection of Rinck's 'Organ School,' I may be allowed to endorse John Bishop's opinion of the little duet referred to. By the way, Rinck was quite a graceful vocal writer if one may judge from his 'Charfreytags-Cantate,' Op. 76, and his 'Sechs Geistliche Lieder' for a bass voice and organ, Op. 81. No. 6 of this latter work was sung with much success by Mrs. Dawson Freer at an organ recital given by me a few years ago at St. Alban's Church, Golders Green.

Yours, &c.,

C. W. PEARCE.

46, Henleaze Avenue, Bristol.

[The older series implied by Mainzer was the periodical started by him in August, 1841, called The National Singing Circular, which developed into Mainzer's Musical Times and Singing Circular on July 15, 1842. The change from a fortnightly to a monthly took place, apparently, in May, 1843, when Mainzer began to include in the journal a piece, or pieces, of choral music. The Novello régime followed that of Mainzer without a break, the transition months being May and June, 1844.—EDITOR.]

'UNIFORM PITCH'

SIR,—I read with interest Mr. Collinson's letter on page 443 of your May issue. It is not a higher pitch I am advocating; on the contrary, I am aiming at the once established international pitch of 435 vibrations for the note A. It does not serve the cause to say 435 vibrations at 15° C. above zero. This is right for organs, churches, concerts, pianofortes, glockenspiels, chimes, and similar instruments with fixed intonation, but for orchestras 435 vibrations must be kept from 7° up to 22° above zero, because an orchestra is able to adapt itself to temperature differences by adjustment of embouchure or tuning slide. Chimes and glockenspiels do not vary considerably. For this reason the above condition must be given that a military band playing in open air 7° above zero and again in the concert-room up to 22° above zero may be in tune.

As I am guided by my firm's experience of over a century, my colleagues will not fail to agree with me in this matter. For upwards of a century we have recognised the pitch as 435. No one has the right to change this, and the greater the tendency to raise the pitch, the greater should be the effort to resist the overthrowing of the very basis of intonation and the consequent damage to the interests of music and musicians. Mr. Collinson's letter shows how perfectly well he knows his profession, as it requires extraordinary skill to tune an organ to work with an orchestra—e.g., the Usher Hall organ at Edinburgh. But we must not be guided by the pitch given by an orchestra, but by the laws of acoustics.

Since I wrote the letter which appeared in your April issue, there has been considerable discussion in the musical press of the world. On the one side are Americans and English tending to keep 440 vibrations; on the other, French, Germans, and the International Standards Committee desiring to maintain the once established pitch of 435. It is unnecessary that the former pitch should be forced down suddenly, but in the same way as it has been raised, in the same tempo must it go down. In any case, we must hold to the once acoustically recognised pitch, because if we yield to an orchestra, we have no firm hold, and the uncertainty of the basis will continue. Only a firm will can overcome the difficulties.—Yours, &c.,

Fulda. JOS. N. MOLLENHAUER.

BALFE: A CORRECTION

SIR,—In a recent issue of the Star there appeared a paragraph about Balfe, the composer of 'The Bohemian Girl,' and other operas, but the paper in question made a couple of bad mistakes, which I should like to correct. In the first place, Balfe's two Christian names are not Richard William, but Michael William. Secondly, he was not 'given burial in Westminster Abbey,' but in Kensal Green Cemetery, where he lies buried close to the grave of another famous opera composer, William Vincent Wallace. There is a memorial tablet erected to Balfe in Westminster Abbey, which was unveiled by the late Canon Duckworth, on October 20, 1882 (the twelfth anniversary of Balfe's death), when I myself happened to be present at the ceremony.—Yours, &c.,

ALGERNON ASHTON.

22*a*, Carlton Vale, N.W.6.

THE IRISH HORSE GUARDS' DRUM

SIR,—I wonder if you can give a reply to the following query: At what period did 'Robert Horne, Drum Maker to His Majesty's Honourable Board of Ordnance, 20, Barbican, London,' flourish or do business?

A friend sends me, from the North of Ireland, particulars of an old drum he recently purchased in a second-hand shop. It is of considerable size, and has inscribed on it in a gold scroll 'Irish Horse Guards,' with the maker's name as above. This greatly interested me, from a military history point of view, because I had never heard of a regiment of Irish Horse Guards. I fancy it must have been one of the regiments of James II., 1680-1690, and permitted to be moved to France with him after William III. had completely subdued the Irish Rebellion (Treaty of Limerick). If I could get an approximate date of the period of Robert Horne's activities, it would go far towards identifying the Irish Horse Guards. His Majesty's Honourable Board of Ordnance had a long history, dating back to Henry VIII. Its warrant was cancelled in 1855, when the British Army was re-organized after the Crimean War.—Yours, &c.,

99, St. Michael's Road, Aldershot. E. J. SECCOMBE.

[Here is a quest after Dr. Grattan Flood's own heart.—EDITOR.]

RUSKIN AND MUSIC

SIR,—I was not unacquainted with Ruskin's fantastic remarks about the Wagner opera which Felix White draws attention to in the June Musical Times. But they did not come within the scope of my article. The passage was just a lively jeu d'esprit on the part of an old man. It comes in a private letter to Lady Burne-Jones, and is certainly not meant to be judged as a considered expression of opinion, still less as genuine criticism. Poor John Ruskin would have been worried if he had known it was ever to be published and held up against him, as it frequently is by writers on music. Anything more unlike the style of Ruskin's writing it is not possible to meet with, and when Mr. Finck includes it in his book on 'Musical Laughs' he places it in the category which, I venture to think, Ruskin himself would most probably have selected.—Yours, &c.,

Warley Woods, Birmingham. EVA MARY GREW.

WHITE ON BOUGHTON AND BAINES

SIR,—The letter of Mr. A. E. White, of Vancouver, B.C. (p. 543, June issue), is interesting. But talking or writing about music is no use at all unless the music can be heard. May I suggest that the writer obtain and study the works of William Baines, and form his own opinion of them? I think that Mr. White would then come to the same conclusion as Mr. Rutland Boughton. They both have evidently made up their minds on 'the decadent significance of the ugly movement,' and so start on common ground. Mr. Boughton has, however, taken the trouble to study Baines's music, and found it good, so he is ahead of Mr. White, who should now do the same. I suggest the Seven Preludes (particularly the third), 'Paradise Gardens,' and 'Silverpoints.'

For Mr. White's enlightenment, I point out that Baines was denied the ordinary sources of musical education, through circumstances with which one should sympathise. These were lack of health and money. His study of what we are pleased to call the classics, or masters, was great, and his admiration of Beethoven and Bach truly profound.

Mr. White concludes from Mr. Boughton's article that Baines 'was a young man of considerable natural talent,' and opines that there are in England 'several thousand young musicians of natural talent equal to that of Mr. Baines.' Mr. Boughton, in his article, did not use the word 'genius.' Perhaps it was his modesty, for, being a great composer himself, it might have seemed that he was not unaware of his own claim to that title. Had he done so, I assume that Mr. White would not have suggested that there were several thousand musical geniuses equal to Mr. Baines in England now.

It is a pity Mr. White does not live in England, for he would then be able to listen to a recital of Mr. Baines's music to be broadcast on the wireless before very long by Mr. Frederick Dawson.—Yours, &c.,

'The Elms,' Heworth Green, York. DENNIS LAUGHTON.

THE CENTENARY OF WEBER

SIR,—In your 'Occasional Notes' column in the June issue, you mention with regret what seemed the total neglect of Weber in the year of his centenary (at any rate, in the capital). You say it seemed a pity the opportunity could not have been seized for giving one of his operas. I am pleased to be able to record that 'Der Freischütz' was performed at Manchester on three dates, April 22, 23, 24, by the Manchester School of Music Opera Class and Orchestra, with scenery, costumes, and full stage effects, as duly and lucidly reported in the Manchester Guardian by 'S. L.' The work was intentionally selected at the time by my deceased son, the Principal, Albert J. Cross, who unfortunately did not live to see the performances.—Yours, &c.,

J. A. CROSS,
(Principal, Manchester School of Music).

THE LATE DR. E. J. CROW, OF RIPON

SIR,—Will you kindly allow me to appeal to old choristers and pupils of my predecessor, Dr. E. J. Crow, for subscriptions to a fund which is being raised to place a memorial in the Cathedral? It is suggested that this shall take the form of a statue to be placed in the Rood Screen. I shall be glad to receive and acknowledge donations, which should be endorsed 'Crow Memorial Fund.'—Yours, etc.

CHARLES H. MOODY.

The Cathedral, Ripon.

[We regret that we have not space for a long letter from Mr. Leonard Illingworth on 'Missions v. Organs.' Mr. E. R. Scovell writes on 'The Tessitura of Songs,' pointing out, truly, that the mere indication of the compass given on song covers is often misleading. His alternative scheme, based on statistics of the extreme notes, calls for more space than we can spare. We fear, too, that its elaborate character is against its being taken up by publishers.—EDITOR.]

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Pianist wanted to join violinist and 'cellist in forming a trio.—CHARLES P. COCKS, 158, Morland Road, Croydon.

Soprano wishes to meet advanced pianist for mutual practice. North-East London.—5, Exeter Road, E.17.

Pianist (good sight-reader) wishes to meet violinist for mutual weekly practice. Kingston or district preferred.—M. WATERS, 5, Minerva Road, Kingston-on-Thames.

'Cellist (good sight-reader) wanted for pianoforte trio. N.W. district.—A. H. H., c/o Musical Times.

Violinist wishes to meet advanced pianist (male) for occasional mutual practice. W. district. Would also like to join orchestral society.—V., c/o Musical Times.

Sharps and Flats

TENOR WITH A VOICE OF THUNDER.—Giovanni Zenatello is not only a robust but a devastating tenor. In private life his voice reverberates like a peal of thunder.—Star.

I have just come from the mountains above Milan. Snow was on the peaks, and as my wife drove our Fiat through the passes I rose in the car and sang. Villagers put their heads out of their windows and no doubt thought I was crazy. Anyhow, here I am, perfectly delighted to be at Covent Garden once more, the real home of the Grand Opera of the world.—Giovanni Zenatello.

'Figaro' both deserves and requires such an audience [in the last refinements of fashion.] To listen to 'Figaro' in a badly-cut coat, or a dowdy, merely expensive dress, is an insult to Mozart.—W. J. Turner.

—— began unpromisingly; here and there during his singing of his difficult opening aria I thought I had rarely heard a nose with a worse voice.—Ernest Newman.

When Wagner is making his orchestra create for us the enchanted ripples of a legendary Rhine or is making it celebrate idyllic love in a forest, he is a god. But as soon as he puts his Wotans and Siegfrieds and Parsifals on the stage, so many large fat men who stand in one place for an hour, drearily wrestling with a narrative that nobody can understand, he is the very emperor of the bores.—J. B. Priestley.

Valse, 'Trieste,' Sibelino.—Provincial Paper.

The voices at this [Handel] Festival have not been so stodgy or confidential as they used to be. I am particularly pleased about this last, for if there is one thing in this world of music which I loathe, it is a confidential vocalist. —Sir Henry Wood.

Compare the works of the ultra-moderns to the writings of the great masters. The difference, I think, is as great as that between Shakespeare, Byron, Goethe, Schiller, or Heine, and the schoolboys who write their prodigious feelings on the schoolroom blackboard. I feel sure that no progress in the world has been made by a clique. All progress was made by single geniuses. The eagle flies alone —only geese appear in tremendous numbers.—Moritz Rosenthal.

Singing Mozart is no cinch! I had to reduce thirty pounds in order to make a plausible page for the part of Cherubino in 'Figaro.' And even then I was self-conscious for some time on account of having to adopt masculine airs. —Kathleen Hart Bibb.

I congratulate myself that I am not one of the historians who may some day be called upon to write the musical history of our decades. Yet it strikes me as a less fearful job to wade one's way through the music of our times than through all the gush written on it.—Felix Weingartner.

I should like to broadcast, but cannot, because it would be a bad thing, financially, for me to do so. . . . Let the wireless licence fee be doubled, and tell listeners that for the extra 10*s.* they will have artists like Kreisler, Elman, McCormack, Burke, Jeritza, and Clara Butt. — Dame Clara Butt.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

An interesting feature of the students' chamber concert on June 3 was the performance of Dr. Charles Macpherson's Fantasy Prelude for the organ. Written some twenty-five years ago, when the composer was on the point of leaving the Academy, it was in those far-off days considered advanced for its time. It is an attractive work, and was well played by Mr. Leonard Foster. A jolly Pergolesi item is the No. 2 Sonata for two violins and 'cello, and this too had an excellent interpretation at the hands of the three artists concerned. The best number of a well put together programme was, however, the second movement of Brahms's Quartet in C minor, played by four girls. Fine ensemble and good tone made this an exceptionally pleasing performance. Two songs by Fauré were musically sung by Miss May Turtle, who has a most promising voice and, moreover, a good French accent; the young lady who sang Franck's 'La Procession' was ill-advised in her choice of song.

A large number of Academy students took part in a concert of compositions by pupils of Mr. B. J. Dale, at Mortimer Hall, on May 31—indeed, they were so many that it is possible to mention only one or two. A Quartet for strings, in one movement, by Guirne Creith, was well played by the Goldsmith Quartet. It is an admirably-written little work, and pleasantly melodious; its young composer should do even better things in the near future. Four attractive songs, from 'A Child's Garden of Verse,' by Ifor Jones, were prettily sung by Miss Jessie Hewson, who was artistically accompanied by Mr. Harry Isaacs at the pianoforte.

One of the two outstanding events of the summer term took place at Queen's Hall on June 15, when Sir Henry Wood conducted the students' orchestra in a varied programme. Sir Henry is a remarkable illustration of the value of personality and constancy. In a comparatively short period he has transformed the standard of the orchestral performances, and by his patience and perseverance at rehearsals, and the fact that he has many rehearsals, the orchestra is now a first-rate musical institution. A striking corroboration of this was forthcoming in the playing of the first two numbers of Rimsky-Korsakov's Suite, 'Scheherazade.' The numerous delicate effects were beautifully represented, and Mr. Alfred Carr, the leader, gave his little solos in excellent taste. The accompaniments, too, were well done, further proof, if this were necessary, of the soundness of the training. The Recit. and Air de Lia from 'L'Enfant Prodigue' were delightfully sung by Miss May Davies, and Miss Kitty Roe played the first and second movements of Mackenzie's 'Scottish' Concerto in good style. Sir Alexander was among those present, representing in himself, so to speak, three generations, for he is an ex-student and ex-principal, and now an interested looker-on.

The second great happening takes place on July 12, which date will initiate a week of opera at the New Scala Theatre. It had been intended to present for the first time in England Wolf-Ferrari's 'L'Amore Medico,' but the industrial strike interfered with the rehearsals, and so this interesting production has been postponed to a later date. 'Gianni Schicchi,' Dr. Blow's masque, 'Venus and Adonis,' and a wordless play, 'Dross,' with music by Paul Corder, will form a triple bill for two evenings out of the six. Three performances of 'Hänsel and Gretel' will be given, and, in response to many requests, owing to its great success last year, 'Falstaff,' will be repeated—for one evening only. Mr. Roy Henderson will play his old part of Ford, and Mr. Julius Harrison will again be the conductor.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Without disparagement of the concerts and recitals given at the College during the past month, it may be fairly claimed that great interest has centred round the performances in the Theatre under the auspices of the Ernest Palmer Opera Study Fund. These gave a hearing to no less than seven stage works by composers ranging from Monteverde to Vaughan Williams and Holst, five of the compositions being operas and two of them ballets. Two had a special interest by reason of the fact that the performers were visitors, invited to produce works in the College Theatre, with the aid of a grant made by the Fund. Thus the Sandon Studios Society, of Liverpool, was enabled to perform three works of Gustav Holst—'At the Boar's Head,' 'Savitri,' and a ballet based on the 'St. Paul's' Suite. The experiment was highly successful, and the value of the Fund was further proved by the production a little later by the Oxford Opera Club, of Monteverde's 'Orfeo.'

Of recent events, the orchestral concert of June 11 was perhaps the most successful, scenes from 'Rheingold' being the most outstanding item in the programme. The Patrons' Fund rehearsal for executive artists, on June 18, gave opportunities, as usual, to young artists desirous of appearing with a full orchestra. The performers were Miss Ruby White, Mr. John Protheroe, Mr. John Richards, and Miss Enid Bailey, all of whom made a favourable impression on a large audience.

OPEN SCHOLARSHIPS, 1926

The following are the names of the successful candidates: Composition, David M. Evans, Tonbridge (for one year). Pianoforte, Cyril J. Smith, Linthorpe; Helen C. Perkin, London; Mary I. M. Causton, Sudbury. Scholarship Exhibition, Vera M. P. Crook, Portsmouth (for one year). Singing, Daniel J. Jones, Penrhiwceiber; George A. Hancock, Stoke-on-Trent; Veronica Mansfield, W. Leaderville, W. Australia (for two years). Special Scholarship, E. Dunstan Hart, South Croydon (for one year). Organ, Ernest W. Maynard, Wincanton. Violin, Kathleen Curry, London; William A. G. Hulson, Devonport. Violoncello, Special Scholarship Exhibition, Thelma Reiss-Smith, Plymouth (for one year). Scholars, Alexander P. Nifosi, London; Barbara A. Wright, Bromley. Hautboy, Sylvia M. Spencer, London. Bassoon, Alfred G. Butler, London. Horn, Frederick E. Walding, London. Harp, Eileen S. Field, London.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

It is with sorrow that the death of Mr. M. Fairs, for many years local secretary of the Shields Centre, is reported; also that of Sir J. Boyton, a vice-president, and a trustee of the College Pension Fund.

At a general meeting of the College, Mr. E. B. Hoare and Mr. H. Llewellyn Howell were appointed to fill the vacancies in trustees to the Pension Fund, caused by the deaths of Sir J. Boyton and Mr. J. W. Sidebotham.

On May 26, Mr. Alexander Watson gave an interesting lecture on elocution, to a large audience of students and others.

The students in Mr. Gostelow's class gave a very successful pianoforte recital.

Rehearsals are now in full swing for the operatic performance by students of the College of the 'Princess of Trebizonde' at the New Scala Theatre, on July 8, 9, and 10.

It is pleasing that many overseas visitors connected with the College work take the opportunity of calling at the College. Recently Mr. Charles Gray, of Invercargill, N.Z., and Miss Toussaint, of Simla, have been welcomed.

Successful distributions have been held at Cardiff, Plymouth, and Liverpool. The Chairman of the Board, Prof. J. C. Bridge, represented the College.

The Director of Examinations, Dr. E. F. Horner, has returned home.

THE BACH CHOIR JUBILEE FESTIVAL

When fifty years happen to have passed since a work was performed for the first time in England it is not usually a moment for jubilation. But if the work happens to be Bach's B minor Mass, and the choir that performed it is still in existence, the time is ripe for a little celebration. The Bach Choir considered that the occasion called for four special birthday concerts—a fair balance between what a choral society could be expected to do and what one would like it to do. Two concerts were devoted to Bach in general, one to musicians who had had personal dealings with the Choir, and one to the Mass. The dates originally appointed were May 10, 11, 13 and 14, but the strike interfered, and the Festival was held on June 7, 8, 9, and 11, at Central Hall, Westminster. The London Symphony Orchestra was engaged, and Dr. Vaughan Williams conducted everything.

The programmes shall be quoted in full. They may stand as a reference table for others who have programmes to make.

FIRST CONCERT

Chorale, 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring.'
Chorus (Cantata No. 50), 'Now shall the Grace.'
Aria, 'Fast my bitter tears are flowing' (from Cantata No. 21).

DOROTHY SILK

Pianoforte Concerto in E.

HAROLD SAMUEL

Cantata No. 150, 'Lord, my soul doth thirst for Thee.'
Cantata No. 80, 'A Stronghold Sure.'

The Chorale was sung in an edition made by Sir Hugh Allen, who conducted the Choir from 1907 to 1922. Is there anything in the world more charmingly beatific? It was the happiest of all beginnings. Conductors should take note of it, and give 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring' (or, no doubt, many another like it) a place beside Parry's 'Jerusalem,' as a small excerpt for general use. The editor of 'Now shall the Grace,' and of 'A Stronghold Sure,' was Otto Goldschmidt, under whose conductorship (1876-1888) the latter was performed for the first time in England. 'Now shall the Grace' was a further recommendation to choral societies. Dr. Vaughan Williams seemed to be bent on drawing attention to these useful items, the Chorale and the Chorus, not only by opening the Festival with them, but by making them the beginning and end of the second programme.

As far as could be ascertained, the Cantata 'Lord, my soul doth thirst for Thee' had never before been performed in England. It is one of Bach's symphonic poems. Phrase, colour, and form spring from the imagery of the words—visual things like 'cedars swaying,' darkness and light, or the less tangible pictures seen by the composer in verbal phrases of worship. We are too much of the earth to comprehend every one of Bach's celestial leitmotifs, but in music that is immeasurably good it matters little whether we fail to measure its imaginative whys and wherefores. There is some inscrutable music in this Cantata, but the whole of it is a marvel. Among the multitudinous Bach experiences of the year this is the first that the writer would choose to repeat.

SECOND CONCERT.

Chorale, 'Jesù, Joy of man's desiring.'
Motet for double chorus, 'Be not afraid.'
Organ solo, Prelude and Fugue ('St. Anne').

G. THALBEN-BALL

Sonata in A, for Violin and Pianoforte.

JELLY D'ARANYI AND HAROLD SAMUEL

Motet for double chorus, 'I wrestle and pray' J. C. Bach
(Unaccompanied)

Violin soli—Allemande, Courante, and Chaconne (from Partita No. 2).

Partita in B flat, for Pianoforte.
Organ Soli:
(a) Chorale Prelude, 'Christ unser Herr, zum Jordan kam.'
(b) Chorale Prelude, 'Schmücke dich, O liebe Seele.'
(c) Fugue in G (à la gigue).
Chorus, 'Now shall the Grace' (with Organ and Continuo).

This was a busy evening. Twelve operas were being sampled at the Handel Festival, and three at Covent Garden while a queen of sopranos abdicated. On hearsay: Jelly d'Aranyi and Harold Samuel played superbly, the latter a good deal better than on the opening night. Mr. G. Thalben-Ball played, on the whole, as if he thought the instrument was there for the sake of Bach, and not vice versâ; but he might have been more strict about it. The choir was solid and reliable.

THIRD CONCERT

Overture for a Students' Festival ... ... Brahms
(Akademische Festouvertüre)

Oratorio, 'Sancta Civitas' ... ... R. Vaughan Williams
Soloists—STEUART WILSON AND ROY HENDERSON

Solemn Melody ... ... Walford Davies
Rhapsody for Contralto Solo and Male-Voice Choir Brahms
Soloist—ASTRA DESMOND

Irish Rhapsody No. 1. ... ... Stanford
Choral Ode, 'Blest Pair of Sirens' ... ... Parry

'Sancta Civitas' is one of those works that keep the listener's mind divided between the means and the end. When the means are not acceptable they take charge of the conscious attention, and the general effect is left to the subconscious attention (speaking loosely), so that in the concert-room we keep worrying over technical details, but on the way home we discover that we have been profoundly stirred by a work of art. The after-impression of 'Sancta Civitas' is that something far bigger was going on than we knew at the time. Probably we will go through the same process during and after the next performance, and the next, until we are inured to the means and free to decide whether 'Sancta Civitas' is as considerable a work as we vaguely thought it to be. We willingly suspend judgment, knowing that the hard sayings of Vaughan Williams belong to a musical speech that we wish to understand. They are not like the expletives of Stravinsky or the slang of young Parisians. In his article on the Heather Festival last month, Mr. Howes gave an outline of the technical methods employed in 'Sancta Civitas,' and that is as far as we can get at present.

What we may positively assert about 'Sancta Civitas' is that the descriptive climaxes are among the most graphic in music. Vaughan Williams can represent a multitude in clamour with an effect that is entirely his own. The lament over Babylon, the page of contrapuntal music built over the words, 'Heaven and earth are full of Thy glory, glory be to Thee,' are two of the most striking instances.

The fluid rhythm helps to keep the music remote from ordinary affairs. The whole effect of 'Sancta Civitas' is of something visionary, and not to be argued about—a true setting of 'Revelation.'

FOURTH CONCERT

MASS IN B MINOR ... ... J. S. Bach

Soloists—FLORA MANN, LILIAN BERGER, STEUART WILSON, AND GEORGE PARKER.

Some day, perhaps, people will wonder why we waited fifty years before we began to exercise our common-sense upon Bach. It may not be absolute right, but it is at least common-sense to give to Bach's orchestrally accompanied choral works the scoring that, according to the best judgment, best suits the music. This is what Dr. Vaughan Williams has done, and we may have no fear in deferring to his judgment, especially if we approve of it by results. The boldest, or rather the most easily noticed, of the doctorings was the introduction of clarinets. It was not done at haphazard. As a rule the clarinets piped or trilled with the high Bach trumpets, or they hid themselves in the middle of chords and were helpful without being obtrusive. There was very little—was there any?—of the prominent middle-register clarinet colouring that is one of the characteristics of 19th-century scoring, and which might have been too romantic for the Mass. Probably no one will quarrel with the alteration in the 'Quoniam.' The corno da caccia and bassoon music was divided round the orchestra, especially among the strings, and clear, articulate, part-playing took the place of the usual gurglings. The solo was given to all the basses of the choir—a loss in style, but a gain in power and surety. In the 'Confiteor' the orchestra was silenced until, at the beginning of the fantasia, it entered with special effect. There were many new expression marks, the most powerful being the fortissimo entry of the voice parts in the 'Crucifixus.' Was anything gained by giving four parts in the 'Hosannah' to the soloists? In the want of notes taken on the spot this list of renovations cannot be carried any further; but in any case it would be incomplete, for the alterations in the score were not all of the kind that could be 'spotted.' No doubt there was a good deal of quiet under-pinning going on when one did not suspect it. Altogether it was an interesting evening.

The Choir came through the Festival with added credit. It is not what one would call an athletic body, and for that reason it earns all the higher praise for keeping things so much alive. The programme was the heaviest that has been undertaken recently by any London choir. M.

'THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME': CENTENARY OF THE COMPOSER

(STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, b. July 4, 1826)

On July 4, 1826, the Jubilee of American Independence, amid the booming of cannon, was born Stephen Collins Foster, the grandson of an Irish exile who had emigrated from Derry. His father, William Barclay Foster, had married Eliza Tomlinson, November, 1807, at Pittsburgh, and they had a numerous family. Stephen was educated at Alleghany Academy (his teacher being John Kelly, of Dublin). In 1836 the family moved to Alleghany City, and in 1839 the boy was sent to Athens Academy, where his musical proclivities were developed. As early as 1841 he composed a song, 'Sadly to my heart appealing,' the prelude of which was distinctly reminiscent of 'Eileen Aroon'; and this was followed by 'Open thy lattice, love,' in 1842.

As is well known, negro minstrelsy was the vogue in America between the years 1830 and 1845, and in the latter year Stephen Foster, then aged nineteen, composed 'Louisiana Bill' and 'Uncle Ned.' Both songs were composed expressly for two Irish 'sable minstrels'—Joseph Murphy and William O'Rourke. Who does not remember the old jingle commencing:

'There was an old nigger, his name was Uncle Ned,
He's dead a long time ago;
He had no wool on de top of his head,
In de place where de wool ought to grow'?

Early in 1850 Foster published four 'Ethiopian Melodies,' namely, 'Nelly was a lady,' 'My Brudder Gum,' 'Doley Jones,' and 'Nelly Bly.' The same year (1850) is memorable for his marriage to Miss Jane Denny McDowell, of Pittsburgh; but, alas! poor Foster's married life was not strewn with roses, partly, no doubt, because his wife had little sympathy with the impractical dreamer.

Of the fourteen songs published by Foster, in 1851, 'The Old Folks at Home' stands out as having a rightful claim to remembrance, for assuredly it is one of the most widely known and popular songs—in fact, it may be regarded as a folk-song, and one that is heard all over the world. It was originally sung by the combination known as the Christy Minstrels, formed by E. P. Christy in 1842. Curiously enough, the original printed copy of this song bears the name of E. P. Christy as composer: 'Written and Composed by E. P. Christy.' But the fact is well authenticated that Foster, 'for a consideration,' had assigned the authorship—the exact sum being fifteen dollars. However, later editions of the song give Foster's name as composer.

Three songs only have been traced as being by Foster during the year 1852, yet one of these, 'Massa's in the cold, cold, ground,' had an enormous popularity. In the next year, out of five songs, 'My old Kentucky Home' and 'Old Dog Tray' had an extraordinary vogue. A little later he composed 'Willie, we have missed you,' one of the most charming ballads of that period, followed by 'Ellen Boyne,' 'Hard times come again no more,' 'Come where my love lies dreaming,' 'Under the willow she's sleeping,' &c.

In the last seven years of his life Foster's story was pitiful. Having made a hash of life, he drifted to the lowest depths, and one winter's day met with a fatal accident, being badly burned by the overturning of a spirit lamp in his attic. He died in Bellevue Hospital, on January 13, 1864. A week later his funeral service took place at Trinity Church, Pittsburgh, and the remains were met at the cemetery gates by the Citizens' Brass Band, which performed 'Come where my love lies dreaming' and 'The Old Folks at Home.' His grave in Alleghany Cemetery is marked by a simple marble stone, on which are the words:

STEPHEN C. FOSTER, of Pittsburgh,
Born July 4, 1826;
Died January 13, 1864.

W. H. GRATTAN FLOOD.

FESTIVAL OF THE ENGLISH FOLK-DANCE SOCIETY

From June 2 to June 5 the English Folk-Dance Society presented five programmes at the Scala Theatre in aid of the Cecil Sharp Memorial Fund. Numerous distinguished artists who gave their services contributed vocal or instrumental music of a folk or national origin. The dances were accompanied by an excellent professional orchestra under Dr. Vaughan Williams, the Society's musical adviser. A feature of the performances was the appearance of the traditional sword-dancers from North Skelton, in Yorkshire, and Mr. William Kimber, the leader of the first Morris dancers ever seen by Cecil Sharp.

Several similar festivals had been held during the lifetime of Cecil Sharp, but the Society had not hitherto ventured on so ambitious a project since his death two years ago. The success of the present festival is gratifying evidence that the work of which he laid the substantial foundations is being efficiently carried on.

It was interesting to compare the traditional performances with those of the Society. The traditions, at a close observance of which the Society rightly aims, were never static. But their development could not be prudently entrusted to those who approach the dances from, as it were, outside. The Society's performances, however accurate, are not exactly similar in effect to those of the traditional dancers. The latter are restricted to one dance, or to a small group of dances of the same style. The modern performer essays all types and traditions in rapid succession. Physical development and mental attitude naturally differ. The traditional performance, though no longer consciously ritual, shows the formality of its origin. Even in the theatre its restrained character makes it seem a ceremony rather than an exhibition. The revivalists, while they successfully avoid any meretricious exploitation of their adopted cult, contribute a grace, an agility, and an animation which assist modern senses to appreciate the potentialities of the folk-dance without getting a false impression of its proper character.

The programme impressed upon us that the dances are for active at least as much as for passive enjoyment. Hence the dancers seemed at pains to convince us that the pleasure of the entertainment was not confined to the auditorium. Neither technically nor physically do the dances make demands that are beyond the average capacity. Their success depends on simple considerations of rhythm, grace, and pattern. A number of persons go through a series of movements that most people could master with a reasonable amount of practice and a modicum of intelligence and activity, and the result is beautiful and productive of a high degree of artistic satisfaction. The beauty is simple, and easily appreciated; the satisfaction is one that can be attained in this field by many who would not otherwise experience the sensation of artistic activity. In nothing have the Folk progressed so far towards perfection as in dance, unless, indeed, it be in song. In both, Cecil Sharp has taught us that England can hold her head high among the nations.

X.

London Concerts

SOME SINGERS OF THE MONTH

Madame Lotte Lehmann is one of a group of Austrian and Germann women singers who lately have mightily raised our opinion of the vocal art of their countries. Aspiring English sopranos should not miss hearing Madame Lehmann.

At her concert at the Albert Hall she sang Wagner and Strauss, accompanied by Bruno Walter. It needed a few phrases before we felt that the singer had taken the measure of the building. Although beautifully poised, her voice would not at first ring out unhesitatingly in 'Elizabeth's Greeting to the Hall of Song' (an apt and complimentary choice, by the way). Her musical feeling was evident. As an example I will cite the fact that in the 'Tannhäuser' excerpt she rightly sacrificed her low notes to the more important needs of the big sweeping phrases; but a minute or two later she showed that she could bring them out ample and round, in the song 'Schmerzen.' In 'Träume' it was beautiful, how her voice stole in.

In the Strauss songs there were all sorts of beguiling details. I recall her little jets of sensuous tone in the 'Serenade,' no sooner suggested than withdrawn, Madame Lehmann showed a wonderfully fine feeling for timing her effects. She could express the veiled passion of 'Traum durch die Dämmerung,' and break into a flood of song in 'Allerseelen.' The finale from 'Salome' was a general review of all her art. One little fault she had, which struck me several times. This was the excessive dullness of her ee vowel on high notes. So afraid did she seem of anything like hard tone that she robbed the vowel of all its due brightness.

Mr. Tom Goodey sang Medtner's wordless Sonata for Voice at the Chenil Galleries, Chelsea. It proved to be of scanty musical interest. The singer uttered the vowels indicated with fidelity and a long-suffering air as of a student working at Nava or Concone. Clearly, wordless song is an absurdity, except in an occasional bit of ornamentation. Words are so established a part of the utterance of homo sapiens that a reversion to the inarticulateness of the brute creation seems like pure freakishness. A listener, even if he cannot distinguish or understand sung words, must know that words are being sung, or he feels he is being trifled with—which was the effect of Medtner's idle futility. Mr. Goodey's choice also included extracts from Wolf's unfinished opera, 'Manuel Venegas.' Here he used his light tenor voice artistically, but inclined to harden as he loudened.

Mr. John Goss also gave an interesting recital of German songs at the Chenil Galleries. We have rarely heard him in such good voice. Indeed, he has lately improved—he is succeeding in sinking technical considerations in a finished art. His lower notes still sounded excessively dark and morose. And he did not every time discriminate between the use of force and intensity on high notes. When his voice took on a tenor quality it was beautiful, and so well poised that fine shades of meaning were realised. His performances of the song of the 'Poet's Love' of Schumann, and Schubert's 'Secret,' were among his successes. These could hardly have been bettered.

At the unlucky concert of the Pasdeloup Orchestra at the Albert Hall—as ill-organized an affair as one has ever had the fate to suffer from—M. Vanni-Marcoux, formerly a favourite at Covent Garden, sang after a long absence from London. In 'La ci darem' it seemed that time had dealt with him unkindly, for, though there were dignified breadth and style, we missed the sheer beauty of tone which Mozart must have. A certain indifference in the singer's treatment was emphasized by his turning his back on the soprano, his partner in the duet.

A programme of familiar songs by Brahms, Schubert, Schumann, and Strauss, was sung at Wigmore Hall by Madame Elisabeth van Endert. She would have been better advised to go a little farther afield in her choice, for only a superlatively good performance (which hers was not) could have interested us in music all so hackneyed. Not that she was altogether a tyro, but she did not know how to produce sustained beautiful tone in slow songs. Singing legato, she was felt to be on the very limit of her physical resources, and her intonation was open to reproach. Her calculated attack on high notes showed her to be far from the point where technique is sunk into the unconscious. What was left? In light songs, a pretty voice and a fluent manner. In such music as 'Wohin' she indicated that the singing spirit was in her.

Miss Ethelynde Smith sang a programme of 'Songs of many Nations' at Æolian Hall. Too many, however, were trifling or worthless, and the effect was scrappy. The singer had an apt and likeable way of characterisation. She also seemed to have the possibilities of a good voice, but her technique and style were full of faults.

H. J. K.

SOME PIANISTS OF THE MONTH.

Moritz Rosenthal at Queen's Hall gave a strictly regulation programme. It is almost unnecessary to refer to his technical powers as a pianist, but perhaps one of his most striking characteristics is his capacity to preserve the clearness of every note in the most rapid passages. He played Beethoven's Sonata in C minor, Op. 111, and Chopin's Sonata, Op 58, with the complete understanding and ease of a master. His programme concluded brilliantly with a work of his own—'Carneval Viennese' on themes by Strauss.

Mr. Adolphe Hallis, at Queen's Hall, had arranged a retrospective programme of pianoforte music from the 20th century to the 17th. Doubtless it is a moot point whether from Bax to Byrd is better than from Byrd to Bax. Though Mr. Hallis had decided that the more traditional arrangement is effete, or at least unsatisfactory, merely to reverse the order does not make things more intelligible or interesting. What is more to the point is to make a consistent, well-ordered programme wherein contrast and variety are not too abrupt. To open with a small organ-grinding imitation; to have a centre of the fine but hackneyed 'Waldstein,' and to close with the serene and great Byrd is merely unusual without being satisfying. However, Mr. Hallis stated his case well if not convincingly.

A second hearing of Niedzielski at Grotrian Hall confirmed one's first impression. Were his head but as clever as his hands! . . .

Miss Esther Fisher (Wigmore Hall) has an exquisite touch. The endeavour to express power in Bach's 'Come, God, Creator!' resulted, however, in an effect of too much dead weight. In her playing of Debussy there was the true elfin-world character—well seen, felt, and expressed. Brahms's Variations and Fugue on a theme by Handel were made interesting and alive, though the continuity of the rugged fugue was somewhat spoiled by too much variety of expression, while curiously enough some of the more swift and delicate earlier variations were too precise—almost summary. In other words, Miss Fisher, having enviable qualities of touch, tone, and rhythm, has yet to possess more fully that still more enviable world of fine proportion and wide vision.

Mr. Lyell Barbour, a young American pianist, gave the last of his three concerts at Æolian Hall. He played Mozart's Sonata in A minor with a certain spirit and flow, but in a Romance and Intermezzo of Brahms there were lack of sympathy and understanding, and an over-emphasis of inner parts, while important upper parts frequently faded away. In fact, a frequent dropping of odd notes was noticeable in his playing of other compositions. Perhaps a somewhat artificial action was partly responsible for this, while it gave no compensating quality of tone.

At Wigmore Hall Mr. Phillipowsky gave Mozart's Sonata in B flat major with a grace, clarity, and bubbling-over-with-melodious-life feeling characteristic of Mozart. Four Clavierstücke of Brahms were round and rich in treatment. If, during the playing of Benjamin Dale's somewhat lengthy Sonata in D minor, one's mind meandered away at times, it was no doubt due to the composer's trick of introducing short phrases which reminded one of other things and people.

At the same hall Miss Mary Grierson played Bach's English Suite in A minor, showing a sensitiveness to the charm of the music, but one felt that more might have been made of the dances by touch alone. There was too much sustaining pedal. This was again evident in 'The Bells,' of Byrd. One does not often hear Schubert's Sonatas nowadays. Miss Grierson played the A major (Op. 120), which seemed rather thin, more especially as Miss Grierson tends to a method of under-statement which is dangerously near monotony. D'A.

THE PASDELOUP ORCHESTRA

The visit of the Pasdeloup Orchestra was badly stage-managed. It happened, rather obscurely, at the Albert Hall on Derby Day (of all days!), the orchestra was auxiliary to a singer, M. Vanni-Marcoux—at all events, he was billed in large type—and in general one was not surprised to see a half-empty hall. The programme was a modern French assortment (the 'Roi d'Ys' Overture, Ravel's 'Pavane,' 'Le Chasseur Maudit,' 'L'Apprenti Sorcier,' Chabrier's 'Bourrée Fantasque'), with the happy choice of Vaughan Williams's Overture to 'The Wasps' as a compliment to England. M. Albert Wolff had a quick and responsive instrument under his beat, alert to a rhythm, excellent in tone, and (but for an excess of brassiness in a brass fortissimo) well disciplined and unified. M.

MR. WARLOCK'S SONGS

For his third recital at Chenil Galleries, Mr. John Goss gave a whole programme of songs in which Mr. Peter Warlock had had a hand either as editor of old manuscripts or as original composer. Most of the original works were new to the public. The chief of them was the song-cycle, 'The Curlew' (W. B. Yeats), with accompaniment of strings, flute, and cor anglais. This we have heard before, but never fully realised. The continuity of its mood—a sickly sadness—is a trifle repellent, and one has to learn tolerance of its complaining in order to take full relish of the fastidious terms in which it is expressed. There is no more cunning craftsman than Mr. Warlock among our song writers. He is seldom inspired with an idea that makes us say 'of course!'—but there is always something to watch in the way he makes up his songs. Miss Dorothy Silk helped to sing them. M.

The Artists' Union at Prague has conferred an honorary membership on Mrs. Rosa Newmarch, in recognition of her work on behalf of Czecho-Slovakian music, especially in making it known in England. This distinction is given to very few foreigners, among those recently honoured being the Italian playwright Pirandello, and the French sculptor Bourdell.

Competition Festival Record

ENGLAND AND WALES.

BUXTON.—This Festival (May 12-15) immediately followed the strike, and was held under difficulties. The main effect was a loss of £50 on the receipts as compared with last year. Artistically, the Festival was a complete success. Five choirs sang Wilbye's 'Sweet honey-sucking bees' and Bantock's 'They that go down to the sea,' in competition for the principal challenge shield, the winners being Holmewood Choir. Sale and District was second. The female-voice choirs, of which Sale was the best, sang 'The Rhine Maidens.' In other classes the successful choirs were Buxton Philharmonic, Matlock Ladies' Choir, and Dronfield Mixed-Voice Choir.

HASTINGS.—A full six days' programme (May 13, 14, 15, 17, 18, 19) was made out of the hundred and twenty classes of this Festival, and the greater part of it was occupied by solo-playing and singing, especially pianoforte-playing. As a meeting for choirs, the Festival lags behind; in the chief classes there were four female-voice choirs, one male-voice and two mixed-voice. The winning choirs in these events were Hastings Secondary School, Hastings and St. Leonard's Male-Voice Choir, and Wellington Square Choral Society.

HULL.—In this neighbourhood school-singing seems to flourish exceedingly. We read of thirty-nine choirs in one class (age under eleven), thirty-two in a class for hymn-singing, twenty-seven in the under-fourteen class, and of adjudicators uttering words of the highest praise. In folk-dancing there is the same keenness—twenty-six teams in a country dance, and so on. There were plenty of classes for adults in the course of five days (June 1-5), but the children were most in evidence, and it must have been a pleasant Festival to watch.

ISLE OF WIGHT.—The fourth Island Musical Festival, held at Ryde during May 19-22, brought in eight hundred entries for seventy-two classes. A good standard was upheld by the competitors, especially in the case of the five choirs which sang in the open Choral Society class. These were, in the adjudicator's order: Sandown (Mr. E. A. English), 169 marks; Shanklin (Mr. E. A. English), 168; Newport (Mr. H. W. Stubbington), 167; Bembridge (Mr. J. C. Riddick), 166. The challenge shield presented by Sandown for the town or district gaining the highest number of first prizes was won by Ryde with nineteen points.

MORECAMBE.—The authorities decided to proceed with their Festival (May 6-8) regardless of the strike, and they paid the price of their courage with a deficit of three hundred pounds. Mr. J. A. Fuller-Maitland has written to the papers asking for help to wipe out this loss.

NORTH OF ENGLAND MUSICAL TOURNAMENT.—This event, now in its eighth year, was held at Newcastle-on-Tyne on May 27-29 and June 5-12, having been postponed a fortnight owing to the general strike. It is worth noting that the dropping of money prizes has led to no falling-off in entries, this year showing a steady all-round growth. The standard was very high, with the school classes rather more than maintaining their form of last year both in singing and sight-reading. The gold medal class for vocal soloists, open to past trophy-winners in the Tournament, produced some splendid voices, and almost equally good singing. Among the successful new classes was one for conductors. It brought a dozen aspirants, and should establish itself as a valuable class. Community singing at the evening sessions was also another capital new feature that has no doubt come to stay. The chief results were: Male-voice choirs (open), Bebside and District (Mr. William Bell); Mixed-voice choirs (open), Cecilian Glee Society, Middlesbrough (Mr. Gavin Kay); Full orchestras (open), Wearside Orchestra, Sunderland (Mr. W. R. Drew).

YORK.—The Yorkshire Choral Competitions were postponed from the second week of May, and held on June 10-12. Six choirs were unable to compete, as they had other festivals to attend. The remainder, however, made good competition for the three trophies, the successful choirs being York Old Priory (female-voice and male-voice choirs) and Hull Æolian, which sang Parry's 'My soul, there is a country' and Wilbye's 'Ye that do live' in the mixed-voice competition. Folk-dances played a large part in the syllabus.

Other Festivals were held with success at TRURO (the Cornwall Competitions) on May 3-7; CANTERBURY (the Kent Festival) on May 8, 12, and 15; FOLKESTONE on May 26, 29, and June 1; BEACONSFIELD (the Berks, Bucks, and Oxon.) on May 29 and June 2-5; PORTSMOUTH on June 10-12; IPSWICH (the Suffolk County Festival) on June 11 and 12; LEAMINGTON on June 12 and 17-19.

The sporting spirit in festival work is always welcome as an antidote to the purely competitive outlook. A good example occurred at Newcastle, one of the male-voice choirs, hailing from a centre so far little affected by the strike, paying the expenses of a hard-hit rival organization from a mining centre.

SCOTLAND.

ABERDEEN.—This old-established Festival revealed a marked recrudescence. There were more competitors, especially in the school choir classes, the public showed a livelier interest, and the general organization of the Festival had been tightened up. Mr. H. Plunket Greene and Mr. Percy A. Scholes adjudicated. The principal adult choir results were: Mixed Choirs, Loyal Order of Ancient Shepherds, Aberdeen; Men's Choirs, A. Hall & Co.'s Choir, Aberdeen; Women's Choirs, Buckie Ladies' Choir; Church Choirs, Ferryhill Parish Church, Aberdeen.

DUMFRIESSHIRE.—At the fifth Dumfriesshire Festival, Mr. Arthur Collingwood adjudicated, and the principal winners were: Mixed Choirs, Ayr Burgh Choir; Men's Choirs, Dumfries Y.M.C.A.; Women's Choirs, Kirkcudbright Choral Society; Church Choirs, Kirkmahoe Parish Church; School Choirs, Lockerbie Academy, Annan Academy, and St. John's Episcopal School, Dumfries; Violin, J. Crosbie, Dumfries; Pianoforte, Miss Margaret Buchan, Ayr.

DUNDEE.—The promoters of the Dundee Musical Festival have for one reason or another failed to create public interest in their enterprise. This year's event was so poorly supported, and resulted in so substantial a pecuniary loss, as to threaten the continuance of the Festival. A concert for behoof of the Festival funds by the choirs and soloists from Dundee schools who competed was very largely attended, and in addition to helping the funds may have afforded the management some lead as to how public interest may be stimulated.

EDINBURGH.—The seventh Edinburgh Festival, which ran for seven full days, attracted more competitors and a wider public interest than it has known for several years past. The Festival is still stronger on the instrumental than on the vocal side, the local choral entries in particular being weak both in number and quality, except in the school classes. The principal adjudicators were Sir Richard Terry and Mr. Geoffrey Shaw (vocal), Mr. T. F. Dunhill, (pianoforte), Mr. Spencer Dyke (strings). The principal awards were: Mixed-Voice Choirs, Stanwix Choral Society, Carlisle; Male-Voice Choirs, Clydebank Male-Voice Choir; Female-Voice Choirs, Stanwix Choral Society, Carlisle; Church Choirs, St. Serf's Parish Church, Edinburgh; Junior Choirs, North Berwick High School; School Choirs, North Berwick High School; Vocal Solos, General Diploma, Edmond Greig, Stirling; Vocal Solos, Scots Song Diploma, J. L. Renwick, Peebles; Pianoforte Diploma, Alex. Thompson, Leven; Violin Diploma, Roberta Jaboor, Edinburgh; 'Cello, Dennis Sandeman, Edinburgh.

FIFE, KINROSS, AND CLACKMANNAN.—This Festival had good entries, but poor public support. Mr. Herbert Wiseman adjudicated. The principal awards were: Mixed Choirs, Kelty Co-operative Choir; Women's Choirs, Wemyss Choral Society; Church Choirs, Abbotshill Parish Church; Junior Choirs, Dysart Co-operative Choir; School Choirs, Kirkcaldy High School; Vocal Solos, General, Miss Margaret Smith, Edinburgh; Vocal Solos, Scots, William M. Gilmour, Dunfermline; Violin, J. Duff, Kirkcaldy; Pianoforte, Miss L. J. Davidson, Cambuslang.

STIRLINGSHIRE.—The sixth Stirlingshire Festival, held this year at Falkirk, had a record number of competitors, ran for a week, and had much better audiences than last year at Stirling. Adjudicators: Vocal, Mr. F. H. Bisset and Mr. Robert McLeod; pianoforte, Mr. A. M. Henderson; violin, Miss Gladys Clark; Scots folk-dancing, Miss Jean Milligan. The principal awards were: Mixed Choirs, Falkirk Select Choir; Men's Choirs, Stoneyburn Choir; Women's Choirs, Philomel Choir, Grangemouth; Church Choirs, Bothkennar Parish Church; Junior Choirs, Philomel Junior Choir, Grangemouth; School Choirs, High School, Grangemouth, Bainsford School, Falkirk, and Intermediate School, Bridge of Allan; Scots Folk-dancing, 53rd Stirlingshire Girl Guides; Vocal Solos, Elizabeth Macdonald, Stirling; Burns Songs, Jean Thomson, Grangemouth.

Music in the Provinces

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.—The Madrigal Society, having won a triumph under Mrs. Bourne at the Morecambe Festival, gave a concert to its own people on May 20. Besides the three festival tests the programme included Bainton's 'Summer,' Holst's 'I love my love' (male voices) and other part-songs of special interest.

BEDFORD.—The Choral Society, conducted by Mr. A. F. Parris, ended its season with a miscellaneous programme that included Brewer's 'Summer Sports.'——Elgar's Violin Sonata was played by Mr. Alfred de Reyghere and Mr. Harold Craxton, on May 27.

BENFIELDSIDE.—At the last concert of the season given by the Benfieldside Choral Society, under Dr. E. J. Sloane, the programme included a Choral Fantasia on 'The Bohemian Girl,' and a good selection of part-songs.

BIRMINGHAM.—On May 31, at the Midland Institute, a concert was given by some competitors in the 1926 Birmingham Competition Festival, assisted by some prize-winners in earlier Birmingham Festivals, and by Miss Joan Willis and the Birmingham Bach Choir. The choir sang two madrigals by Orlando Gibbons, and Bach's Motet, 'Jesu, Priceless Treasure.' The little choir came through the ordeal with credit, and managed to capture the real spirit of the music.——Vocal students at the Midland Institute School of Music gave a concert on June 16. The standard attained was a good one for singers still in the student stage, and the voice production gave evidence of sound and careful training. One of the outstanding performers was Miss Edith Whitehouse, whose presentation of Liszt's 'Love,' and Grieg's 'A Swan' had a repose of style rarely found even in older and more experienced singers. Her voice, too, is mellow in quality, and well produced.——Mr. Cunningham, the City organist, has been appointed conductor of tho City of Birmingham Choir.——The Birmingham Choral Union and the Birmingham Choral and Orchestral Union have amalgamated under the conductorship of Mr Joseph Adams.

BRADFORD.—Eastbrook Hall, re-seated and generally improved, is to serve as a temporary home for the four Bradford societies that used to perform in St. George's Hall.

BRIGHTON.—'Hiawatha' was excellently performed at the Dome, on May 29, by the Brighton and Hove Harmonic Society, under Mr. Percy Taylor. This was the first time that the complete cantata had been performed at Brighton.

BRISTOL.—The University Students' Male-Voice Choir not only made the audience join in some of the songs at the concert on May 29, but brought the audience in to rehearse two days previously. The result was a very successful and enjoyable concert. The music, conducted by Mr. Arthur S. Warrell, included Patrick Hadley's 'Nightfall,' Herbert Howells's 'Dirge,' Robin Milford's 'Rutterkin' and 'Parson Hogg,' 'Peter Warlock's Fancy,' and Stanford's 'Songs of the Sea.'

BURNLEY.—The Municipal Choir, under Mr. Duxbury, gave a concert on Sunday, May 30, in aid of the War Memorial Fund. Elgar's 'For the Fallen' was the principal music.

HARROGATE.—The summer symphony concerts are now in progress under the able direction of Mr. Basil Cameron. Beethoven's first and Dvorák's 'New World' were given on May 26 and June 2.

HASTINGS.—A trio of 'plebiscite' programmes, given by the Hussars Band on the morning, afternoon, and evening of June 4, included a movement from the 'Unfinished' Symphony and 'O sole mio.'

LEEDS.—Many well-known artists will take part in the Leeds tercentenary celebration. A 'tercentenary choir' has been formed, largely from the Festival choir, to sing at the opening on July 8 and again on July 12. Byrd's Great Service will be sung at the Parish Church on July 9 by the Philharmonic Society, under Dr. Bairstow. The Choral Union, under Dr. Coward, and the Armley Choral Society, under Mr. H. H. Pickard, will also take part.

MANCHESTER.—Though the prospectus of the next Hallé season is not yet fully sketched, some interesting features are already settled. There are to be four purely orchestral evenings, that of February 17 being devoted entirely to Elgar's works; the Berlioz 'Messe des Morts' and Bach's B minor Mass are to be repeated as a result of requests from influential quarters. The Beethoven Mass in D promised for last season will definitely be performed on January 27, and on March 10 Bantock's new 'Song of Songs' will receive its first Lancashire hearing, with Miss Caroline Hatchard and Messrs. Mullings and Allin as solists. 'The Messiah,' on December 23 and 24, completes what will probably prove the most memorable series of choral performances ever given on one occasion here. Hofmann, Harold Samuel, Moiseiwitsch, and Godowsky are among the pianists engaged; Jelly d'Aranyi, Suggia, Cassado, Catterall, and William Primrose are included in the string soloists. Formichi will sing at the final concert in March, and one may hope that programme publicity announcements will observe this season a due proportion between the singer and the symphony. The casts for the Berlioz, Bach, Handel, and Beethoven choral concerts seem perfect models of efficiency. One Wagner concert only will be given: two soloists appear here for the first time in Messrs. Roy Henderson and Gaspar Cassado, and again two leading members of the Orchestra take part as soloists—Messrs. Alfred Barker and Clyde Twelvetrees.

OXFORD.—Mrs. E. S. Coolidge, the famous American patron of music, gave a chamber concert at the Sheldonian, towards the end of term. The works performed were Loeffler's 'Canticle to the Sun' (sung by Anne Thursfield), a Violoncello Sonato by Franco Alfano, and songs with string quartet accompaniment by Pizzetti. The players were Misses Marjorie Hayward, Stella Pattenden, Rebecca Clarke, and May Mukle.

READING.—Mr. John Fry's orchestra recently gave an excellent concert, opening with Mozart's 'Eine kleine Nachtmusik. —— The University Orchestra and Choral Society was conducted by Mr. W. Probert-Jones on June 8 in a well-chosen programme that included the 'Unfinished' Symphony, Dyson's 'To Music,' Boughton's 'Early Morn,' Stanford's 'Diaphenia,' a group of madrigals, and Brahms's 'Gipsy Songs.'

YORK.—The York Musical Society's programme for next season includes Parry's 'A Vision of Life.'

The Jaques-Dalcroze Institute announces five Summer Courses on rhythm and kindred subjects at Geneva, extending from August 16 to 28. Full particulars, &c., may be had from the secretary of the Institute, 44, Terrasière, Geneva, who will also answer inquiries concerning rooms in hotels and pensions at Geneva.

Music in Scotland

EDINBURGH.—The production of five grand operas with practically double casts within a few weeks by two amateu operatic societies indicates the resources of the city in voca talent; but how far there is a public to keep it all going, a season or two will determine. The Edinburgh Gran Opera Society has hitherto confined its activitives to aug menting the choruses of the principal visiting opera com panies, but having acquired the services of the late conductor Mr. de la Haye, and several of the principal singers of th Edinburgh Opera Society, it ventured on its own, an presented 'Lohengrin' and Wallace's 'Maritana.'——Th Edinburgh Opera Society gave performances of Gounod's 'Faust,' Ambroise Thomas's 'Mignon,' and Hermann Goetz's 'Taming of the Shrew.' Unfortunately the Society's musical director, Dr. T. G. O'Feely, was taken seriously ill a week before the performances, and Mr. R. Hutton Malcolm, of Glasgow, was called in to take the final rehearsals practically at sight, and conduct the performances. Mr. Malcolm, with the invaluable assistance of the veteran Mr. E. C. Hedmondt, as producer, succeeded in securing remarkably presentable representations. The production of Goetz's undeservedly neglected 'Taming o the Shrew,' last heard at Edinburgh forty years ago, was quite a notable event, but the public failed to appreciate its importance, and stayed away in large numbers.——Miss Mary Grierson, an Edinburgh musician of many parts, and a Mus. Bac., gave a pianoforte recital, the programme being drawn from Byrd, Purcell, Bach, Brahms, an Scriabin.——Miss Helen Ogilvie, a former member of the Edinburgh Opera Society, who has returned after a period of study in London, gave a vocal recital of 16th-, 17th-, and 18th-century songs—Italian operatic arias, Germa Lieder, and modern English songs.——The Edinburgh Society of Organists visited Glasgow as the guests of the Glasgow Society, and inspected the organs at the Cathedral, the City Hall, and Hyndland Church.——A presentation was made to Mr. James G. Adair in recognition of his having completed fifty years' service as choirmaster of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church.

GLASGOW.—The programme of an organ and choral recital, given by Mr. John Pullein at St. Mary's Cathedral, under the auspices of the Glasgow centre of the British Music Society, included choral works by Dowland, Orlando Gibbons, Vittoria, E. C. Bairstow, and John Pullein, and organ works by Bach, Rheinberger, Jongen, Harvey Grace, Elgar, and Frank Bridge.

Musical Notes from Abroad

GERMANY

A METROPOLITAN CAST AT BADEN-BADEN

Arthur Bodansky, chief conductor of the Metropolitan Opera House, has brought us a message from New York. It took the form of a series of guest-performances with a cast of prominent singers from the Metropolitan. Bodansky was Kapellmeister at Mannheim before he went to America, some years before the war. In the meantime he had never conducted in Germany. It was therefore interesting to see him combining the results of his musical education with what he had learned at the Metropolitan: the more so, because both conductor and singers revealed themselves in Mozart, a composer whom the Germans consider it their own privilege to interpret.

It was particularly 'Così fan tutte' that revealed the difference of style between a Metropolitan and the German performance. Difficulties of staging are one hindrance to a successful performance; also the task of the conductor is not very easy. To Bruno Walter, Mozart is sacrosanct. He plays the music with the deepest possible expression, but never deprives it of the grace peculiar to Mozart. Bodansky —a man of quite another stamp, whose principal virtue is his abounding energy, and at whose disposal are some singers that, if not Italian by birth, yet certainly are Italian by feeling—is more inclined to take Mozart as an Italian composer, and one who, of course, went far beyond anything his predecessors had done. In the cast the leading personality was Lucrezia Bori, a Spaniard born, and clever both in singing and acting. Her intellectual force is very strong. Signor Giuseppe de Luca, the Italian baritone, who had impersonated Figaro in the 'Barber of Seville' with rare mastery, was the Guglielmo of 'Così fan tutte.' All the other singers—Florence Easton, Elizabeth Kandt, George Meader, and Adamo Didur—were excellent instruments in the hands of the stage-manager, Sam Thewman. They laid great stress upon the gay character of the play, and produced it as typical opera-buffa.

The performance took place in the small theatre, which some sixty years before had been inaugurated with the first performance of 'Beatrice and Benedict,' under the personal direction of the composer, Hector Berlioz.

A POST-WAGNERIAN OPERA AT WEIMAR

The name of Roffredo Caetani as a composer had never before been heard in Germany. He is a Roman prince residing at Paris, where he edits an interesting magazine; but from his early youth he has been intimately connected with German musical culture. He lived for a time at Weimar—the Weimar of Liszt, whose favourite pupil he was. It is long since he wrote his opera, 'Hypatia,' which he saw on the stage only after some decades had elapsed, the first performance taking place on May 23 last, in the Weimar National Theatre. It was a great moment for the composer, though not so much for the spectator, for, as is easily understood, the work belongs to a period which is accomplished, and Caetani's means of expression are similarly dated. He cannot get away from the Wagnerian style, and if occasionally he tries to adopt more modern methods, or hints at his Italian origin, it is to become less convincing than in the other parts of his work. The libretto, written by the composer himself, is inspired by the story of the philosopher, Hypatia, who became a victim of her profession. In the opera she appears to be converted to Christianity when dying at the foot of the temple. A love-story with Orestes, the Prefect of Egypt, is interwoven with the plot. A nightly ceremony in a pagan temple ought to be the climax of the piece, but just at this moment the composer fails.

The performance, conducted by Dr. Ernst Praetorius, afforded good proof of the high standard of the Weimar opera-house. It was attended by many foreign critics, especially French—for young talent in France feels highly indebted to Prince Caetani for his kind assistance. If we take this opera as the last trace of post-Wagnerian style, it may deserve our attention.

PAUL WEISSMANN.

TORONTO

Although spring this year has been exceedingly casual in her method of advent, the musical season (which, fortunately, for some of us, waits for no man) is definitely over, and we are in the throes of the academic recital. Strangely enough it fell to the harp to bid adieu to our concert audience. Yet perhaps one could have desired no finer climax, for Alberto Salvi is an artist who combines with his flawless technique every attribute of sound musicianship. He is among the few great soloists who never disappoint.

The Toronto Conservatory of Music was early in the field with two concerts by advanced pupils. On both evenings the pianoforte classes dominated the violin and vocal efforts, sadly enough both in quality and in quantity. There is still hanging over the art of this country a frenzied love of physical action, and our younger pianists, with one or two remarkable exceptions, are being cultivated so perfectly in what is called the Liszt school that they have little regard or inclination for anything over and above mere technical display. Unfortunately, to play the notes is one thing, and to feel the inspiration of the music and translate it is another. However, experience will in time teach us that to be is far more significant and worthy than to do.

The Pageant Chorus, our great Canadian national asset, which perhaps has contributed more than any other factor to bring the musical aspect of our Annual National Exhibition into line with the commercial achievements of the Dominion, is in full practice, and bids fair to rival even the amazing success of last year. The membership will be a full two thousand. My next letter, for the September issue, will deal with the Coliseum concerts of this vast body, and also the inspiration we are anticipating from the visit of one of your famous Guards Bands—the Coldstreams, I believe.

H. C. F.

VIENNA

THE 'HANDEL RENAISSANCE'

Much has been said and written in recent years in Germany on the great revival of the music of George Frederick Handel. The term 'revival,' as applied to this composer, is probably somewhat of a shock to music-lovers in Great Britain, where Handel is almost regarded as an Englishman, and his great oratorios are the standard works for many choral festivals. The German Handel renaissance, let it therefore be added, concerns principally the operas of the master (although his oratorios are far less frequently performed in Germany than in England). Handel's operatic output, formidable as it is with its record of no less than forty stage works, is probably as little familiar to the broad operatic public of Great Britain as it was to the German opera-goer before the Handel revival set in three years ago. This is particularly surprising, since most of Handel's operas were actually designed for the London stage.

The Handel renaissance in Germany—an affair in which chiefly the literary men and æsthetic connoisseurs are interested—has in fact found far less response from the general public than its promoters would lead us to believe. And each successive production of a Handel opera reveals new reasons for the public apathy towards Handel as an operatic composer. The learned musician sees in Handel's operas a welcome relief from the realistic opera which only recently was in vogue, and which had been in its time regarded as a happy antidote to the Wagnerian and post-Wagnerian music-drama, just as Wagner had previously disposed of spectacular and historic operas. Our period seems ripe for a new type of opera to match the evolution of symphonic music. No Stravinsky or Schönberg has so far created it. Thus old forms have temporarily served as a subterfuge for sound evolution in orchestral and instrumental music. The present Handel renaissance is in some manner the operatic equivalent of Stravinsky's neo-Bachism and Krenek's Concerti grossi. Moreover, Handel's operas offer wide scope for the principles of 'abstraction' and monumental statuesqueness now preached by some advocates of modern opera.

The public, however, is still antagonistic to the esoteric taste of the connoisseurs. It still insists on having dramatic situations, dramatic events, and dramatic structure in opera. Handel's 'Julius Cæsar,' which the State Academy of Music revived at Vienna on May 29, has none of these qualities, which, after all, are essential in grand opera. 'Julius Cæsar,' in fact, can hardly be classified as opera at all. Rather is it a scenic oratorio, in which each aria and each ensemble scene (there are very few of them) is a masterpiece, but hardly of the operatic type. The arias are mutually connected by recitatives which provide what little there is of dramatic variety. As a whole, 'Julius Cæsar' lacks dramatic tension; it remains a precious historical rarity, and its production a venture into musical history. Prof. Carl Alwin conducted the performance, which was dignified and very good according to the standards of an Academy production.

THE OTHER SIDE OF BACH

Johann Sebastian Bach's scenic cantata 'The Appeasing of Æolus' is the senior of Handel's opera by only one year. Paul von Klenau performed it with the Konzertverein on April 26, in collaboration with the Hellerau School of Physical Culture now stationed at Castle Laxenburg, near Vienna. Valerie Kratina devised the choregraphic part of the enterprise, with Hans Brahm serving as stage-manager and Prof. Oscar Strand designing the simple scenic setting.

The production was something of an historical event, being the first stage performance of this cantata since its première in 1725. Like so many of Bach's secular cantatas, 'The Appeasing of Æolus' is an occasional composition. It was written for production at the hands of Leipsic University students, to celebrate the birthday of Prof. August Friedrich Mueller. Picander, Bach's well-tried librettist, compiled an allegoric text which conjures gods and goddesses, and Æolus himself, the master of tempests, takes a hand in the innocent plot. At the end, all concerned unite in homage to the beloved Prof. Mueller. Klenau and his forces gave a performance which was excellent on the musical side but somewhat too near to burlesque in its dramatic aspects. It was a rollicking rococo farce in the vein of a college jest. The singing actors (mostly members of the Staatsoper) gave only a mild parody of the naive if somewhat bombastic text, instead of approaching it with the seriousness which Picander must have had in mind. The music does not count among Bach's inspirations; but it is rich in beautiful melodies and remarkable in its characterization of the dramatis personæ.

A MOZART PREMIÈRE

Köchel says that no less than ten of Mozart's symphonies are lost. One of the ten has recently been unearthed by Prof. Wilhelm Fischer at the monastery of Lambeach, Austria, from the vast archives from which several unknown compositions by Leopold Mozart, Wolfgang's father, had previously been brought to light. Prof. Fischer ascribes this Symphony, in G, to the year 1767. Mozart therefore wrote it at the age of eleven years, and almost simultaneously with 'Bastien and Bastienne,' and the first two of his so-called 'Viennese Symphonies.'

Even apart from the relative valuation determined by the early date of the work, this 'new' Mozart Symphony may be called a gem of its kind. The scoring is simple: strings, two oboes, and two horns, which accounts for the somewhat thin sound of the first movement (Allegro maestoso), the weakest of the three. The second (Andante), a beautiful soaring string cantilena against sustained horns, seems to foreshadow the mystic grandeur of 'The Magic Flute,' and the third (Presto) movement, delightful in its briskness, anticipates the peasants' scene and Zerlina's bridal song from 'Don Juan.' The occasion of this belated Mozart première was an historical concert with a programme of awe-inspiring length purporting to give a survey of 'Three hundred years of music.' In the long list of historical antiquities, C. Ph. E. Bach's Pianoforte Concerto in D minor was notable for its strong third movement and the rich, if discreetly applied, contrapuntal craftsmanship. J. F. Reichardt's 'Rhapsody' for baritone voice was interesting in the light of Brahms's setting of the same poem (the 'Rhapsody' for contralto and chorus). Reichardt's version proved a not unworthy precursor of Brahms's famous piece.

Another pseudo-première of Mozart's was the performance—the first within memory—of his Mass in C minor, a work which shares an undeserved oblivion with the master's far greater 'Requiem.' The Mass, as is not generally known, had an interesting history. Mozart dropped it after completing the Kyrie, Gloria, Sanctus, and Benedictus, and later employed portions of these movements for his oratorio, 'Davidde penitente.' Georg Aloys Schmitt, of Dresden, ultimately restored the Mass, supplementing it with fragments from Mozart's other ecclesiastical works, and himself supplying the missing parts of the orchestral setting. In its present form it is an impressive work well worth unearthing, and of far more than mere historical interest. Again, as in the youthful Symphony in G, the operatic composer in Mozart asserts himself strongly in the Mass, especially in the copious employment of the brass: there are no fewer than four trombones! The Mass is difficult to perform, the eight-part choruses in particular making great demands on the choir.

THE WEBER CENTENARY

If Mozart was not inclined to rate his Mass very highly (a self-criticism contradicted by our generation), Carl Maria von Weber also did not over-estimate the importance of his first Symphony in C. 'Virtually nothing in this Symphony pleases me,' he stated in a letter, 'save the Minuet and, perhaps, the Adagio.' Weber wrote the work at the age of twenty years, while musical director to the Court of Duke Eugen, of Württemberg. It may be remarked that neither this nor his second Symphony, again in C, survived his operas, or that favourite piece of pianists, the 'Konzertstück.' But while the beauties of the first Symphony pale beside the poetic charms of 'Der Freischütz,' it still sustains the impress of genius and individuality, and has much of the romantic beauty and dramatic strength that made Weber a great operatic composer.

Director Franz Schalk gave a wonderful performance of this early Weber work with the Philharmonic Orchestra, by way of prelude to the Weber centenary celebration. The celebration itself at the Staatsoper was somewhat disappointing, consisting of a dignified performance of 'Der Freischütz,' under Robert Heger, and a much-deferred revival of 'Euryanthe,' under Schalk. A complete Weber cycle would have been more in place on this festive occasion. And one would also have wished to hear the first performance of Weber's hitherto unknown Mass, which Dr. Konstantin Schneider has but recently discovered at Salzburg. Weber himself had thought it lost in a fire which destroyed virtually all of his early compositions. It was written at Munich while Weber was under the tutelage of Johann Nepomuk Kalcher, and was dedicated to the Archbishop of Salzburg in 1802, when Weber's father acted as theatre manager there, and Weber pursued his musical studies under Michael Haydn.

Paul Bechert.

On May 29 the South London Philharmonic Society gave one of the most ambitious and successful concerts of its career. The choir, conducted by Mr. W. H. Kerridge, acquitted itself well in the choral scene from Act 3 of 'Die Meistersinger' (in which Mr. Heddle Nash sang Walther and Mr. Robert Radford Hans Sachs), the choral dances from 'Prince Igor,' Parry's 'There is an old belief,' and Elgar's 'Fly, singing bird.' The D minor Pianoforte Concerto of Bach was played by Mr. Rae Robertson.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths:

William Henry Perry Leslie, suddenly, at Bryn Tanat, Llansaintffraid, on May 23, aged sixty-six. The second son of the late Henry Leslie, he inherited his father's enthusiasm for choral singing, and did great service to that department of music in Shropshire and the Welsh Border Country. He founded in 1881 the firm of Leslie & Godwin, insurance brokers at Lloyd's, and was chairman of Lloyd's Dramatic, Operatic, and Musical Society. In 1924 he was Master of the Musicians' Company. A fine example of the successful business man with a passion for music, he will be missed in many musical quarters where his encouraging and genial presence and ready help were for so long an inspiration.

James Thomas Pye, at Grimsby, on April 15. He was born in London in 1850, and held posts as organist and choirmaster in Surbiton, Lowestoft, and Grimsby. A Mus. Bac., Oxon., he received part of his training at Chester Cathedral.

Answers to Correspondents

Memor.—(1.) Your despairing letter asking, at great length, 'What is a composer to do with his work when completed?' admits of no very helpful answer, we fear. A composer who is already established in any department usually finds publication easy—too easy for his reputation and for the good of the art, in many cases. It would be a wholesomely humilitating experience for him to submit an occasional MS. under an assumed name to a publisher who knows him not. The great unpublished, to which you belong, can do no more than keep pegging away, swallowing the 'declined with thanks' with as good a grace as possible. Your threat that, unless you get something published soon, you will 'give up composition and take to writing instead, as the easier line of resistance,' leads us to warn you that in literature, hardly less than in music, the jobs usually go the man who has already 'arrived.' We have no wish to wound, but candour is called for, and we cannot refrain from suggesting that you are inclined to over-estimate your abilities. You say, for example, that one of your compositions has a 'supernal' melody: not many established composers would care to apply such an expression to their own music. Nor do the pieces you have sent us show any outstanding talent, or any special characteristic that might lead a publisher to take them up. The fact is, composers of merely respectable attainments and workmanship are to-day as plentiful as blackberries. A few likely ones happen to reach print (through an unusually happy effort, or by the aid of a bit of personal influence, or owing to their position as teachers, players, or writers, having made their names well-known to the musical public); the rest must be content to find their joy in the act of composition itself. Virtue must be its own reward. (2.) The metronome marks added by editors of the classics, are, we agree, often absurd. But no player of experience and taste has any scruple in modifying them.

Two more sixteen-year-old aspirants! Like 'A. D. A.,' to whom we replied in our last issue, 'L. P. C.' is ambitious in the direction of musical criticism—in fact, to become a musical critic is his 'one and only wish'!—and he writes to say that he had begun to 'wonder how on earth' he could ever attain his end. After reading our advice to 'A. D. A.' his hopes have risen, and he is now going to take the advice to himself and go ahead. The other, 'R. J. C.,' is so attracted by the prospect of the life of a professional musician that he refuses to be put off by those who tell him that 'a musical life is a very hard one.' First, we have with great regret to tell 'R. J. C.' that the diplomas he mentions are of very little value. He had better wipe them out completely, and go ahead to work for distinctions about which there can be no question, such as those of the R.A.M., R.C.M., Trinity College of Music, and the Royal College of Organists. It is to his advantage that he has already had some experience in playing a brass instrument, and that he has had three years' work as an organist. Unless he has a very strong bent in another direction, we advise him to follow up—for a time, at all events—the organ and pianoforte. Having obtained the College of Organists' diploma, he should try for a post at a good parish church where there is scope for teaching, choral society work, &c. With hard work and reasonable luck he ought to achieve this by the time he is twenty-one, an age still young enough to enable him to develop any other special lines that attract him, or that seem to promise any specially good opening.

E. K. E.—You say you 'realise the importance of vocal score reading so far as orchestral music is concerned,' but you 'cannot see the value of playing it,' as candidates for the A.R.C.O. diploma are required to do. But how can the candidate show his thorough acquaintance with the C clefs save by playing a piece written in them? Such tests have very considerable value as mental training, too. And although, as you say, modern English choral music does not use the alto and tenor clefs, some foreign editions do. Moreover, any well-equipped organist ought to be able to play fluently from old vocal scores.

H. F. L.—(1.) Apart from Sawyer's Primer, which you appear to possess, the only book on Extemporization known to us is Madeley Richardson's 'Extempore Playing' (Schirmer). (2.) For harmonizing basses and melodies at the keyboard, take Dunstan's 'Melodies and Basses' (Novello), and Primers on Melody-Harmonization, by Harris, Vernham, and Rowland Winn (all Novello).

H. A. R.—(1.) We think Welton Hickin's 'Pianoforte Accompaniment' (Novello) will suit your case. See also a series of articles on the subject by Hubert J. Foss, in the Musical Times for November and December, 1924. (2.) We imagine the Debussy will have to be sung in French, but you had better inquire at the Academy on this point.

Q. W.—We have not at hand the edition of Mozart's Sonatas that you mention. Even if we had them, we can spare neither time nor space to give you the Köchel numbers of all the Sonatas. We cannot help wondering why you need such information!

M.—For a study of the history and development of pianoforte music, take Herbert Westerby's recently issued work on the subject (Kegan Paul).

W. R. H.—The Musical News and Herald (24, Berners Street, W.1), undertakes the revision and criticism of MS. works.

A number of Answers are unavoidably held over.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
Some Reflections on the Work of Scriabin. By Alexander Brent-Smith	593
C Natural and B Sharp. By Harry Farjeon	596
Personalities among Musical Critics.—VI. Robin Legge. By Basil Maine	597
My Recollections of Brahms. By Mrs. Carl Derenburg (Ilona Eibenschütz)	598
Ad Libitum. By 'Feste'	600
New Light on Late Tudor Composers.—XVIII. Giles Farnaby. By W. H. Grattan Flood	602
Music in Tolstoy's Life. By his Son, Count Sergius Tolstoy (continued)	603
Verdi and 'Falstaff.' By John W. Klein	605
Handel's Use of Uncommon Instruments and Combinations. By E. Van der Straeten	607
Consecutive Fifths. By Arthur T. Froggatt	610
The Musician's Bookshelf	611
New Music	615
Some Impressions of Music in the Dominions. By E. T. Sweeting	622
Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus'	629
Player-Piano Notes	631
Wireless Notes. By 'Ariel'	632
Occasional Notes	633
The Handel Festival	635
Playford: Some hitherto Unnoticed Catalogues of Early Music (with Facsimile). By William C. Smith	636
Orchestral Notation. By Tom S. Wotton	640
Church and Organ Music	642
Royal College of Organists	642
Letters to the Editor	644
The Amateurs' Exchange	645
Sharps and Flats	645
Royal Academy of Music	646
Royal College of Music	646
Trinity College of Music	647
The Bach Choir Jubilee Festival	647
'The Old Folks at Home': Centenary of the Composer. By W. H. Grattan Flood	648
Festival of the English Folk-Dance Society	648
London Concerts	649
Competition Festival Record	650
Music in the Provinces	651
Music in Scotland	652
Musical Notes from Abroad	652
Obituary	654
Answers to Correspondents	654

MUSIC.

'Love Wakes.' Four-part Song. By C. H. H. Parry	625

EXTRA SUPPLEMENT given with this number:
'Immortal, invisible.' Anthem. By Eric H. Thiman.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED.

BACH, J. S.—"Oh yes, just so." Air for Soprano from the Cantata "Phœbus and Pan." 2s.

BORLAND, JOHN E.—"The Instruments of the Orchestra." (No. 102, Novello's Music Primers.) 1s. 6d.

BREWER, HERBERT.—Six Hymn Tunes by Various Composers. Arranged with Fauxbourdons. (No. 1145, Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 4d.

BURR, ALAN.—"O Lord, Who hast given so much." Vesper Hymn. 1d.

DARBY, FRED. M.—"O Lord, support us." Short Unaccompanied Anthem. 3d.

FLETCHER, PERCY E.—"Laughing Song." (No. 223, Novello's Two-part Songs.) 4d.

GREENE, DR. MAURICE.—"Lord, how long wilt Thou be angry." Full Anthem for Five Voices. Transposed and Edited by John E. West. (No. 1142, Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 6d.

KEETON, DR. H. — Recessional. "God of our Fathers." 2d.

MASSER, J. T.—Vesper. "Sweet Saviour, bless us ere we go." 3d.

PARRY, C. H. H.—"Love wakes." Four-part Song. (No. 1001, The Musical Times.) 2d.

PURCELL, HENRY.—Birthday Odes for Queen Mary. Part 2 (Vol. 24, Purcell Society Publications.) 25s.

RUSSELL, F. G.—"Thou shalt keep the Feast." Anthem for Harvest. 3d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 409, contains the following music in both notations:—"Song of the Zephyr." Solo and Two-part Chorus from "The Enchanted Island," by PERCY E. FLETCHER. Minuet in G, for Pianoforte, by BEETHOVEN. 2d.

SCHOOL SONGS.—Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

	A.	B.
No. 1452. "A Serenade." Unison Song. SCHUBERT	3d.	—

SHARP, CECIL J.—Twelve Country Dance Tunes. Arranged for Brass or Military Band by Gordon Jacob. Three Sets, 4s. 6d. each. Separate parts, 3d. each.

PUBLISHED FOR
THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK.

JAMES, P.—"Hear, O my people." Cantata for Mixed Voices. 35 cents (1s. 6d.).

NORDEN, N. L.—"The Lord is my Shepherd." Anthem for Tenor Solo and Mixed Voices. 12 cents (6d.).

SOWERBY, L.—"When the Lord turned again." Anthem for Mixed Voices. 20 cents (10d.).

SIX
SEA SONGS
ARRANGED FOR PIANOFORTE DUET
BY
GEOFFREY SHAW.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Music and Books
at Great Reductions.

Foyles hold a wide range of Second-hand Copies in good condition of Pianoforte and Organ Music, Oratorios, Operas, and Choral Works of every description, Standard Musical Text-books, Dramatic Literature and Plays, which they offer at tremendous reductions. Send for Catalogue 122 (free); mentioning definite requirements if possible.

New Books and Music supplied on best terms, and prompt delivery guaranteed.

Music and Books Purchased.

FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,
121-125, CHARING CROSS ROAD, LONDON, W.C.2.

TENDERS.

CITY OF MELBOURNE (AUSTRALIA).

SUPPLY OF GRAND ORGAN FOR MELBOURNE TOWN HALL.

TENDERS are invited from British and Australian Organ Builders only, and will be received by the Melbourne City Council, at the Town Hall, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, until 2 p.m. on

MONDAY, 20th September, 1926, for

SUPPLY, DELIVERY, AND ERECTION OF GRAND ORGAN IN THE TOWN HALL, MELBOURNE.

Tender Forms, Specifications, and General Conditions may be obtained and Drawings inspected on application to the Agent-General for Victoria, Melbourne Place, Strand, London.

The deposit of 2½ per cent. of contract price to be lodged in accordance with the conditions of tendering must be either in cash or by bank draft payable at sight, or guaranty of an approved bank.

No tender necessarily accepted.

Tenders must be endorsed on the outside, "Melbourne Grand Organ," and be enclosed in a sealed envelope, and forwarded to The Chairman, Town Hall Committee, Town Hall, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, and received by him not later than the time above mentioned.

W. V. McCALL, Town Clerk.

Town Hall, Melbourne.
30th April, 1926.

HORIZONTAL GRAND PIANOFORTE by Ibach. 7-ft. long, 7⅓ octaves, in ebonized case, Capital condition, fine tone. £85. Apply, Captain Sherbrook, Ogbourne Manor, Marlborough, Wilts.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS:—

	£	s.	d.
Two Lines	0	3	0
Three Lines	0	3	4
For every additional Line	0	0	10
One inch (displayed)	0	10	0
Half a Column...	2	0	0
A Column	4	0	0
A Page	7	10	0

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.

A remittance should be sent with every Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To insure insertion in their proper positions, Advertisements for the next issue should reach the Office, 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1, not later than WEDNESDAY, JULY 21 (FIRST POST).

NOW READY. A NEW HYMN BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

The CHURCH & SCHOOL HYMNAL

THE spirit of reform in Sunday School work has inevitably demanded, amongst other wants, a new hymnal with suitable words and appropriate modern Church music, and it is hoped that both these objects have been attained in this new book.

Bold and simple tunes have been chosen, some to be sung in harmony and others in unison, and the pitch of the tunes has been kept within a moderate compass as far as possible. A specimen tune and words are appended.

338 DIDBROOK. 84.84. G. GARDNER.

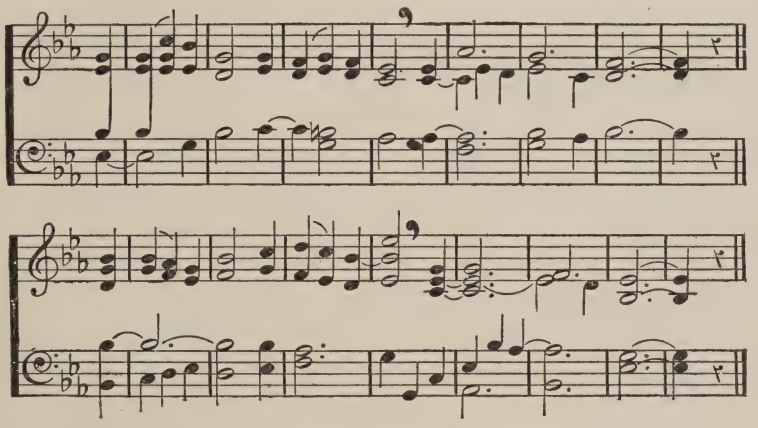
Unison.



Copyright of the Proprietors of the Church & School Hymnal.

THE sky looks down into our street
And God looks too,
He likes to see us dance and skip;
O that's quite true.

God says, "I hope they're kind and good—
To babies wee
And puppies, kittens, little birds,
Remembering Me.

"For I love all these tiny things,
All children too—
They are the flowers I plant in towns
Where flowers are few."

One day when we have grown quite big Jesus will say:
"Come, children, to My blue sky-fields;
Come here to play."

MURIEL DAYRELL.

A prospectus, showing a specimen page of each edition of the Hymnal, will be sent post free on application

LONDON:

Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge
Northumberland Avenue

Seeley Service & Company, Ltd.
Shaftesbury Avenue

Church of England Sunday School Institute
Serjeants' Inn.

HARVEST FESTIVAL MUSIC.

CANTATAS.

A GOLDEN HARVEST
FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI AND CHORUS
WITH HYMNS TO BE SUNG BY THE CONGREGATION
THE WORDS AND HYMNS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY H. KNIGHT
THE MUSIC BY
THOMAS ADAMS.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

THE RAINBOW OF PEACE
FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN
THE MUSIC BY
THOMAS ADAMS.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

HARVEST-TIDE
FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN OR SMALL ORCHESTRA
THE MUSIC BY HUGH BLAIR.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence; Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.
Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

HARVEST CANTATA
FOR CHORUS, SEMI-CHORUS, AND ORGAN.
THE WORDS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY
J. F. WALLER
THE MUSIC BY
G. M. GARRETT.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 8d. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100; or 3d. each with Music to the Hymns. Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

RUTH
FOR SOPRANO, CONTRALTO, AND BASS SOLI AND CHORUS
THE WORDS BY
E. OXENFORD
THE MUSIC BY
ALFRED R. GAUL.

Price Three Shillings; Paper boards, Four Shillings.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. Choruses only, 1s. 6d. Book of Words, 6s. 6d. per 100.
Full Score and Orchestral parts can be hired.

HARVEST CANTATA
FOR SOPRANO (OR TENOR) AND CONTRALTO (OR BARITONE) SOLI AND CHORUS
THE WORDS BY
R. D. BETJEMANN
THE MUSIC BY JULIUS HARRISON.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

SONG OF THANKSGIVING
FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS (OR CONTRALTO) SOLI AND CHORUS.
WITH HYMNS TO BE SUNG BY THE CONGREGATION
THE WORDS WRITTEN AND ARRANGED BY
S. WENSLEY
THE MUSIC BY
J. H. MAUNDER.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence;
Paper boards, Three Shillings and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100;
String Parts, price 13s. 6d.; Wind Parts, 21s. 5d.; Full Score, MS.

THE JUBILEE CANTATA
FOR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
THE MUSIC BY
C. M. WEBER.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Paper boards, Two Shillings and Sixpence,
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.
String Parts, 12s.; Wind Parts, 9s. 8d.; Full Score on hire.

SEED-TIME AND HARVEST FOR SOPRANO AND TENOR SOLI AND CHORUS
THE MUSIC BY
JOHN E. WEST.

Price Three Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100; or 3d. each with Music to the Hymns.
Orchestral Parts can be hired.

A HARVEST SONG
FOR SOPRANO SOLO AND CHORUS
THE WORDS BY
J. BENNETT.
THE MUSIC BY
C. LEE WILLIAMS.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.
String Parts, 9s. 9d.; Full Score and Wind Parts, MS

HYMNS AND CAROLS.

BARNBY, J.—Come, ye thankful people, come ... ... 1½d.
Harvest-tide thanksgiving, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... 2d.
Words only, per 100 2s.
Let all our brethren join in one ... ... 1½d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
Lord of the harvest, Thee we hail (Two Versions) each 3d.
O Lord of heaven and earth and sea ... ... 1½d.
Praise, O praise, our God and King ... ... 3d.
Sing to the Lord a joyful song ... ... 3d.
Sower went forth sowing, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... 2d.
BUNNETT, ED.—Sing to the Lord a joyful song ... ... 1½d.
CRAMENT, J. M.—Sowing and reaping (Carol) ... ... 2d.
Words only, per 100 2s.
DYKES, J. B.—Holy is the seed-time ... ... 2d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
GILBERT, B.—Come, ye thankful people, come ... ... 1½d.
HARVEY, W. C.—We thank Thee Lord for this fair earth (Children's voices) (Staff and Sol-fa Notations) ... ... 1½d.
HERVEY, F. A. J.—Make melody within your hearts (Carol) 2d.
KETÈLBEY, A. W.—God with plenty fills the hours ... ... 4d.
LEE, T.—King and Ruler of Creation ... ... 4d.
LOWE, A.—Holy is the seed-time (Carol) ... ... 2d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
MAUNDER, J. H.—Harvest Hymn of praise, A. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
Joy of Harvest, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
STIRLING, E.—Now Autumn strews on every plain ... ... 2d.
TOZER, F.—Lord of the rich and golden grain ... ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
TWELVE HYMNS selected from The Hymnary ... ... 1½d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S HARVEST ANTHEMS

SELECTED LIST.

LET THE PEOPLE PRAISE THEE. By PERCY E. FLETCHER.
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

THOMAS ADAMS

ALL THY WORKS PRAISE THEE
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

IT IS A GOOD THING TO GIVE THANKS
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

W. G. ALCOCK

GIVE EAR, O YE HEAVENS
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

E. C. BAIRSTOW

I WILL GREATLY REJOICE
Price Fourpence.

J. BARNBY

THE EYES OF ALL WAIT UPON THEE
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

HUGH BLAIR

OH, BRING TO THE LORD
Price Fourpence.

A. HERBERT BREWER

LET THE PEOPLE PRAISE THEE
Price Twopence.

EDWARD BUNNETT

BLESSED BE THOU, LORD GOD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

O CLAP YOUR HANDS
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

PERCY C. BUCK

GOD BE MERCIFUL UNTO US
For Boys' Voices.
Price Fourpence.

H. A. CHAMBERS

IF YE WALK IN MY STATUTES
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

EDWARD ELGAR

FEAR NOT, O LAND
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

MYLES B. FOSTER

PRAISE WAITETH FOR THEE, O GOD
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

ALFRED R. GAUL

O BE JOYFUL IN THE LORD
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. M. GOODHART

LET US NOW FEAR THE LORD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

CUTHBERT HARRIS

AND GOD SAID
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

SING A SONG OF PRAISE
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

ALFRED HOLLINS

GOD THE ALL-FATHERLY
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

ALBERT LOWE

THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

ARTHUR W. MARCHANT

I WILL MAGNIFY THEE
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

GEORGE C. MARTIN

THUS SAITH THE LORD GOD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

E. W. NAYLOR

I WILL CAUSE THE SHOWER
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

J. VARLEY ROBERTS

BLESS THE LORD THY GOD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

I WILL MAGNIFY THEE
Price Fourpence.

BRUCE STEANE

COME, YE THANKFUL PEOPLE, COME
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

HERBERT W. WAREING

THE LORD GOD PLANTED A GARDEN
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

HAROLD E. WATTS

THE GOD OF ABRAHAM PRAISE
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

JOHN E. WEST

PRAISE TO GOD, IMMORTAL PRAISE
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

FATHER OF MERCIES, GOD OF LOVE
Arranged for Boys' or Female Voices.
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

W. WOLSTENHOLME

O THAT MEN WOULD PRAISE THE LORD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE DESCANT HYMN-TUNE BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF WELL-KNOWN TUNES

ARRANGED BY

GEOFFREY SHAW

TUNES, AND APPROPRIATE HYMNS.

TUNE.	METRE.	HYMN.
Austria	8.7.8.7.D.	Glorious things of thee are spoken
		Praise the Lord ! ye heavens, adore Him
Bishopthorpe	C.M.	This is the day the Lord hath made
Darwall's 148th	6.6.6.6.4.4.4.4.	Ye holy Angels bright
Ein' feste Burg	8.7.8.7.6.6.7.	A safe stronghold our God is still
		Rejoice to-day with one accord
Eisenach	L.M.	Great God, Who, hid from mortal sight
		O Love, how deep ! how broad ! how high
Hanover	10.10.11.11.	Disposer Supreme, and Judge of the earth
		O worship the King, All-glorious above
Hyfrydol	8.7.8.7.D.	Alleluia ! sing to Jesus
Irish	C.M.	The Son of Man from Jordan rose
Lasst uns erfreuen	L.M. (with Alleluias)	Light's glittering morn bedecks the sky
		Ye watchers and ye holy ones
Leoni	6.6.8.4.D.	The God of Abraham praise
Luther	8.7.8.7.8.8.7.	Great God, what do I see and hear?
Melcombe	L.M.	New every morning is the love
Morning Hymn	L.M.	Awake, my soul, and with the sun
Nun danket	6.7.6.7.6.6.6.	Now thank we all our God
Old 100th (1st Version)	L.M.	All people that on earth do dwell
Old 100th (2nd Version)	L.M.	Before Jehovah's awful Throne
Old 104th	10.10.11.11.	Disposer Supreme, and judge of the earth
		O worship the King, All-glorious above
Richmond	C.M.	Praise to the Holiest in the height
Rockingham	L.M.	My God, and is Thy Table spread ?
		When I survey the wondrous Cross
St. Anne (1st Version)	C.M.	O God, our help in ages past
St. Anne (2nd Version)	C.M.	The Son of God goes forth to war
St. Theodulph	7.6.7.6.D.	All glory, laud, and honour
St. Thomas	S.M.	The Advent of our God
Surrey	8.8.8.8.8.	The Lord my pasture shall prepare
		We have not known Thee as we ought
Tallis' Canon	L.M.	Glory to Thee, my God, this night
Unser Herrscher	8.7.8.7.8.7.	Come ye faithful, raise the anthem
Victory	8.8.8.4.	The strife is o'er, the battle done
Wareham	L.M.	O Saviour, Lord, to Thee we pray
Warrington	L.M.	Now that the daylight fills the sky
Wiltshire	C.M.	Through all the changing scenes of life
Winchester New	L.M.	On Jordan's bank the Baptist's cry
Winchester Old (1st Version)	C.M.	When God of old came down from Heaven
Winchester Old (2nd Version)	C.M.	While shepherds watched their flocks by night

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.
Voice Parts only, 8*d*.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

Special Selections for Harvest Festivals.

Published by the MIDLAND MUSIC PRESS, 46, Bedford Street, Leamington.

CELEBRATED HARVEST ANTHEMS by WALTER SPINNEY.

*HE WATERETH THE HILLS	3d.
*REJOICE YE WITH JERUSALEM	3d.
*THE HARVEST IS THE END OF THE WORLD	3d.
*THOU SHALT SHOW US WONDERFUL THINGS	4d.
THOU VISITEST THE EARTH	3d.
LORD, THOU HAST BEEN OUR DWELLING PLACE	3d.

By T. HERBERT SPINNEY, M.A., F.R.C.O.

*THRICE BLESSED IS THAT HARVEST SONG	4d.
*O PRAISE OUR GOD TO-DAY	4d.
*REJOICE TO-DAY WITH ONE ACCORD	3d.
*O WORSHIP THE LORD	3d.
*NOW THANK WE ALL OUR GOD	3d.
*O, THAT MEN WOULD THEREFORE PRAISE THE LORD	4d.
*ALL THY WORKS PRAISE THEE	3d.
*UNTO THEE, O GOD, DO WE GIVE THANKS	3d,

*Sol-fa Copies of those marked * are published.*

SERVICES by CHARLES PENDOCK BANKS, M.A.

COMMUNION SERVICE IN F (sung throughout the world)	6d.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN F	4d.
THE HOLY EUCHARIST, Set to Music in Key of D	1s.

By T. HERBERT SPINNEY, M.A., F.R.C.O.

TE DEUM IN D (Chant Service for Congregational Use)	3d.
SIX HYMNS FOR A FLOWER SERVICE (Words only, 4s. per 100)	3d.

Send for Lists of other Church Music.

SPECIAL SELECTIONS from the "NEW SERIES OF ORGAN MUSIC."

	s.	d.
No. 5.—PROLOGUE. By PURCELL J. MANSFIELD	2	0	net.
No. 9.—MELODIE NUPTIALE. By W. WOLSTENHOLME	2	0	net.
No. 16.—NOCTURNE. By PURCELL J. MANSFIELD	2	6	net.
No. 39.—APRIL SONG By M. L. WOSTENHOLM	2	0	net.
No. 41.—L'ETOILE (THE STAR). By CLIFFORD ROBERTS	3	0	net.
No. 46.—MOTO PERPETUO AND INTERMEZZO. By C. EDGAR FORD	3	0	net.
No. 47.—TRIUMPH SONG. By ARTHUR BAYNON	3	0	net.
No. 48.—FESTAL TOCCATA. By ARTHUR BAYNON	4	0	net.
No. 54.—PÆAN. By T. HERBERT SPINNEY	3	0	net.
No. 56.—GRAND CHŒUR. By ARTHUR BAYNON	3	6	net.
No. 62.—SONGS IN THE NIGHT. By WALTER SPINNEY	2	0	net.

Sixty-two Splendid Numbers now ready. Lists on application.

Read what Distinguished Recitalists say of our ORGAN MUSIC:

"They are exceedingly useful pieces."—HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. B., St. George's Hall, Liverpool.

"It may interest you to know that Baynon's 'Festal Toccata' figured on at least forty of my programmes last season."—J. A. MEALE, F.R.C.O., Organist of the Central Hall, Westminster.

"Mr. Purcell Mansfield's 'Fantasia on Scottish Airs' is excellent."—C. W. PERKINS, Birmingham Town Hall.

"I had to repeat Mansfield's 'Nocturne' last Saturday. It was one of two items for which an extra was demanded."—HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. B., St. George's Hall, Liverpool.

"During the past few months I have played a number of compositions published by you, all of which have been enthusiastically received."—ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Director of Music, City Temple, London.

"I am pleased to say the compositions published by you are always received with enthusiasm by my audiences. Your up-to-date compositions supply a long-felt want from the recitalist's point of view." HERBERT HODGE, A.R.C.M., F.R.C.O.

"You have indeed an excellent catalogue, and admirably varied in style. I have played the pieces on organs of all sizes, from the large Albert Hall instrument to small two-manual organs, and they are always effective."—J. A. MEALE, F.R.C.O.

SYDNEY GREW, Esq., the well-known Music Critic, writes:—"The Midland Music Press, Leamington, issues a good deal of music that serves to keep alive the traditions of true organ style. I find in the firm's catalogue many pieces which are worthy to stand by Smart and Rheinberger, and which at the same time help to form the mind to appreciate more extreme examples of modernity."

THE CELEBRATED "VESPER BELL" SERIES OF ORGAN MUSIC.

By WALTER SPINNEY. Twenty numbers.

Lists on application.

A Copy of any of the items on the above Special Harvest List, post-free, for published price, on application to the M. M. P.

LEAMINGTON SPA—THE MIDLAND MUSIC PRESS, 46, BEDFORD STREET.

LONDON: A. WEEKES & CO., LTD., 14, HANOVER STREET, REGENT STREET, W.1.
CHICAGO, U.S.A.: CLAYTON F. SUMMY CO., 429, S. WABASH AVENUE.

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6, 1891.
"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC
BY
J. H. MAUNDER

	Staff Notation.	Tonic Sol-fa.
HARVEST ANTHEMS.
Sing to the Lord of Harvest	4d.	3d.
While the earth remaineth	4d.	3d.
Blessed be the Name of the Lord	4d.	3d.
SERVICES.
SERVICE IN G	2s.	1s. 4d.
Or, separately:—
Te Deum	4d.	3d.
Benedicite, omnia Opera	3d.	3d.
Benedictus	3d.	3d.
Jubilate	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion	10d.	8d.
Pater Noster from the above	3d.	3d.
Amen ditto	1½d.	1½d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis	4d.	3d.
SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1)	1s. 4d.	10d.
Or, separately:—
Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion	8d.	6d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis	4d.	3d.
Te Deum in B flat	4d.	3d
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison)	4d.	2d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D	4d.	3d.
ORGAN.
Voix Seraphique (for Recitals)	2s. 6d.	—
CHURCH CANTATA.
Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use)	2s.	1s. 4d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

SCHOOL MARCHES
FOR PIANOFORTE SOLO
BOOK III.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

CONTENTS.

Arrival of the Visitors ... H. Hofmann
Bright and Buxom Lasses, from "Martha" ... Flotow
Instrumental Band, The ... Percy E. Fletcher
Little March, A ... J. D. Davis
March from "Egmont" ... Beethoven
March from "St. Polycarp" ... F. A. G. Ouseley
March ... Th. Kullak
March from "Tannhäuser" ... Wagner
Marching off to Bed ... Myles B. Foster
March of Priests, from "The Magic Flute" Mozart
Soldiers' Chorus, from "Il Trovatore" ... Verdi
Toy Soldiers' March ... Tschaïkowsky

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Produced at the Leeds Musical Festival, 1925

FIRST
CHORAL SYMPHONY
THE WORDS SELECTED FROM THE POEMS OF
JOHN KEATS
AND SET TO MUSIC FOR
SOPRANO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
BY GUSTAV HOLST.
(OP. 41.)

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.
FULL SCORE (in the Press), PRICE £3 3s.

Separately from the above:

Ode on a Grecian Urn
FOR CHORUS AND SMALL ORCHESTRA.
PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

Band Parts of the Complete Work and of the
SCHERZO
which may be played as an Orchestral Piece without Chorus may be had on hire.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

FOUR
TENNYSON LYRICS
SET TO MUSIC BY
PERCY E. FLETCHER.

1. A LULLABY.
2. THE CITY CHILD.
3. THE REIGN OF THE ROSES.
4. THE THROSTLE.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOCTURNE
FOR VIOLONCELLO (OR VIOLIN) AND PIANOFORTE.
BY
COLIN MACLEOD CAMPBELL.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

ARRANGEMENT FOR SMALL ORCHESTRA.

	s.	d.
Piano Conductor	1	6
String Parts	2	8
Wind Parts, &c.	4	0
Harmonium	0	8

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS.
ORATORIOS, CANTATAS, ETC.

(S.A.T.B. EDITIONS ONLY.)

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE EACH.

ADAMS, T.—†Cross of Christ, The.
——†Golden Harvest, A.
——†Holy Child, The.
——†Nativity, The.
—— Rainbow of Peace, The.
ALCOCK, W. G.—And I heard a great voice.
ANDERTON, T.—Norman Baron, The.
——†Wreck of the Hesperus, The.
ASPA, E.—Gipsies, The.
ASTORGA.—Stabat Mater.
AUSTIN, F.—†Songs in a Farmhouse.
BACH.—†Bide with us.
——† Ditto. (Welsh Words).
—— Christ lay in death's dark prison.
—— Christians, grave ye this glad day.
——†Christmas Oratorio. Parts 1—2.
Ditto Ditto. Parts 3—4.
Ditto Ditto. Parts 5—6.
——†Come, Jesu, come (Motet).
—— Come, Redeemer of our race.
—— From depths of woe I call on Thee.
—— Give the hungry man thy bread.
—— God goeth up with shouting.
——†God so loved the world.
——†God's time is the best.
——† Ditto (Welsh Words).
——†How brightly shines yon star of morn.
—— If thou but sufferest God to guide thee.
——†Jesu, Priceless Treasure (Motet).
——† Ditto (Welsh Words).
—— Jesus, now will we praise Thee.
—— Jesus sleeps, what hope remaineth.
—— Let songs of rejoicing be raised.
—— Lord is a sun and shield, The.
——†Lord is my Shepherd, The.
—— Lord, rebuke me not.
——*†Magnificat in D.
——†My spirit was in heaviness.
—— O Christ, my all in living.
—— O Jesu Christ, Thou Prince of Peace.
——†O Light Everlasting.
—— O praise the Lord for all His mercies.
—— O teach me, Lord, my days to number.
—— Praise our God Who reigns in Heaven.
—— Praise thou the Lord, Jerusalem.
—— Rise, O Soul.
—— Sages of Sheba, The.
——†Sing ye to the Lord (Motet).
——†Sleepers, wake.
——†Spirit also helpeth us, The (Motet).
——†Stronghold Sure, A.
—— There is nought of soundness in all my body.
—— Thou Guide of Israel.
—— Wailing, crying, mourning, sighing.
—— Watch ye, pray ye.
—— When will God recall my spirit.
—— Whoso doth offer thanks.
BARNBY, J.—†Rebekah.
BARTON, M.—Mass in A.
BEETHOVEN.—†Choral Fantasia.
—— Engedi.
——†Mass in C (Latin).
——*Mass in C.
—— Mount of Olives.
BENNETT, G. J.—Easter Hymn (On the morn of Easter Day).
BENNETT, W. S.—Exhibition Ode.
——†May Queen, The.
——†Woman of Samaria, The.
BETJEMANN.—Song of the Western Men.
BLAIR, H.—†Harvest-tide.
BRAHMS, J.—Song of Destiny, A.
—— Songs of Love (Vocal Part only).
BREE, J. B. VAN.—†St. Cecilia's Day.
BREWER, A. H.—O praise the Lord.
—— Song of Eden, A.
BRIDGE, J. F.—Hymn to the Creator.
——†Inchcape Rock, The.
——†Lord's Prayer, The.
——*†Rock of Ages.
CARISSIMI.—*Jephthah.
CHERUBINI.—*Mass, Requiem, in C minor (No. 1).
—— Mass (Coronation) in A (No. 3).
—— Mass, in C (No. 4).
COBB, G. F.—My soul truly waiteth.
COSTA, M.—Dream, The.
COWEN, F. H.—†He giveth His beloved sleep.
DALE, B. J.—†Before the paling of the stars.
DAVIES, H. W.—†Hervé Riel.
—— Ode on Time.
DUNHILL, T. F.—†Tubal Cain.
ELGAR, E.—†For the Fallen.
——†Fourth of August, The.
—— Te Deum and Benedictus, in F.
ELLICOTT, R. F.—Elysium.
FRANZ, R.—Praise ye the Lord.
GADE, N. W.—†Christmas Eve.
——†Erl-King's Daughter, The.
—— Zion.
GARRETT, G. M.—†Harvest Cantata.
GAUL, A. R.—†Ruth (Choruses only).
GOETZ, H.—†By the Waters of Babylon.
——†Nœnia.
GOODHART, A. M.—Earl Haldan's Daughter.
GOUNOD, CH.—Daughters of Jerusalem.
—— De Profundis (Latin).
—— Ditto (English).
——†Faust (Selection for Concert Performance).
——*†Gallia.
—— Messe Solennelle, Ste. Cécile (Latin).
—— Out of Darkness.
—— Passion, The.
——†Redemption (Part 2).
—— Ditto (Part 3).
GRAUN.—Passion, The (Choruses only).
GRAY, A.—Legend of the Rock Buoy Bell
GRIMM, J. O.—Soul's Aspiration, The.
HANDEL.—†Acis and Galatea.
—— Chandos Te Deum.
—— Dettingen Te Deum.
—— Dixit Dominus.
——*Except the Lord build the house.
——†Israel in Egypt (Pocket Edition).
——†Judas Maccabæus (Ditto.)
——†Messiah (Ditto).
——*Nisi Dominus.
—— O come, let us sing unto the Lord.
——†O praise the Lord.
—— Ode on St. Cecilia's Day.
—— Passion of Christ, The (Abridged).
—— Utrecht Jubilate.
—— Ways of Zion, The.
HARRISON, J.—Christmas Cantata.
——†Harvest Cantata.
HARRISS, C. A. E.—Sands of Dee, The.
HARWOOD, BASIL.—Love Incarnate.
HAYDN.—†Creation, The (Pocket Edition).
——*Mass, in B flat (No. 1).
—— Mass, in B flat (No. 1) (Latin).
—— Mass, in C (No. 2) (Latin).
—— Mass, in D (No. 3) (Latin).
——*Mass, in D (No. 3).
——*Te Deum Laudamus, in C.
—— Seasons, The, From:
†Spring, Autumn.
Summer, Winter.
—— Seasons, The (Choruses only).
HECHT, E.—O may I join the choir invisible.
HIGGS, H. M.—Erl-King, The.
HILLER, F.—†Song of Victory, A.
HOLST, G.—Ode to Death.
—— Ode on a Grecian Urn.
HUMMEL.—Mass, in B flat (No. 1).
—— Mass, in E flat (No. 2).
—— Mass, in D (No. 3).
JENSEN, A.—†Feast of Adonis, The.
JORDAN, W.—Blow ye the trumpet in Zion.
LEMARE, E. H.—'Tis the spring of souls to-day.
LEO, L.—Dixit Dominus.
LLOYD, C. H.—O give thanks unto the Lord.
—— Song of Balder, The.
MACCUNN, H.—†Lord Ullin's Daughter.
——†Wreck of the Hesperus, The.
MACFARREN, G. A.—†May Day.
—— Outward Bound.
MACKENZIE, A. C.—†Bride, The.
MENDELSSOHN.—†As the hart pants.
——†Athalie.
——*Ave Maria (Saviour of Sinners).
——†Christus.
——†Come, let us sing.
——†Elijah (Pocket Edition).
—— Ditto (Choruses only).
MENDELSSOHN.—continued.
——†Festgesang (Hymns of Praise).
——†Hear my Prayer.
——†Hymn of Praise (Lobgesang).
——*†Lauda Sion.
——†Lord, how long.
——†Loreley.
—— Man is Mortal.
——*Not unto us.
——*St. Paul (Pocket Edition).
—— Ditto (Choruses only).
——†Walpurgis Night, The First.
——†When Israel out of Egypt came.
MEYERBEER.—91st Psalm (Latin).
—— 91st Psalm (English).
MOZART.—King Thamos.
——*Mass in C (No. 1).
—— Mass in B flat (No. 7) (Latin).
—— Mass in G (No. 12) (Latin).
—— Mass in G (No. 12) (English).
——*†Mass in G (No. 12).
—— Mass, Requiem, in D minor (No. 15) (Latin).
——*†Mass, Requiem, in D minor (No. 15).
NORTH, S.—†In the Morning.
PALESTRINA.—Surge Illuminare.
PARKER, H. W.—Kobolds, The.
PARRY, C. H. H.—†Blest Pair of Sirens.
——†Chivalry of the Sea, The (Naval Ode).
—— Glories of our Blood and State, The.
—— Te Deum Laudamus (Coronation).
PINSUTI, C.—Phantoms.
PROUT, E.—Freedom.
——†Hundredth Psalm, The.
PURCELL.—Te Deum and Jubilate, in D.
——†Te Deum, in D.
—— Te Deum, in D (Latin).
ROMBERG.—Harmony of the Spheres, The.
——†Lay of the Bell, The.
—— Te Deum Laudamus, in D.
——†Transient and the Eternal, The.
ROSSINI.—*†Stabat Mater.
SACHS, ED.—King Cups.
—— Water-Lilies.
SCHUBERT.—Mass, in A flat.
—— Mass, in B flat.
—— Mass, in C.
——†Mass, in F.
—— Mass, in G.
——†Song of Miriam.
SCHUMANN.—Advent Hymn, "In Lowly Guise."
—— King's Son, The.
—— Manfred.
—— Mignon's Requiem
——†New Year's Song.
—— Pilgrimage of the Rose.
SCHUTZ, H.—Passion of our Lord, The.
SELBY, B. L.—Dying Swan, The.
SILAS, E.—Mass, in C.
SMITH, A. B.—In Glorious Freedom.
SMITH, A. M.—Ode to the North-East Wind.
SPOHR.—Christian's Prayer, The.
——†God, Thou art Great.
—— Hymn to St. Cecilia.
——†Last Judgment, The.
STEPHEN, D.—†Laird o' Cockpen, The.
STOCKER, S.—Song of the Fates.
STOJOWSKI, S.—Springtime.
SULLIVAN, A.—Exhibition Ode.
—— †Te Deum (Thanksgiving).
THOMAS, A. G.—†Sun Worshippers, The.
THORNE, E. H.—Be merciful unto me.
TOURS, B.—Festival Ode, A.
WAGNER.—Flying Dutchman (A Selection from Act II.).
WALKER, E.—Hymn to Dionysus, A.
—— Ode to a Nightingale.
WEBER, C. M.—Jubilee Cantata.
—— *Mass in E flat.
—— *Mass in G.
—— Preciosa.
—— Three Seasons.
WESLEY, S.—Dixit Dominus.
WESLEY, S. S.—O Lord, Thou art my God.
WEST, J. E.—Lord, I have loved the habitation of Thy House.
—— Song of Zion, A.
WOOD, C.—Ode to the West Wind.
WOODMAN, R. T.—Falmouth.

*The Works marked thus * have Latin and English words. Those marked thus † may be had in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.*
Cantatas, &c., for Female and Male Voices (see Novello's Catalogues).

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SMALL

	Full Orchestra.	Small Orchestra.	Full Score.	Piano Conductor.	Violin Conductor.	Piano Solo.	Violin and Piano.	Violin 1mo.	Violin 2do.	Viola.	'Cello and Basso.	'Cello.	Basso.	Piccolo.
AUSTIN, E., Sweet Night	...	2/-	...	...	...	...	2/3	4d.	...	...	8d.	...	...	...
BENDALL, Pas Seul	...	7/4	...	...	...	1/6	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
BENNETT, Eventide Melody	...	4/4	4/-	...	...	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
BLAIR, Serenata	...	5/4	...	...	8d.	2/3	...	8d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
BREWER, Auf Wiedersehen	...	4/4	...	...	8d.	3/-	3/-	8d.	...	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
CAMPBELL, Nocturne	...	7/4	...	1/6	...	...	2/-	8d.	8d.	4d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
CARSE, Barbara Allen Variations ...	...	6/-	...	2/3	...	...	...	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	...	...	...
„ Gavotte in G	...	5/4	...	...	...	2/3	2/3	8d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, Waltzes, Four ...	...	19/5	...	...	...	4/-	4/6	2/3	2/3	2/3	2/3	...	...	...
„ Hiawatha (Selection from Wedding-Feast)... ...	...	23/9	...	2/3	...	...	...	2/3	1/6	1/6	...	1/6	1/6	...
„ (§ Nero Music. Prelude, 2nd Entr'acte	17/-	...	...	3/-	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
„ Intermezzo	7/4	...	...	8d.	...	2/3	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
„ Finale, 1st Entr'acte	18/2	...	...	2/3	...	3/-	3/-	1/6	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	1/6A
„ Eastern Dance	11/8	...	...	1/6	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
„ Novelletten, Nos. 1, 2, & 3 ea.	...	3/8	4/-	...	...	...	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
„ „ No. 4	...	6/2	4/-	...	...	...	3/-	1/6	1/6	1/6	...	8d.	8d.	...
COWEN, English Dances, Four ...	...	22/2	...	...	...	4/-	4/6	2/3	2/3	2/3	2/3	...	...	...
„ February (Months, No. 2)...	...	6/4	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	4d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
„ May („ „ 5)...	4/-	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	8d.	4d.	...
„ June („ „ 6)...	4/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	...	4d.
„ September („ „ 9)...	10/-	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
„ November („ „ 11)...	11/10	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	1/6	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
„ December („ „ 12)...	7/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
„ Menuet d'Amour	5/8	...	5/6	...	...	2/3	3/-	8d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
DAVIES, Solemn Melody (str. & org.)...	...	2/4	3/-	...	...	2/3	2/3	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
DUNHILL, Chiddingfold Suite	...	9/9	7/6	...	...	...	...	2/3	2/3	2/3	...	1/6	1/6	...
ELGAR, Chanson de Matin	...	4/-	4/-	8d.	...	2/3	3/-	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
„ Chanson de Nuit	...	3/8	4/-	8d.	...	2/3	2/3	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
„ Pleading	...	3/4	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...
„ Serenade (Wand of Youth) ...	...	2/4	...	1/6A	...	2/3	3/-	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ Canto Popolare	...	6/4	4/6	...	...	3/-	3/-	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
FLETCHER, Bagatelles (strings only) ...	...	3/6	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	1/6	...	...	...
„ The Toy Soldiers' March...	...	8/-	...	...	8d.	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.A
„ Valse Lyrique	...	9/6	...	...	...	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
GOUNOD, There is a green hill ...	4/8	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...
HANDEL, Dance of Sailors	7/8	...	...	...	...	1/6	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
HAYNES, Westwood Gavotte	...	6/4	...	...	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
HOLBROOKE, Souvenir de Printemps ...	...	4/4	...	...	...	3/-	3/-	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
IRELAND, Bagatelle	...	7/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
JOHNSON, Elves (Faerie Suite, No. 1)...	...	8/-	...	1/6	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
„ Pavane in A	...	6/8	...	8d.	...	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
KREUZ, Conversation Amoureuse ...	...	6/10	...	1/6	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	1/6	...	...	...
LEMARE, Adantino	...	5/8	...	1/6	...	...	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ Chant sans Paroles	...	5/-	...	...	8d.	2/3	3/-	4d.	8d.	8d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
„ Menuet Nuptiale	...	4/4	...	8d.	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
MACKENZIE, Benedictus	4/8	...	7/6	...	...	...	3/-	8d.A	A	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
PURCELL, Gordian Knot Untied, 1st and 2nd Suites ... each	...	2/8	4/-	...	...	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ Suite	...	2/8	1/6	...	...	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ The Virtuous Wife (Incidental Music)	...	...	4/-	...	...	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
RAMEAU, Gavotte	6/-	...	...	...	...	2/3	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
RAWLINSON, Serenade	...	3/8	...	...	8d.	2/3	...	8d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ Aubade	...	6/-	...	...	8d.	2/3	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
REED, Serenade (Suite Venitienne) ...	...	4/8	...	8d.	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d	...	...	...
ROËCKEL, Graceful Dance	6/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
ROWLEY, Andante Religioso in $\frac{7}{4}$ time	...	2/8	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...
WADDINGTON, Intermezzo	...	7/4	...	1/6	...	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
WAREING, Summergold Gavotte ...	7/4	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
WENDT, Air de Ballet	7/4	...	...	1/6	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
WEST, Intermezzo	...	5/-	...	8d.	...	...	2/3	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ Marjorie Gavotte	5/8	...	...	...	...	3/-	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...
„ Maypole Dance...	14/-	...	...	2/3	...	3/-	3/-	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...
WOLSTENHOLME, Allegretto in E♭ ...	6/-	...	...	...	...	2/3	2/3	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...

N.B.—Parts marked A, B, C, D, E, or F, are printed together.

ORCHESTRAS. SUITABLE FOR CINEMAS, &c.

Flauti.	Oboi.	Clarinetti.	Fagotti.	Corni 1 & 2.	Corni 3 & 4.	Trombe.	Cornetti.	Tromboni 1 and 2.	Trombone 3.	Euphonium.	Tuba.	Timpani.	Cassa.	Piatti.	Side Drum.	Triangle.	Tambourine.	Harp.	Solo-Cornet or Euphonium.	Organ or Harmonium.	Harp or Piano.	Bells.
4d.	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	4d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	4d.	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
1/6	1/6	2/3	1/6	1/6	...	1/6	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
2/3	1/6	2/3	2/3	2/3	...	1/6	...	...	8d.	...	...	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	1/6	...	...	...	...
1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d.A	A	A	A	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
A	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d.B	B	4d.	B	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
8d.	†8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	4d.	...	4d.	8d.A	8d.B	B	A	4d.C	...	8d.	...	...	...	C
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.A	A	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.A	A	...	...	...	...	...
3/-	1/6	3/-	1/6	1/6	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	8d.A	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
x8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...	...	4d.A	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	4d.	...	4d.
8d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...
4d.	...	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...
4d.	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...
8d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
A	8d.	8d.	8d.B	8d.	...	...	8d.	8d.	...	B	...	...	...	...	8d.C	C	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	1/6	...
4d.D	D	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.E	...	E	4d.F	F	...	...	F	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	4d.	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	4d.	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	4dA.	A	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	4d.	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	8d.	...	...	8d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	4d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	4d.	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	8d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...
8d.	...	8d.	8d.	8d	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	4d.	...	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	8d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	4d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
4d.	4d.	8d.	4d.	8d.	...	...	4d.	...	...	...	...	4d.A	...	...	...	A	...	...	...	...	...	...
1/6	1/6	1/6	1/6	8d.	...	...	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	8d.	8d.A	...	...	...	A	8d	...	...	...	...	...
8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	8d.	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...

† Oboe has the Melody. X Flute has the Melody. § May be had as a complete Suite.

Produced at the Gloucester Musical Festival.

A SPRIG OF SHAMROCK

FOUR OLD IRISH AIRS.

For Soprano or Tenor Voice, with String Quartet or Pianoforte Accompaniment.

POEMS BY
F. W. HARVEY.

MUSIC ADAPTED AND ARRANGED BY
A. HERBERT BREWER.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE
STRING PARTS, Price 8s.

An Edition for Contralto or Baritone is also published.
Price 3s. 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Produced at the Gloucester Musical Festival.

LOVE INCARNATE

A SETTING OF LINES
BY ROBERT BROWNING.

With a Verse of the Hymn, "Jesu, dulcis memoria,"

BY
ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX.

Translated by the Rev. J. M. NEALE.

Composed for Chorus, Semi-Chorus, Orchestra, and Organ

BY BASIL HARWOOD.
(Op. 37.)

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

HIAWATHA'S WEDDING-FEAST

AND

THE DEATH OF MINNEHAHA

COMPOSED BY
S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR.

ARRANGED FOR PIANOFORTE SOLO

BY
JOHN POINTER.

Price Five Shillings and Sixpence each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

LONDON TOWN

SONG.

THE WORDS BY
JOHN MASEFIELD.

THE MUSIC BY
EDWARD GERMAN.

IN TWO KEYS.
Price, Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

ON A NANKIN PLATE

SONG.

WORDS BY AUSTIN DOBSON

MUSIC BY
HARVEY GRACE.

TWO KEYS.

Price Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS.
BOOK 273.

THIRTY SONGS

BY FRANZ SCHUBERT.

BOTH NOTATIONS.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE BEAUTIFUL FOLK-SONGS OF FRANCE

BOOK I.

(Novello's School Song Book, No. 277)

COLLECTED BY

AUSTIN DE CROZE

AND HARMONIZED BY

GUSTAVE FERRARI

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS COMPLETE

Or, Separate Numbers

No.		PRICE
1440	NOËL DE STRASBOURG	2*d.*
1441	BERCEUSE	2*d.*
1442	LE MOULIN	2*d.*
1443	HOPSA! LISELLA	2*d.*
1444	LE MIRACLE DE SAINT NICOLAS	4*d.*
1445	LA RONDE DU ROSIER	2*d.*
1446	CHANSON À BALLER	2*d.*
1447	LE BEAU GALANT	2*d.*
1448	LÉGENDE DES PÉLERINS	2*d.*
1449	LE PREMIER JOUR DE MAI	2*d.*
1450	LES TROIS JUPONS BLANCS	2*d.*
1451	CELUI QUE J'AIME	2*d.*

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

INCLUDED IN THE LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL REQUISITION LIST.

THE BEAUTIFUL SONGS OF FRANCE

BOOK II. (1925).

TWELVE SONGS AND DANCES

OF

FLANDERS, ARTOIS, PICARDY, NORMANDY, CHAMPAGNE, LORRAINE, and ALSACE

COLLECTED AND EDITED BY

AUSTIN DE CROZE

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENTS

BY

LEOPOLD ASHTON, GUSTAVE FERRARI, AND OTHERS.

With Illustrations, English translations, and descriptions and diagrams of the dances.

PREFACE BY DR. W. H. D. ROUSE, Perse School, Cambridge.

FOREWORD BY HARVEY GRACE and LASTWORD BY EDWIN EVANS.

CONTENTS.

FLANDERS-ARTOIS -	Ah! le joli Bois, Mesdames; Sur les Clanquarts.
PICARDY - - - -	Les trois Canards; Semons la Salade.
NORMANDY - - -	Les trois Pommes blanches; Compère et Commère.
CHAMPAGNE - - -	Le petit Bonnet rond; Eh! qui marierons-nous?
LORRAINE - - - -	Vous n'êtes pas mon Berger; Je vais entrer dans la Danse.
ALSACE - - - - -	La Chanson des Beignets; Le Maître et Jacquot.

Messrs. NOVELLO & CO. beg leave to announce that they have acquired the Sole Agency for all British Territory and the United States of America for the sale of the Work above described, and that copies are now on sale.

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS EACH.

NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED, 160, WARDOUR STREET, LONDON, W.1.

NOVELLO'S HANDBOOKS FOR MUSICIANS.

EDITED BY ERNEST NEWMAN.

CHORAL TECHNIQUE AND INTERPRETATION

BY HENRY COWARD.

MUS. DOC., OXON.

Published as a Net Book. Price, Cloth, gilt, Seven Shillings and Sixpence net.

THE TEACHING AND ACCOMPANIMENT OF PLAINSONG

BY

FRANCIS BURGESS.

Published as a Net Book. Price, Cloth, gilt, Five Shillings and Sixpence net.

THE

Interpretation of the Music of the 17th & 18th Centuries

AS REVEALED BY CONTEMPORARY EVIDENCE

BY

ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

Published as a Net Book. Price, Cloth, gilt, Fifteen Shillings net.

APPENDIX.

CONTAINING TWENTY-TWO ILLUSTRATIVE PIECES.

Price Five Shillings and Sixpence.

THE

SOURCES OF KEYBOARD MUSIC IN ENGLAND

BY

CHARLES VAN DEN BORREN.

Professor of the Université Nouvelle of Brussels.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH BY

JAMES E. MATTHEW.

Published as a Net Book. Price, Cloth, gilt, Ten Shillings and Sixpence net.

THE THEORY OF HARMONY

An Inquiry into the Natural Principles of Harmony, with an examination of the chief systems of Harmony from Rameau to the present day.

BY

MATTHEW SHIRLAW

MUS. D., F.R.C.O.

(Lecturer in Music, University of Edinburgh, &c.)

Published as a Net Book. Price, Cloth, gilt, Fifteen Shillings net.

THE ORGAN WORKS OF BACH

BY

HARVEY GRACE.

With an Introduction by ERNEST NEWMAN.

Published as a Net Book. Price, Cloth, gilt, Nine Shillings net.

THE

ORGAN WORKS OF RHEINBERGER

BY

HARVEY GRACE.

Published as a Net Book. Price, Cloth, Five Shillings net.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

TWELVE COUNTRY DANCE TUNES

COLLECTED BY

CECIL J. SHARP

ARRANGED FOR

BRASS OR MILITARY BAND

By GORDON JACOB.

IN THREE SETS.

PRICE ... ... 4*s.* 6*d.* EACH.

Separate Parts, 3*d.* each.

SET 1.	SET 2.
THE BUTTERFLY	GATHERING PEASCODS.
GALOPEDE.	RUFTY, TUFTY.
HASTE TO THE WEDDING.	HEY BOYS.
NANCY'S FANCY.	THE BLACK NAG.

SET 3.

IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.	SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE OLD MOLE.	THE MARY AND DOROTHY.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NATIONAL SONGS

WITH DESCANTS

ARRANGED BY

GEOFFREY SHAW.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 271.

SET I.

THE BAY OF BISCAY (English)	EARLY ONE MORNING (English)
A HUNTING WE WILL GO (English)	OH, DEAR! WHAT CAN THE MATTER BE? (English)
JOHN PEEL (English)	THE BRITISH GRENADIERS (English)
ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT (Welsh)	THE ASH GROVE (Welsh)
SCOTS, WHA HAE (Scottish)	GOOD KING WENCESLAS (Traditional)
THE OAK AND THE ASH (Scottish)	THE FIRST NOWELL (Traditional)

JUST PUBLISHED.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 275.

SET II.

COME LASSES AND LADS (English)	THE YOUNG MAY MOON (Irish)
WI' A HUNDRED PIPERS (Scottish)	THE GOLDEN VANITY (English)
DAVID OF THE WHITE ROCK (Welsh)	THE FLIGHT OF THE EARLS (Irish)

JUST PUBLISHED.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 276.

SET III.

MEETING OF THE WATERS (Irish)	LET ERIN REMEMBER (Irish)
THERE 'S NAE LUCK (Scottish)	THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON (English)
DRINK TO ME ONLY WITH THINE EYES (English)	THE BELLS OF ABERDOVEY (Welsh)

PRICE EIGHTPENCE EACH SET.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ALBUMS FOR THE ORGAN

PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH. CLOTH, SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH.

No. 1.

No.		No.
1.	Interlude ... ... Th. Dubois	7.	Grand Chœur No. 2 ... ... Alfred Hollins
2.	Chanson de Matin ... ... Edward Elgar	8.	Andantino in D flat ... ...Edwin H. Lemare
3.	Fantasia on the old melody "Urbs Beata"... ... W. Faulkes	9.	Chanson Triste ... ... P. Tschaïkowsky
4.	There is a green hill far away ... ...Ch. Gounod	10.	Prelude to "Lohengrin," Act I. ... ... R. Wagner
5.	Marche Triomphale ... ... Alexandre Guilmant	11.	Romanza ... ...W. Wolstenholme
6.	Ave Maria ... ... A. Henselt	12.	Allegretto in E flat... ... ...W. Wolstenholme

No. 2.

1.	Chanson de Nuit ... ... Edward Elgar	7.	The Curfew ... ... Edward J. Horsman
2.	Alla Marcia ... ... Myles B. Foster	8.	Pastorale in E ... ... Edwin H. Lemare
3.	Minuetto ... ... Alexandre Guilmant	9.	Ave Maria d'Arcadelt ... ... Franz Liszt
4.	Lied ... ... H. Hofmann	10.	Cantique d'Amour ... ... Theo. Wendt
5.	Barcarolle ... ... H. Hofmann	11.	The Seraph's Strain ... ... W. Wolstenholme
6.	Spring Song ... ... Alfred Hollins	12.	Le Carillon ... ... W. Wolstenholme

No. 3.

1.	Scherzo in A flat ... ... Edward C. Bairstow	7.	Aubade ... ...A. Strelezki
2.	Melody ... ... S. Coleridge-Taylor	8	Nocturne in C sharp minor ... ... P. Tschaïkowsky
3.	Serenade ... ... H. Hofmann	9.	Procession to the Minster ("Lohengrin") ... ... R. Wagner
4.	Bridal March ... ... Alfred Hollins	10.	Passacaglia ... ... John E. West
5.	Berceuse ... ... Edwin H. Lemare	11.	Fantasia upon the Plain-song Melody "Ad cœnam Agni"... ... ... Healey Willan
6.	Melodie in E... ... ... S. Rachmaninoff	12.	Allegretto in A flat... ... ...W. Wolstenholme

No. 4.

1.	Arietta... ... ... S. Coleridge-Taylor	7.	Allegro alla Marcia ... ... A. L. Peace
2	Souvenir de Printemps ... ...Joseph Holbrooke	8.	Visione ... ... J. Rheinberger
3.	Andante in D ... ... Alfred Hollins	9.	Chant sans Paroles ... ... P. Tschaïkowsky
4.	Pavane in A ... ... Bernard Johnson	10.	Prelude to Act III. ("Die Meistersinger") ... ... R. Wagner
5.	Harmonies du Soir ... ... Sigfrid Karg-Elert	11.	Allegro Pomposo ... ... John E. West
6.	An Eton Memorial March ... ...C. H. Lloyd	12.	Canzona ... ... W. Wolstenholme

No. 5.

1.	Jour de Noces ... ... J. Stuart Archer	7.	Alla Marcia ... ... John N. Ireland
2.	Festival Prelude on "Ein' feste Burg" ... ... W. Faulkes	8.	Adagio Cantabile ... ...Edwin H. Lemare
3.	Legend ... ... Harvey Grace	9.	Fanfare ... ... J. Lemmens
4.	Allegretto Pastorale ... ... H. M. Higgs	10.	Intermezzo ... ... B. Luard-Selby
5.	Benediction Nuptiale ... ... Alfred Hollins	11.	Easter Morn... ... ... John E. West
6.	Sursum Corda ... ... John N. Ireland	12.	Finale in B flat ... ...W. Wolstenholme

No. 6.

1.	Nocturne ... ... Thomas F. Dunhill	7.	Allegro in B flat ... ... F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy
2.	Postludium ... ... William Faulkes	8.	Choral Prelude on "Rockingham" ... C. Hubert H. Parry
3.	Andante Tranquillo ... ... H. M. Higgs	9.	Præludium Pastorale ... ... J. Stainer
4.	In Springtime ... ... Alfred Hollins	10.	Romance in F minor ... ... Tschaïkowsky
5.	Madrigal ... ... Edwin H. Lemare	11.	Romance in A flat ... ... H. Sandiford Turner
6.	Triumphal March ... ... J. Lemmens	12.	Festal Commemoration ... ... John E. West

No. 7 (Funeral Music).

1.	Funeral March (Pianoforte Sonata, Op. 26)... ... Beethoven	7.	Funeral March ("Lieder ohne Worte") ... Mendelssohn
2	Blest are they that mourn (Requiem)... ... ... Brahms	8.	O rest in the Lord ("Elijah") ... ... Mendelssohn
3.	Funeral March (Pianoforte Sonata, Op. 35) ... ... Chopin	9.	Marche Solonnelle... ... ... Schubert
4.	Funeral March ... ... William Faulkes	10.	Marche Funèbre ... ... Tschaïkowsky
5.	Funeral March ("Saul") ... ... Handel	11.	Finale from "Symphonie Pathétique" ... Tschaïkowsky
6.	I know that my Redeemer liveth ("Messiah") ... Handel	12.	Lament ... ... John E. West

No. 8 (Christmas Music).

1.	Chorale Prelude, "In dulci jubilo" ... ... J. S Bach	7.	For unto us a Child is born ("Messiah") ... ... Handel
2.	Pastoral Symphony ("Christmas Oratorio") ... J. S. Bach	8.	Pastorale ... ... Theodore Kullak
3.	Quem Vidistis, Pastores ... ... W. T. Best	9.	Chorus of Shepherds ... ... J. Lemmens
4.	Venite in Bethlehem ... ... W. T. Best	10.	Christmas Pastorale ... ... Gustav Merkel
5.	December—Christmas Morn ... ... Frederic H. Cowen	11.	A Christmas Pastoral ... ... B. Luard-Selby
6.	Fantasia on Old Christmas Carols ... ... William Faulkes	12.	Fantasy on Two Christmas Carols ... ... John E. West ("The First Nowell" and "Good King Wenceslas.")

No. 9 (Wedding Music).

1.	Wedding March ... ... William Faulkes	8.	Wedding March ... ... Mendelssohn
2.	Happy Pair ("Alexander's Feast") ... ... Handel	9.	Bridal March and Finale ("The Birds" of Aristophanes) C. Hubert H. Parry
3.	Love Song—Liebeslied ... ... Henselt
4.	Benediction Nuptiale ... ... Alfred Hollins	10.	Finale ("Blest Pair of Sirens") ... C. Hubert H. Parry
5.	Bridal March ... ... Alfred Hollins	11.	Serenade ("Schwanengesang") ... ... Schubert
6	Minuet Nuptiale ... ... Edwin H. Lemare	12.	Bridal Chorus ("Lohengrin"... ... ... Wagner
7.	Spring Song ("Lieder ohne Worte") ... Mendelssohn

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

OVERTURE IN D MINOR

COMPOSED BY

HANDEL.

ARRANGED FOR THE ORGAN

BY

H. F. ELLINGFORD.

FROM THE ORCHESTRAL TRANSCRIPTION

BY

EDWARD ELGAR.

Price Two Shillings and Threepence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TWELVE
Short Introductory Voluntaries

FOR THE ORGAN

BY

W. G. ALCOCK.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Recent Organ and Church Music

BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

	s.	d.
FANTASIA, "CHRISTMASTIDE"	3	6
RHAPSODY	3	0
IN AN OLD ABBEY	2	0
WEDDING MARCH	2	0
THREE PRELUDES ON ANGLICAN CHANTS	2	0
VOLUNTARY IN D FLAT	2	0
A SHORT AND EASY COMMUNION SERVICE IN E FLAT ... (Voice part only, for Congregational use, 6*d.*)	1	0

ANTHEMS.

GREAT GOD, WHO, HID FROM MORTAL SIGHT (General use)	0	6
O HOW PLENTIFUL IS THY GOODNESS (Harvest) ...	0	6

HYMNS.

LEAD, KINDLY LIGHT (Tune, "Bradfield College") ...	0	2
AUTHOR OF LIFE DIVINE...	0	2

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

HOLY COMMUNION IN C, including AGNUS, BENEDICTUS, ETC.
By HERBERT ROLFE, F.R.C.O.
Third thousand, 9*d.*
"... One of the most pleasing and devotional compositions of its class with which we have met for some time."—Church Review.
"... thoroughly devotional in tone."—Musical News.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

JESUS, THE VERY THOUGHT OF THEE.

SACRED SONG.

THE WORDS BY

BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX,
tr. E. CASWALL.

THE MUSIC BY

ERIC H. THIMAN.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE GOD OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS.

SACRED SONG.

THE WORDS BY

GEORGE HERBERT.

THE MUSIC BY

ERIC H. THIMAN.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NO. 101.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

EAR-TRAINING

INCLUDING

MUSICAL APPRECIATION AND

RHYTHMIC MOVEMENTS

BY

MABEL CHAMBERLAIN.

COMPLETE, SIX SHILLINGS,
Paper Boards, 7*s.*
Or,
In Two Books: Letterpress and Illustrations, 4*s.*
Music only, 3*s.*

The Ear-Training Course outlined in this book is intended primarily for Class use, but if a judicious selection be made from the exercises, the course can be used with equal benefit by private teachers for individual pupils. Senior pupils and students who desire to Study music, and who have received little or no previous tuition, cannot do better than work rapidly through these progressive exercises and tests. A Prospectus will be sent on application.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH

48 PRELUDES AND FUGUES

(THE WELL-TEMPERED CLAVICHORD)

A NEW EDITION, EDITED BY

HAROLD BROOKE.

IN TWO PARTS.

Price Four Shillings each.

Or, Complete, Cloth, Price Twelve Shillings and Sixpence.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

THE JUNE NUMBER

OF

THE CHESTERIAN

IS DEVOTED TO

CARL MARIA VON WEBER

CONTENTS.

AN ENGLISH LETTER OF WEBER TO SIR HENRY BISHOP.
CARL MARIA VON WEBER. By Eugène Goossens.
WEBER AND DEBUSSY. By Robert Godet.
CARL MARIA VON WEBER IN COPENHAGEN, SEPTEMBER-OCTOBER, 1820. By Erik Abrahamsen.
WEBER'S ENGLISH "MERMAID." By Andrew de Ternant.
OPINIONS.
THE LITERARY WORKS OF C. M. VON WEBER. By L. Dunton Green.

PRICE, ONE SHILLING NET.
Eight Numbers per annum ... Subscription 5*s.* net.

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD., 11, Great Marlborough St., London, W.1.

London:—Printed by NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W.1. Thursday, July 1, 1926.

No. 1002

THE MUSICAL TIMES

Price 6d.

FOUNDED 1844

AUGUST 1, 1926

THE WORLD FAMOUS

Bösendorfer

PIANOS

(Established 1828.)

BUSONI "The Piano was ideal & helped me to give expression to my highest conceptions".....

PADEREWSKY "The Piano was quite wonderful".....

HAROLD BAUER "These instruments are sympathetic to me in the highest degree"..

MORITZ ROSENTHAL "The Piano sounded ravishing"..

SOLE AGENTS

The WIGMORE HALL & PIANO GALLERIES Ltd.

32-40, WIGMORE STREET, W.1

ROGERS

PIANOS

are the outstanding Pianos of the present day for their superb musical qualities, and ahead of all in value.

Call or write for Catalogue

GEORGE ROGERS & SONS

60 Berners Street

London W.1.

REC. AUG 21 1926 B.P.L.

Westminster Abbey

The Mark of Quality

The NEW ELECTRIC RECORDING PROCESS introduced and developed by

"His Master's Voice"

is an entirely new method of recording which gives to "His Master's Voice" Records a realism never previously achieved.

It enables a big orchestra to be recorded in such a way that each instrument is clearly distinguished. It records musical instruments that could never be heard under the old method of recording. It has made it possible to record a Choral Work at Westminster Abbey and a performance of the "Messiah" at the Royal Albert Hall. These two examples are typical of what "His Master's Voice" Electrical Recording can accomplish.

Greatest Artists — Finest Recording — Silent Surface.

To obtain perfect results play "His Master's Voice" Records on

The NEW "His Master's Voice" — the Gramophone that Eliminates Surface Noise.

The GRAMOPHONE CO., Ltd.
OXFORD STREET,
LONDON, W.1

The Royal Albert Hall

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 1,002—Vol. 67.
Registered at the General Post Office for Canadian Postage.

AUGUST 1 1926

Price 6*d.*; Postage, 2*d.*
Annual Subscription, post-free, 7*s.* 6*d.*

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.
General Conductor: MR. H. L. BALFOUR, MUS. BAC.

(Season, 1926—1927.)

There are now VACANCIES in the CHOIR for SOPRANOS, CONTRALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES. Applicants should have STRONG VOICES OF GOOD QUALITY, and must be prepared to pass an examination in SIGHT-READING. Address, The Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.7.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1.
Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.
Principal: JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., MUS. D., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

VACATION COURSE FOR TEACHERS.

Lectures will be given each day from 14th to 17th Sept., inclusive, on the following:

PIANOFORTE - - - Ambrose Coviello, F.R.A.M.
AURAL TRAINING - Ernest Read, F.R.A.M.
CLASS SINGING - - Stanley Marchant, Mus.D., F.R.A.M.
INTERPRETATION AND APPRECIATION, Stewart Macpherson, F.R.A.M.

Complete Time-Table and List of Fees on application.

MICHAELMAS TERM

begins Monday, 20th September. Entrance Examinations on and after 8th September.

TEACHER'S TRAINING COURSE, entirely re-organized (with a special Examination and Diploma), will begin next Michaelmas Term.

J. A. CREIGHTON,
Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7.

Patrons: { HIS MAJESTY THE KING / HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, C.V.O., M.A., MUS. DOC.
Honorary Secretary: GEORGE A. MACMILLAN, ESQ., D. Litt.
Registrar: CLAUDE AVELING, ESQ., M.A.
Bursar: E. J. N. POLKINHORNE, Hon. R.C.M.

The College offers a Complete Course of Musical Education to pupils of both sexes, both professional and amateur. Upwards of seventy Scholarships and Exhibitions are founded which provide free musical education.

Classes for Score Reading, Conducting, Training of Teachers, Musical Criticism, and Ballet, are held at the College.

The OPERA CLASS has the use of the fully-equipped College OPERA THEATRE, with SUNKEN ORCHESTRA.

EXAMINATIONS for Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.), in all subjects, held three times a year, in April, September, and December. Syllabus and all particulars may be obtained from the Registrar of the College.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS.

FOUNDED 1913.

PRESIDENT FOR 1926: HARVEY GRACE, F.R.C.O.

Organists, Assistant-Organists, and Choirmasters of all denominations are eligible. Register of vacant appointments.

Particulars and application to the Hon. Sec., DR. J. WARRINER, De Crespigny House, Denmark Hill, S.E.5.

Guildhall School of Music.

(Founded in 1880 by the Corporation of London, and managed by the Music Committee.)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4.

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE Lessons in any single Musical Subject, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera; Classes in Conducting.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £9 9*s.* and £12 12*s.* Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

Telephone: Cent. 4459; and City 5566.

The Royal College of Organists.

The SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Trio in C minor, J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 12, page 108; Augener, page 1173; Peters, Old Edition, Vol. 9, No. 7; New Edition, Vol. 9, No. 9.

Fantasy Prelude, Charles Macpherson. No. 21 of Recital Series. Edited by E. H. Lemare (Novello.)

Andante from a Pianoforte Duet, Mozart. Arrangements for the Organ by J. Stainer, No. 2. (Novello.)

The 10 selected pieces and the book set for the Essay for the January, 1927, A.R.C.O. Examination, are the same as those set for July, 1926.

Regulations, List of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College.

Associateship or Fellowship, 6*d.* each (post free).

The College is closed during August.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD

OF THE R.A.M. AND THE R.C.M.
FOR LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President. H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

LOCAL CENTRE EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS A).

Written Examinations held in March and November at all centres. Practical Examinations in March-April and November-December at all Centres. Entries for the November-December Examinations close Wednesday, October 13th, 1926.

"SCHOOL" EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS B).

Held throughout the British Isles three times a year, viz., March-April, June-July, and October-November. Entries for the October-November Examinations close Wednesday, October 6th, 1926.

ELOCUTION EXAMINATIONS will be held at certain fixed centres in March-April, June-July, and October-November each year. For full particulars see special Elocution Syllabus.

The Board offers annually SIX EXHIBITIONS tenable at The R.A.M. or The R.C.M. for Two or Three Years.

Syllabuses A and B, Elocution Syllabus, Entry Forms, and any further information, may be obtained post-free from:

THE SECRETARY, 14 & 15, Bedford Square, London, W.C.1.

96 & 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1.

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON CLASS by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

Mr. FREDERICK MOORE takes alternate Wednesdays.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS.
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council.)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, MRS. MARION COLE, Secretary.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.
Principal: DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY.
Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are required to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the training of Teachers, approved by Teachers' Registration Council.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

New Pianoforte Professor, Mr. CLAUD BIGGS.

New Professor of Singing, Miss MARGUERITE SWALE.

GLASGOW ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

SESSION 1926-27.

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 14 to December 5, December 7 to March 13, and March 15 to June 11.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes.
Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

MANCHESTER SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

16, ALBERT SQUARE.

Principal and Founder (1892): J. A. CROSS
Late Principal (1897-1925): ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras, Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, &c. Single Subjects taught.

New Pianoforte Professor:

MR. ROBERT GREGORY.

Mr. Gregory was Professor of the Pianoforte in Vienna for many years, having studied there under the eminent Leschetitzky, teacher of PADEREWSKI.

Prospectus from the Secretary, 16, Albert Square.

LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING.

20a, Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square, W.1.

President: A. NETTLEFOLD.

Principal: DAVID GODELL.

Complete training in all subjects for the Vocalist, Professional and Amateur. Evening Lessons. Particulars from Secretary. Mayfair 3819.

HOLIDAY LESSONS AND CONSULTATIONS FOR PIANISTS

There are times when every pianist, Amateur, Professional, and Teacher, feels that a short course of REFRESHER LESSONS personally conducted by a SPECIALIST in modern pianoforte playing, would be of inestimable value.

The "CHARLES A. GILLETT" method of WEIGHT TOUCH, ITS PRINCIPLES AND APPLICATION will give you

JUST THE HELP YOU NEED.

This method can be successfully acquired by means of a course of TWELVE LUCID and PRACTICAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS and POSTAL CONSULTATIONS, SHOWING HOW and WHY the PRINCIPLES of RELAXATION and WEIGHT TOUCH ARE APPLIED to ALL PHASES OF PIANOFORTE PLAYING.

Pianists of all grades will find this course full of valuable ideas which cannot be obtained from any other source.

MR. GILLETT WILL REMAIN IN LONDON DURING AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER, and is arranging SHORT PERSONAL HOLIDAY COURSES and SINGLE CONSULTATION LESSONS on "THE REAL USE OF RELAXATION and WEIGHT TOUCH" as applied to pianoforte playing.

For further particulars, explanatory booklet, and testimonials, apply to the Secretary,

CHARLES A. GILLETT Pianoforte School,
11, SOUTH MOLTON STREET, LONDON, W.1.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus.Doc., LL.D.
Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D.Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1925-1926.

The Season consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 22 to December 20); WINTER TERM (January 14 to April 11); SUMMER TERM (April 20 to July 4).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—
H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.
Paradise Street, Birmingham.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COMPETITIVE CHOIRS.

PRESIDENT:
JOHN E. TURNER, ESQ., HALIFAX MADRIGAL SOCIETY.

The objects are for the binding together for mutual help of all the Competitive Choirs in the Country, to deal with all matters affecting the interests of the choirs, and to be the channel of communication between the choirs and the various Musical Festival committees in the Country.

Further particulars from the Hon. Secretary,
H. STEVENSON, 6, Laneside Street, Todmorden.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1,100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS.

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."
"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

RECENT SUCCESSES,

including the only pupil sent up, January, 1925.

2*s.* 6*d.* per lesson and postage.

"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

HELEN HOGAN

Concert Organist

Organist and Director of Music, Central Congregational Church, Providence, R.I., U.S.A.

European Season—available Great Britain, 20th Sept. to 20th Oct., 1926.

LE FIGARO, PARIS: "Miss Helen Hogan, organist of the premier order, played a programme of ancient and modern music, showing an extraordinary virtuosity and mastery of the organ."

NEW YORK HERALD (Paris Edition): "She played with classic purity of style, which is so seldom achieved. Clarity, precision, and breadth of conception marked her interpretation of the Bach group."

LINCOLN LEADER ADVERTISER: "This is the first time in the history of the Cathedral that a recital has been given by a woman organist. This recital by Miss Helen Hogan was a great artistic success. She is undoubtedly a great organist."

LONDON MUSICAL OPINION: "The opening phrases at once proclaimed a quite exceptional mastery of the instrument."

Management: HELEN HOGAN,
232, FERNDALE ROAD,
Tel.: BRIXTON 2793. LONDON, S.W.9.

MUS. BAC. and MUS. DOC.

(Durham, September; and London, December.)

ALSO

L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.

(September and Christmas, 1926.)

Dr. NORMAN SPRANKLING has arranged a special series of Postal Lessons for Candidates for the above Examinations—Revision for September, and Full Preparation for December.

These Lessons are specially designed and give a complete grip of all vital points essential to success.

Complete Postal Preparation for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Mus.Bac., Mus.Doc., and all Diplomas of T.C.L. and R.C.O.

NUMEROUS SUCCESSES.

PERSONAL LESSONS ALSO IN BRISTOL AND LONDON.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING,
Address: 46, CLARENDON ROAD,
Telephone: Bristol 3033. REDLAND, BRISTOL.

SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY

THE WORLD-FAMOUS CONDUCTOR

endorses the

Mackinnon Musical Memory Course

"An admirable and very original method, and one that can be recommended to all pianists lacking in memory for music."

(Signed) SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY.
10/6/26.

The fee for the Course of Six Postal Lessons is £3 : 3 : 0

Write to-day for free booklet, giving particulars and testimonials to

MISS LILIAS MACKINNON,
c/o THE IMPERIAL CONCERT AGENCY,
EMPIRE HOUSE,
175, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.1.

A.R.C.M.
A.R.C.O.
L.R.A.M.

Candidates for these examinations cannot afford to neglect the enormous advantage of a Postal Course in my "From Brain to Keyboard" System, to which many pupils attribute their success.

OPINIONS OF PUPILS.

"One of the greatest assets a pianist can have."
"Worth twenty times the fee charged."
"I have passed my examination with honours."
"The technical rules are alone worth the fee."
"I have acquired easy trills, at sixty."
"The exercises are a veritable treasure trove."
"The effect sometimes seems supernatural."
"To me it has been a veritable godsend."

"From Brain to Keyboard"

Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

20,000 SUCCESSFUL PUPILS OF ALL AGES.

My illustrated book, "LIGHT ON PIANOFORTE PLAYING,"

will gladly be sent to any pianist. It fully explains the principles and advantages of the methods used in the System. When applying please do not omit to state whether comparative beginner, average, or advanced pianist. The book will be sent free of charge, and post free.

M. MACDONALD SMITH, 19, BLOOMSBURY SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.1.

"MASTERY OF THE KEYBOARD."
C. PALMER.

SIGHT-READING LESSONS.

COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS.

PRESS EXTRACTS.

The Times: "Deals with the subject systematically from the first stage."
Musical Times: "The idea is so simple and practical that we wonder it has not been dealt with systematically long ago."
Music: "Mr. Denham goes fully and thoroughly into his subject from every possible standpoint. Cannot fail to be of service.
Aberdeen Press and Journal: "The scarcity of good sight-readers, and even among capable pianists, is proof of the need for a more systematised form of training than obtains at present, and Mr. Denham's system has the double advantage of being both simple and practical."

Personal Lessons if desired.

GEORGE DENHAM, L.R.A.M., ETC.,
41, AVONDALE ROAD, S. CROYDON; AND 32, WIGMORE STREET, W.1.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR.

HOW TO SING
HOW TO TEACH SINGING

Ten-Lesson Intensive Courses for Professional and Amateur Vocalists, Choirmasters, Teachers of Voice-Production and Singing, and Advanced Students taking up a Teaching Career.

Tuition given personally; also BY CORRESPONDENCE.
Testimonials—"Foremost among leading voice producers"; "Wonderful results"; "Voice improves day by day"; "What I have been struggling for years to know"; "Has paid for itself several times over"; "Fifteen-year-old difficulty removed in few lessons"; "Had I only studied with you years ago"; "I now understand what I teach"; "I have never known more convincing teaching."

Change of Address:

WILLIAM WOLLER,
37, CASTLETOWN ROAD, BARON'S COURT,
LONDON, W.14.

SOUTHEND
MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

TO BE HELD

NOVEMBER 5th to 13th, 1926, inclusive.

OPEN CLASSES (Amateur or Professionals).
SINGING (any Voice).
PIANOFORTE PLAYING.
VIOLIN PLAYING.
ELOCUTION.
MUSICAL COMPOSITION.

Send halfpenny stamp for SYLLABUS to
MR. HORACE BAYLISS, Hon. Secretary,
63, Alexandra Road, Southend-on-Sea.

WEST WALES FESTIVAL, CARMARTHEN.

SEPTEMBER 15, 16, 17, 19, 1926.
President ... THE LORD BISHOP OF ST. DAVID'S.
In St. Peter's Church.
"HYMN OF PRAISE." "FOR THE FALLEN" (Elgar).
"MESSIAH." "ELIJAH," ETC.
ORCHESTRAL CONCERT.
Conductor ... J. CHARLES WILLIAMS, A.R.C.M.
For Programmes, 1s., Tickets, &c., apply, COLBY EVANS, Carmarthen.

THE LONDON COLLEGE FOR CHORISTERS.

6 and 7, BLOMFIELD CRESCENT, PADDINGTON, W.2.
Founder: Mr. JAMES BATES.

Solo Boys and Chorus Boys supplied at short notice for Church Services, &c. Telephone: Paddington 5990. Sec., ARTHUR G. BATES.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone, and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

PRINCIPAL:
ARTHUR McALISTER, B.A.

FAILURES

CONVERTED INTO

SUCCESSES

Students who have failed repeatedly (UNDER OTHER TUITION) have passed the following Exams. (UNDER M.C.C. TUITION) at the FIRST ATTEMPT.

MATRIC., 1ST M.B., A.R.C.O., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A. MUS. T.C.L., A.T.C.L.

Single Subjects: HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, COMPOSITION, ELOCUTION, FORM, ORCHESTRATION, ART OF TEACHING, SINGING, ETC.

Please state Exam. or Subject.

"CLOVELLY," 20, SHERWIN ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

CHARLES KNOWLES
BARITONE.

For Press Notices and Terms, apply,
87, ALEXANDRA ROAD,
ST. JOHN'S WOOD, N.W.8.
Or,
MESSRS. IBBS & TILLETT, 124, Wigmore Street, W.1.

THE TECHNIQUER
Invented and Patented by R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac.
FOR FLEXING, STRENGTHENING,
STRETCHING, and DEVELOPING THE HANDS.

Send for testimony of LAMOND, POUISHNOFF, FRYER, REDDIE, WALENN, and many other eminent musicians.
"The excellent 'Techniquer' of Mr. Pitcher has been used by the writer with advantage. It does a good many things."—The Music Teacher, April, 1926.
Treatise on "Hand Development," with Photos, 1s. 6d.
Full particulars from the Secretary—
MISS F. J. FITCH, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

THE "SIMPLEXA" FINGER TRAINER.
(Registered No. 692810.)
FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS.
A SIMPLE AND VERY EFFECTIVE APPLIANCE FOR GIVING STRENGTH AND FLEXIBILITY TO THE FINGERS.

Extract from "Musical Times."—"We have given a trial to the 'Simplexa Pocket Finger Trainer,' and have no hesitation in recommending it to our readers as a means of stretching the fingers and keeping them generally in good playing condition. Instrumentalists who are travelling, or unable to obtain regular practice, will find the appliance a boon. It is well-named, being simplicity itself, and so portable that it can be carried in the waistcoat pocket."
IMPROVED MODEL, 2s. 6d., POST FREE.
1, LONGFORD TERRACE, FOLKESTONE.

TENDERS.

CITY OF MELBOURNE (AUSTRALIA).

SUPPLY OF GRAND ORGAN FOR MELBOURNE TOWN HALL.

TENDERS are invited from British and Australian Organ Builders only, and will be received by the Melbourne City Council, at the Town Hall, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, until 2 p.m. on MONDAY, 20th September, 1926, for
SUPPLY, DELIVERY, AND ERECTION OF GRAND ORGAN IN THE TOWN HALL, MELBOURNE.

Tender Forms, Specifications, and General Conditions may be obtained and Drawings inspected on application to the Agent-General for Victoria, Melbourne Place, Strand, London.

The deposit of 2½ per cent. of contract price to be lodged in accordance with the conditions of tendering must be either in cash or by bank draft payable at sight, or guaranty of an approved bank.

No tender necessarily accepted.

Tenders must be endorsed on the outside, "Melbourne Grand Organ," and be enclosed in a sealed envelope, and forwarded to The Chairman, Town Hall Committee, Town Hall, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, and received by him not later than the time above mentioned.
W. V. McCALL, Town Clerk.
Town Hall, Melbourne.
30th April, 1926.

A.R.C.O. EXAMINATION AIDS.

A series of practical papers outlining courses of study and giving helpful hints with expert advice on the following Tests:

SOLO-PLAYING.	SCORE-READING.
TRANSPOSITION.	ACCOMPANIMENT
ESSAY.	(with list of 75 Solos).

3s. each. 10s. 6d. the set.
At the request of many who have derived valuable help from the above, the writer has now prepared a similar AID to the
A.R.C.O. PAPER-WORK TESTS.
Price 5s.
"A.R.C.O. EXAMN. AIDS," 166, COUNTY ROAD, WALTON, LIVERPOOL.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS WINIFRED DENHAM (A.R.C.M.).
SOPRANO.
"A clear, well-produced voice—exceedingly well sung."—Musical Standard.
41, Avondale Road, South Croydon.

MISS LYDIA JOHN
(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.
Concerts, Oratorios, Organ Recitals, &c.
Recital-Lectures of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
Pupils received for Voice-Production and Singing.
Prepared for L.R.A.M., Associated Board, &c.
28, ALBION ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.
Tel.: Hampstead 5797.
Lessons given at West-End Studio or above address.

HAROLD KNOWLTON
TENOR.
St. Paul's Cathedral, E.C. 4.
1, Hatherley Gardens, Crouch End, N.8. Mountview 5289.

VERNON HARRISS,
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medallist. BASS.
Oratorio, Concerts. Vocal Coach and Adjudicator.
Senior Music Master, Downside School, near Bath.

FRANK POULTON (L.R.A.M.).
BASSO-CANTANTE.
Available for Oratorio, Choral Societies, &c.
33, Hounslow Avenue, Hounslow. 'Phone: Hounslow 1536.

VICTOR UTTING (L.R.A.M.).
BARITONE, ROCHESTER CATHEDRAL.
56, Boundary Road, Chatham, Kent.

GLADYS FREEMAN, A.R.M.C.M.
(TRAINED TEACHER.)
PIANOFORTE, EAR-TRAINING, RUDIMENTS.
TEACHES LONDON AND BECKENHAM.
For terms, apply:
16, Ilchester Mansions, Abingdon Road, Kensington, W.8.

MAUD GRUNDY (HARPIST).
Can accept single engagements for Choral Societies, &c., in the North, prior to and after Scottish Orchestra season.
17, Narcissus Road, London, N.W.6.

R. ARNOLD GREIR
F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.
Organist to the Royal Choral Society, London.
RECITALIST AND ACCOMPANIST.
2, Highview Road, West Ealing, W.13. Ealing 201.

MISS MARY LINDSAY
L.R.A.M. (Teacher's Diploma).
Gives lessons in Voice Production and Singing.
Moderate Terms.
17, Cromwell Road, South Kensington. Tel.: Western 3595.

ELIZABETH LEVY
L.R.A.M., GOLD MEDALLIST.
TOBIAS MATTHAY'S PIANOFORTE METHOD taught by her at pupils' houses or her studio. SPECIAL COACHING for Scholarships, Medals, and all Examinations. 52, Fairhazel Gardens, Hampstead, N.W.6.

H. FORSTER RICHARDSON
R.C.M. (Leipzig), A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M.
(Pupil of Tobias Matthay, Plunket Greene, Gregory Hast),
gives lessons in Pianoforte Playing, Voice-Production and Singing.
Tuition on the most modern technical principles.
Coaching for Concert Work and Examinations.
Wigmore Hall Studios, Wigmore Street, W.1, and
2, Connaught Avenue, East Sheen, S.W.14.

MISS MABEL A. CARNELL
L.R.A.M. (Pianoforte Teacher).
Registered Teacher.
PERSONAL TUITION or POSTAL COACHING for all PAPER WORK AND AURAL TESTS connected with the following Examinations:
L.R.A.M. PIANOFORTE TEACHER.
L.R.A.M. AURAL TRAINING AND SIGHT-SINGING.
L.R.A.M. VOICE CULTURE AND CLASS-SINGING.
Highly recommended. Examination Successes.
"M. A. C.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MISS MARY WILSON, F.R.A.M.

Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London.
Gives SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS to Candidates entering for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Singing Teachers' Diplomas.
Particulars on application.
Address: 10, Harley Street, London, W.1.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING.

(See page 675.)

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.
For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS, Glennholme, The Common, Hessle, E. Yorks.

MADAME ALBA.—Dramatic Soprano, Professor of Singing (Italian Bel Canto). Vocal Training in four languages. Art of Breathing, Breath Control, Voice-Production and Culture, Effective Speaking, Clear Enunciation, Stage Deportment, Coach, Pianoforte Playing and Technique. Audition by appointment. Studio: 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who OBTAINED DEGREES OF MUS.B. and Mus.D. at Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, London, and Durham Universities, Diplomas of L.L.C.M. (April & Dec.), L.R.A.M., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. L.C.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medals, Silver Medals, Scholarships, Prizes, Certificates, and valuable professional appointments. Dr. Allison is willing to teach those who neither require nor desire to pass examinations. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Analysis of Compositions by Post, to correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, and Piano. 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS. Dr. Horton Allison, 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight-Reading Courses, Study Aids, 9*d*. Studies in Modulation, 3*s*.
Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.
HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B. Dunelm., F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Square, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—
(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
(3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-26 ... 296 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-26 ... 78 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus.Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1.) The "Mus.Bac." Degree.
(2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
(3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work.
(4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint.

(Address as above.)

MR. BIBBY also gives PERSONAL Lessons in Manchester. Complete Preparation (Practical and Paper Work) for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., &c. Address as above.

J. C. BRYDSON, Mus. B. (Dunelm.). Postal Tuition for Mus. B., R.A.M., R.C.M., R.C.O., and T.C.L. Paper Work (Ordinary and Guarantee Courses). Apply, enclosing stamped, addressed envelope for particulars of Free Scholarships. "Balcary," Kegworth, Derby.

FREDERICK GREEN, L.R.A.M., ETC. Voice Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Preparation for L.R.A.M. c/o Rushworth & Dreaper, 11, Islington, Liverpool.

SELF-PREPARATION.
(THEORETICAL AND PRACTICAL.)

Many Music Students are at times perplexed, where but a little guidance will help them towards their goal.
Single Lesson, or Course by arrangement.
A. GRAVES, F.R.C.O., 30, Salop Road, Oswestry.

MR. J. D. HANDS, Mus. Bac. (Dublin), L.R.A.M., gives lessons in Harmony by post. Music composed to Lyrics. Pianoforte Accompaniments written to Airs. Moderate terms. 114, Wellesley Road, Clacton-on-Sea.

SEPTEMBER EXAMS., L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M., Vocal and Pianoforte, Special preparation courses during July and August, under Mr. Frederick C. Haggis, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., L.T.C.L., at the Wigmore Hall Studios, W., and at Streatham, S.W. Address, The Ward End, Wallington, 'Surrey 'Phone, Wallington 1293.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O., SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 410 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., and A.R.C.O., &c. 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. HARRIS REVISES and PREPARES MSS. FOR PUBLICATION. Accompaniments to Songs written.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply, Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D. Mus. Oxon., 1922, L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates, personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, Queen Victoria Street, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London, at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey. Many recent F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. successes.
5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

A. EAGLEFIELD HULL, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O. For Lectures, address E. L. Robinson Direction, 199, Piccadilly, London, W.1; for personal and correspondence lessons, address Dr. Eaglefield Hull, 19, Berners Street, W.1. For Organ Recitals, address Secretary, 48, New North Rd., Huddersfield.

DR. REGINALD H. HUNT, D. Mus., Lond., F.R.C.O. Individual Coaching by Correspondence. 7, Woodgrange Avenue, North Finchley, N.12.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING. Latest Successes: Durham, Sept., 1925, 7 Final Mus.Bac. passes. Also 1st Mus.Bac. pass. Mus.Doc. and Mus.Bac. Exs., after prelim. course in composition, also in 1925. Both Mus.Doc. passes in 1924. 170 Successes at Durham alone, besides R.C.O. Diplomas. The Durdans, Reigate.

DR. F. J. KARN (Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Mus. Doc. Toronto) continues to give lessons in Harmony and other Theoretical subjects, and prepares for all Musical Examinations. Compositions revised and Analyses written. Candidates prepared by Dr. Karn have gained the Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. degrees at the Universities and diplomas from the Musical Colleges.
Address: 106, Haverstock Hill, London, N.W.3.

DR. KNOWLES (Manchester 1919, Durham 1920) specialises in preparing candidates by post for the Paper-work of all examinations in music. Solutions, with methods of working. Address, "Cramond," Oakburst Avenue, East Barnet, London, N.

MR. C. E. de M. LEATHES, M.A., MUS. BAC., F.R.C.O. Tuition in Piano, Harmony, Composition, &c. Pupils successfully prepared for all examinations. Cramer's Studios, 139, Bond Street, W.1, and 128, Kensington High St., W.8.

DR. ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, MUS. DOC., University of Toronto; Mus.Doc., Trinity University, Toronto: F.R.C.O.: F.A.G.O., &c., Sirsa House, Cheltenham. Correspondence Lessons. Revision of MSS. Scoring, editing, and arranging. Examination pieces analysed and annotated.

PREPARATION L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all Associated Board Exams. 1925 Successes include 5 L.R.A.M. (Pianoforte). Courses of study, or single lessons, arranged at home or West End. Alan May, 31, Bonham Road, S.W.2.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning," prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte, Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.

10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus.Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Twenty-five years' experience in Private Tuition and Coaching for Degrees. More than 800 of Dr. Middleton's Pupils have obtained Degrees at the Universities, R.A.M., R.C.M., and R.C.O. Address, 60, Berners Street, W.1.

L. R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Exams. Correspondence lessons in Harmony, Form, Teaching, &c. 23 pupils' successes. Moderate terms. Arthur W. Morrison, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., 39, Clarendon Road, Fulwood, Sheffield.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) A.R.C.M. (Theory of Music).
(4) A. Mus. T.C.L. and L. Mus. T.C.L.

Several recent successes in all these examinations.

R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."

SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.

279 A.R.C.O. Successes since 1909.
174 F.R.C.O. " " "

RECENT SUCCESSES IN PAPER WORK:

4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.
5 F.R.C.O., July, 1915.	9 A.R.C.O., July, 1915.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1916.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1916.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1917.	4 A.R.C.O., July, 1917.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918.
1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.	10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920.	6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.	7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.
6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921.	8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921.
5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922.
8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.	9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1924.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1924.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925.	8 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925.
7 F.R.C.O., July, 1925.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1925.
5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926.

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

F.R.C.O. AND A.R.C.O. PAPER WORK.

A SPECIAL COURSE OF CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS for the January, 1927, F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Examinations is now commencing. The chief reason why this system of tuition is so successful is that pupils are taught how to work. Experience has proved that a large number of candidates fail because they do not reach a high enough standard in their work, which is often the result of training on wrong lines. Now in this system of tuition pupils are trained to produce work which is above the standard required by the examiners.

Special attention given to the Pianoforte Accompaniment Test, as most organ students fail to utilize the distinctive idioms of pianoforte writing, and make their work look like an organ accompaniment.

F.R.C.O. pupils are trained to work on a definite plan in such tests as Episode and Middle Entries, Stretto, and Song Writing, so as to acquire speed, which is a most vital factor, especially in the afternoon when so many candidates come to grief.

Hints on how to study the score selected for the January examination as well as a complete analysis (which will give answers to likely questions) will be sent to all pupils.

All the new tests will be covered in these lessons, and complete musical illustrations will be sent to each candidate showing exactly what the examiners require.

The whole aim of this method is to teach the principles which underlie all highly artistic music, and also the application of these principles to examination work, so that a pupil who is thus equipped is enabled not only to pass the F.R.C.O. or A.R.C.O. examination, as the case may be, but also to develop to the utmost the musical ability with which he is endowed.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.
"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS.

Graded Lessons especially prepared to suit individual needs—every student assured of personal care and attention. Rudiments, Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, &c. Preparation for Diplomas and other examinations. Interesting courses also for those not wishing to enter examinations.

ALFRED MORRIS, L.Mus., T.C.L., 9. West Lorne Street, Chester.

PIANO TEACHING EXAMS., A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M., Etc.

(a) Outline of Course of Instruction, 5*s*.
(b) Studies for Special Purposes (first bars given), 5*s*.
(c) Four Special Test-Papers for A.R.C.M., £1 (including corrections).

"J. H.," Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., &c., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.

Prof. Singing, G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Musical Appreciation to L.C.C.
"Recit. and its Rendering." 1*s*. 6*d*. "Vade Mecum for Singers." 6*d*.
Preparation for all Exams. by Post and Personal Lessons.
Special Courses of Papers: Singing, Piano, Touch, Musical Appreciation, &c.
Nearly 1,000 Successes for Degrees and Diplomas.
Send for Prospectus,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., prepares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes. 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4. Chiswick 3267.

DR. TAYLOR'S POSTAL PUPILS HAVE passed Mus. Bac. 1st and final. A.R.C.O.; L.R.A.M.; A.T.C.L. Pupil gained the Stillie Bursary at Glasgow for Counterpoint. Latest success, A.R.C.O. for 1924. Portland Place, Lancaster.

W. G. WEBBER, F.R.C.O. Recitalist, &c. Preparation for Exams. Organ lessons given on new four-manual Willis. Address, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E.1.

TO R.C.O. CANDIDATES. Successful Paper Work Lessons, and similar R.C.O. Organ for Practical Work. "F.R.C.O.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SOPRANO.—Lady wanted at once for St. John's Presbyterian Church of England, Kensington. Good reader, and able to lead. Services: Sunday, 11 and 6.30, and weekly rehearsal. Salary, £20 per annum. Apply by letter to Charles R. Willis, 9, Milman Road, Queen's Park, N.W.6.

ALTO desires to join good QUARTET. Apply, J. C. Sumerling, 51, Lordsmead Road, N.17.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER (Lady preferred) for Village Church near London. Sung Eucharist, £50. Good choir-trainer. Some means. Testimonials and references to Rector, Digswell, Welwyn, Herts.

WANTED.—Michaelmas, Organist-Choirmaster, Parish Church, Helston, Cornwall. Salary relative to qualifications; minimum, £40. Apply, Vicar.

ASSISTANT-ORGANIST WANTED.—Three-manual organ, electric blowing. Exceptional opportunity for study of plainchant accompaniment. Also all voices wanted. Godfrey Sceats, 18, Ballina Street, Honor Oak Park, S.E.23.

ORGANIST WANTED, large country Parish. Usual Services. Salary, from £35. Apply, Vicar, Evercreech, Somerset.

WANTED, at Taunton St. James.—ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER. Large choir. Must be disciplinarian. Apply, stating age, qualifications, salary required, and with references, to Rev. E. Ogden, St. James' Vicarage, Taunton.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER Wanted for Harpenden Congregational Church. Apply by letter, stating qualifications, to H. A. Valentine, Locksley, Tennyson Road, Harpenden, Herts.

OXFORD ORGAN SCHOLAR desires Organist's Post in Cathedral or Church. August-September. Apply, A. A. Negus, Great Leighs, Chelmsford, Essex.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER can Deputise from Aug. 1st to Sept. 19th inclusive. Town or Country. Address, "A. H.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour St., W.1.

PUBLIC SCHOOL ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, L.R.A.M., F.I.G.C.M., desires similar post or Church appointment with teaching connection (South preferred). Has held similar appointment. Highest references from Clergy and Headmasters. "S. P.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PUBLIC SCHOOL MAN, Mus. Bac., Camb., seeks post as CHURCH ORGANIST, London area; also as Music Master in School. Write, "E. L. W.," St. James' Vicarage, Watford.

ORGAN STUDENT (Manchester) desires lessons in subjects for R.C.O. Examinations. Please state terms. Address, "B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

"D" thanks all those who applied for the post of Pupil-Assistant, and regrets that owing to the great number of replies, he has been unable to write personally to each.

TO ALL WHO USE THEIR VOICES.

AMATEUR OR PROFESSIONAL.

To prove the 100% efficiency of the Psycho-Physical Method of Voice Culture, FREE AUDITIONS AND CONSULTATIONS will be given to a limited number of applicants who aspire to great success, either as singers or public speakers. Applications in respect of this exceptional opportunity will be dealt with in rotation, as received; therefore write or call as early as possible. Coue-Orton Institute (Voice Production Salon, Holborn Viaduct House, London, E.C.1. (City 0668-9.)

TEACHING CONNECTION.—WANTED to PURCHASE. North-West of England, Cheshire preferred. Organ, Pianoforte, or Singing. "W.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

LADY PIANIST, A.R.C.M., is prepared to pay premium for a small, select CONNECTION in or near London. "Counterpoint," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

